

COMMENTARIES
OF
THE COMMON LAW

DESIGNED AS INTRODUCTORY TO ITS STUDY.

BY HERBERT BROOM, LL.D.,
BARRISTER AT LAW, CHAIRER IN COMMON LAW TO THE INNER TEMPLE; AUTHOR OF "A SELECTION OF LEGAL MAXIMS."

THIRD EDITION.

LEX EST RECTA RATIO INTERNE, ATQUE PROHIBENTIN, QUAM QUI HONORAT IS EST INJUNCTA: SIVE ENI ILLA RECTA ESTIAM SIVE NUSQUAM — Enc. de Leg. Lib. I.

LONDON:
WILLIAM MAXWELL, 32, BELL YARD, LINCOLN'S INN
Law Bookeller and Publisher;
HODGES, SMITH, & CO., DUBLIN.

1864.

LONDON

READBURY AND EVANS PRINTERS WHITEFRIARS

PREFACE TO THE THIRD EDITION.

NOT only have I thoroughly revised these Commentaries, but very many references to reported cases and to Statutes—especially the Criminal Law Consolidation and Amendment Acts—have been added in this Edition. I rejoice also to say that the Index of the Work, which had been found defective, has been entirely recast, and much extended and improved under the kind superintendence of my learned friend, Mr Geary of the Midland Circuit.

With the above brief announcement, this volume is again submitted to the indulgent consideration of the Profession.

H. B.

TEMPLE.

July 16th, 1864.

PREFACE TO THE SECOND EDITION.

THE first issue of these Commentaries having been exhausted, they are again, in a revised form, offered to the Student—that portion of the Work which was originally prepared by my friend Mr PHILIP FRANCIS, of the Middle Temple, having been edited by him

Although the bulk of the volume has, by an improved arrangement of the type, been materially reduced, its actual contents have, by the insertion of reported cases up to the latest moment, been much augmented

It is my earnest hope that these Commentaries, the elementary character of which is still preserved to them, may aid, in some slight degree, the progress of Legal Education and the advancement of Legal Science

HERBERT BROOM

•
TEMPLE,

January 1st, 1861.

PREFACE TO THE FIRST EDITION.

THIS Work has been written with a view to filling what has long appeared to me a void in Legal Literature, its aim being to present explanatory comments on the Law, illustrated by Cases, selected in sufficient number and with sufficient care, to enable the reader to pursue for himself in detail the matters debated or touched upon in the text. In the choice of topics for discussion, I have been guided in part by an examination of Standard Treatises, but yet more materially by an experience of three years, devoted almost exclusively to the delivery of Lectures upon the leading branches and departments of our Common Law. Whilst thus engaged in tracing out its principles and indicating its practice, my attention has been perpetually directed to points of difficulty or interest, imperatively needing elucidation, which had previously escaped my notice; on all such points, which, as they presented themselves, were from time to time scrupulously noted down, I have in the ensuing pages attempted more or less fully to throw light. But besides this, I have, during the period referred to, necessarily applied myself to a diligent scrutiny of decided cases, and to the task, by no means light or easy, of choosing therefrom such as seemed specially adapted for educational purposes, for assisting towards the interpretation of important statutes, or for fixing in the mind a knowledge and correct apprehension of legal axioms and doctrines. Of such cases many have been abstracted in the text of this Work; others have been suggested for perusal in the notes, wherein also decisions of minor importance have throughout been so far arranged and classified, that they may readily be consulted in such manner as virtually to amplify the scope and proportionately to extend the usefulness of the Volume. To him who has not, before opening it, seriously concerned himself with the study of the Law, I would offer one suggestion, that, avoiding technicalities and details, he should in the first instance familiarise himself with its more inviting portions, particularly with the Introductory Chapter of each Book, and with the sub-divisions of Book I, in which the nature of Legal Rights, enforceable by action, and of Extraordinary Remedies, is treated of (a).

In these days of legislative activity and legal change, special difficulties have to be encountered by a professional writer. On him, perchance, is cast the duty of interpreting enactments which have not previously been judicially considered, or of re-shaping, re-modelling, and re-arranging his materials when they had well nigh been finally adjusted. By such difficulties I have found myself much embarrassed, the greatest of them, however occasioned by the passing of the Common Law Procedure Act 1854, has I trust, been wholly surmounted by a delay in printing some portion of the manuscript affected by it—a delay which eventually necessitated the interpolation of lettered pages towards the end of Book I. That particular part of the Volume just referred to, extending from p. 112 to p. 256 u, has been prepared by my friend Mr. Philip Francis, of the Middle Temple (already favourably known to the Profession by his “Common Law Procedure”), who has devoted to it several months of the most patient and unsparing labour. For the assistance

(a) The reader should perhaps be apprised, that the Law of Landlord and Tenant is excluded from consideration in the present Volume: an excellent elementary work on that subject having very recently appeared from the pen of the late learned Mr. J. W. Smith, edited by Mr. Maude.

PREFACE.

Thus rendered, I would here express my acknowledgments ; of its value, after careful examination—especially of the remarks on Pleading and the Practice connected therewith—I am fully sensible.

With one word more, I may conclude. If it be true that Law is really worthy to be called a Science—if it be true that Lex est RATIO MENSQUE SAPIENTIS ad iudicandum et ad determinandum idonea—if, further, we are justified in affirming that potius ignorantia juris litigiosa est quam scientia—is it indeed vain or inexpedient to hope that a sound knowledge of Legal Principles may gradually be disseminated by and spread amongst the educated classes of this Country? Is it futile or unwise to predicate that much and enduring good would thence result? As regards myself whose main incentive to the preparation of these Commentaries has been a desire to facilitate the attainment of such end, the consciousness of having done so in any the slightest degree—would amply compensate for past labour.

HERBERT BROOM

TEMPLE,

December 15th, 1855.

CONTENTS.

BOOK I.

LEGAL RIGHTS AND REMEDIES.

Division of the subject explained	Page 1-2
---	----------

CHAPTER I.

COMMON LAW—WHAT—OF WHAT ELEMENTS COMPOSED.

Municipal Law and Common Law, what they are	3
Lex Scripta—what and how construed	3—7
Lex non Scripta—what it comprises	7—10
Lex Mercatoria—what it is	10
Particular or Local Customs	11
Their requisites	12—19
Usages of Trade	19
Lex non Scripta—how declared	20
Principles to which our Common Law conforms	21—22

CHAPTER II.

COURTS OF LAW.

SECT. I.—The Superior Courts.

Origin, History, and Jurisdiction of the Superior Courts	23
The Aula Regis	26
Origin of Court of Exchequer	28
Common Pleas	33
King's Bench	36

Actual Jurisdiction of the Superior Courts	41
Courts of Appellate Jurisdiction	47
2. Mode of Procedure in Banc and at Judges' Chambers . .	49
Of what matters or classes of cases our Courts take cognisance	49
Mode of Procedure in Banc	50
Business transacted at Judges' Chambers	55
Mode of Procedure at Chambers	57

SECT. II.—Jurisdiction of the County Court.

Its general Jurisdiction	59
As to splitting demands	62
As to abandoning the excess of demand	65
Cases excluded from jurisdiction of County Court . . .	66
Instances of equitable rather than legal jurisdiction of County Court	69
Costs of plaintiff—how affected by County Court Acts . .	70
Concurrent jurisdiction with Superior Courts	71

CHAPTER III.

THE NATURE OF RIGHTS ENFORCEABLE BY ACTION.

Definition of the term "right of action"	73
Definition of the words "damnum" and "injuria"	74
Damnum sine injuria, whether actionable at law	74—84
Injuria sine damno, when actionable	84—92
Damnum et injuria may fail to give a right of action . .	93
Where damage is too remote	93—96
Where proper remedy is by indictment	96
Where an individual suffering from an indictable offence may maintain an action	97
Penal action by party aggrieved	100
Suspension of civil remedy when act is felonious	100
Redress when denied on grounds of public policy	102
Non-liability of judicial officers generally	103—106
Additional exceptions to rule—that injuria sine damno is actionable	106

CHAPTER IV.

ORDINARY REMEDIES.

SECT. I.—Action at Law.

1. Considerations preliminary to issuing the Writ	108
1. Whether the party proposing to sue has a complete cause of action	110
2. Right of Action, whether postponed or extinguished altogether	112
3. Where action is brought under provisions of an Act of Parliament	113
4. Whether notice of action is necessary	113
5. As to the form of action	116
Classification of actions	117
Actions ex contractu	118
Actions ex delicto	124
Actions of Mandamus and Injunction	127
6. As to the choice of Parties to Actions	128
Plaintiffs in actions ex contractu	129
Defendants in actions ex contractu	134
Plaintiffs in actions ex delicto	139
Defendants in actions ex delicto	143
2. Proceedings from Writ to Appearance	146
Introductory remarks	146
The writ of summons	147
Common indorsement on writ	149
Special indorsement	150
Service of writ	151
Concurrent writs	152
Procedure when service is evaded	154
Appearance	156
Service of writ where defendant is out of jurisdiction	157
defendant is a British subject resi- dent out of jurisdiction	157
Form of writ where defendant is a foreigner resident out of jurisdiction	158
Amendment of writ	159

3. Proceedings from Appearance to Notice of Trial—The Pleadings in the Action	159
The object and mode of pleading stated generally	160
The Declaration	164
Rules of Pleading	165
Particulars of Demand	169
Various modes of setting up a defence to action specified	170
Plea in abatement	171
Plea in bar	172
The general issue	173
What Pleas may be pleaded together	175
What must be specially pleaded	176
Pleas in confession and avoidance, how classified	177
Pleas of Payment, Tender, Payment into Court, Set-off, Statute of Limitations, respectively considered	177—188
Pleas to the foundation of the action	188
Equitable Defences	188
The Replication and Pleadings subsequent thereto	190—191
Demurrer	191
Judgment by default	192
Notice of trial	192
Discovery and inspection of documents	193
Interrogatories	194
Preparation of evidence	195
4. The trial at Nisi Prius	197
Writs of execution	203—206
5. Proceedings by motion for New Trial, &c., subsequent to verdict	206

SECT. II.—Suit in the County Court.

Proceedings in the Suit	213—216
Proceedings by certiorari and on appeal	216

CHAPTER V.

EXTRAORDINARY REMEDIES.

1. By the act of the party injured	218
Self-defence	218

By Recaption	219
Eviction	220
Abatement of private nuisance	221
public nuisance	223
Distress	224
2. By Operation of Law	224
Retainer	225
Remitter	225
3. Remedial process afforded by the Courts	225
Nature of remedy afforded on motion	225
Mandamus	227
Injunction	231
Prohibition	231
Quo warranto	234
Certiorari	236
Procedendo	237
Interpleader	237
Summary Procedure for recovery of small tenements	239
Procedure to compel specific delivery of chattels	240
Criminal information	240
Habeas corpus	243
Petition of right	248 n. (k)

BOOK II.

CONTRACTS.

CHAPTER I.

CONTRACTS GENERALLY—THEIR CLASSIFICATION AND ATTRIBUTES.

Meaning of the term Contract	249
Contract, executory, executed	250
Contract express, implied	250—252
A Contract is founded on consent	252
Incapacity to contract, how caused	253
Lex loci—how it operates	254
Obligatory force of Contract	256
Classification of Contracts	259

Contracts of Record	260—267
General remarks as to Contracts under Seal	267
Covenants, what and different kinds of	271—275
Bond, what	276
Doctrine of Merger, as applicable to deeds generally	276
Estoppel by Deed	280—290
Relief in equity against fraudulent deed	290
Consideration, whether necessary to support Specialty	291—295
Contract under Seal may bind the heir	295
Specialty how discharged	297—301
Definition of Simple Contract	301
May be either executory or executed	301
Terms of Contract must be definitely arranged and settled	302
Mutuality in a Contract, what it is	304—307
Analysis of Simple Contract	307
1. The Request	307—315
2. The Consideration	315—324
3. The Promise	325—332
Rules of general application relating to Contracts special or simple	334 et seq.
Effect of Fraud on Contracts	334
Distinction between legal and moral fraud	336
Can the motive of the Contractor be inquired into?	344
Does action lie for fraudulent breach of agreement?	345
Distinction between breach of warranty and fraud	347
warranty and representation	349
Of Contracts void on various grounds	353
in direct violation of law	354
opposed to public policy	360
in restraint of trade	363
Of Immoral Contracts	370

CHAPTER II.

THE STATUTE OF FRAUDS, ETC.

Parol Contract, what	373
Policy of the Statute of Frauds	378
Contracts within Sect. 4	379
Meaning of word "agreement" used in above section	379

CONTENTS.

xv

Promise by executor to answer damages personally	382
Promise to answer for debt, &c., of another	383
Of guarantees	383
— agreements in consideration of marriage	390
— contracts concerning land, &c.	390—395
— agreements not to be performed within a year	395
— the contract of sale	397—406
Provisions of Sect 17	406
What is within the operation of this section	407, 408
Its effect	408
What is an “ acceptance and actual receipt ” of goods within Sect. 17	409
Remaining clauses of Sect. 17 considered	417 et seq.
Signature by agent	420
Contract within the Statute cannot be varied by parol	424
Other enactments to authenticate Contracts	426
A specialty contrasted with a simple contract	427
Deed when requisite at common law	431
Deed when required by Statute	432

CHAPTER III.

NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS.

Negotiable instrument, what	434
Chose in action, what	434
not assignable	434
Bill of Exchange, by whom introduced	437
How defined	439
Its form	441
Its use in mercantile transactions	441
Accommodation Bill, what	442
Steps to be taken by holder of bill when due	444
Presentment	444
Notice of dishonour	444
where not requisite	446
Nature of contract entered into by drawer	448
by indorser	450
by acceptor	450
Manner and effect of indorsement	456

What is a Cheque	460
Notice of Dishonour	464
Foreign Bill, what	468
Promissory Note, how defined	471
Form of	474
Liabilities of parties to	476—480
Bank Note	480
rule as to presentment of	481
Matters of defence in actions upon bills and notes	485—494
Bill of Lading, what	495
Railway Scrip, whether assignable	497

CHAPTER IV.

EVIDENCE OF CUSTOM OR USAGE TO EXPLAIN WRITTEN CONTRACTS.

Rules for the construction of written contracts	498
As to ambiguous contracts	500
Admissibility of evidence to identify subject-matter of contract	502
identify parties to contract	502
explain mercantile terms	504
annex terms to written contract	508
Inadmissibility of evidence of usage to vary terms of written contract	510
Questions as to admissibility and effect of evidence of usage, &c., how determined	513
Enumeration of some leading rules of construction	520

CHAPTER V.

THE CAPACITY TO CONTRACT, HOW IT MAY BE AFFECTED. *

SECT. I.—Contracts with Mercantile Persons.

Contracts by principal and agent	523
Agency, how constituted	523
Fact of agency, how proved	526
Authority of agent, to what it extends	530
Did the agent contract as such ?	532
Respective liability of principal and agent	533—543

CONTENTS.

xvii

How an agent should contract by specialty	543
Partnership, what it is	544
Liability of firm quoad third persons	548
Agency of partner of trading firm, its nature	549
Continuance of liability of partner	554
Contracts by corporations	557—566
Projected companies	567
Effect of bankruptcy on the capacity to contract	568

SECT. II.—Contracts with Non-mercantile Persons.

Contracts with an infant	574
Ratification of promise by infant	580
Effect of coverture on the capacity to contract	583—596
Contracts of lunatics	596—599
Intoxication, its effect on contracts	599
Effect of duress on contracts	600
Incapacity of alien enemy or outlaw to contract	602
Of the contracts of executors and administrators	603—608

CHAPTER VI.

THE MEASURE OF DAMAGES—IN ACTIONS OF CONTRACT.

Meaning of the term “damages”	612
Intention of party, whether relevant to issue in action of contract	613
Nominal damages when recoverable	614
Distinction between a penalty and liquidated damages	617
Measure of damages on contract for sale of goods	621
“ in action for non-delivery of goods	622
non-acceptance of goods	623
on contract to replace stock	624
in action for price of goods sold	625
breach of warranty	625
contract of hiring and service	628 contract for sale of land	629

Rule as to remoteness of damage considered	632—638
Interest when recoverable in action ex contractu	638

Importance of a knowledge of the law of contracts	640
---	-----

BOOK III.

TORTS.

CHAPTER I.

TORTS GENERALLY—THEIR NATURE AND CLASSIFICATION.

Definition of a tort	642
Right of action for a tort whereon founded	642
Rights of action ex delicto
Class I. Action for invasion of a right	643
Class II. Action for breach of public duty—producing damage	646
Action for breach of public duty at common law	647 statutory public duty	654
Class III. Action for breach of private duty—producing damage	661 statutory private duty	662
private duty at common law	662
Torts flowing from breach of contract	663
Privity, whether necessary to support action ex delicto	664
Action for breach of duty, undertaken	670
founded on fraud, &c., and consequential damage	671, 672

CHAPTER II.

TORTS TO THE PERSON AND REPUTATION.

Intention, whether material in action for bodily injury	674
---	-----

Action for assault and battery	676
other bodily injuries	678
where plaintiff has contributed to injury	679
Liability of master for tortious act of servant	681—690
attaching to owner of realty	690
Effect of ratification of tort.	692—698
Liability of master to servant for injury sustained by latter in his service	698
Action for compensation where death has been caused by negligence	703
Torts to the health and comfort of individuals	706
by sale of unwholesome food	707
by nuisances affecting health	707—710
by negligent treatment of patient	710
affecting personal liberty.	711
by false imprisonment.	711—725
Meaning of word 'malice' in civil proceedings	725
Action for malicious arrest	727
Torts to the reputation	730
Action for malicious prosecution	730
maliciously suing out commission of bankruptcy	733
libel	734—748
As to privileged communications	740
Action for slander	748
Action for slander of title	750

CHAPTER III.

TORTS TO PROPERTY.

SECT. I.—Torts to Real Property.

Ejectment.	753—763
Trespass to realty	763
Who is a trespasser ab initio ?	773
As to the ratification of a trespass	774
Nuisance to realty	775
Obstruction of ancient lights	776

Prescriptive right to easement, how acquired	778
Land, what it is in legal contemplation	781
Right to flowing water.	782
artificial watercourse	784
subterranean water.	785

SECT. II.—Torts to Personal Property.

Chattels personal, what	789
Torts to personalty, how classified.	789
in possession	789—798
out of the owner's possession	798
Bailments	798
Class 1. Trust for exclusive benefit of Bailor	799
Class 2. Trust for exclusive benefit of Bailee	802
Class 3. Trust for benefit of both parties	804
Liability of pawnee	804
innkeeper	808
boarding-house keeper	810
lodging-house keeper	811
land-carrier	811—826
Torts by third persons to chattels under bailment	826

CHAPTER IV.

TORTS—NOT DIRECTLY AFFECTING THE PERSON OR PROPERTY.

Distinction between torts to absolute and torts to relative rights	829
Torts to absolute rights considered.	830
Estoppel in pais, its effect	830
Torts to relative rights considered.	835
in case of husband and wife	835
parent and child	836
master and servant	837

CHAPTER V.

THE MEASURE OF DAMAGES—IN ACTIONS OF TORT.

Damages in tort are to be regarded as compensatory	840
Intention or motive of wrong-doer, whether material in estimating damages	844
Distinction between general and special damage	847
Consequential damage is recoverable, provided it be not too remote	848
The question in what respects does a tort differ from a contract and from a crime, considered	850—853

BOOK IV.

CRIMINAL LAW.

CHAPTER I.

CRIMINAL LAW GENERALLY—ITS ELEMENTARY PRINCIPLES.

Importance of a knowledge of Criminal Law	854
Ignorance of law no excuse for crime	854
The law speaks imperatively to all	855
Meaning of the word "crime"	856
A crime is an offence of a public nature.	858
Intention—what—how far material to constitute crime	862
Malice—what—in connection with criminal law	864
Intention, how provable	865
Mere intention not cognizable by law	867
An attempt may be so	867
Capacity to commit crime	869
Remarks as to irresponsibility of one non compos mentis	871
Rule upon this subject laid down in M'Naghten's case	872

Responsibility of one who commits crime whilst intoxicated	876, 877
As to the criminal responsibility of infant	877
.feme covert	879
Classification of criminal offences—treasons, felonies, and misdemeanors	880—884
Offences summarily punishable by Justices of the Peace	885

CHAPTER II.

OFFENCES AGAINST THE SOVEREIGN, THE STATE, AND THE COMMUNITY.

Allegiance, natural or local	887
High treason, in what it consists	888
What is an overt act of treason	891
Remarks as to the doctrine of constructive treason	893
Offences against the State, endangering the public safety	895
Conspiracy	895
Offences against the Executive Power	897
Administration of Justice	898
by judicial officers	898
by private persons	898
Public Peace	899—903
Riot	899
Forcible entry	902
Offences against Public Trade	903
Public Morals and Police	903
Nuisance	903—905

CHAPTER III

OFFENCES AGAINST INDIVIDUALS.

SECT. I.—Offences against the Person and Reputation.

Degrees of homicide	906
Murder—manslaughter,—how defined	906
What is malice, express or implied	907

As to the presumption that homicide is malicious	908
Homicide on provocation	910
coupled with felonious intention	913
caused by undue correction	914
through negligence	914
of medical practitioner	915
of trustees of road, &c.	916
in resisting officers of justice	917
where justifiable	919
excusable	920
Jurisdiction where homicide occurs abroad	921
On indictment for murder, jury may convict of manslaughter .	922
Accessory to, before the fact, how punishable	922
Indictment for aggravated assault, where it lies	923
Indictment for assault and battery, where it lies	925
The offence of libel, in what it consists	928
Provisions of Mr. Fox's Libel Act considered	929
6 & 7 Vict. c. 96, as to libel	930
Criminal information may be granted for libel	933
Indictment will lie for threatening to publish libel, &c. . . .	933

SECT. II.—Offences against Property.

Simple larceny, how defined	934
Of what things larceny cannot be committed at common law .	934
Property in chattel stolen, how laid	937
Possession, actual or constructive	937
Where property alleged to have been stolen came rightfully into possession of the accused	939
Provision as to fraudulent appropriation of goods bailed . .	941
Under what circumstances the appropriation of lost goods may amount to larceny	943
Doctrine of relation, how it applies in larceny	946
The 'asportation,' what	948
Receiving stolen goods	949
Obtaining goods or money by false pretences	952
Embezzlement	958
Larceny by a clerk or servant	959
Larceny from the person	961

Robbery	961
Stealing in dwelling-house	962
Housebreaking	964
Burglary	965

CHAPTER IV.

THE PROCEEDINGS AT A CRIMINAL TRIAL.

General view of the jurisdiction of Justices of the Peace . .	971
Commitment preliminary to trial	973
Procedure by indictment	975
Mode of procedure at the trial	979
Entry of judgment and proceedings subsequent thereto . .	987
Court for consideration of Crown Cases Reserved . . .	989
Pardon—absolute or conditional	989

TABLE OF CASES.

A.

ABBOT v. Blofield, 131
 Abbott v. Feary, 54
 — v. Macfie, 680
 Ablett v. Basham, 149
 Abley v. Dale, 5, 719
 Abraham v. Reynolds, 652, 699, 700
 Absolon v. Marks, 474, 475
 Acebery v. Barton, 232
 Acey v. Fernie, 537
 Ackermann v. Ehrensperger, 639
 Acraman v. Morrice, 413
 Acton v. Blundell, 78, 81, 783, 785, 786
 Adams v. Andrews, 431, 677
 — v. Freemantle, 43, 51
 — v. Great Western R. C., 72
 — v. Jones, 457
 — v. Lindsell, 304
 — v. Lloyd, 193
 — v. Wordley, 375
 Addison v. Gandassequi, 533, 534
 — v. The Mayor of Preston, 120, 322
 Agacio v. Forbes, 553
 Agar v. Athenaeum Life Ass. Soc., 566 Agricutural Cattle Insurance Co. (The)
 v. Fitzgerald, 490
 Aitkin, Re, 226
 Alcock v. Alcock, 598
 Alcinous v. Nygrin, 602
 Alder v. Boyle, 110
 — v. Keighley, 131, 571, 613, 617, 621 Alderson v. Langdale, 491
 — v. Waistell, 672
 Aldis v. Chapman, 593
 Aldis's case, 709
 Aldridge v. Great Western R. C., 820, 821
 — v. Haines, 722

Aldridge v. Johnson, 399, 403, 794
 Alexander v. Barker, 207, 553
 — v. Burchfield, 480, 545
 — v. Gardner, 403
 — v. Mackenzie, 455
 — v. Parker, 201
 — v. Thomas, 440
 Allan v. Sundius, 508
 — v. Waldegrave, 538
 Allard v. Bourne, 565
 Allaway v. Wagstaff, 84, 781
 Allen Re, 246
 — v. Allen, 577
 — v. Bennet, 381, 419
 — v. Bussey, 150
 — v. Cameron, 626
 — v. Cary, 199, 201
 — v. Edmundson, 446
 — v. Hayward, 688
 — v. Hopkins, 133
 — v. Impett, 128
 — v. Kemble, 449, 469
 — v. The Sea, Fire, and Life Assurance Co., 475
 — v. Sharp, 126
 — v. Smith, 809
 — v. Walker, 450
 — v. Wright, 714
 Alleyne v. Reg., 264, 283, 988
 Allsop v. Allsop, 676, 750
 Allum v. Boulthbee, 207, 208
 Allwood v. Heywood, 122
 Alsager v. Close, 841
 Alston v. Grant, 662, 691, 775
 — v. Herring, 95, 225, 627, 849
 — v. Scales, 770
 Ambergate, &c. R. C. v. Midland R. C., 773
 Amann v. Damm, 741
 Ambrose v. Kerrison, 596
 Amott v. Holden, 184
 Ancona v. Marks, 309, 457

- Anderson, Re, 247
 — v. Martindale, 267
 — v. Radcliffe, 363
 — v. Thornton, 345
 Andrewes v. Elliott, 197
 Andrews, Ex parte, 247
 — v. Belfield, 404
 — v. Dally, 538
 — v. Elliott, 45, 831
 — v. Garrett, 303
 — v. Hailes, 428
 — v. Marris, 718
 — v. Smith, 385
 Anon. (6 Mod.), 654
 — (1 P. Wm.), 241
 — Ex parte, 242, 927
 — v. Handcock, 577
 — (11 Mod.), 734, 735
 Anonymous case, 518
 Ansell v. Baker, 279
 — v. Smith, 178
 Anthony v. Haneys, 219
 Apps v. Day, 207, 844
 Appleton v. Binks, 134, 543
 — v. Campbell, 370
 Aranguren v. Scholfield, 494
 Archer v. Baynes, 418
 — v. James, 254
 — v. Marsh, 367
 Arden v. Goodacre, 89, 841
 — v. Tucker, 553
 Arkwright v. Gell, 785
 Arlett v. Elia, 221
 Armistead v. Wilde, 809
 Armory v. Delamirie, 126, 140, 790, 841, 946
 Armstrong v. Christiani, 466
 — v. Toler, 357, 358
 Armsworth v. The South Eastern R.
 C., 704
 Armitage v. Haley, 844
 Arnold v. Bainbridge, 135
 — v. Bidgood, 132
 — v. Hamel, 115
 — v. Jefferson, 826
 — v. Poole (Mayor), 558, 561
 — v. Ridge, 5
 — v. Webb, 122
 Arrowsmith v. Le Mesurier, 711
 Arthur v. Barton, 531
 — v. Beales, 486
 — v. Bokenham, 19
 Ash v. Daunay, 125, 771, 773
 Ashby v. Ashby, 605
 — v. White, 85, 88, 89, 90, 100, 644, 660
 Ashcroft v. Bourne, 722
 — v. Foulkes, 70
 Ashley v. Harrison, 93, 94
 Ashmole v. Wainwright, 602
 Ashpitel v. Bryan, 455, 830, 831
 Ashton v. Sherman, 537
 Ashworth v. Mounsey, 319, 501
 — v. Stanwix, 144, 700
 Askew's (Dr.) case, 228
 Aslin v. Parkin, 755, 762
 Aspin v. Austin, 306
 Aspinall v. Wake, 138, 605
 Asop v. Yates, 95, 680
 Astley v. Johnson, 487
 — v. Weldon, 618
 Atkins v. Curwood, 591
 Atkinson v. Denby, 286, 362
 — v. Hawdon, 492
 — v. Pocock, 338, 343
 — v. Stephens, 327, 532, 617
 — v. Warne, 714
 Atkyns v. Kinnier, 367, 619, 620, 858
 — v. Pearce, 594
 Atlee v. Backhouse, 538, 539
 Attack v. Bramwell, 841, 842
 Attenborough v. London, 806
 Atterbury v. Jarvis, 189
 Att.-Gen. v. Birmingham, Council of, 98
 — v. Hallett, 5, 43
 — v. Halling, 31
 — v. Hertford (Marquis), 7
 — v. Hollingworth, 287, 359
 — v. Kingston, 43
 — v. Radloff, 856
 — v. Sheffield Gas Consumers'
 Co., 708
 — v. Sillem, 43, 269, 859, 863
 — v. Windsor, Dean of, 43
 Attwood v. Emery, 505
 — v. Ernest, 122, 795
 — v. Munnings, 455
 — v. Small, 338, 342, 353
 — v. Taylor, 639, 640
 Atwooll v. Atwooll, 181
 Aulton v. Atkins, 250, 546
 Austin v. Debnam, 728
 — v. Evans, 207
 — v. Kolle, 457
 — v. Llewellyn, 183
 — v. Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincoln R. C., 817, 822
 — v. Mills, 215
 Australasia (Bank of) v. Breillat, 355, 561
 Australian Royal Mail Co. v. Marzetti, 559
 Autey v. Hutchinson, 533
 Avars v. Rhodes, 45, 62
 Avery v. Bowden, 112
 — v. Langford, 369
 Awde v. Dixon, 451
 Aylett v. Lowe, 120

Ayling v. Whicher, 132, 141
 Ayrey v. Fearnside, 475

B.

Babonneau v. Farrell, 747
 Backhouse v. Bonomi, 74, 84, 92, 186, 775
 Bacon v. Dubarry, 544
 Baddeley v. Bernard, 70
 — v. Denton, 66
 Badeley v. Vigurs, 842
 Bagnall v. London and North Western R. C., 84
 Bagshaw v. Eastern Union R. C., 131
 Bailey, In re, 246
 — v. Bidwell, 488
 — v. Bryant, 72
 — v. Buckland, 154
 — v. Harris, 356
 — v. Macaulay, 135, 527, 567
 — v. Porter, 467, 479
 — v. Stephens, 16
 — v. Sweeting, 418
 Bain v. Williamson, 84
 Bainbridge v. Wade, 333, 330
 Baines v. Woodfall, 303
 — v. Swainson, 536
 Baird v. Fortune, 187
 Baker, Re, 67
 — v. Bank of Australasia, 237, 455
 — v. Gray, 131, 432
 — v. Sampson, 593
 — v. White, 362
 Baldey v. Parker, 415
 Balfie v. West, 671, 802
 Balfour v. The Sea, Fire, &c, Co., 189, 429, 435
 Ball v. Dunsterville, 553
 — v. Robinson, 404
 Bally v. Wells, 274
 Bamberger v. Commercial Credit, &c. Society, 170
 Bamfield v. Tupper, 186
 Bamford v. Turnley, 775
 Banco di Torino v. Hamburger, 199
 Bandon (Earl) v. Becker, 264
 Banks v. Rebeck, 239
 Bannerman v. White, 350
 Banyster v. Trussel, 603
 Barber v. Fox, 135, 296
 — v. Lamb, 265
 — v. Lemon, 486
 — v. Lesiter, 93, 731, 733, 849
 — v. Pott, 535
 — v. Richards, 458
 Barber Surgeons of London v. Felson, 552
 Bardell v. Miller, 150

Barden v. De Keverberg, 584
 Barham v. Dennis, 837
 Barker v. Allen, 803, 374
 — v. Braham, 720
 — v. Highley, 532
 — v. Midland R. C., 669
 — v. St. Quintin, 284
 — v. Sterne, 452, 468
 — v. Stone, 462
 Barkworth v. Ellerman, 321
 Barley v. Walford, 343
 Barlow v. Browne, 321
 Barnardiston v. Soame, 20, 76, 103, 106
 Barnes v. Ward, 649, 657, 705
 Barnett v. Allen, 749
 — v. Earl of Guildford, 139, 142, 604, 766
 — v. Lambert, 567
 — v. London and N. W. R. C., 191
 Baron v. Husband, 321
 Barough v. White, 480
 Barrett v. Long, 739, 747
 Barrick v. Buba, 112, 602, 613
 Barringer v. Handley, 154, 157
 Barronet, Ex parte, 855, 856
 Barrow v. Arnaud, 849
 Barry v. Nesham, 545
 Bartholomew v. Bushnell, 347, 663
 — v. Markwick, 112, 624
 Bartlett v. Holmes, 494, 625, 627
 — v. Lewis, 195
 — v. Purnell, 420
 — v. Vinor, 356
 — v. Wells, 168, 427, 583, 587
 Bartley v. Hodges, 46
 Barton v. Bricknell, 721
 — v. Gainer, 433
 Bartonshill Coal Co. v. M'Guire, 701, 703
 — v. Reid, 681, 703
 Barwick v. Thompson, 756
 Barwick v. Keppel, 102
 Bassett v. Godschall, 721
 Basten v. Carew, 722
 Batard v. Hawes, 311, 547, 617
 Bateman v. Ashton-under-Lyne (Mayor, &c. of), 566
 — v. Bluck, 224
 — v. Joseph, 466
 — v. Lyall, 750
 Baten's case, 221, 776
 Bates v. Bates, 158
 Batson v. King, 386
 Battishill v. Reed, 771, 842, 844
 Battley v. Lewis, 555
 Bawden v. Howell, 553
 Baxendale v. Eastern Counties R. C., 823
 — v. Great Western R. C., 816

- Baxter v. Portsmouth (Earl), 596
 — v. Taylor, 770
 Bayley, Ex parte, 226
 — v. Fitzmaurice, 303
 — v. Wilkins, 530
 — v. Wolverhampton Water Works Co., 98
 Baylis v. Le Gros, 128, 273
 — v. Dinely, 575
 — v. Strickland, 718, 722
 Baynard v. Simmons, 204
 Baynes v. Brewster, 712, 713
 Beadle v. Sherman, 132
 Beale v. Caddick, 548
 — v. Moulds, 555
 — v. Sanders, 324
 — v. South Devon R. C., 319
 Bealey v. Stuart, 305
 Beard v. Perry, 70
 — v. Webb, 584
 Beardmore v. Carrington, 843, 844
 Beatson v. Skene, 740
 Beaurain v. Scott, 105
 Beavan v. M'Donnell, 598
 Beaufort (Duke) v. Swansea (Mayor), 507
 — v. Smith, 13
 Beaumont v. Brengeri, 410
 — v. Greathhead, 429, 486
 — v. Reeve, 295, 331
 Becher v. Jones, 639
 Beck v. Robley, 464
 Beckford v. Crutwell, 506
 Beckham v. Drake, 133, 143, 503, 553, 571, 618, 619, 623, 623
 Beckwith v. Philby, 715
 Bedford v. Bagshawe, 343, 667
 — v. Deakin, 555
 — v. Jones, 443
 Beechy v. Brown, 345
 Beeman v. Duck, 455
 Beer v. Beer, 123
 Beeston v. Weate, 785
 Begg v. Forbes, 146
 Behn v. Burness, 345, 349, 350, 628
 — v. Kemble, 343, 663, 667, 830
 Beirne v. Dord, 252
 Belcher v. Smith, 237
 Beldon v. Campbell, 531
 Belfast and Ballymena, &c. R. C. v. Keys, 824
 Belknap's case, 584
 Bell v. Buckley, 457, 486
 Bell v. Carey, 181, 571, 614
 — v. Ingestre (Visct.), 457
 — v. Midland R. C., 769, 846
 — v. Morrison, 182
 — v. Simpson, 846
 Bellamy v. Burch, 749
 — v. Marjoribanks, 10
 Bellingham v. Clark, 130, 133
 Belshaw v. Bush, 118, 173, 480, 403
 Belson, Re, 246
 Bendix v. Wakeman, 132, 588
 Bennett v. The Peninsular and Oriental Steam Boat Co., 208, 826
 Benham v. United Guarantee, &c. Co., 351
 Bennett v. Allcott, 837
 — v. Bayes, 842
 — v. Benham, 72
 — v. Deacon, 738
 — v. Dean, 56
 — v. Mellor, 808
 Bennison v. Cartwright, 781
 Benson v. Chapman, 532
 — v. Duncan, 532
 — v. Flower, 143, 572
 — v. Paull, 123
 Bentall v. Burn, 412
 Bentley v. Fleming, 207
 — v. Griffin, 591
 Berkeley v. Elderkin, 215
 — v. Hardy, 432, 544
 Berkley v. De Vere, 169
 Berkshire Woollen Co. v. Proctor, 517
 Bernstein v. Baxendale, 514
 Berry v. Alderman, 488
 Berwick v. Andrews, 133
 — v. Horsfall, 309, 505
 — (Mayor, &c.) v. Oswald, 297
 Besant v. Cross, 375
 — v. Great Western R. C., 653
 Besell v. Wilson, 723
 Beset, Ex parte, 245
 Bessey v. Windham, 289
 Best v. Hayes, 238
 Bewick v. Boffey, 239
 — v. Capper, 62
 Betts v. Burch, 618, 619
 Bevan v. Whitmore, 311
 Bevens v. Rees, 179
 Beverley v. The Lincoln Gas Light and Coke Co., 559
 Beverley's case, 597, 599
 Bibby v. Carter, 82, 83, 775
 Biecard v. Shepherd, 508
 Bickerdike v. Bollman, 446, 447
 Bickerton v. Burrell, 541
 Bidgood v. Way, 131, 586
 Biffin v. Bignell, 592
 Bigg v. Whisking, 414
 Bignell v. Buzzard, 751
 — v. Harpur, 606
 Bill v. Bament, 112, 412, 413
 Binckes v. Paab, 778
 Binet v. Picot, 158
 Bingle, Re, 490
 Binks v. South Yorkshire R. C., 649, 705
 Binnington v. Wallis, 295

- Birch v. Liverpool (Earl), 396
 Bird, Ex parte, 227
 — v. Boulter, 421, 422
 — v. Brown, 309, 693, 697
 — v. Gammon, 385
 — v. Higginson, 431
 — v. Holbrook, 21, 647, 657, 680
 — v. Jones, 711
 — v. Malzy, 195
 — v. Peagram, 586
 Bird's case, 980
 Birkenhead, &c. R. C. v. Pilcher, 578
 Birkett v. Whitehaven Junction R. C., 705
 Birkmyr v. Darnell, 385, 386
 Bishop v. Bedford Charity (Trustees of), 690
 — v. Curtis, 101
 — v. Jersey (Countess), 548, 552
 Blachford v. Dod, 733
 Black v. Baxendale, 635
 — v. Green, 155
 — v. Jones, 202, 208
 Blackborough v. Davis, 231
 Blackett v. Bradley, 15
 — v. Royal Exch. Ass. Co., 511
 — v. Weir, 547
 Blackford v. Hill, 139
 Blackham v. Pugh, 742
 Blackie v. Pidding, 492
 Blade v. Higgs, 220
 Blades v. Free, 539
 — v. Higgs, 221
 Blagg v. Sturt, 743
 Blagrove v. Bristol Waterworks Co., 77, 93, 98, 850
 Blaikie v. Stenbridge, 683
 Blair v. Bromley, 543
 — v. Ormond, 184
 Blake, In re, 226
 — v. Barnard, 676
 — v. Beaumont, 454
 — v. Phinn, 630
 — v. The Midland R. C., 706
 — v. Thirst, 643, 699
 Blake's case, 297, 299, 301
 Blakenföre v. Bristol and Exeter R. C., 669, 670, 803
 Blakesley v. Smallwood, 605
 Bland v. Crowley, 272, 515
 — v. Ross, 668
 Blandy v. De Burgh, 316
 Blasco v. Fletcher, 532
 Blaymire v. Hayley, 837
 Blenkinsop v. Clayton, 417
 Blewett v. Jenkins, 15
 — v. Tregonning, 16
 Bligh v. Brent, 391
 Bliss v. Hall, 710
 Blofield v. Payne, 83
 Bloodworth v. Gray, 749
 Bloor v. Huston, 239
 Bloxam v. Sanders, 401, 793, 828
 Black v. Gompertz, 194, 384
 Blues, In re, 246
 Blyth v. Birmingham Waterworks Co., 647
 — v. Dennett, 831, 847
 Boddington v. Castelli, 569
 Boden v. French, 519
 — v. Wright, 487
 Bodenham, Ex parte, 226
 Bodger v. Arch, 133, 186, 604
 Bodley v. Reynolds, 848
 Bog Lead Mining Co. v. Montague, 303
 Bogg v. Pearce, 119, 650
 Boggett v. Frier, 584
 Boileau v. Rutlin, 263
 Bolch v. Smith, 649, 661
 Bonaker v. Evans, 119
 Bonar v. Mitchell, 469
 Bone v. Eckless, 358
 Bonfield v. Smith, 549
 Bonham's (Dr.) case, 9
 Bonsey v. Wordsworth, 63, 64
 Boorman v. Brown, 614
 — v. Nash, 622
 Booth v. Clive, 115
 Borradaile v. Hunter, 871
 Borrowman v. Rossel, 190, 376
 Borthwick v. Carruthers, 552
 Bosanquet v. Shortridge, 207
 — v. Wray, 546
 Bostock v. The North Staffordshire R. C., 566, 708
 Boswell v. Smith, 553
 Bott v. Ackroyd, 721
 Bottomley v. Fisher, 551
 — v. Nuttall, 112, 113, 549, 554
 Boulding v. Tyler, 70
 Boulter v. Arnott, 403
 — v. Peplow, 617
 Boulton v. Jones, 316
 Bourne v. Gatliff, 506, 812
 — v. Mason, 319
 Bovill v. Hammond, 69, 546
 Bowdell v. Parsons, 111
 Bowditch v. Balchin, 718
 Bowen, Re, 233
 — v. Evans, 335
 — v. Owen, 179
 Bowerbank v. Monteiro, 451
 Bowes v. Foster, 289, 831
 — v. Howe, 478
 Bowker v. Burdekin, 553
 Bowlby v. Bell, 312, 407
 Bowman v. Blyth, 863
 — v. Taylor, 280, 281
 Bowry v. Bennet, 370
 Bowyer v. Cook, 771

- Box v. Green, 63, 216
 Boyce v. Higgins, 100, 113, 656
 — v. Warburton, 639
 Boyd v. Hind, 480
 Boydell v. Drummond, 381, 395
 — v. Harkness, 165
 Bracegirdle v. Heald, 395
 — v. Hinks, 119, 169
 — v. Orford, 843
 Bradbury, Ex parte, 246
 — v. Morgan, 607
 Braddick v. Thompson, 300
 Bradley v. Copley, 797
 — v. Eyre, 137, 264
 — v. Holdsworth, 391
 — v. James, 186
 — v. Newcastle (Master, &c.), 507
 Bradshaw v. Beard, 596
 Brady v. Todd, 528
 Braham v. Watkins, 116
 Brainard v. Connecticut River R. Co., 648
 Braithwaite v. Gardiner, 455
 — v. Skinner, 135, 654
 Bramley v. Chesterton, 637
 Brampton v. Beddoes, 368
 Bramwell v. Attack, 774
 Brandao v. Barnett, 11
 Brandon v. Curling, 602
 — v. Hubbard, 553
 — v. Nesbitt, 602
 Brandt v. Bowlby, 403
 Branley v. South-Eastern R. C., 46
 Brashford v. Buckingham, 132
 Brass v. Maitland, 667, 822
 Brassington v. Ault, 607
 Braunstein v. Accidental Death Ins. Co., 44
 Bray v. Finch, 193
 Bredeon v. Gill, 233
 Bree v. Holbech, 187
 Brennan's case, 246
 Brennan v. Howard, 199
 Brent v. Haddon, 144
 Brereton v. Evans, 132
 Bret v. Cumberland, 132
 Brett v. Brett, 6
 Brettell v. Williams, 551, 552
 Brewer v. Dew, 572
 — v. Jones, 531
 Briddon v. Great Northern R. C., 513
 Bridge v. The Great Junction R. C., 224, 679
 Bridges v. Hawkeaworth, 125, 790, 946
 Bridgman v. Dean, 219
 Brierly v. Kendall, 797, 842
 Briers v. Rust, 201
 Brine v. Bazzigette, 739
 — v. Great Western R. C., 163
 Briassac v. Rathbone, 265
 Bristol (Earl) v. Wilsmore, 219
 Bristol and Exeter R. C. v. Collins, 823
 Bristow v. Eastman, 583
 — v. Sequeville, 47
 — v. Towers, 602
 — v. Whitmore, 532
 Brittain v. Kinnaird, 722
 — v. Lloyd, 308, 310, 312
 British Empire Mutual Life Assurance Co. v. Brown, 129, 306
 British Linen Co. v. Drummond, 46
 — v. Caledonian Ins. Co., 462
 Britten v. Cole, 693
 Broad v. Ham, 733
 — v. Jolliffe, 364
 Broadbent v. Ledward, 171
 — v. Ramsbotham, 79, 786
 — v. Wilks, 17
 Broadwood v. Granara, 772, 809
 Brockbank v. Whitehaven Junction R. C., 142
 Brodie v. Howard, 531
 Bromage v. Lloyd, 457
 — v. Potter, 725, 736
 Brook v. Rawl, 751
 Brooke v. Montague, 744
 Brooker v. Scott, 580
 Brookman v. Wenham, 237
 Brooks v. Elkins, 475
 — v. Hodgkinson, 720
 — v. Mitchell, 480
 Brookshaw v. Hopkins, 721
 Broom v. Batchelor, 384
 Broom v. Hall, 633, 637
 Broome v. Wooton, 261, 262
 Broughton v. Jackson, 714
 Brown v. Kennedy, 325
 Brown v. Ackroyd, 593
 — v. Boorman, 662, 663
 — v. Byrne, 504, 508, 511, 517
 — v. Chapman, 719
 — v. Copley, 104
 — v. De Winton, 473, 474, 475
 — v. Edgington, 348
 — v. Fullerton, 147
 — v. Harraden, 473, 476
 — v. Howard, 187
 — v. Jodrell, 598
 — v. Jones, 718
 — v. Kidger, 548
 — v. Langley, 376
 — v. London and North Western R. C., 72
 — v. Mallett, 165, 650
 — v. Nottle, 139, 766
 — v. Robins, 82
 — v. Smith, 740
 — v. Tapscott, 517, 548

- Brown v. Wootton, 261
 Browne v. Burton, 269
 — v. Emerson, 123
 — v. Hare, 398, 404, 496
 — v. Price, 614
 Browning v. Stallar, 385
 Brownlow v. Tomlinson, 161
 — v. Metropolitan Board of Works, 652
 Brownrigg v. Rae, 553
 Bruff v. Conybeare, 500, 502
 Brunskill v. Powell, 64
 Brunswick (Duke) v. Harmer, 186, 745
 — v. Slowman, 841
 Bryans v. Nix, 403
 Bryant v. Bobbett, 729
 — v. Clutton, 720
 — v. Wardell, 828
 Bryden v. Stewart, 703
 Buckby v. Cotes, 772
 Buckland v. Johnson, 125, 199, 262, 793, 795, 797, 849
 Buckley, Ex parte, 551
 — v. Barber, 556
 — v. Collier, 586
 — v. Gross, 126, 790, 946
 — v. Hann, 158
 — v. Shafto, 84
 Buckmaster v. Reynolds, 974
 — v. Russell, 186, 330
 Bucks v. South Yorkshire and River Dun Co., 649
 Bull v. Chapman, 135, 356
 — v. Robison, 825
 Buller v. Crips, 472
 Bullock v. Dodds, 101, 602
 Bulnois v. Mackenzie, 169
 Bunbury v. Hewson, 142
 Bunn v. Guy, 368
 Burbridge v. Manners, 485
 Burchfield v. Moore, 491
 Burder v. Veeley, 232
 Burdett v. Colman, 773
 Burges v. Wickham, 347, 503
 Burgess v. Clements, 808
 — v. Gray, 687, 690
 Burghart v. Hall, 580
 Burgoyne v. Cottrell, 189
 Burley v. Bethune, 721
 Burling v. Harley, 116
 — v. Read, 223
 Burmester v. Barron, 467
 — v. Norris, 531
 Burnard v. Haggis, 580, 582
 Burnby v. Bollett, 707
 Burnes v. Pennell, 897
 — v. Purnell, 342
 Burnside v. Dayrell, 568
 Buron v. Denman, 102, 696, 774
 Burridge v. Nicholetta, 219, 771
 Burroughes v. Bayne, 125, 789, 793, 795
 Burton v. The Great Northern R. C., 306
 — v. Henson, 678
 — v. Tannahill, 127
 Bush v. Beavan, 128
 — v. Martin, 185, 186
 — v. Steinman, 690
 Bushel v. Wheeler, 412, 414
 Bushell v. Beavan, 129
 Bushell's case, 104
 Busk v. Davis, 402
 Bussey v. Barnett, 178
 Butcher v. Butcher, 765
 — v. The London and South Western R. C., 825
 — v. Stewart, 385
 Butler, Ex parte, 587
 — v. Ablewhite, 72
 — v. Hunter, 648, 687, 691
 — v. Meredith, 760
 Butt v. The Great Western R. C., 813, 816, 817
 Butterfield v. Forrester, 679
 Buttermere v. Hayes, 391
 Byerley v. Windus, 234
 Byrne v. Boodle, 681

C.

- Cabell v. Vaughan, 136
 Caballero v. Slater, 380
 Cadaval (Duke de) v. Collins, 601
 Cahill v. Dawson, 614, 841
 — v. London and North Western R. C., 824
 Caine v. Coulton, 178
 — v. Horsfall, 507
 Caines v. Smith, 111
 Calcraft v. Gibbs, 208
 Calcutta and Burmah Steam Navigation Co. v. De Mattos, 404, 406
 Calder v. Halket, 105
 Caldicott v. Griffiths, 547
 Caldwell v. Blake, 148
 Caledonian R. C. v. Sprott, 775
 Callaghan v. Callaghan, 289
 Callow v. Jenkinson, 168, 264, 540
 — v. Lawrence, 464
 Calmady v. Rowe, 507
 Calton v. Bragg, 639
 Calvin's case, 21, 888
 Calve's case, 755, 808, 809
 Camac v. Warriner, 489
 Cambridge (Mayor of) v. Dennis, 297
 Camden (Lord) v. Home, 283
 Camfield v. Bird, 739

- Camidge v. Allenby, 481, 482
 Cammell v. Sewell, 263, 264, 532
 Campanari v. Woodburn, 539, 696
 Campbell v. Fleming, 334, 336
 — v. Hicks, 535
 — v. Mersey Docks, 400
 — v. Reg., 987
 — v. Spottiswoode, 743
 Camoys (Lord) v. Scurr, 803
 Canadian Prisoner's case, 216, 247
 Cane v. Chapman, 650
 Canham v. Barry, 284
 — v. Fisk, 780
 Cannam v. Farmer, 427, 455, 587, 831
 Cannan v. Reynolds, 264
 Canot v. Hughes, 795
 Cant v. Parsons, 711
 Canterbury (Viscount) v. Att.-Gen., 102
 Cantwell v. Stirling (Earl), 148
 Capel v. Jones, 723
 Card v. Case, 650, 679
 Cardross, Re Lord, 226
 Carlon v. Ireland, 436, 481
 — v. Kenealy, 473
 Carlos v. Fancourt, 440
 Carlyon v. Lovering, 17
 Carmarthen (Mayor) v. Lewis, 560, 562
 Carne v. Brice, 586
 Carnes v. Nisbett, 365, 620
 Carpenter v. Buller, 290
 — v. Parker, 199
 Carpus v. London and Brighton R. C., 114, 681
 Carr v. Allatt, 432
 — v. Duckett, 751
 — v. Hinchliff, 536
 — v. Hood, 77, 743
 — v. Jackson, 541
 — v. Lancashire and Yorkshire R. C., 822
 — v. Smith, 547
 Carratt v. Morley, 718, 719
 Carrington v. Roots, 393
 Carrol v. Blencow, 584
 Carruthers v. Payne, 406
 — v. West, 464, 487
 Carter, In re, 216
 — v. Crick, 350, 505
 — v. Flower, 447
 — v. Whalley, 556
 Cashill v. Wright, 809
 Caseres v. Bell, 602
 Castelli v. Boddington, 151
 Castle v. Sworder, 412, 416
 Castling v. Aubert, 385
 Castrique v. Behrens, 78, 263, 733
 — v. Bernabo, 110, 467
 — v. Buttigieg, 457
 — v. Page, 4, 5
 Caswell v. Worth, 660, 680
 Catchpole v. The Ambergate, &c., R. C., 662
 Cater v. Chigwell, 289
 Cattell v. Ireson, 857
 Cattlin v. Barker, 207
 — v. Hills, 705
 Caudell v. Shaw, 132
 Caunt v. Thompson, 416, 466
 Cave v. Mills, 831
 Cavey v. Leadbitter, 775
 Cawley v. Furnell, 186, 217
 Cawthorne v. Cordrey, 395
 Chabot v. Lord Morpeth, 233
 Chaddock v. Wilbraham, 865
 Chadwick v. Herapath, 736
 Chalmers v. Shackell, 735
 Chamberlain v. Hazlewood, 837
 — v. West End of London R. C., 97
 — v. Williamson, 133
 Chamberlaine v. The Chester and Birkenhead R. C., 644
 Chambers v. Caulfield, 207, 844
 — v. Jennings, 231
 — v. Jones, 134, 533
 — v. Mason, 531
 — v. Miller, 220
 Chandlor v. Lotus, 348
 Chandler v. Broughton, 125, 678
 Channon v. Patch, 140
 Chanter v. Hopkins, 349
 Chaplin v. Clarke, 303
 — v. Rogers, 412
 — v. Showler, 164
 Chapman, Ex parte, 241, 933
 — v. Beeke, 150
 — v. Dutton, 129
 — v. Keane, 465
 — v. Partridge, 423
 — v. Pickersgill, 661, 733
 — v. Rothwell, 613, 661
 — v. Speller, 807
 — v. Van Toll, 834
 Chapple v. Cooper, 579, 583
 Chard v. Fox, 466
 Charles v. Altin, 627
 Charnley v. Grundy, 494
 Chartered Bank of India, &c., v. Rich, 194
 Chasmore v. Richards, 76, 78, 79, 81, 89, 786
 Chater v. Beckett, 383
 Chauntler v. Robinson, 83, 776
 Cheesman v. Exall, 606
 Cherry v. Heming, 268, 396
 Chesman v. Nainby, 365
 Chester v. Wortley, 195
 Chesterfield (Earl) v. Janssen, 362
 Cheveley v. Fuller, 303

- Cheveley v. Morris, 165
 Chew v. Holroyd, 68
 Chidell v. Galsworthy, 432
 Child, Ex parte, 246
 — v. Affleck, 738
 Childers v. Wooler, 339, 666, 671, 719, 830
 Childs v. Monins, 606
 Chilton v. Carrington, 121, 189
 — v. London and Croydon R. C., 684, 844
 Chinery v. Viall, 125, 401, 794, 828, 841
 Chinn v. Bullen, 214
 Chippendale v. Lancashire and Yorkshire R. C., 822
 — v. Tomlinson, 569
 Chivers v. Savage, 66
 Chorley v. Bolcot, 326
 Chown v. Parrott, 87, 531, 834
 Christie v. Bell, 147
 — v. Borelly, 324
 — v. Winnington, 269
 Christopherson v. Bare, 676
 — v. Lotinga, 193
 Church v. The Imperial Gas Light and Coke Co., 559 Churchill v. Bertrand, 605
 — v. Siggers, 728, 730
 Chudleigh's case, 6
 Cincinnati (Bank of) v. Buckingham's Executors, 256
 Clapham v. Shillito, 351, 352
 Clare v. Maynard, 637
 Clark v. Alexander, 185
 — v. Calvert, 572
 — v. Gilbert, 797
 — v. Gray, 813
 — v. Lazarus, 469
 — v. Newsam, 724
 — v. Smith, 148
 Clarke, In re, 247
 — v. Arden, 207
 — v. Crofts, 133
 — v. Dickson, 335, 343, 346, 830
 — v. Guardians of the Cuckfield Union, 559, 560, 562
 — v. Hart, 831
 — v. Holmes, 700
 — v. Martin, 472
 — v. Percival, 474
 — v. Royston, 511
 — v. Sharpe, 467
 — v. Spence, 406
 — v. Stancliffe, 217
 — v. Westrope, 44
 Clarke's case, 247
 Clay v. Southern, 130, 543
 — v. Yates, 404
 Clayards v. Dethick, 680
 Clayton v. Corby, 16
 Clayton v. Lord Nugent, 500, 502
 Clayton's case, 269
 Claxton v. Swift, 439
 Cleave v. Jones, 186
 Clegg v. Dearden, 84, 125
 Clements v. Ohrlly, 730
 — v. Todd, 567
 Clementson v. Blessig, 602
 Clerk v. Laurie, 189, 584
 — v. Mayor, &c. of Berwick, 246
 Clifford v. Brandon, 713
 — v. Laton, 592
 Clift v. Schwabe, 506, 871
 Clifton, Ex parte, 227
 — v. Furley, 70
 — v. Hooper, 89
 Clossman v. White, 122
 Clothier v. Webster, 648, 776
 Clugas v. Penaluna, 357
 Cobb v. Becke, 319
 Cobbett v. Grey, 676, 712
 — v. Hudson, 718
 — v. Slowman, 245
 — v. Warner, 115
 Cochran v. Ritberg, 513
 Cochrane v. Green, 190
 Cockayne v. Hodgkisson, 735, 740
 Cockburn v. Alexander, 507, 628
 Cockerell v. Aucompte, 550
 — v. Van Diemen's Land Co., 622
 Cocking v. Ward, 390
 Cockrill v. Sparks, 186, 330
 Cocks v. Masterman, 460, 483
 — v. Purday, 602
 Coe v. Platt, 165, 659, 660
 Coffee v. Brian, 548
 Coggs v. Bernard, 664, 670, 800, 803, 805, 812
 Cohen v. Huskisson, 713
 Colchester (The Mayor of) v. Brooke, 221, 224, 904
 Coldham v. Showler, 381
 Cole v. Bishop, 335
 — v. Sherard, 152
 Coleman v. Biedman, 486
 — v. Riches, 688, 835
 Coles v. Strick, 362
 Collard v. South Eastern R. C., 638
 Collen v. Wright, 251, 349, 537, 541, 637
 Collett v. Foster, 689, 696, 720
 — v. London and N. Western R. C., 125, 659
 Collingwood v. Berkeley, 537
 Collins v. Blantern, 282, 285, 288, 289, 355, 358
 — v. Brook, 321
 — v. Cave, 78, 98, 669, 672, 849
 — v. Evans, 339
 — v. Johnson, 227

- Collins v. Martin, 458
 — v. Yates, 194
 Collis v. Stack, 186
 Colman v. Trueman, 194
 Colpoys v. Colpoys, 502
 Colyer v. Finch, 646
 Combes's case, 524, 543
 Congleton (Mayor of) v. Pattisson, 274
 Congreve v. Evetta, 433
 Connop v. Levy, 343, 627
 Constable v. Nicholson, 16
 Cook v. Colehan, 441
 — v. Field, 363
 — v. Hartle, 840
 — v. Hopewell, 87, 178, 429
 — v. Lister, 178, 423, 485
 — v. Moffatt, 256
 — v. Ward, 735, 745
 — v. Wright, 317, 487
 Cooke v. Clayworth, 599
 — v. Sealey, 532, 553
 — v. Waring, 75, 336, 679
 — v. Wildes, 737, 739, 740
 — v. Wilson, 543, 661
 Cooksey v. Haynes, 207
 Cooling v. Great Northern R. C., 172, 207
 Coombs v. Bristol and Exeter R. C., 403, 414, 416, 524
 Coomer v. Latham, 719
 Cooper v. Asprey, 238
 — v. Chitty, 125
 — v. Hubbuck, 19, 731
 — v. Lloyd, 592, 594
 — v. Parker, 129, 332, 430
 — v. Simmons, 575, 854
 — v. Slade, 537
 — v. Stephenson, 225, 834
 — v. Waldegrave (Earl), 470
 — v. Willomatt, 828
 Cope v. Albinson, 303
 — v. Rowlands, 355, 356
 — v. James Haven Dock and R. Co., 559, 561, 565
 Copeland v. Child, 155
 Copeman v. Hart, 63, 72
 — v. Rose, 216
 Copper Miners' Co. (The) v. Fox, 560, 562
 Coppin v. Walker, 422
 Coppock v. Bower, 361
 Corbett v. Brown, 339, 848
 — v. General Steam Nav. Co., 72
 — v. Packington, 119, 663, 664
 — v. Swinburne, 178
 Corby v. Hill, 649, 652, 661
 Cork v. Baker, 390
 Cork and Bandon R. C. v. Cazenove, 578
 Cork and Bandon R. C. v. Goode, 183, 185, 267
 Corner v. Shew, 605
 Cornfoot v. Fowke, 338, 341
 Cornforth v. Smethard, 186
 Cornill v. Hudson, 185
 Cornish v. Abington, 528, 831
 Cornman v. Eastern Counties R. C., 647, 679
 Cornwall v. Metropolitan Commissioners of Sewers, 649
 Corpe v. Overton, 575
 Corsar v. Reed, 201
 Cort v. Ambergate, &c. R. C., 112, 561, 621, 660 Cory v. Scott, 447
 Coryton v. Lithebye, 141
 Coster v. Merest, 207
 Cotes v. Davis, 525
 Cothay v. Fennel, 536
 Cottam v. Banks, 197
 Cotterell v. Jones, 73, 733
 Cotterill v. Hobby, 847
 Cotton v. James, 733
 — v. Wood, 705
 Couch v. Steel, 106, 654, 656, 703, 709
 Couling v. Cox, 652
 Courtenay v. Earle, 663
 Couturier v. Hastie, 316, 387, 505
 Covas v. Bingham, 515
 Coventry v. Apsley, 186
 Coward v. Baddeley, 676, 925
 Cowburn v. Wearing, 172
 Cowell v. Watts, 605
 Cowgill, Re, 246
 Cowley v. Mayor, &c. of Sunderland, 656, 700
 Cowie v. Stirling, 474
 Cox v. Burbidge, 678
 — v. Glue, 139, 768
 — v. Hickman, 545
 — v. Hubbard, 127, 541, 553
 — v. Leech, 225, 834
 — v. Mayor of London, 11, 233
 — v. Midland Counties R. C., 529, 559, 561
 — v. Mitchell, 265
 — v. Muncey, 839
 — v. Troy, 451
 Coxeter v. Parsons, 232
 Coxhead v. Richards, 738, 740, 741
 Coxon v. Great Western R. C., 823
 Craig v. Hassell, 734
 Cranch v. White, 144
 Cranston v. Marshall, 348
 Craufurd v. Cocke, 172, 556
 Crawford's case, 247
 Crawshaw v. Thompson, 83
 Crease v. Barrett, 207

Creed v. Fisher, 207
 Crepps v. Durden, 722
 Crespigny v. Wittenoom, 6
 Cripps v. Hartnoll, 387
 — v. Hills, 580
 Critchley, Ex parte, 362
 Croft v. Alison, 688, 689
 — v. London and North Western R.
 C., 112
 — v. Lumley, 756, 760
 — v. Stevens, 740
 Crofton v. Poole, 570
 Crofts v. Beale, 487
 Crogate's case, 191
 Cronshaw v. Chapman, 830
 Croockewit v. Fletcher, 112, 490
 Croomes v. Morrison, 194, 195
 Crosby v. Leng, 101
 — v. Wadsworth, 393, 767
 Cross v. Andrews, 676
 — v. Cheshire, 547
 — v. Williams, 527, 550, 567
 Crosse v. Seaman, 61
 Crossfield v. Morrison, 161
 — v. Such, 122, 557, 604
 Crosthwaite v. Gardner, 134, 605
 Crouch v. Great Northern R. C., 844
 — v. The London and North Western R. C., 814, 822, 823
 Crow v. Rogers, 129, 319
 Crowder v. Tinkler, 708
 Crowe v. Clay, 492
 Crowhurst v. Laverack, 332, 395
 Crowley v. Vitty, 239
 Crowther v. Fairer, 316
 Crozer v. Pilling, 728
 Crump v. Day, 238
 Cullen v. Thomson's Trustees, 144, 830
 Cumber v. Wane, 178, 429
 Cumberlege v. Lawson, 189, 270
 Cumming v. Ince, 495, 601
 — v. Shand, 86
 Cummins v. Cummins, 603
 Cundell v. Dawson, 356
 Cunliffe v. Harrison, 402, 413, 418
 — v. Maltass, 155
 — v. Whitehead, 443
 Curlewis v. Clark, 430
 — v. Mornington (Earl of), 187
 Currie v. Anderson, 414, 415
 Curson v. Belworthy, 335
 Curtis v. Curtis, 749
 — v. Pugh, 410, 411
 Cusack v. Robinson, 409, 416
 Cuthbert v. Cumming, 19, 201, 508
 Cuthbertson v. Parsons, 217, 683, 688
 — v. Irving, 427
 Catter v. Powell, 629
 Cutts v. Surridge, 168

D.

Da Costa v. Jones, 361
 Daines v. Hartley, 748
 Dakin v. Brown, 705
 — v. Oxley, 626, 627
 Dalby v. Dorthall, 836
 — v. Hirst, 15, 19
 Dale v. Humphrey, 517, 542, 543
 Dalton v. Denton, 652
 — v. Midland R. C., 132, 238, 583
 — v. South Eastern R. C., 706
 Dalyell v. Tyrer, 683
 Dammaree's case, 893
 Danby v. Lamb, 71, 121
 Dane v. Kirkwall, 598
 Daniels v. Charsley, 217, 304
 — v. Fielding, 729
 Dansey v. Richardson, 685, 772, 803, 811
 Danube, &c. R. C. v. Xenos, 112, 624
 Darby v. Ouseley, 737, 739
 Darley v. Reg., 234, 235, 236
 Darnell v. Williams, 489
 Darnell's case, 244
 Dartnall v. Howard, 801
 Davenport v. Nelson, 587
 Davidson v. Cooper, 270, 490
 Davie v. Hopwood, 165
 Davies v. Churchman, 136
 — v. Davies, 133
 — v. Edwards, 186
 — v. Fletcher, 718
 — v. Jenkins, 78, 153
 — v. Mann, 224, 679
 — v. Marshall, 831
 — v. Penton, 618
 — v. Swansea (Mayor), 114
 — v. Underwood, 627
 — v. Westmacott, 158
 — v. Wilkinson, 475
 — v. Williams, 223, 779, 837
 Davison v. Duncan, 745
 — v. Wilson, 222, 233
 Davis v. Bomford, 428
 — v. Burrell, 114, 220
 — v. Clarke, 456
 — v. Danks, 140, 422, 763, 837
 — v. Jones, 126, 270, 500
 — v. Mason, 663
 — v. Nisbett, 190
 — v. Russell, 715
 — v. Smyth, 639
 — v. Walton, 66
 — v. Williams, 78
 Davy v. Pepys, 136
 Davys, App., Douglas, Resp., 974
 Dawes v. Peck, 139, 403
 — v. Solomonson, 149
 Dawkes v. Deloraine (Lord), 410

- Dawson v. Collis, 178, 348, 626
 — v. Lawley, 531
 Day v. Bather, 808
 — v. Savage, 22
 Deacon v. Gridley, 316
 Dean v. Peel, 837
 Deane v. Clayton, 647, 852
 Dearie v. Ker, 213
 Dearle v. Barrett, 179
 Death, Ex parte, 233
 De Beauvoir v. Owen, 183
 De Begnis v. Armistead, 351
 Deeks v. Strutt, 69
 Degg v. Midland Counties R. C., 646, 699
 De Grave v. Mayor, &c. of Monmouth, 561
 De Haber v. Queen of Portugal, 233
 De la Rue v. Fortescue, 128
 Delaney v. Fox, 427
 De la Vega v. Vianna, 45
 Delegal v. Highley, 733, 744, 745
 Deller v. Prickett, 238
 De Mautort v. Saunders, 549
 De Medina v. Grove, 264, 728, 734
 Dendy v. Henderson, 363, 366
 — v. Nicholl, 756
 Dengate v. Gardiner, 131, 141, 586
 Denison, Ex parte, 232
 Dent v. Basham, 58
 Denton v. East Anglian R. C., 561
 — v. Great Northern R. C., 671, 823, 826, 840
 — v. Rodie, 640
 Deposit and Gen. Life Ins. Co. v. Ayscough, 334
 De Pothonier v. De Mattos, 131
 Depperman v. Hubbardst, 538
 Derocourt v. Corbishley, 713, 717, 918
 Derisley v. Custance, 296
 De Roo v. Foster, 583
 De Rothschild v. The Royal Mail Steam Packet Co., 961 Deslandes v. Gregory, 541
 De Tastet v. Shaw, 225
 Devaux v. Steinkeller, 389
 De Wahl v. Braune, 132, 584, 602
 Dews v. Riley, 718
 Dicus v. Lord Brougham, 105
 Dick v. Tollhansen, 188, 212, 263, 586
 Dickenson v. Watson, 927
 Dick v. Jackson, 110
 Dickinson v. Grand Junction Canal Co., 89, 90, 786, 787
 — v. Marrow, 134
 — v. North Eastern R. C., 704
 Dickson v. Lord Combermere, 896
 Digby v. Thompson, 88, 734
 Diggle v. London and Blackwall R. C., 558, 559, 561
 Dimeck v. Corbett, 628
 Dimes's case, 247
 Dimes v. Grand Junction Canal Co., 207, 282
 — v. Petley, 222, 224
 Dimmack v. Bowlby, 780
 Dingle v. Hare, 626
 Ditcham v. Bond, 837
 Dixon v. Bell, 647, 678, 837
 — v. Bovill, 436
 — v. Clark, 178
 — v. Fawcus, 849
 — v. Hatfield, 385
 — v. Hurrell, 591, 596
 — v. Nuttall, 477
 — v. Smith, 750
 — v. Yates, 399, 400, 402
 Dobbin v. Foster, 555
 Dohell v. Hutchinson, 381
 Dobie v. Larkan, 487
 Dohree v. Eastwood, 466
 Dobson v. Blackmore, 100, 760
 — v. Collis, 395
 — v. Kaspie, 428
 Dodd v. Burchell, 772
 Dodgson v. Bell, 585
 — v. Scott, 264
 Doe d. Ashburnham v. Michael, 210
 — d. Baddeley v. Massey, 183
 — d. Brayne v. Bather, 755, 763
 — d. Cardigan (Earl) v. Bywater, 54
 — d. Church v. Pontifex, 460
 — d. Croft v. Tidbury, 428
 — d. Daniel v. Woodroffe, 225
 — d. Darlington (Lord) v. Cock, 759
 — d. Davies v. Thomas, 146, 757
 — d. Davy v. Oxenham, 183
 — d. Duntze v. Duntze, 160
 — d. Garnons v. Knight, 269
 — d. Hellyer v. King, 762
 — d. Hudson v. Leeds and Bradford R. C., 712
 — d. Lansdell v. Gower, 183
 — d. Muston v. Gladwin, 300
 — d. Palmer v. Eyre, 183
 — d. Parsley v. Day, 766
 — d. Pennington v. Tanière, 664
 — d. Preedy v. Holtom, 502
 — d. Roberts v. Roberts, 289
 — d. Rochester (Bishop) v. Bridges, 661
 — d. Rogers v. Rogers, 133
 — d. Shallcross v. Palmer, 490
 — d. Strode v. Seaton, 755
 — d. Tatum v. Catmore, 490
 — d. Welsh v. Langfield, 207
 — d. Williams v. Evans, 363
 — d. Worcester (Trustees) v. Rowlands, 627
 — v. Filliter, 813

Doe v. Huddart, 755
 — v. Wellsman, 755
 — v. Wright, 762
 Dolling v. White, 585
 Doman v. Dibden, 640
 Done v. Walley, 311
 Donellan v. Read, 396
 Donnell v. Columbian Insurance Co., 517
 Doogood v. Rose, 161
 Doorman v. Jenkins, 801, 834
 Dormay v. Borradaile, 871
 Dorsett v. Aspdin, 191
 Douglas, Re, 247, 898
 — v. Corbett, 733
 — v. Earl Dysart, 16
 — v. Reg. 893
 — v. Watson, 375, 575
 Doulsen v. Matthews, 45
 Dowell v. General Steam Navigation
 Co., 679
 — v. Shepherd, 660, 680
 Downes v. Back, 624
 — v. Garbett, 148
 Downman v. Williams, 541
 Downton, Ex parte Overseers of, 223
 Doyle v. O'Doherty, 744
 Drake v. Beckham, 131, 549, 572
 — v. Mitchell, 277
 Drayson v. Andrews, 208
 Drayton v. Dale, 569
 Dresser v. Gabriel, 177
 — v. Johns, 206
 — v. Norwood, 536
 Driver v. Burton, 311, 321, 443, 553
 Drouet v. Taylor, 568
 Drury v. Macaulay, 475
 Dublin and Wicklow R. C. v. Black, 578
 Du Bost v. Beresford, 734
 Duckworth v. Ewart, 633
 — v. Johnson, 647, 706
 Dudden v. Clutton Union, 784, 785
 Dudley Banking Co. v. Spittle, 102
 Dugdale v. Reg., 868
 Duke v. Andrews, 303
 — v. Ashby, 427
 Dumergue v. Rumsey, 126
 Duncan v. Findlater, 688
 — v. Richmond, 227
 — v. Scott, 494
 — v. Thwaites, 744
 — v. Tindall, 407, 416
 — v. Topham, 302, 304, 518
 Duncuft v. Albrecht, 407
 Dunford v. Trattles, 683
 Dunlop v. Higgins, 302, 304, 623
 — v. Lambert, 403, 404
 Dunn, Re, 246
 — v. Loftus, 191

Dunn v. Sayles, 306
 Dunston v. Paterson, 70, 72, 428
 — v. The Imperial Gaslight and Coke Co., 559
 Durrell v. Evans, 419
 Dutton v. Powles, 663
 Duvergier v. Fellowes, 284
 Dyke v. Sweeting, 296
 Dynen v. Leach, 699, 700
 Dyson v. Collick, 766

E.

Eaden v. Titchmarch, 135
 Eadon v. Roberts, 164
 Eager v. Grimwood, 78, 836
 Eames v. Smith, 201
 Earle v. Hopwood, 363
 — v. Maugham, 312
 — v. Oliver, 329
 Eason v. Henderson, 123
 East Anglian R. C. v. Eastern Counties
 R. C., 566
 — v. Lythgoe, 207,
 217
 Eastern Counties R. C. v. Broom, 144, 684, 692
 — v. Dorling, 191
 — v. Marriage, 4
 — v. Philipson, 273
 Eastern Union R. C. v. Cochrane, 437
 East India Co. v. Paul, 187
 East London Waterworks Co. v. Bailey, 562
 Eastmead v. Witt, 739
 Easton v. Carter, 603
 Eastwood v. Bain, 92, 337, 660, 672, 860
 — v. Kenyon, 331
 Eaton v. Bell, 538
 — v. Swansea Waterworks, 779, 781
 Eccleston v. Clipsham, 130, 136
 Eddowes v. Hopkins, 639
 Eden v. Blake, 376, 421
 Edge v. Strafford, 391
 Edger v. Knapp, 203, 547
 Edis v. Bury, 475
 Edmonds v. Challis, 841
 Edmondson v. Stevenson, 738
 Edmunds v. Groves, 488
 Edsall v. Russell, 749
 Edwards v. Baugh, 319
 — v. Bowen, 237
 — v. Grace, 133, 134, 605
 — v. Great Western R. C., 639
 — v. Havill, 531
 — v. Hodges, 199
 — v. Lowndes, 123
 — v. Reg. 206

- Edwards v. Towells, 591
 — v. Wakefield, 195
 — v. Williams, 618
Egerton v. Brownlow (Earl), 6, 9, 360, 361
 — v. Mathews, 419, 420
Eggington, Re, 247
Eggington v. Lichfield (Mayor of), 692, 720
Eld v. Vero, 154
Eliot v. Allen, 724
Ellen v. Topp, 273
Elliot v. Davis, 552
 — v. Von Glehn, 168
Elliot v. Clayton, 570
 — v. Kemp, 608
 — v. South Devon R. C., 207
 — v. Thomas, 414
Ellis v. Hopper, 264
 — v. London and South Western R. C., 679
 — v. Reg. 259
 — v. The Sheffield Gas Consumers' Co., 648, 649, 678, 690
 — v. Watt, 233
Ellison v. Collingridge, 475
 — v. Ellison, 292
Elliston v. Robinson, 150
Ellwell v. Proprietors of the Birmingham Canal Navigation, 644
Elmore v. Kingscote, 419
Elsam v. Denny, 457, 464
Elsce v. Gatward, 802
Eltham v. Kingsman, 361
Elves v. Crofts, 367
Elwood v. Bullock, 15
Ely v. Moule, 216
 — (Dean and Chapter) v. Cash, 183
Emblen v. Myers, 843
Emblin v. Dartnell, 210, 478
Embrey v. Owen, 90, 92, 783, 784
Emery v. Barnett, 68
 — v. Webster, 199
Emmens v. Elderton, 112, 165, 327, 510, 628, 629
Emmerson v. Heelis, 421
Emmerton v. Mathews, 349, 707, 806
Emmet v. Dewhurst, 389
Emmett v. Norton, 590, 592, 593, 594
 — v. Tottenham, 486, 493
Empson v. Fairfield, 747
England (Bank) v. Anderson, 552
Enthoven v. Hoyle, 474
Entick v. Carrington, 718, 764
Ernest v. Nicholls, 548, 559, 560
Radajile v. Sowerby, 478
 — v. Trustwell, 166
Esposito v. Bowden, 111
Etherington v. Parrot, 588
Evans v. Brown, 570
Evans v. Drummond, 556
 — v. Edmonds, 284, 289, 340
 — v. Evans, 181
 — v. Harlow, 750
 — v. Harries, 750
 — v. Marlett, 495
 — v. Morgan, 136
 — v. Roberts, 390, 393
 — v. Robinson, 208
 — v. Simon, 186
 — v. Wright, 793
Everard v. Watson, 466
Everett v. Robertson, 180
Every v. Smith, 139
Ewart v. Cochrane, 772
 — v. Graham, 767
 — v. Jones, 719
Rwbank v. Nutting, 848
Ex parte Andrews, 247
 — Anon. (4 Ad. & E.), 242, 927
 — Barronet, 855, 856
 — Bayley, 226
 — Besset, 245
 — Bird, 227
 — Bodenham, 226
 — Bradbury, 246
 — Buckley, 551
 — Butler, 587
 — Chapman, 241, 933
 — Child, 246
 — Clifton, 227
 — Critchley, 362
 — Death, 233
 — Denison, 232
 — Downton, Overseers of, 228
 — Fentiman, 242
 — Fernandez, 32
 — Fisher, 226
 — Franks, 544
 — Hauper, 549
 — Langdale, 545
 — Mariborough (Duke), 241, 243, 933
 — Mawby, 229
 — Medwin, 232
 — M'Fee, 233, 239
 — Nash, 228
 — Newton, 988
 — Phillips, 236, 237
 — Pranker, 226
 — Ramshay, 236, 898
 — Rayner, 233
 — Sandilands, 245
 — Smyth, 232
 — Story, 147, 232, 233
 — Swan, 528, 823
 — Tindal, 137
 — Tucker, 232, 233
 — Van Sandau, 719
 — Willand, 58

Eyre v. Waller, 460
 Eyston v. Studd, 520
 Hyton v. Littledale, 181

F.

Fagg v. Nudd, 187
 Fairburn v. Eastwood, 305
 Fairclough v. Pavia, 464
 Fairlie v. Denton, 134
 Fairman v. Ives, 744
 Fallowes v. Taylor, 292, 295
 Falmouth (Lord) v. George, 11, 15
 — v. Thomas, 391
 Fannin v. Anderson, 185
 Fanshawe v. Peet, 451
 Farebrother v. Simmons, 422
 — v. Welchman, 189
 Farina v. Home, 412
 Farley v. Briant, 135, 296
 — v. Dawks, 729, 734
 Farnworth v. Hyde, 196
 Farquhar v. Morris, 639
 Farr v. Ward, 639
 Farrall v. Hilditch, 271
 Farrar v. Definne, 556
 Farrant v. Barnes, 667, 822
 — v. Thompson, 828
 Farthing v. Castles, 193
 Faulkner v. Lowe, 546
 Faviell v. Eastern Counties R. C., 531, 558
 — v. Gaskoin, 509
 Fawcett v. Fowles, 722
 — v. York and N. Midland R. C., 656
 Fay v. Prentice, 92, 776
 Fayle v. Bird, 454
 Fazakerly v. M'Knight, 174, 490
 Fearn v. Cochrane, 166
 Fearon v. Norvall, 239
 Featherston v. Hutchinson, 355
 Fell v. Goslin, 135
 — v. Knight, 772
 Felthouse v. Bindley, 140, 302, 791
 Penn v. Bittleston, 140, 828, 941
 — v. Harrison, 483, 537
 Fentiman, Ex parte, 242
 Fenton v. City of Dublin Steam Packet
 Co. (The), 633
 — v. Livingston, 21
 — v. Pearson, 602
 Fentum v. Pocock, 207
 Feret v. Hill, 284, 370
 Ferguson v. Cristall, 827
 — v. Kinnoul (Earl), 104, 660
 — v. Mahon, 152
 Fergusson v. Fyffe, 640
 — v. Norman, 356, 359, 766

Fermor's case, 264
 Fernandez, Ex parte, 32
 Ferrand v. Bischoffsheim, 536, 831
 — v. Milligan, 207
 Ferrier v. Howden, 147
 Feversham (Lord) v. Emerson, 263
 Fewings v. Tisdal, 629
 Fewins v. Lethbridge, 203, 215
 Field v. Adames, 222
 — v. Allen, 132
 — v. Lelean, 510
 — v. Mackenzie, 54
 Fielder v. Marshall, 437, 475
 Figgis v. Langford, 238
 Filmer v. Delber, 531
 Finch v. Blount, 840
 — v. Miller, 179
 Findon v. Parker, 363
 Finlay v. Bristol and Exeter R. C., 564
 Finucane v. Small, 813
 Fish v. Hutchinson, 383
 — v. Kempton, 536
 Fisher, Ex parte, 226
 — v. Bridges, 287, 289, 295, 331, 359, 470
 — v. Bristow, 728
 — v. Clement, 747
 — v. Leslie, 475
 — v. Mowbray, 575
 — v. Prowse, 649, 650
 Fishmongers Co. (The) v. Dimsdale, 376
 — v. Robertson, 562
 Fitch v. Jones, 489
 Fitzgerald v. Boehm, 607
 — v. Drassler, 303, 385
 — v. Fitzgerald, 585
 Fitzjohn v. Mackinder, 77, 93, 730,
 734, 850
 Fitzmaurice v. Bayley, 380
 Fivaz v. Nicholls, 357, 362
 Fleming v. Dunlop, 147
 Flemyng v. Hector, 550
 Fletcher v. Great Western R. C., 84
 — v. Peck, 249, 250
 — v. Tayleur, 622
 Flight v. Gray, 189
 — v. Reed, 330, 331
 — v. Thomas, 710, 779, 781
 Flindt v. Waters, 602
 Flint v. Pike, 744
 Flockton v. Hall, 177
 Florence v. Drayson, 639
 — v. Jennings, 278, 639
 Flory v. Denny, 432, 806
 Flower v. Adam, 705, 849
 — v. Allan, 154
 Floyd v. Barker, 103, 293

Flureau v. Thornhill, 630, 631
 Foley v. Addenbrooke, 129, 130
 Follett v. Moore, 440, 474
 Foquet v. Moor, 391
 Forbes v. Cochrane, 9, 21
 — v. Marshall, 475
 — v. Smith, 158, 185
 Ford v. Beech, 112
 — v. Tiley, 111
 Fordham v. Akers, 63
 Fores v. Jobnes, 370
 Forman v. Wright, 487, 439
 Forshaw v. Lewis, 193
 Forster v. Lawson, 141
 — v. Rowland, 418
 — v. Taylor, 135, 357
 Forsyth v. Bristowe, 168, 183
 Forth v. Simpson, 810
 — v. Stanton, 134, 383, 385
 Foster v. Allanson, 547
 — v. Bates, 604, 774, 797
 — v. Crabb, 122
 — v. Charles, 339
 — v. Dawber, 186, 428, 486
 — v. Green, 217, 462
 — v. Jolly, 471
 — v. Mentor Life Assurance Co., 290, 506, 543, 831
 — v. Oxford, &c. R. C., 356
 — v. Pritchard, 238
 — v. Pryme, 164
 — v. Smith, 804
 — v. Weston, 640
 Fountain v. Boodle, 733
 Fowkes v. Manchester and London Life
 Ass. Co., 345
 Fowler v. Down, 143
 — v. Padget, 868
 — v. Rickerby, 264
 Fowles v. Great Western R. C., 822
 Fox v. Clifton, 208
 — v. Frith, 546
 — v. Gaunt, 714
 — v. Harding, 637
 — v. Nott, 497
 Foxhall v. Barnett, 724, 848
 Fragano v. Long, 403
 Francis v. Hawkeley, 186
 — v. Wilson, 640
 Franklin v. Neate, 110, 806
 — v. South Eastern R. C., 706
 Franks, Ex parte, 584
 Fraser v. Fothergill, 239
 — v. Hill, 732, 806
 Fray v. Blackburn, 103
 — v. Vowles, 87, 834, 841
 Frayes v. Worms, 265
 Fraser v. Jordan, 427
 Fres v. Burgoyne, 232
 Freegard v. Barnes, 711

Freeman v. Birch, 403
 — v. Cooke, 528, 555, 831, 833
 — v. Rosher, 689, 696
 Freemantle v. London and South Western R. C., 647, 681
 Freestone v. Butcher, 590
 Fremlin v. Hamilton, 319
 French v. French, 380
 — v. Styrling, 545, 546
 Frend v. Dennett, 565
 Frewen v. Philipps, 778
 Friar v. Gray, 273
 Friend v. Harrison, 295
 Frith v. Wollaston, 120
 Fromant v. Ashley, 151
 Fromont v. Coupland, 547
 Frost v. Beavan, 598
 — v. Chester (the Mayor of), 228, 234
 — v. Oliver, 523, 531
 Fry v. Hill, 479
 Fryer v. Gathercole, 745
 — v. Kinnersley, 740
 Full v. Hutchins, 234
 Fuller, In re, 158
 — v. Mackay, 66, 69
 Furnivall v. Grove, 220
 Fussell v. Gordon, 169, 181
 Fyson v. Chambers, 143, 569, 604

G.

Gabriel v. Dresser, 182, 235
 Gadsden v. Barrow, 238
 — v. McLean, 555
 Gahan v. Lafitte, 100
 Gainsford v. Carroll, 622
 Gale v. Luttrell, 181
 — v. Williamson, 293
 Gales v. Holland (Lord), 175
 Galizard v. Rigault, 232
 Gallant v. Bouteflower, 133
 Gallard, App., Laxton, Resp., 718, 918 Galloway v. Bird, 126
 Gallwey v. Marshall, 750
 Galsworthy v. Strutt, 619
 Gambart v. Sumner, 644
 Gandy v. Jubber, 691
 Gardiner v. Houghton, 46
 Gardner v. Grout, 398, 409
 — v. Slade, 738
 — v. Walsh, 490
 Garnett v. Ferrand, 104, 708
 Garrard v. Guibillei, 199
 — v. Tuck, 212
 Garrett v. Handley, 558
 Garrett's case, 957
 Garton v. Bristol and Exeter R. C., 814, 819

- Garton v. Great Western R. C., 115
 Garwood v. Ede, 567
 Gas Light and Coke Co. v. Turner, 284, 288, 353, 360
 Gaskill v. Skene, 178, 429
 Gaters v. Madeley, 132, 585
 Gathercole v. Miall, 743
 Gauntlett v. King, 144
 Gay v. Lander, 475
 Gayford v. Nicholls, 648, 692
 Gaylard v. Morris, 677
 Geary v. Physic, 439
 Gee v. Lancashire and Yorkshire R. C., 207, 633
 Geere v. Mare, 289, 359
 Gelen v. Hall, 105, 724
 Gell v. Burgess, 616
 General Steam Nav. Co. v. Mann, 654
 — v. Morrison,
 654
 — v. Guillon, 46
 George v. Chambers, 123
 — v. Clagett, 536
 Geralopulo v. Wieler, 436
 Gerhard v. Bates, 316, 322, 323, 342, 345, 497, 665, 669
 Gether v. Capper, 4, 515
 Gibb v. Mather, 453, 454
 Gibbon v. Budd, 326
 — v. Gibbon, 45, 66
 — v. Pepper, 674, 681
 Gibbons v. Alison, 729
 — v. Vouillon, 112
 Gibbs v. Flight, 15
 — v. Piemont, 450, 468, 470, 639
 — v. Grey, 532
 — v. Liverpool Docks (Trustees of), 650
 — v. Merrill, 575
 — v. Ralph, 202
 Gibson v. Caruthers, 305, 573
 — v. Crick, 19, 508
 — v. East India Co., 561
 — v. Lupton, 135
 — v. Muskett, 208
 — v. Small, 508, 509, 654
 — v. Varley, 151
 — v. Winter, 514
 Gidley v. Palmerston (Lord), 102, 533
 Gilbert v. Dale, 826
 Gilbert v. Schwenk, 837
 — v. Sykes, 362
 Gilbertson v. Richardson, 95, 647, 678
 Gilding v. Eyre, 730
 Giles v. Spencer, 375
 — v. Taff Vale R. C., 125, 529, 564, 686, 795, 823
 Gilkes v. Leonino, 302
 Gillard v. Brittan, 843
 Gillett v. Hill, 402
 — v. Offer, 535
 Gill's case, 960
 Gilpin v. Fowler, 739, 743
 Girardy v. Richardson, 370
 Giraud v. Richmond, 396
 Gittins v. Symes, 128
 Gladwell v. Steggall, 665
 Glasgow (Earl) v. Hurlet and Campsie
 Alum Co., 202
 Glenister v. Thynne (Lady), 587
 Glover v. Dixon, 172, 190, 191
 — v. London and N.-Western R. C., 125, 794
 Glynn v. Thomas, 93, 601
 Glynne v. Roberts, 71
 Goddard's case, 269
 Goddard v. Hodges, 546
 Godefroy v. Dalton, 834
 — v. Jay, 87, 834
 Godts v. Rose, 400, 403, 511
 Godwin v. Culley, 186
 Goff v. Great Northern R. C., 144, 529, 554
 Goldshede v. Swan, 333, 506
 Goldthorpe v. Hardman, 678
 Gomm v. Parrott, 194
 Gompertz v. Bartlett, 483, 807
 Good v. Cheesman, 430
 Goodall v. Lowndes, 898
 — v. Polhill, 486
 Goodchild v. Leadham, 148
 Goode v. Harrison, 575, 582
 — v. Job, 184, 186
 — v. Langley, 406
 Goodered v. Belcher, 153
 Goodman v. Boycott, 121
 — v. Chase, 385
 — v. Griffiths, 418
 — v. Harvey, 463
 — v. Kennell, 689
 — v. Pocock, 629
 Goodwin v. Cremer, 87, 429, 486
 Gordon v. Rolt, 125, 686
 — v. Harper, 791, 823
 — v. Whitehouse, 263
 Gore v. Gibson, 494, 599
 Gorgier v. Morris, 316
 Gorham v. Exeter (Bishop), 9, 232
 Gorsuch v. Cree, 190
 Gorton v. Gregory, 275
 Gosbell v. Archer, 421, 631
 Gorrings v. Terrewest, 154
 Gorriessen v. Perrin, 507
 Gosden v. Elphick, 116, 716
 Goss v. Nugent (Lord), 374, 375, 424, 426
 Gott v. Gandy, 661, 691
 Gough v. Findon, 457
 Gould v. Gapper, 232, 233

- Gould v. Oliver, 209, 210
 Govier v. Hancock, 594
 Grafton v. Eastern Counties R. C., 110
 Graham v. Fretwell, 422
 — v. Furber, 603
 — v. Gibson, 302
 — v. Glover, 246
 — v. Hope, 555
 — v. Musson, 422
 — v. Peat, 763
 Granger v. George, 187
 Grant v. Brown, 113
 — v. Ellis, 183
 — v. Maddox, 506, 513
 — v. Moser, 712
 — v. Norway, 455
 — v. Royal Exchange Assurance Co., 181
 — v. Vaughan, 460
 Gratitude (The), 532
 Graves v. Key, 427
 — v. Legg, 324, 508
 Gray v. Jeffries, 837
 — v. Pullen, 648, 690
 — v. Reg., 981
 Greathead v. Bromley, 263
 — v. Morley, 767
 Great Northern R. C. v. Behrens, 815, 816
 — v. Harrison, 659, 680, 826
 — v. Hawcroft, 826
 — v. Morville, 820, 821
 — v. Mossop, 208
 — v. Shepherd, 824
 Greatrex v. Hayward, 785
 Great Western R. C. v. Crouch, 794, 825
 — v. Goodman, 824, 825
 — v. Rimmel, 813, 817
 Great Western R. C. of Canada v. Braid, 646
 Green v. Bartram, 713
 — v. Bicknell, 150
 — v. Button, 93
 — v. Chapman, 743
 — v. Creswell, 386
 — v. Elgie, 720
 — v. Greenbank, 583
 — v. Kopke, 541
 — v. London General Omnibus Co., 686
 — v. Saddington, 392
 — v. Wood, 5
 Greenhow v. Parker, 165
 Greenland v. Chaplin, 680
 Greenough v. McClelland, 376
 Gregg v. Wells, 830
 Gregory v. Brunswick (Duke), 896
 — v. Cotterell, 725
 — v. Hill, 678
 — v. Piper, 685, 689
 — v. Reg., 929, 988
 — v. Slowman, 844
 — v. West Midland R. C., 819
 Grew v. Hill, 173
 Grey v. Gibbs, 532
 Griffin v. Coleman, 717
 — v. Gray, 153
 Griffinhoofe v. Daubuz, 319
 Griffith v. Harries, 886
 — v. Middleton, 603
 — v. Selby, 58
 — v. Young, 382
 Griffiths v. Dunnett, 677
 — v. Gidlow, 680, 699, 700
 — v. Lewis, 114, 746, 747, 749
 — v. Owen, 112, 178, 493, 795
 — v. Rigby, 505
 — v. Teetgen, 837
 Grimby v. Aykroyd, 63
 Grimsley v. Parker, 429
 Grindell v. Godmond, 588
 Grubham v. Willey, 716
 Grinnell v. Wells, 78, 836
 Grissell v. Robinson, 605
 Grizewood v. Blane, 163
 Groenvelt's (Dr.) case, 707
 Grote v. Chester and Holyhead R. C., 678
 Groucott v. Williams, 649, 661
 Groves v. Buck, 408
 Groves v. London and Brighton R. C., 706
 Gudgeon v. Besset, 270
 Guest v. Warren, 263, 730
 Guidon v. Robson, 549
 Guilford v. Sims, 227
 Guille v. Swan, 95
 Gull v. Lindsay, 387
 Gumm v. Tyvie, 507
 Gunter v. Astor, 839
 Guppy v. Brittlebank, 714
 Gurney v. Behrend, 496
 — v. Evans, 451, 549
 — v. Womersley, 208, 483
 Guy v. Livezey, 141
 Gwynnell v. Herbert, 474, 476
 Gwynn v. Godby, 640
 H.
 Hacking v. Lee, Inf. re., 217
 Hackwood v. Lyall, 532

- Haddon v. Lott, 672, 849
 Haddon v. Ayres, 180
 Haddrick v. Heslop, 193, 732
 Hadfield's case, 871
 Hadley v. Bazendale, 207, 633, 634, 635, 637, 638
 Haigh v. Brooks, 316, 318
 — v. Jones, 362
 Hailes v. Marks, 714, 732
 Haines v. Roberts, 84, 775
 Haire v. Wilson, 736
 Hakewill, In re, 246, 247
 Haldane v. Johnson, 299
 Hale v. Rawson, 622
 Hales v. London and North Western
 R. C., 635, 814
 — v. Petit, 867
 Halhead v. Young, 376
 Halket v. Merchant Traders, &c. Insurance Co., 567
 Hall v. Ashhurst, 543
 — v. Bainbridge, 270, 553
 — v. Booth, 715
 — v. Conder, 318, 348, 624, 627, 806
 — v. Dyson, 317
 — v. Fearnley, 681
 — v. Featherstone, 488
 — v. Fuller, 462
 — v. Harding, 224
 — v. Hollander, 837, 838
 — v. Janson, 508, 511
 — v. Lund, 772
 — v. Pickard, 827
 — v. Potter, 362
 — v. Poyser, 207
 — v. Scotson, 150, 193
 — v. Swansea (Mayor, &c.), 561
 — v. Warren, 598
 — v. Wright, 605, 613, 624
 Hallack v. Cambridge University, 232
 Hallen v. Runder, 395
 Hallett v. Dowdall, 566
 — v. Wigram, 617
 Hallifax v. Lyle, 455
 Halstead v. Skelton, 453, 454
 Hamber v. Hall, 134
 Hambly v. Trott, 137, 145
 Hambro' v. Hull and London Fire Insurance Co., 566
 Hamilton v. Anderson, 105
 — v. Grainger, 370
 — v. Reg., 957
 — v. Spottiswoode, 440, 475
 — v. Terry, 303, 383
 Hamlin v. Great Northern R. C., 840
 Hammack v. White, 705
 Hammersley v. Biel (Baron de), 381, 390
 Hammond v. Howell, 104
 Hammond's case, 247
 Hammon's case, 934
 Hamper, Ex parte, 549
 Hancke v. Hooper, 711
 Hancock v. Caffyn, 143, 572
 — v. Hodgson, 544
 — v. Noyes, 167
 — v. York, Newcastle, and Berwick R. C., 650
 Handcock v. Baker, 713, 715
 Hankinson v. Bilby, 748
 Hannam v. Mockett, 936
 Hansard v. Robinson, 492
 Hanslip v. Padwick, 630, 637
 Hanson v. Armitage, 414
 — v. Meyer, 402
 Harbidge v. Warwick, 777
 Harcastle v. South Yorkshire Railway and River Dean Co., 649
 Harden v. Clifton, 490
 Hardie v. Grant, 593, 594
 Hardman v. Booth, 252
 Hardwick v. Moss, 115
 Hare v. Henty, 11, 461
 Hargreaves v. Parsons, 387, 426
 Harman v. Johnson, 201, 552
 — v. Reeve, 408
 Harmer v. Cornelius, 349
 — v. Steele, 457, 464, 485
 Harnor v. Groves, 377, 402, 407, 509
 Harold v. Smith, 613
 Harper v. Charlesworth, 478, 766
 — v. Williams, 639
 Harries v. Thomas, 203
 Harrington (Karl), Re, 239
 — v. Ramsay, 68, 233
 Harris, In re, 236
 — v. Butler, 78, 837
 — v. Carter, 428
 — v. Dignum, 720
 — v. Dreesman, 217
 — v. Goodwyn, 298
 — v. Holler, 149
 — v. Kemble, 351
 — v. Montgomery, 169
 — v. Morris, 593
 — v. Osbourn, 531
 — v. Phillips, 169
 — v. Rickett, 374
 — v. Runnels, 354
 — v. Thompson, 740, 743
 — v. Wall, 581
 Harrison v. Bush, 740
 — v. Cage, 390
 — v. Cotgreave, 166, 582
 — v. Fane, 208, 580
 — v. Great Northern R. C., 208
 — v. Harrison, 624
 — v. Hyde, 502

- Harrison v. Jackson, 432, 543, 552
 — v. London, Brighton, &c., R.
 C., 818, 819
 — v. Parker, 827
 — v. Roscoe, 465
 Harrap, app., Bailey, resp., 831
 — v. Fisher, 459
 Hart v. Alexander, 555
 — v. Baxendale, 816
 — v. Bush, 414
 — v. Crowley, 688
 — v. Miles, 816
 — v. Mills, 413
 — v. Prater, 579
 — v. Sattley, 414
 — v. Stephens, 132, 585
 Hartland v. Jukes, 185
 Hartley v. Cummings, 129, 305, 366
 — v. Moxham, 125
 — v. Ponsonby, 317
 — v. Rice, 362
 — v. Shemwell, 206
 — v. Wharton, 531
 Hartwell v. Ryde Commissioners, 99
 Harvey v. Brydges, 220, 221
 — v. Graham, 425
 — v. Johnston, 304, 305, 324
 — v. Kay, 546
 — v. Pocock, 842
 — v. Towers, 438
 Haseler v. Le Moyne, 696
 Hasleham v. Young, 552
 Haalock v. Fergusson, 389
 Hastie v. Couturier, 387
 Hastings v. Whitley, 367
 Hatch v. Lewis, 70
 Hateall v. Griffiths, 130
 Havilland v. Bowerbank, 639
 Hawe v. Planner, 678
 Hawkins v. Alder, 208
 — v. Harwood, 225, 834
 Hawkshaw v. Parkins, 553
 Hawtayne v. Bourne, 531, 551
 Hawthorn v. Hammond, 772
 Haycroft v. Creasy, 845
 Hayes v. Warren, 169, 325
 Hayling v. Okey, 191, 677, 765
 Haylock v. Sparke, 114, 724
 Hayton v. Wolfe, 607
 Heald v. Carey, 125, 727, 794
 — v. Kenworthy, 535
 Healey v. Story, 551
 Heane v. Rogers, 832
 Heap v. Dobson, 545
 Heard v. Edey, 70
 Hearn v. London and South Western
 R. C., 817
 — v. Stowell, 735, 748
 Heath v. Chilton, 607
 — v. Sansom, 556
 Hedger v. Stevenson, 466
 Hedley v. Bainbridge, 552
 Hegarty v. Milne, 308
 Hellawell v. Eastwood, 394
 Helsham v. Blackwood, 735, 749, 907
 Hemans v. Picciotto, 273
 Heming v. Power, 749
 Hemming v. Hale, 841
 Hemmings v. Gasson, 737, 748
 Henderson v. Australian Mail Steam
 Nav. Co., 559, 560
 — v. Barnewell, 422
 — v. Broomhead, 77, 745
 — v. Henderson, 120
 Henley v. Lyme Regis (Mayor of), 98
 — v. Super, 120
 Hensloe's case, 603
 Heraud v. Leaf, 550, 554
 Herbert v. Sayer, 143, 569
 Hermann v. Seneschal, 115
 Hernaman v. Coryton, 304
 — v. Smith, 158
 Hernod v. Wilkin, 166
 Herring v. Hudson, 718
 Herchfield v. Clarke, 193
 Heseltine v. Siggers, 407, 515
 Heskeith v. Fleming, 157
 Heslop v. Baker, 693
 — v. Chapman, 733
 Hewitt v. Isham, 772
 — v. Macquire, 771
 Hewston v. Phillips, 66
 Hey v. Moorhouse, 765
 — v. Wyche, 614
 Heydon's case, 6
 Heyhoe v. Burge, 545
 Heylyn v. Adamson, 445, 476
 Heywood v. Collinge, 723
 — v. Watson, 480
 Hicks v. Gregory, 129, 324
 Higginbottom v. Burge, 129
 Higgs's case, 260, 277
 Higgins v. Hopkins, 527, 537
 — v. Livingston, 538
 — v. Pitt, 285, 289
 — v. Senior, 503, 543
 Hilberry v. Hatton, 794, 795
 Hilcoat v. Canterbury (Archbishop),
 654
 Hill v. Balls, 75, 336, 652, 861
 — v. Foley, 459
 — v. Fox, 287
 — v. Gray, 371
 — v. Kitching, 321
 — v. Mount, 110
 — v. Smith, 571, 621
 — v. The Proprietors of the Manchester Waterworks, 281
 Hilliard, Re, 226

- Hills v. Laming, 281
 — v. Mesnard, 62, 486
 — v. Mitson, 362
 Hilton v. Eckersley, 369
 — v. Granville (Earl), 15
 — v. Whitehead, 81
 Hinde v. Gray, 367
 — v. Whitehouse, 398, 420, 422
 Hindley v. Westmeath (Marquis), 302, 594
 Hinton v. Dibbin, 817
 — v. Heather, 732
 Hipkins v. Birmingham and Staffordshire Gaslight Co., 79, 646
 Hitchcock v. Coker, 365, 366, 367, 368
 — v. Humfrey, 453
 Hitchin v. Groom, 511
 Hitchins v. Hollingworth, 164
 Hitchman v. Walton, 849
 Hix v. Gardiner, 14
 Hoad v. Grace, 333, 384
 Hoadly v. M'Laine, 408, 419
 Hoare v. Cazenove, 456
 — v. Silverlock, 207, 735, 744
 Hobbit v. The London and North-Western R. Co., 705 Hobbs v. Branscomb, 715
 — v. Young, 149
 Hobhouse's case, 246
 Hobson v. Middleton, 165
 Hochster v. De la Tour, 111, 112, 302, 624
 Hodding v. Stutchfield, 150
 Hodges v. Ancrum, 199
 — v. Hodges, 593
 — v. Lichfield (Earl), 630
 Hodgkinson v. Ennor, 79, 784, 786
 — v. Fernie, 102, 265
 — v. Fletcher, 592
 Hodgson v. Johnson, 392
 — v. Scarlett, 744
 — v. Wood, 615
 Hodsman v. Grissel, 582
 Hodsoll v. Baxter, 150
 — v. Stallebrass, 838
 Hoey v. Felton, 94, 680, 849
 Hogan v. Page, 639
 Hogg v. Ward, 717
 Holbert v. Starkey, 205
 Holcroft v. Hoggins, 532, 556
 Holden v. Ballantyne, 199
 The Liverpool Gas Co., 679, 705
 Holder v. Cope, 591
 — v. Soulby, 808, 811
 Holding v. Elliott, 374, 543
 Hole v. Sittingbourne and Sheerness R. Co., 648, 690
 Holford v. Bailey, 767
 Holford v. Hankinson, 780
 Holland v. Russell, 303, 345, 535
 Holliday v. St. Leonard's, Shoreditch, 98, 650, 688
 Hollis v. Marshall, 100
 — v. Palmer, 185
 Holloway v. Abell, 837
 — v. Reg., 867, 899, 987
 Holman v. Johnson, 357, 361
 Holme v. Guppy, 113
 Holmes v. Bagge, 677, 767
 — v. Bell, 279
 — v. Blogg, 578
 — v. Clarke, 703
 — v. Higgins, 546
 — v. Hoskins, 410, 411
 — v. Kerrison, 477
 — v. Kidd, 464
 — v. Mackrell, 186
 — v. Mitchell, 385
 — v. Newlands, 764
 — v. Onion, 683
 — v. Tutton, 204
 — v. Wilson, 139, 144, 771
 — v. Wood, 586
 Holroyd v. Whitehead, 463
 Holt v. Brien, 589
 — v. Ely, 536
 — v. Frost, 237
 — v. Ward, 305, 574
 Homer v. Ashford, 367
 — v. Taunton, 749
 Homersham v. Wolverhampton Waterworks Co., 365
 Honess v. Stubbs, 735
 Honeyman v. Lewis, 208
 Hooper v. Lane, 640
 — v. Shepherd, 120
 — v. Stephens, 62, 186
 — v. Treffry, 321
 — v. Williams, 475
 Hope v. Haley, 433
 Hopkins, Re, 264
 — v. Crowe, 716
 — v. Grazebrook, 630, 631
 — v. Hitchcock, 956
 — v. Logan, 132, 326, 327
 — v. Prescott, 355
 — v. Swansea (Mayor of), 322
 — v. Tanqueray, 345, 350, 351
 Hopkinson v. Lee, 130
 Hopwood v. Thorn, 740, 750
 Horler v. Carpenter, 111, 384
 Horn v. Thornborrow, 115
 Horne v. Redfearn, 475
 — v. Wingfield, 426
 Horner v. Flintoff, 618
 — v. Graves, 365, 368
 Horsfall v. Hey, 394
 Horsley v. Bell, 538

- Horsley v. Rush, 552
 — v. Thomas, 335
 Horton v. Blott, 195
 — v. Devon (Earl), 238
 — v. Sayer, 44, 45
 — v. Westminster Improvement Commissioners, 281
 Hosking v. Phillips, 770, 842
 Hotson v. Browne, 374
 Houlden v. Smith, 105
 Houlder v. Soulby, 800
 Houlston v. Smyth, 593
 Hounsell v. Smyth, 649, 661
 Hounsfield v. Drury, 728
 Housego v. Cowne, 467
 Howard v. Barnard, 844
 — v. Brownhill, 129
 — v. Crowther, 143, 572, 837
 — v. Digby, 588, 591, 598
 — v. Gosset, 719
 — v. Hudson, 831, 832
 — v. Oakes, 585, 588
 — v. Remer, 115, 214
 — v. Shepherd, 131, 495, 664, 669, 794
 Howarth v. Brown, 191
 Howcutt v. Bonser, 186
 Howden v. Haigh, 355
 — v. Standish, 155
 Howell v. Young, 187
 Howlett v. Tarte, 70, 263
 Howorth v. Tollemache, 827
 Hoyer v. Bush, 711
 Hubbard v. Phillips, 150
 Huber v. Steiner, 45
 Huckle v. Reynolds, 749
 Huckman v. Fernie, 199, 207
 Hudson v. Baxendale, 825
 — v. Bilton, 110
 — v. Clementson, 507
 — v. M'Rae, 863
 — v. Roberts, 678
 Hudspeth v. Yarnold, 303
 Huggins v. Durham, 142
 — v. Waydey, 116
 Hughes v. Buckland, 115
 — v. Hughes, 267, 208, 209
 — v. Reeves, 747
 — v. The Great Western R. C., 822
 Huguenin v. Bascley, 292
 Hull v. Pickersgill, 693, 694
 Hull Flax Co. v. Wellesley, 508
 Hulac v. Hulac, 487
 Humble v. Hunter, 541
 — v. Mitchell, 407
 Humfrey v. Dale, 423, 510, 541
 — v. Gery, 183
 — v. London and North-Western R. C. 191
 Humphreys, Re, 855
 — v. Welling, 361
 Humphries v. Brogden, 76, 81, 83, 84
 Humphrys v. Pratt, 839
 Hunt v. Baker, 308
 — v. Bishop, 110
 — v. De Blaquiére, 588, 593
 — v. Great Northern R. C., 60
 — v. Hecht, 416
 — v. Hewett, 194
 — v. North Staffordshire R. C., 66
 Hunter v. Caldwell, 834
 — v. Emmanuel, 200
 — v. Gibbons, 186, 189
 — v. Parker, 433, 532, 543, 553
 — v. Wilson, 487
 Hunting v. Sheldrake, 135, 206
 Huntley v. Simpson, 728
 — v. Ward, 740
 Hurrell v. Ellis, 139, 672
 Hurst v. Hurst, 619
 Hutchins v. Chambers, 224
 — v. Hollingworth, 201
 Hutchinson v. Copestake, 778
 — v. Gillespie, 120, 265
 — v. Greenwood, 762
 — v. Guion, 822, 849
 — v. Read, 819
 — v. The York, Newcastle, and Berwick R. C., 699, 703, 706, 826
 Hutchison v. Bowker, 419, 505
 Hutt v. Morrell, 263
 Hutton v. Cruttwell, 846
 — v. Ward, 492, 639
 — v. Warren, 508, 509, 517
 — v. Whitehouse, 158
 Huzzey v. Field, 689
 Hyat v. Hare, 556
 Hybart v. Parker, 436
 Hyde v. Dean and Canons of Windsor, 137, 296
 — v. Johnson, 185
 — v. Scyazor, 836
 Hyde's case, 262
 Hyne v. Dewdney, 476

I.

- Hott v. Wilkes, 21, 647
 Imperial Gas Co. v. London Gas Co., 186, 188, 643, 830
 Imperial Gas Light & Coke Co. v. Bradbent, 708
 Imrie v. Castrique, 263
 India, Chartered Bank of, v. Rich, of State for, v. Salata, Ingate v. La Commissione del Lloyd

 Austriaco, 157
 Ingham v. Primrose, 451, 480
 Inglis v. Haigh, 122, 185
 Ingram v. Barnes, 254
 — v. Lawson, 735, 750
 Inman v. Stamp, 391
 Innes v. East India Co., 206
In re Bailey, 246
 — Belson, 246
 — Blake, 226
 — Blues, 246
 — Carter, 216
 — Clarke, 247
 — Fuller, 158
 — Hacking v. Lee, 217
 — Hakewill, 246, 247
 — Harris, 236
 — Newton, 987, 988
 — Oxlade and North-Eastern R. C., 814, 824
 — Place, 233, 264
 — Power, 247
 — Thompson, 226
 — Wilkes, 240
 Insull v. Moojen, 123
 Ireland v. Thompson, 553
 — (Bank of) v. Trustees of Evans's Charities, 462, 528
 Irons v. Smallpiece, 292, 432
 Irwin v. Dearman, 837
 Isberg v. Bowden, 180, 536
 Israel v. Douglas, 116
 Ivens v. Butler, 586
 Iveson v. Moore, 98, 709
 Izett v. Mountain, 813

J.

Jackson v. Burnham, 569
 — v. Cocker, 497
 — v. Everett, 265
 — v. Galloway, 147
 — v. Kidd, 59, 165
 — v. Lowe, 381
 — v. Marshall, 212
 — v. Pesked, 769
 — v. Smithson, 679
 — v. Stopherd, 548
 — v. Woolley, 7, 186
 Jaquet v. Bower, 150
 James v. Barns, 195
 — v. Bourne, 166
 — v. Brook, 750
 — v. Campbell, 846
 — v. Cochrane, 212
 — v. Holdich, 488
 — v. Isaacs, 309
 — v. Morgan, 621

James v. Phelps, 733
 — v. Slater, 183
 — v. Vane, 70, 178
 — v. Williams, 112, 178, 493
 Janson v. Stuart, 172, 749
 Jaques v. Cæsar, 211
 Jarmain v. Hooper, 719
 Jarrett v. Kennedy, 343
 Jarvis v. Wilkins, 475
 Jeakes v. White, 391
 Jefferys v. Boosey, 644
 Jeffries v. Great Western R. C., 126,
 269, 791, 798
 — v. Williams, 83
 Jelliet v. Broad, 364
 Jelly v. Bradley, 677
 Jenkins v. Florence, 730
 Jenkins v. Betham, 349, 834
 — v. Harvey, 13
 — v. Hutchinson, 134, 541
 — v. Morris, 551
 — v. Power, 535
 — v. Reynolds, 380
 — v. Tongue, 457
 — v. Tucker, 596
 Jenyns v. Usborne, 496
 Jennings v. Brown, 332
 — v. Roberts, 467
 — v. Rundall, 583
 — v. Throgmorton, 370
 Jessop v. Crawley, 239
 — v. Lutwyche, 359
 Jewell v. Parr, 463, 485
 Joel v. Morison, 689
 Johns v. Simons, 531
 Johnson v. Birley, 149
 — v. Diamond, 204
 — v. Dodgson, 381, 418, 419
 — v. Hudson, 356
 — v. Lucas, 132, 587
 — v. Midland R. C., 814
 — v. Pie, 582, 583
 — v. Stear, 401, 794, 841
 — v. Windle, 460, 462
 Johnston v. Sumner, 588, 592, 593
 Johnstone v. Sutton, 102, 696, 730, 731
 Joll v. Curzon, 171
 Jolly v. Rees, 590, 591
 — v. Young, 506
 Jonassohn v. Ransome, 189
 — v. Great Northern R. C., 110
 Jones v. Barkley, 273
 — v. Beaumont, 123
 — v. Broadhurst, 445, 485
 — v. Cannock, 110
 — v. Carter, 435
 — v. Chapman, 139, 239, 765
 — v. Clarke, 503

Jones v. Currey, 66
 — v. Davies, 794
 — v. Dowle, 121
 — v. Flint, 393
 — v. Gooday, 840
 — v. Gretton, 486
 — v. Harrison, 567
 — v. Hart, 692
 — v. Howell, 115
 — v. Hughes, 532
 — v. Johnson, 126
 — v. Jones, 70, 216, 222, 233
 — v. Lees, 363
 — v. Orchard, 310
 — v. Owen, 234, 239
 — v. Powell, 709
 — v. Pritchard, 63
 — v. Randall, 361
 — v. Reade, 179
 — v. Robinson, 435
 — v. Ryde, 483
 — v. Sawkins, 430
 — v. Tanner, 69
 — v. Tapling, 778
 — v. Thompson, 206
 — v. Tyler, 809
 — v. Waite, 284, 362
 — v. Williams, 221
 — v. Wylie, 676
 — v. Yates, 334
Jordan v. Norton, 303, 419
Jorden v. Money, 390, 831
Jordin v. Crump, 647
Joseph v. Henry, 62
Joeling v. Irvine, 623, 633
 — v. Kingsford, 500, 955
Joule v. Taylor, 115, 616
Jowett v. Spencer, 110
Judkins v. Atherton, 193
Judson v. Bowden, 110
Jungbluth v. Way, 492
Jury v. Barker, 474
Justice v. Goaling, 717

K.

Kavanagh v. Gudge, 677
Kaye v. Brett, 529
 — v. Dutton, 319, 327
 — v. Waghorn, 297
Keane v. Reynolds, 771
Kearns v. Cordwainers' Co., 93
 — v. Durell, 487, 494
Kearney v. Carstairs, 305, 571
Kearlake v. Morgan, 112
Keates v. Cadogan (Earl), 371, 661
Keen v. Priest, 204, 224, 840, 842
Keene v. Beard, 460, 461
 — v. Dilke, 849

Keene v. Keene, 639
Keightley v. Watson, 130
Keir v. Leeman, 288, 898
Kelly v. Partington, 738
 — v. Webster, 390, 391, 394
Kelsall v. Marshall, 265
Kemble v. Farren, 618, 619
Kemp v. Balls, 486
 — v. Clark, 495
 — v. Finden, 457
 — v. Neville, 105
Kempe v. Gibbon, 184, 186
Kendall v. Wilkinson, 722
Kendillon v. Maltby, 721
Kennaway v. Treleavan, 305
Kennedy v. Brown, 129, 308, 325
Kennet and Avon Navigation Co., v. Witherington, 106, 656
Kenrick v. Horder, 175
Kent v. Great Western R. Co., 114
 — v. Shuckard, 808
 — v. Thomas, 532
Kentworthy v. Schofield, 420
Kepp v. Wiggett, 290
Kerford v. Mondel, 125
Kerkin v. Kerkin, 68, 239
Kerr v. Haynes, 72
Kershaw v. Bailey, 740
Key v. Cotesworth, 403, 496
Keynsham Lime Co. v. Baker, 72
Keyse v. Powell, 84, 183, 764
Kidgill v. Moor, 89, 770
Kidner v. Keith, 268
Kilham v. Collier, 316, 321, 861
Kilshaw v. Jukes, 546
Kimberley v. Alleyne, 152
Kimpton v. Willey, 62, 64, 234
King v. Acc. Ass. Co., 110
 — v. Basingham, 566
 — v. Gillett, 428
 — v. Hoare, 136, 260, 261, 262
 — v. Hopkins, 149
 — v. Jones, 133, 615
 — v. Norman, 263, 614
 — v. Reg., 899, 987
 — v. Sears, 308, 314
 — v. Shepherd, 234
 — v. Thom, 133
 — v. Williams, 159
Kingdom v. Cox, 110
 — v. Nottle, 133
Kings v. Hilton, 136
Kingsbridge Flour Mill Co. v. Flymouth, &c., Baking Co., 566, 568
Kingsford v. Morry, 334
Kingston v. Preston, 273
Kingston's (Duchess of) case, 263, 264, 281
Kingston upon Hull (Poor of) v. Petch, 302

Kinlyside v. Thornton, 125
 Kinning v. Buchanan, 720
 Kirby v. Banister, 185
 — v. Simpson, 115, 722, 724
 Kirchner v. Venus, 517
 Kirk v. Bell, 565
 — v. Dolby, 148
 — v. Gibbs, 429
 Kirkham v. Martyr, 388
 Kirwan v. Kirwan, 555
 Kitchen v. Bartsch, 569
 Kitchenman v. Skeel, 605
 Knapp v. London, Chatham, and Dover
 R. Co., 222, 764, 772
 Knight v. Barber, 407
 — v. Egerton, 842
 — v. Fox, 687,
 Knights v. Quarles, 133
 Knox v. Bushell, 590

L.

Lade v. Shepherd, 827
 Lafitte v. Slatter, 447
 Lafond v. Ruddock, 183, 187
 Lofone v. Smith, 737
 Laidler v. Burlinson, 406
 Laing v. Whaley, 643, 784
 Laird v. Pim, 631
 Lake v. Smith, 137
 Lamb v. Bunce, 312
 — v. Falk, 689
 — v. Pegg, 112
 Lambert v. Bessey, 674, 675, 845
 — v. Taylor, 210
 Lamert v. Heath, 484
 Lampet's case, 435
 Lamphier v. Phipps, 711
 Lampleigh v. Brathwait, 308
 Lamprell v. Billericay Union, 558, 560, 562
 Lancashire Waggon Co. v. Fitzbugh, 191
 Lancaster v. Eve, 392
 — v. Walsh, 323
 Landens v. Shell, 236
 Landman v. Entwistle, 567
 Lane v. Bennett, 185, 186
 — v. Burghart, 385
 — v. Ironmonger, 590
 Lang v. Gale, 506
 Langdale, Ex parte, 545
 Langfort v. Tiler, 398
 Langridge v. Levy, 666, 668, 669, 956
 Langton v. Higgins, 374, 400
 — v. Hughes, 354
 Lassence v. Tierney, 390
 Latham v. Reg., 973
 — v. Spedding, 67

Latt v. Booth, 575
 Lattimore v. Garrard, 327
 Laughter v. Pointer, 681, 685
 Laveroni v. Drury, 812
 Lavery v. Turley, 390
 Lavey v. Reg., 899
 Law v. Parnell, 457
 — v. Thompson, 169
 Lawford v. Partridge, 67
 Lawrence v. The Great Northern R. Co., 776
 — v. Tierney, 390
 — v. Walmsley, 376
 — v. Wilcock, 45
 Laws v. Rand, 461
 Lawson v. Burness, 507
 — v. Dumlin, 115
 — v. London (the Bank of), 88,
 645, 686
 Lawton v. Elmore, 170
 Laycock v. Pickles, 390
 Laythoarp v. Bryant, 305, 381, 409, 419
 Lazarus v. Cowie, 463
 Leach v. Money, 718
 — v. Thomas, 210
 Leader v. Homewood, 431
 — v. Rhys, 61
 Leaf v. Tuton, 168
 Leakey v. Lucas, 110
 Leame v. Bray, 675, 678, 688, 882
 Leary v. Patrick, 7, 772
 Leather Cloth Co. v. American Leather Cloth Co., 881
 Ledwith v. Catchpole, 714
 Lee v. Bayes, 102, 792, 795, 832
 — v. Everest, 524
 — v. Griffin, 404, 419
 — v. Hart, 846
 — v. Nixon, 135
 — v. Risdon, 394
 — v. Sangster, 134
 — v. Simpson, 846, 855
 — v. Stevenson, 763, 767
 Leeds and Thirsk R. Co. v. Fearnley, 578
 Leeming v. Snaith, 507
 Le Fanu v. Malcolmson, 141, 747
 Legge v. Tucker, 71, 663
 Legh v. Hewett, 19
 Leideman v. Schultz, 507
 Leigh v. Lillie, 619
 — v. Paterson, 622
 Leighton v. Wales, 365, 619
 Leman v. Goulty, 282
 Le Mason v. Dixon, 142, 145
 Lemere v. Elliott, 391
 Lennard v. Robinson, 541
 Leroux v. Brown, 46, 380, 382, 409
 Leslie v. Pounds, 690

- Lethbridge v. Mytton, 615
Levy v. Baker, 600
 — v. Edwards, 717
 — v. Green, 209, 402
 — v. Hale, 832, 841
 — v. Langridge, 640
 — v. Moylan, 105, 718
 — v. Pyne, 552
 — v. Railton, 168
Lewis v. Bright, 356
 — v. Campbell, 308
 — v. Clifden, 625
 — v. Clifton, 112, 832
 — v. Collard, 834
 — v. Davison, 354
 — v. Gompertz, 466
 — v. Great Western R. C., 819
 — v. Levy, 744
 — v. Marshall, 514
 — v. Morris, 728
 — v. Nicholson, 541
 — v. Peachey, 629
 — v. Read, 695
 — v. Reilly, 548
 — v. Rochester (Mayor, &c. of), 566
 — v. Walter, 745
Leyland v. Tancred, 728
Libels (The case of), 735
Lichfield Union (Guardians of) v. Greene, 480
Lickbarrow v. Mason, 495, 496
Liddlow v. Wilmot, 592
Liford's case, 764
Lilley v. Elwin, 629
 — v. Harvey, 233
Lilly v. Hays, 321
Lillywhite v. Devereux, 413
Limpus v. General Omnibus Co., 629
Lincoln College case, 520
Lindall v. Penfold, 262
Lindsay v. Leigh, 722
Lindus v. Bradwell, 451, 504, 525, 588
 — v. Melrose, 551
Linford v. Fitaroy, 721
 — v. Lake, 175
Linnegar v. Hodd, 332
Litchfield v. Ready, 755, 762, 766
Litt v. Martindale, 321
Littlechild v. Banks, 178
Littlefield v. Shee, 331
Liverpool Adelphi Loan Association v. Fairhurst, 582, 587, 831
Liverpool Borough Bank v. Eccles, 381, 382, 419
 — v. Logan, 385
Liversidge v. Broadbent, 321, 434
Livingston v. Ralli, 44
Lloyd v. Howard, 464
Lloyd v. Johnson, 370
 — v. Jones, 68, 149
 — v. Oliver, 165, 475
 — v. Peell, 146
Lock v. Ashton, 720, 850
Lockett v. Nicklin, 509
Lockhart v. Barnard, 823
Lockley v. Pye, 843
Loder v. Kekul6, 625
Logan v. Hall, 628
 — v. Le Mesurier, 397, 406, 622
Lomas v. Bradshaw, 548
London, &c., Co. v. Drake, 126
London and Continental Ass. Soc. v. Redgrave, 281
London and North-Western R. C. v. Glyn, 128
 — v. Dunham, 217, 819
 — v. Lindsay, 264
London (Bishop of) v. McNeil, 180 — (Corporation of) v. Att.-Gen., 31
 — Dock Co. v. Sinnott, 559, 560
 — Gaslight Co. v. Chelsea, 194, 273
 — v. Nicholls, 559
 — (Mayor of) v. Hunt, 562
Long v. Orsi, 225, 834
Longbottom v. Longbottom, 66, 217
Longmeid v. Holliday, 141, 558, 668, 836
Lonsdale (Earl) v. Nelson, 221
Loosemore v. Railford, 615
Lord v. Hall, 455, 457, 525, 588
 — v. Sydney (Commissioners of), 783
Loring v. Warburton, 93
Lotan v. Cross, 827
Loukes v. Holbeach, 603
Lovelock v. Franklyn, 111
Lowe v. Carpenter, 781
 — v. London and North Western R. C., 564
 — v. Peers, 362
 — v. Steele, 616
Lowley v. Rossi, 61
Lowndes v. Stamford (Earl), 44
Lucas v. Beach, 547
 — v. Beale, 130, 543
Lucas v. Bristow, 508, 511
 — v. De la Cour, 553
 — v. Tarleton, 93, 660
Lucy v. Levington, 133
 — v. Moufet, 402
Ludlow (Mayor of) v. Charlton, 557, 559
Lumley v. Gye, 94, 95, 170, 321, 837, 838, 849
Lunn v. Thornton, 432
Lyde v. Barnard, 389
Lygo v. Newbold, 659, 680

Lynch v. Knight, 94, 750
 — v. Nurdin, 680
 Lynn Regis (Mayor of) v. Taylor, 13
 Lyon v. Knowles, 144, 545
 — v. Reed, 427
 Lyons v. Martin, 688, 689
 Lysaught v. Bryant, 457, 462
 Lyth v. Ault, 317, 430, 555
 Lythgoe v. Vernon, 126, 797

M.

MacAndrew v. Electric Telegraph Co., 813
 MacArthur v. Seaforth (Lord), 624
 Macbeath v. Haldimand, 102, 532, 538, 696
 MacCarthy v. Young, 670, 803
 Macdonald v. Longbottom, 500, 502
 Macdougall v. Paterson, 4
 Macfarlane v. Giannacopulo, 535
 — v. Norris, 46
 MacGregor v. Rhodes, 464
 — v. Thwaites, 734
 Machu v. The London and South
 Western R. C., 684, 817
 Mackallay's case, 906, 917
 Mackay v. Ford, 744
 Mackenzie v. Pooley, 532
 — v. Dunlop, 512
 Mackintosh v. Haydon, 477
 MacLae v. Sutherland, 135, 551, 568
 Macrory v. Scott, 385
 Maddon v. White, 577
 Maddox v. Winne, 585
 Magee v. Atkinson, 543
 Magnay v. Burt (In error), 728, 730
 — v. Edwards, 129
 Magor v. Chadwick, 785
 Mahoney v. Ashlin, 468
 — v. Kekulé, 535, 541
 Maile v. Mann, 531
 Mainwaring v. Brandon, 637
 — v. Giles, 767
 — v. Leslie, 592
 — v. Newman, 547
 Malden v. Fyson, 637
 Mallalieu v. Hodgson, 286, 289
 Mallan v. May, 363, 367, 385, 506
 Malpass v. Mudd, 149
 Maltass v. Siddle, 447
 Maltby v. Murrella, 147, 445
 Manby v. Scott, 583, 588, 594
 — v. Witt, 739
 Manchester, &c. R. C. v. Fullarton, 649
 Manchester, Sheffield and Lincolnshire
 R. C. (The) v. Wallis, 657
 Manders v. Williams, 126, 140, 375, 792
 Manley v. Boycott, 211, 372, 457, 464

Manley v. Field, 78, 837
 — v. St. Helen's Canal and R. C., 98, 650, 705
 Mann v. Buckerfield, 239
 Manning v. Fitzgerald, 502
 — v. Phelps, 183
 Mansell v. Reg., 981
 Mansergh, Re, 97
 Manwaring v. Sands, 594
 Mardall v. Thellusson, 181, 605
 Mare v. Charles, 456
 Marfell v. South Wales R. C., 658
 Marker v. Kenrick, 125, 280, 768
 Marlborough (Duke of), Ex parte, 241, 243, 933
 Marriott v. Hampton, 263, 601
 — v. Stanley, 591, 679
 Marsack v. Webber, 310
 Marsden v. Moore, 273
 — v. Wardle, 233, 234
 Marsh v. Billings, 645
 — v. Davies, 533
 — v. Keating, 548
 — v. Loader, 877
 — v. Wood, 305
 Marshall v. Bown, 289
 — v. Broadhurst, 133, 605
 — v. Exeter (The Bishop of), 117, 190
 — v. Lynn, 424, 425
 — v. Nicholls, 106
 — v. Poole, 639
 — v. Rutton, 583
 — v. Stewart, 700
 — v. Ulleswater Steam Navigation Co., 767
 — v. York, Newcastle, and Berwick R. C., 653, 664, 825
 Marshalsea (The case of), 105, 718, 719
 Marston v. Allen, 457, 458
 Martin v. Andrews, 174
 — v. Boure, 438
 — v. Chauntry, 440, 474
 — v. Great Northern R. C., 848
 — v. Hemming, 195
 — v. Porter, 849
 — v. Pycroft, 374
 — v. Reid, 804
 — v. Strachan, 754
 — v. Temperley, 688
 — v. The Great Northern R. C., 679, 848
 Martindale v. Smith, 401
 Martinez v. Gerber, 638
 Martini v. Coles, 140, 826
 Martyn v. Gray, 567
 Marvin v. Wallis, 415
 Mary's case, 78, 100
 Marzetti v. Williams, 86, 87, 462,
 614, 841

- Mason v. Barker, 724
 — v. Farnell, 140
 — v. Haddon, 123
 — v. Harvey, 110
 — v. Hill, 783
 — v. Rumsey, 551
 Mason's case, 908
 Massey v. Goodhall, 313, 324
 — v. Johnson, 390
 Masson v. Bovet, 336
 Master v. Miller, 435, 437, 490, 491
 Master Pilots, &c., of Newcastle-upon-Tyne v. Bradley, 13
 Masters v. Baretto, 475
 — v. Barnwell, 207
 — v. Ibberson, 283, 487, 494
 — v. Johnson, 154
 Masterton v. Brooklyn (Mayor, &c.), 625
 Mather v. Lord Maidston, 488
 Mathew v. Blackmore, 275, 280
 Mathews v. Biddulph, 715
 Matson v. Wharam, 386
 Matthew v. Ollerton, 926
 — v. Osborne, 762
 Mattison v. Hart, 4
 Maund v. The Monmouthshire Canal
 Co., 684
 Mawby, Ex parte, 229
 Mawson v. Blane, 581, 582
 May v. Breed, 258
 — v. Burdett, 679
 — v. Footner, 199
 — v. Hawkins, 195
 — v. Seyler, 439, 438
 Mayall v. Higbey, 123
 Mayer v. Burgess, 217
 Mayhew v. Herrick, 125
 — v. Suttle, 764
 M'Canee v. London and North-Western
 R. C., 819
 McLeod v. Wakley, 77
 M'Dougal v. Robertson, 133
 Mead v. Young, 439
 Mears v. London and South-Western
 R. C., 827
 Mechelen v. Wallace, 391
 Medway Navigation Co. v. Earl of Bomney, 89, 784
 Medwin, Ex parte, 232
 Mees v. Thellusson, 152
 Megginson v. Harper, 474
 Meggs v. Binns, 225
 Melanotte v. Teasdale, 475
 Mellersh v. Rippen, 466
 Melling v. Leake, 183
 Mellish v. Richardson, 147
 Mellor v. Leather, 126
 Mellers v. Shaw, 144, 700
 Melville v. Doidge, 801
 Mercer v. Cheese, 493
 — v. Irving, 620
 Meredith v. Gittens, 59
 — v. Meigh, 414
 Merest v. Harvey, 846
 Merry v. Green, 946
 Merrywether v. Turner, 747
 Mersey Dock Board v. Penhallow, 98,
 650, 652
 Messenger v. Clarke, 586
 Messiter v. Rose, 168
 Metcalfe v. Hetherington, 652
 — v. London, Brighton, &c., R.
 C., 813, 817
 — v. Richardson, 487
 — v. Rycroft, 544
 Metropolitan Ass. v. Petch, 763 — Saloon Omnibus Co. v.
 Hawkins, 194, 686
 Metzner v. Bolton, 510
 Meux v. Lloyd, 227
 Mews v. Carr, 421
 — v. Mews, 585
 M'Fee, Ex parte, 233, 239
 M'Gregor v. Graves, 308
 — v. Thwaites, 744, 749
 Michell v. Williams, 731, 732
 Middleditch v. Ellis, 277, 547
 Middleton v. Fowler, 688
 — v. Gill, 639
 Midland R. C. v. Bromley, 826
 — v. Daykin, 657
 — v. Pye, 4, 7
 Milburn v. Codd, 546
 Miles v. Gorton, 401
 Milgate v. Kebble, 401, 828
 Millar v. Tayler, 11, 22
 Millen v. Hawery, 219, 220
 Miller v. Race, 480, 497
 — v. Solomons, 4, 6
 — v. Tetherington, 511
 Millership v. Brookes, 279
 Milligan v. Wedge, 687
 Mills v. Alderbury Union, 130
 — v. Barber, 488
 — v. Blackall, 305
 — v. Graham, 583
 — v. Holton, 690, 801
 Milne v. Marwood, 340, 342, 671, 830
 Milner v. Maclean, 902
 — v. Milnes, 142
 Milnes v. Dawson, 465, 847
 Milward v. Littlewood, 361
 Miner v. Gilmour, 783
 Mines Royal Societies v. Magnay, 189
 Minet v. Round, 157
 Minshall v. Oakes, 189, 627
 M'Intyre v. Belcher, 112
 Mitchel v. Reynolds, 363, 367
 Mitchell v. Crasweller, 200, 619, 689

- Mitchell v. Jenkins, 725, 731, 732
 — v. Knott, 654
 — v. Mitcheson, 246
 Mitcheson v. Nicol, 112, 309
 Mitchinson v. Hewson, 136
 Mittelholzer v. Fullarton, 361
 Mizen v. Pick, 593
 M'Kay v. Rutherford, 395
 M'Kune v. Joynson, 323
 M'Kinnon v. Penson, 99
 M'Laughlin v. Pryor, 685, 688
 M'Manus v. Crickett, 686, 688
 — v. Lancashire and Yorkshire
 R. C., 819
 M'Naghten's case, 855, 872, 873, 875
 Moens v. Heyworth, 338, 340, 342
 Moffatt v. Dickson, 134, 165, 228, 533
 — v. Van Millengen, 607
 Mollett v. Wackerbarth, 424, 491
 Molton v. Camroux, 596
 Mondel v. Steel, 625
 Money v. Leach, 202
 Monks v. Dykes, 966
 Montacute v. Maxwell, 390
 Montague v. Benedict, 589, 591, 593
 — v. Perkins, 452
 Moon v. Durden, 7
 — v. Raphael, 840, 848
 — v. Towers, 694
 Moor v. Roberts, 195
 Moore v. Campbell, 419, 423, 424, 426, 507
 — v. Forster, 168
 — v. Garwood, 303, 506, 568
 — v. Gardner, 728
 — v. Webb, 191
 — v. Woolsey, 370
 Morant v. Chamberlin, 650
 Moreron's case, 133
 Moreton v. Hardern, 125, 678
 — v. Holt, 215, 216
 Morewood v. Pollok, 813
 Morgan v. Couchman, 127, 831
 — v. Jones, 193, 639
 — v. Knight, 143, 569
 — v. Marquis, 122
 — v. Nicholls, 763
 — v. Pike, 129, 199, 306
 — v. Powell, 849
 — v. Price, 261
 — v. Ravey, 71, 137, 145, 325, 663, 809
 — v. Thomas, 142, 604, 797
 Moriarty v. Brooks, 677
 Morison v. Salmon, 88
 Morley v. Attenborough, 806, 807
 — v. Boothby, 292
 — v. Culverwell, 463, 485
 — v. Gaisford, 685
 — v. Polhill, 133
 Morley v. Rennoldson, 362
 Morrell v. Martin, 105, 718
 Morrice v. Baker, 221
 Morris v. Martin, 594
 — v. Oliver, 457
 — v. Vivian, 207
 — v. Walker, 168
 Morrison v. Chadwick, 173
 — v. General Steam Navigation
 Co., 654
 Mortimore v. Wright, 332
 Morton v. Tibbett, 413, 414, 415, 416, 417
 — v. Copeland, 377
 Moss v. Hall, 316
 — v. Sweet, 401
 Mossop v. Great Northern R. C., 216, 233
 Mostyn v. Coles, 207
 — v. Fabrigas, 45, 103, 198, 711, 731
 Moule v. Brown, 480
 Mounsey v. Ismay, 15
 Mounson v. Bourn, 136
 Mountcashel (Earl) v. Barber, 311, 547, 550
 Mountjoy v. Wood, 43
 Mountjoy v. Collier, 67, 68
 Mousley v. Ludlam, 15
 Mowatt v. Lonsborough (Lord), 277,
 346, 518, 639
 M'Pherson v. Daniels, 735, 864
 Mucklow v. Mangles, 406
 Muggleton v. Barnett, 12
 Muirhead v. Evans, 210
 Mullett v. Hunt, 653
 Mullick v. Radakissen, 461
 Mumford v. Gething, 363, 365, 375, 502
 — v. Oxford and Worcester R.
 C., 769
 Muncey v. Dennis, 509
 Munden v. Brunswick (Duke), 170
 Mungan v. Wheatley, 216
 Munster v. South-Eastern R. C., 824
 Mure v. Kaye, 714
 Murgatroyd v. Robinson, 734
 Murray v. Hall, 767
 — v. Mann, 334, 337, 343
 — v. Stair (Earl), 270
 Muschamp v. Manchester and Preston
 R. C., 823
 Musgrove v. Newell, 730
 Muskett v. Hill, 125
 Musson v. Bovet, 336
 Mutual Loan Fund Ass. v. Ludlow, 189
 Myers v. Sarl, 504, 506, 511, 513
 — v. Willis, 531
 Myrtle v. Beaver, 538
 Mytton v. Cock, 801
 — v. Midland R. C., 823

N.

Naef v. Mutter, 154
Nagle v. Baylor, 494, 599
Nargatt v. Nias, 125
Naah, Ex parte, 228
 — v. Armstrong, 316
National Assurance Assn. v. Best, 615
Naser v. Wade, 155
Neale v. Turton, 546
Neate v. Harding, 797
Neave v. Avery, 189, 761
Needham v. Dowling, 744
 — v. Fraser, 653
Nelson v. Couch, 263
 — v. Duncombe, 596
 — v. Patricke, 397
 — v. Serle, 383
Nepean v. Doe, 183
Neve v. Holland, 587
Neville v. Kelly, 323
Newall v. Elliott, 265
Newborough v. Schroder, 165, 528
Newbould v. Coltman, 724
Newcastle-upon-Tyne (Master Pilots, &c., of) v. Bradley, 13, 507
Newcombe v. De Roos, 72
Newhall v. Ireson, 645
Newman, app., Baker, resp., 974
 — r. Rook, 206
Newnham v. Stevens, 796
New River Co., app., Johnson, resp., 79
Newry and Enniskillen R. C. v. Coombe, 578
Newsome v. Coles, 555
Newson v. Smythies, 110
Newton, Ex parte, 988
 — Re, 987, 988
 — (Catherine), Re, 246
 — (Francis), Re, 246
 — v. Belcher, 567
 — v. Boodle, 142, 202, 712
 — v. Chantler, 867
 — v. Cubitt, 173
 — r. Ellis, 115
 — v. Forster, 626
 — r. Harland, 220
 — v. Holford, 837
 — v. Rowe, 213
Nichol v. Bestwick, 614, 844
 — v. Godts, 500, 511
 — v. Martyn, 838
 — v. Thompson, 640
Nicholl v. Allen, 98
Nicholls v. Bastard, 803, 827
 — v. Diamond, 456
 — v. Stretton, 369
Nicholson v. Coghill, 728
 — v. Gooch, 355
 — v. Ricketta, 483, 484, 551

Nickells v. Atherstone, 727, 830
Nicklin v. Williams, 92
Niell v. Morley, 598
Nind v. Rhodes, 61
Noble v. Bank of England, 70
 — v. Chapman, 200
 — v. National Discount Co., 320, 434
Nockels v. Crosby, 567
Noden v. Johnson, 677, 678
Nordenstrom v. Pitt, 325
Norfolk R. C. v. M'Namara, 279
Norman v. Marchant, 72
 — v. Phillips, 414
Norris v. Seed, 141, 835
 — v. Irish Land Co., 128
North v. Smith, 679
North Staffordshire R. C. v. Peek, 382
Northam v. Bowden, 140, 791, 827
 — v. Hurley, 90, 784
Northampton Gas Light Co. v. Parnell, 530, 565
North British Insurance Co. v. Lloyd, 345
North-Western R. C. v. M'Michael, 578
 — v. Sharp, 834
Norton v. Ellum, 453, 477
 — v. Fazan, 594
Norwich (The Mayor of) v. Norfolk R. C., 355, 566
Norwood v. Stevenson, 136
Nosotti v. Page, 87, 616
Noton v. Brooks, 316
Nowell v. Worcester (Mayor, &c.), 110, 565
Nutt v. Rush, 167, 168
Nye v. Moseley, 295

O.

Oakes v. Wood, 678
Oakley v. Portsmouth and Ryde Steam Packet Co., 813
Oaste v. Taylor, 438
O'Brien v. Bryant, 735
 — v. Clement, 735, 736
 — v. Reg., 894, 940, 981, 987
Ockenden v. Henley, 631
O'Connell v. Reg., 895, 896, 980, 981, 987
O'Connell's case, 896
O'Connor v. Bradshaw, 287, 359
Ogden v. Saunders, 256
Oldershaw v. King, 333, 384
Oliver v. Oliver, 122
 — v. Woodroffe, 576
Ollivant v. Bayley, 348
Onley v. Gardiner, 780
Onslow v. Horne, 743
 — v. Simpson, 505

Organ v. Brodie, 531
 Oridge v. Sherborne, 473, 476
 Orme v. Broughton, 183
 — v. Galloway, 319, 640
 Ormond v. Holland, 700
 Ormrod v. Huth, 339
 Orton v. Butler, 116
 Osbaldiston v. Simpson, 362
 Osborn v. London Dock Co., 195
 — v. Veitch, 925
 Osborne v. Harper, 547
 Osterman v. Bateman, 730
 Ouchterlony v. Gibson, 146
 Oughton v. Seppings, 797
 Oulds v. Harrison, 432, 464
 Outhwaite v. Hudson, 201
 Overton v. Banister, 582
 — v. Freeman, 648, 673
 — v. Harvey, 264
 Owen v. Burnett, 815
 — v. Challis, 173
 — v. Knight, 140, 791
 — v. Legh, 660
 — v. Nickson, 194
 — v. Routh, 624
 — v. Van Uster, 456
 — v. Wilkinson, 181
 Oxlade v. North-Eastern R. C., 194
 — v. North-Eastern R. C., In re, 814, 824

P.

Padmore v. Lawrence, 739
 Page v. Newman, 639
 Pain v. Whittaker, 828
 Paine v. Strand Union (The), 558, 560, 562
 Painter v. Abel, 528
 Palgrave v. Windham, 142
 Palk v. Skinner, 779
 Palmer v. Forsyth, 246
 — v. Grand Junction R. C., 816
 Panton v. Williams, 232, 733
 Pardington v. South Wales R. C., 822
 Pardoé v. Price, 128
 Paris v. Levy, 77, 747
 Parker v. Bristol and Exeter R. C., 217, 539
 — v. Dormer, 45
 — v. Ibbetson, 510
 — v. Rolla, 834
 — v. Staniland, 393
 — v. Wallis, 415
 — v. Winslow, 541, 543
 Parkes v. Smith, 280
 Parkins v. Carruthers, 555
 — v. Scott, 750

Parmiter v. Coupland, 734, 747, 930
 Parnaby v. Lancaster Canal Co., 650
 Parr v. Jewell, 463, 464, 485
 — v. Lillierapp, 70
 Parrott v. Anderson, 532
 — v. Eyre, 538
 Parsons v. Brown, 985
 — v. Gingell, 810
 — v. Sexton, 626
 Pasley v. Freeman, 342, 388, 830
 Pater v. Baker, 751
 Paterson v. Gandasequi, 533, 534, 535
 — v. Harris, 182
 — v. Wallace, 703
 Paterni v. Campbell, 237
 Patrick v. Colerick, 219
 — v. Reynolds, 527
 Patten v. Rea, 689
 Pattison v. Jones, 738
 Paul v. Joel, 466, 467
 Pauling v. London and North-Western
 R. C., 564
 Paxton v. Courtney, 19
 — v. Popham, 285, 288, 360
 Payne v. Brecon (Mayor of), 566
 — v. Cave, 420
 — v. New South Wales Coal, &c.,
 Co. (The), 565
 — v. Wilson, 324, 323
 Paynter v. Williams, 312
 Peachey v. Rowland, 687, 690
 Peacock v. Bell, 158
 Pears v. Wilson, 69
 Pearson v. Lemaitre, 736
 — v. Spencer, 772
 Pease v. Chaytor, 85, 105, 115, 722
 Peate v. Dicken, 317
 Pedder v. Mayor of Preston, 181
 Pedley v. Davis, 719, 724
 Peek v. North Staffordshire R. C., 381
 385, 819, 820, 821
 Pell v. Daubeny, 251
 — v. Shearman, 842
 Pellatt v. Markwick, 123
 Pemberton v. Chapman, 603
 — v. Colls, 750
 — v. Vaughan, 367, 368
 Penfold v. Abbott, 137, 296
 Penn v. Ward, 677
 Pennell v. Alexander, 496, 533, 535, 541
 — v. Aston, 207
 Penney v. Slade, 721
 Penrose v. Martyr, 456
 Penruddock's case, 221, 776
 People (The) v. Loomis, 936
 Pepper v. Whalley, 148
 Percival v. Stamp, 771, 773
 Perez v. Oleaga, 189

- Perkins v. Vaughan, 714
 Perren v. Monmouthshire R. C., 179, 180, 681, 826
 Perry v. Bennett, 216
 — v. Fitzhowe, 221, 223
 — v. Patchett, 149
 — v. Skinner, 4
 Petch v. Lyon, 278
 Peter v. Compton, 396
 Peters v. Fleming, 530
 Peterson v. Ayre, 535, 623
 Pether v. Shelton, 178
 Peto v. Reynolds, 309, 439, 475
 Petre v. Duncombe, 621, 640
 Petrie v. Dawson, 395
 — v. Lamont, 144
 — v. Nuttall, 263
 Pettamberdass v. Thackoorseydass, 7
 Petty v. Sidney, 110
 Peytoe's case, 300
 Phelps v. Prothero, 170, 189
 Phillips v. Phillips, 330
 Philipson v. Egremont (Earl), 137, 264
 Phillimore v. Barry, 381
 Philipps v. Briard, 509
 Phillips, Ex parte, 236, 237
 — v. Clark, 812, 814
 — v. Clift, 273
 — v. Edwards, 814
 — v. Jones, 121
 — v. Naylor, 81, 728
 — v. Ward, 190, 261
 Philliakirk v. Pluckwell, 132
 Phillpotts v. Phillpotts, 239
 Philpotts v. Evans, 623
 Pickard v. Sears, 830, 831, 833
 — v. Smith, 649, 650
 Pickering v. Busk, 529
 — v. Rudd, 776
 Pickford v. The Grand Junction R. C., 816
 Pickwood v. Wright, 165
 Pidgeon v. Burslem, 359
 Pierce v. Street, 728
 — v. Williams, 637
 Piggot v. Eastern Counties R. C., 681
 Pigot's case, 490
 — v. Cubley, 401, 806
 Pilbrow v. Pilbrow's Atmospheric R. C., 148
 Pilgrim v. The Southampton and Dorchester R. C., 661
 Pilkington v. Scott, 305, 366
 Pillot v. Wilkinson, 795
 Pilmore v. Hood, 343, 371
 Pincard v. Klockmann, 468
 Pinciani v. London and South-Western R. C., 817
 Pindar v. Wadsworth, 89
 Pinnel's case, 298, 429
 Pinnington v. Galland, 772
 Pinto v. Santos, 34
 Pippin v. Sheppard, 665, 711
 Pitman v. Woodbury, 306
 Pitt v. Chappelow, 455
 Pitts v. Beckett, 423
 Place, In re, 233, 264
 — v. Potts, 167, 263
 Plant v. Cotterill, 186
 Plasterers' Co. (The) v. The Parish Clerks' Co., 777
 Playter's case, 169
 Plevin v. Henshall, 213
 Poirier v. Morris, 468, 535
 Polhill v. Walter, 337, 339, 456, 537, 540
 Polkinhorn v. Wright, 677
 Pollard v. Ogden, 487
 Pollen v. Brewer, 221
 Pontifex v. Wilkinson, 426
 Poole v. Gould, 152
 Poole's case, 394
 Pooley v. Brown, 483
 — v. Harradine, 375
 — v. Tunbridge, 298
 Popham v. Pickburn, 745
 Poppleton v. Buchanan, 630
 Porcher v. Gardner, 110
 Pordage v. Cole, 110, 273
 Porter v. Palgrave, 639
 — v. Vorley, 571
 Portman v. Middleton, 633
 Pott v. Clegg, 185, 459
 — v. Eytton, 545
 Potter v. Faulkner, 699
 Pounsett v. Fuller, 630, 631
 Pow v. Davis, 349, 541, 542, 637
 Powell v. Graham, 137
 — v. Hoyland, 125, 794, 953
 — v. Jessup, 391, 622
 — v. Rees, 145, 797
 — v. Salisbury, 850
 Power, In re, 247
 — v. Bacham, 955
 — v. Butcher, 535
 Powers v. Fowler, 380
 Powles v. Rider, 811
 Powley v. Walker, 324
 Pozzi v. Shipton, 663
 Frankerd, Ex parte, 226
 Prentice v. Harrison, 718
 Preston v. Liverpool, Manchester, and Newcastle-upon-Tyne R. C., 361, 567
 — v. Meroceau, 510
 — v. Norfolk R. C., 690
 — v. Peeke, 262
 — v. Tamplin, 532
 Preston's (Lord) case, 892

Price v. Berrington, 596
 — v. Easton, 129, 319
 — v. Great Western R. C., 639
 — v. Green, 363, 369, 619
 — v. Groom, 831
 — v. Hewitt, 170, 582, 672
 — v. Moulton, 279, 280
 — v. Price, 493, 585
 — v. Seeley, 712
 — v. Severn, 207, 846
 — v. Woodhouse, 774
 — v. Worwood, 756
 Prickett v. Badger, 629
 Prideaux v. Burnett, 349
 Priestley v. Fowler, 668, 699, 703
 Prince v. Nicholson, 265
 — v. Brunatte, 455
 Prince of Wales Ass. Co. v. Harding,
 559, 565, 832
 Prior v. Hembrow, 137, 605
 — v. Wilson, 735
 Pritchard v. Long, 842
 Procter v. Brotherton, 132
 — v. Hodgson, 772
 Prosser v. Wagner, 604
 Prugnell v. Gosse, 364
 Pryce v. Belcher, 85, 100
 Prynne's case, 240
 Pursell v. Horn, 676
 Purves v. Landell, 834
 Pusey v. Pusey, 240
 Pust v. Dowie, 324
 Put v. Rawsterne, 796
 Pyer v. Carter, 772
 Pym v. Great Northern R. C., 704,
 705, 706
 Pyne v. Campbell, 270, 374

Q.

Quarman v. Burnett, 681, 685, 686, 688
 Quarrier v. Colston, 363
 Quick v. Ludborrow, 605

R.

Rabone v. Williams, 536
 Race v. Ward, 15
 Rackham v. Marriott, 186
 Rackstraw v. Imber, 547
 Ragg's case, 957
 Railton v. Hodgson, 534
 Ralli v. Dennistoun, 46, 486
 Ramadge v. Ryan, 207
 Ramazotti v. Bowring, 536
 Ramsay v. M'Donald, 603
 Ramsden v. Gray, 166

Ramshay, Ex parte, 236, 898
 Ramuz v. Crowe, 492
 Rand v. Vaughan, 210
 Randall v. Moon, 87, 486
 — v. Raper, 623, 633, 635
 — v. Rhodes, 350
 — v. Stevens, 139, 183, 764
 — v. Trimen, 349, 637
 Randle v. Gould, 362
 Randleson v. Murray, 690
 Randon v. Toby, 519
 Ranger v. Great Western R. C., 618, 835
 Rann v. Hughes, 373, 382
 Rannie v. Irvine, 367
 Raphael v. Bank of England, 207, 481
 Rapson v. Cubitt, 687
 Rashleigh v. South Eastern R. C., 271
 Rawlings v. Till, 676
 Rawlinson v. Clarke, 300, 619
 — v. Shaw, 607
 Rawlyns v. Vandyke, 593
 Rawson v. Haigh, 846
 Rawstron v. Taylor, 79, 786
 Raymond v. Fitch, 133, 142, 143
 Rayner, Ex parte, 233
 — v. Allhusen, 194
 — v. Grote, 541
Re Aitkin, 226
 — Allen, 246
 — Anderson, 247
 — Baker, 67
 — Belson, 246
 — Bingle, 490
 — Bowen, 233
 — Cardross (Lord), 226
 — Cowgill, 246
 — Douglas, 247, 898
 — Dunn, 246
 — Egginton, 247
 — Harrington (Earl), 239
 — Hilliard, 226
 — Hopkins, 264
 — Humphreys, 831
 — Newton, 987, 988
 — (Catherine), 245
 — (Francis), 246
 — Stroud, 511, 517
 — Taylor's Estate, 296
 — Willis, 387
 — York (Dean), 232
 Read v. Coker, 114, 676
 — v. Fairbanks, 304
 — v. Legard, 594, 595
 Read v. Conquest, 855
 — v. Lamb, 168
 Reader v. Kingham, 385, 386
 Reddish v. Pincock, 548
 Redmond v. Smith, 537
 Reeca v. Taylor, 713

- Reed v. Moore, 593
 Reed's case, 937
 Reddie v. London and North Western R. C., 665, 686, 687, 705
 Rees v. Williams, 69, 217
 Reeve v. Conyngham (Marquis), 591
 — v. Palmer, 121
 — v. Whitmore, 432
 Reeves v. Capper, 806
 — v. Hearne, 330
 — v. Templar, 747
 Reg. v. Abbott, 955
 — r. Adams, 901, 940
 — v. Alderson, 236
 — v. Alison, 908
 — v. Allen, 879
 — v. Alleyne, 898, 988
 — v. Ambergate, N. & B. R. C., 264
 — v. Archer, 953
 — r. Austin, 985
 — v. Avery, 939
 — r. Aylett, 986
 — r. Azzopardi, 921
 — r. Badger, 242
 — r. Bailey, 863
 — v. Baldry, 983
 — v. Barnes, 953
 — r. Barronet, 907
 — r. Beeston, 985
 — v. Bennett, 916
 — r. Bernard, 897
 — v. Berry, 858, 939
 — r. Betts, 904, 905, 959, 961
 — r. Bidwell, 897
 — v. Bird, 880, 922, 962, 980
 — v. Birmingham (Overseers of), 982
 — r. Blake, 896
 — v. Blakemore, 283
 — v. Bleasdale, 949
 — v. Bond, 986
 — v. Bowden, 964
 — v. Boyes, 195
 — r. Bramley, 942
 — v. Bray, 975
 — v. Brimilow, 878
 — v. Brishby, 897
 — v. Bristol and Exeter R. C., 228
 — v. Bristol (Justices of), 229
 — v. Brooks, 880, 939
 — v. Brown, 229, 942
 — v. Bryan, 955, 956, 957
 — v. Buchanan, 859
 — v. Bunhall, 941
 — v. Burdett, 164
 — v. Burgess, 867
 — v. Burgon, 965
 — v. Burnside, 954
 — v. Burton, 871, 934
 — v. Butcher, 865, 957
 Reg. v. Button, 882, 896, 951
 — v. Calvert, 924
 — v. Cambridge (Recorder of), 264
 — v. Camplin, 926
 — v. Canniff, 912
 — v. Canterbury (Abp.), 21, 229
 — v. Carlisle, 936
 — v. Case, 882, 926
 — v. Chandler, 861, 908
 — r. Chapman, 899
 — v. Charlesworth, 904, 980
 — v. Charretie, 898
 — r. Chawton, 441, 506
 — v. Cheafor, 936
 — v. Cheeseman, 867, 949
 — v. Christopher, 943
 — v. Clark, 980
 — v. Clarke, 246, 926, 969
 — v. Clayton, 923
 — r. Clements, 984
 — r. Closs, 955
 — v. Cluderay, 903
 — v. Cockburn, 984
 — r. Cohen, 940
 — r. Cooke, 899
 — v. Cornish, 941
 — r. Coulson, 954
 — v. Craddock, 988
 — v. Crawshaw, 855
 — r. Crock, 915
 — v. Cross, 983
 — v. Crook, 915
 — v. Cruse, 877, 880, 923
 — v. Cuddy, 907
 — r. Cunningham, 919
 — r. Dadson, 918, 920
 — r. Dalby, 15
 — v. Dale, 897
 — v. Darlington School, 210
 — v. Davies, 947
 — r. Davis, 917
 — v. Day, 926
 — v. Denton (Inhabitants of), 988
 — v. Derbyshire, &c. Co., 229
 — v. Deverell, 229
 — v. Dickenson, 237
 — v. Dixon, 943
 — v. Dolan, 951
 — r. Douglas, 240
 — v. Dowling, 229
 — v. Dring, 950, 952
 — v. Dulwich College (Master, &c.), 507
 — v. Eagle, 912
 — v. Eagleton, 868, 955, 956, 958
 — r. Elliot, 861, 903
 — v. Elrington, 927
 — v. Evans, 427, 939, 953
 — v. Everett, 66
 — r. Faderman, 981, 989

- Reg. v. Featherstone, 939
 — v. Feist, 859
 — v. Ferguson, 867, 949, 979, 988
 — v. Ferrall, 897
 — v. Fisher, 909, 920
 — v. Fitch, 939
 — v. Fletcher, 229, 926
 — v. Ford, 985
 — v. Fox, 236
 — v. Frampton, 937, 950
 — v. Franz, 913
 — r. Fretwell, 869, 923
 — r. Frost, 894, 976
 — v. Fry, 957
 — v. Fuidge, 975
 — v. Gamble, 228
 — v. Gardner, 939, 955, 957, 986
 — v. Garrett, 865, 958
 — v. Gaylor, 922, 923
 — v. Gibbs, 958
 — v. Godfrey, 937
 — v. Gompertz, 896
 — v. Goodbody, 939
 — v. Goode, 876
 — v. Goodenough, 960
 — v. Gorbutt, 961
 — v. Goss, 955, 957
 — v. Gray, 881, 908, 923
 — v. Green, 933, 980
 — r. Greenacre, 909
 — r. Greenhalgh, 952
 — r. Greenwood, 909, 923
 — r. Gregory, 241, 933
 — r. Griffiths, 924
 — r. Gruncell, 942, 948
 — r. Guelders, 959
 — r. Hall, 943
 — r. Handley, 942
 — v. Hanson, 926
 — r. Harden, 68, 230, 905
 — r. Hardey, 283
 — v. Harris, 901, 988, 989
 — r. Harrison, 229
 — r. Harvey, 940
 — v. Haughton (Inhabitants of), 264, 290
 — r. Hawkins, 959
 — r. Henshaw, 954
 — r. Henson, 861
 — r. Herford, 281
 — v. Hertfordshire (Justices of), 232
 — v. Hewgill, 954
 — r. Hey, 940
 — v. Heywood, 948
 — r. Higginson, 871
 — v. Higgs, 966
 — r. Hill, 866, 872, 951
 — v. Hilton, 950
 — v. Hind, 983
- Reg. v. Hobson, 950
 — v. Holloway, 942, 943
 — v. Holmes, 861
 — v. Hopkins, 228, 922
 — v. Hopley, 914
 — v. Hornsea (Inhabitants of), 904
 — v. Horsey, 913
 — v. Howell, 901, 936
 — v. Hudson, 896
 — v. Hughes, 916, 923
 — v. Hull and Selby R. C., 228
 — v. Hull Dock Co., 237
 — v. Huntley, 919
 — v. Ingham, 863
 — r. Ingram, 880
 — v. James, 676
 — v. Jarrold, 964
 — v. Jenkins, 941
 — v. Jennings, 959, 962
 — v. Jennison, 954
 — v. Jessop, 953
 — r. Jewell, 237, 979
 — r. Johnson, 937, 940, 954
 — v. Jones, 923, 934, 953
 — v. Jordan, 878
 — v. Kay, 937
 — v. Keighley, 956, 957
 — v. Kelly, 909, 920
 — v. Kenrick, 896, 955
 — v. Kerrigan, 953
 — r. Key, 980
 — v. King, 883, 896
 — r. Kirkham, 912
 — v. Lancaster and Preston R. C., 237
 — v. Langford, 901
 — r. Langley, 933
 — r. Larkin, 988
 — v. Latimer, 241
 — r. Laughner, 983
 — r. Lawes, 965
 — r. Ledbetter, 985
 — r. Lee, 953
 — r. Leeds and Bradford R. C., 7
 — v. Leonard, 952
 — v. Lesley, 919
 — v. Lester, 904
 — v. Lewis, 921
 — v. Lichfield (Town Council of), 530
 — v. Light, 717
 — r. Lister, 861
 — r. Longton Gas Co., 648
 — r. Loose, 941
 — r. Lopez, 919
 — v. Lord, 576
 — v. Lovett, 866
 — v. Lowe, 915
 — r. Luckhurst, 983
 — v. Mainwaring, 228

Reg. v. Manchester (Mayor of), 237
 — v. Manning, 880, 943
 — v. Marsh, 867, 958
 — v. Marshall, 242, 898
 — v. Martin, 926
 — v. Masters, 960
 — v. M'Athey, 952
 — v. Matthews, 880, 952
 — v. Mawgridge, 906, 912
 — v. Mears, 896
 — v. Mellor, 981
 — v. Meredith, 927
 — v. Metropolitan Board of Works, 79, 786
 — v. Michael, 865
 — v. Millard, 899
 — r. Mills, 957
 — v. Mitchell, 962
 — v. Noah, 883, 980
 — v. Mole, 943
 — v. Moore, 877, 943, 983
 — v. Morgan, 942
 — v. Morris, 936
 — v. Morrison, 935, 936
 — v. Mortlock, 897
 — r. M'Pherson, 884, 965
 — v. Nailor, 921
 — v. Neale, 882
 — v. Newman, 242, 931, 932, 933
 — v. Nottingham Journal (Proprietors of), 242
 — v. Oates, 955
 — v. O'Brien, 894
 — v. O'Connor, 895
 — v. Oldham, 863
 — v. Oxford, 874
 — v. Oxford (Mayor of), 223
 — v. Palmer, 979
 — v. Pascoe, 898
 — v. Peck, 896
 — v. Perkins, 950
 — v. Perry, 936
 — v. Peters, 943
 — v. Petrie, 904
 — v. Phelps, 918
 — v. Phillips, 878
 — v. Phillpotts, 899
 — v. Pierce, 101, 793
 — v. Pitts, 907
 — v. Plummer, 591
 — v. Pocock, 916
 — v. Poole, 942
 — v. Powell, 507, 935, 968, 969
 — v. Poynton, 939
 — v. Poyser, 941
 — v. Pratt, 940
 — v. Preston, 945, 947
 — v. Price, 918
 — v. Privett, 934, 942
 — v. Proud, 959

Reg. v. Purchase, 894
 — v. Ragg, 956, 957
 — v. Raines, 68
 — v. Read, 879, 926
 — v. Reaney, 983
 — v. Reid, 922, 962
 — v. Rice, 934
 — v. Richards, 942
 — v. Richmond, 898
 — r. Riley, 947, 984
 — v. Roberts, 868
 — v. Robins, 942
 — v. Robinson, 937, 952
 — v. Robson, 941
 — v. Rochester (Mayor of), 230
 — v. Rodway, 937
 — v. Roebuck, 884, 955, 957
 — r. Rowe, 937
 — r. Rowlands, 895, 988
 — v. Russell, 904
 — v. Saldiers' Co. (The), 147, 230, 284, 335
 — v. Samways, 934, 948
 — r. Sandon (Inhabitants of), 236
 — v. Sansome, 986
 — v. Sattler, 919
 — v. Saunders, 926
 — r. Savile, 243
 — r. Scaife, 237, 984
 — v. Scale, 236
 — v. Scott, 983
 — r. Serva, 919
 — v. Sharman, 883
 — v. Sharpe, 859
 — r. Shepherd, 861
 — v. Sherwood, 912, 955, 957
 — v. Shuttleworth, 980
 — v. Sill, 236
 — v. Simmons, 899
 — v. Simpson, 901, 962, 967
 — v. Skeen, 983
 — v. Sleeman, 983
 — r. Sleep, 863
 — v. Sloggett, 983
 — v. Smith, 869, 880, 883, 937,
 941, 951, 956
 — v. Southampton (Commissioners of), 228, 230
 — v. South Eastern R. C., 230
 — v. Stamper, 897
 — v. Stanton, 926
 — v. Stapylton, 239
 — v. Stear, 941
 — v. St. George, 676
 — v. St. Martin's (Guardians of), 236
 — v. St. Peter's, Exeter (Chapter of), 228
 — v. Stokes, 873, 988
 — v. Stone, 899

- Reg. v. Stowell, 899
 — v. Stripp, 973
 — v. Surrey (Justices of), 230
 — v. Swindall, 915
 — v. Thallman, 861
 — v. Thetford (Mayor of), 562
 — v. Thomas, 864, 939
 — v. Thompson, 896, 939, 942, 953
 — v. Thristle, 939, 940
 — v. Thurborn, 934, 943, 946, 947
 — v. Tivey, 908
 — v. Tongue, 959
 — v. Townley, 872
 — v. Train, 708, 904
 — v. Trebilcock, 941, 942
 — v. Tyler, 879, 908
 — v. Vann, 905
 — v. Vincent, 805, 937
 — v. Vodden, 987
 — v. Vyse, 871
 — v. Walls, 961
 — v. Walters, 908
 — v. Walton, 962
 — v. Wardroper, 952
 — v. Warringham, 983
 — v. Waters, 908
 — v. Watson, 861, 956
 — v. Watts, 935, 936, 960, 973, 984
 — v. Webb, 861, 989
 — v. Welch, 229, 305, 366, 959
 — v. Welman, 953, 954
 — v. West, 945
 — v. Westley, 899
 — v. White, 949
 — v. Whitehead, 915
 — v. Whitehouse, 983
 — v. Wiley, 951
 — v. Wilks, 236, 237, 979
 — v. Williams, 923, 926
 — v. Wilson, 865, 942
 — v. Woodward, 950
 — v. Woodrow, 855
 — v. Woolly, 953, 954
 — v. Worcestershire (Justices of), 229
 — v. Wortley, 547, 958
 — v. Wright, 933, 959, 960
 — v. Wynn, 941
 — v. York, 943
 Reid v. Fairbanks, 125, 405, 415, 840, 849
 — v. Teakle, 136
 Reindel v. Schell, 164, 619
 Reis v. Scottish Equitable Life Assurance Society, 189
 Remington v. Dolby, 233
 Reneaux v. Teakle, 501
 Rennie v. Beresford, 53
 — v. Clarke, 550
 Renshaw v. Bean, 778
 Reuter v. Electric Telegraph Co., 559, 562
 Revett v. Brown, 767
 Revis v. Smith, 77, 745
 Rew v. Hutchins, 195
 Rex v. Abingdon (Lord), 745
 — v. Adams, 853
 — v. Amier, 965
 — v. Archdall, 235
 — v. Bailey, 855, 967
 — v. Banks, 940
 — v. Barker, 242
 — v. Barnard, 954
 — v. Barton (Inhabitants of), 243
 — v. Beale, 898
 — v. Bear, 933
 — v. Bembridge, 898
 — v. Benfield, 241
 — v. Berchet, 240
 — v. Blake, 903
 — v. Borron, 242
 — v. Broadfoot, 7
 — v. Brooke, 242
 — v. Brooks, 936
 — v. Burdett, 240, 243, 746, 982
 — v. Burnaby, 233
 — v. Burrowes, 966
 — v. Butterworth, 970
 — v. Byron (Lord), 906, 912
 — v. Cabbage, 934, 942
 — v. Campbell, 940
 — v. Carlile, 744, 882
 — v. Carmarthen (Corporation of), 236
 — v. Carroll, 876, 964
 — v. Cheadle (Inhabitants of), 295
 — v. Chester (Bishop of), 228
 — v. Child, 901
 — v. Chillesford (Inhabitants of), 576
 — v. Chorley, 779
 — v. Cochrane (Lord), 896
 — v. Compton, 970
 — v. Conner, 869
 — v. Cook, 913
 — v. Cooke, 864
 — v. Cornwell, 968
 — v. Cowle, 249, 227
 — v. Creevey, 744, 745
 — v. Crispe, 913
 — v. Crossfield, 877
 — v. Cull, 903
 — v. Curran, 918
 — v. Davies, 966
 — v. Davis, 967
 — v. Dean, 878
 — v. De Berenger, 896
 — v. Dennison, 241
 — v. Dingley, 969
 — v. Dixon, 865
 — v. Drummond, 983
 — v. Dunnage, 860

- Rex v. Dyson, 908
 — v. Edmonds, 209
 — v. Eggington, 966
 — v. Eldershaw, 878
 — v. Esop, 855, 856
 — v. Etherington, 964
 — v. Evans, 907
 — v. Eve, 243
 — v. Farrell, 962
 — v. Farrington, 864, 866
 — v. Ferrers (Lord), 246, 906
 — v. Flannagan, 966
 — v. Ford, 918
 — v. Francis, 236
 — v. Friend, 861
 — v. Fuller, 868
 — v. Furnival, 969
 — v. Gill, 927
 — v. Gnosil, 961
 — v. Goodall, 954
 — v. Gordon (Lord George), 894
 — v. Gregory, 235
 — v. Grindley, 876
 — v. Groombridge, 879
 — v. Grove, 959
 — v. Gwilt, 242
 — v. Haines, 967
 — v. Hall, 967
 — v. Hamilton, 964
 — v. Hanson, 897
 — v. Hardy, 892
 — v. Hargrave, 913
 — v. Harland, 902, 903
 — v. Hartley, 241
 — v. Harvey, 240, 864, 867
 — v. Haswell, 241, 242
 — v. Hayward, 911
 — v. Heath, 868
 — v. Heathcote, 227
 — v. Hedges, 236, 960
 — v. Hertford (Mayor of), 235
 — v. Higgins, 867
 — v. Hindmarsh, 922
 — v. Holloway, 942
 — v. Hood, 918
 — v. Howarth, 712, 918
 — v. Howell, 941
 — v. Huggins, 907, 916
 — v. Hughes, 880
 — v. Hunt, 715, 864, 920
 — v. Hyams, 967
 — v. Isherwood, 242
 — v. Ivens, 772
 — v. Jackson, 242, 926, 940, 964
 — v. James, 901
 — v. Jenour, 241
 — v. Johnson, 930
 — v. Jollie, 241
 — v. Jolliffe, 13, 242
 — v. Jones, 855
- Rex v. Jordan, 965, 967
 — v. Keite, 914
 — v. Kennett, 901
 — v. Kidd, 913
 — v. King, 950
 — v. Lapiet, 962
 — v. Larrien, 242
 — v. Levett, 920
 — v. Levy, 940
 — v. Locost, 969
 — v. Long, 915
 — v. Lords Commissioners of the Treasury (The), 538
 — v. Lynch, 912
 — v. Lyons, 951
 — v. Macklow, 947
 — v. Mahon, 927
 — v. Manning, 920
 — v. Marsden, 986
 — v. Marshall, 242
 — v. Martin, 935, 966
 — v. Mason, 961
 — v. Mazagora, 866
 — v. Mead, 935, 936
 — v. Meade, 920, 983
 — v. Meakin, 876
 — v. M'Kay, 236
 — v. M'Kinley, 882
 — v. M'Namee, 940
 — v. Moore, 866, 942, 961
 — v. Morfitt, 942
 — v. Morris, 880
 — v. Murphy, 913
 — v. Nichol, 926
 — v. Oakley, 902
 — v. Ogden, 236
 — v. O'Meara, 241
 — v. Oneby, 907
 — v. Osborne, 241
 — v. Owen, 878, 949, 964
 — v. Paine, 966
 — v. Parker, 954
 — v. Parry, 236
 — v. Passey, 965
 — v. Patch, 942
 — v. Peach, 242
 — v. Pear, 940
 — v. Pearce, 962
 — v. Pearson, 949, 986
 — v. Peltier, 895
 — v. Perkins, 913
 — v. Phillips, 942
 — v. Philp, 866
 — v. Pinney, 901
 — v. Price, 880, 901
 — v. Pritchard, 876
 — v. Quayle, 236
 — v. Read, 677
 — v. Rees, 966
 — v. Richards, 860, 904

- Rex v. Robinson, 241, 962, 967
 — v. Rosinski, 926
 — v. Russell, 908, 967
 — v. Saddlers' Co., 151
 — v. Sainsbury, 242
 — v. Scofield, 867, 890
 — v. Scully, 920
 — v. Sedley, 861, 903
 — v. Severn and Wye R. C., 228
 — v. Seward, 896
 — v. Sharpness, 243
 — v. Sheppard, 866
 — v. Shipley, 928, 930
 — v. Simson, 948
 — v. Smith, 940, 966, 967
 — v. Smyth, 902
 — v. Somerville, 966
 — v. Spearing, 936
 — v. Spilling, 915
 — v. St. Asaph (Dean), 854, 930
 — v. St. Katherine's Dock Co., 228
 — v. Stafford (Marquis), 228
 — v. Stock, 940
 — v. Story, 954
 — v. Sutton, 879
 — v. Taylor, 964
 — v. Thomas, 876, 901, 911
 — v. Thompson, 918, 962
 — v. Tindall, 904
 — v. Tooke, 3
 — v. Turner, 965, 966
 — v. Van Butchell, 915
 — v. Vandercomb, 969
 — v. Vaughan, 867, 898
 — v. Villeneuve, 954
 — v. Wakeling, 954
 — v. Walker, 936
 — v. Walkley, 950
 — v. Wall, 907
 — v. Walsh, 948, 949
 — v. Ward, 904
 — v. Warwick (Earl), 882
 — v. Watson, 242, 928, 929, 982
 — v. Watts, 650
 — v. Webb, 915
 — v. Westbeer, 936
 — v. Wheatley, 860, 955
 — v. White, 236, 933
 — v. Whiteley, 913
 — v. Wiggs, 914
 — v. Wild, 873
 — v. Wilford, 966
 — v. Wilkes, 21, 718, 903
 — v. Williams, 235, 241, 903
 — v. Wilson, 219, 902
 — v. Withers, 243, 930
 — v. Woodburn, 863
 — v. Woodcock, 983
 — v. Woodfall, 863, 930
 — v. Woolmer, 918
 Rex v. Young, 721
 Reynell v. Lewis, 527, 567
 — v. Sprye, 291, 335, 353, 363
 Reynolds v. Bridge, 618, 620
 — v. Clarke, 125
 — v. Doyle, 443
 — v. Harris, 735
 Rhodes v. Gent, 454
 — v. Haigh, 133
 — v. Smethurst, 187
 Riccard v. Inclosure Commissioners, 194
 Rice v. Baxendale, 638
 — v. Chute, 538
 — v. Everett, 538
 — v. Shepherd, 593
 Rich v. Anderson, 233
 — v. Basterfield, 144, 691
 Richards v. Hanley, 153
 — v. James, 181
 — v. Johnston, 428, 832
 — v. London, Brighton, and South Coast R. C., 825
 — v. Rickards, 132
 — v. Rose, 83, 207, 776
 Richardson v. Chasen, 637, 848
 — v. Dunn, 349, 637
 — v. Jackson, 179
 — v. Walker, 12
 Richbell v. Alexander, 132, 585
 Richmond v. Nicholson, 145
 — v. Smith, 508
 Ricketts v. Bennett, 531
 — v. Bodenham, 234
 — v. East and West India Docks,
 &c. R. C., 657
 — v. Weaver, 133, 143
 Rickford v. Ridge, 461
 Ridgway v. Allen, 238
 — v. Wharton, 309, 374, 381, 419
 Ridley v. Plymouth, Devon, &c. Co., 566, 568
 Rigby v. Great Western R. C., 271
 — v. Hewitt, 650
 Rigway's case, 89
 Rigg v. The Earl of Lonsdale, 767
 Riggs v. Burbidge, 626
 Riley v. Baxendale, 700
 — v. Horne, 812, 813
 Rippinghall v. Lloyd, 429
 Risbourg v. Bruckner, 535, 536
 Rist v. Faux, 78, 837
 Ritchie v. Smith, 356
 — v. Van Gelder, 199
 Roach v. Wright, 237
 Roath v. Driscoll, 79
 Roberts v. Tucker, 86, 460
 Robbins v. Fennell, 320
 — v. Heath, 320
 — v. Jones, 649, 690, 705
 Robert Marys' case, 838

- Roberts v. Barker, 511
 — v. Bethell, 451, 582
 — v. Brett, 110
 — v. Great Western R. C., 647, 657
 — v. Hughes, 207
 — v. Orchard, 115
 — v. Rose, 191, 224
 — v. Smith, 251, 700
 — v. Tayler, 677
 — v. Tucker, 381, 396
Robertson v. Fleming, 669
 — v. French, 507
 — v. Jackson, 506
 — v. Norris, 585
 — v. Wait, 129, 321
Robin v. Steward, 456
Robins v. May, 475
Robinson v. Alexander, 185
 — v. Bland, 615
 — v. Cotterell, 149
 — v. Gell, 654
 — v. Gleadow, 207, 534
 — v. Hardy, 136
 — v. Harman, 620, 630
 — v. Hawksford, 480
 — v. Lenaghan, 216, 234
 — v. Marchant, 141, 749
 — v. Raley, 163
 — v. Reynolds, 487
 — v. Rudkins, 135
 — v. Rutter, 131, 140, 827
Robson v. Bennett, 460, 480
 — v. Crawley, 195
 — v. Oliver, 483
Rochdale Canal Co. v. King, 89, 784
 — v. Radcliffe, 779
Rochester (Dean, &c.) v. Pierce, 562
 — (Mayor of) v. The Queen, 227, 228
Rodgers v. Maw, 797
 — v. Nowill, 88
 — v. Parker, 93, 660, 792
Rodrigues v. Melhuish, 653
Rodway v. Lucas, 150
Rodwell v. Phillips, 393
Roe v. Birkenhead, Lancashire, and Cheshire R. C., 692, 823
 — v. Galliera, 757
Roffey v. Greenwell, 475
 — v. Henderson, 126, 431, 789
Rogers v. Brentou, 15, 18
 — v. Chilton, 486
 — v. Clifton, 738
 — v. Dutt, 643, 845
 — v. Hadley, 265, 335, 374
 — v. Hunt, 150
 — v. Langford, 481
 — v. Macnamara, 672, 751
 — v. Spence, 571, 592, 848
Rogers v. Taylor, 17, 82, 84, 775
Rohde v. Thwaites, 403
Roles v. Davis, 199
Rolin v. Steward, 87, 207, 462, 614, 749, 844, 848
Rolls v. Rock, 140
Rooth v. Wilson, 801, 827
Roots v. Dormer (Lord), 420
Roper v. Holland, 129
Roret v. Lewis, 729
Roscorla v. Thomas, 326, 327
Rose v. Groves, 98
 — v. Wilson, 713
Rosewarne v. Billing, 359
Rosewell v. Prior, 144
Ross v. Gandell, 148
 — v. Green, 164
 — v. Hill, 811
 — v. Hunter, 969
 — v. Norman, 729
Rothschild v. Currie, 469
Rotton v. Inglis, 486
Rouch v. Great Western R. C., 846
Routledge v. Grant, 302
 — v. Hislop, 262
Rowberry v. Morgan, 150, 156
Rowbotham v. Wilson, 81, 774
Rowe v. Tipper, 465, 466
Rowlands v. Samuel, 849
Rowley v. Horne, 813
Ruck v. Williams, 646, 650
Rucker v. Cammeyer, 422
Ruckmaboye v. Lulloobhoy Mottichund, 183, 469
Rudder v. Price, 118
Ruddock v. Marsh, 590
Rugg v. Minett, 402
Rumball v. Ball, 477
Rumsey v. Webb, 735
Rundle v. Little, 842
Rushton v. Aspinall, 448
Russel v. Langstaffe, 478
Russell v. Briant, 144
 — v. Corne, 837
 — v. Da Bandeira, 113
 — v. Devon (Men of), 99
 — v. Nicolopulo, 350
 — v. Phillips, 474
 — v. Smyth, 120
 — v. Thornton, 303, 337, 345, 636
Russian Steam Navigation Co. v. Silva, 513
Rust v. Nottidge, 170, 305
Rutland (Duke of) v. Bagshawe, 232
Ruttinger v. Temple, 332
Ryalls v. Reg., 104, 987
Ryan v. Clarke, 139, 643, 766
 — v. Sama, 584

S.

- Sack v. Ford*, 683
Sadler v. Henlock, 649, 690
 — v. Leigh, 131
 — v. Nixon, 547
Sainsbury v. Matthews, 393
Sainter v. Ferguson, 363, 365
Salisbury (Marquis of) v. Gladstone, 12, 15
Salkeld v. Johnson, 6
Salmon v. Watson, 395
 — v. Webb, 375
Sampson v. Hoddinott, 90, 783
Samuel v. Green, 457, 460
 — v. Payne, 715
Sanders v. St. Neot's Union, 562
 — v. Vanzeller, 495
Sanderson v. Griffiths, 586
Sandilands, Ex parte, 245
 — v. Marsh, 548
Sandon v. Jarvis, 728
Sands v. Childs, 692
 — v. Clarke, 111, 478
Sanquer v. London and South Western R. C., 849
Santos v. Illidge, 361
Sard v. Rhodes, 178
Sargent v. Wedlake, 290
Sarl v. Bourdillon, 419, 506
Saul v. Jones, 454
Saunders v. Bate, 199
 — v. Mills, 744
 — v. Topp, 410, 411
 — v. Wakefield, 380
Saunderson v. Collman, 454
 — v. Jackson, 381, 419
 — v. Piper, 441, 500
Savignac v. Roome, 116
Saville v. Sweeny, 131, 141, 586
Sayer v. Wagstaff, 178
Sayles v. Blane, 310
Sayre v. Rochford (The Earl of), 718
Scales v. Cheese, 147, 747
Scarpellini v. Acheson, 132, 585
Scattergood v. Sylvester, 101, 125, 792
Scheibel v. Fairbain, 728
Schloss v. Heriot, 627, 679
Schlumberger v. Lister, 190
Schmalz v. Avery, 541
Schreger v. Carden, 179
Schuster v. McKellar, 683
 — v. Wheelwright, 59, 165
Scope v. Paddison, 164
Scorell v. Boxall, 393, 403
Soothorn v. South Staffordshire R. C., 823
Sootson v. Pegg, 315, 329
Scott v. Avery, 44, 358
 — v. Dickson, 343, 830
 — v. Eastern Counties R. C., 408
 — v. Littledale, 189
 — v. Liverpool (Corporation of), 44
 — v. Lord Seymour, 45
 — v. Pilkington, 46
 — v. Scott, 688
 — v. Shepherd, 95, 124, 647, 674, 678
 — v. Zygomala, 193, 195
Scottish North Eastern R. C. v. Stewart, 566
Seare v. Prentice, 711
Searle v. Lindsay, 700, 703
Sears v. Lyons, 843
Seaton v. Benedict, 589
Sebag v. Abithol, 453, 454
Sedgwick v. Daniell, 546, 547
Sedman v. Walker, 95, 144
Seeger v. Duthie, 110, 273
Seignior v. Wolmer, 131
Selby v. Bardons, 163
 — v. East Anglian R. C., 437
 — v. Eden, 454
Semayne's case, 644
Semple's case, 942
Senior v. Metropolitan R. C., 97
 — v. Ward, 679
Sentance v. Poole, 600
Serres v. Dodd, 142
Servante v. James, 130
Sewell v. Jones, 67
Seymour v. Greenwood, 689
 — v. Maddox, 662
Shack v. Anthony, 544
Shackell v. Rosier, 355, 357
 — v. West, 806
Shadwell v. Shadwell, 194, 316
Shannon v. Shannon, 126
Sharland v. Leifchild, 163
Sharpe v. Brice, 617
Sharples v. Rickard, 470
Sharrod v. London and North Western R. C., 125, 657, 684, 686
Shattock v. Carden, 264
Shaw v. Beck, 200
 — v. Chairitie, 712
 — v. Holland, 622
 — v. Stenton, 84
 — v. Thackray, 599
 — v. York and North Midland R. C., 822
Shedden v. Patrick, 264
Sheehy v. Professional Life Ass. Co., 152, 162, 170, 264, 265 Shelton v. Livius, 376, 421
 — v. Springett, 332
Shepherd v. Hills, 267, 656
 — v. Johnson, 624

- Shepherd v. Pybus, 348
 — v. Shepherd, 166
 Sheridan v. New Quay Co., 400
 Sherriff v. Wilks, 555
 Sherrington v. Yates, 132, 585
 Sherwin v. Swindall, 725
 Shiels v. Great Northern R. C., 72
 Shillibeer v. Glyn, 802
 Ship Money (case of), 36
 Shore v. Wilson, 506, 512
 Short v. Kalloway, 637
 — v. M'Carthy, 187
 — v. Stone, 111
 Shortridge v. Young, 238
 Shower v. Pilck, 432, 847
 Shrewsbury Peerage case, 6
 Shrewsbury's (Earl) case, 520
 Shrewsbury and Birmingham R. C. v.
 London and North Western R. C., 361, 566
 Shubrick v. Salmond, 292
 Shute v. Robins, 479
 Siboni v. Kirkman, 137, 296, 605
 Sibree v. Tripp, 178, 429, 430, 475
 Sibthorp v. Brunel, 273
 Sickens v. Irving, 528
 Siddon v. East, 43
 Sidney's (Algernon) case, 893
 Sievwright v. Archibald, 419, 423
 Siggers v. Evans, 267, 432
 Sigourney v. Lloyd, 457
 Sikes v. Wild, 630, 631
 Silk v. Osborne, 570
 Sill v. Reg., 988
 Sim v. Edmands, 170
 Simmonds v. Humble, 416
 Simmons v. Edwards, 585
 — v. Heseltine, 630
 — v. Lillystone, 98, 164, 794, 845
 — v. Lillywhite, 125
 — v. Millingen, 717
 — v. Swift, 401, 403, 406
 Simon v. Motivos, 420
 Simond v. Braddon, 348
 Simons v. Great Western R. C., 819, 821
 — v. Patchett, 349, 542, 630,
 639
 Simpkins v. Potheary, 460
 Simpson v. Accidental Death Insurance
 Co., 832
 — v. Bloss, 358
 — v. Egginton, 557, 697
 — v. Fogo, 264
 — v. Howden (Lord), 284, 361
 — v. Lamb, 181, 363, 671
 — v. Margitson, 441, 505
 — v. Robinson, 739
 — v. Savage, 769
 Simpson v. Westminster Palace Hotel
 Co., 566
 Sims v. Bond, 536, 553
 — v. Brittain, 553
 — v. Brutton, 186, 552
 — v. Marryat, 807
 Sinclair v. Eldred, 728
 Singleton v. Eastern Counties R. C., 680
 Siordet v. Kucynski, 201
 Six Carpenters' case, 773, 774
 Skeate v. Beale, 602
 Skinner v. Stocks, 553
 — v. The London, Brighton, and
 South Coast R. C., 681
 Skipp v. Eastern Counties R. C., 698,
 699, 703
 Slade's case, 118, 119
 Slater v. Baker, 711
 Sleath v. Wilson, 689
 Sleddon v. Cruikshank, 395
 Sleigh v. Sleigh, 443, 489
 Slim v. Great Northern R. C., 822, 823
 Slocombe v. Lyall, 765
 Sloper v. Cotterell, 189, 586
 Slowman v. Dutton, 749
 Smalley v. Kerfoot, 796
 Smallpiece v. Dawes, 588
 Smart v. Harding, 390
 — v. Jones, 431
 — v. Morton, 84
 — v. Sanders, 319
 — v. West Ham Union, 558
 Smeed v. Foord, 638
 Smeeton v. Collier, 57
 Smethurst v. Mitchell, 535
 Smith v. Backwell, 167, 168
 — v. Birmingham Gas Co. (The), 144
 — v. Bond, 149
 — v. Braine, 488
 — v. Bromley, 357, 362
 — v. Cartwright, 561
 — v. Chance, 403
 — v. Chester, 455
 — v. Cuff, 362
 — v. Dearlove, 809
 — v. Douglas, 214
 — v. Edge, 70
 — v. Harnor, 70
 — v. Hartley, 192
 — v. Harwich (Mayor of), 271
 — v. Hixon, 836
 — v. Howell, 637
 — v. Hull Glass Co., 135, 565, 566
 — v. Jeffries, 500, 511
 — v. Johnson, 455
 — v. Kay, 342
 — v. Kenrick, 76, 84

- Smith v. Lindo, 355, 356, 423
 — v. Lloyd, 183
 — v. London and Brighton R. C., 817
 — v. Lovell, 168
 — v. Manners, 110, 178
 — v. Marsack, 168, 455, 525, 588, 627
 — v. Mawhood, 356
 — v. M'Guire, 455, 528, 622
 — v. Milles, 139, 643, 766, 797
 — v. Monteith, 495
 — v. Mundy, 791
 — v. Neale, 318, 381, 896, 806
 — v. O'Brien's case, 990
 — v. Peat, 628
 — v. Plomer, 586
 — v. Roche, 332
 — v. Salzmann, 286, 362
 — v. Scott, 292
 — v. Shirley, 715
 — v. Simmonds, 133
 — v. Sleap, 140
 — v. Smith, 487
 — v. Surman, 390, 408
 — v. Tett, 762
 — v. Thompson, 272, 516, 629
 — v. Thorne, 186, 330
 — v. Troup, 531
 — v. Trowsdale, 173, 298, 300
 — v. Vertue, 451
 — v. Wilson, 504, 506, 512
 — v. Winter, 119, 178
 — v. Wood, 232
 — v. Woodfine, 614
 — v. Wright, 220
 Smout v. Ilbery, 539, 588
 Smurthwait v. Wilkins, 497
 Smyth, Ex parte, 232
 — v. Anderson, 533, 534, 535
 Snead v. Watkins, 772
 Snell v. Finch, 255
 Snelling v. Lord Huntingfield, 395
 Snow v. Franklin, 297
 Snowdon v. Davis, 539
 Solarte v. Palmer, 466
 Solly v. Forbes, 279
 — v. Neish, 173
 Solomon v. Graham, 191
 — v. Lawson, 748
 — v. The Vintners' Co., 83, 84
 Soltau v. De Held, 708, 709, 710
 Solvency Mutual Guarantee Co. v. Froane, 561
 Somerville v. Hawkins, 738, 739, 740
 Sommerville v. Mirehouse, 75, 721
 Souch v. Strawbridge, 395, 396
 Southampton Bridge Co. v. Southampton Local Board, 650
 Southampton (Lord) v. Brown, 267
 Southcoote v. Stanley, 652, 661
 South Eastern R. C. v. Warton, 290
 Southey v. Denny, 749
 South Yorkshire R. C. v. Great Northern R. C., 566
 Sowerby v. Butcher, 543
 Sparrow v. Carruthers, 584
 — v. Paris, 620
 — v. Reed, 216
 Spartali v. Benecke, 510
 Speight v. Oliveira, 837
 Spence v. Healey, 298, 300
 Spencer's case, 129, 273, 274
 Spicer v. Cooper, 506
 Spindler v. Grellett, 478
 Spittle v. Lavender, 543
 Spooner v. Juddow, 170
 Spreadbury v. Chapman, 589
 Sprott v. Powell, 538
 Sprye v. Porter, 363
 Spurrier v. Allen, 537
 St. Losky v. Green, 199
 St. Pancras Vestry v. Batterbury, 106, 656
 Stables v. Eley, 688
 Stafford (Mayor of) v. Till, 559, 562
 Stagg v. Elliot, 455
 Stainbank v. Fenning, 532
 — v. Shepard, 532
 Stallard v. Great Western R. C., 824
 Stammers v. Yearsley, 716
 Stamp v. Sweetland, 115
 Stancliffe v. Clarke, 201
 Standewick v. Hopkins, 207
 Stannard v. Ullithorne, 169
 Stansfeld v. Hellawell, 617
 Stanton v. Collier, 571, 632
 Startup v. Cortazzi, 622
 Stavers v. Curling, 273
 Stead v. Anderson, 845
 — v. Dawber, 426
 Steadman v. Hockley, 121
 Stebbing v. Spicer, 474
 Stedman v. Smith, 767
 Steel v. The South Eastern R. C., 675, 835
 Steele v. Hoe, 333
 — v. Mart, 269
 — v. Williams, 539
 Steer v. Crowley, 615
 Steiglitz v. Egginton, 553
 Stephens v. Elwall, 692, 793
 — v. Myers, 676
 — v. Reynolds, 451, 504, 551
 Stephenson v. Raine, 66, 67
 Sterry v. Clifton, 355, 363
 Steuart v. Jones, 66
 Stevens v. Gomley, 353
 — v. Jeacocke, 106, 656, 661
 — v. The Midland Counties R. C., 730

- Stevens v. Underwood, 495
 Stevenson v. Hardie, 588
 — v. Newnham, 834, 727, 795
 — v. Thorne, 153
 Steward v. Gromett, 77, 733, 734
 — v. Waugh, 154
 Stewart v. Cauty, 622
 — v. Collins, 168
 — v. Fry, 134
 — v. London and North Western R. C., 824
 Stikeman v. Dawson, 582
 Stiles v. Nokes, 743
 Stindt v. Roberts, 207
 Stockdale v. Onwhyn, 370
 Stockport Waterworks Co. v. Potter, 775
 Stocks v. Booth, 767
 Stoessiger v. South Eastern R. C., 439, 814
 Stokoe v. Singers, 779
 Stone v. Jackson, 649
 — v. Marsh, 101
 — v. Rogers, 119
 Stonehouse v. Elliott, 717
 — v. Gent, 531
 Stones v. Dowler, 303
 Storer v. Gordon, 129, 267
 Storm v. Stirling, 441, 474
 Story, Ex parte, 147, 232, 233
 — v. Finnis, 179
 — v. New York and Harlem R. C., 625
 — v. Richardson, 553
 Stourbridge Canal Co. v. Dudley (Earl of), 775
 Stowel v. Lord Zouch, 6
 Stowell v. Robinson, 425
 Straker v. Graham, 207, 479
 Street v. Blay, 87, 626
 Streeter v. Horlock, 325, 333
 Strickland v. Turner, 319
 — v. Ward, 722
 Strithorpe v. Græme, 183
 Strong v. Foster, 375
 Stronghill v. Buck, 290
 Strother v. Barr, 770
 Stroud, Re, 511, 517
 Stroyan v. Knowles, 82, 84
 Strutt v. Farlar, 621
 Stuart v. Jones, 59
 — v. Wilkins, 347
 Stubbs v. Twynam, 134
 Stubs v. Stubs, 134
 Stucley v. Bailey, 350
 Sturgis v. Darell, 184
 — v. Joy, 229
 Sturt v. Blagg, 747
 Sturton v. Richardson, 123
 Styles v. Wardle, 269
 Submarine Telegraph Co. v. Dickson, 45, 650
 Suffield v. Brown, 83, 772
 Sully v. Freen, 487
 Summers v. Solomon, 525, 530
 Sunbolf v. Alford, 673
 Sunderland Marine Insurance Co. v. Kearney, 119
 Suse v. Pompe, 509, 639
 Sussex Peerage case, 6, 983
 Sutcliffe v. Booth, 784
 Sutherland v. Murray, 734
 — v. Pratt, 172, 178
 Sutton v. Bishop, 213
 — v. Buck, 140
 Sutton's case, 121
 Swain v. Sheppard, 403
 Swan, Ex parte, 528, 832
 — v. North British Australasian Co., 462, 528, 832
 Swann v. Phillips, 389
 Swanwick v. Sothorn, 406
 Swatman v. Ambler, 129, 306
 Sweet v. Lee, 381, 382
 Sweeting v. Darthez, 515
 — v. Pearce, 517, 528
 Swinerton v. Stafford (Marquis), 208
 Swinfen v. Lord Chelmsford, 106, 531
 — v. Swinfen, 53, 531
 Swithin v. Vincent, 144
 Sydserff v. Reg., 896
 Syers v. Jonas, 509
 Sykes v. Dixon, 305
 — v. Giles, 131, 421
 Symonds v. Atkinson, 793
 — v. Dimsdale, 216, 237
 — v. Lloyd, 509
 Syms v. Chaplin, 815
 Syred v. Carruthers, 805, 806

T.

- Taafe v. Downes, 104
 Tabart v. Tipper, 743
 Taff Vale R. C. v. Nixon, 122
 Tallis v. Tallis, 363, 366, 367, 368, 369
 Tancred v. Allgood, 792, 793
 Tanistry, Le case de, 15, 16
 Tanner v. Moore, 302
 — v. Smart, 186
 Taplin v. Florence, 162, 422, 431
 Tarbuck v. Bispham, 598
 Tarleton v. Shingler, 492
 Tarling v. Baxter, 401
 Tarrant v. Baker, 115
 — v. Webb, 700
 Tasker v. Shepherd, 139
 Tassel v. Cooper, 459, 536

- Tattan v. Great Western R. C., 71,
 663, 825
 Tattersall v. Fearnley, 199
 — v. Parkinson, 429
 Tatton v. Wade, 93, 389, 672
 Taunton v. Costar, 765
 Taverner v. Little, 688
 Taylor d. Atkyns v. Horde, 183, 754
 — v. Audyman, 61
 — v. Ashton, 340
 — v. Best, 428
 — v. Bullen, 348
 — v. Burgess, 189, 375
 — v. Caldwell, 112, 137, 296, 605, 613, 624, 803
 — v. Cole, 220
 — v. Croker, 455
 — v. Crowland Gas and Coke Co., 135, 356, 567
 — v. Hawkins, 738, 739
 — v. Hilary, 428
 — v. Laird, 629
 — v. Neri, 93
 — v. Nesfield, 115, 193, 723, 724
 — v. Turnbull, 204
 — v. Wakefield, 415
 Taylor's Estate, Re, 296
 Teague v. Hubbard, 546
 Teall v. Autey, 391
 Tear v. Freebody, 794
 Tebbutt v. Holt, 723
 Tedd v. Douglas, 207
 Temperley v. Willett, 194
 Tempest v. Fitzgerald, 410
 — v. Kilner, 131, 407, 435, 497, 622
 Temple v. Pullen, 452
 Templeman v. Haydon, 217, 681
 Tetley v. Easton, 195
 Thackoorseydass v. Dhondmull, 361
 Thame v. Boast, 429
 Thames Haven Dock and R. C. v. Brymer, 561
 Thames Ironworks Co. v. Royal Mail
 Steam Packet Co., 561
 Tharpe v. Stallwood, 604, 774, 797
 Tharratt v. Trevor, 225
 Thatcher v. England, 323
 Theobald v. Railway Passengers' Assurance Co., 637
 Thöl v. Leask, 195
 Thom v. Bigland, 337, 338
 — v. Chinnock, 158
 Thomas v. Bishop, 439
 — v. Churton, 103, 744
 — v. Cross, 62, 181
 — v. Edwards, 537
 — v. Fredricks, 431
 — v. Hudson, 718
 — v. Shillibeer, 555
 — v. Stephenson, 115
 Thomas v. Thomas, 129, 316, 318, 780
 Thomlinson's case, 245
 Thompson, In re, 226
 — v. Bell, 437, 459, 532
 — v. Davenport, 533, 534, 535
 — v. Dominy, 495
 — v. Gibson, 144
 — v. Gillespy, 627
 — v. Gordon, 227
 — v. Hopper, 849
 — v. Ingham, 67, 233
 — v. Jackson, 178
 — v. Knowles, 170
 — v. Lacy, 772, 808
 — v. North Eastern R. C., 650, 680
 — v. Percival, 555
 — v. Pettit, 840, 849
 — v. Robson, 194
 — v. Ross, 73, 837
 — v. Sheppard, 179, 678
 — v. Wood, 848
 Thomson v. Mitchell, 688
 Thornborrow v. Whitacre, 621
 Thorne v. Deas, 671
 — v. Smith, 486
 — v. Taw Vale R. C., 708
 — v. Tilbury, 806
 Thornton v. Illingworth, 582
 — v. Jenyns, 307, 324, 333
 Thorogood v. Bryan, 705
 Thoroughgood's case, 270
 Thorpe v. Thorpe, 324
 Thoys v. Hobbs, 846
 Throckmerton v. Tracy, 520
 Thurborn's case, 945
 Thursby v. Plant, 129
 Thurtell v. Beaumont, 208
 Tickle v. Brown, 780
 Tidman v. Ainslie, 746
 Tighe v. Cooper, 177, 735
 Tilbury v. Brown, 204
 Timmins v. Gibbins, 483
 Timothy v. Simpson, 712, 713
 Tindal, Ex parte, 137
 — v. Brown, 446
 Tindall v. Bell, 849
 — v. Taylor, 495
 Tinkler v. Hilder, 239
 Tinkler's case, 983
 Tinniswood v. Pattison, 233, 718
 Tipper v. Bicknell, 313, 324
 Tippetts v. Heane, 186
 Tobacco Pipe Makers' Co. v. Loder, 120, 185
 Tobin v. Reg., 248
 Toby v. Hancock, 149
 Todd v. Emly, 191, 550
 — v. Flight, 144, 690
 — v. Jeffery, 54

- Toft v. Rayner, 232
 Tomkins v. Willshear, 122
 Tomkinson v. Straight, 409
 Tomlinson v. Gell, 385
 Tommey v. White, 48
 Toms v. Wilson, 842
 Toogood v. Spyring, 737, 739, 740
 Toomey v. London, Brighton and South Coast R. C., 646, 679
 Topham v. Dent, 572
 — v. Morecroft, 585
 Toppin v. Lomas, 391
 Torino (Banco di) v. Hamberger, 199
 Torrence v. Gibbins, 837
 Toussaint v. Martinant, 314, 547
 Touteng v. Hubbard, 111
 Towne v. Lewis, 125, 794
 — v. London and Limerick Steam Ship Co., 162
 Towns v. Mead, 185
 Townsend v. Thorpe, 232
 — v. Wathen, 726
 Tozer v. Child, 85
 — v. Mashford, 749
 Tracey v. M'Arlton, 136
 Tredwen v. Bourne, 531
 — v. Holman, 44
 Trent v. Hunt, 168, 255
 Trickett v. Tomlinson, 831
 Trimbe v. Vignier, 46
 Tripp v. Armitage, 403
 Trueman v. Loder, 424, 504, 517
 Truscott v. Latour, 193
 — v. Merchant Tailors' Co., 19, 778
 Tucker, Ex parte, 232, 233
 — v. Chaplin, 705
 — v. Newman, 770
 — v. Tucker, 536
 Tuff v. Warman, 679
 Tugman v. Hopkins, 586
 Tulley v. Reed, 677
 Tullidge v. Wade, 843
 Tummons v. Ogle, 127
 Tunnicliffe v. Moss, 750
 — v. Tedd, 909
 Tupling v. Ward, 195
 Tupper v. Foulkes, 268
 Turk v. Syne, 194, 195
 Turley v. Bates, 402, 403
 Turner Re, 266
 — v. Ambler, 732
 — v. Bates, 402, 403
 — v. Berry, 62
 — v. Cameron's Coalbrook Steam Coal Co., 766
 — v. Davies, 213, 311
 — v. Evans, 368
 — v. Ford, 798
 — v. Hardcastle, 842
 — v. Hardey, 607
 Turner v. Harvey, 377
 — v. Hawkins, 116
 — v. Hayden, 454
 — v. Jones, 206
 — v. Kendal (Mayor of), 238, 537
 — v. Mason, 331
 — v. Stones, 481
 — v. Liverpool Docks (Trustees of), 122, 496
 Turney v. Dodwell, 185, 186, 486
 Turnley v. Macgregor, 389
 Tuson v. Evans, 737
 Tweddle v. Atkinson, 129, 316, 319
 Twemlow v. Askey, 573
 Twopenny v. Young, 279, 280
 Twyman v. Knowles, 89, 842
 Twyne's case, 292
 Tyerman v. Smith, 831
 Tyler v. Jones, 133
 Tyrrell v. Woolley, 550
 Tyson v. Smith, 11, 14, 15
- U.
- Udell v. Atherton, 338, 341, 540, 835
 Underhill v. Devereux, 204
 — v. Ellicombe, 661
 Underwood v. Hewson, 675, 927
 Upton v. Townend, 220
 U. S. v. M'Glue, 877
- V.
- Valpy v. Gibson, 398, 793
 — v. Green, 304
 — v. Oakeley, 571, 622
 — v. Sanders, 795
 Van Baggen v. Baines, 505
 Van Casteel v. Booker, 496
 Vandenburg v. Truax, 95
 Van der Donckt v. Thellusson, 478
 Vane v. Cobbold, 343
 Vanquelin v. Bouard, 265
 Van Sandau, Ex parte, 719
 — v. Turner, 719
 Van Toll v. Chapman, 123, 834
 — v. South Eastern R. C., 824
 Van Wart v. Woolley, 87
 Varney v. Hickman, 173
 Vassie v. Delaval, 207
 Vaughan v. Hancock, 391
 — v. Matthews, 604
 — v. Taff Vale R. C., 95, 647, 681
 Vaux v. Sheffer, 679
 Veitch v. Russell, 326
 Veley v. Burder, 228
 Venables v. East India Co., 134, 608
 Vere v. Ashby, 548, 555
 Vernon v. Smith, 274

Vertue v. East Anglian R. C., 437
 Vicars v. Wilcocks, 93, 94
 Victors v. Davies, 308
 Vine v. Saunders, 144
 Violet v. Sympson, 734
 Virtue v. East Anglian R. C., 129
 Vivian v. Champion, 627
 Vlierboom v. Chapman, 532
 Vollans v. Fletcher, 303
 Von Hoff v. Hoorsten, 195
 Vorley v. Barrett, 189
 Vose v. Lancashire and Yorkshire R.
 C., 699

W.

Wade v. Simeon, 653
 Wade's case, 178
 Wadsworth v. Bentley, 749
 — v. Spain (Queen), 67, 233
 Wagner v. Imbrie, 191
 Wain v. Bailey, 494
 — v. Warlters, 380, 384
 Wait v. Baker, 400, 496
 Waite v. Gale, 605
 — v. Jones, 355
 — v. North Eastern R. C., 680
 Waithman v. Wakefield, 592
 Wake v. Harrop, 190, 376
 — v. Tinkler, 536
 Wakefield v. Newbon, 602
 Wakeley v. Teesdale, 154, 156
 Wakeman v. Robinson, 681
 Wakley v. Cooke, 245, 735
 — v. Healey, 735
 Walker v. Bartlett, 251, 391
 — v. British Guarantee Association (The), 809
 — v. Broadhurst, 616
 — v. Butler, 186
 — v. Clyde, 126, 791
 — v. Goe, 93, 650, 849
 — v. Hatton, 637
 — v. Hill, 386
 — v. Hunter, 596, 694
 — v. M'Donald, 457
 — v. Medland, 153
 — v. Moore, 630
 — v. Nussey, 417
 — v. Olding, 720
 — v. Perkins, 295, 370
 — v. York and North Midland R.
 C., 820, 822
 Wallace v. Breeds, 402
 Waller v. Drakeford, 126, 142, 423, 585, 831
 — v. South Eastern R. C., 703
 Walley v. McConnell, 719

Wallis v. Day, 295, 367
 — v. Littell, 374
 — v. Swinburne, 311
 Walmsley v. Cooper, 637
 — v. Milne, 394, 789
 Walsh v. Ionides, 158
 — v. Southworth, 178
 Walshe v. Provan, 64, 553
 Walstab v. Spottiswoode, 344, 567, 568
 Walter v. Selfe, 710
 — v. Smith, 806
 Walton v. Mascall, 453
 Wankford v. Wankford, 603, 607
 Wanstall v. Pooley, 93
 Wanstead Local Board of Health, app.,
 Hill, resp., 775
 Warburton v. Loveland d. Ivie, 4
 — v. Parke, 779
 Ward (Lord) v. Lumley, 284, 490
 — v. Andrews, 140
 — v. Audland, 145
 — v. Byrne, 367
 — v. Evans, 472
 — v. Lloyd, 362
 — v. Londresborough (Lord), 346,
 567
 — v. Lowndes, 123
 — v. Ward, 779
 Warlow v. Harrison, 407, 420
 Warman v. Halahan, 71
 Warner, app., Riddiford, resp., 711
 Warrington v. Early, 491
 — v. Leake, 150
 Warwick v. Bruce, 393, 574
 — v. Foulkes, 716, 843
 — v. Rogers, 460
 Waterfall v. Penistone, 394
 Waterford, &c. R. C. (The) v. Pidcock, 497
 Waterlow v. Dobson, 72
 Waterpark (Lord) v. Fennell, 502
 Waters v. Handley, 61
 — v. Towers, 409, 547, 623, 624,
 635, 636
 Watkins v. Clark, 181
 — v. Great Northern R. C., 106, 661
 — v. Lee, 728
 — v. Packman, 208
 Watson v. Bodell, 719
 — v. Charlemont (Earl), 289
 — v. Lane, 427
 — v. Macquire, 139, 140, 797
 — v. M'Lean, 840
 — v. Russell, 321, 487
 — v. Spratley, 391, 407
 — v. Swan, 129
 — v. Whitmore, 732
 Watson's case, 245

- Watts v. Ainsworth, 382
 — v. Friend, 393
 — v. Porter, 834, 841
 — v. Rees, 181, 605
 — v. Salter, 846, 667
 — v. Shuttleworth, 189
Waugh v. Carver, 545
 — v. Middleton, 5, 7
Way v. Hearne, 848
Waylett v. Windham, 72
Weatherston v. Hawkins, 738
Weaver v. Bush, 677
 — v. Lloyd, 735
 — v. Ward, 177, 675, 678
Webb v. Adkins, 603
 — v. Beavan, 219
 — v. Bird, 75, 779
 — v. Cowdell, 605
 — v. Fox, 143, 791
 — v. Hill, 728
 — v. Inwards, 461
 — v. Plummer, 511
 — v. Portland Manufacturing Co., 91, 92
 — v. Rhodes, 134
 — v. Spicer, 113
Webber v. Tivill, 184
Webster v. Kirk, 185
 — v. Spenser, 134, 605
 — v. Watts, 166, 713
Weedon v. Woodbridge, 168
Weeks v. Goode, 795
Weems v. Mathieson, 700
Weeton v. Woodcock, 770
Welchman v. Sturgis, 142, 604, 774
Welden v. Bridgewater, 767
Weller v. Baker, 95, 141, 142
Wellock v. Constantine, 101, 677
Wells v. Hopkins, 487
 — v. Horton, 395
 — v. Nurse, 587
 — v. Watkins, 89
Welsh v. Hall, 767
Wenman v. Ash, 583, 740, 743, 746
Wennall v. Adney, 312, 329
Wentworth v. Cock, 296, 605
Werner v. Humphreys, 133, 605
West v. Baxendale, 714
 — v. Blakeway, 298
 — v. Jackson, 324
 — v. Nibbs, 125, 773, 796
 — v. West, 308
 — v. Wheeler, 588, 589
Westaway v. Frost, 734
Westhead v. Sproson, 306, 333
Westlake v. Adams, 316
West London R. C. v. London and North Western R. C., 129, 272
Westoby v. Day, 20, 569
Weston v. Beeman, 730
Westropp v. Solomon, 312, 484, 580, 807
Wetherall v. Jones, 355, 359
Wetherell v. Julius, 571, 572
Whalley v. Pepper, 728
Wharton v. Mackenzie, 580
Wheateley v. Crowter, 195
Wheatley v. Boyd, 306
 — v. Patrick, 688
Wheeler v. Bavidge, 167, 510
 — v. Horne, 123
 — v. Montefiore, 766
 — v. Whiting, 713
Wheulton v. Hardisty, 345
Whelpdale's case, 490
Whistler v. Forster, 459, 460
Whitcomb v. Whiting, 185
White v. Bass, 772, 780
 — v. Beeton, 273
 — v. Binstead, 238
 — v. Bluett, 318
 — v. Cohen, 710
 — v. Crisp, 650
 — v. Cuyler, 279, 543
 — v. Garden, 334, 953
 — v. Great Western R. C., 822
 — v. Greenish, 830
 — v. Humphrey, 670, 801
 — v. Merritt, 671
 — v. Morris, 115, 139, 797
 — v. Mullett, 126, 790
 — v. North, 475
 — v. Phillips, 650, 660
 — v. Procter, 421
 — v. Spettigue, 101
 — v. Watts, 238
 — v. Wilks, 402
Whitehead v. Lord, 531
 — v. Parkes, 784
 — v. Tuckett, 529
 — v. Walker, 449, 464
Whitehouse v. Fellowes, 186
Whiteley v. Adams, 736, 740
Whitfield v. South Eastern R. C., 686
Whitmore v. Gilmour, 573
Whittle v. Frankland, 305
Whitwell v. Perrin, 532
Whitworth v. Hall, 733
Wickens v. Steel, 199
Wickham v. Gatrill, 102
 — v. Lee, 64
Widders, app., Gorton, resp., 492
Wieler v. Schilizzi, 349
Wiggett v. Fox, 699
Wigglesworth v. Dallison, 15, 509
Wigmore v. Jay, 698, 703, 706
Wilbraham v. Snow, 798
Wilby v. Elston, 750
Wild v. Holt, 849
Wilde v. Gibson, 339

- Wilde v. Sheridan, 45, 46, 72, 470
 — v. Waters, 126
 Wilders v. Stevens, 627
 Wiles v. Woodward, 290, 794
 Wilkes, In re, 240
 — v. Hungerford Market Co., 97, 694
 — v. Wood, 718, 843
 Wilkin v. Manning, 362
 — v. Reed, 59, 199, 671
 Wilkins v. Bromhead, 404
 Wilkinson v. Anglo-Californian, &c.
 Co., 129, 270, 497
 — v. Candlish, 532
 — v. Fairrie, 662
 — v. Grant, 321
 — v. Howell, 728
 — v. Johnson, 483
 — v. Kirby, 263, 755, 762, 765
 v. Sharland, 167, 212
 Wilks v. Back, 432, 543
 Willand, Ex parte, 58
 Willans v. Taylor, 731
 Willey v. Parratt, 303
 Williams v. Archer, 122, 616
 — v. Beaumont, 141
 — v. Burgess, 415
 — v. Burrell, 137, 275
 — v. Byrnes, 323, 380, 419
 — v. Carwardine, 323
 — v. Chambers, 599, 569
 — v. Clough, 700
 — v. Crosswell, 714
 — v. Currie, 617, 843, 844
 — v. Deacon, 532
 — v. Evans, 208
 — v. Everett, 321
 — v. Germain, 456
 — v. Gibbon, 154
 — v. Glenster, 678
 — v. Great Western R. C., 207, 824
 — v. Griffith, 186
 — v. Holland, 125
 — v. James, 486, 487
 — v. Jones, 396
 — v. Lake, 380
 — v. Millington, 131, 140, 422, 826, 827
 — v. Moor, 575, 576, 581
 — v. Morris, 431
 — v. Mostyn, 89
 — v. Pigott, 567
 — v. Reg., 883
 — v. Richards, 679
 — v. Roberts, 213
 — v. Smith, 7, 719, 720
 — v. Swansea Harbour Trustees,
 347
 Williams v. Wheeler 46, 409
 Williams's case, 100
 Williamson v. Barton, 534
 Willins v. Smith, 186, 582
 Willis, Re, 387
 — v. Palmer, 532
 Willison v. Pattison, 602
 Willoughby v. Horridge, 811
 Wills v. Murray, 296
 — v. Nurse, 132
 Wilmer v. White, 146
 Wilmot v. Williams, 465
 Wilmshurst v. Bowker, 403, 496
 Wilsford v. Wood, 555
 Wilson v. Barker, 692
 — v. Barthrop, 537
 — v. Bevan, 515
 — v. Braddyll, 168, 429
 — v. Brett, 801, 803
 — v. Cookson, 254
 — v. Curzon (Viscount), 546, 567
 — v. Cutting, 548
 — v. Hart, 534
 — v. Hicks, 614
 — v. Knubley, 296
 — v. Lancashire and Yorkshire R.
 C., 635
 — v. Lewis, 555
 — v. Mackreth, 767
 — v. Smyth, 592
 — v. Swabey, 465
 — v. Tunnan, 694
 — v. Willes, 16
 — v. Wilson, 48, 362
 — v. Zulueta, 535, 541
 Wilson's (Carus) case, 247
 Wilton v. Atlantic Royal Mail Steam
 Co., 824
 Wiltshear v. Cotterell, 394, 770
 Winch v. Keeley, 569
 — v. Winch, 66
 Wing v. Mill, 312
 Winship v. Hudspeth, 779, 780
 Winter v. Bartholomew, 238
 Winterbottom v. Wright, 668, 669, 699
 Winterburn v. Brooks, 677
 Wintle v. Crowther, 549
 Wise v. Great Western R. C., 822
 Witham v. Lewis, 209
 Witherley v. Regent's Canal Co., 649, 680, 705
 Withers v. Parker, 209, 694
 Withington v. Herring, 455
 Wodehouse v. Farebrother, 189
 Wolverhampton Waterwork v. Hawks-ford, 195
 Wontner v. Shairp, 289, 303, 343, 346, 567
 Wood v. Bell, 134, 405, 622

- Wood v. Copper Miners' Co, 189, 271, 305
 v. Curling, 165, 661
 — v. Dwarries, 189
 — v. Fenwick, 576
 — v. Lane, 711
 — v. Leadbitter, 431, 677
 — v. Morewood, 849
 — v. Mytton, 473, 775
 — v. Perry, 63, 72
 — v. Rowcliffe, 240
 — v. Waud, 89, 784, 785
 Woodbridge v. Spooner, 374
 Woodcock v. Houldsworth, 467
 Woodford v. Whiteley, 493
 Woodgate v. Potts, 588
 Woodhams v. Newman, 62, 65
 Woodin v. Burford, 537
 Wooding v. Oxley, 712
 Woodland v. Fear, 462, 483
 Woods v. Finnis, 125, 664
 — v. Russell, 406
 — v. Thiedemann, 460
 Woodward v. Walton, 837
 — v. Watts, 5
 Woolf v. The City Steamboat Co., 163, 568
 Woollen v. Wright, 695
 Wootton v. Dawkins, 647
 — v. Steffenoni, 132
 Workman v. Great Northern R. C., 841
 Worth v. Terrington, 678, 711
 Worthington v. Sudlow, 428
 — v. Warrington, 630
 — v. Wigley, 192
 Wray v. Milestone, 547
 Wright v. Colls, 319
 v. Crookes, 343, 694
 — v. Dannah, 422
 — v. Fairfield, 131, 571
 — v. Greenwood, 7
 — v. Howard, 783
 — v. Leonard, 582, 587, 831
 — v. Mills, 205
 — v. Morrey, 194
 — v. Reg., 883
 — v. Stavert, 391
 — v. Wilson, 711
 — v. Woodgate, 738
 Wrightup v. Chamberlain, 637
 Wyatt v. Harrison, 82
 — v. White, 732
 Wyld v. Hopkins, 185, 527, 567
 — v. Pickford, 817
 Wynn v. Shropshire Union, 129
- X.
- Xenos v. Wickham, 268, 269
- Y.
- Yates v. Dunster, 627
 — v. Eastwood, 119, 125
 — v. Freckleton, 320
 — v. Nash, 440, 474
 Yearsley v. Heane, 719
 Yeatman v. Dempsey, 653
 York (Dean of), Re, 232
 York, Newcastle, and Berwick R. C. r.
 Crisp, 820, 822
 York's case, 878
 Yorston v. Fether, 604, 774
 Youlton v. Hall, 149
 Young v. Beck, 192
 — v. Billiter, 209, 334
 — v. Brompton Waterworks, 217
 — v. Cole, 483
 — v. Davis, 99, 106
 — v. Grote, 452, 462
 — v. Hichens, 139
 — v. Hughes, 437
 — v. Macrae, 751
 — v. Pridd, 835
 — v. Raincock, 290
 — v. Spencer, 770
 — v. Tummins, 365
 — v. Waud, 846
- Z.
- Zohrab v. Smith, 233
 Zouch v. Parsons, 577
 Zwilchenbart v. Henderson, 195
 Zychlinsky v. Malthy, 195

COMMENTARIES
ON THE COMMON LAW.

COMMENTARIES
ON THE COMMON LAW.

BOOK I.

LEGAL RIGHTS AND REMEDIES.

IN this Book an inquiry has been instituted into the nature of Legal Rights and Remedies, that is, of rights which may be investigated, and remedies which may be applied, in Courts of Law. During the prosecution of this inquiry, I have, indeed, diverged occasionally from the direct road, in order that some collateral matters of interest and importance might be,—if not considered with the attention which they deserve,—at all events, suggested for further examination, and partially explained.

I have commenced with a definition and a brief statement of the component elements of Common Law. I have then proceeded to sketch out the history of our Superior Courts of law, to define the actual boundaries of their jurisdiction, and to offer some remarks touching their constitution, and generally as to the mode in which business is conducted in them. With a view to rendering this part of my subject more complete, I have in a separate section briefly indicated the extent of jurisdiction exercised by the County Courts.

In the Third Chapter of this Book I have examined at some length the characteristics of actionable wrongs or injuries; I have explained their nature, and shown how a line may be drawn, separating apparent and primâ facie merely from real rights of action. I have, moreover, pointed out various classes of cases in which our law, influenced by weighty considerations, declines to give redress, even though positive damage has been caused to an individual by the tortious act or negligence of another. It may be well to add, with reference to this part of my subject, that a classification of rights of action, more minute and philosophical than has been here thought necessary, will be attempted, when I come to treat, in the Second and Third Books of this work, of Contracts and of Torts respectively. I conceive it to be essential, however, at the very outset of Commentaries, however elementary, upon our Common Law, to give some idea of the nature of a legal injury and of a right of action, and to afford some insight into the principles which affect it.

The Fourth Chapter of this Book has been devoted to a concise view of the Proceedings in an Action at Law, from the first issuing of the writ of summons down to final judgment and execution thereupon, together with a notice of the mode of Procedure in the County Courts; and in the Fifth and concluding Chapter, I have inquired concerning the nature and applicability of those Extraordinary Remedies which are sometimes afforded by our law in lieu of, concurrently with, or in addition to, Redress by Action.

CHAPTER I.

COMMON LAW—WHAT—OF WHAT ELEMENTS COMPOSED.

MUNICIPAL LAW in its highest and widest sense comprises all those rules, written or traditionary, which have been laid down for the guidance of the community, and to which its members must, if they would avoid penal consequences or civil liabilities, more or less stringently devised, necessarily conform.

Municipal law

The word "law," indeed, ex vi termini, implies a sanction (a). Laws must be imposed by some adequate power (b), and in civilised communities, at all events, they are in theory certain and determinate, for misera est servitus ubi jus est vagum aut incertum (c). According to a well-known definition, municipal law is, in such communities, "a rule of civil conduct prescribed by the supreme power in a state commanding what is right, and prohibiting what is wrong" (d).

The term "common law" will be used in this volume to signify that particular portion of municipal law which is administered by the common law tribunals. It is composed of two elements or materials, the lex scripta, and the lex non scripta.

Common law

The lex scripta comprises the statute law of the land, the duty of interpreting which devolves upon the Judges (e), who

Lex scripta—how construed

(a) "Law" is defined as "anything laid down, sc. as a rule of action; a rule imposed, fixed, or established, decreed or determined:" Richardson Dict. ad voc.

(b) Quod quisque populus ipse sibi jus constituit, id ipsius proprium civitatis est, vocaturque jus civile, quasi jus proprium ipsius civitatis. I. 1. 2. 1.; Dig. 1. 1. 9.

(c) 4 Inst. 246.

(d) 1 Bla. Com. 44; 1 Kent, Com. 10th ed. 502.

(e) See per Eyre, C. J., R. v. Tooke, 25 How. St. Tr. 726.

are guided in such interpretation by various recognised rules or canons of construction, of which the primary, or, as it has been called, the "golden" rule, has been thus expressed— "to give to all the words of an Act of Parliament their plain and ordinary meaning, unless such a construction leads to absurdity or injustice" (f); and thus, "to give to the words used by the legislature their plain and natural meaning, unless it is manifest, from the general scope and intention of the statute, injustice and absurdity would result from so construing them" (g).

The rule, says Parke, B., in Perry v. Skinner (h), by which the Court is to be guided in construing Acts of Parliament, is to look at the precise words used, and to construe them in their ordinary sense, unless this construction would lead to any absurdity or manifest injustice; and if it should, so to vary and modify the words as to avoid that which it certainly could not have been the intention of the legislature to effect (i).

So, in Miller v. Salomons (k), we find the same learned Judge observing, that "words which are plain enough in their ordinary sense may, when they would involve any absurdity, or inconsistency, or repugnance to the clear intention of the legislature, to be collected from the whole of the Act or Acts in pari materia to be construed with it, or other legitimate grounds of interpretation, be modified or altered so as to avoid that absurdity, inconsistency, or repugnance, but no further;" for then the Court may predicate that the words never could have been used by the framers of (f) Per Jervis, C. J., Castrigue v. Page, 13 C. B. 463-4; Judgm., Macdougall v. Paterson, 11 C. B. 769.

(g) Per Jervis, C. J., Mattison v. Hart, 14 C. B. 385; per Burton, J., Warburton v. Loveland d. Ivie, 1 Huds. & Br. 648; per Maule, J., Gether v. Capper, 15 C. B. 706. See Eastern Counties R. Co. v. Marriage, 9 H. L. Ca. 32; S. C., 2 H. & N. 625.

(h) 2 M. & W. 476.

(i) Adopted per Williams, J., Midland R. Co., app., Pye, resp., 10 C. B. N. S., 194.

(k) 7 Exch. 546.

the law in their ordinary sense, and the strict grammatical construction will bend to the obvious intention of the legislature (l).

It would seem, however, according to some authorities, that the application of this rule must be confined to cases where the "incongruity" or "absurdity" in question arises manifestly within the particular enactment (m), ex. gr., so as to render it nugatory or self-contradictory; and that the Court cannot construe plain and unambiguous words in other than their literal and ordinary sense, merely because, in their opinion, such a construction may lead to "an absurdity," or even to "manifest injustice" (n), though it is admitted that "words may be modified or varied where their import is doubtful or obscure" (o).

The embarrassment often experienced in applying the "golden" rule for the interpretation of Acts of Parliament results, of course, from the difficulty of keeping within the line which, under our administrative system, separates the office of declaring the law from that of making it.

In theory, the distinction just adverted to is clear and well marked; in practice, it is difficult to observe,—judicis est jus dicere, non jus dare. It is the province of the statesman, not of the lawyer, to discuss, and of the legislature to determine, what is best for the public good, and to provide for it by proper enactments. It is the province of the Judge to expound the law only: the written, from the statutes; the unwritten law, from the decisions of his predecessors and of the existing Courts, or from text writers of acknowledged authority, and upon the principles to be clearly deduced from them by sound

(l) See also per Pollock, C. B., Waugh v. Middleton, 8 Exch. 357; per Maule, J., Arnold v. Ridge, 13 C. B. 763; per Martin, B., Att.-Gen. v. Hallett, 2 H. & N. 374; per Lord Campbell, C. J., 8 E. & B. 875-6.

(m) See vide per Jervis, C. J., Cas- trique v. Page, supra.

(n) See Judgm., Abley v. Dale, 11 C. B. 390, with which acc. per Crompton, J., Woodward v. Watts, 2 E. & B. 458. See also per Lord Denman, C. J., Green v. Wood, 7 Q. B. 185.

(o) Judgm., Abley v. Dale, supra.

reason and just inference; it is not, however, the duty of a Judge to speculate upon what may be most in his opinion for the advantage of the community (p).

With a view to ascertaining the intention of the legislature in framing the provisions of a statute, our Judges are guided, as before said, by recognised rules, some of the more important of which are specified in Heydon's case (q), to the following purport and effect:—that in all statutes, be they penal or beneficial, restricting or enlarging of the common law, four things are to be considered, viz. 1. What was the common law before the making of the Act (r); 2. What was the mischief and defect against which the common law did not provide; 3. What remedy the Parliament hath resolved and applied to cure the disease of the commonwealth; and, 4. The true reason of the remedy (s). And, having satisfied themselves with reference to these various points, it is the duty of the Judges to make such construction as shall “suppress the mischief and advance the remedy (t), putting down all subtle inventions and evasions for continuance of the mischief, et

(p) Per Parke, B., Egerton v. Earl Brownlow, 4 H. L. Ca. 123.

(q) 3 Rep. 7; Chudleigh's case, 1 Rep. 122 b. 123 a. These rules are explained and illustrated in Dwarr. Stats., 2nd ed., 563 et seq. See also Miller v. Salomons, 7 Exch. 522; Judgm., Salkeld v. Johnson, 2 Exch. 273; per Coleridge, J., 11 Q. B. 579.

(r) “If Acts of Parliament were after the old fashion, penned, &c., by such only as knew what the common law was before the making of any Act of Parliament concerning that matter, as also how far forth former Statutes had provided remedies for former mischiefs and defects discovered by experience; then should very few questions in law arise, and the learned should not so often and so much perplex their heads to make atonement and peace by construction of law between insensible and disagreeing words, sentences, and provisoes as they now do.”—2 Rep. Pref. ix. x.; per Pollock, C. B., 2 Exch. 332.

(s) The Court will therefore, when necessary, look at the preamble of the Act. Per Tindal, C. J., Sussex Peerage case, 11 C. & F. 143; per Sir J. Nicholl, Brett v. Brett, 3 Addams, 210; Stovel v. Lord Zouch, Plowd. 369; per Buller, J., Crespigny v. Wittenoom, 4 T. R. 790. The title of an Act has occasionally been referred to as aiding in its construction; but “it is certainly no part of the law, and, in strictness, ought not to be taken into consideration at all.” Judgm., 2 Exch. 283. See also The Shrewsbury Peerage case, 7 H. L. Ca. 1; 16 How. St. Tr. 743 n.

(t) See per Parke, B., 2 Exch. 273.

pro privato commodo; and adding force and life to the cure and remedy, according to the true intent of the makers of the Act, pro bono publico."

To the rules just stated, one other, by reason of its great practical importance, may here properly be added, viz. that a statute must in general, on principles of obvious convenience and justice, be construed as prospective, and not as retrospective, in its operation; it must be considered as intended to regulate the future conduct of persons, and not to apply to past transactions. But even this elementary rule is one of construction only, and will yield to the intention of the legislature if sufficiently expressed (u).

The lex non scripta is an unwritten law, comprising those principles, usages, and rules of conduct, applicable to the government and security of person and property which do not depend for their authority upon any existing express and positive declaration of the will of the legislature. It comprises, and mainly consists of, "customs," whether general or particular, and has been often called the "customary law" (x). These customs date from a remote antiquity (y), and are in some instances believed to have originated from Acts of the legislature of which no trace or record now remains. It has,

Lex non scripta.

(u) Per Parke, B., Moon v. Durden, 2 Exch. 22, 43; Williams v. Smith, 4 H. & N. 559, 563, 564; per Erle, C. J., Midland R. C., app., Pye, resp., 10 C. B., N. S. 191; Jackson v. Woolley, 8 E. & B. 778, 784; per Rolfe, B., Att.-Gen. v. Marquis of Hertford, 3 Exch. 687; Pettamberdass v. Thackoorseydass, 7 Moo. P. C. Cas. 239; Waugh v. Middleton, 8 Exch. 352; Reg. v. Leeds and Bradford R. C., 18 Q. B. 343; per Ld. Campbell, C. J., Leary v. Patrick, 15 Q. B. 271; Leg. Max., 4th ed., pp. 34 et seq. The General Rules relating to the Construction of Statutes are collected in Dwarr.

Stats., 2nd ed., chap. 9; Leg. Max., 4th ed., Index, tit. "Statutes;" Wright v. Greenroyd, 1 B. & S. 758.

(x) See 1 Bla. Com. 68. "A general immemorial usage not inconsistent with any statute, especially if it be the result of evident necessity, and withal tendeth to the public safety, is, I apprehend, part of the Common Law of England." Per Foster, J., R. v. Broadfoot, 18 How. St. Tr. 1331.

(y) "The law and custom of England is the inheritance of the subject, which he cannot be deprived of without his assent in Parliament." 12 Rep. 29.

therefore, been justly said, that the lex non scripta consists of those rules and maxims concerning the persons and property of men which have obtained by the tacit assent and usage of the inhabitants of this country, and have the same force and authority as Acts of Parliament; the only difference between the two being, that the consent and approbation of the people with respect to the one is signified by their immemorial use and practice, whereas their approbation of, and consent to, the other, is declared by Parliament, to whose enactments every member of the community is considered as virtually a party (z).

Although, in all probability, it is only partially true, that our customary or unwritten law flows from the express act or sanction of the supreme power, yet it may be curious to remark that something very similar, or, at all events, analogous to such a mode of derivation, has actually occurred almost within living memory in the United States of America, where it is an established doctrine, that English statutes passed prior to the Declaration of Independence, or, at all events, to the emigration of the forefathers of the American people, so far as applicable to their institutions, must be taken to constitute a part of the common law of that realm (a). This proposition has been broadly laid down by some of the most eminent judges of the United States, and will serve to illustrate the manner in which the statute law, or lex scripta, of a country, though ceasing to be operative as such, may become blended with, or even form an integral and ascertainable portion of, its unwritten law.

General customs.

Customs, as already intimated (b), may be either general or particular. As referable to general customs, properly so called, Sir W. Blackstone specifies (c) that rule of law which settles the course in which lands descend by inheritance;

(z) 1 Reeves, Hist. Eng. Law, 2nd ed. 2; see 1 Bla. Com. 64, 68. and note thereto. (b) Ante, p. 7.

(a) 1 Kent, Com., 10th ed., 535, (c) 1 Com. 68.

that rule which prescribes the solemnities and obligation (d) of contracts ; which declares the principles applicable to the expounding of wills, deeds, and Acts of Parliament ; which indicates the respective remedies for civil injuries. Doctrines such as these, he remarks, are not set down in any written statute or ordinance, but depend merely upon immemorial usage for their support.

It is here to be observed, on the one hand, that the lex non scripta might, in some imaginable cases, control the statute law, as if that law were against common right and reason, or repugnant or impossible to be performed (e). And, on the other hand, it is noticeable that our customary law will, in many cases, nullify the acts and contracts of individuals, and will even interfere with the dispositions which they may make of their private property. "A man," for instance, "cannot alter the usual line of descent by a creation of his own" (f). He cannot give an estate in fee simple to a person and his heirs on the maternal side, because the law has already said how a fee simple estate shall descend. In this case, the law does not allow of a capricious disposition of property, and still less will it sanction the attaching of any condition to property which is against the public good. Thus, a case occurs in the old books of a man making a condition that his devisee should not cultivate his arable land ; which is void, because it is against the prosperity of the country, and for no other reason (f). But although the law of England will not allow a man to indulge in every fanciful disposition of his property, it will allow him to put his estates in settlement for the purpose of providing for those who are to come after him,

(d) As to the obligatory force of contracts, post, Book II., Chap. 1.

(e) Dr. Bonham's case, 8 Rep. 118 a; per Best, J., Forbes v. Cochrane, 2 B. & C. 471; Treat. Eq. 2; Arg., Gor- ham v. Bp. of Exeter, 5 Exch. 671; Dwarr. Stats., 2nd ed., 480-4.

(f) Per Lord St. Leonards, Egerton v. Earl Brownlow, 4 H. L. Ca. 241.

and, in doing so, it gives him all the rational power of disposition which he can reasonably desire. Even upon the power of disposition by settlement, it will, however, impose such limits and restraints as are required by considerations having reference to the public good: the principles which govern its decisions upon this subject being embodied in the maxim, Sic utere tuo ut alienum non lædas (which applies to the public in at least as full force as to individuals), and in the equally expressive maxims, Nihil quod est inconveniens est licitum, and Salus reipublicæ suprema lex (g).

Conspicuous amongst general customs stands the lex mercatoria, or law merchant (h), a branch of law deduced from the practice and customs of merchants, aided and regulated by a long series of judicial decisions, as also by the express enactments of the legislature; which has, especially of late years, exercised much vigilance in aiding fair commercial enterprise on the one hand, and in checking undue speculation on the other.

To evidence of mercantile custom, which, when established and shown to prevail generally (i), becomes part of our common law, much weight is attached in courts of justice; and, in illustration of this remark, a reference to Bellamy v. Marjoribanks (k), which involved an important question as to the precise effect of crossing a cheque, may suffice. At the trial of that case (as appears from the Report), some of the most eminent bankers, and the most experienced bankers' clerks in London, were examined as to the existence of a particular custom alleged by the plaintiff in his declaration, and denied by the defendant; and the Court, in adjudicating upon a motion for a new trial on the ground, inter alia, that

(g) See per Lord Truro, 4 H. L. Ca. 195.

(h) As to which see Ram, Sci. Leg. Judgment, Chap. 8; 1 Bla. Com. 273; 8 C. B. 967, note (a).

(i) As to customs or usages of trade prevalent in particular places, post, p. 19.

(k) 7 Exch. 389. As to the existing law with reference to crossed cheques, post, Book II., Chap. 3.

the verdict was against evidence, admitted that a custom such as that contended for would be binding and obligatory upon bankers, if proved; and that it might be proved "by a long, well-known, acknowledged, and universal usage and practice amongst bankers to act in accordance with it."

So, in Brandao v. Barnett (l), Lord Campbell remarks, that "the general lien of bankers is part of the law merchant, and is to be judicially noticed, like the negotiability of bills of exchange, or the days of grace allowed for their payment. When a general usage has been judicially ascertained and established, it becomes part of the law merchant, which courts of justice are bound to know and recognise. Such has been the invariable understanding and practice in Westminster Hall for a great many years; there is no decision or dictum to the contrary; and justice could not be administered if evidence were to be given toties quoties to support such usages, an issue being joined upon them in each particular case" (m).

A particular or local custom may be defined to be an usage which "has obtained the force of law, and is, in truth, the binding law within a particular district, or at a particular place, of the persons and things which it concerns" (n). A custom, therefore, in so far as it extends, supersedes the general law (o).

Such, according to Blackstone (p), is the custom of gavel-kind in Kent and some other parts of the kingdom, which ordains, among other things, that not the eldest son only of the father shall succeed to his inheritance, but all the sons

(l) 3 C. B. 519, 530; S. C., 12 C. & F. 787; per Best, C. J., 5 Bing. 164.

(m) Cited per Byles, J., Hare v. Henty, 10 C. B., N. S., 85.

(n) Judgm., Tyson v. Smith, 9 Ad. & E. 421; per Yates, J., Millar v. Taylor, 2 Burr. 2368.

In Cox v. Mayor of London, 2 H.

& C. 401; S. C., 1 Id. 338, 357, a custom of the City of London was held to be void in law, as violating "every principle of justice and every rational rule of jurisprudence and procedure."

(o) Judgm., Lord Falmouth v. George, 5 Bing. 293.

(p) 1 Com. 74-5.

alike; and that, though the ancestor be attainted and hanged, yet the heir shall succeed to his estate without any escheat to the lord. Such is the custom which prevails in divers ancient boroughs, and therefore called borough-English, that the youngest son shall inherit the estate in preference to all his elder brothers (q). Such is the custom in other boroughs, that a widow shall be entitled for her dower to all her husband's lands, whereas at the common law she shall be endowed of one-third part only. Such also are the special and particular customs of manors, of which every one has more or less, and which bind all the copyhold and customary tenants who hold of the said manors (r).

Now all these, and similar special customs, being deviations from the general law of the land, are good only by virtue of long-continued usage and of that consent, on the part of such portions of the community as are more immediately affected by them, which is to be implied therefrom.

Custom—whence it dates, &c.

1. A custom, therefore, says Sir W. Blackstone, in order that it may be legal and binding, must "have been used so long that the memory of man runneth not to the contrary; so that, if any one can shew the beginning of it, it is no good custom. For which reason no custom can prevail against an express Act of Parliament, since the statute itself is a proof of a time when such a custom did not exist" (s).

Now, legal memory dates from the 1st year of the reign of Richard I.; but it must not, therefore, be supposed that it was, even prior to the stat. 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 71, in all cases necessary to produce evidence extending over so long a period, of the existence of a particular custom in dispute. From proof of the enjoyment of a custom for a much less period, ex. gr., for so short a time as twenty years, a jury has, in the (q) See Muggleton v. Barnett (in Error), 2 H. & N. 653; S. C., 1 Id. 282.

(r) See per Cockburn, C. J., Muggleton v. Barnett, 2 H. & N. 681. As to manorial customs, see Richardson v. Walker, 2 B. & C. 827; per Lord Cranworth, Marquis of Salisbury v. Gladstone, 9 H. L. Ca. 701.

(s) 1 Bla. Com. 76.

absence of evidence to the contrary, been held justified in finding that the custom had existed immemorially (t). And now, where a claim “may be lawfully made” at the common law, by custom, prescription (u), or grant, to any right of common, or other profit or benefit to be taken and enjoyed from or upon “the land of any person,” or “to any way or other easement, or to any watercourse, or the use of any water to be enjoyed or derived” upon or from the land of any person, reference will have to be made to the 1st and 2nd sects. (x) respectively of the statute just mentioned, which was passed with a view to “shortening the time of prescription in certain cases.”

2. A custom must have been continued; because “any interruption would cause a temporary ceasing: the revival gives it a new beginning, which will be within time of memory, and, thereupon, the custom will be void. But this must be understood with regard to an interruption of the right; for an interruption of the possession only for ten or twenty years will not destroy the custom. As, if the inhabitants of a parish have a customary right of watering their cattle at a certain pool, the custom is not destroyed though they do not use it for ten years, it only becomes more difficult to prove; but if the right be anyhow discontinued for a day, the custom is quite at an end” (y).

Custom must have been continued;

Where a custom has been thus “continued” in the sense above assigned to that term, it, in fact, comes at last to an

(t) Jenkins v. Harvey, 1 Cr. M. & B. 877; cited Master Pilots, &c., of Newcastle-upon-Tyne v. Bradley, 21 L. J., Q. B., 196; S. C., 2 E. & B. 428 n.; R. v. Joliffe, 2 B. & C. 54. See also Duke of Beaufort v. Smith, 4 Exch. 450.

(u) The distinction between custom and prescription is this—that custom is a local usage not annexed to any person, whereas prescription is merely a personal usage, as that S. and his ancestors, or those whose estate he has, have used time out of mind to enjoy a particular advantage or privilege: 2 Bla. Com. 263; per Cur., Mayor of Lynn Regis v. Taylor, 3 Lev. 160.

(x) Upon which see Mr. Shelford's notes in his ed. (7th) of the Real Prop. Stats., pp. 2, 6.

(y) 1 Bla. Com. 77.

agreement which has been evidenced by such repeated acts of assent on both sides from the earliest times, beginning before the time of memory, and continuing down to our own times, that it has become the law of the particular place wherein it has been shown to obtain (z).

—and peaceably enjoyed.

3. A valid custom must have been peaceable, and acquiesced in, not subject to contention and dispute; for, as such a custom derives its force and authority from common consent, the fact of its having been immemorially disputed, either at law or otherwise, would be a proof that such consent was wanting (a).

Custom
must be reasonable.

4. A custom must be reasonable, or, rather, it must not be unreasonable (b). “A custom,” therefore, “may be good, though the particular reason of it cannot be assigned, for it sufficeth, if no good legal reason can be assigned against it. Thus, a custom in a parish that no man shall put his beast into the common till the 3rd of October would be good; and yet it would be hard to shew the reason why that day in particular is fixed upon, rather than the day before or after. But a custom that no cattle shall be put in till the lord of the manor has first put in his is unreasonable, and, therefore, bad: for, peradventure, the lord will never put in his, and then the tenants will lose all their profits” (c).

A custom, however, is not unreasonable, merely because it is contrary to a particular maxim or rule of the common law, for Consuetudo ex certâ causâ rationabili usitata privatâ communem legem, as the customs of gavelkind and borough-English, which are directly contrary to the law of descent, or, again, the custom of Kent, which is contrary to the law of escheat (d). Nor is a custom unreasonable because it is prejudicial to the interests of a private man, if it be for the

(z) Judgm., Tyson v. Smüh, 9 Ad. & ner, 2 Bulstr. 195.
E. 425.

(c) 1 Bla. Com. 77.

(a) 1 Bla. Com. 77.

(d) Ante, p. 11.

(b) 1 Bla. Com. 77; Hiz v. Gardi- benefit of the commonwealth: as the custom to turn the plough upon the headland of another, in favour of husbandry; or to dry nets on the land of another, in favour of fishing, and for the benefit of navigation (e); or to take water from his well (f).

It is not an unreasonable custom that a tenant (g), who is bound to use a farm in a good and tenantable manner, and according to the rules of good husbandry, shall be at liberty, on quitting the farm, to charge his landlord with a portion of the expenses of draining land which requires draining according to good husbandry, though the drainage be done without his landlord's knowledge or consent (h). And a custom that a tenant shall have the waygoing crop after the expiration of his term, is reasonable and good. "It is just; for he who sows ought to reap; and it is for the benefit and encouragement of agriculture. It is, indeed, against the general rule of law concerning emblements, which are not allowed to tenants who know when their term is to cease, because it is held to be their fault or folly to have sown when they knew their interest would expire before they could reap. But the custom of a particular place may rectify what otherwise would be imprudence or folly" (i).

In The Marquis of Salisbury v. Gladstone (k), a custom was held not unreasonable for the copyholders of inheritance in a manor without licence from the lord to dig and get

(e) Judgm., Tyson v. Smith, 9 Ad. & E. 421; Lord Falmouth v. George, 5 Bing. 286.

(f) Race v. Ward, 4 E. & B. 702.

(g) As to customs of the country affecting the relation of landlord and tenant, post, p. 19.

(h) Mousley v. Ludlam, 21 L. J., Q. B., 64; Dalby v. Hirst, 1 B. & B. 224. With reference to the reasonableness of particular alleged customs, see also Mounsey v. Ismay, 1 H. & C. 729; Hilton v. Earl Granville, 5 Q.

B. 701; commented on and followed in Blackett v. Bradley, 1 B. & S. 940, 954-5; Rogers v. Brenton, 10 Q. B. 26; Elwood v. Bullock, 6 Q. B. 383; Gibbs v. Flight, 3 C. B. 581; Reg. v. Dalby, 3 Q. B. 602; Le Case de Tanistry, Davys, 28 b, §4.

(i) Wigglesworth v. Dallison, Doug. 201.

(k) 6 H. & N. 123; S. C., 9 H. L. Ca. 692; followed in Blewett, app., Jenkins, resp., 12 C. B., N. S., 16, 80.

clay without limit in and from their copyhold tenements, for the purpose of making bricks to be sold off the manor.

Custom—
must be certain.

5. A custom ought to be certain. And, therefore, a custom that lands shall descend to the most worthy of the owner's blood, is void; for how shall this worth be determined? But a custom that lands shall descend to the next male of the blood exclusive of females, is certain, and therefore good. So a custom to pay twopence an acre in lieu of tithes is good; but to pay sometimes twopence, and sometimes threepence, as the occupier of the land pleases, is bad, for its uncertainty (l).

On the ground of uncertainty the following custom was held bad: viz., for all the customary tenants of a manor, having gardens, parcels of their tenements, to dig, take, and carry away from a waste within the manor, "for the purpose of making and repairing grassplots in the gardens, parcels of the same respectively, for the improvement thereof, such turf covered with grass fit for the pasture of cattle, as hath been fit and proper to be so used and spent every year, at all times in the year, as often and in such quantity as occasion" may require (m). "A custom," said Lord Ellenborough, C. J., with reference to this case, "however ancient, must not be indefinite and uncertain; and here it is not defined what sort of improvement the custom extends to." And he added,—"there is nothing to restrain the tenants from taking the whole of the turbary of the common, and destroying the pasture altogether. A custom of this description ought to have some limit; but here there is no limitation to the custom as laid but caprice and fancy" (n). But a custom to pay a year's improved value by way of fine on a copyhold

(l) 1 Bla. Com. 78; Le case de Ta-nistry, Davys, 28 b, 35; Blewett v. Tregonning, 3 Ad. & E. 554.

(m) Wilson v. Willes, 7 East, 121.

(n) See also Clayton v. Corby, 5 Q.

B. 415; Bailey v. Stephens, 12 C. B., N. S., 91; Constable v. Nicholson, 14 C. B., N. S., 230; Douglas, app., Earl Dysart, resp., 10 C. B., N. S., 688.

estate might be good, though the value is a thing uncertain ; for it may at any time be ascertained, and the maxim of law is, Id certum est quod certum reddi potest (o).

In Broadbent v. Wilks (p), we have an instance of a custom being held void on the two-fold ground that it was unreasonable and uncertain. There the custom claimed (so far as it need here be stated) was, that when and as often as the lord of the manor, or his tenants of the collieries or coal-mines, sunk pits in certain freehold lands within and parcel of the said manor, for the working of the said pits, and to get coals thereout, the lord and his tenants might cast the earth, stones, &c., coming therefrom, in heaps "on the land near to such pits," "there to remain and continue" at "his and their will and pleasure :" in giving judgment with reference to the validity of this custom, Willes, C. J., remarks, "The objection that this custom is only beneficial to the lord, and greatly prejudicial to the tenants, is, we think, of no weight ; for it might have a reasonable commencement, notwithstanding, for the lord might take less for the land on the account of this disadvantage to his tenant. But the true objections to this custom are, that it is uncertain, and, likewise, unreasonable, as it may deprive the tenant of the whole benefit of the land ; and it cannot be presumed that the tenant at first would come into such an agreement." He also remarks, that every custom "must be certain, for two plain reasons : 1st, because, if it be not certain, it cannot be proved to have been time out of mind, for how can anything be said to have been time out of mind when it is not certain what it is ? 2ndly, it must be certain, because every custom presupposes a grant, and if a grant be not certain it is void." The Chief Justice then observes that, tested by the foregoing rule, the custom above set out is bad, as being neither certain nor intelligible; especially by reason of the expression "near to" used in setting out the custom, to which expression no precise and definite meaning can be attached.

(o) 1 Bla. Com. 78 ; Leg. Max., 4th ed., 599.

(p) Willes, 360 ; S. C. (in Error),

1 Wils. 63 ; 2 Str. 122i ; with which compare Rogers v. Taylor, 1 H. & N. 706 ; Carlton v. Lovering, Id. 784.

After thus pointing out the uncertainty of the alleged custom, Willes, C. J., proceeds to say, that all customs must be reasonable, otherwise they are void, "and certainly no custom can be more unreasonable than the present. It may deprive the tenant of the whole profits of the land; for the lord or his tenants may dig coal-pits when and as often as they please; and may, in such case, lay their coals, &c., on any part of the tenant's land, if near to such coal-pits, at what time of the year they please, and may let them lie there as long as they please;" so that "they may be laid on the tenant's land and continue there for ever, though it may be more convenient for the lord to bring them on his own land; which is absurd and unreasonable."

Customs
must be compulsory;

6. A custom, though established by consent, must, when established, be compulsory, and not left to the option of every man, whether he will use it or no; therefore, a custom that all the inhabitants of a particular district shall be rated toward the maintenance of a bridge will be good; but a custom that every man is to contribute thereto at his own pleasure, is idle and absurd, and indeed no custom at all (q).

—and consistent.

7. Customs must be consistent with each other—one custom cannot be set up in opposition to another; for, if both are really customs, then they are of equal antiquity, and must have been established by mutual consent, which to say of contradictory customs is absurd (r).

Customs—how construed.

8. With reference to the interpretation of customs, it will suffice to say that customs, especially where they derogate from the general rights of property, must be construed strictly (s);

(q) 1 Bla. Com. 78.

(r) Id.

(s) Judgm., Rogers v. Brenton, 10

Q. B. 57; 1 Bla. Com. 78; per Bayley, J., 2 B. & C. 839.

they are not to be "enlarged beyond the usage" (t); they may be abrogated by statute (u).

Besides local customs properly so called, there are, in different parts of the country, certain usages existing, which, unless excluded expressly or impliedly by agreement between parties (x), regulate, to some extent, the relation of landlord and tenant, or affect the reciprocal rights of incoming and outgoing tenants, and are usually known "as customs of the country." Now, a custom (y) belonging to this class need not be shown to have existed immemorially, but will be established on proof of a usage, recognised and acted upon in the particular district, applicable to farms of a like description with that in regard to which its existence is specifically asserted (z). A "custom of the country," in order that it be good, must be reasonable (as will appear by reference to some of the cases already cited), and sufficiently definite and certain.

Very similar to the local usages last mentioned, as regards their operation upon the contracts of parties, are particular usages of trade which exist in certain places; and, in order to be effective, must be reasonable (a), and must be proved by apt evidence in courts of justice. The legal effect of these usages of trade I shall hereafter notice, when treating of Mercantile Contracts; they cannot, in strictness, be considered as forming part and parcel of our customary law (b).

Customs of the country

Particular usages of trade.

(t) Judgm., Arthur v. Bokenham, 11 Mod. 160; see per Cockburn, C. J., 2 H. & N. 680-1.

(u) Truscott v. Merchant Tailors' Co., 11 Exch. 855; Cooper v. Hubbuck, 12 C. B., N. S., 456. See, for instance, stat. 19 & 20 Vict. c. 94.

(x) Post, Book II.

(y) The word "custom" thus used "cannot mean a custom in the strict legal signification of the word: for that must be taken with reference to some defined limit or space, which is essential to every custom properly so called." per Lord Ellenborough, C. J., Legh v. Hewett, 4 East, 154, 158.

(z) Woodf. L. & T., 8th ed., 477-8; Dalby v. Hirst, 1 B. & B. 224, where the question was raised at Nisi Prius.

(a) See Cuthbert v. Cumming, 11 Exch. 405; S. C., 10 Id. 809; Paxton v. Courtney, 2 Post. & Fin. N. P. Ca. 131; Gibson v. Crick, 2 H. & C. 142.

(b) Mercantile customs seem properly divisible into three classes:—1. Customs "which all nations agree in and

Lex non scripta—how declared.

As our lex scripta must be interpreted, so must our lex non scripta be declared by the Judges (c), whose office, as already stated (d), it is jus dicere, and whose decisions, when collected in the reports, exhibit our common law, as it has actually been applied to facts differing from each other, as well in kind as in their combinations. Judicial decisions, indeed, afford the best—oftentimes the only—evidence of what law is ; and, in arriving at these decisions, the Judges allow themselves to be guided by established precedents, by fixed and recognised rules of pleading, evidence, and practice (e), and by the admitted maxims of the law.

In conformity with our most approved Commentators, I have mentioned maxims as one important element of our common law. Of these maxims, which embody principles of much value, when their application is rightly understood, many have been derived to us from the Roman or Civil Law ; and, although it be true, as judicially remarked, that this law forms no rule binding in itself upon the subjects of these realms ; yet, in deciding a case upon principle, where no direct authority can be cited from our books, the Courts at Westminster will listen to arguments drawn from the Institutes and Pandects of Justinian, and will rejoice if their conclusions are shown to be in conformity with that law, which is “the fruit of the researches of the most learned men, the collective wisdom of ages, and the groundwork of the municipal law of most of the countries in Europe” (f).

take notice of,” and which are held to be part of the law of England : 1 Bla. Com. 273. 2. Customs prevailing throughout the length and breadth of this country, which also have the force of law here, and are in general judicially noticed, without proof. 3. Customs purely local, such as are alluded to in the text, which must be proved. See a learned note, 8 C. B. 967, and cases cited, ante, pp. 10, 11. The custom of London is certified by the Recorder : see Westoby v. Day, 2 E. & B. 605.

(c) See per North, C. J., Barnardiston v. Soame, 6 How. St. Tr. 1095, 1116.

(d) Ante, p. 5.

(e) As to the ordinary rules of pleading, evidence, and practice in civil cases, post, Chap. 4.

(f) Judgm., 12 M. & W. 353 ; per Best, C. J., 5 Bing. 167 ; Hale, Hist.

Before concluding this chapter, one observation further may be offered :—The law of England, whether statutory or customary, professes to act in accordance with, and to be regulated by, certain great fundamental principles. It professes to act and adjudicate conformably to the law of Nature, the law of God, to common sense, to legal reason, justice, and humanity (g).

The law conforms to certain great principles.

“The law of Nature,” says Blackstone (h), “being coeval with mankind, is superior in obligation to any other;” “no human laws are of any validity if contrary to this.” We read also in Calvin’s case (i) that the “law of Nature is part of the laws of England :” and in Forbes v. Cochrane (k), that “the proceedings in our Courts are founded upon the law of England, and that law is again founded upon the law of Nature and the revealed law of God.” So that if a “right sought to be enforced is inconsistent with either of these, the English municipal Courts cannot recognise it.” Nay, in the case last cited, it is even laid down as a maxim, that international comity (l), or comitas inter communitates, “cannot prevail in any case where it violates the law of our own country, the law of Nature, or the law of God” (m).

Law of Nature.

In Hlott v. Wilks (n), it is judicially affirmed that “the law of England will not sanction what is inconsistent with human-Considerations of Humanity.

Com. Law, 24, adopted 1 Bla. Com. 79. In Reg. v. Archbishop of Canterbury, 11 Q. B. 649, Lord Denman observes, that the canon law forms no part of the law of England, unless it has been brought into use and acted upon in this country; and that the burden of proof rests on those who affirm the adoption of any portion of it here.

(g) See Ram, Sci. Leg. Judgm. 10.

(h) 1 Com. 41.

(i) 7 Rep. 4, 6.

(k) 2 B. & C. 471.

(l) “The true foundation on which the administration of international law must rest, is, that the rules which ought to govern are those which arise from mutual interest and utility, from a sense of the inconveniences which would result from a contrary doctrine, and from a sort of moral necessity to do justice, in order that justice may be done to us in return.” Story, Conf. Laws, 3rd ed., 45.

(m) See Fenton v. Livingstone, 3 Macq. H. L. Ca. 497.

(n) 3 B. & Ald. 319, cited per Best, C. J., Bird v. Holbrook, 4 Bing. 640-1.

nity;" and in Day v. Savage (o), Hobart, C. J., remarks that "even an Act of Parliament made against natural equity—as to make a man judge in his own case—is void in itself; for jura naturæ sunt immutabilia, and they are leges legum."

Reason and Common Sense.

Legal reason and common sense also are frequently invoked by the administrators of our law as guides whom they may safely follow (p). By "legal reason," however, is here to be understood that schooled and tutored reason which a well-trained legal intellect brings to bear upon the questions submitted to it. "Discretion," observed Lord Mansfield, C. J., in R. v. Wilkes (q), "when applied to a court of justice, means sound discretion guided by law. It must be governed by rule, not by humour; it must not be arbitrary, vague, and fanciful, but legal and regular."

We need then scarce hesitate to adopt the expressions of Willes, J., in Millar v. Taylor (r), that "principles of private justice, moral fitness, and public convenience," "when applied to a new subject, make common law without a precedent—much more, when received and approved by usage;" or those of Aston, J., delivering his opinion in the same case (s), who appeals in support of it to "the law of Nature and truth," "the light of reason and the common sense of mankind;" and examines in detail what he designates as "certain great truths and sound propositions," by which man, as a rational creature, is laid under the obligation of being governed (t).

(o) Hob. 87; 4 Inst. 71.

(p) "However technical, rules are to be attended to, and in some cases cannot be dispensed with; yet in administering justice we must not lose sight of common sense." Per Lord Kenyon, C. J., 2 East, 208.

(q) 4 Burr. 2539.

(r) Id. 2312.

(s) Id. 2837, 2843.

(t) In the foregoing chapter, mention has not been made of certain laws, which Sir W. Blackstone (1 Com. 67) designates as "particular," that is, as "adopted and used by some particular Courts;" and this omission has been made advisedly, my inquiries being restricted to that law which is administered by our Courts of Common Law. The law of Parliament is also foreign to the design of this treatise.

CHAPTER II.

COURTS OF LAW.

HAVING, in the last Chapter, shown what our Common Law is, and set forth concisely the elements of which it is composed, I now proceed to inquire into the nature and constitution of those tribunals by which it is administered :—in the first place, passing under review the Origin, History, and actual Jurisdiction of our three Superior Courts, together with the mode in which business is conducted there ; and, secondly, exhibiting, with brevity, the extent and limits of the Jurisdiction of our County Courts.

SECT. I. The Superior Courts.

1. Their Origin, History, and Jurisdiction.

2. Mode of Procedure in Banc and at Judges' Chambers.

1. Origin, History, and Jurisdiction of the Superior Courts (a).

At the very outset of an inquiry respecting the origin and history of our Superior Courts of Law, it becomes essential to look back for a moment at the nature of those judicial tribunals which existed here immediately prior to and at the date of the Norman Conquest, that particular epoch affording a convenient starting point, whence the proposed investigation may be prosecuted.

(a) For additional information upon this subject, which can scarcely be presented to the reader in a satisfactory manner when condensed ut supra, reference may be made passim to the works cited in notis.

Adopting this plan, it will be found, that, at the period in question, the ordinary legal tribunals of most practical importance established in this country were the County and the Hundred Courts (b), which institutions traced their descent from a distant age, and from tribes amongst whom the name and office of king were alike unknown ; on which account, a learned writer has observed, that our common law jurisdiction may be considered as emanating from the people (c) ; and it certainly, during successive centuries, retained much of that rudeness which belonged to and was derived from a primæval and very barbarous state of society. Of the two legal tribunals which I have mentioned as existing here prior to and at the date of the Norman Invasion, we know that the Hundred Court was, in point of jurisdiction, inferior to that of the County or Shire, although it may be impossible to define with accuracy the precise boundaries and territorial limits of the Anglo-Saxon Hundred (d). Of this Court, it must suffice to say, that it met once at least in each month ; that it had both a civil and a criminal jurisdiction ; that it was composed of the thanes and landlords whose demesnes were included within the hundred ; and that it was held under the head officer or ealdorman of the particular district, assisted by the bishop of the diocese (e).

Hundred Court

County or Shire Court.

It was, however, in the Shire (f) Court, which seems to have been held twice in every year, that the principal causes were, at the time now spoken of, heard and determined. In this Court cognisance was had of offences which concerned the crown or public, as felonies, breaches of the peace, nuisances, and the like, as well as of questions involving the title to land. Whilst, in all civil suits, the Shire Court

(b) 1 Reeves, Hist. Eng. Law, 2nd ed., 7.

(c) Palgr. King's Counc. 10.

(d) 1 Palgr. Eng. Comm. 96.

(e) 1 Palgr. Eng. Comm. 98, 101.

(f) The shire seems sometimes to have been formed by placing one or more hundreds under the government of an earl or his deputy : 1 Palgr. Eng. Comm. 117.

appears to have had an original jurisdiction similar to that of the Hundred Court, besides an appellate jurisdiction over the subordinate tribunal (g).

It might perhaps reasonably have been surmised, that, whilst the country continued throughout its length and breadth in a disturbed and unsettled state, a system of administering justice by means of local courts would be found essential; and although, even in Anglo-Saxon times, the Sovereign was in theory the supreme legislator of his people, and the sole fountain of remedial justice—although, moreover, it was his peculiar prerogative to redress the defects, abuses, and corruption of inferior tribunals—yet it does not seem that any appeal lay from the Shire or Hundred Court to the Crown, as of right, and at the mere will of the suitor, or save in certain specified and extraordinary cases. By the laws of King Edgar, for instance, who flourished during a portion of the latter half of the 10th century, we find the right of appeal to the King's Court thus limited and defined: Nemo ad Regem appellet pro aliquâ lite nisi domi jure suo dignus esse vel jus consequi non possit. Si jus nimis severum sit, alleviatio deinde quæraturs apud Regem. From this and similar passages to be met with in the Anglo-Saxon and Danish laws, it seems, in accordance with the opinion of our most learned writers, that a suitor in the County Court could not appeal to the supreme tribunal, unless justice were altogether denied him in the inferior Court, or unless he laboured under some disability which precluded him from suing therein, or felt specially aggrieved by the sentence there pronounced upon him (h). So completely, indeed, was a system of local administration of (g) 1 Palgr. Eng. Comm. 119; Dugd. Orig. Chap. 14 (p. 29). See 2 Hall. Midd. Ages, 140. It must be remembered that, during the period here referred to, when force was an element in most transactions giving rise to litigation, purely civil matters rarely called for adjudication.

(h) Palgr. King's Counc. 10, 11; 1 Palgr. Eng. Comm. 283.

justice carried out in the Anglo-Saxon times, that it has been doubted whether, strictly speaking, the Sovereign himself had then, unless in cases of public concern, any original jurisdiction, though we may readily believe that few princes in those days declined to exercise judicial functions when solicited by favourites, tempted by bribery, or stimulated by cupidity and avarice (i).

Probably the best view of this subject, which can be given in a few words, is presented by Sir F. Palgrave (k), who tells us that "the judicial functions of the Anglo-Saxon monarchs were of a two-fold nature: the ordinary authority which the king exercised, like the inferior territorial judges, differing, perhaps, in degree, though the same in kind; and the prerogative supremacy pervading all the tribunals of the people, and which was to be called into action when they were unable or unwilling to afford redress:" the former of these functions resulting from the peculiar and immediate relation of the vassal to his superior; the latter being inherent in the kingly office and prerogative.

Norman Conquest.

Changes then effected

When William the Conqueror was established on the throne of England, an important change in the machinery for administering justice was effected, which gradually led to the establishment of our three Superior Courts of Common Law. I allude to the introduction into this country of the office of Chief Justiciar (l), and the gradual centralisation of judicial power which was effected here by the establishment of the Aula Regis or Supreme Council of the sovereign,—a Court which was invested with some most important functions of a purely judicial nature (m).

For at least two centuries subsequent to the Norman Con-

(i) 1 Lingard, Hist. Eng. 359.

(k) 1 Eng. Comm. 282.

(l) As to the nature of the functions delegated to the king's justiciars, see 1 Palgr. Eng. Comm. 289; Madox, Hist.

Exch. Chap. 2.

(m) See further as to the Aula Regis, Millar Eng. Gov., vol. 2, pp. 108, 121, 264 et seq.

quest, the history of the King's Court, a tribunal occupying the most prominent station in the government of the country, is (partly from the absence of records (n), and partly from their ambiguity) involved in considerable obscurity (o). We know, however, that in the earlier time the Curia Regis was the Supreme Court of Judicature of the kingdom, and a resort for the barons and great men of the realm, who gave, as occasion required, their attendance there (p). We may also believe that, in the time of Edward I., the King's Council was composed of the chancellor, the treasurer, the justices of either bench, the serjeants, some of the principal clerks of the Chancery, and such others, usually (but not exclusively) bishops, earls, and barons, as the king thought fit to name (q). The Supreme Council, thus composed, must, however, in order to avoid misapprehension in regard to its functions, be carefully distinguished from the Council in Parliament; the assembly called a Parliament being, at the period alluded to, formed by a union, or rather by a simultaneous assemblage, of the members of the usual Council, and of such other persons as were summoned or returned to treat and advise concerning the welfare of the realm (r).

To the Curia Regis, which thus, during the session of Parliament, appears to have formed a component part of the legislative body, were addressed the petitions and complaints of individuals seeking redress for injuries and wrongs not cognisable elsewhere, or labouring under some inability to sue at common law, or to obtain a fair trial before the inferior tribunals. Accordingly, we find that oppressions, alleged to have been committed by the ministers and bailiffs of the Crown, nuisances which could not be abated by the common (n) See Cooper's Account of the Public Records, vol. 2, p. 320.

(o) Palgr. King's Counc. p. 19.

(p) Coop. Pub. Rec. vol. 1, p. 410.
For further details see also 2 Hall.

Midd. Ages, 187.

(q) Palgr. King's Counc. p. 20; see also 2 Hall. Midd. Ages, 187.

(r) Palgr. King's Counc. p. 20; 1 Reeves, Hist. Eng. Law, 2nd ed., 216.

law, and trespasses which could not be so redressed, constituted fertile sources of complaint to the Council (s); and over such matters there can be no doubt that it gradually assumed and exercised an extensive original jurisdiction, which greatly diminished the importance and impaired the dignity of the County Courts; though these latter tribunals, derived, as above shown, from the Anglo-Saxon times, nevertheless continued to exist throughout the land.

From this Supreme Council or Court, where the king, in theory, was always present, which attended on his person, and was therefore ambulatory as the Sovereign changed his place of abode, may, without much difficulty, be deduced the gradual formation of a Court of Exchequer, of Common Pleas, and of King's Bench: these Courts having been originally in the nature of Committees, delegated by the Sovereign for the despatch of specific branches of the business of his Court; but which, by degrees, assumed a permanent and an altogether separate and independent existence (t).

Original jurisdiction of Exchequer as Court of Revenue.

To commence with the Court of Exchequer. It will readily be admitted that, on the introduction of the feudal system into this country, together with the burthens incident to it, of escheat, forfeiture, fines for alienation, for wardship, marriage, and the like, the claims of the Crown, as lord paramount, upon the subject must have become so complicated and multifarious as to require the sole and undivided attention of some peculiar department of the Royal Council; and to this necessity may properly be ascribed the origin of the Court of Exchequer, which, in its inception, was but a select

(s) Palgr. King's Counc. 21, 22, 25;
1 Palgr. Eng. Comm. 315.

(t) 1 Palgr. Eng. Comm. 291. The resolution of the authority of the Aula Regis into the independent jurisdictions now exercised by the Courts of Westminster Hall appears to have taken place very gradually. That the severance was not complete at the beginning of the fourteenth century, appears from entries cited from the rolls of the King's Bench by Mr. Serjeant Manning, in his learned work intitled Serviens ad Legem, p. 253. See also Coop. Pub. Rec. vol. 1, pp. 232, 411.

committee of the Supreme Council, appointed to sit apart from it in the king's palace, for the purpose of auditing his accounts and compelling payment of such feudal dues as were in arrear to him (u).

The Court of Exchequer was, then, the first offshoot from—or rather seems always to have been a subordinate department of (x)—the great Court of the Aula Regis; and to it all matters relating to the king's revenue were assigned for determination. So that, for example, when the Supreme Court inflicted fines on criminal offenders, the records were estreated into the Exchequer, and thence process issued for levying and getting in the fines. Here, too, the accounts of the king's revenue were made up and passed; and when, in the progress and investigation of civil causes in other Courts, penalties were imposed on the parties payable to the king, his Court of Exchequer had power to call in and collect the same (y).

Although, however, the jurisdiction of the Exchequer was, in the first instance, principally, or, as some think, wholly, confined to matters connected with the revenue, or springing out of the feudal relation of lord and vassal, it is certain that at a very early period this Court had acquired jurisdiction in personal actions not at all affecting the rights or revenues of the Crown (z). Thus, in the Statute of Rutland (10 Edw. 1), we find a clause to this effect (a):—"For so much as certain pleas were heretofore holden in the Exchequer, which did

Its jurisdiction in private suits.

(u) The Exchequer also issued writs applicable where the rights of the subject were withheld by the officers or ministers of the Crown, as where "lands charged with the payment of rents or annuities, or liable to other claims, were vested in the Crown or its grantees, during the minority of an heir, or by way of escheat or forfeiture," and in other cases: Palgr. King's Counc. 24; see Gilb. Exch. Chap. 1.

(x) 1 Reeves, Hist. Eng. Law, 2nd ed., 48.

(y) Sell. Prac. Introd. 8, 9.

(z) 1 Reeves, Hist. Eng. Law, 2nd ed., 51. Madox, Hist. Exch., 2nd ed., vol. 1, p. 209; vol. 2, p. 73.

(a) So 28 Edw. 1, st. 3, c. 4, enacts, that "no Common Pleas shall be from henceforth holden in the Exchequer contrary to the form of the Great Charter."

not concern us nor our ministers of the Exchequer, whereby as well our pleas as the causes of our people are unduly delayed and impeded, we will and ordain, That no plea shall be holden or pleaded in the Exchequer aforesaid, unless it do specially concern us and our ministers aforesaid." Notwithstanding, however, the above expression of the royal will, the practice of the Exchequer did not alter, but the Court in question continued to entertain causes of a personal nature between the subjects of the Crown, by holding that this statute did not apply to suits between subjects who were debtors to the Crown, and then by conniving at the plaintiff's falsely suggesting that he was such a debtor; and that by reason of the defendant not paying what he owed to the plaintiff, the plaintiff would himself be less able to pay what he owed to the Crown (b). The formula to which this fiction gave rise in the process of the Court (usually known as the clause of quo minus) having long obtained, was finally abolished by the Uniformity of Process Act (2 Will. 4, c. 39).

Its equity jurisdiction.

As regards the Equity Jurisdiction of the Court of Exchequer, a very few words will suffice. We know that by King Edward I. this Court was divided into two separate and distinct branches, viz., the Receipt of the Exchequer, and the Court for the Hearing of Causes (c). We also know that, some time prior to the reign of Edward III., a certain kind of equitable jurisdiction was exercised by the Exchequer, and that the equitable powers thus exercised were gradually established and amplified; so that when Blackstone wrote (d), and indeed, until the recent statute, 5 Vict. c. 5 (e), the same jurisdiction was exercised and the same system of redress pursued on the Equity Side of the Exchequer as in the Court of Chancery, save only in respect of some few matters peculiar to each tribunal, and as to which the other could not interfere.

(b) 1 Sell. Prac. Introd. 10, 32.

(c) 1 Sell. Prac. Introd. 28.

(d) 3 Bla. Com. 426.

(e) See also 5 & 6 Vict. c. 86.

However, by the 1st section of the Act just mentioned (5 Vict. c. 5), the equity jurisdiction of the Court of Exchequer was abolished, and transferred to the Court of Chancery. Some doubts have certainly been entertained as to the precise effect of this enactment, with reference to the equitable jurisdiction of the Court of Exchequer in revenue causes. And upon this point the cases infra may be consulted (f).

Although the Supreme Council had, during the first century from the Norman Conquest, suffered some diminution of its business by the establishment and separate action of the Court of Exchequer in the manner pointed out, it still entertained causes of moment which did not immediately concern the revenue: it had cognisance of all criminal offences committed within the county where it happened to be, and it exercised jurisdiction on appeal from inferior tribunals (g). Further encroachments were, however, gradually made in various ways upon its power. In the first place, a practice crept in of issuing special writs or commissions of oyer and terminer, at the suit and on the complaint of individuals (h): for instance, where any extraordinary outrage had been committed, requiring a more speedy or more effectual remedy than could be furnished by the usual forms and process of the inferior courts. Sometimes the inquests necessitated by these complaints were ordered to be determined in the local courts, or by the justices in eyre; and sometimes to be thus taken and afterwards returned before the Council for judgment (i).

Powers vested in Supreme Council.

Special Commissions.

To restrain this practice, which was open to much abuse, various enactments were expressly passed, in consequence whereof it gradually fell into desuetude (k).

(f) Att.-Gen. v. Halling, 15 M. & W. 687; Corporation of London v. Att.-Gen., 1 H. L. Ca. 440. See 1 Chitty, Arch. Pr., 11th ed., p. 2.

(g) 1 Sell. Prac. Introd. 11.

(h) Forms of petitions for such writs are given in Palgr. King's Counc. 28 et seq.

(i) Palgr. King's Counc. 25, 26.

(k) Palgr. King's Counc. 32, 33.

Justices in Eyre.

Again, so early as the reign of Hen. I., and perhaps even in that of William the Conqueror (l), assizes seem to have been occasionally held by Justices Itinerant (m), who, by reason of the inconvenience which suitors suffered in being compelled to attend the King's Court from place to place, were commissioned to hold circuits for the administration of justice in counties and districts where the Supreme Court, presided over by the Chief Justiciar, or even by the king himself, did not chance to be (n). From the judgment of these Itinerant Justices, in whose institution we see the germ of our present system of Assize and Nisi Prius, a right of appeal lay to the Court of Aula Regis (o), the frequent exercise of which right seems to have brought back to that Court the final determination of most cases of importance throughout the kingdom. Indeed, the expense and delay occasioned to suitors in having to resort to the Supreme Court, coupled perhaps with the jealousy entertained by the Crown of so powerful a subject as the Chief Justiciar (p), is believed ultimately to have led to the erection of the Court

(l) 1 Reeves, Hist. Eng. Law, 2nd ed., 54; 1 Palgr. Eng. Comm. 293. The practice of issuing commissions of assize was reduced to a system by Henry II., who divided the country into circuits, and appointed itinerant justices, who seem to have had a civil as well as a criminal jurisdiction within each county: 1 Palgr. Eng. Comm. 295; 2 Hall. Middle Ages, 188; Madox, Hist. Exch., 2nd ed., vol. 1, pp. 121-2.

(m) As to whose authority and functions, see Ex parte Fernandez, 10 C. B., N. S., 29, 42.

(n) Some of the functions of the Justices in Eyre are specified in Cooper on the Pub. Rec., vol. 1, p. 268; see also Co. Litt. 293. a.; Gilb. C. P. Introd. 28. These circuits occurred, temp. Edw. I., about once in seven years. See also Ex parte Fernandez, 10 C. B., N. S., 29, 42.

(o) Whilst the feudal system remained in vigour, certain actions and suits, civil as well as criminal, fell within the cognisance of the Courts Baron, the laws and customs of which varied in different districts, and were not by any means in conformity with the law as administered in the King's Courts. Such causes were, however, not unfrequently, upon failure of justice, removed from the Court Baron into the County Court, and thence again were brought for adjudication before the justices itinerant, and from that tribunal were transferred coram rege. See Dugd. Orig. Jurid., Chap. 10; Reeves, Hist. Eng. Law, 2nd ed., vol. 1, pp. 317, 318.

(p) See Gilb. C. P. Introd. 30.

of Common Pleas, which seems to have become first separated, or at all events distinguishable from the Aula Regis in the time of Richard I. (q), or perhaps in that of King John; though, according to the opinion of Mr. Madox (r), it was not firmly established as an independent tribunal till the reign of Henry III. We know, indeed, that, by an article of Magna Charta, it was, in the reign of King John, expressly stipulated that the Common Pleas should not thenceforward follow the King's Court, but should be held in some fixed locality: Communia Placita non sequantur Curiam nostram sed in aliquo loco certo teneantur; but the fact, that this great statute was afterwards ratified and confirmed by Henry III., shows clearly in what sense Mr. Madox's opinion must be understood, and gives a sanction to it. One of the great practical grievances of that time was the necessity of following the King's Court in order to obtain justice, and hence the above article of Magna Charta (s).

It is, indeed, probable (t) that the Supreme Court had, prior to the final separation from it and establishment of the Court of Common Pleas, delegated to this latter tribunal, sitting as a subordinate committee merely, the peculiar cognisance of civil causes; and that the justices nominated for this purpose had been in the habit of leaving the High Bench and retiring into some convenient apartment for the hearing of Communia Placita, i. e., of 'Common Pleas,' or suits

(q) Id. 1 Reeves, Hist. Eng. Law, 2nd ed., p. 57. See Dugd. Orig. Jurid., Chap. 18.

(r) Hist. Exch., 2nd ed., vol. 1, p. 788. See 1 Reeves, Hist. Eng. Law, 2nd ed., pp. 245-6.

(s) In reference to this part of the subject, Dugdale (Orig. Jur. 39) tells us that "as the severing of this Court (C. P.) from the Exchequer was at first no doubt occasioned from the great increase of suitors and causes thereto: so unquestionless was it, that, for moderating the expense and trouble unto which the subject was exposed by repairing to the King's Supreme Court wherever he moved, and for taking off the charge and hazard in carrying the records upon all occasions of the king's removal, this law for fixing the C. P. in a certain place (viz. at Westminster) was first made; to the end that the people might be sure whither to resort for trial of their rights."

(t) 1 Sell. Pr. Introd. 17.

between private persons, as distinguished from 'Pleas of the Crown;' and this view is confirmed by the authority of Sir Francis Palgrave (u), who thinks that each of our three superior Courts was originally but a committee or subordinate department of the Aula Regis.

Let this, however, be as it may, we know that, from the reign of Henry III. down to the present time, the Court of The Common Pleas, or Common Bench, has (except during some unimportant intervals of time) remained stationary at Westminster.

It has been observed by Mr. Reeves (x), that the clause of Magna Charta just adverted to, must have had a direct and important influence upon the amount of civil business transacted in the Exchequer, as well as in the Curia Regis; for each of these great Courts attended the king wherever he happened to be, and all suits between party and party were accordingly interdicted in these Courts by the express words of the law—the Curia Regis remaining, therefore, a tribunal for the discussion of criminal matters only—the Exchequer for the cognisance of causes touching the revenue,—whilst 'Common Pleas,' i. e., suits between private persons, devolved upon the Bench (y). This view, indeed, is consistent with what we find in Bracton, who (writing temp. Henry III.) thus describes the various superior Courts of justice then existing: The king, he tells us, Curiarum habet unam propriam, sicut Aulam Regiam, et Justitios Capitales qui proprias causas Regis terminant, alluding, as we may fairly suppose, to the Court of Exchequer; but then, he goes on to say that these Justices have also cognisance of the causes aliorum omnium, per querelam vel per privilegium sive libertatem;

(u) Ante, p. 28.

(x) Hist. Eng. Law, 2nd ed., vol. i., p. 244.

(y) About the beginning of the reign of Edw. II., there were so many suits in Common Pleas, "that the king was necessitated to increase the number of his justices who were to sit there into six, which commonly were not above three before that time, and so to divide them, as they might sit in two places:" Dugd. Orig. Jur. p. 39.

and these words doubtless introduce some difficulty, which will however be removed if we understand them thus :—that the Curia Regis had cognisance of civil causes between subjects, only when they were commenced per querelam, i. e., by a peculiar kind of writ returnable before the king himself, or where a particular individual had a grant or license from the Crown not to be impleaded anywhere save coram ipso Domino Rege. And Bracton then goes on to say, that the sovereign “has a Court and Justices of the Bench, who have cognisance of all pleas falling within their jurisdiction,”—habet etiam Curiam et Justitios in banco residentes, qui cognoscunt de omnibus placitis de quibus auctoritatem habent cognoscendi—thus, as it would seem, intending to describe the Court of Common Pleas (z).

It may perhaps be a matter of some interest to observe, that, although the final establishment of the Court of Common Pleas at Westminster effectually removed one grievance of considerable magnitude, which had been felt by the community at large, yet it created another. Suitors, indeed, were then no longer obliged to travel about after the King's Court in order to obtain justice; they were, however, not the less compelled, when in want of it, to come, from even the most distant parts of England, up to Westminster. Now, to remedy this inconvenience, the Stat. of Westminster 2 (13 Ed. 1, c. 10) was passed, by which it was, amongst other things, enacted, that any person impleaded “before the justices at Westminster, or in the King's Bench, or before justices assigned to take Assizes,” &c., might make a general attorney (a) to sue for him, “which attorney shall have full power in all pleas moved during the circuit, until the pleas be determined.” The better opinion seems, indeed, to be, that the above Statute of Westminster 2nd applied in Employment of Attorneys in superior Courts.

(z) See Reeves, Hist. Eng. Law, 2nd ed., vol. i., pp. 817, 818.

(a) An attorney (attornatus) is one who takes upon himself the business of another man on his retainer: see 3 Bla. Com. 25. Toml. Dict. ad verb.

strictness only to appearance by attorney, and not to the conduct of the suit by him after an appearance had been once made; for we learn from Glanville (who wrote in the time of Hen. II.), that even then a party might (after an appearance had been once entered by himself in person) appoint some other individual, corresponding substantially with an attorney, to represent him during the subsequent stages of the suit. Much inconvenience must, however, have been spared to suitors by the above-mentioned statute of Edward I. (b); and it is thought, that the habitual employment of attorneys of right in the Courts at Westminster may properly be ascribed to it.

To return, however, to the history of our Courts of Law,—the office of Chief Justiciar, having been deprived of much of its importance by the establishment—first, of the Court of Exchequer, and, afterwards, of the Court of Common Pleas—and its dignity having been further affected by the secession of the Chancellor from the Aula Regis in the time of Henry III.,—seems, towards the close of that reign, to have fallen altogether into desuetude, until revived under a somewhat similar title, though with different functions by Edward I.

To that prince (as history informs us) we are indebted, as well for the assignment of more precise limits to the respective jurisdictions of the Common Pleas and Exchequer, as for the definitive establishment of the Court of King's Bench (c). To him, as it would seem, we also owe the ap-

Definitive establish-

(b) See 1 Reeves, Hist. Eng. Law, 2nd ed., 619; 2 Id. 169.

(c) "Anciently called Curia Domini Regis, because oftentimes the king himself sat here in person, and had his justices a latere suo residentes:" Dugd. Orig. Jurid. Chap. 17 (p. 38). See Arg. in the Case of Ship Money, 3 How. St. Tr. 861-2; Allen, Prerog. Cr. 92-3; Palgr. King's Counc. p. 62.

When King James I., at the suggestion of Bancroft, Archbishop of Canterbury, wished to take upon himself the cognisance and exclusive decision of matters touching the jurisdiction of Courts ecclesiastical, he was thus answered by Lord Coke, in the presence of all the Judges of the land:—"The king in his own person, cannot adjudge any case, either criminal—as treason or pointment of a chief magistrate, presiding over this latter Court, denominated Chief Justice of England, and endowed with a two-fold jurisdiction : in the first place, over all Pleas of the Crown not relating to the revenue ; and, secondly, over matters of a private nature involving injuries alleged to have been committed with force, or in which the defendant was charged with falsity or deceit.

ment of Court of King's Bench.

Within the former of these two branches of jurisdiction, i. e., Pleas of the Crown, was comprised the cognisance of all crimes and misdemeanors, a general controlling power over all other Courts of criminal jurisdiction, and the right of inquiring into matters touching franchises and liberties, or the wrongful usurpation of official functions. Where justice was obstructed or improperly declined, this high functionary was empowered to compel its performance by inferior courts, corporations, and magistrates. And, where jurisdiction was exceeded or improperly assumed, he had the right of interfering to prevent or stop its undue exercise.

Under the latter head of jurisdiction, appertaining to the Chief Justiceship, was included the cognisance of all trespasses committed vi et armis, of ejectment, replevin, rescue, pound breach, and of actions founded on deceit. All which causes of action, indeed, savoured strongly of a criminal nature, as shown by this fact, that the defendant, if found guilty, was liable to pay a fine to the Crown, as well as damages to the party injured.

Originally, then, the Court of King's Bench had, in strictly civil cases, a very circumscribed jurisdiction ; but this it shortly contrived to amplify and extend, in a manner which may here briefly be explained. In ancient times all actions in the superior Courts were commenced by original writ,

5 Original Writ—what.

felony—or betwixt party and party, concerning their goods, chattels, and inheritance ; but this ought to be determined and adjudged in some court of justice, according to the law and custom of England :” Prohibitions del Roy, 12 Rep. 63.

i. e., by a mandatory letter issuing out of Chancery under the Great Seal, and in the sovereign's name, directed to the sheriff of the county in which the particular injury was alleged to have been committed. This writ contained a summary statement of the cause of complaint, and required the sheriff to command the defendant to satisfy the claim made upon him; and (on his failure so to do), it further enjoined the sheriff to summon the defendant to appear in one of the superior Courts to answer for his default (d).

A person, then, desiring redress for a grievance, was, in the first instance, obliged to apply to the Chancery for an original writ adapted to the specific wrong of which he complained, in order that he might thus be enabled to commence his action in the form established and prescribed.

Writs de cursu.

Some of these original writs were entitled 'de cursu,' and seem to have been issued from the Chancery, upon the applicant swearing to the truth of the allegations contained in them, and finding pledges to prosecute his action. The tenor of these writs 'de cursu,' according to Fleta, could not be altered but by the legislature; and, it is said, that the precedents by which the clerks of the Chancery were guided in framing them, were contained in a roll or book, called the Register of the Chancery. It seems, further, that the register obtained its first sanction from constant usage, rather than from any legislative enactment, of which, at all events, no traces can be found (e).

The origin of these writs, although involved in much obscurity, is perhaps referable to the Normans; and their object probably was to define, with some degree of certainty, the nature of those injuries, for which the law afforded relief, and likewise to save the trouble of inventing new modes of expression for each particular case of wrong as it might present itself (f).

(d) Steph. Pl., 5th ed., 5, 6.
(e) Palgr. King's Counc. 15, 16.

(f) Steph. Pl., 5th ed., App. 2;
Palgr. King's Counc. 15.

The ordinary practice being as above mentioned, various specific forms of writs became established in the Court of Chancery, which, at length, it was thought necessary strictly to observe; so that it appears to have been not unusual in those times for a plaintiff, when no writ could be found in Chancery that suited his case, to apply to the Council for a new one (g). To prevent the inconvenience and possibly the denial of justice thus occasioned, it became necessary (especially when contracts increased in number, and wrongs, unknown in the ruder ages, became prevalent), to provide by a statute passed in the 13th year of Edward I. (stat. Westm. 2, c. 24), as follows: viz. that, whensoever, from thenceforth, in one case, a writ should be found in the Chancery, and in a like case (in consimili casu) falling under the same right, and requiring like remedy, no precedent of a writ could be produced, the clerks in Chancery should agree in forming a new one. And then the statute goes on to say, that "if they cannot agree, it shall be adjourned to the next Parliament (h), where a writ shall be framed by consent of the learned in the law, lest it happen for the future that the Court of our lord the King be deficient in doing justice to the suitors." Consequent upon the passing of this statute, a variety of new writs was prepared in and issued out of Chancery, so that a suitor who had received an injury, to which no writ previously in use was applicable, could thenceforth have one framed according to the exigency of his own particular case; and the action founded upon this writ was, from the words 'in consimili casu' used in the Act, called an action of 'trespass on the case,' a form of action, be it observed, which still survives to us, though now usually denominated an action 'on the case' merely. Of this form of action, the Court of King's Bench claimed cognisance, by having the original writ made returnable before them as well

(g) 1 Spence, Chanc. Jur. 226.

(h) Recourse was seldom had, however, to this proceeding: Palgr. King's Counc. 17.

as in the Court of Common Pleas, on the ground that it was for a trespass, for which a fine was, in strictness, payable to the Crown, although the wrongful act was not alleged to have been committed vi et armis; and thus a very large class of cases, comprising all injuries consequential upon and not directly caused by tort, was brought within the jurisdiction of the Court of King's Bench.

Not only where the cause of action savoured of trespass strictly speaking, but in actions also of debt, covenant, and so forth, did the Court of King's Bench, by resorting to a fiction, likewise assume jurisdiction. The modus operandi here adopted consisted in allowing a plaintiff, in the first instance, to complain of a trespass against a defendant, and afterwards, when he had thus brought him actually into Court, to waive his charge of trespass altogether, and to declare against him for a debt, breach of contract, or other matter of a purely civil nature.

The jurisdiction of the Court of King's Bench was, moreover, still further extended, in a manner which is explained to us by Sir E. Coke (i), who says that the Court of King's Bench had power to hold plea in all personal actions and ejectment against any one being in the custody of the marshal or officer of the Court, because a party so circumstanced might, if sued in any other Court, have pleaded the privilege of the Court of King's Bench; and this latter Court would, consequently, in order to prevent a failure of justice, which might thus ensue, entertain the suit. Hence, where a person ^{was} once in custody of the marshal of the King's Bench at one man's suit, and was thus brought within the jurisdiction of that Court, he might be compelled before the same tribunal to answer to the complaint of any other man.

Thus did the Court of King's Bench obtain jurisdiction over all civil actions of a personal nature; and, although, by a subsequent statute (13 Car. 2, st. 2, c. 2), this acquired, or rather usurped, jurisdiction of the Court, had nearly met with a decisive check, yet it was retained by an exercise of ingenuity not inferior to that by which it had in the first instance been assumed.

The last-mentioned statute enacted, that, where the defendant was to be held to bail for more than 40*l.*, by virtue of process issuing out of the Court of King's Bench or Common Pleas, the true cause of action should be specified in the writ or process; and, had no mode of evading this statute been devised, it is evident that civil actions of any considerable magnitude must (except where really founded in trespass) have been altogether withdrawn from the cognisance of those Courts. However, out of this dilemma, the justices of the King's Bench extricated themselves in the following manner. A plaintiff, whose cause of action justified him in holding the defendant to bail for more than 40*l.*, was permitted, in his process, to command the sheriff to arrest the defendant, in order that he might answer the plaintiff in a plea of trespass, and also for a debt (or as the case might be). So that, by the introduction into the process of this ac etiam clause (as it was called), jurisdiction having been first given to the Court by the fictitious allegation of a trespass as the ground of complaint, the words of the statute were then complied with, by setting forth the true cause of action in the writ. This peculiar form of procedure was finally abolished by the Uniformity of Process Act (2 Will. 4, c. 39).

To sum up, then, the extent and nature of the jurisdiction exercised by our principal Courts of Common Law at this day, we must first remember, that, in all personal actions and in ejectment, they have co-equal and concurrent jurisdiction (k); and that an appeal from the County Court lies Actual jurisdiction of superior Courts.

(k) "When a case can be taken to a Court of error, the decision of one Court of co-ordinate jurisdiction ought to be binding on the others. When, however, to any one of our three superior Courts indifferently. We must then remark, that the Court of Queen's Bench has peculiarly delegated to it the surveillance over all inferior tribunals, which, as Sir W. Blackstone (l) tells us, it keeps within the bounds of their authority, either removing their proceedings by certiorari for its own special determination, or by writ of prohibition, staying their progress in the Court below (m). It superintends, by quo warranto and mandamus (n), all civil corporations in the kingdom. It commands magistrates and others to do what their duty requires in every case where there is no other specific remedy (o). It protects the liberty of the subject by speedy and summary interposition, and takes cognisance both of civil and criminal matters, of the one on the Plea, and of the other on the Crown side of the Court.

The Court of Common Pleas has a special cognisance of real actions, which are now, however, of comparatively rare occurrence. It is also the Court of Appeal from the decisions of the revising barristers, under the statute 6 & 7 Vict. c. 18; and the certificates of acknowledgments by married women, under the Act for the Abolition of Fines and Recoveries (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 74), with the affidavits verifying them, are filed of record in this Court, in pursuance of the 85th section of that statute.

The Exchequer, besides the remnant (if any) of its equity jurisdiction (p), still retains peculiar and exclusive cognithere is no means of appealing to a Court of error, there is not the same obligation to follow the decision of another Court; and, accordingly, we sometimes find Courts of co-ordinate jurisdiction differing from each other : " per Pollock, C. B., 5 H. & N. 5.

(l) 3 Com. 41, 42; 9 Rep. 118, a.

(m) A writ of certiorari or prohibition lies to the County Court from any one of the three Courts at Westminster. And, generally, a prohibition may be moved for in any one of the three superior Courts.

(n) A writ of error lies on a judgment of Q. B. upon a mandamus : 6 & 7 Vict. c. 67. And see 17 & 18 Vict. c. 125, ss. 75-77.

(o) Post, Chap. 5.

(p) Ante, p. 31.

sance of matters of revenue (q) ; ex. gr. of complaints arising out of alleged infringements of the laws regulating the Customs and Excise,—of matters involving the payment of stamp or other duties to government—or where on any issue raised between private parties the title of the Crown is brought in question, or the interests of the revenue are threatened. If, therefore, an action touching any of the matters just specified should be brought in the Court of Queen's Bench or Common Pleas, or in a County Court (r), it will, on motion, be removed into the Exchequer (s) : the basis of the jurisdiction exercised by that Court in so removing it, being, as remarked by a learned judge in Att.-Gen. v. Kingston (t) (which was an action against a revenue officer for the value of goods seized by him in execution of his duty), that it is a contempt of the Exchequer to proceed elsewhere in respect of any matter within its own peculiar jurisdiction.

The above is a summary statement, merely, of the leading branches of jurisdiction appertaining to our three superior Courts of Common Law (u). Minute information respecting the precise matters which fall within the scope of their general co-ordinate jurisdiction, can only be obtained—and familiarity with their ordinary course of proceeding be acquired—by actual attendance at the Courts during their Sittings in Banc at Westminster, coupled with a careful study and examination of the various departments of our law there administered. Some few remarks, however, of a general kind, bearing upon the subject before us, may here properly be offered.

In the first place, on grounds of public policy, any agree-

Agreement
to oust juris-

(q) See 22 & 23 Vict. c. 21, which amends the practice and procedure on the Revenue side of the Court of Exchequer. Att.-Gen. v. Sillem, 33 L. J. Ex. 92.

(r) Mountjoy v. Wood, 1 H. & N. 58.

(s) Adams v. Fremantle, 2 Exch.

453; Att.-Gen. v. Hallett, 15 M. & W. 97; Siddon v. East, 1 C. & J. 12.

(t) 8 M. & W. 163.

(u) See, also, upon this subject, 3 Bla. Com. pp. 37 et seq.; 3rd Inst., Chaps. 7, 10, 11.

diction of the Courts.

ment, the object of which is to prevent the suffering party from coming for redress into a Court of law, or, in other words, which 'ousts the Courts of their jurisdiction,' is void. But this rule must be understood in a somewhat qualified sense : for instance, it is not unlawful for parties to agree to impose a condition precedent with respect to the mode of settling the amount of damage, in case any should be sustained, or the time for paying it, or any matter of a similar kind which does not go to the root of the action (x). The general policy of the law does not prevent parties "from entering into such a contract as that no breach shall occur until after a reference has been made to arbitration (y)." Hence, "if I covenant with A. to do particular acts, and it is also covenanted between us that any question that may arise as to the breach of the covenants shall be referred to arbitration, that latter covenant does not prevent the covenantee from bringing an action." But, "if I covenant with A., that if I do, or omit to do a certain act, then I will pay to him such a sum as B. shall award as the amount of damage sustained by him, then until B. has made his award, and I have omitted to pay the sum awarded, my covenant has not been broken, and no right of action has arisen" (z); in other words, no obligation to pay attaches until the amount has been fixed by the referee.

An absolute covenant or stipulation, that on the happening of a certain event no action whatever shall be brought, would, (x) Scott v. Avery, 8 Exch. 487, 500; S. C., 5 H. L. Ca. 811, explained per Pollock, C. B., and Bramwell, B., Horton v. Sayer, 4 H. & N. 649, 651. See Clarke v. Westrope, 18 C. B. 765.

(y) Per Lord Cranworth, 5 H. L. Ca. 847; Tredwen v. Holman, 1 H. & C. 72; Lovndes v. Earl of Stamford, 18 Q. B. 425; Livingston v. Ralli, 5

B. & B. 132. But "the law will not permit a person who enters into a binding contract to say in another clause that he will not be liable to be sued for a breach of it :—" per Martin, B., 11 Exch. 534.

(z) Per Lord Cranworth, 5 H. L. Ca. 848; per Lord Chelmsford, C., Scott v. Corp. of Liverpool, 3 De G. & J. 360; Braunstein v. Accidental Death Insurance Co., 1 B. & S. 782, 798.

in conformity with what has been above said, clearly be void (a).

2ndly. As on the one hand parties cannot oust the jurisdiction of the Courts by their own agreement or convention, so, on the other hand, they cannot, by consent, give the Courts jurisdiction over matters which do not properly fall within it (b); for all Judges must derive their authority from the Crown by some commission warranted by law (c), and they cannot act officially dehors the scope of the powers thus confided to them.

Jurisdiction
by consent.

3rdly. The jurisdiction of our superior Courts of law in civil cases, strictly speaking, extends over the counties of England and Wales, and the town of Berwick-upon-Tweed. In one sense, indeed, the Courts in question have a far more extensive jurisdiction; for they may take cognisance of any cause of action of a transitory nature, as for a breach of contract entered into, or a trespass to the person committed in a foreign country (d); but, in adjudicating upon such cases, our Courts will have regard to the laws of the country in which the cause of action arose, albeit their mode of procedure will be in conformity with our own law and practice. In other words, all that relates ad litis decisionem is, in such cases, adopted from the foreign country; and so much of the law as affects the remedy only, or that relates ad litis ordinationem, is taken from the lex fori of that country in which the action is brought (e). For instance, if an action be com-

Territorial limits of jurisdiction.

(a) Horton v. Sayer, 4 H. & N. 643, where the cases are collected.

(b) See per Maule, J., Gibbon v. Gibbon, 22 L. J., C. P., 133-4; S. C., 13 C. B. 205; Avars v. Rhodes, 8 Exch. 312; Lawrence v. Wilcock, 11 Ad. & E. 941; Vansittart v. Taylor, 4 E. & B. 910, 912. See Andrewes v. Elliott, 6 E. & B. 338.

(c) Bac. Abr. Courts (B).

(d) See Mostyn v. Fabrigas, Cowp. 161; Scott v. Lord Seymour, 1 H. & C. 219, 231; Submarine Telegraph Co. v. Dickson, 33 L. J., C. P., 139; Parker v. Dormer, 1 Show. 187; Doulson v. Matthews, 4 T. R. 503; Story, Conf. L., s. 317; Wilde v. Sheridan, 21 L. J., Q. B., 260.

(e) Judgm., Huber v. Steiner, 2 B. & C. 210; De la Vega v. Vianna, 1

menced here on a promissory note, made in France, by the plaintiff as indorsee against the defendant as maker of the note, and at the trial it be shown that the indorsement, although good according to our own law, is invalid according to the law of France, the plaintiff will fail* to recover upon the note. If, however, we suppose that the instrument in question is perfectly unexceptionable, regard being had to the law of the country where it was made, and further, that if there put in suit, no valid defence would have been open to the defendant, this latter party may here rely upon the Statute of Limitations as a good answer to the action, or may take advantage of any non-compliance by the plaintiff with the established practice of our Courts, or with the mode of procedure observed by them (f).

For information upon this subject, which depends in fact on the principles of international law and comity, reference may be made to Leroux v. Brown (g), where it was held, that an action cannot be maintained in our Courts upon a verbal contract made in France, not to be performed within a year, and therefore within the 4th section of our Statute of Frauds (29 Charles 2, c. 3), the contract in question being valid according to the French law. Now, this case was decided upon the specific ground, that the section of the Act alluded to, in declaring that an action shall not be brought in this country upon a contract such as that above mentioned, operates not upon the validity of the contract (h), but upon the mode of procedure to be adopted with reference to it ;

B. & Ad. 284; Gen. Steam Nav. Co. v. Guillou, 11 M. & W. 877, 895; Judgm., Wilde v. Sheridan, supra; Ralli v. Dennistoun, 6 Exch. 488.

(f) Trimbey v. Vignier, 1 Bing., N. C., 151; British Linen Co. v. Drummond, 10 B. & C. 908.

Semble. Set-off is matter of procedure, and determinable by the lex fori ;

Mac Farlane v. Norris, 2 B. & S. 783. (g) 12 C. B. 801; per Willes, J., Williams, app., Wheeler, resp., 8 C. B., N. S., 316.

(h) See Branley v. South Eastern R. Co., 12 C. B., N. S., 68; Scott v. Pilkington, 2 B. & S. 11; Gardiner v. Houghton, Id., 743; Bartley v. Hodges, 1 B. & S. 375; 24 Vict. c. 11.

which latter is to be regulated in accordance with our own rules and practice.

Precisely on the same ground a document, which, by the law of the foreign country in which it was made, would there be inadmissible in evidence for want of a stamp, may, nevertheless, be received in our Courts. Though, if for want of a stamp the contract would be altogether void in the foreign country, it clearly could not here be enforced (i).

4thly. Not only may causes of action which have originated abroad be in many cases brought within the cognisance of the Courts at Westminster, but persons resident abroad, whether foreigners or subjects of the Crown, may, under the provisions of the Common Law Procedure Act, 1852, and subject to certain conditions hereafter mentioned, be effectually served with process issuing out of our Courts; and thus actions may be commenced in this country and prosecuted against absentees with a view ultimately to issuing execution against their property and effects here situate (k). It may, however, be as well to add, that civil process, by way of execution against the person (l) of a defendant, clearly cannot be enforced beyond the limits of this kingdom already specified; because, in such case, the maxim still holds—Extra territorium jus dicenti impune non paretur (m).

Service of process abroad.

In regard to Courts of Appellate Jurisdiction, viz. the Court of Exchequer Chamber and the House of Lords, I will, in concluding this Section, merely observe that the Court of Exchequer Chamber derives its origin from the Stat. 31 Edw. 3,

Courts of Appellate Jurisdiction.

Exchequer Chamber.

(i) Bristow v. Sequeville, 5 Exch. 275. See further as to the subject above treated of, Wheat. Intern. Law, 146, 149.

(k) Post, Chap. 4.

(l) A criminal offender, who has gone abroad, may, however, in some cases be brought within the jurisdiction of our Courts by virtue of international treaties.

(m) See Re Mansergh, 1 B. & S. 400.

As to taking the examination of witnesses out of the jurisdiction, see 22 Vict. c. 20.

Under stat. 22 & 23 Vict. c. 63, s. 1, it is competent to a Court in one part of Her Majesty's dominions to remit a case for the opinion of a Court in any other part thereof.

st. 1, c. 12, and was first established to hear and determine causes brought before it by Writ of Error from the Common Law side of the Exchequer. The jurisdiction and constitution of this Court have, however, been altered by the Stat. 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Wm. 4, c. 70,—s. 8 of which enacts that Writs of Error from any judgment given by the Court of King's Bench, Common Pleas, or Exchequer, shall be returnable only before the Judges of the other two Courts in the Exchequer Chamber.

House of Lords.

The House of Lords, albeit the highest judicial tribunal in the realm, proceeds, as long ago remarked, (n) on writs of error, and in "all matters of judgment" secundum legem terræ, so that there is not one law in Westminster Hall and another in the Court of the Lords above (o). This Court although conforming to its own prior decisions—which can only be reversed by Act of Parliament (p)—may decline to recognise as binding judgments pronounced by inferior tribunals. In Dom. Proc. a case may be reviewed and overruled, which in a lower Court must have been followed. Hence, in cases intricate or important—and few others offer themselves to the notice of the House—legal reasoning is there apt to take a wider range than it can do under circumstances less favourable; it may discard precedents, and search out principles—thus arriving at results consistent with themselves, and worthy even of those intellects which in days gone by developed the frame-work of our English Law.

(n) Arg., 8 How. St. Tr. 315.

(o) Id. ibid.

(p) Att.-Gen. v. Dean, &c., of Windsor, 8 H. L. Ca. 369, 391-2; et vide per Lord Kingsdown, Id. 459; Tommey v. White, 3 H. L. Ca. 49; per Lord Campbell, C. J., 1 E. & B.

804; per Alexander, C. B., 3 Bing. 562. See Wilson v. Wilson, 5 H. L. Ca. 40, 63.

As to the importance of adhering to settled law, see per Coleridge, J., 6 H. L. Ca. 537.

2. Mode of Procedure in Banc and at Judges' Chambers.

Although, in the earlier stages of their existence, the number of Judges sitting in the Courts at Westminster was subject to fluctuation, there is no doubt, that, for a long period prior to the stat. 1 Will. 4, c. 70, each of the three Courts was composed of a Chief and three Puisne Judges; and by the 1st section of that Act, the Crown was empowered to appoint an additional Puisne Judge to each Court; and this power having been acted upon, each of the three Courts has, since the passing of the Act in question, been presided over by a Chief and four Puisne Judges, who, by virtue of the 12 & 13 Will. 3, c. 2, hold office quamdiu se bene gesserint, and are only removable on the address of both Houses of Parliament; their tenure of office having been, moreover, since 1 Geo. 3, c. 23, unaffected by the demise of the Crown (q).

Constitution of superior Courts.
The Judges.

Besides the Judges, there are attached to each of the three Courts at Westminster five Masters, upon whom devolve many important and responsible duties, such as the taxing of attorneys' bills and of costs generally, the examination of affidavits, the making minutes of judgments, rules, and orders of the Court, and the investigation of matters specially referred to them. The Masters have, moreover, the custody of the records, and are often appealed to as being, in some sort, the depositaries of the rules of practice of the Courts. They have likewise certain peculiar duties to discharge, connected with the branches of exclusive jurisdiction of each Court (r).

The Masters.

The matters which are brought within the cognisance of our superior Courts of law may properly be divided or parcelled out into three great branches, viz. 1st, purely Civil; 2ndly, quasi Criminal; and 3rdly, Criminal—Proceedings.

Of what matters or classes of cases our Courts take cognisance.

(q) As to the civil liability of the Judges of our superior Courts, see post, Chap. 3.

(r) As to the duties of the Masters in each Court, see further, Dax, Pr. 11-22.

To the head of purely civil matters or proceedings might be referred the entire theory of, and practice connected with, private rights, wrongs, and remedies; the science of pleading in civil actions; the code of practice to be observed therein; everything, in short, connected with, or ancillary or incidental to, the conduct of a suit or an action at law, whether before a superior or an inferior tribunal.

Within the second of the two heads just specified might, according to the usual arrangement, be included matters or proceedings connected with indictments for nuisances, the non-repair of roads, &c., criminal informations for libels, the ordinary applications for writs of quo warranto, mandamus, or prohibition, questions raised for judicial decision in connection with the administration of the Poor Law, and many other kindred or analogous matters which daily demand the attention of our Courts in banc, but which it would be useless to enumerate.

As falling within the class of purely criminal proceedings might be specified an application for a habeas corpus to bring up the body of a prisoner, a motion to quash an inquisition, to remove an indictment for a misdemeanor into the Queen's Bench from the Sessions or from the Central Criminal Court; everything, in short, connected with or originating out of the general criminal law of the land.

Mode of procedure;

The mode of procedure observed in our superior Courts, so far as it is connected with matters of a civil nature, may conveniently be treated in the following order:—1st, the Mode of Procedure in Banc; 2ndly, that at Judges' Chambers; and 3rdly, that at Nisi Prius—whether on circuit or at the sittings in London or at Westminster.

—in banc.

1. In attempting to convey some idea of the mode in which our superior Courts, sitting in banc, are set judicially in motion, and of the manner in which their jurisdiction, when solicited, is exercised, a distinction must be noted between their formal and their summary jurisdiction. The first-mentioned branch of jurisdiction "consists in the sanction given by the authority of the Court to those formal de cursu proceedings which constitute the ordinary and regular steps in a suit" (s), and which will be separately considered in Chap. IV. of this Book.

Jurisdiction, formal or summary.

The summary jurisdiction exercised by the superior Courts "exists either at common law or under the provisions of certain Acts of Parliament. So far as it exists at common law, it is calculated to effect one of four purposes:—1. To prevent the regulations of the Courts from being infringed; 2. To prevent their authority from being abused; 3. To prevent it from producing hardship; 4. To enforce good conduct on the part of those who are peculiarly within their jurisdiction" (t). Cases referable respectively to each head or subdivision of the classification here adopted will present themselves to the reader during his progress through the present volume.

The summary jurisdiction of the Court is exercised upon motion, made to it, by rule or order of the Court founded thereupon; a motion being, indeed, merely an application to the Court, praying it to grant a rule, either conditional or absolute, in respect of some particular matter within its cognisance and jurisdiction. Such matter may or may not be connected with the progress of a cause; it may be, as already intimated (u), of a civil, of a quasi-criminal, or of a criminal nature.

Motions are usually made orally and in open Court; and an application of this kind must (save in some peculiar cases, ex. gr. where an order is made on the mere suggestion of the Attorney-General (x)) be accompanied by an affidavit (y) or

(s) Smith, El. View, 2nd ed., p. 14.

(t) Smith, El. View, 2nd ed., pp. 16-19, where each of these heads of jurisdiction is concisely explained and illustrated.

(u) Ante, p. 49.

(x) See, for instance, Adams v. Freeman, 2 Exch. 453.

(y) The 146th Rule of Practice expressly declares, that "No rule which the Court has granted upon the foundation of any affidavit shall be of any

Summary jurisdiction
—what;

—how exercised;

—by motion

written statement upon oath, exhibiting, in a concise and orderly manner, the facts out of which the application springs : an affidavit being required in order that authentic information may thus be given to the Court as to the specific grounds upon which its interference is sought ; and it is above all things necessary, that the contents of an affidavit should, when the nature of the facts deposed to admits of it, be explicit and positive : so that, if false, an indictment for perjury might lie against the deponent.

If the Court is satisfied with the contents of the affidavit, and thinks that a prima facie case has been made out for —and rule. its interference, a rule nisi or a rule to show cause will be granted ; the former being a rule conditioned to become absolute, or which makes itself absolute, unless cause be shown to the contrary ; and the latter, a rule calling on the opposite party to show to the Court, on a particular day named in the rule, good cause why the thing specified therein should not be done. There are cases also in which a rule absolute will be granted in the first instance (z).

Rule to show cause.

The rule to show cause is prepared in a proper form by the officer of the Court (a), and must, under the 149th of the Rules of Practice issued in Hilary Term, 1853, bear date of the day of the week, month, and year on which it is drawn up ; it must also be served on the opposite party ; provisions regulating the time, place, and mode of such service, will be found in the 162nd and five following of the Rules of Practice.

If, on the day appointed for that purpose and specified in force, unless such affidavit shall have been actually made before such rule was moved for, and produced in Court at the time of making the motion." The requisites of affidavits in general are specified in the Rules of Practice, commencing at reg. 188.

(z) See, for instance, Reg. H. T. 16

Vict. 168.

(a) "In every rule nisi for a new trial, or to enter a verdict or nonsuit, the grounds upon which such rule shall have been granted shall be shortly stated : " 17 & 18 Vict. c. 125, s. 33.

the rule (b), no cause is shown on behalf of the party upon whom it has been served and whom it seeks to affect, the rule will, upon a proper affidavit of service, be made absolute. If, however, cause is shown against it, that is, if counsel appear and argue in opposition to the rule, the Court will, in the exercise of their discretion, either discharge the rule, or in part or altogether make it absolute. In some cases, indeed, they will refer the matter thus brought before them to one of the Masters of the Court, that he may inquire into and report upon it; or occasionally they may, with a view to insuring complete justice between the parties, direct an issue, moulded in some particular form, for trial by a jury. But if the rule be made absolute, and be not re-opened by permission of the Court (which is, however, seldom granted), non-compliance (c) with its requirements will be a contempt of Court, and punishable by attachment (d); the attachment being a judicial writ directed to the sheriff, and commanding him to arrest the individual who has been guilty of the contempt.

In general, an attachment for contempt will be granted only where the party against whom it is applied for has been called upon to do, and has wilfully omitted to do, some specific act. Such motions occur, perhaps, most frequently in cases of awards. There the direction contained in the award becomes, upon the award being made a rule of Court, in effect, the direction of the Court. But, nevertheless, the Court always takes especial care to see that the award is express and distinct in directing the particular matter to be done before it will attach the party for disobeying it. And

(b) A rule will sometimes be enlarged, i. e., further time for showing cause will be granted, either by consent of the parties or on special grounds submitted to the Court. See Reg. H. T. 16 Vict. 151, 152. Cause, moreover, is sometimes, with a view to preventing delay and expense, shown in the first instance, i. e., on the rule nisi being moved.

(c) By stat. 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, s. 18, a rule of Court, whereby "any sum of money, or any costs, charges, or expenses shall be payable to any person," has the effect of a judgment, and is enforceable by execution.

(d) See Swinfen v. Swinfen, 1 C. B., N. S., 361.

the same strictness is likewise usually observed by the Court in enforcing performance of its own ordinary rules (e).

Under the 34th and ensuing sections of the C. L. Proc. Act, 1854, an appeal is allowed in certain cases, and subject to certain restrictions, to the party against whom the Court in banc may have decided on motion for a rule (f).

Although much time is occupied during the sitting of the Court in banc, in hearing motions for and arguments upon rules in respect of matters summarily brought before it, much time is also taken up with the argument of demurrers, special cases, special verdicts, and the like. Nor is business of this kind necessarily confined to the sittings in Term time (g); for our common law Courts also, by virtue of the 1 & 2 Vict. c. 32, s. 1, hold sittings at their discretion in the Vacation, at times of which due notice is given (h). And by the statute just cited, it is enacted, that all judgments then pronounced, and all rules and orders then made, shall have the same effect as if they had been pronounced or made in Term time.

Practice
Court.

As ancillary to the sittings in banc of the Court of Queen's Bench must be mentioned the Bail Court, where much business, usually of a less difficult kind than that discussed in the full Court, is despatched before a single Judge (i), who derives his authority, when sitting there, from the 1 Will. 4, c. 70, s. 1. This statute enacts that it shall and may be lawful for any one of the Judges of either of the three Courts at Westminster, when occasion shall so require, while the other Judges of the same Court are sitting in banc, to sit apart from them, for the purpose, inter alia, of hearing and deciding upon matters on motion, and making rules and orders in (e) Per Wilde, C. J., Doe d. Earl of Cardigan v. Bywater, 7 C. B. 794.

(f) See Abbott v. Feary, 6 H. & N. 113.

(g) The commencement and duration of each Term is regulated by statutes, viz. 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 70, s. 6, and 1 Will. 4, c. 3, s. 3. See also Reg. H. T. 16 Vict. 173, 174, 175.

(h) See Field v. Mackenzie, 6 C. D. 384.

(i) See Todd v. Jeffery, 7 Ad. & E. 519.

matters depending in the Court to which the presiding Judge may belong. By virtue of this Act, also, a single Judge of the Exchequer has sometimes sat apart from the full Court on the last day or two of Term, for the purpose of hearing and disposing of such motions as might be brought before him.

2. Besides the jurisdiction thus exercised by the superior Courts at Westminster, very many matters of much practical importance and urgency are disposed of at Judges' Chambers, where a Judge of each Court attends daily in Term time, and for the most part in Vacation also, for the hearing of such applications as may be made to him. During the long Vacation, indeed, one Judge usually stops in town to transact such business as may require his attention.

Business at Judges'
Chambers.

The origin of the jurisdiction of a Judge at Chambers is involved in much obscurity; but, as remarked by Chief Justice Wilmut (k), whenever it began, it stands upon too firm a basis to be now shaken,—that basis being constant immemorial usage, “sanctified and recognised” by the Courts of Westminster Hall, and, in many instances, by the legislature, so that it has, at this day, become as much a part of the law of the land as any other course of practice, which custom or usage has established.

Notwithstanding the difficulty of arriving at any precise and definite conclusion as to the time when, and mode in which, the jurisdiction of a Judge at Chambers originated, there can be no doubt that it was introduced with a view to the ease and convenience of suitors, and in order that they might be accommodated, in a great variety of cases, at comparatively little expense and trouble. The jurisdiction of a Judge at Chambers has been expressly recognised and sanctioned by the legislature: for instance,—the 1 Will. 4, c. 70, s. 4, enacts, that every Judge of the superior Courts of law, to whatever Court he may belong, shall be authorised to transact such business at Chambers and elsewhere, depending in any of the said Courts, as relates to matters over which they have a common jurisdiction, and as may, according to the course and practice of the Court, be transacted by a single Judge ; and the Jurisdiction of a Judge at Chambers is further extended by the 1 & 2 Vict. c. 45, s. 1, which provides, that every Judge of any one of the three superior Courts shall have equal jurisdiction, power, and authority to transact, out of Court, such business as may, according to the course and practice of the Court, be so transacted by a single Judge, relating to any suit or proceeding in either of the said Courts, or on the common law or revenue side of the Court of Exchequer, or to any matter usually transacted out of Court, although the said Courts have no common jurisdiction therein, in like manner as if the Judge transacting such business had been a Judge of the Court to which the same by law belongs: the effect of this enactment being to give to the Judges of the respective Courts a general and concurrent jurisdiction in any business which may be transacted out of Court by a single Judge (l).

In connection with this part of the subject, it may be observed, that sometimes a particular Act of Parliament requires that an application founded upon it should be made to the full Court ; and, in every such case, the jurisdiction of a Judge at Chambers is, of course, wholly excluded ; sometimes a distinction is specially made between the authority and powers to be exercised in banc, and those confided to a Judge at Chambers, and here again, provided the intention of the legislature be clearly expressed, no difficulty can occur. There are indeed cases in which a doubt might reasonably be felt as to the meaning of the words used by the legislature, and where, consequently, a Judge at Chambers would perhaps decline to exercise jurisdiction. If, however, some special power or authority is given to "the Courts" by statute, the presumption will be, that it was intended to be exercised as the Courts usually exercise their jurisdiction; and it may, accordingly, fall within the province of a Judge at Chambers to put in force the provisions of the Act in question (m).

(l) Per Maule, J., Bennett v. Deun, 4 M. & Gr. 638.

The ordinary mode of procedure at Chambers is, as might be expected, somewhat different from that observed in the full Court; for, as in the latter case, it is by rule and order of the Court, so, in the former, it is by summons, supported at the hearing by affidavits, and order of the Judge founded thereupon.

Mode of procedure at Chambers.

To explain the mode of procedure alluded to somewhat more minutely,—the party requiring the intervention of the Judge in the first place takes out a summons, which is issued by the Judge's clerk, and serves a copy of this summons upon the opposite party. The summons calls upon such party, or upon the individual whose interests may be affected by the application, to show cause at Chambers, on a particular day, and at an hour specified therein, why the matter or thing, performance of which is sought to be enforced, should not be done.

If the party on whom the summons is served does not appear thereto, the 153rd Rule of Practice directs, that the party taking out such summons shall be entitled to an order on the return of it (n).

Should, however, the opposite party duly appear to the summons, the matter involved in the application will be discussed before the Judge, who either will determine it himself (in which case he usually indorses a minute of his decision on the summons), or, in cases of importance, may

(m) See per Parke, B., Sutton v. Collier, 5 D. & L. 189, 190.

(n) See also Reg. Hil. T. 16 Vict. 154.

refer the applicant to the full Court. When the order is made by the Judge, it ought to be drawn up and served forthwith, otherwise the opposite party may treat it as abandoned.

If the order be served, but not obeyed, it should then be made a rule of Court (o); and may afterwards be enforced, if necessary, by attachment (p).

Should the party to whose interests the Judge's order is adverse, wish to dispute its correctness or validity, he may in general do so by an application to the full Court, which is in the nature of an appeal from the decision of the Judge at Chambers.

There is, however, a distinction to be noticed between cases where an objection is taken to the particular mode of compliance with the Judge's order, and those where the manner in which his discretionary power has been exercised and the propriety of his decision are called in question. In the former class of cases, the Judge who made the order will (on being applied to for that purpose) himself see that it is properly carried out, whilst, in the latter, the party dissatisfied with the decision at Chambers must (provided he is not debarred from doing so by the express words of some particular statute) apply to the Court in banc (q). Even in case of an erroneous decision by the Judge, it is worthy of notice, that although the Court in banc will control and revise such decision, where it was given under a delegated authority, yet, they will not in general do so, where the Judge was acting under distinct and independent powers, conferred upon him by the statute law; and, in this latter case, the words of the particular Act, and the intention of the legis-

(o) A Judge's order obtained in Vacation cannot, however, be made a rule of Court before the next Term: Reg. Hil. T. 16 Vict. 158.

(p) See Ex parte Willand, 11 C. B.

544; per Tindal, C. J., 9 Bing. 105; Dent v. Basham, 9 Exch. 469.

(q) See per Alderson, B., Rennie v. Leresford, 3 D. & L. 463; Griffith v. Selby, 9 Exch. 313.

lature, must necessarily determine as to the finality of the decision of the Judge (r).

It is a rule also, in support of which many authorities might be cited, that an appeal from the decision of a Judge at Chambers to the Court at Westminster must be made speedily, or, at all events, within a reasonable time, regard being had to special circumstances, if any, appearing in the case. "It is," says Lord Campbell, C. J. (s), "a wholesome rule that any application to this Court (Q. B.) in the shape of appeal from a decision of a Judge at Chambers should be made within the Term next after such decision."

The 3rd head of inquiry suggests . 50, was, as to the Business at Nisi Prius. mode of procedure before a J ing at Nisi Prius; inasmuch, however, as this v to be considered post, Chap. IV., which treats of cessive steps in an action at law, reference thither made for information upon the subject specified SECT. I Jurisdiction of the County Court (t).

The " Jurisdiction" of the County Court (u), as at General Jurisdiction. present ed, "in actions personal," is defined by the 58th of the original County Courts Act (9 & 10 Vict. c. 61, s. 1, in connection with the 13 & 14 Vict. c. 61, s. 1, 19 & 20 Vict. c. 108, ss. 23 and 24. The effect of sections is, that "all pleas of personal actions" (x),

(r) "It may be affirmed generally that where a thing may be done by the Court or a Judge, and the Judge does it, his decision may be reviewed:" per Maule, J., Wilkin v. Reed, 15 C. B. 200. See Jackson v. Kidd, 29 L. J., C. P., 221; Schuster v. Wheelwright, id. 222; C. L. Proc. Act, 1860, s. 4.

(s) Meredith v. Gittins, 18 Q. B. 260; Day's C. L. Proc. Acts, 2nd ed., 270.

(t) For detailed information upon this subject, the reader is referred to Broom's Pract. Co. Courts, 2nd ed., pp. 44-95.

(u) The County Court here spoken of, which is entirely a creature of the statute law, must not, of course, be confounded with the sheriff's court, which represents the old county court of the Anglo-Saxon and Norman times, ante, p. 24.

(x) See Stuart v. Jones, 1 E. & B.

22.

where the "debt, damage, or demand" does not exceed the sum of 50*l.*, "whether on balance of account or otherwise," or "after an admitted set-off," "may be holden in the County Court," "provided always, that the Court shall not have cognisance of any action of ejectment, or in which the title to any corporeal or incorporeal hereditaments, or to any toll, fair, market, or franchise shall be in question, or in which the validity of any devise, bequest, or limitation under any will or settlement may be disputed, or for any malicious prosecution, or for any libel or slander, * * or for seduction or breach of promise of marriage" (y). But with respect to any action which may be brought in any Superior Court of common law, "if both parties shall agree by a memorandum signed by them or their respective attornies, that any County Court named in such memorandum shall have power to try such action, such County Court shall have jurisdiction to try the same."

It will obviously be convenient, in treating of the jurisdiction of the County Court, to adopt the plan indicated in the statutory provisions above set out, and to consider, in the 1st place, the class of cases which fall within, and, 2ndly, those which are excluded from the jurisdiction of the Court. To prevent misapprehension, however, it may be right to observe in limine, that (save in some peculiar cases to be presently mentioned) the inferior Court, now treated of, possesses no jurisdiction altogether exclusive of that belonging to the higher tribunal, unless it be in this sense, that a plaintiff needlessly electing to sue in the more costly, where he might have had recourse to the cheaper tribunal, will not unfrequently be punished by the loss of costs. In certain cases also, viz. "where in any action of contract brought in a Superior Court the claim indorsed on the writ does not exceed 50*l.*, or where such claim, though it originally exceeded 50*l.*, is reduced by payment into Court, payment, an admitted set-off, or otherwise to a sum not exceeding 50*l.*”—it is enacted by 19 & 20 Vict. c. 108, s. 26, that “a Judge of a Superior Court, on the application of either party after issue joined, may in his discretion, and on such terms as he shall think fit, order that the cause be tried in any County Court which he shall name,” and the trial will take place there accordingly (z).

(y) An action for criminal conversation (which was excluded from the jurisdiction of the County Court) is no longer maintainable: 20 & 21 Vict. c. 85, s. 59.

1. The County Court has, then, a general jurisdiction to entertain pleas of personal actions, where the “debt, damage, or demand,” does not exceed the sum of 50*l.*, whether “on balance of account or otherwise,” or “after an admitted set-off.” This Court may, therefore, take cognisance of an action upon a bill of exchange or promissory note (a), or for the recovery of goods in specie (b) within the value of 50*l.* (c); though not of an action upon a judgment recovered in a Superior Court (d).

But what, it may be asked, is the precise meaning of the expression “balance of account,” which occurs in the 58th section of the County Courts Act? The answer is, that these words are intended to apply to accounts which have been adjusted, settled, ascertained, or balanced by the parties, or to any debt which has been reduced within the prescribed limit of 50*l.*, by payment (e) or something equivalent thereto. Suppose, for instance, a claim to be preferred in the County Court for a sum below 50*l.*, and suppose it appears that the debt originally due from the defendant exceeded that amount, but has been reduced below it by payment

(z) See also 19 & 20 Vict. c. 108, s. 39.

(a) Waters v. Handley, 6 D. & L. 88; Nind v. Rhodes, 5 D. & L. 621. See also Lowley v. Rossi, 12 Q. B. 952; 19 & 20 Vict. c. 108, s. 4.

(b) Taylor v. Addyman, 13 C. B.

309.

(c) Leader v. Rhys, 10 C. B., N. S., 369.

(d) 19 & 20 Vict. c. 108, s. 27.

(e) Secus, as to tender, see Crosse v. Seaman, 10 C. B. 834.

before action brought, the defendant will not, under such circumstances, be entitled to say, that the case is without the jurisdiction of the County Court (f). So, if anything other than money be received in reduction of a debt by agreement of the parties, that will be equivalent to payment, so as to bring the case within the jurisdiction of the County Court (g), the question, whether it was so received or not, being determinable from the evidence pro and con. which may be adduced (h).

A claim exceeding 50*l*. cannot, however, by merely giving credit for a set-off (i), be reduced so as to bring it within the cognisance and jurisdiction of the County Court (k) ; though as above stated, a set-off admitted by the defendant may, under the recent statute (l), bring a claim within the jurisdiction of the County Court. But clearly a case will not be cognisable by the County Court in which a claim exceeding 50*l*. is reduced by a plea of set-off within that amount ; for if it were so, the Court might be called upon to investigate two several claims, each of them far exceeding the limits of its statutory jurisdiction (m).

Splitting demands.

The next point to be noticed upon this part of the subject is, that, by the 63rd section of the 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, read in connection with the 13 & 14 Vict. c. 61, s. 1, "it shall not be lawful for any plaintiff to divide any cause of action, for the purpose of bringing two or more suits" in the County Court. But a plaintiff claiming "a debt, damage, or demand" for more than 50*l*., may, if so minded, (by the express provisions of the 63rd section just mentioned,)

(f) See per Maule, J., Woodhams v. Newman, 7 C. B. 654 ; per Parke, B., Turner v. Berry, 5 Exch. 858.

(g) See Hooper v. Stephens, 4 Ad. & E. 71 ; Hills v. Mernard, 10 Q. B. 266.

(k) See Joseph v. Henry, 1 L. M. & P. 338 ; Awards v. Rhodes, 8 Exch. 312.

(i) As to the distinction between "payment" and "set-off," see Thomas v. Cross, 7 Exch. 728.

(k) Awards v. Rhodes, 8 Exch. 312.

(l) 19 & 20 Vict. c. 108, s. 24.

(m) Woodhams v. Newman, 7 C. B. 654 ; Berwick v. Capper, Id. 669 ; Kimpton v. Willey, 1 L. M. & P. 280.

"abandon the excess," and recover to an amount not exceeding the 50*l.* (n).

As explanatory of the above section (which, in common parlance, is said to forbid the "splitting of a demand,") Grimbly v. Aykroyd (o), should be consulted, where the facts were as follow : the defendant was a railway contractor, and the plaintiff was a shopkeeper, who supplied goods to the workmen employed on the line, upon the authority of tickets, specifying particular amounts as due to them, signed by a sub-contractor employed by defendant, and given to the workmen in part payment of their wages. Upwards of three thousand of these tickets had been presented to the plaintiff, and goods supplied upon them to the men. The defendant was served with 228 summonses, to appear at the Westminster County Court, to answer the plaintiff as to each of the summonses, "in an action on contract for goods sold," the several sums sought to be recovered amounting together to upwards of 300*l.* Owing to the mode in which this case was presented to the Court at Westminster, viz. on motion for a prohibition to the local Court, no question arose as to whether or not the defendant had authorised the supply of goods by the plaintiff. His authority was taken as proved ; and we may also assume that the goods had been supplied in pursuance of one continuing authority, and in the same course of dealing between the parties. In delivering judgment in this case that a prohibition ought to go, the Court of Exchequer drew a distinction between a claim or demand comprising several distinct and independent matters, which may clearly be recovered by separate suits in the County

(n) This abandonment of the excess must, under the 35th Rule of Practice, be made upon the particulars of demand.

(o) 1 Exch. 479 ; Judgm., Wood v. Perry, 3 Exch. 445 ; Judgm., Bonsey

v. Wordsworth, 18 C. B. 334-5 ; Cope-man v. Hart, 14 C. B., N. S., 731, 735 ; per Erie, J., Jones v. Prichard, 6 D. & L. 530. See also Box v. Green, 9 Exch. 503.

Court (p), and a running account consisting, indeed, of various items, but which is meant to constitute one entire debt. Where, in the case of a tradesman's bill, they remarked, one item is connected with another in this sense, that the dealing is not intended to terminate with one contract, but to be continuous, so that one item, if not paid, shall be united with another and form one entire demand, the plaintiff cannot split these items into separate causes of action, but must sue for the aggregate amount (q).

Let us suppose a case somewhat analogous to that just considered, but in reality to be decided on other grounds;—that a banker receives a sum of money, belonging to different persons severally, from their agent, who is charged to divide it amongst them in distinct proportions; let us further suppose that the aggregate sum paid into the bank exceeds 50*l.*, but that the several undivided portions of which it is composed fall respectively within that limit; it is, of course, under the circumstances stated, clear, that an action would not lie in the County Court at suit of the agent for the entire deposit paid into the bank, inasmuch as that would be without the jurisdiction of the inferior tribunal; but it is also clear, that an action could not be maintained there for his several share by any one of the individuals beneficially interested in the fund, upon this ground, that the original contract was not with him, but was between the banker and the agent (r).

Again, it is a common practice for farmers and graziers to send their cattle to a particular salesman, who perhaps sells to one individual a lot of beasts belonging to many different owners. Now, here the contract of sale is between the salesman and the purchaser, so that each separate owner could not sue the latter for the price of his cattle (s).

(p) See Brunskill v. Powell, 1 L. M. & P. 550; Kimpton v. Willey, Id. 280; Wickham v. Lee, 12 Q. B. 521.

(q) See per Jervis, C. J., Bonsey v. Wordsworth, 18 C. B. 328-9.

(r) See Pinto v. Santos, 5 ant. 447.

(s) Per Martin, B., Walsh v. Provan, 8 Exch. 852.

Cases like the foregoing are not to be decided by reference to the wording of the County Court Acts, but upon elementary principles, on which the law of contracts is dependent.

But, although a cause of action cannot be divided in order to entitle a claimant to sue in the County Court, a plaintiff claiming more than 50*l.* is, by the 63rd sect. of the 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, allowed to abandon the excess of his demand, and to sue for the residue in the County Court.

As to abandoning the excess.

In the event of his doing so, however, "the judgment of the Court" shall be in full discharge of all demands in "cause of action," and "entry of the judgment shall be made accordingly;" the consequence of abandoning the excess of his demand over the 50*l.* will consequently be to preclude the plaintiff from afterwards recovering it by action, and, should the defendant have any ground of set-off available, such abandonment may be attended with additional inconvenience and prejudice. This results from the fact, that a plaintiff cannot compel his adversary to plead a set-off; and should he abandon the excess of his demand, so as to bring his claim within the jurisdiction of the County Court, and then be met by a set-off, he might of course be altogether defeated in his action; and, at all events, the claimant would find himself exposed to the risk of having his demand reduced, not merely by the amount abandoned, but also by the amount of the set-off. If, on the other hand, the defendant does not plead his set-off to the plaintiff's reduced demand, but sues for it in a cross action, then the plaintiff will be debarred in that action from setting-off any of the abandoned portion of his original claim by the express words of the 63rd section of the Act (t).

In practice, therefore, a plaintiff will do well to avail himself of the power of abandonment above alluded to, only where the excess abandoned is unimportant in amount, or in cases where no set-off can be established, and where the recovery of any part of his demand might be jeopardised by delay.

(t) See per Maule, J., Woodhams v. Newman, 7 C. B. 666-7.

A reference to the 58th sect. of the 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, already set out (u), and to the 19 & 20 Vict. c. 108, s. 23, will show the restrictions imposed on the jurisdiction of the County Court. The cases wholly, or save by consent of parties (x), excluded from the jurisdiction of the County Court are as under:—Any action of ejectment; or in which the title to a corporeal or incorporeal (y) hereditament, or to any toll (z), fair, market, or franchise (a) shall be in question; any action in which the validity (b) of a devise, bequest, or limitation under a will or settlement may be disputed; any action for a malicious prosecution (c), or for libel, slander, seduction, or breach of promise of marriage.

The cases cited at the foot of this page may if necessary be consulted with reference to the several matters of minor importance included in the above list, to which they respectively apply. Two questions, however, of considerable interest to the practitioner demand consideration in connection with that class of cases in which the "title" to land is in question before the County Court:—1st. How is the judge of that Court to act when the title to land is alleged to be or is in question? 2ndly. When may it properly be said to be so?

1st. The plaintiff may possibly, in his particulars, so far

(u) Ante, p. 60.

(x) Id.

(y) See Stephenson v. Raine, 2 E. & B. 744; Davis v. Walton, 8 Exch. 153; Badddeley v. Denton, 4 Exch. 508; Stewart v. Jones, 1 E. & B. 22.

(z) Reg. v. Everett, 1 E. & B. 273; Hunt v. Great Northern R. Co., 2 L. M. & P. 268; S. C., 10 C. B. 900.

(a) See Davis v. Walton, 8 Exch. 153.

(b) The County Court judge has jurisdiction, however, in regard to a claim for a legacy, when its "validity" is not disputed, post, p. 69. See also Gibbon v. Gibbon, 13 C. B. 205; Hewston v. Phillips, 11 Exch. 699; Winch v. Winch, 13 C. B. 128; Longbottom v. Longbottom, 8 Exch. 203; Fuller v. Mackay, 2 E. & B. 573.

(c) Jones v. Currey, 2 L. M. & P. 474; Hunt v. North Staffordshire R. Co., 2 H. & N. 451. See Chivers v. Savage, 5 E. & B. 897.

exhibit the true substance and nature of his claim, as altogether to exclude it from the cognisance of the Court to which he would refer it, and here of course no practical difficulty as to the mode of dealing with the claim can be felt (d). Again, the objection to the jurisdiction, founded on the subject-matter in dispute, though not appearing on the particulars or summons, may be raised by the defendant at the hearing; and, if so, the duty of the judge will be, in the first instance, to inquire into the case, with a view to satisfying himself whether the title does really come in question or does not. Should he think that it does come in question, he will dismiss the summons; should he think that it does not come in question, he will hear and adjudicate upon the claim: the remedy open to the party dissatisfied with the decision of the judge being by application to one of the superior Courts, in the former case, for a mandamus, and, in the latter, for a prohibition, to issue to the County Court (e). It is not, however, absolutely incumbent on a defendant sued in a County Court, who knows that the title to land must come in question, to wait until the hearing, in order then to put forward the objection. It is quite open to him, if so minded, upon being served with process out of the inferior Court, to apply at once for a prohibition to restrain the County Court judge from proceeding further with the case (f), the application being supported by proper affidavits.

2ndly. When or under what circumstances may the title to a corporeal hereditament properly be said to be in question? It is clear that a mere colourable pretence of title, or a claim to what can have no valid existence in law, will not suffice to (d) See Sewell v. Jones, 1 L. M. & P. 525.

(e) Latham v. Spedding, 2 L. M. & P. 378; Judgm., Thompson v. Ingham, 1 L. M. & P. 219; cited per Watson, B., Re Baker, 2 H. & N. 234; Stephenson v. Raine, 2 E. & B. 744; Lawford v. Partridge, 1 H. & N. 621; Mountnoy v. Collier, 1 E. & B. 630.

(f) Per Wightman, J., Sewell v. Jones, 1 L. M. & P. 525. See Wadsworth v. Queen of Spain, 17 Q. B. 171.

oust the jurisdiction of the County Court ; the title must be brought bond fide in question (g). Thus, if a tenant be sued for use and occupation, and rely on the fact, that his landlord's title has expired during the tenancy, evidence of such fact will oust the jurisdiction of the County Court (h). A plaint was entered in a County Court for a trespass in removing plaintiff's goods from certain rooms of a house, the residue of which was occupied by the defendant ; and it appeared that the real question in dispute was, whether the plaintiff had let the whole house to the defendant, or had reserved for himself the rooms in which the trespass was alleged to have been committed : upon these facts it was held, that a question of title to a "corporeal hereditament" had come in question, and that the County Court judge had no jurisdiction to adjudicate upon the plaint (i). So, if a party were charged in a County Court with a liability arising by reason of his ownership of land, and he disclaimed the ownership, a question of title would be raised, and the jurisdiction of the Court would, in the absence of any enactment overriding the County Court Act (9 & 10 Vict. c. 95), be ousted (j).

It is important to add, that by stat. 19 & 20 Vict. c. 108. s. 25, where in any action in the County Court "the title to any corporeal or incorporeal hereditament, or to any toll, fair, market, or franchise, shall incidentally come in question, the judge shall have power to decide the claim which it is the immediate object of the action to enforce, if both parties at the hearing shall consent, in any writing signed by them, or their attorneys, to the judge having such power ; but the judgment of the Court shall not be evidence of title between the (g) Lloyd v. Jones, 6 C. B. 81.

(h) Mountney v. Collier, 1 E. & B. 630. See Kerkin v. Kerkin, 3 E. & B. 399 ; Emery v. Barnett, 27 L. J., C. P., 216 ; S. C., 4 C. B., N. S., 423.

(i) Chew v. Holroyd, 8 Exch. 249.

(j) Reg. v. Harden, 2 E. & B. 188.

But the County Court has still cognisance of replevin, even where the title to land does come in question : Reg. v. Raines, 1 E. & B. 855 ; Fordham v. Akers, 33 L. J., Q. B., 67. See also Earl of Harrington v. Ramsay, 8 Exch. 879, and 2 E. & B. 669.

parties or their privies in any other action in that Court, or in any proceeding in any other Court; and such consent shall not prejudice or affect any right of appeal of either of the parties to such first-mentioned action."

Besides the matters already noticed as falling within the cognisance of the County Court, that Court has some peculiar branches of jurisdiction, which are, in their nature, equitable rather than legal or within the direct cognisance of our common law. Thus, by the 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, s. 65, coupled with the 1st section of the Extension Act (13 & 14 Vict. c. 61), the County Court may inquire into any demand not exceeding in amount 50*l.*, in respect of "the whole or part of the unliquidated balance of a partnership account," or "of a distributive share" of personal estate "under an intestacy," or "of any legacy under a will." It follows, therefore, that a partner suing his co-partner in a County Court cannot be met by the objection, which would be fatal to him in one of the Courts at Westminster, of a subsisting partnership (k). Neither can a legatee, suing in a County Court, be met by the objection taken in Deeks v. Strutt (l), that an action at law will not, in the absence of special circumstances, lie for a legacy.

The inferior tribunal here spoken of, besides its jurisdiction by suit or action at law, is also, in some cases, invested with power to afford redress of an extraordinary kind, as on interpleader, or where the possession of any house, land, or other corporeal hereditament is unlawfully withheld by the tenant from his landlord; cases requiring the exercise of these peculiar powers do not, however, fall properly within the scope or design of the present section, although some jurisdiction.

Peculiar

(k) Compare Rees v. Williams, 7 Exch. 51, and Fuller v. Mackay, 2 E. & B. 578, with Bovill v. Hammond, 6 B. & C. 149, where Lord Tenningen, C. J., says, that "between partners, whether they are so in general, or for a particular transaction only, no account can be taken at law."

(l) 5 T. R. 690; Jones v. Tanner, 7 B. & C. 542; with which compare Pears v. Wilson, 6 Exch. 833, and cases cited ante, p. 66, n. (b).

more specific allusion to them will be made in the Fifth Chapter of this Book, which treats generally of Extraordinary Remedies (m).

Costs of plaintiff suing in superior Court—

how affected by the County
Court Acts,

The consequence of suing in a superior Court for a debt, damage, or demand recoverable in the County Court may sometimes be serious, so far as regards the right to costs of the plaintiff if successful, such consequence flowing from certain express statutory provisions, viz. the 13 & 14 Vict. c. 61, ss. 11 and 12, the 15 & 16 Vict. c. 54, s. 4, and the 19 & 20 Vict. c. 108, s. 30, the design of which is to check the bringing of trivial actions in the superior Courts. The general effect of these clauses is as follows :—

Where a plaintiff suing in a superior Court on a cause of action within the jurisdiction of the County Court recovers (n) not more than 20*l.* in an action of contract (except for breach of promise of marriage), he shall have no costs, whether the judgment be by default (o) or after verdict, unless the judge certifies either that the cause of action was one for which no plaint could have been entered in the County Court (p), or that, in his opinion, there was a sufficient reason for suing before the superior tribunal (q).

Again, where a plaintiff suing in a superior Court on a cause of action within the jurisdiction of the County Court, recovers (r) not more than 5*l.* in an action of tort (s), (except for malicious prosecution, libel, slander or seduction), he shall have no costs, unless the defendant suffers judgment by de-

(m) See Broom's Prac. Co. Courts, 2nd ed., Part III., Chap. 2.

(n) See Parr v. Lillicrap, 1 H. & C. 615; Boulding v. Tyler, 3 B. & S. 472; Beard v. Perry, 2 B. & S. 493; Smith v. Edge, 33 L. J., Ex., 9; Ashcroft v. Foulkes, 18 C. B. 261; James v. Vane, 29 L. J., Q. B., 169; Jones v. Jones, 29 L. J., C. P., 151.

(o) 19 & 20 Vict. c. 108, s. 30; Buddeley v. Bernard, 11 C. B., N. S.,

421; Heard v. Edey, 1 H. & N. 716.

(p) See Noble v. Bank of England, 33 L. J., Ex., 81.

(q) See Hewlett v. Tarte, 11 C. B., N. S., 634; Hatch v. Lewis, 7 H. & N. 367.

(r) Clifton v. Furley, 7 H. & N. 783.

(s) See Dunston v. Paterson, 5 C. B., N. S., 267; Smith v. Harnor, 3 Id. 829.

fault (t), or the judge certifies as above mentioned. And now, by the C. L. Proc. Act, 1860, s. 34, "when the plaintiff in any action for an alleged wrong (u) in any of the superior Courts recovers by the verdict of a jury less than 5*l.*, he shall not be entitled to recover or obtain from the defendant any costs whatever in respect of such verdict, whether given upon any issue or issues tried, or judgment passed by default, in case the judge or presiding officer before whom such verdict is obtained shall immediately afterwards certify on the back of the record, or on the writ of trial or writ of inquiry, that the action was not really brought to try a right besides the mere right to recover damages, and that the trespass or grievance in respect of which the action was brought was not wilful and malicious, and that the action was not fit to be brought."

The mode of distinguishing between an action of contract and an action of tort, in reference to the above cited clauses of the County Court Acts, may be learned from the cases infra (x).

If the judge does not certify at the trial, the plaintiff must, in order to get his costs, make application to the Court in banc, or to a judge at chambers (y), and establish satisfactorily one or other of the two grounds for the allowance of costs just mentioned; or else he must show that the action has been already removed from the County Court by writ of certiorari, or that the cause of action is one falling within the concurrent jurisdiction of the superior and County Courts, by virtue of the 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, s. 128.

This concurrent jurisdiction is permitted by the section just mentioned in certain cases, viz. :—

(t) See Glynne v. Roberts, 9 Ex. 253.

(u) These words do not apply to detinue : Danby v. Lamb, 11 C. B., N. S., 423.

(x) Tattan v. Great Western R. Co.,

29 L. J., Q. B., 184; Legge v. Tucker, 1 H. & N. 500; Morgan v. Ravey, 6 H. & N. 265.

(y) See Warman v. Halahan, 30 L. J., Q. B., 48.

1. Where the plaintiff dwells more than twenty miles from the defendant (z) ; or, 2. Where the cause of action did not arise wholly or in some material point (a) within the jurisdiction of the Court within which the defendant dwells or carries on his business at the time of the action brought (b) ; or, 3. Where any officer of the County Court is a party, except in respect of any claim to any goods and chattels taken in execution of the process of the Court, or the proceeds or value thereof.

It is not my intention to enter here into a minute examination of the provisions of the County Court Acts above cited—a cursory glance at them will show, that, although in certain cases they affect the right to costs of a successful plaintiff, they do not vest any exclusive jurisdiction in the County Court.

(z) See Bennett v. Benham, 15 C. B., N. S., 616; Waylett v. Windham, 33 L. J., Ex., 172; Kerr v. Haynes, 29 L. J., Q. B., 70; Butler v. Ablewhite, 6 C. B., N. S., 740; Bailey v. Bryant, 28 L. J., Q. B., 86; Dunston v. Paterson, 5 C. B., N. S., 267; Waterlow v. Dobson, 8 E. & B. 585; 19 & 20 Vict. c. 108, s. 18.

(a) See Newcombe v. De Roos, 2 E. & E. 271; Wood v. Perry, 3 Exch. 442; Norman v. Marchant, 7 Exch.

723; Wilde v. Sheridan, 21 L. J., Q. B., 260; Copeman v. Hart, 14 C. B., N. S., 731.

(b) See Corbett v. General Steam Nav. Co., 4 H. & N. 482; Adams v. Great Western R. Co., 6 H. & N. 404; Shiels v. Great Northern R. Co., 30 L. J., Q. B., 331; followed in Brown v. London and North Western R. Co., 32 L. J., Q. B., 318; Keynsham Lime Co. v. Baker, 33 L. J., Ex., 41.

CHAPTER III.

THE NATURE OF RIGHTS ENFORCEABLE BY ACTION.

IN this Chapter I shall inquire generally (a) as to the nature of that right which gives a remedy at law. To prevent misconception, however, during the progress of this inquiry, I would at the outset observe, that the remedy obtainable in a Court of law is in kind either ordinary or extraordinary,—it may be by action, or it may be by mandamus, by summary application to the equitable jurisdiction of the Court, or in various other ways, which will be specified in the concluding Chapter of this Book. At present, however, I shall restrict myself to considering under what circumstances the remedy by action at law is available to an injured party, and what may be the true definition and meaning of the term “right of action” in connection with legal science.

A “right of action” may, in the words of the Roman law, be defined to be jus persequendi in judicio quod sibi debetur (b),—it exists wherever a legal claim to damages, or to the recovery of some specific thing, has accrued; the action itself being the formal and prescribed mode of procedure whereby the right is vindicated or enforced in a Court of law (c).

Right of action—what

(a) The inquiry as to the nature of legal rights and remedies is here pursued generally. I shall return to this subject hereafter when treating of Contracts (Bk. II.) and of Torts (Bk. III.) respectively.

(b) I. 4. 6. pr., adopted in Co. Litt. 285. a. In the Roman or Civil Law, “the word actio was used originally to denote the particular form in which certain legal proceedings were carried on; from this it was transferred to signify the legal remedy by which every person might enforce his right:” Philimore, Introd to Rom. L., p. 61.

(c) See further as to this, post, Chap. 4, Sect. 1.

It follows, from the very terms of the definition just given, that, before commencing an action in any given case, the practitioner must apply himself to consider, 1st, whether any right of action in truth exists; and, if this question be answered affirmatively, then, 2ndly, what may be the proper and specific method of enforcing it (d).

Now, it is not every substantial wrong, still less every imaginary grievance, which affords a right of action for redress. Nor is it true, that for every kind of damage or loss occasioned by the act of another, a remedy is given by the law. It not unfrequently happens, that damage, palpable and undeniable though it be, is, in technical phraseology, damnum sine injuriâ, that is, damage, unaccompanied by any tortious or wrongful act whereof cognisance can be taken in a Court of justice.

Here, accordingly, it becomes necessary to define respectively the words damnum and injuria, or, at all events, to state in what precise sense, and with what signification, it is in this volume proposed to use them.

Injuria.

The word injuria will be employed as signifying a "legal wrong," that is, a wrong cognisable or recognised as such by the law (e). The word damnum will be used as signifying "damage," not necessarily pecuniary or perceptible, but appreciable, and capable, in legal contemplation, of being estimated by a jury (f).

Damnum.

Damnum sine injuriâ.

Such being the sense properly assignable to the word damnum and to injuria, I proceed forthwith to establish, by apposite examples (g), this proposition, that damnum

(d) This latter question will be discussed, post, Chap. 4, Sect. 1.

(e) Omne quod non jure fit injuriâ fieri dicitur: Brissou. ad verb. Injuria; 1 Inst. 158. b.

(f) As showing the distinction between damnum and injuria, see Backhouse v. Bonomi, 9 H. L. Ca. 503;

S. C., E. B. & E. 646, 622, cited post.

(g) Such, I may remind the reader, seems to be the only legitimate mode of proving the proposition stated in the text. Reported cases furnish the best—often the only—evidence of what law is (ante, p. 20), and every judgment when delivered becomes part of the law sine injuriâ, that is, damage unaccompanied by legal wrong, is not actionable at law.

Of the particular kind of damnum just spoken of, the law of contracts does not readily afford us instances; because, there, the mere breach of a covenant or agreement between parties is in itself an injuria of which our law, acting in accordance with the most elementary principles of jurisprudence, will take notice (h). But when we turn to the consideration of torts or "wrongs independent of contract," sufficient examples in affirmance of the proposition above laid down will be found, without much research, to present themselves.

In illustration of such damage might be mentioned the loss inflicted on a schoolmaster by the establishment of a rival school adjacent to his own, or on a millowner by the erection of a mill contiguous to his own, and the consequent loss of custom (i), or by an interruption of the current of air to his mill (k). In neither of these cases is there any tortious element apparent, that is any injuria or legal wrong upon which an action could be founded (l).

It would also be easy to show that a man may, without incurring liability, so use his own property as to cause damage to his neighbour, provided the damnum be not injuriosum. For instance, the principle has often been recognised, that "one landowner cannot, by altering the condition of his land, deprive the owner of the adjoining land of the privilege of using his own as he might have done before. Thus he cannot, by building a house near the margin of his land, prevent his neighbour from excavating his own land, although of the land: Ram, Sci. Leg. Judg. p. 2; Id. Chap. 17.

(h) Post, Book II.

(i) Arg., 10 St. Tr. 403; 3 Bla. Com. 219.

(k) Widd v. Bird, 13 C. B., N. S., 841; S. C., 10 Id. 268.

(l) See, also, Hill v. Balls, 2 H. & N. 299; Cooke v. Waring, 2 H. & C. 332; Sommerville v. Mirehouse, 1 B. & S. 652, 657.

it may endanger the house ; nor from building on his own land, although it may obstruct windows, unless, indeed, by lapse of time, the adjoining land has become subject to a right analogous to what, in the Roman law, was called a servitude" (m).

Apposite to this subject are the remarks of North, C. J., in Barnardiston v. Soame (n). "There is sometimes," says he, "damnum absque injuriâ though the thing be done on purpose to bring a loss upon another without any design of benefit to himself ; as if a new house be erected contiguous to my ground, I may build anything on purpose to blind the lights of that new house, and no action will accrue though the malice were never so great (o) ; much less will it lie when a man acts for his own safety. If a jury will find a special verdict ; if a judge will advise and take time to consider ; if a bishop will delay a patron and impanel a jury to inquire of the right of patronage ; you cannot bring an action for these delays though you suppose it to be done maliciously and on purpose to put you to charges ; though you suppose it to be done scienter, knowing the law to be clear ; for they take but the liberty the law has provided for their safety, and there can be no demonstration that they have not real doubts, for these are within their own breasts : it would be very mischievous that a man might not have leave to doubt without so great peril."

To take an instance of a different kind : A comment upon a literary production, exposing its follies and errors, and holding up the author to ridicule, will not be deemed a libel (p), provided such comment does not exceed the limits

(m) Judgm., Smith v. Kenrick, 7 C. B. 565-6 ; Humphries v. Brogden, 12 Q. B. 739, and cases cited post, pp. 81 et seq.

(n) 6 How. St. Tr. 1099. This was an action against a sheriff for a double return of members to serve in Parliament.

(o) See, also, per Lord Wensleydale, Chasemore v. Richards, 7 H. L. Ca. 388.

(p) See the definition of a libel, post, Book III., Chap. 2.

of fair and candid criticism, by attacking the character of the writer unconnected with his publication ; and a comment of this description every one has a right to publish, although the author may suffer a loss from it (q). In such a case, although there be damnum there is no injuria ; and even the loss is that which the party criticised ought to sustain, inasmuch as it is presumably the loss of fame and profits to which he was not fairly entitled (r). So "however harsh or hasty, or even untrue may be the conduct of a person speaking on a privileged occasion, if he honestly and bonâ fide believes what he utters to be true, no action will lie : it is damnum absque injuriâ" (s). A fortiori, where words are uttered neither actionable per se, nor spoken with reference to a person in his trade or profession, nor productive of special damage, there is in law no injuria, and, consequently, no right of action (t).

Again, an action for seduction is in our law founded upon a fiction. The basis of this action, when brought even by a father to recover damages for the seduction of his daughter, having "been uniformly placed from the earliest times not upon the seduction itself, which is the wrongful act of the defendant, but upon the loss of service of the daughter, in which service" the parent "is supposed to have a legal right or interest." It has, accordingly, always been held, that, in an action for seduction, loss of service must be alleged in the seduction.

Action for

(q) See per Lord Ellenborough, C. J., Carr v. Hood, 1 Camp. 355, n. ; McLeod v. Wakley, 3 Car. & P. 311 ; 2 Selw. N. P., 12th ed., 1050, 1051. See Paris v. Levy, 9 C. B., N. S., 342.

(r) Per Lord Ellenborough, C. J., Carr v. Hood, supra.

(s) Per Willes, J., Revis v. Smith, 18 C. B. 143 ; Henderson v. Broomhead, 4 H. & N. 569. See Blagrove v. Bristol Waterworks Co., 1 H. & N. 369, 383.

"If a man were to make false oath of threats used against him, and maliciously and without reasonable and probable cause to exhibit articles of the peace against another, such a proceeding would be actionable : " per Erle, C. J., Steward v. Gromett, 29 L. J., C. P., 175 ; S. C., 7 C. B., N. S., 191 ; Fitzjohn v. Machinder, 9 C. B., N. S., 505 ; S. C., 8 Id. 78.

(t) Post, Book III., Chap. 2.

declaration and must be proved at the trial, or the plaintiff will fail, notwithstanding the production of evidence conclusive as regards the guilt of the defendant; for the wrong done by his act our law does not esteem per se as an injuria, using that word in its strict sense, but merely as damnum sine injuria, for which, consequently, an action will not lie (u).

Action for suing plaintiff by mistake.

In further illustration of the nature of damnum sine injuria may be mentioned the case of Davies v. Jenkins (x), which decides, that an action will not lie against an attorney, who, being retained to sue for a debt a person of the same name as the plaintiff, by mistake and without malice takes all the proceedings to judgment and execution inclusive against the plaintiff; in this case it is, of course, obvious, that the individual thus sued by mistake would have a good defence to the action, and would, if successful, recover in it such costs as on taxation the law allows. If, however, it be asked, what further remedy he might have for the inconvenience and trouble occasioned him, the answer is, that, in point of law, if the proceedings were adopted purely through mistake, though injury may have resulted to him, it is damnum absque injuria, for which no action would lie. Every defendant, against whom an action is unnecessarily brought, experiences some injury or inconvenience beyond what the costs will compensate him for (y).

Action for draining off

So, again, Acton v. Blundell (z), and Chasemore v. Rich-

(u) Grinnell v. Wells, 7 M. & Gr. 1033; Mary's case, 9 Rep. 113 a.; Thompson v. Ross, 5 H. & N. 16; Rist v. Faux, 32 L. J., Q. B., 386; Manley v. Field, 7 C. B., N. S., 96; Davis v. Williams, 10 Q. B. 725; Eager v. Grimwood, 1 Exch. 61; Harris v. Butler, 2 M. & W. 539. Post, Book III., Chap. 4.

(x) 11 M. & W. 745, cited Leg. Max., 4th ed., p. 198.

(y) Per Rolfe, B., 11 M. & W. 756. See Cotterell v. Jones, 11 C. B. 713; Collins v. Cave, 4 H. & N. 225, 235 (where the Court remark that "it is difficult to see that it is actionable to induce a third person to bring a wrongful action"). S. C., 6 Id. 131; Cas- trique v. Behrens, 30 L. J., Q. B., 163, 168.

(z) 12 M. & W. 324. The principles laid down in Acton v. Blundell were arde (a), specially illustrate the nature of damnum sine injuria. In the former of these cases it is laid down as a proposition generally true, that our law gives to the owner of land all that lies beneath its surface; whence it follows that the owner may dig beneath such surface at his free will and pleasure; and if, in so digging, he casually does an injury to his neighbour—as by draining off the water from his well—such injury cannot, in the absence of any prescriptive right, become the foundation of an action.

water from plaintiff's
well.

In Chasemore v. Richards (b), the facts were as under:—The plaintiff, a landowner and millowner, had, for above sixty years, enjoyed the use of a stream, which was chiefly supplied by subterranean water percolating through the substrata. Water which would otherwise have thus supplied the stream was diverted from it by the defendant, an adjoining landowner, who dug on his own ground a well for the purpose of supplying water to the inhabitants of the district. Plaintiff having lost the use of the stream, was held to have no right of action against defendant for thus abstracting the water, which “was of sensible value in and towards the working of the said mill.”

We thus see that large and distinct classes of cases do occur, in which damage and loss are occasioned to an individual by the act of another, and yet no redress is given him by the law (c), but if the above cases, and others which might be mentioned to a like effect, were examined with due care, it would be found, that, in thus declining to recognise the validity of the claims for pecuniary compensation impugned by Coleridge, J., in Chasemore v. Richards, 2 H. & N. 192, 194; S. C., 7 H. L. Ca. 349. See Roath v. Driscoll, 20 Day (U. S.), R. 533; Rawstron v. Taylor, 11 Exch. 369; Broadbent v. Ramsbotham, Id. 602, 617; Hipkins v. Birmingham and Staffordshire Gaslight Co., 5 H. & N. 74; S. C., 6 Id. 250.

(a) 7 H. L. Ca. 349; S. C., 2 H. & N. 168, distinguished in Hodgkinson v. Eunos, 32 L. J., Q. B., 231, 236.

(b) 7 H. L. Ca. 349; New River Co., app., Johnson, resp., 2 K. & K. 435; Reg. v. Metropolitan Board of Works, 3 B. & S. 710.

(c) Et vide per Willes, J., 4 C. B., N. S., 345.

there put forth, our law acts in deference to principles wider in their operation, and of greater moment to the community at large, than those are, the authority of which it may, at first sight, appear to have impugned. To take for instance, successively, the cases which have been just put as illustrative of the nature of legal injuries and wrongs; as to the first, I would observe, that the existence of the fiction (d) upon which an action for seduction with us is founded seems referable to this elementary principle, that our law does not regard the quality of actions from the point of view which a moralist would select, it does not weigh them in his scales, nor does it allow the mere turpitude of an act, per se, to give it jurisdiction. It usually inquires, rather, whether any and what damage directly estimable by reference to a pecuniary standard has been sustained. Such is the rule which holds generally true in civil cases, although there are exceptions to it; as, where malice is recognised as an essential ingredient in an actionable wrong (e). The truth of what has been just said does not seem to be at all affected by the fact that a jury may and will, in many cases, be influenced in assessing damages for a wrong by a consideration of the motives which may have prompted to its commission (f).

In the second of the three instances above put—that viz. of an action brought unsuccessfully, but which, nevertheless, causes inconvenience and anxiety of mind—nay, even positive loss to a defendant,—the reasons why redress and pecuniary compensation for the inconvenience so caused cannot be enforced, would seem to be that our Courts of justice are

(d) The above remarks are offered with a view to explaining the existence of the fiction in question in our law—by no means in justification of its retention. It may reasonably be urged that the right of action for seduction should either be abolished altogether, the wrong-doer being made amenable to criminal justice, or if retained should be made independent of the fiction of loss of service.

(e) Post, Book III.

(f) Id., where I shall inquire how far the motive or intention is material in determining the legal quality and character of an act.

open to all suitors who there seek to prosecute their claims in the manner prescribed by law, and that anything having a tendency to stifle or prevent such inquiry, ex. gr., the fear of being mulcted in heavy costs beyond that comparatively reasonable amount ascertained by taxation, according to the scale allowed by law, would be highly inexpedient (g).

In explanation of the last of the instances of damnum sine injuriâ above specified, a reference to Acton v. Blundell, and Chasemore v. Richards (h) will show, that, although under the circumstances there appearing, two great legal principles were primâ facie in conflict, the greater of these was, and justly, allowed to prevail: the principles in apparent antagonism were the doctrine lying at the root of what is called the social compact, that the absolute owner of property may deal with it as he likes, and the rule which so restricts the use and enjoyment of property as to prevent injury—i. e., legal injury—to a neighbour. In Acton v. Blundell, or in Chasemore v. Richards, however, no legal injury was in fact done, because no legal right had been invaded, and therefore either case rests in truth upon this broad foundation, that every one may innocently enjoy his own property as he will.

Great care is, doubtless, often needed in determining whether or not a particular mode of enjoying property is innocent and lawful; and "the books of Reports," it has been said, "abound with decisions restraining a man's acts upon and with his own property, where the necessary or probable consequence of such acts is to do damage to others." The judgment in Humphries v. Brogden (i), whence the

*Humphries
v. Brogden.*

(g) In Phillips v. Naylor, 3 H. & N. 20, Martin, B., asks: "Suppose a man knowing that a debt has been paid, brings an action in a superior Court, gets judgment, and arrests the defendant, could it be contended that an action would lie against him?"

(h) Ante, p. 78.

(i) 12 Q. B. 739 (where the previous authorities are noticed); Rowbotham v. Wilson, 8 H. L. Ca. 348. See, also, Hilton v. Wakehead, 12 Q. B., 734, and cases cited post.

above extract is taken, will be found instructive with reference to this subject. There it appeared that the surface of land (by which is meant the superficies and soil lying over the minerals) belonged to one man, whilst the minerals belonged to another; no evidence of title appeared to regulate or qualify the rights of enjoyment of the respective occupants, and the question was, whether the owner of the minerals might remove them without leaving support sufficient to maintain the surface in its natural state. Now, the jury in this case entirely negatived the existence of negligence on the part of the defendant who had worked the mines, and found that he had worked carefully and according to the custom of the country, but without leaving sufficient pillars or supports for the superincumbent soil.

Upon the facts and finding of the jury above set out, the Court of Queen's Bench gave judgment in favour of the plaintiff, and in doing so made some remarks which are apposite for my present purpose. If, they said (k), A., seised in fee of land next adjoining land of B., erect a new house on his land, "and part of the house is erected on the confines of his land next adjoining the land of B., if B. afterwards digs his land near to the foundation of the house of A., but not touching the land of A., whereby the foundation of the house and the house itself fall into the pit, still no action lies at the suit of A. against B., because this was the fault of A. himself that he built his house so near to the land of B., for he could not by his act hinder B. from making the most profitable use of B.'s own land" (l);—the case here put offering, consequently, an example of damnum absque injuria or damage unaccompanied by any actionable wrong. But, on the other hand, the Court proceeded to remark, a man who has land next adjoining to mine cannot dig his own land so near to mine, that thereby my land shall fall into his pit; and for so doing, if an action were brought, it seems clear, on principles of natural justice, that it would lie. Now, although the existence of such a right to lateral support for land from the adjoining soil manifestly places a restraint on the enjoyment of the adjacent property, the existence and validity of the right in question may nevertheless be sustained by this simple reasoning, that "if the neighbouring owners might excavate their soil on every side up to the boundary line to an indefinite depth, land thus deprived of support on all sides could not stand by its own coherence alone," and infinite mischief might thus be caused to an innocent party (m).

(k) Citing 2 Rolle's Abr. Trespass (1), pl. 1.

(l) See per Watson, B., Rogers v. Taylor, 2 H. & N. 834; Brown v.

Robins, 4 Exch. 186; cited judgm., Stroyan v. Knowles, 6 H. & N. 465; Bibby v. Carter, 4 H. & N. 153; Wyatt v. Harrison, 3 B. & Ad. 871.

Arguing by analogy from the legal proposition just stated, the Court of Queen's Bench, in Humphries v. Brogden, decided that the owner of the surface of land, while unencumbered by buildings and in its natural state, is entitled to have it supported by the subjacent mineral strata. "Those strata may of course be removed by the owner of them, so that a sufficient support for the surface is left; but, if the surface subsides, and is injured by the removal of these strata (although, on the supposition that the surface and the minerals belong to the same owner, the operation may not have been conducted negligently, nor contrary to the custom of the country), the owner of the surface may maintain an action against the owner of the minerals for the damage sustained by the subsidence" (n).

(m) As to the right of the owner of a house to support from his neighbour's house under various circumstances, see Solomon v. The Vintners' Co., 4 H. & N. 585; Richards v. Rose, 9 Exch. 218; per Lord Westbury, C., Suffield v. Brown, 33 L. J., Ch., 260. See also judgm., Chawtler v. Robinson, 4 Exch. 170; Jeffries v. Williams, 5 Exch.

792, 800, followed in Bibby v. Carter, 4 H. & N. 153.

(n) The case of Humphries v. Brogden, supra, it has been remarked, shows clearly that the title to the surface of land may be discovered from that to the minerals, so that the surface and the minerals may become separate tenements; but the presumption

In connection with the foregoing case of Humphries v. Brogden may be consulted Smith v. Kenrick (o),—which decided that it is “the natural right of each of the owners of two adjoining coal mines—neither being subject to any servitude to the other—to work his own in the manner most convenient and beneficial to himself, although the natural consequence may be, that some prejudice will accrue to the owner of the adjoining mine, so long as that does not arise from the negligent or malicious conduct of the party” (p),—and Backhouse v. Bonomi (q).

I have adverted to the above class of cases at some length, because they are obviously of much practical importance, and serve clearly to show how embarrassing and difficult may be the questions presenting themselves where distinct rights, which in their enjoyment encroach upon each other, are claimed by different individuals; the points to be decided in such cases usually being—which of the two rights is subservient to the other? Is the alleged wrongful act damnum absque injuriâ and irremediable at law?

Injuria sine damno.

In deference to the authorities already cited, we may assume that damnum sine injuriâ is not actionable at law. And, on this assumption, I proceed to illustrate and explain the correlative proposition—that injuria sine damno (to adopt technical phraseology) does very frequently suffice as tion is to the contrary. Judgm., Keyse v. Powell, 2 E. & B. 144.

See Rogers v. Taylor, 2 H. & N. 828; Stroyan v. Knowles, 6 H. & N. 454.

In connection with Humphries v. Brogden, see Haines v. Roberts, 7 E. & B. 625; S. C., 6 Id. 643; Fletcher v. Great Western R. Co., 4 Exch. 242; S. C., 5 Id. 689; per Pollock, C. B., Solomon v. The Vintners' Co., 4 H. & N. 599; Buckley v. Shafto, 15 C. B., N. S., 79; Smart v. Morton, 5 E. & B. 80; Allaway v. Wagstaff, 4 H. & N. 681, 687-8.

(o) 7 C. B. 515, 564; Baird v. Williamson, 15 C. B., N. S., 376; Clegg v. Dearden, 12 Q. B. 576; Shaw v. Stenton, 2 H. & N. 858.

(p) The defendant occupying a mine situated higher than plaintiff's mine, would have no right to be an active agent in sending water into the lower mine: Baird v. Williamson, supra. See Bagnall v. London and North-Western R. Co., 1 H. & C. 544; S. C., 7 H. & N. 423.

(q) 9 H. L. Ca. 503; S. C., E. B. & E. 646, 622.

ENFORCEABLE BY ACTION.

the foundation of an action : the above phrase being used to indicate a wrong—remediable at law—though not productive of actual damage to the complainant. The phrase applies only where a legal injury has been done, or where a legal right has been violated.

As explanatory of what is meant by injuria sine damno, reference may, in the first instance, be made to the great case of Ashby v. White (r), which has much interest in a constitutional as well as in a strictly legal point of view. It is here precisely in point, as showing clearly that it is actionable to deprive a man of a right given him by law, although no damage, loss, or injury has been thereby occasioned. Ashby v. White was an action against a returning officer for maliciously (s) refusing to receive the plaintiff's vote at the election of burgesses to serve in Parliament; and it was held by Lord Holt, C. J., and the House of Lords, that the action well lay, although the candidates in whose favour the vote had been tendered, were in fact elected; the decision proceeding upon this ground, that the plaintiff had a legal right and privilege to give his vote; and that, having been disturbed in the enjoyment of such right, an action was maintainable at his suit against the party causing the disturbance.

*Ashby v.
White.*

In the course of his celebrated judgment in this case, Lord Holt, after first showing that the right of voting at the election of burgesses is a privilege of much moment, and that the deprivation of it is an injury, thus proceeds : " If the plaintiff has a right, he must of necessity have a means to vindicate and maintain it, and a remedy if he is injured in the exercise or enjoyment of it. And, indeed, it is a vain thing to imagine

(r) 2 Lord Raym. 953, and 14 How. St. Tr. 695.

(s) Malice is essential as an ingredient in this injuria when actionable : Toner v. Child, 6 E. & B. 289; S. C.

7 Id. 377; per Blackburn, J., Pease v. Chaytor, 3 B. & S. 628. See Pryce v. Belcher, 3 C. B. 58; S. C., 4 Id. 366.

a right without a remedy, for want of right and want of remedy are reciprocal." Lord Holt then applies himself to one particular argument, which had been urged, viz., that an action was not maintainable because no actual hurt or damage had been done to the plaintiff (inasmuch as, although his vote was rejected, the candidates for whom it had been tendered were in fact elected as representatives); and observes, that, "surely every injury imports a damage, though it does not cost the party one farthing;" and it is impossible to prove the contrary, he adds, "for a damage is not merely pecuniary, but an injury imports a damage where a man is thereby hindered of his right." Now, it is quite clear, that, in thus speaking, Lord Holt uses the term "injury" as synonymous with "injuria" in its strict sense, i. e., as signifying a wrong recognised as such by the law; and when so understood, the proposition which he lays down, viewed by the light of subsequent decisions, does not seem to be at all too broadly stated.

*Marzetti v.
Williams.*

Another important case exemplifying the phrase injuria sine damno is Marzetti v. Williams (t), which decided that an action will lie against a banker, having sufficient funds in his hands belonging to a customer, for refusing to honour his cheque, although the customer did not thereby sustain any actual loss or damage (u). Here the declaration was framed in tort for the breach of duty cast by the custom of trade upon a banker; but, it is clear, that the form of action might have been assumpsit, founded upon the contract implied by law as existing between a customer and his banker, that the latter will pay cheques drawn by the former, provided he has in his hands sufficient funds for that purpose. For a breach

(t) 1 B. & Ad. 415; Cumming v. Shand, 5 H. & N. 95.

(u) But it seems clear that the banker might take a reasonable time to satisfy himself as to the genuineness of the cheque, if presented under suspicious circumstances. See per Mauie, J., Roberts v. Tucker, 16 Q. B. 577.

ENFORCEABLE BY ACTION.

of the duty here indicated substantial damages may be awarded (v).

Strictly in accordance with Marzetti v. Williams was the decision in Fray v. Voules (x). That was an action brought by a client against her attorney for consenting to an order for a stet processus, in two actions at suit of the client, "without the authority and consent, and against the will, and contrary to the directions of the plaintiff." Plea—that "in entering the stet processus, and in staying all further proceedings, and in committing the several grievances complained of, he (defendant) acted in a reasonable, careful, skilful, and proper manner, and in pursuance of, and in obedience to, and in accordance with the advice, opinion, and discretion of certain counsel learned in the law, then retained and employed by the plaintiff, &c." On demurrer, this plea was held bad for "a retainer to sue with positive directions not to compromise, makes it the duty of the attorney not to compromise; and if he does so, it is a breach of his duty," for which, whether the action be shaped in contract or tort, nominal damages at all events will be recoverable.

Cases of various kinds and complexions, differing from those just cited, might readily be adduced in support of the proposition that injuria sine damno is actionable. Such, in actions founded purely upon contract, is, as we shall hereafter see, the general rule. "Where there is a breach of an express contract," says Parke, J., in Marzetti v. Williams, supra, "nominal damages may be recovered" (y); though no damage may really have been sustained (z).

(v) Rolin v. Steward, 14 C. B. 595.

(x) 1 B. & E. 839. See Chown v. Parrott, 14 C. B., N. S., 74.

(y) 1 B. & Ad. 425. See also Randall v. Moon, 12 C. B. 261, and cases there cited; Godefroy v. Jay, 7 Bing. 413; Street v. Blay, 2 B. & Ad. 456;

Van Wart v. Woolley, 1 Moo. & M. 520; S. C., 3 B. & C. 439; Nosotti v. Page, 10 C. B. 643.

(z) Per Erie, J., Goodwin v. Cremer, 18 Q. B., 761. See per Bramwell, B., Cook v. Hopewell, 11 Exch. 559.

So a bare trespass to land (a)—the infringement of a patent or of a copyright—will be actionable. And it has been held, that the tortious invasion, unaccompanied by special damage, of the right to a trade-mark is so (b).

The following examples, taken indifferently from various branches of the law, will be found to throw additional light upon this subject:—

A libel has been defined to be “a malicious defamation, expressed in printing or writing, or by signs, pictures, &c., tending to injure the reputation of another, and thereby exposing such person to public hatred, contempt, or ridicule” (c). This malicious defamatory statement, when published, constitutes an injuria whence the law will imply damage (d).

Again, let us suppose that the plaintiff in an action has obtained judgment and issued a writ of execution against the person of the defendant, and further, that this writ has been placed in the hands of the sheriff to be executed, the plaintiff will then have a right to the detention of the body of his debtor from the moment at which his capture can be effected, continuously, until payment of the debt or until the discharge of the defendant in some manner authorised by law. If, then, the sheriff negligently omits to arrest when he might have done so, or if, having arrested the defendant, he wrongfully suffers him to escape for ever so short a time, and afterwards recaptures him, the plaintiff will have a right of action

(a) See Lord Holt's judgment in Ashby v. White, as published separately, 1837. See also this judgment as reported Ld. Raym. 938; 3 Bla. Com. 120, 209; post, p. 89.

(b) Blofeld v. Payne, 4 B. & Ad. 410; Crawshaw v. Thompson, 4 C. B. 357; Rodgers v. Nowill, 5 C. B. 109; Morison v. Salmon, 2 M. & Gr. 385. See Lawson v. The Bank of London, 18 C. B. 84; per Lord Westbury, C., Leather Cloth Co. v. American Leather Cloth Co., 33 L. J., Ch., 199, 200.

The fraudulent user of a trade-mark is indictable as a misdemeanor under stat. 25 & 26 Vict. c. 88.

(c) 2 Selw. N. P., 12th ed., 1049, citing Digby v. Thompson, 4 B. & Ad. 821.

(d) 2 Selw. N. P., 12th ed., 1058.

against the sheriff without proof of any actual damage (e) ; the reason being, that, in such a case, the law implies damage, on the principle laid down by Lord Holt in Ashby v. White (f). If, indeed, the sheriff, after an escape, retake the judgment debtor on "fresh," that is, immediate, pursuit, this fact will be pleadable in bar to an action against the sheriff for an escape ; because, in that case, the debtor is supposed, by a very pardonable fiction, never to have been out of custody, inasmuch as otherwise great hardship might be entailed upon the sheriff (g).

There is another important class of cases which can hardly be passed over in silence, whilst taking notice of the strict legal meaning of the word injuria. I allude to those where it is material to the preservation of a right that its invasion, although productive of no positive or appreciable damage, should not be tolerated or suffered with impunity. Thus, trespass qu. cl. fr. is maintainable for an entry on the land of another, though no real damage be occasioned thereby (h), one main reason being, that repeated acts of going over the land might eventually be relied upon as evidence of title to do so, and thereby the right of the plaintiff to the absolute enjoyment of the land might be injuriously affected. So, in an action by a commoner for a trespass to his common, evidence need not be given of the actual exercise of rights of common by the plaintiff (i).

Acts of trespass evincing title

In The Rochdale Canal Company v. King (k), the declara-

Rochdale Canal Co. v. King.

(e) Olifton v. Hooper, 6 Q. B. 468 ; with which compare Williams v. Mostyn, 4 M. & W. 145.

(f) Ante, p. 85. Arg., Olifton v. Hooper, supra.

(g) Rigeway's case, 3 Rep. 52. Judgm., Arden v. Goodacre, 11 C. B. 375-6.

(h) See Twyman v. Knowles, 13 C. B. 222.

(i) Per Tannton, J., 1 B. & Ad.

426 ; Wells v. Watkins, 2 W. Bl. 1233 ; Pindar v. Wadsworth, 2 East, 154 ; 1 Wms. Saund. 346 a. See Kidgill v. Moor, 9 C. B. 364.

(k) 14 Q. B. 122, 136 ; Medway Navigation Co. v. Earl of Romney, 9 C. B., N. S., 575 ; Wood v. Waud, 3 Exch. 748, 780 ; Dickinson v. Grand Junction Canal Co., 7 Exch. 282, commented on in Chasemore v. Richards, 7 H. L. Ca. 349 ; S. C., 2 H. & N.

tion (which was in case) stated that a certain canal had been made by the plaintiffs in pursuance of the stat. 34 Geo. 3, c. 78, by the 113th section of which the owners of land, within the distance of twenty yards from the canal, were empowered to draw water from it, by means of pipes, for the supply of their steam engines, and for "the sole purpose" of condensing the steam used for working such engines; the declaration charged that the defendants had "deceived and defrauded the plaintiffs" in this, to wit, that they had used the water drawn from the canal for purposes other than that allowed by the Act, and that the navigation of the canal had been thereby impeded and obstructed. No proof of damage at all, however, was given at the trial, and the question, under these circumstances, was, whether or not the action at suit of the company was maintainable. It was held to be so, on the ground—1st, that the company, being invested by the legislature with certain rights, might, in accordance with the rule laid down in Ashby v. White (l), sue for an invasion of them, without giving evidence of express damage; 2ndly, that the general principle here applied,—that, although no appreciable damage might possibly be sustained in the particular instance by the wrongful act complained of, yet, inasmuch as the repetition of such act might be made, in time, the foundation of a claim to do it, damage, in law, had already been suffered by the plaintiffs, in respect of which an action was maintainable.

This part of my subject, then, having reference to injuria sine damno, may conclude with a reference to two additional authorities which are directly in support of what has been said: 1st, Embrey v. Owen (m), which was an action on the case for diverting water from a stream, and where the Court in giving judgment observe that "actual perceptible damage

168; Northam v. Hurley, 1 E. & B. 665.

(l) Ante, pp. 85, 86.

(m) Exch. 353, followed in Dick- inson v. Grand Junction Canal Co., 7 Exch. 282, 305, and in Sampson v. Hoddinott, 1 C. B., N. S., 590; & C., 3 Id. 596.

is not indispensable as the foundation of an action ; it is sufficient to show the violation of a right, in which case the law will presume damage." 2ndly, the judgment of Mr. Justice Story in Webb v. The Portland Manufacturing Company (n) (which was also an action for diverting water), where that able jurist thus expressed himself with regard to the first question which arose in the case, viz., whether, to maintain the pending suit, it was essential for the plaintiff to establish that any actual damage had been sustained by him ? "I can very well understand that no action lies in a case where there is damnum absque injuriâ (o), that is, where there is a damage done without any wrong or violation of any right of the plaintiff. But I am not able to understand how it can correctly be said, in a legal sense, that an action will not lie, even in case of a wrong or violation of a right, unless it is followed by some perceptible damage which can be established as a matter of fact ; in other words, that injuriâ sine damno is not actionable. On the contrary, from my earliest reading, I have considered it laid up among the very elements of the common law, that, wherever there is a wrong, there is a remedy to redress it ; that every injury imports damage in the nature of it ; and if no other damage is established, the party injured is entitled to a verdict for nominal damages. A fortiori, this doctrine applies where there is not only a violation of a right of the plaintiff, but the act of the defendant, if continued, may become the foundation, by lapse of time, of an adverse right in the defendant ; for then it assumes the character, not merely of a violation of a right, tending to diminish its value, but it goes to the absolute destruction and extinguishment of it." Actual perceptible damage, continues Mr. Justice Story, is not indispensable as the foundation of an action. The law tolerates no further inquiry than whether there has been the violation of a right.

(n) 3 Sumner (U. S.) R. 189, where cited and considered.
many of the decisions in our Courts are (o) Ante, pp. 74, 75.

If so, the party injured is entitled to maintain his action for nominal damages in vindication of his right (p).

The examples above cited will probably be thought to have established this proposition, that injuria sine damno is, in a very large class of cases, actionable at law; there are indeed, as will hereafter appear (q), many wrongful acts, i.e., acts not merely morally wrong and indefensible, but even contra legem, which give no right of action by our law, unless productive of special and substantial damage to the complainant; for instance, the breach of a public duty or the nonfeasance of something required to be performed by the statute law, would not be actionable at suit of one who had sustained no damage by reason of the breach of duty or of the nonfeasance (r). So, again, mere negligence, fraud, or misrepresentation (s), could not give a right of action unless damage were caused thereby or resulted therefrom; and where words are spoken not actionable in themselves, special damage must in general be not only averred in the declaration but proved at the trial, in order that an action may be maintainable; in these and similar cases it is sometimes said, that injuria and damnum must combine in order to constitute a right enforceable by action, or, regard being had to the meaning assigned to each of those words at p. 74, we may perhaps say, that in none of the cases just alluded to does the alleged wrong, unless when accompanied by substantial damage, fill out the true measure and conception of a legal injury (t).

(p) Judgm., 3 Sumner (U. S.) R. 189; Fay v. Prentice, 1 C. B. 828. In Nicklin v. Williams, 10 Exch. 267, Parke, B., observes that "every injury to a right imports a damage, as laid down in the case of Ashby v. White by Lord Holt, and adopted and recognised in several other cases referred to in Webb v. The Portland Manufacturing Co., and Embrey v. Owen." Nicklin v. Williams, supra, was rightly decided, although some of the dicta contained in it may be questionable; per Lord Westbury, C., Backhouse v. Bonomi, 9 H. L. Ca. 512; S. C., E. B. & E. 622.

(q) Post, Book III.

(r) Id. ibid.

(s) Eastwood v. Bain, 3 H. & N. 738.

(t) Sometimes a particular statute gives a right of action only where

ENFORCEABLE BY ACTION.

But, besides cases such as have been hitherto noticed, others present themselves, the distinctive peculiarity of which might be exhibited by saying, that the combination of the two ingredients of damnum and injuria will there fail, for peculiar reasons, to constitute a ground of action (u).

Damnum & injuria maj fail to give a right of action.

To this latter class may properly be referred every case in which an injury done productive of damage to another is, in legal contemplation, too remote to entitle the injured party to redress (x), or in which the injuria did not with sufficient directness produce the damnum (y). For instance, to revert for a moment to the case of an action for slander when the words used are not actionable per se, it has been held that the special damage relied upon to support the action should be a 'legal' and 'natural' consequence of the words spoken; ex. gr., it would not suffice to show, that, by reason of them, some third person had been led to commit an assault and battery on the plaintiff (z).

Damage to remote.

It may, however, well be doubted whether it would be correct to say, that "an action is not maintainable for inducing another to break a contract—the act of inducing being done maliciously and with intent to injure the plaintiff;" and yet in this case, the breach of contract would be a wrongful act of the contracting party, which might, upon the authority of the damage has been sustained: see Rodgers v. Parker, 18 C. B. 112, recognised in Lucas v. Tarleton, 3 H. & N. 116, 120.

(u) See, for instance, Glynn v. Thomas, 11 Exch. 870, commented on in Loring v. Warburton, E. B. & E. 508.

(x) See, upon this subject, the maxim "In jure non remota causa sed proxima spectatur," with the illustrations appended thereto, Leg. Max., 4th ed., 215; Wanstall v. Pooley, 6 C. & F. 910, n.

(y) Per Coleridge, J., Tatton v. Wade, 18 C. B. 386. See also Walker v. Goe, 4 H. & N. 350; S. C., 3 Id. 395; Collins v. Cave, 4 H. & N. 229; S. C., 6 Id. 131; Barber v. Lester, 7 C. B., N. S., 175; Fitzjohn v. Mackinder, 9 C. B., N. S., 505; S. C., 8 Id. 78.

(z) Per Lord Ellenborough, C. J., Vicars v. Wilcocks, 8 East, 1; Ashley v. Harrison, 1 Esp. 43; Taylor v. Neri, Id. 386; Green v. Butten, 2 Cr. M. & E. 707; Blagrave v. Bristol Waterworks Co., 1 H. & N. 369.

Court, however, took a different view of the matter before them, remarking that it may be laid down as a general rule, that, when "one does an illegal or mischievous act, which is likely to prove injurious to others, and when he does a legal act in such a careless and improper manner that injury to third persons may probably ensue, he is answerable in some form of action for all the consequences which may directly and naturally result from his conduct." Such being the general rule applicable in determining as to the liability of an individual under circumstances at all similar to those above detailed, it is observable, that the existence or non-existence of a wrongful intent on his part is not at all adverted to in it; the reason being, that, in the case put, the presence or absence of such intention would be wholly immaterial in regard to the abstract question, whether or not legal liability would be entailed by the particular act done (f).

The doctrine as to remoteness of damage will hereafter be considered more at length in connection respectively with actions founded upon contract (g) and those originating out of tort (h).

Where proper remedy is by indictment.

The class of cases next to be noticed as illustrating the proposition that damnum et injuria will sometimes fail to give a right of action, depends upon a rule concisely laid down by Sir W. Blackstone (i), that "the law gives no private remedy for anything but a private wrong;" and, "therefore," as he proceeds to remark, "no action lies for a public or common nuisance, but an indictment only; because, the damage being common to all the king's subjects, no one can assign his particular proportion of it, or, if he could, it would be extremely hard if every subject in the kingdom were allowed to harass the offender with separate actions." Where, however, an individual suffers from an indictable

(f) Post, Book III.

(g) Post, Book II., Chap. 6.

(h) Post, Book III., Chap. 5.

(i) 1 Com. 219.

offence; as a nuisance, extraordinary damage—that is, damage over and above that which in common with the rest of the community he sustains,—he will be entitled, in respect of such special and peculiar damage, to maintain an action (k).

Accordingly, Sir E. Coke observes (l), that there is a “diversitie” between the mode of procedure for disturbance of a private and a public way: in the former case, the law, he says, doth give unto the landowner, whose right or easement is disturbed, an action for recovery of damages; but if the way be a common way, and if any man be disturbed in going that way, or if a ditch be made across it so that he cannot go, yet he shall not have an action; and this the law has provided for avoiding of multiplicity of suits; for such common nuisance the apt remedy being by presentment before a grand jury in the proper Court.

In connection with the subject now before us, Wilkes v. The Hungerford Market Company (m) may be consulted: there the plaintiff (a shopkeeper) brought his action for loss and damage sustained by him in his business by reason of an undue obstruction caused by the defendants in the public way and thoroughfare in which his shop was situated, by keeping up certain hoards used for building purposes for an unreasonable time. After verdict for the plaintiff, it was objected that the grievance thus complained of was a public injury, for which, indeed, an indictment might lie, but which was not the subject of an action. The Court, however, gave judgment in favour of the plaintiff, on the following grounds:—“For an injury which affects all his Majesty's subjects in common, the only mode of proceeding is by indictment; for any special injury which affects an individual beyond his fellows, he may obtain redress by action;” and (k) 1 Bla. Com. 220.

(l) 1 Inst. 56, a.

(*) 2 Bing. N. C. 281. See Senior

v. Metropolitan R. C., 2 H. & C. 258;
Chamberlain v. West End of London,
&c., R. C., 32 L. J., Q. B., 173.

applying this principle, they remarked, "The injury to the subjects in general is, that they cannot walk in the same track as before, and for that cause alone an action on the case would not lie ; but the injury to the plaintiff is the loss of a trade, which, but for this obstruction to the general right of way, he would have enjoyed ; and the law has said, from the Year-Books downwards, that if a party has sustained any peculiar injury beyond that which affects the public at large, an action will lie for redress. Is the injury in the present case of that character or not ? The plaintiff, in addition to a right of way which he enjoyed in common with others, had a shop on the roadside, the business of which was supported by those who passed—all who passed had the right of way, but all had not shops" (n).

The above case illustrates the distinction between public and private wrongs. The principle upon which this distinction is founded is certainly intelligible enough : the difficulty lies in its application, and cases might perhaps be put, in which it would not be easy to draw the line between a strictly private injury and a public nuisance (o).

In Henley v. The Mayor of Lyme Regis (p), which may further elucidate the present subject, the declaration set forth a charter casting an obligation upon the corporation (the defendants in the action) to do repairs, which were of general and public concern, to certain banks and sea-shore ; the declaration also averred, that they had neglected to do such repairs ; and that the plaintiff had, in consequence, sus-

(n) See Att.-Gen. v. Council of Birmingham, 4 Kay & J. 528 ; Blagrove v. Bristol Waterworks Co., 1 H. & N. 369 ; Manley v. St. Helen's Can. & R. Co., 2 H. & N. 840, 848.

(o) See Simmons v. Lillystone, 8 Exch. 431 ; Rose v. Groves, 5 M. & Gr. 613, cited Kearns v. Cordwainers' Co., 6 C. B., N. S., 401, 405 ; Iveson v. Moore, 1 Ld. Raym. 486.

(p) 5 Bing. 91 ; S. C., 3 B. & Ad. 77, 93 ; 2 Cl. & F. 331 ; per Erle, C. J., Nicholl v. Allen, 1 B. & S. 936 ; S. C., Id. 916. See Holliday v. St. Leonard's, Shoreditch, 11 C. B., N. S., 192, and cases there cited ; Mersey Dock Board v. Penhallow, 7 H. & N. 329 ; Bayley v. Wolverhampton Waterworks Co., 6 H. & N. 241.

tained special damage. The judges, in delivering their opinion to the House of Lords with reference to the sufficiency of the declaration in this case, laid it down as clear and undoubted law, that, wherever an indictment lies for non-repair, an action on the case will lie at the suit of a party sustaining any peculiar damage; and, generally, that where the Crown, for the benefit of the public, has made a grant imposing certain public duties, and that grant has been accepted, the public may enforce the performance of those duties by indictment, and individuals peculiarly injured by action.

The principle upon which the preceding case was decided was referred to and explained by the Court of Exchequer on a recent occasion (g) in these words: "There is no doubt of the truth of the general rule, that, where an indictment can be maintained against an individual or a corporation for something done to the general damage of the public, an action on the case can be maintained for a special damage thereby done to an individual, as in the ordinary case of a nuisance in the highway, by a stranger digging a trench across it, or by the default of the person bound to repair ratione tenuræ. Upon this ground the corporation of Lyme Regis were held to be bound to compensate an individual for the loss sustained by non-repair of sea walls in a case which was decided by the Court of Common Pleas" (r).

The rule of law, which, in certain cases of a quasi criminal nature, thus merges the right of action in the more apt and efficient mode of procedure by indictment, is referred by high authorities (s) to this reason, that multiplicity of suits should, wherever practicable, be avoided. The reason here assigned,

(g) M'Kinnon v. Penson, 8 Exch. 319; S. C. (in error), 9 Exch. 609, (recognising Russell v. Men of Devon, 2 T. R. 667); Young v. Davis, 7 H. & N. 760; S. C., 2 H. & C. 197.

(r) See Hartwell v. Ryde Commissioners, 33 L. J., Q. B., 39, which illustrates the text.

(s) Ante, p. 96; 4 Bla. Com. 167.

although true in the particular class of cases just alluded to, must not be pushed further than established precedents or express decisions will justify; for, as Lord Holt remarks in Ashby v. White (t), “If men will multiply injuries, actions must be multiplied too; for every man that is injured ought to have his recompense. Suppose the defendant had beat forty or fifty men, the damage done to each one is peculiar to himself; and he shall have his action. So, if many persons receive a private injury by a public nuisance, every man shall have his action (u). Indeed, where many men are offended by one particular act, there they must proceed by way of indictment and not of action, for in that case the law will not multiply actions. But it is otherwise when one man only is offended by that act, he shall have his action; as if a man dig a pit in a common, every commoner shall have his action on the case, per quod communiam suam in tam amplo modo habere non potuit, for every commoner has a separate right” (x).

Penal action by ‘party aggrieved.’

Where an Act of Parliament imposes a penalty on any one violating its provisions but enacts that no proceeding for recovery of such penalty shall be taken by any person other than “a party grieved,” without the consent in writing of the Attorney-General, a plaintiff suing without such consent will be required to show that his private interests have been affected by the act complained of, and that he has been “aggrieved” thereby specially, and not merely as one of the public (y).

Merger of tort in felony.

As connected with the distinction between public and private wrongs, another point may properly be noticed, viz. the suspension of the civil remedy where the act done is (t) Ld. Raym. 938.

(u) Citing Williams's case, 5 Rep. 72; Co. Litt. 56. a.

(x) See also Marys's case, 5 Rep. 113 a; Dobson v. Blackmore, 9 Q. B.

991, 1002; Judgm., Pryce v. Belcher, 3 C. B. 92.

(y) Boyce v. Higgins, 14 C. B. 1; Hollis v. Marshall, 2 H. & N. 755.

felonious. "The policy of the law," says Lord Ellenborough, C. J. (z), "requires, that, before the party injured by any felonious act can seek civil redress for it, the matter should be heard and disposed of before the proper criminal tribunal, in order that the justice of the country may be first satisfied in respect of the public offence;" for, as remarked by another learned Judge in the case just mentioned, it might very likely happen that criminal justice would be defeated if the injured party were first permitted to obtain a civil satisfaction for the injury. The rule in question, however, applies only where the act done amounts to felony; and even then it causes a postponement merely, and not a permanent merger or extinguishment, of the right of action, so that, if the wrong-doer be tried and acquitted of the felony, he may then be made civilly amenable for the wrong done: if, on the other hand, he be convicted of the felony and undergo his punishment, there seems to be no reason theoretically, though, on account of the operation of the law of forfeiture (a), there might be practically—why an action for damages should not be maintainable against him at the suit of the prosecutor. As authorities in support of the rule respecting the suspension, or rather the postponement, of the right of action under the circumstances specified, may be mentioned Stone v. Marsh (b); and White v. Spettigue (c), (z) Crosby v. Leng, 12 East, 413; Wellock v. Constantine, 2 H. & C. 146.

(a) See Bullock v. Dodds, 2 B. & Ald. 258; Bishop v. Curtis, 18 Q. B. 878; 12 Rep. 121.

It should be observed also, that, by 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 100, the restitution of stolen property may, after conviction of the thief, be ordered by the Court; this remedy being cumulative and superadded to that by action. Scattergood v. Sylvester, 15 Q. B. 506. As to the power vested in the Court to order restitution &c., see Reg. v. Pierce, Bell, C. C. 235.

(b) 6 B. & C. 551, 561, and authorities cited Leg. Max., 4th ed., 209. In any case falling within the class above adverted to, the same act constitutes in truth both a public and a private wrong; the private wrong is recognised, but the consideration of it is postponed, in order that the party injured may prosecute for the public offence: see per Erle, J., 11 Q. B. 895.

(c) 13 M. & W. 603.

followed in Lee v. Bayes (d), which shows that the doctrine in question does not apply as between the party injured and a third person innocent of the felony. The operation of this doctrine is excluded by the first sect. of Lord Campbell's Act (9 & 10 Vict. c. 93), in any case remediable under the provisions of that statute.

Redress denied on grounds of public policy.

Besides cases like the preceding, where the private merges in the public wrong, others again present themselves in which considerations of general expediency or public policy forbid our Courts to interfere, or to compel compensation to a claimant for damage caused by the act of another. As illustrative of what is here meant, reference may be made to Johnstone v. Sutton (e), which shows that an action will not lie against a commanding officer for anything done by him in the course of discharging his duty or incidental thereto; to Buron v. Denman (f), which seems to show that the ratification by the Crown of a trespass ipso facto alters its character, and renders it no longer actionable; and to the fundamental doctrine of our constitution which declares that "the King can do no wrong" (g).

Now, in cases falling within the scope of the principles here adverted to, grievous wrong may possibly be done, and damage may be caused to an individual, and yet no kind of remedy, or, at all events, no remedy by action may be open to him in a Court of law. Such cases consequently offer an exception to the rule which ordinarily prevails, that damnum et injuria constitute a ground of action.

(d) 18 C. B. 599. See also Wickham v. Gatrill, 2 Sm. & G. 353; Dudley, &c., Banking Co., v. Spittle, 1 Johns. & H. 14.

(e) 1 T. B. 493, 510, 784. See also Hodgkinson v. Fernie, 2 C. B., N. S., 415; Barwis v. Keppel, 2 Wils. 314; Macbeath v. Haldimand, 1 T. B. 172; Gidley v. Ld. Palmerston, 3 B. & B. 275.

(f) 2 Exch. 167, and cases there cited. Acc. judgm., Secretary of State of India v. Sahaba, 13 Moo. P. C. C. 86.

(g) Leg. Max., 4th ed., pp. 53 et seq.; per Lord Lyndhurst, C., Viscount Canterbury v. Att.-Gen., 1 Phill. 36. See judgm., Rogers v. Dutt, 13 Moo. P. C. C. 236.

One important class of decisions, resting strictly on grounds of 'public policy,' demands attention in connection with what has been just said. I allude to those which affirm the doctrine of the non-liability of judicial officers for damage resulting from acts done by them in that capacity.

Non-liability of judicial officers:

—of the superior Courts.

A little reflection might lead one to suppose that a discretionary power, so extensive as that confided by our constitution to the Judges of the superior Courts, must be accompanied with a corresponding degree of irresponsibility. If, therefore, the Judge in the exercise of his discretion commits an error, he will, as a general rule, be protected from penal or even from civil liability. The law, says Lord Bacon (h), has so much respect for the certainty of judgments and authority of Judges, that it will not permit any error to be assigned which impeaches them in their trust and office, and in wilful abuse of the same, but only in ignorance and mistaking either of the law or of the case and matter in fact. "No action," says North, C. J. (i), "will lie against a Judge for what he does judicially, though it should be laid falsò malitiosè et scienter (k). They who are entrusted to judge ought to be free from vexation, that they may determine without fear; the law requires courage in a Judge, and therefore provides security for the support of that courage." "Therefore," says Lord Mansfield, C. J. (l), "by the law of England, if an action be brought against a Judge of Record for an act done by him in his judicial capacity, he may plead that he did it as a Judge of Record, and that will be a complete justification."

The general principle of exemption from liability thus laid down is of great importance. It is necessary to the free and impartial administration of justice, that those who have been (h) Max. 17; Floyd v. Barker, 12 Rep. 23.

(i) Barnardiston v. Soame, 6 How. St. Tr. 1096.

(k) Citing 12 Rep. 24; Fray v. Blackburn, 3 B. & S. 576; Thomas v. Churton, 2 Id. 475.

(l) Mostyn v. Fabrigas, Cowp. 161.

appointed to dispense it "should be uninfluenced by fear and unbiassed by hope. Judges have not been invested with this privilege for their own protection merely; it is calculated for the benefit of the people by insuring to them a calm, steady, and impartial administration of justice" (m).

So in Garnett v. Ferrand (n), it is laid down by Lord Tenterden, as a general rule of very great antiquity (o), "that no action will lie against a Judge of Record for any matter done by him in the exercise of his judicial functions." . . . "In the imperfection of human nature," says the same learned Judge, "it is better that an individual should occasionally suffer a wrong, than that the course of justice should be impeded and fettered by constant and perpetual restraints and apprehensions on the part of those who are to administer it. Corruption is quite another matter; so also are neglect of duty and misconduct: for these I trust there is, and always will be, some due course of punishment by public prosecution."

But although the general principle thus laid down appears, at first sight, sufficiently clear and definite, difficulty may sometimes be felt in determining what acts can and what cannot properly be considered as judicial, so as to fall within its operation. Taafe v. Downes (p), however, shows, that if it be once established that the particular act in question "emanated from and was appropriate to the legal duties" of the office of Judge of a Court of Record, such act may be viewed as purely judicial, and, therefore, within the rule. Nor will the test here suggested be applicable merely to acts done in open Court, it will apply also to such as are

(m) Taafe v. Downes, 3 Moo. P. C. C. 36, n., cited per Parke, B., Ryalls v. Reg., 11 Q. B. 796.

(n) 6 B. & C. 611.

(o) See Hammond v. Howell, 1 Mod. 184; S. C., 2 Mod. 218; Bushell's case, 1 Mod. 119.

(p) 3 Moo. P. C. C. 60, n.; Brown v. Copley, 8 Sc. N. R. 350; per Lord Brougham, Ferguson v. Earl of Kin-noull, 9 Cl. & F. 289, 290. See also Bröom's Pr., Vol. I., pp. 586-590.

done at Chambers; equal privilege in either case attaching to the judicial office (q).

If, moreover, the Judge of a Court, not of Record, has a criminal or quasi-criminal jurisdiction in respect of the matter sub judice, the person charged, and the place where the offence is alleged to have been committed, he will, it seems, be irresponsible for an act done in the exercise of his judicial functions (r).

Where, however, the particular act complained of was done by the Judge when not acting judicially, or in respect of a matter not within his jurisdiction, the principle just stated does not apply. Thus, in Calder v. Halket (s), we find it broadly laid down, that "English Judges, when they act wholly without jurisdiction, whether they may suppose they had it or not, have no privilege." And Dicas v. Lord Brougham (t), which was an action of trespass against the then Lord Chancellor for a committal for contempt under an order alleged to be illegal, will not be found to impugn the proposition just stated, because there the matter in question certainly fell within the general jurisdiction of the Judge.

Again, where an individual acts in a judicial capacity under an invalid appointment or commission, we have express authority for saying that the party so acting would not be privileged or exempted from civil liability.

In Gahan v. Lafitte (u), an action for trespass and false imprisonment was held to lie against individuals exercising the office of Judges, in one of our West India Islands, of a (q) Per Lord Norbury, 3 Moo. P. C. C. 60, n.

(r) Kemp v. Neville, 10 C. B., N. S., 523, 547, 551, where the cases are collected.

(s) 3 Moo. P. C. C. 28; Case of the Marshalsea, 10 Rep. 68 b, cited Judgm., Morrell v. Martin, 3 M. & Gr. 595; Houlden v. Smith, 14 Q. B. 841, cited Gelen v. Hall, 2 H. & N. 389. See Lery v. Moylan, 10 C. B. 189; Beaurain v. Scott, 3 Camp. 388; Pease v. Chaytor, 3 B. & S. 620, 641, 644, 654.

(t) 6 Car. & P. 249; Hamilton v. Anderson, 3 Macq. H. L. Ca. 363.

(u) 3 Moore, P. C. C. 382.

colonial court, under commissions from the governor of the island which were informal and void. And this case is, therefore, directly in point, as sustaining the proposition just stated.

The above remarks will amply suffice to show, that the honesty and integrity of a Judge of one of our superior Courts, when acting in his judicial capacity, cannot be brought in question by action. Of course, if a mistake be committed by him in point of law, the case is altogether different, and then his decision may ordinarily be revised, either by the Court out of which the record issued, or by the Court of error.

Some of the cases latterly cited clearly establish that there are exceptions to the general rule, that injuria sine damno is actionable (x). And, by passing under review the ordinary defences available in actions founded either upon contract or in tort, further instances will readily present themselves, where for one reason or another our law interferes to protect parties from civil liability by action for wrong done, ex. gr., for breach of contract, on the ground of infancy or coverture,—or for personal injury caused by negligence, on the ground that the suffering party has, by the want of ordinary care, himself contributed to cause the damage complained of,—or, again, where the express words or general scope and purview of a statute bar the remedy by action (y). I shall not, indeed, just now attempt to examine the additional cases here adverted to as being in their nature exceptional to the above rule, for such an inquiry, if properly (x) Et vide per North, C. J., Barnardiston v. Soame, 6 St. Tr. 1107, who adduces instances “where actions upon the case have been rejected for novelty and reasons of inconvenience.” Swinfen v. Lord Chelmsford, 5 H. & N. 890.

(y) See Young v. Davis, 2 H. & C. 197; S. C., 7 H. & N. 760; Marshall

v. Nicholls, 18 Q. B. 882; Stevens v. Jeacocke, 11 Q. B. 731; Vestry of St. Pancras v. Batterbury, 2 C. B., N. S., 477; Watkins v. The Great Northern R. C., 16 Q. B. 961; Couch v. Steel, 3 E. & B. 402; Kennet and Avon Nav. Co. v. Witherington, 18 Q. B. 531, 544.

pursued, would, in truth, be identical with a disquisition upon legal principles generally, whence alone the existence of legal rights can be deduced.

It may, however, in concluding this division of my subject, be well to call to mind, that, in the vast majority of cases which are brought into Courts of justice, both damnum and injuria combine (though sometimes, for specific reasons, ineffectually) in support of the claims put forth; the object of a plaintiff usually (z) being to recover by his action,—if not liquidated or ascertained, at all events—substantial damages. The surest test, however, which can be applied to determine whether or not a legal right has in any given case been invaded, would seem to be this,—are or are not nominal damages recoverable at suit of the claimant? if they be, then, clearly, a right has been invaded, and an action will lie (a).

(z) That is, where the action is not brought for recovery of land or of some chattel in specie, or to vindicate a right, or in some other cases.

(a) The reader will have observed that the principles discussed in the foregoing chapter apply not merely to rights enforceable in the superior Courts, but to such also as are brought, by statute, within the cognisance of the County Court.

CHAPTER IV.

ORDINARY REMEDIES.

SECT. 1. *Action at Law.*2. *Suit in the County Court.*SECT. 1. *Action at Law.*1. Considerations preliminary to issuing the Writ.

ASSUMING that an action will only lie for a legal wrong, for the invasion of a legal right, for the misfeasance, malfeasance, or nonfeasance of a duty imposed by law (a), or for the recovery of land or of some specific thing, it will probably be admitted that the existence of a remedy presupposes a right, and that right and duty are in truth correlative (b) ; so that, where a right has been invaded, there must have been a duty violated. Keeping these remarks in mind, we may accept the definition of an action at law offered by Sir E. Coke, who tells us (c) that "an action is the legal demand of a man's right."

The philosophical mode of presenting the above subject to the mind would seem to be by referring to the distinction often insisted upon between perfect and imperfect rights (d) and obligations, for the idea of a perfect right implies that (a) As to the right of action, if any, in this case, see further, post, Bk. III.

(b) "Right always implies a correlative duty : " Richardson, Dict. ad verb. "Right."

(c) Co. Litt. 285. a.

(d) Private rights, i. e. rights enjoyed exclusively and enforceable by individuals, are here spoken of.

he on whom it is conferred must have some sufficient and adequate means of enforcing it. But a resort to violence and force cannot, with due regard to the interests of society, be intrusted to any one of its individual members who may think himself aggrieved ; and this for a threefold reason—first, because the complainant himself cannot properly be allowed to decide as to the fact of a wrong having been done ; 2ndly, because he might lack the power of compelling compensation for it ; and 3rdly, because, if he possessed the power, he might exercise it in a manner detrimental to the interests and well-being of the community.

The State, therefore, assumes to itself the task of deciding as to the fact whether or not a wrong has been done, and of judging as to the nature of the right alleged to have been invaded ; and further, when necessary, it likewise assumes the privilege of vindicating the party aggrieved against the aggressor. Now, all this is effected in very many cases through the medium of an action at law, whereby an individual member of the community puts in motion the machinery provided by the State for the purpose of obtaining a formal recognition of the justice of his claim, and then of compelling its enforcement against his adversary. In the conception, therefore, of an action at law, the actor or plaintiff, the reus or defendant, and the judex or judge, will be found to be essential elements.

Before, however, an individual, conceiving that he is aggrieved, can safely resort to the remedy by action, he should satisfy himself in regard to several preliminary matters : he should inquire whether a complete cause of action is vested in him ; whether or not the right of action has been postponed or extinguished, or has become barred by any Statute of Limitations ; he should consider whether or not any notice of action is requisite, and, if so, to whom and when it must be given. Further it will, most probably, be found advisable, before issuing the writ, to determine as to the form of action which may be proper ; and, lastly, it will be necessary to select the parties by and against whom respectively it should be brought.

With reference to each of the above heads of inquiry, it is my intention to say a few words, lest, in confining myself strictly to an examination of the necessary steps and stages in an action, these preliminary matters, which are of at least as vital concern to a suitor, should be lost sight of or forgotten.

1. In the first place, then, the party proposing to sue should satisfy himself that he has a complete cause of action against the defendant ; for, at the trial, he will have to show that a right of action existed and was vested in him before he commenced his suit (e), i. e. before he issued his writ, the date of the writ being, as will hereafter appear, that of the commencement of the action. Sometimes, on instituting the inquiry here suggested, it will be found that the supposed contract, relied upon as the ground of action, was, in fact, never fully assented to by the opposite party, or that its terms were not defined with sufficient precision to render it binding (f), or that a right of action was intended to accrue solely upon the happening of some event which has not yet occurred (g), or upon the performance, by the contractee, of some condition precedent which he has failed altogether to perform (h). Though “ if a man binds himself to do certain

(e) Castrique v. Bernabo, 6 Q. B. 498 ; King v. Accumulative Ass. Co., 3 C. B., N. S., 151.

(f) Post, Book II, Chap. 1.

(g) Alder v. Boyle, 4 C. B. 635.

(h) Mason v. Harvey, 8 Exch. 819 ; Grafton v. Eastern Counties R. C., Id. 699 ; Hunt v. Bishop, Id. 675 ; Hudson v. Bilton, 6 E. & B. 565 ; Kingdom v. Cox, 5 C. B. 522 ; Jowett v. Spencer, 1 Exch. 647 ; Judson v. Bowden, Id. 162 ; Dicker v. Jackson, 6 C. B. 103 ; Porcher v. Gardner, 8

C. B. 461 ; Portage v. Cole, 1 Wms. Saunds. 320 a. (4) ; Nowell v. Mayor, &c., of Worcester, 9 Exch. 457 ; Jones v. Cannock, 3 H. L. Ca. 700 ; Hill v. Mount, 18 C. B. 72 ; Roberts v. Brett, Id. 561 ; Newson v. Smythies, 3 H. & N. 840 ; Jonassohn v. Great Northern R. C., 10 Exch. 434 ; Smith v. Mannera, 5 C. B., N. S., 632, 637 ; Petty v. Sidney, Id. 679 ; Seeger v. Duthie, 8 C. B., N. S., 45 ; Leakey v. Lucas, 14 C. B., N. S., 491.

acts which he afterwards renders himself unable to perform, he thereby dispenses with the performance of conditions precedent to the act which he has so rendered himself unable to perform" (i).

It cannot, however, be laid down as a universal rule, that where, by agreement, an act is to be done on a future day, no action can be brought for a breach of the agreement till the day for doing the act in question has arrived. "If," says Lord Campbell, C. J. (k), "a man promises to marry a woman on a future day, and before that day marries another woman, he is instantly liable to an action for breach of promise of marriage (l). If a man contracts to execute a lease on and from a certain day for a certain term, and before that day executes a lease to another for the same term, he may be immediately sued for breaking the contract (m). So, if a man contracts to sell and deliver specific goods on a future day, and before the day he sells and delivers them to another, he is immediately liable to an action at the suit of the person with whom he first contracted to sell and deliver them" (n). "All the cases admit," says Lord Alvanley, in Touteng v. Hubbard (o), "that where a party has been disabled from performing his contract by his own default, it is not competent to him to allege the circumstances by which he was prevented as an excuse for his omission." In cases of this kind, it may be that, by the contract to do an act on a future day a relation is constituted between the parties, which raises an implied promise, that, in the meantime, neither will do anything to the prejudice of the other inconsistent with that

(i) Judgm., Sands v. Clarke, 8 C. B. 762.

(k) Hochster v. De La Tour, 2 E. & B. 678.

(l) Short v. Stone, 8 Q. B. 353. See Caines v. Smith, 15 M. & W. 189.

(m) Ford v. Tiley, 6 B. & C. 325; Lovelock v. Franklyn, 8 Q. B. 371.

See Horler v. Carpenter, 2 C. B., N. S., 56.

(n) Bowdell v. Parsons, 10 East, 359.

(o) 3 B. & P. 302, adopted in Esposito v. Bowden, 4 E. & B. 978; S. C., (reversed in Error), 7 Id. 763.

relation ; and upon a breach of this implied promise an action will lie without waiting for the expiration of the time specified in the original contract (p).

The 17th section of the Statute of Frauds (q) will be found to offer a strong illustration of the rule, that no action should be commenced until the cause of action is complete ; for although that section only requires some memorandum in writing of a contract, not that the entire contract itself should be in writing, nevertheless, a memorandum signed after action brought would not satisfy the statute (r).

2. The party purposing to sue will do well to consider whether or not the right of action has been postponed by the act of the parties or has been altogether extinguished. This right may be postponed, as by credit being given for a specified period (s), or by the receipt of a bill of exchange or promissory note payable at some future day, “ for and on account of ” the cause of action (t) ; which is a sort of qualified or conditional payment (u). The right in question may be altogether extinguished (x), as by merger (y), by payment, or by a release ; and if once extinguished, for ever so short a time, it cannot again revive (z).

(p) Judgm., Hochster v. De La Tour, 2 E. & B. 689, 694, recognised Avery v. Bowden, 5 E. & B. 728 ; S. C., 6 Id. 962 ; and cited Croockewit v. Fletcher, 1 H. & N. 915 ; per Erle, C. J., Bartholomew v. Markwick, 15 C. B., N. S., 716 ; per Maule, J., Lewis v. Clifton, 14 C. B. 253 ; and per Jervis, C. J., 6 E. & B. 961 ; Cort v. The Ambergate, Nottingham, and Boston R. C., 17 Q. B. 127 ; Emmens v. Elderton, 4 H. L. Ca. 624 ; S. C., 6 C. B. 160 ; 4 Id. 479 ; Danube, &c., R. C. v. Xenos, 13 C. B., N. S., 825 ; S. C., 11 Id. 152 ; M'Intyre v. Belcher, 14 C. B., N. S., 654, 664. See Barrick v. Buba, 2 C. B., N. S., 563 ; Taylor v. Caldwell, 3 B. & S. 826.

(q) Post, Book II., Chap. 2.

(r) Arg., Mitcheson v. Nicol, 7 Exch. 935 ; Bill v. Bament, 9 M. & W. 36.

(s) See per Patteson, J., Lamb v. Pegg, 1 Dowl. 447.

(t) Kearslake v. Morgan, 5 T. R. 513 ; per Pollock, C. B., Griiffiths v. Owen, 13 M. & W. 64 ; James v. Williams, Id. 828 ; and cases cited Gibbons v. Vouillon, 8 C. B. 483.

(u) Bottomley v. Nuttall, 5 C. B., N. S., 137, and cases there cited.

(x) See, in connection with the text, Croft v. London and North Western R. C., 3 B. & S. 436.

(y) Post, Book II., Chap. 1.

(z) Ford v. Beech, 11 Q. B. 852, 867 ; Gibbons v. Vouillon, 8 C. B.

Sometimes a plaintiff, in order to avoid incurring useless expense and disappointment, will be well advised to examine the Statute of Limitations applicable to his case, with a view to ascertaining whether his remedy is barred by its provisions, or, at all events, with a view to preventing its operation.

3. Where the proposed action is to be brought under the provisions of an Act of Parliament, care must of course be taken that the requirements (if any) of the particular Act having reference to matters preliminary to the issuing of the writ be complied with. In some cases, for instance, the consent of a Judge (a), or of the Attorney-General (b), may be indispensable before commencing the action.

4. Another important point for consideration will be, whether or not any kind of notice be necessary before suing.

It is indeed true, that, wherever the enforcement of a right of action is contemplated, some reasonable notice of the intended proceeding (even when not in strictness requisite), or some demand for pecuniary compensation, or some request for the performance of that which has been wrongfully left undone, should be made upon the opposite party, in order that a fair opportunity for an amicable settlement may thus be afforded him. And hence it is, that a respectable attorney will always make a demand of some sort on behalf of his client before complying with his instructions as to issuing the writ. Cases do, moreover, present themselves, in which proof of a demand and refusal may, on other grounds, be highly expedient, or may even be indispensable to a successful issue, ex. gr. in trover, where it may, in the absence of other proof, be needed as evidence of a conversion, or in an action for 483; Belshaw v. Bush, 11 C. B. 191; 3 M. & W. 387.

Webb v. Spicer, 13 Q. B. 886; Bottomley v. Nuttall, supra. See arg., (a) Grant v. Brown, 1 D. & L. 799.

Russell v. Da Bandeira, 13 C. B., N. 110, a. 77; Boyce v. Higgins, 14 C. B. 1. (b) See, for instance, 7 & 8 Vict. c.

8., 188, 189, citing Holme v. Guppy, slander, which it is usually considered unsafe to bring without previously inquiring whether the adverse party means to abide by the slanderous imputation complained of or will retract it (c), or in a case falling within the 213th section of the C. L. Proc. Act, 1852, where a tenant holds over after the expiration of his term (d).

But, besides cases like those just alluded to, there are numerous statutes, under which formal notice is absolutely essential before commencing an action (e). Thus, under the 11 & 12 Vict. c. 44, intituled "An Act to protect Justices of the Peace from vexatious Actions for Acts done by them in Execution of their Office," it is enacted (sect. 9), that no action shall be commenced against a justice of the peace, for anything done by him in the execution of his office, until one calendar month, at least, after a notice in writing of such intended action shall have been delivered to him, or left for him at his usual place of abode (f). So, under the 24 Geo. 2, c. 44, s. 6, no action shall be brought against any constable or other officer for "anything done in obedience to any warrant under the hand or seal of any justice of the peace," until a demand of the perusal and copy thereof has been made, and refused or neglected for the space of six days after such demand. Again, under the 138th section of the County Courts Act (9 & 10 Vict. c. 95), it is enacted, "for the protection of persons acting in the execution of" the statute, that notice in writing of any action to be brought against any person for anything done in pursuance of the Act, shall be given to the defendant one calendar month, at least, before the commencement of the action.

Where protection of this kind is given by the statute law,

(c) Per Lord Denman, C. J., Griffiths v. Lewis, 7 Q. B. 66.

(d) See also Davis v. Burrell, 10 C. B. 821.

(e) See Kent v. Great Western R. Co., 8 C. B. 714; Carpue v. London and Brighton R. Co., 5 Q. B. 747.

(f) See Haylock v. Sparke, 1 E. & B. 471; Davies v. Mayor of Swansea, 8 Exch. 808; Read v. Coker, 13 C. B. 850; 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 118; c. 97, s. 71; c. 99, s. 33.

much difficulty often occurs in determining whether the defendant has so acted as to have brought himself within the words and meaning of the particular clause, which requires that notice of action should be given.

In Hughes v. Buckland (g), the question, what might be held to have been done "in the execution" and "in pursuance" of a statute, was much discussed, and many authorities bearing upon the subject were cited. This case was decided under the repealed statute 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29, which authorised the summary apprehension by the servants of the owner of a fishery of any persons found fishing there in contravention of its provisions. The plaintiff had been so apprehended by the defendants (servants of the owner), who, the jury found, bonâ fide and reasonably believed that the fishery in question extended over the spot where the plaintiff was apprehended, whereas in fact it terminated some few yards short of that spot. The defendants were, however, held to be entitled to the protection of the Act. From this and similar cases we deduce as a safe proposition, that notice of action, or any other condition imposed on plaintiffs by any statute such as we have just adverted to, may be insisted on by those persons who have acted bonâ fide in pursuance of it (h), and who reasonably believed themselves to have been filling the character specified in it, as entitled to claim its protection (i). This was the test deemed applicable in Booth v. Clive (k), which (g) 15 M. & W. 346; Horn v. Thornborough, 3 Exch. 846; Cobbett v. Warner, 1 H. & N. 338; Jones v. Howell, 29 L. J., Ex., 19.

(h) Garton v. Great Western R. Co., E. B. & E. 837.

(i) See Hardwick v. Moss, 7 H. & N. 136, 141; Pease v. Chaytor, 3 B. & S. 620.

(k) 10 C. B. 827; Acc. Hermann v. Seneschal, 13 Q. B., N. S., 392, 404; Roberts v. Orchard, 33 L. J., Ex., 65, 67. See also Arnold v. Hamel, 9 Exch. 404; Lawson v. Dumbin, 9 C. B. 54; Howard v. Remer, 2 E. & B. 915; Kirby v. Simpson, 10 Exch. 358; Taylor v. Neafield, 3 E. & B. 725; Tarrant v. Baker, 14 C. B. 199; White v. Morris, 11 C. B. 1015; Thomas v. Stephenson, 2 E. & B. 108; Joule v. Taylor, 7 Exch. 58; Stamp v. Sweetland, 8 Q. B. 18, n. (h); Newton v. Ellis, 5 E. & B. 115.

was an action against a County Court Judge, for making an order for the committal of the plaintiff to gaol after a prohibition had issued to prevent further proceedings in the suit, which had been commenced in the County Court. The question which the Court here proposed for its determination was, did the defendant try the cause, honestly believing that his duty as Judge under the County Court Act called upon him to do so (l) ?

Forms of action.

5. Assuming that proper notice, when it is requisite, has been given, the next step which (prior to the C. L. Proc. Act, 1852) it was incumbent upon the plaintiff to take, was to determine the form of action (m) adapted to this case, in order that he might issue his writ in the proper shape ; but it is by the 3rd section of that statute rendered no longer necessary "to mention any form or cause of action in any writ of summons;" and indeed the alterations effected by the present code of Procedure (n), especially in that part of it which concerns the technicalities of pleading, have removed much of the practical value which attached in earlier times (o) to the consideration of the formal distinctions now alluded to.

Although it is no longer necessary, in any case, before issuing the writ to determine on the specific form of action to be adopted, it is nevertheless still essential for the student to investigate the theory of Forms of Action, because questions connected with them will occur frequently in the course

(l) See also Burling v. Harley, 3 H. & N. 271; Huggins v. Waydey, 15 M. & W. 357; Braham v. Watkins, 16 M. & W. 77; Gosden v. Elphick, 4 Exch. 445. See also the 5 & 6 Vict. c. 97, s. 4, by which an uniform time of one calendar month has been introduced for notices of action required by the statutes then in force.

(m) A "form of action" may be defined as "the peculiar technical mode of framing the writ and pleadings appropriate to the particular injury which the action is intended to redress:" C. L. Com., 1st Rep. p. 32.

(n) See C. L. Proc. Act, ss. 49-51.

(o) See, for instance, per Lord Kenyon, C. J., Savignac v. Rooms, 6 T. R. 129; Israel v. Douglas, 1 H. Bl. 243; Turner v. Hawkins, 1 B. & P. 476. Per Abbott, C. J., Orton v. Butler, 5 B. & Ald. 654.

of his reading, and these questions will be found generally mixed up more or less intimately with matters of law. In order, moreover, that the lawyer of the present day should become familiar with the terms of art employed in the Reports and text-books—sources to which he must continually recur—and because Forms represent, more or less accurately, substance; and because principles will often be found discussed and settled in arguments and judgments ostensibly directed to questions of form,—this branch of legal science as it formerly existed must not be overlooked.

Actions have, from remote times, been divided into three classes, Real, Personal, and Mixed. The distinction, cherished by the policy of our law, between rights appertaining to real and those connected with personal property, explains to some extent this classification, so far, at least, as the first two of these classes are concerned, the third class including those causes of action which partake in some sort of the nature of both the former. Each of these three classes admits of subdivision into certain species or forms of action.—The forms of real and mixed actions were very numerous, and involved much useless technicality. The stat. 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, however, abolished all of these forms excepting ejectment (p), (which is a mixed action), and the three real actions, viz., writ of right of dower, dower unde nihil habet, and quare impedit; and the C. L. Proc. Act, 1860, has further dealt with the three real actions, by enacting that “No writ of right of dower or writ of dower unde nihil habet, and no plaint for free bench or dower in the nature of any such writ, and no quare impedit, shall be brought after the commencement of this Act in any Court whatsoever; but

Classification of actions.

Real and mixed actions.

(p) The reader, if curious to investigate the abolished forms (which are enumerated in the 36th section of the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27), may refer to Co. Litt. 239, n. 1; 3 Bla. Com., Chap. 10; Bac. Abr., “Action in General” (A).

As to Quare Impedit and Ejectment, see Arg., Marshall v. Bishop of Exeter, 7 C. B., N. S., 653; 6 Id. 716. The action of ejectment will be considered hereafter: Bk. III., Chap. 3, s. 1.

where any such writ, action, or plaint would now lie, either in a superior or in any other Court, an action may be commenced by writ of summons issuing out of the Court of Common Pleas in the same manner and form as the writ of summons in an ordinary action; and upon such writ shall be endorsed a notice that the plaintiff intends to declare in dower, or for free bench, or in quare impedit, as the case may be." (s. 26.)

Personal actions.

Personal actions include those which are brought for the specific recovery of goods and chattels, or for damages for breach of contract, or wrongs done to the person or property. This class of actions is divided into, 1st, actions ex contractu, and 2ndly, actions ex delicto. When the cause of action springs directly out of or is founded upon contract, the action will fall within the former of these classes, and will be described as originating ex contractu; when the cause of action is founded upon a wrong independent of contract, it will fall within the latter of the above classes, and the action will be said to originate ex delicto.

Actions ex contractu.

Actions ex contractu are divisible into assumpsit, debt, detinue, covenant, account, and annuity.

Assumpsit.

An action of Assumpsit is founded upon a promise, express or implied, or upon a contract or agreement not under seal. In Slade's case (q) will be found much learning upon the supposed nature of this action. Previously thereto, assumpsit was held to be included under the more general head of actions on the case, and was held to be founded on the non-feasance of a duty in respect of which special damages (r) were demanded by the plaintiff. This doctrine, however, was in Slade's case relaxed; and it was afterwards considered settled that a claim for a debt due upon simple contract would lie equally well in assumpsit as in debt; and,

(q) 4 R. p. a, 94 b.

(r) See per Lord Loughborough, C. J., Rudder v. Price, 1 H. Bl. 551.

since the decision just cited, assumpsit has substantially been treated as an action of contract rather than of tort.

By the third resolution in Slade's case it was further determined "that every contract executory imports in itself an assumpsit; for when one agrees to pay money, or to deliver anything, he thereby assumes or promises to pay or deliver it; and therefore when one sells any goods to another, and agrees to deliver them at a day to come, and the other in consideration thereof agrees to pay so much money at such a day, in that case both parties may have an action of debt, or an action on the case on assumpsit."

We may conclude, then, with a learned writer, that, prior to the C. L. Proc. Act, 1852, "the breach of all simple contracts, whether verbal or written, express or implied, for the payment of money, or for the performance or omission of any other act," was remediable by action of assumpsit (s), and thus assumpsit became the form of remedy most resorted to in the superior Courts. By force, however, of certain provisions contained in the statute just specified, all causes of action remediable under the common indebitatus counts are now referable to debt,—not to assumpsit (t).

Debt is the appropriate remedy where a specific and determinate sum of money is claimed. It "lies to recover a sum certain or capable of being reduced to certainty by calculation, payable in respect of a direct and immediate liability by a debtor to a creditor" (u). Debt, therefore, is not a form adapted to claims sounding in damages. It is a more extensive remedy in some respects than assumpsit ; for, in addition to being appropriate for the enforcing of many claims founded on simple contract, it may lie for the recovery of money due on specialty (x) or record (y), and it is also available for the recovery of a penalty imposed by statute (z).

(s) Chitt. Pl., 7th ed., vol. 1, pp. 111-122.

(t) Compare the 49th section of the C. L. Proc. Act, 1852, with the forms of declaration contained in Sched. B., Nos. 1-14, and with the form of the plea of nunquam indebitatus (No. 36). See Yates v. Eastwood, 6 Exch. 805; Corbett v. Packington, 6 B. & C. 268.

(u) C. L. Com., 1st Rep., p. 31. See Bracegirdle v. Hinks, 9 Exch. 361; Bogg v. Pearse, 10 C. B. 534; Stone v. Rogers, 2 M. & W. 443; Sunderland Marine Ins. Co. v. Kearney, 16 Q. B. 925; Smith v. Winter, 12 C. B. 487; Bonaker v. Evans, 16 Q. B. 162.

When technical distinctions were wont to be needlessly indulged in, it was laid down that a plaintiff in an action of debt was limited to a recovery of the precise sum which he claimed as due to him ; whilst, in indebitatus assumpsit, he might have recovered an amount smaller than that alleged to be due (a) ; but now, where the plaintiff recovers a sum of money, the amount to which he is entitled may be awarded to him by the judgment generally, without specifying whether it is recovered as a debt or as damages (b).

Another distinction between debt and assumpsit, which subsisted under the former practice, may here be mentioned. In assumpsit, inasmuch as damages only were demanded, judgment by default was interlocutory, and the actual amount for which such judgment was to be entered up had to be ascertained either by a jury on a writ of inquiry, or, in the case of a liquidated demand, by a reference to one of the Masters of the Court. Whilst in an action of debt, judgment by default was, with some few exceptions, final, and execution issued for the whole amount mentioned in the declaration (c).

(x) Chitt. Pl., 7th ed., vol. 1, p. 123.

(y) Id., p. 124. See Frith v. Wolaston, 7 Exch. 194 ; Henderson v. Henderson, 6 Q. B. 288 ; Russell v. Smyth, 9 M. & W. 810 ; Henley v. Soper, 8 B. & C. 16. See Hutchinson v. Gillespie, 11 Exch. 798.

(z) See 4 Geo. 2, c. 28 ; 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, s. 14 ; Addison v. Mayor of Preston, 12 C. B. 108, 133 ; Tobacco Pipe Makers' Co. v. Loder, 16 Q. B. 775.

(a) Hooper v. Shepherd, 2 Str. 1089

(where, indeed, it was thought arguable, that covenant only, and not debt, would lie on a deed of charter-party). See also Aylett v. Lowe, 2 W. Bl. 1221.

(b) C. L. Proc. Act, 1852, s. 95 ; post, Book II., Chap. 6.

(c) This amount was usually much larger than the sum really due ; but a memorandum on the writ of execution addressed to the sheriff directed him to levy the right sum. See C. L. Com., 1st Rep., p. 41.

But the C. L. Proc. Act, 1852, has abolished rules to compute, and enacts that all judgments by default for debts or liquidated demands in money shall be final, and when the amount of damages appears to be substantially a matter of calculation, and not one where an inquiry before a jury is requisite, the Court or Judge may order that a Master shall ascertain and certify such amount (d).

The action of Detinue is, as the term indicates, framed Detinue. with a view to the recovery of personal chattels unjustly detained (e). It was, even before the C. L. Proc. Act, 1852, often associated with a claim of debt, or, as it was called, was in the debet and detinet. The judgment in detinue was in the alternative, that the plaintiff should recover the goods, or the value thereof (f), (which it was the province of the jury severally to assess, if he could not have the goods themselves,) and his damages for the detention, and his costs of suit,—thus giving the option to the defendant, who certainly had no right to such a privilege, of either giving up the goods, or paying their value. The 78th sect. of the C. L. Proc. Act, 1854 (g), has remedied this state of the law, by enacting, that, whenever money is deemed by the plaintiff an inadequate compensation for the loss to him of the chattel in respect of which he is suing, he may apply to the Court to order that “execution shall issue for the return of the chattel detained, without giving the defendant the option of retain-(d) See ss. 92—96.

(e) Detinue lies against him who once had, but has improperly parted with, the possession of chattels: Com. Dig. “Detinue” (A.); F. N. B. 138 A.; Jones v. Dowle, 9 M. & W. 19. So an attorney who has lost his client’s deed is liable in detinue; Reeve v. Palmer, 5 C. B., N. S., 84. See Goodman v. Boycott, 2 B. & S. 1; Steadman v. Hockley, 15 M. & W. 553.

Detinue is to be ranked with actions ex contractu; Danby v. Lamb, 11 C.

B., N. S., 423.

For a form of declaration in detinue, since the C. L. Proc. Act, 1852, see Chilton v. Carrington, 15 C. B. 95. And as to the effect of the plea of non detinet, see the Pleading Rules, H. T., 1853, reg. 15.

(f) Phillips v. Jones, 15 Q. B. 859. See also Sutton’s case, 7 Yr. Bk., 2 Mich. Term, 1 Rich. III.

(g) As to which, see Chilton v. Carrington, 15 C. B. 730. See also 19 & 20 Vict. c. 97, s. 2.

ing such chattel upon paying the value assessed; and that, if the said chattel cannot be found, and unless the Court or a Judge should otherwise order, the sheriff shall distrain the defendant by all his lands and chattels in the said sheriff's bailiwick, till the defendant render such chattel, or, at the option of the plaintiff, that he cause to be made of the defendant's goods the assessed value of such chattel" (h).

Account.

Account is a form of action which lies against a bailiff or receiver, for money which has come into his hands, and for which he is bound to account. This action was found inconvenient in practice, and rather than adopt it, plaintiffs resorted for the most part to equity (i). "The use of an action of account," says Gibbs, C. J., in Tomkins v. Willshear (k), "is where the plaintiff wants an account, and cannot give evidence of his right without it." This form of action was rendered all the less frequent by reason of assumpsit being likewise held to lie for a balance of an account, however complicated in its nature (l); the practice, moreover, of bringing into open court suits involving the adjustment of such disputes has become, since the C. L. Proc. Act, 1854 (m), less common than formerly. By sect. 3 of this statute, if it be made to appear, "at any time after the issuing of the writ, to the satisfaction of the Court or a Judge, upon the application of (h) When the re-delivery of the chattel had become impossible,—as when charters or deeds were burnt,—or when they had been already re-delivered before trial, it was competent to the jury, in this form of action, to find specially the facts, and confine themselves to an assessment of damages: see Williams v. Archer, 5 C. B. 318.

As throwing further light upon the nature of the action of detinue, see Turner v. Trustees of Liverpool Docks, 6 Exch. 543; Crossfield v. Such, 8 Exch. 825; S. C., Id. 159; Morgan

v. Marquis, 9 Exch. 145; Foster v. Crabb, 12 C. B. 136; Allwood v. Heywood, 1 H. & C. 745; Clossman v. White, 7 C. B. 43; Atwood v. Ernest, 13 C. B. 881; Oliver v. Oliver, 11 C. B., N. S., 139.

(i) Taff Vale R. C. v. Nixon, 1 H. L. Ca. 111.

(k) 5 Taunt. 431. Inglis v. Haigh, 8 M. & W. 769, and cases cited there. But see 19 & 20 Vict. c. 97, s. 9.

(l) Tomkins v. Willshear, supra; Arnold v. Webb, 5 Taunt. 432, n. (a).

(m) See ss. 3-17; C. L. Com., 2nd Rep., pp. 5, 6.

either party, that the matter in dispute consists wholly or in part (n) of matters of mere account, which cannot conveniently be tried in the ordinary way, it shall be lawful for such Court or Judge, upon such application if they or he think fit, to decide such matter in a summary manner, or to order that such matter, either wholly or in part, be referred "to such arbitration as is specified in the clause (o).

Some modern cases, where the action of account has been employed, and where the older authorities bearing upon it are discussed, are below cited (p).

Covenant lies (often concurrently with debt) for the recovery of damages for the breach of a covenant or contract under seal. The main points for consideration accordingly, in reference to this action, will be, what amounts to a covenant?—what constitutes a breach? Covenant.

The nature of a covenant is hereafter investigated (q): it is a contract under seal, whereby a party enters into an obligation either to do or to abstain from doing an act, or pledges himself to the truth of certain facts.

A breach of covenant occurs wherever he who has entered into such a contract fails to carry it out according to the legal meaning and effect of the words which he has used (r).

The action of Annuity is met with, though rarely, in the old Reports; it was invented for the recovery of money payable by way of annuity, but has long been obsolete (s). Annuity.

(n) Browne v. Emerson, 17 C. B. 361.

(o) Insell v. Moojen, 3 C. B., N. S., 359; Jones v. Beaumont, 1 F. & Fin. 336; Pellatt v. Markwick, 3 C. B., N. S., 760. See Van Toll v. Chapman, 8 E. & B. 396; Mason v. Haddon, 6 C. B., N. S., 526.

(p) Eason v. Henderson, 12 Q. B. 986; Beer v. Beer, 12 C. B. 76; Sturton v. Richardson, 13 M. & W.

17. See also Wheeler v. Horne, Willes, 208; Reeves, Hist. Eng. Law, 2nd ed., vol. 2, p. 333.

(q) Post, Book II., Chap. 1.

(r) In regard to the action of covenant generally, and for information respecting breaches of ordinary covenants, the reader is referred to Selw. N. P., 12th ed., tit. "Covenant."

(s) See Com. Dig.: "Annuity" and "Dett."

Actions ex delicto.

Actions arising ex delicto, or founded on tort, are four in number, viz., trespass, case, trover, and replevin.

Trespass.

Trespass is the proper form of action for a direct injury to person or to property—i.e., for an injury caused by immediate violence or force—actual or implied: actual, as in the case of an assault; implied, as in the case of a wrongful, though peaceful, entry on land (t).

Numerous cases illustrating the nature of this action under circumstances of ordinary occurrence are collected in the Third Book (u) of these Commentaries, to which the reader is referred.

Case.

The origin of the action on the Case has been already indicated (x). Case, remark the Common Law Commissioners in their 1st Report (y), is a remedy far more extensive than any other available by action; it lies for what are called consequential injuries—that is, injuries supposed to arise indirectly and consequentially from the act complained of,—as from slander, whereby the complainant's character is injured;—or from negligent driving, whereby the plaintiff is run over and hurt, and the like. A familiar illustration of the difference between trespass, which lies for a direct, and case, which lies for a consequential, injury, is this:—Suppose a person throws a log of wood on to a highway, and by the act of throwing another person is injured, the remedy under such circumstances is trespass. But if the log reaches the ground, and remains there, and a person falls over it and is injured, the remedy is case, as the injury is not immediately consequent on the act done. So, if the defendant drive his (t) As showing the distinction between trespass and case, see Scott v. Shepherd, ante, p. 95.

(u) Of which, see particularly Chaps. 2 and 3.

(x) Ante, p. 39.

(y) P. 31. In the Reports of the Common Law Commissioners (1851, 1853, 1860) the rationale of the ancient and present Procedures is ably commented on. See also the "Observations" laid before the House of Lords by the commissioners in relation to certain important Principles of Procedure (May 18, 1860),—reprinted in Law Mag. & Rev., Aug. 1860.

carriage against that of another, the remedy may be trespass; but if the defendant's servant be driving, the remedy is usually case (z).

Although, formerly, it was deemed essential strictly to preserve "the boundaries of actions" (a), yet case was often held to lie equally with trespass upon the same facts (b).

Trover is a form of the action on the case. It originally Trover. lay for recovery of damages (c) against one who had found goods and refused to deliver them on demand (d) to the rightful owner (e), but converted (f) them to his own use; and from this fiction of a loss and finding of the goods (all trace of which is lost under the now existing procedure (g)), the remedy derived its name. Lord Mansfield, C. J., described this action (h) as being in form a fiction, in substance a remedy to recover the value of personal chattels (z) See, per Fortescue, J., Reynolds v. Clarke, 1 Str. 635; C. L. Com., 1st Rep., p. 31; Post, Book III., of which see particularly Chaps. 1 and 4.

See, also, as showing under what circumstances case will lie, Yates v. Eastwood, 6 Exch. 805; Woods v. Finnis, 7 Exch. 363, 372; Collett v. London and North Western R. C., 16 Q. B. 984; Muskett v. Hill, 5 Bing. N. C. 694; Marker v. Kenrick, 13 C. B. 188; Kinlyside v. Thornton, 2 W. Bl. 1111.

(a) Per Raymond, C. J., Reynolds v. Clarke, 1 Str. 635; ante, p. 116.

(b) See Com. Dig. "Pleader," Action on the Case (A.); Nargett v. Nias, 1 E. & E. 439; Williams v. Holland, 10 Bing. 112, where the earlier cases are collected; Chandler v. Broughton, 1 C. & M. 29; Hartley v. Moxham, 3 Q. B. 701; West v. Nibbs, 4 C. B. 172; Olegg v. Dearden, 12 Q. B. 576; Per Parks, B., Gordon v. Rolt, 4 Exch. 366; Sharrod v. London and North Western R. C., 4 Exch. 580; Ash v. Dawnay, 8 Exch. 237; Moreton v. Hardern, 4 B. & C. 224.

(c) See Reid v. Fairbanks, 13 C. B. 692.

(d) Heald v. Carey, 11 C. B. 977; Kerford v. Mondel, 28 L. J., Ex., 303.

(e) Bridges v. Hawkenworth, 21 L. J., Q. B., 75; Scattergood v. Sylvester, 15 Q. B. 506.

(f) Burroughes v. Bayne, 5 H. & N. 296, 301 (where the history and nature of this action are considered); Chinery v. Viall, 8 Id. 288; Giles v. Taff Vale R. C., 2 E. & B. 822; Simmons v. Lillywhite, 8 Exch. 431; Glover v. London and North Western R. C., 5 Exch. 60; Powell v. Hoyland, 6 Exch. 67; Mayhew v. Herrick, 7 C. B. 229. See also Buckland v. Johnson, 15 C. B. 145; Towne v. Lewis, 7 C. B. 608; and cases supra, n. (d).

(g) C. L. Proc. Act, 1852, s. 49.

(h) Cooper v. Chitty, 1 Barr. 31.

wrongfully converted by another to his own use. "The form supposes the defendant may have come lawfully by the possession of the goods. This action lies and has been brought in many cases where in truth the defendant has got the possession lawfully. . . . This is an action of tort, and the whole tort consists in the wrongful conversion. Two things are necessary to be proved to entitle the plaintiff to recover in this kind of action: 1st, property in the plaintiff; and 2ndly, a wrongful conversion by the defendant" (i).

This form of action, then, is adapted to try the title (k) to personalty—though it does not lie for chattels annexed to the freehold (l); it is in some respects analogous to trespass de bonis asportatis, i.e., for goods taken and carried away; the latter, however, is founded on possession actual or constructive, whilst trover is founded on a right of property special or absolute (m), coupled with a right of possession (n). Force does not enter as an ingredient into the constitution of a right of action in trover (o).

Replevin. Replevin is usually brought for goods taken under a distress, but is, nevertheless, maintainable where there has been any wrongful taking of goods out of the possession of the party who replevies. Thus, in Shannon v. Shannon (p), Lord Redesdale says, that replevin is an action founded upon any taking by another party; the question to be tried in the

(i) See Jeffries v. Great Western R. Co., 5 E. & B. 802; Walker v. Clyde, 10 C. B., N. S., 381.

(k) Waller v. Drakeford, 1 E. & B. 749; Manders v. Williams, 4 Exch. 339.

(l) Roffey v. Henderson, 17 Q. B. 574; The London, &c., Co. v. Drake, 6 C. B., N. S., 748; Judgm., Wilde v. Waters, 16 C. B. 651; Davis v. Jones, 2 B. & Ald. 165; per Williams, J., Dumergue v. Rumsey, 38 L. J., Ex., 88, 91. See 2 Wms. Saund., 5th ed., 259 b.

(m) Armory v. Delamirie, 1 Stra. 504; per Pollock, C. B., White v. Mullett, 6 Exch. 714; Lythgoe v. Vernon, 5 H. & N. 180; Buckley v. Gross, 3 B. & S. 566.

(n) Post, Book III., Chap. 3, s. 2.

(o) Post, ubi supra.

(p) 1 Sch. & Lef. 324; Allen v. Sharp, 2 Exch. 352; Jones v. Johnson, 5 Exch. 862; Mellor v. Leather, 1 E. & B. 619; Galloway v. Bird, 4 Bing. 299; per Parke, B., George v. Chambers, 11 M. & W. 159.

action being, whether the party from whom the goods were taken is really entitled to them? And the above-named learned Judge further observes that Blackstone, in the 3rd vol. of his Commentaries (q), gives too limited a definition of replevin, for "many old authorities will be found in the books of replevin being brought where there was no distress." So it is laid down, that, if a "trespasser takes beasts, replevin lies of this taking at election" (r). The action in question is however, usually brought where goods have been taken under a distress either for rent or damage feasant, and is altogether a peculiar remedy. When a person alleges that his goods have been unjustly distrained he may have them replevied, that is, redelivered to him upon giving security to prosecute an action with effect (s), and without delay, against the distrainer, for the purpose of trying the legality of the distress, and (if the right be determined in favour of the latter) to return the goods (t). The action of replevin was formerly commenced in the Sheriff's Court and continued in one of the new County Courts (u), but now it may be commenced in any of the superior Courts in the form applicable to personal actions therein (x); the Sheriff's powers and responsibilities with respect to replevins having ceased, and the Registrar of County Courts being empowered to grant replevins (y).

The C. L. Proc. Act, 1854, has added to the above list of actions two new species, viz. the action of Mandamus (z) and the action of Injunction (a).

Actions of mandamus and injunction.

(q) P. 146.

(r) Vin. Abr. "Replevin," (B.), fol. 2.

(s) 19 & 20 Vict. c. 108, s. 65; Tummons v. Ogle, 6 E. & B. 571.

(t) As to payment into Court in actions of replevin, see C. L. Proc. Act, 1860, ss. 22-24.

(u) See 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, s. 119.

(x) 19 & 20 Vict. c. 108, s. 65; and see C. L. Proc. Act, 1860, s. 22.

(y) 19 & 20 Vict. c. 108, s. 63. Any action of replevin brought in a County Court may be removed by certiorari into a superior Court by the defendant upon his complying with the conditions expressed in Id., s. 67.

(z) Ss. 68-77.

(a) Ss. 79-82.

Mandamus. The proceeding by mandamus is directed towards enabling a plaintiff to enforce on a defendant the performance of any duty, "in the fulfilment of which the plaintiff is personally interested" (b), and for non-performance of which he has no other equally effectual remedy (c).

Injunction. The proceeding by injunction is applicable, after an action has been brought for a breach of contract, or for any other injury, and is a remedy appropriate for preventing the "repetition or continuance (d) of such breach of contract or other injury, or the committal of any breach of contract or injury of a like kind arising out of the same contract, or relating to the same property or right;" and the plaintiff may also in the same action "include a claim for damages or other redress" (e).

Parties to actions.

6. Although it is not possible to treat, in this volume, of Parties to Actions with any minuteness, it is, nevertheless, desirable to indicate the general principles which are to be observed and the ordinary rules which are to be followed in determining the selection of the plaintiff and the defendant in a suit at law. For detailed information upon this subject the reader must refer to works of a technical character (f). I may premise that a mere equitable claim will not support an action at law (g). Thus, a cestui que trust cannot sue

(b) The construction hitherto put by the Courts upon these words may be seen from the following cases:—Benson v. Paul, 6 E. & B. 273; Ward v. Lowndes, 1 E. & E. 940, 956; Norris v. Irish Land Co., 8 E. & B. 512; Bush v. Beavan, 1 H. & C. 500. "When a party claims a mandamus in an action he must show circumstances that would induce the Court to issue the prerogative writ" (as to which, see post, Chap. 5), per Mellor, J., 3 B. & S. 279.

(c) Bush v. Beavan, 1 H. & C. 500.

(d) De La Rue v. Fortescue, 2 H. & N. 324; Baylis v. Le Gros, 2 C. B., N. S., 316.

(e) C. L. Proc. Acts, 1854 (s. 79), and 1860 (s. 32); Gittins v. Symes, 15 C. B. 362; Mayall v. Higbey, 1 H. & C. 148. See 25 & 26 Vict. c. 88, s. 21.

(f) Chitty Pl., 7th ed., vol. 1, Chap. 1; Broom's Prac., vol. 1; Post, Book II., Chap. 5.

(g) Per Erle, J., London and North Western R. Co. v. Glyn, 28 L. J., Q. B., 192 (citing Allen v. Impett, 8 Taunt. 263); S. C., 1 E. & E. 652. See Pardoe v. Price, 16 M. & W. 461; Edwards v. Lowndes, 1 E. & B. 81.

his trustee for money due in his capacity of trustee, unless indeed the latter has admitted that it is due, and that he holds it in his hands; in which case he is liable at law (h).

It may also be stated as a general rule, that no one can sue upon a contract unless it was made by him or by an agent, or by some person professing to act for him and whose act was ratified by him (i).

Plaintiffs in actions ex contractu.

Thus the persons executing a specialty, or being expressed therein as parties to it, may sue thereon (k); though on a covenant running with the land, an assignee of the original grantee, being in of the same estate, has the same right to sue as the party who executed the deed (l).

Who should sue on a specialty.

For determining who should sue on a simple contract, the test applicable is this—from whom does the consideration (m) move (n)? In some of the older cases, indeed, another test will be found suggested, viz. that the party for whose benefit the contract is made should sue thereon; this however cannot be accepted as satisfactory at the present day.

Who should sue on simple contract.

Reported cases are numerous in which the question has Joinder of plaintiffs.

(h) Howard v. Brownhill, 23 L. J., Q. B., 23; Roper v. Holland, 3 Ad. & B. 99; cited Judgm., Kennedy v. Brown, 13 C. B., N. S., 741.

(i) Per Erle, C. J., Watson v. Swann, 11 C. B., N. S., 749.

(k) Per Lord Ellenborough, C. J., Storer v. Gordon, 3 M. & S. 322; Higginbottom v. Burge, 4 Exch. 667. Per Tindal, C. J., Bushell v. Beavan, 1 Bing. N. C. 120. As to parties suing on a deed which they have not executed, see Morgan v. Pike, 14 C. B. 473; Swatman v. Ambler, 8 Exch. 72; Foley v. Addenbrooke, 4 Q. B. 208. See, too, British Empire Mutual Life Assurance Co. v. Brown, 12 C. B. 728; Wilkinson v. Anglo-Californian, &c. Co., 7 Railway Ca. 511.

(l) Thursby v. Plant, 1 Wms. Saund.

240 (3), and the notes thereto; Spencer's case, 1 Smith, L. C., 5th ed., 43; Chapman v. Dutton, Plowd. 284; Magnay v. Edwards, 13 C. B. 479; West London R. C. v. London and North Western R. C., 11 C. B. 327. See also 8 & 9 Vict. c. 106, s. 5; Co. Litt. 384 a.; Virtue v. East, 11 Q. B. 384; Wynn v. Shropshire Union R. C., 5 Exch. 430.

(m) Post, Book II., Chap. 1; Thomas v. Thomas, 2 Q. B. 851.

(n) See Crow v. Rogers, 1 Str. 592; Price v. Easton, 4 B. & Ad. 433; Treddle v. Atkinson, 1 B. & S. 393; Robertson v. Wait, 8 Exch. 299; Hicks v. Gregory, 8 C. B. 378; Hartley v. Cummings, 5 C. B. 247; Cooper v. Parker, 14 C. B. 118.

been discussed, who should be plaintiffs in suing on a contract under seal containing covenants capable of being construed as joint or several. The general rule deducible from these cases is that, where a covenant admits of being construed as joint, and the interest of the covenantees is joint, they must join in suing upon the covenant (o); where, however, the interest of each of the covenantees appears on the face of the deed to be several, the words of the instrument will be taken disjunctively, and the covenant will be construed ~~as several~~ (p); and in the case of ambiguity, the language being capable of two constructions, the words should be construed according to the interest of the parties intended to be protected (q). The 19th section of the C. L. Proc. Act, 1860, has deprived these cases of much of their practical importance, by enacting that "the joinder of too many plaintiffs shall not be fatal, but every action may be brought in the name of all the persons in whom the legal right may be supposed to exist;" and it further provides in case of any question of misjoinder arising, that judgment may be given in favour of such one or more of the plaintiffs as shall be adjudged by the Court to be entitled to recover. It is, nevertheless, proper to avoid misjoinder, especially as it may entail liability to costs (r).

The authorities below refer to the joinder of plaintiffs in actions on simple contract (s) to which as well as to those founded on specialty the section above cited applies.

The assignment of the beneficial interest in a simple contract does not generally transfer the right of suing on it, or,

(o) Eccleston v. Clipsham, 1 Wms. Saund. 154; Servante v. James, 10 B. & C. 410.

(p) Haddon v. Ayers, 1 E. & E. 118; Hopkinson v. Lee, 6 Q. B. 964; and cases cited Broom's Prac., vol. 1, pp. 204, 206.

(q) Per Parke, B., Keighley v. Watson, 3 Ex. 728; Foley v. Addenbrooke, 4 Q. B. 207.

(r) C. L. Proc. Act, 1860, s. 19 and fin.; Bellingham v. Clark, 1 B. & S. 332.

(s) 2 Wms. Saund. 116 (2); Hat-sall v. Griffith, 2 Cr. & M. 679; and see Lucas v. Beale, 10 C. B. 789; Clay v. Southern, 7 Exch. 717; Mills v. Alderbury Union, 3 Exch. 590.

as it is commonly expressed, a chose in action (t) is not assignable (u); and hence the necessity for assignees of a chose in action making provision for suing in the names of the original assignors (u).

I shall revert hereafter (x) to the relation of principal and agent, of partner and co-partner, merely mentioning in this place the fundamental rule that the principal must in general sue for breach of a contract entered into by him through an

Principal and agent,
&c.

It will, moreover, with a view to avoiding repetition, be convenient for the present to postpone a consideration of certain associations regulated by the common or the statute law, the rights and liabilities of which in respect of contracts entered into on their behalf may sufficiently be deduced from the remarks hereafter offered respecting them (z).

The effect of coverture at common law is to render the wife incapable of entering into a contract as principal. She can only act in such matter as agent of her husband. The relation, however, of husband and wife leads to various rules with respect to suing in actions on contract, which admit of being thus stated:—1st. The husband must sue alone in respect of any estate and property which are by act of law absolutely vested in him, although they may have accrued to him in right of his wife (a).

Coverture.

(t) Post, Book II., Chap. 3.

(u) Per Buller, J., 4 T. R. 341; Tempest v. Kilner, 2 C. B. 308; Howard v. Shepherd, 9 C. B. 297. See per Wigram, V.-C., Bagshaw v. Eastern Union R. Co., 7 Hare 132; S. C., 2 Mac. & G. 401; De Pothonier v. De Mattos, E. B. & E. 461; and see 19 & 20 Vict. c. 97, s. 5.

(x) Post, Book II., Chap. 5, s. 1.

(y) Seignior v. Wolmer, Godb. 361; per Lord Ellenborough, C. J., Sadler v. Leigh, 4 Camp. 196.

With respect to the right of auctioneers to sue, see Williams v. Millington, 1 H. Bl. 81; Evans v. Evans, 1 Harr. & Woll. 239; per Lord Abinger, C. B., Sykes v. Giles, 5 M. & W. 650; Robinson v. Rutter, 4 R. & B. 954.

(z) Post, Book II., Chap. 5, s. 2.

(a) Dengate v. Gardiner, 4 M. & W. 7; Saville v. Sweeney, 4 B. & Ad. 514, 522, 524; Bac. Abr. and Com. Dig. "Bar. & Feme;" Bidgood v. Way, 2 W. Bl. 1236; Abbot v. Blofeld, Cro. Jac. 644.

2ndly. The wife cannot sue alone, whether the right of action accrued before or after coverture (b).

3rdly. When the cause of action accrues to the husband during coverture in right of his wife, he may in general elect either to sue alone or jointly with her. Thus if a chose in action is given to a feme covert, the husband may elect to reserve it exclusively for himself or he may give his wife an interest in it (c). Whenever the wife has such an interest as would survive to her in the event of the husband's death, she may be well joined with him as a co-plaintiff (d).

4thly. The wife must be joined as plaintiff with the husband when a complete cause of action has accrued to the femo dum sola, as for breach of covenant, or on a bond, bill of exchange, or promissory note, or in respect of a debt due to her before coverture, or on a chose in action, which became vested in the feme before marriage, though the cause of action has accrued during coverture (e); or where the cause of action accrues to the wife in autre droit, and would therefore survive to her (f).

Before the C. L. Proc. Act 1852 came into operation, the marriage of a feme, whether plaintiff or defendant, whilst an (b) Divorce à vinculo matrimonii, judicial separation, the banishment, attainder, or presumed death of the husband, may cause an exception to this rule; see 20 & 21 Vict. c. 85, s. 26; the wife of an alien enemy cannot sue alone, De Wahl v. Braune, 1 H. & N. 178. As to the custom of the City of London, see Caudell v. Shaw, 4 T. B. 361.

(c) See per Parke, B., Gaters v. Madeley, 6 M. & W. 426; Bendix v. Wakeman, 12 M. & W. 97.

(d) Ayling v. Whicher, 6 Ad. & E. 264; Bret v. Cumberland, Cro. Jac. 309; Beadle v. Sherman, Cro. Eliz. 608; Arnold v. Bidgood, Cro. Jac. 318; Phillis Kirk v. Pluckwell, 2 M. & S.

393; Brashford v. Buckingham, Cro. Jac. 77; Wills v. Nurse, 1 Ad. & E. 65; Johnson v. Lucas, 1 E. & B. 659.

(e) Wootton v. Steffenoni, 12 M. & W. 129; Brereton v. Evans, Cro. Eliz. 700; 1 Wms. Saund., 210 a; Hart v. Stephens, 6 Q. B. 937; Scarpellini v. Atcheson, 7 Q. B. 864; Hopkins v. Logan, 5 M. & W. 241; Sherrington v. Yates, 12 M. & W. 855; Richbell v. Alexander, 10 C. B., N. S., 324. See also Dalton v. Midland R. C., 13 C. B. 474; Procter v. Brotherton, 9 Exch. 486.

(f) See Richards v. Richards, 2 B. & Ad. 447; Field v. Allen, 9 M. & W. 694, 699.

action was pending caused it to abate, but the 141st section of that statute remedies this defect, and the action may now "be proceeded with to judgment;" and further in case of a judgment for the wife, execution may issue thereon by the authority of the husband without any writ of revivor or suggestion.

In regard to the capacity of an infant, lunatic, or alien to contract, somewhat is said hereafter (g). Infant, &c.

Whenever the legal interest in a contract is vested in executors and administrators, they may sue (h). Although a personal representative must always sue in that character, in respect of a contract made with the deceased, yet, when it has been made with himself subsequently to the death of the testator or intestate, and when the damages in an action thereon would be assets, he may sue either as the personal representative or in his individual capacity (i). Counts for money due to the plaintiff as executor or administrator cannot be joined with counts for money due to him in his private capacity (k). Executors and administrators.

Executors have a joint and entire interest in the testator's

(g) Post, Book II., Chap. 5, s. 2.

(h) Id.; Wms. Exors., 5th ed., Part V., Book I., Chap. 1; Lucy v. Levington, 2 Lev. 26; Morley v. Polhill, 2 Vent. 56; see per Parke, B., Raymond v. Fitch, 2 Cr. M. & R. 592, 594; Ricketts v. Weaver, 12 M. & W. 718; Smith v. Simonds, Comb. 64; Kingdon v. Nottle, 1 M. & S. 355; S. C., 4 M. & S. 53; et vide King v. Jones, 4 M. & S. 188; Orme v. Broughton, 10 Bing. 537; Doe d. Rogers v. Rogers, 2 N. & M. 555; Rhodes v. Haigh, 2 B. & C. 346, 347; M'Dougal v. Robertson, 4 Bing. 435; Tyler v. Jones, 3 B. & C. 144; Clarke v. Crafts, 4 Bing. 143; Knights v. Quarles, 2 B. & B. 102; Moreron's case, 1 Vent. 30; 4 Geo. 2, c. 28, s. 1; Berwick v. An- drews, 2 Ld. Raym. 971; Allen v. Hopkins, 13 M. & W. 94; Chamberlain v. Williamson, 2 M. & S. 408; see Judgm., Beckham v. Drake, 8 M. & W. 854; S. C., 9 M. & W. 79, and 11 M. & W. 315; Bodger v. Arch, 10 Ex. 333.

(i) 1 Wms. Saund., 6th ed., 112, n. (1); Com. Dig. "Pleader" 2, D. 1; Marshall v. Broadhurst, 1 C. & J. 403; Edwards v. Grace, 2 M. & W. 190; Werner v. Humphreys, 3 Scott, N. R., 226; Gallant v. Bouctflower, 3 Doug. 34; Aspinall v. Wake, 10 Bing. 51; King v. Thom, 1 T. R. 457.

(k) See (ex. gr.), Davies v. Davies, 1 H. & C. 451; Bellingham v. Clark, 1 B. & S. 332.

goods, and must be joined as plaintiffs, even when one only of them has proved the will (l).

Bankrupt.

It may be laid down generally, that all the remedies which a bankrupt would have had, if he had not become bankrupt, with respect to his estate, real or personal, whether in possession, remainder, or reversion, at the date of the bankruptcy, including outstanding debts and assets, vest in his assignees (m), who may sue (n), therefore, for them, as also in respect of those contracts which they can adopt and elect to adopt (o).

Defendants
ex contractu.

On simple
contract.

Having thus disposed of the right to sue, we come to the liability to be sued ex contractu; and here an elementary rule is, that he must be the defendant in an action on a simple contract (p) by whom or on whose behalf such contract was concluded (q). Whence it follows that in general the liability upon a contract is not assignable at law (r).

Joinder of defendants on a simple
contract.

The joinder of defendants on a simple contract will of course depend upon the character of the contract in question—how far it is a joint or a several, or a joint and several,

(l) Webster v. Spencer, 3 B. & Ald. 363. See Venables v. East India Co., 2 Exch. 633; Stubs v. Stubs, 1 H. & C. 257, 265.

As to the right to sue on a part-performed contract, see Edwards v. Grace, supra; Crosthwaite v. Gardner, 18 Q. B. 640; Wood v. Bell, 5 E. & B. 773.

(m) See Bankrupt Law Consolidation Act, 1849 (12 & 13 Vict. c. 106), ss. 141, 142, 153; the Bankruptcy Act, 1861 (24 & 25 Vict. c. 134), ss. 127, 128; Shelf. Law of Bankruptcy, 3rd ed., 350, 366 et seq.

(n) The leave of the Court of Bankruptcy to sue and defend is required under 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, ss. 152, 153. Lee v. Sangster, 2 C. B., N. S., 1.

(o) Post, Book II., Chap. 5, s. 1; Shelf. Law of Bankruptcy, 3rd ed., 371 et seq.

(p) Post, Book II., Chap. 1.

(q) Webb v. Rhodes, 3 Bing. N. C. 732; 2 Bl. Com. p. 443; Appleton v. Binks, 5 East, 148; Jenkins v. Hutchinson, 13 Q. B. 744; Hamber v. Hall, 10 C. B. 780; Stubbs v. Twynam, 7 C. B., N. S., 719; Moffatt v. Dickson, 13 C. B. 543.

(r) Post, Book II., Chap. 3; Fairlie v. Denton, 8 B. & C. 400; Stewart v. Fry, 7 Taunt. 339; Dickinson v. Marrow, 14 M. & W. 713; Forth v. Stanton, 1 Wms. Saund. 210, n. (a); Chambers v. Jones, 5 Exch. 229; and cases cited in Broom's Prac., vol. 1, p. 353.

contract (s). In order to charge several persons jointly on a verbal contract, it will not be enough to show that credit was given to them jointly, without some proof of their contracting jointly, either expressly or impliedly, or that the work done was for their joint benefit (t); and whether the contract in question be written or verbal, it will, in the absence of any express provision or stipulation by the parties themselves, be taken to be a joint, and neither a joint and several, nor a several contract, and all parties liable should be joined in suing upon it (u).

Again, if a contract in writing be joint and several, the plaintiff may sue all the contracting parties jointly, or any one individually (x).

On a specialty the party to be sued is indicated by the express terms of the deed, and therefore the choice of such party will in general present no difficulty. To make the heir liable, he must be expressly named in the specialty; and when a person by bond or covenant (whether real or personal), or, indeed, by any specialty, binds himself and his heirs, the heir and devisee are each liable for the default of the ancestor or testator to the extent of the assets, freehold and copyhold, taken by descent or devise, and they may be jointly sued; if there be no heir, the devisee may now be sued alone (y).

Defendants
on a specialty.

When heir and devisee liable.

The personal representatives however of an obligor or covenantor are liable to the extent of assets, whether they be named or not; and when the real and personal representa-

(s) Per Lord Denman, C. J., 1 Ad. & E. 207, 208; Kirby v. Banister, 5 B. & Ad. 1069; Gibson v. Lupton, 9 Bing. 297.

(t) Baden v. Titchmarsh, 1 Ad. & E. 691; Arnold v. Bainbrigge, 9 Exch. 153; MacLae v. Sutherland, 3 E. & B. 1; Fell v. Goslin, 7 Exch. 185; Forster v. Taylor, 3 Camp. 49.

(u) Broom's Prac., vol. 1, pp. 354-5.

Robinson v. Rudkins, 26 L. J., Ex., 56.

(x) Lee v. Nixon, 1 Ad. & E. 201.

(y) 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 47; 11 & 12 Vict. c. 87; Hunting v. Sheldrake, 9 M. & W. 256; Barber v. Fox, 2 Wms. Saund. 136, 137 b; Co. Litt. 209 a; Farley v. Briant, 5 Ad. & E. 847; Braithwaite v. Skinner, 5 M. & W. 313.

tives are alike liable, the plaintiff may elect to sue both or either of them separately (z).

Joinder of defendants on a specialty.

The joinder of defendants liable on a contract under seal may be regulated by these two rules:—1. When the obligation is joint, all parties chargeable should be made co-defendants on its breach. 2. When it is in terms joint and several, the covenantee may elect to sue either one or all of the covenantors, notwithstanding their legal interest in the subject-matter of the covenant be joint (a).

Liability of principal or agent.

The leading propositions as to the respective liability of principal and agent on a contract entered into by the latter, as well as the liabilities consequent on the relationship of persons as co-partners, and of various associations existing at the common law or by statute, will hereafter be considered (b).

Partners,
&c.

Cverture.

On a contract made by a married woman during coverture (c), inasmuch as she could only have entered into it as agent for her husband, the husband must be sued alone; but for breach of any contract made by the wife before marriage, or for debts then incurred by her, husband and wife must be jointly sued (d). And when the cause of action has accrued against the feme in autre droit, she must be sued jointly with her husband (e).

In certain cases moreover, either the wife may be sued jointly with the husband or he may be sued alone; as for rent, due after the marriage but accruing under a lease made (z) Davies v. Churchman, 3 Lev. 189; Davy v. Pepys, Plowd. 439 b; and see Wms. Exors., 5th ed., Part V., Book II., Chap. 1.

(a) Cabell v. Vaughan, 1 Wms. Saund. 291 b, n. (4); Eccleston v. Oliphant, 1 Wms. Saund. 154 a; and see King v. Hoare, 13 M. & W. 494.

(b) Post, Book II., Chap. 5, s. 2.

(c) Reid v. Teakle, 13 C. B. 627.

(d) Bac. Abr. "Bar. & Feme" (L.);

Vin. Abr. "Bar. & Feme" (X.) pl. 15; Mitchinson v. Hewson, 7 T. R. 348; Robinson v. Hardy, 1 Keb. 281; Norwood v. Stevenson, Anders. 227; Tracey v. M'Arlton, 7 Dowl. 582; Evans v. Morgan, 2 C. & J. 458; see Dick v. Tollhausen, 4 H. & N. 695.

(e) Mounson v. Bourn, Cro. Car. 518; Kings v. Hilton, Id. 608; Com. Dig. "Administration" (D.).

to the wife before it (f), or under a lease which the wife has as executrix or administratrix. So, if covenants are made in a lease to husband and wife jointly, they may be joined as defendants in an action on the covenants (g).

The general rule with regard to executors and administrators (h), is that being personal representatives of the deceased, though not expressly named (i), they are liable, to the extent of assets, on all his covenants and contracts broken in his lifetime, and on such as are broken after his death, provided that his skill or taste were not required for their performance (k), and that they were not to be performed by him in person or limited expressly to his lifetime (l).

Executors and administrators.

Thus, in Hambly v. Trott (m), Lord Mansfield lays it down, that, "when the cause of action is money due, or a contract to be performed, gain or acquisition of the testator by the work and labour or property of another, or a promise of the testator, express or implied,—where these are the causes of action, the action survives against the executor."

In general, all the executors named in the will—unless when any of them has formally renounced, or has not administered—should be joined as co-defendants.

We have seen that the effect of bankruptcy is to divest the bankrupt of all property in which he is beneficially interested (n) for distribution amongst his creditors. The "Bank-

Assignees in bankruptcy

(f) Com. Dig. "Bar. & Feme" (Y.).

(g) Bac. Abr. "Bar. & Feme" (L.); see Lake v. Smith, 1 N. R. 174.

(h) Post, Book II., Chap. 5, s. 2.

(i) Williams v. Burrell, 1 C. B. 402.

(k) Siboni v. Kirkman, 1 M. & W. 428; Tasker v. Shepherd, 6 H. & N. 575.

(l) Hyde v. Dean and Canons of Windsor, Cro. Eliz. 552; cited per Wightman, J., Penfold v. Abbott, 32

L. J., Q. B., 67, 68. See Broom's Prac., vol. i., p. 488; Morgan v. Ravey, 6 H. & N. 265; Judgm., Taylor v. Caldwell, 3 B. & S. 835.

(m) 1 Cowp. 375. See Ex parte Tindal, 8 Bing. 404; Powell v. Graham, 7 Taunt. 580; 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, s. 14; 4 & 5 W. & M. c. 24, s. 12; Prior v. Hembrow, 8 M. & W. 889, 890.

(n) Ante, p. 134.

ruptcy Act, 1861," accordingly, by its 161st section, enacts, that "the order of discharge shall upon taking effect discharge the bankrupt from all debts, claims, or demands provable under his bankruptcy," save as therein otherwise provided (c), "and if thereafter he shall be arrested or any action shall be brought against him for any such debt, claim, or demand, he shall be discharged upon entering an appearance, and may plead in general that the cause of action accrued before he became bankrupt, and may give this Act and the special matter in evidence, and the order of discharge shall be sufficient evidence of the bankruptcy and the proceedings precedent to the order of discharge." By s. 162 of the same statute, relief is extended to a bankrupt arrested after such order, which, however, by s. 163, "shall not release or discharge any person who was a partner with the bankrupt at the time of the bankruptcy, or was then jointly bound or had made any joint contract with him." Further, by s. 164, it is enacted, that "after the order of discharge takes effect the bankrupt shall not be liable to pay or satisfy any debt, claim, or demand provable under the bankruptcy, or any part thereof, or any contract, promise, or agreement verbal or written, made after adjudication; and if he be sued on any such contract, promise, or agreement, he may plead in general that the cause of action accrued pending proceedings in bankruptcy, and may give this Act and the special matter in evidence." It is indeed expedient for a plaintiff who sues for a debt provable against the estate of the defendant, to discontinue the action in the event of his bankruptcy, and go in and prove his debt under the bankruptcy: but whilst a bankrupt is uncertificated, he is liable to be sued for all debts and demands which are not proved under his bankruptcy, whether they be susceptible of proof or not, provided that a complete cause of action has accrued against him.

The assignees of a bankrupt are not liable on any contract made by him, unless they choose to adopt it; and it is within their discretion to elect whether they will accept or decline a lease held by the bankrupt, though if they accept it, they accept also the liability upon the covenants contained in it (p).

The most general rule for selecting the plaintiff in an action ex delicto, is—that he must sue whose legal right or property has been affected by the tortious act of another (q).

Plaintiffs in actions ex delicto.

The proper plaintiff in trespass qu. cl. fr., according to the rule above laid down, is he who is in possession at the time of the trespass—and, as against any one who cannot show a better title, mere possession will suffice to support the action (r). But neither a lessor who is out of possession, nor a mortgagee, who has not entered into possession, can be plaintiff in an action of trespass for a tortious entry on the land leased or mortgaged (s).

Trespass—qu. cl. fr.

So in an action of trespass de bonis asportatis, the proper plaintiff is he who had either actual or constructive possession of the chattels taken and carried away (t). An auctioneer may sue in trespass for the wrongful taking away of —de bonis asportatis.

(p) 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 145; 24 & 25 Vict. c. 134, s. 131.

See 7 & 8 Vict. c. 70, which relates to debtors unable to meet their engagements with creditors, and not being traders within the meaning of the Bankrupt Act. By sect. 6 of this Act, the trustees of the estate of a debtor petitioning under the Act may sue and be sued as if they were such assignees in bankruptcy: see Blackford v. Hill, 15 Q. B. 116.

(q) See per Lord Kenyon, C. J., Dawes v. Peck, 8 T. R. 332.

(r) See Com. Dig. "Trespass;"

Jones v. Chapman, 2 Exch. 803; Ryan v. Clarke, 14 Q. B. 65; Randall v. Stevens, 2 E. & B. 641; Cox v. Glue, 5 C. B. 533; Holmes v. Wilson, 10 Ad. & E. 503; Every v. Smith, 26 L. J., Ex., 344.

(s) See, as to the doctrine of relation in trespass, Barnett v. Earl of Guildford, 11 Exch. 19.

(t) Smith v. Miller, 1 T. R. 480; Young v. Hichens, 6 Q. B. 606; Hurrell v. Ellis, 2 C. B. 295; Watson v. Macquire, 5 C. B. 336; White v. Morris, 11 C. B. 1015; Brown v. Nolley, 3 Exch. 219.

goods confided to him for sale (u). Where goods and chattels are consigned to him, he has, moreover, a special property in them—not only when they are in his own sale-rooms, but even when in the house of another, if there for the purpose of sale—and he may therefore maintain trespass or trover for them, though not for fixtures (x), nor for damage done to the realty, nor for the removal of growing crops which he has been directed to sell.

Case.

The nature of the action on the case, elsewhere described (y), indicates sufficiently the proper party to sue therein.

Trover.

As possession mainly determines who should be plaintiff in an action of trespass, so the right of property, absolute or special (z), coupled with the right of possession, resolves the same question in trover (a). And, indeed, mere possession, as against a wrong-doer, gives the right to maintain trover. Hence, either bailor or bailee of a chattel bailed during pleasure may maintain trover for its wrongful conversion (b).

Joinder of plaintiffs.

With respect to the joinder of parties as plaintiffs in an action ex delicto, it may be laid down: 1. That where the legal interest affected by a tortious act is joint, they whose joint interest is affected thereby should join in suing for (u) Williams v. Millington, 1 H. Bl. 81, 84; Robinson v. Rutter, 4 E. & B. 954.

(x) Davis v. Danks, 3 Exch. 435. As to who should sue for timber severed, see Ward v. Andrews, 2 Chit. 636; Channon v. Patch, 5 B. & C. 897; 1 Wms. Saund. 322 d, n. (5); Rolls v. Rock, cited 2 Selw. N. P., 12th ed., p. 1297.

(y) Ante, p. 39.

(z) 2 Wms. Saund. 47 b, d, e, f; per Lord Loughborough, C. J., 1 H. Bl. 85.

(a) Watson v. Macquire, 5 C. B.

836; Felthouse v. Brindley, 11 C. B., N. S., 869; Owen v. Knight, 4 Bing. N. C. 54; Mason v. Farnell, 12 M. & W. 683; Franklin v. Neate, 13 M. & W. 481; Fenn v. Bittleston, 7 Exch. 152; Northam v. Bowden, 11 Exch. 70.

(b) Smith v. Sleep, 12 M. & W. 585, 589; Armory v. Delamirie, 1 Smith, L. C., 5th ed., 801; Sutton v. Buck, 2 Taunt. 302; Manders v. Williams, 4 Exch. 389; per Lord Ellenborough, C. J., Martini v. Coles, 1 M. & S. 147.

compensation in respect of the injury so occasioned. 2. That where several persons who are severally interested sustain a joint damage, they may sue either separately or jointly—in respect of it (c). 3. That where the interest and damage are several, there must be separate actions brought by the persons injured in respect of their several injuries (d).

The husband must sue for all injuries to property—whether derived from his wife or not—when such property has been reduced into his own possession. For property of the wife not so reduced, the wife may be joined as co-plaintiff: the true test whether she may be joined or not in any case being, whether the right of action would survive to her (e). In an action for a tort to the person of the wife, compensation may be sought either for the direct injury to the wife in respect of which a right of action would survive to her—in which case the husband and wife must join—or for the consequential and special damage to the husband, in which case the husband may sue alone (f). In regard however to the joinder of claims by husband and wife, the C. L. Proc. Act, 1852, s. 40 (g), enacts, that “in any action brought by a man and his wife for an injury done to the wife, in respect of which she is necessarily joined as co-plaintiff, it shall be lawful for the husband to add thereto claims in his own right, and separate actions brought in respect of such claims may be consolidated, if the Court or a judge shall think fit: Provided that in the case of the death of either plaintiff such Effect of coverture as regards choice of plaintiffs ex

delicto.

(c) Coryton v. Lüthebye, 2 Wms. Saund. 115, 116, n. (2); Weller v. Baker, 2 Wils. 423.

(d) Co. Litt. 145. b.; 2 Wms. Saund. 117 a; Le Fanu v. Malcolmson, 1 H. L. Ca. 637; Robinson v. Marchant, 1 Q. B. 919; Williams v. Beaumont, 10 Bing. 270; Forster v. Lawson, 3 Bing. 452; Broom's Prac. 551. See C. L. Proc. Act, 1860, ss. 19, 20.

(e) Ayling v. Whicher, 6 Ad. & E.

259.

(f) Saville v. Sweeney, 4 B. & Ad. 523; Dengate v. Gardiner, 4 M. & W. 7; Guy v. Livesey, Cro. Jac. 501; Norris v. Seed, 3 Exch. 782; Longmeid v. Holliday, 6 Exch. 761. With regard to the effect of judicial separation on the right of wife to sue, see 20 & 21 Vict. c. 85, s. 26.

(g) See, also, C. L. Proc. Act, 1860, ss. 19, 20.

suit, so far only as relates to the causes of action, if any, which do not survive, shall abate." The foregoing section is permissive, not imperative (h).

If the wife survive her husband she may in general sue for injuries done to her person or property either before or during coverture (i). The husband may elect to join his wife with him in certain cases, as in trespass to land held in her right, or for obstructing a right of way to land leased to the wife dum sola, or generally when the wife is the meritorious cause of action (k), or had a vested interest directly affected by the tortious act (l). But both the husband and wife must sue jointly for torts to the personal property of the wife which had both their inception and consummation before marriage (m). Further, where the wife has a right of action in autre droit, she must be joined as co-plaintiff (n).

Executors and administrators.

The right of personal representatives to sue in tort is given and regulated by the statute law (o). By the 4 Edw. 3, c. 7, reciting, that, "in times past executors have not had actions for a trespass done to their testators, as of the goods and chattels of the same testators carried away in their lifetime," it is enacted, "that the executors in such cases shall have an action against the trespassers," in like manner as they whose executors they are should have had if they were living. An administrator is within the equity of this statute, and by 25 Edw. 3, st. 5, c. 5, the like remedy is extended to the executors of executors.

Again, the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, provides, upon certain (h) Brockbank v. Whitehaven Junction R. C., 7 H. & N. 834.

(i) See Waller v. Drakeford, 1 E. & B. 749.

(k) Newton v. Boodle, 9 Q. B. 984.

(l) Weller v. Baker, 2 Wils. 414; and see Huggins v. Durham, 2 Str. 726.

(m) Milner v. Milnes, 3 T. R. 627.

(n) Serres v. Dodd, 2 N. B. 407.

(o) 1 Wms. Saund. 216 a; Le Mason v. Dixon, Sir W. Jones, 174; Raymond v. Fitch, 2 Cr. M. & R. 588; Palgrave v. Windham, 1 Str. 212; Bunbury v. Hewson, 3 Exch. 558; Morgan v. Thomas, 8 Exch. 302; Welchman v. Sturgis, 18 Q. B. 552; Barnett v. Earl of Guildford, 11 Exch. 19, and cases cited post, Chap. 5, s. 2.

conditions, a remedy by the executors or administrators for injuries done to the real estate of any deceased person committed in his lifetime (p). The most important modification, however, of the maxim Actio personalis moritur cum persona (q) has been effected by the 9 & 10 Vict. c. 93, which was enacted with a view of compensating the families of persons killed by accident, and which the reader will find commented on hereafter (r).

The effect of bankruptcy upon the right to sue in actions ex delicto is, that whilst the assignees of the bankrupt must be plaintiffs in respect of injuries committed to his estate, by which the amount of the fund belonging to his creditors is lessened (s), yet when the injury complained of is to his person (t), feelings, or reputation (u), the right to sue remains vested in him. "Actions for injuries to personal chattels, whereby they are directly affected, and are prevented from coming to the hands of the assignee, or come diminished in value, undoubtedly pass. The action of trover for a conversion before the bankruptcy is a familiar instance of this. On the other hand, rights of action for injuries to the person or reputation, or the possession of real estate, do not pass" (x).

The most general rule for choosing the defendant in an action ex delicto is—that the party committing the tortious act (y), or asserting a right or title adverse to the plaintiffs, should be made defendant. An ordinary instance illustrating this rule is, that when the owner of land erects on it a ex delicto.

Defendants

(p) Sect. 2.

(q) Raymond v. Fitch, 2 Cr. M. & B. 597; Ricketts v. Weaver, 12 M. & W. 725; Leg. Max., 4th ed., p. 869.

(r) Book III., Chap. 2.

(s) Hancock v. Caffyn, 8 Bing. 358.

(t) Howard v. Crowther, 8 M. & W. 603.

(u) Benson v. Flower, Sir W. Jones, 215.

(x) Beckham v. Drake, 2 H. L. Ca. 626; S. C., 11 M. & W. 315.

As to chattels acquired after bankruptcy and before certificate, see Fowler v. Down, 1 B. & P. 44, 48; Webb v. Fox, 7 T. R. 391, 398; Fyson v. Chambers, 9 M. & W. 460; Herbert v. Sayer, 5 Q. B. 982; Judgm., Morgan v. Knight, 15 C. B., N. S., 677.

(y) Post, Book III., Chaps. 1—4.

nuisance and then demises the land for a term, he will be liable for the erection of the nuisance in the first instance, though either lessor or lessee might be liable for its continuance—and, the demise being held to operate as an affirmation of the nuisance (z), every successive occupier will equally be liable for the continuance of it.

Joinder of defendants in tort.

With respect to the joinder of defendants in an action ex delicto, it may be laid down that all who are concerned in committing the tort complained of, are liable to be jointly sued in respect of it (a).

Joinder of husband and wife as defendants.

In regard to the joinder of husband and wife in an action ex delicto, it will suffice to state that they must be joined in any such action when founded on a tort committed by the wife whilst sole—as in trover where both the finding and conversion were before marriage,—or on a tort committed by the wife during coverture—as an assault or slander by her (b). In respect of a joint battery by husband and wife they may be both sued in one action (c).

Executors and administrators.

The 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, s. 2, regulates in some important

(z) Roswell v. Prior, 2 Salk. 460; Todd v. Flight, 9 C. B., N. S., 377; Rich v. Basterfield, 4 C. B. 801; Russell v. Briant, 8 C. B. 836; recognised in Lyon v. Knowles, 3 B. & S. 563, 565; Holmes v. Wilson, 10 Ad. & E. 503; Brent v. Haddon, Cro. Jac. 555; Thompson v. Gibson, 7 M. & W. 456; post, Book III., Chap. 2.

(a) Per Tindal, C. J., Cranch v. White, 1 Bing. N. C. 418; Sedman v. Walker, 1 Exch. 589; Gauntlett v. King, 3 C. B., N. S., 59. See 2 Wms. Saund., 6th ed., 117, note (b). Further,—as to one partner involving his copartners, so as to render them liable to be sued with him, see Petrie v. Lamont, Car. & M. 93; Mellors v. Shaw, 1 B. & S. 437; Ashworth v. Stanwix, 30 L. J., Q. B., 183.—As to the liability of a corporation for the act of its agent, see Smith v. Birmingham Gas Co., 1 Ad. & E. 526; Eastern Counties R. C. v. Broom, 6 Exch. 314; Goff v. Great Northern R. C., 30 L. J., Q. B., 148.

As to the liability of the managers of a joint-stock company for fraud, see Cullen v. Thomson's Trustees, 4 Macq. H. L. Ca. 424.

(b) Com. Dig. "Bar. & Feme" (Y.) For slander spoken by husband and wife, there must be separate actions, the one against the husband and wife, the other against the husband only: see Swithin v. Vincent, 2 Wils. 227.

As to tort committed by wife during judicial separation from her husband, see 20 & 21 Vict. c. 85, s. 26.

(c) See Vine v. Saunders, 4 Bing. N. C. 96.

particulars (d) actions against executors and administrators. It recites that there had been no remedy provided by law for certain wrongs done by a person deceased in his lifetime to another in respect of his property real or personal—and it then proceeds to enact “that an action of trespass or trespass on the case, as the case may be, may be maintained against the executors or administrators of any person deceased, for any wrong committed by him in his lifetime to another in respect of his property real or personal (e), so as such injury shall have been committed within six calendar months before such person’s death (f), and so as such action shall be brought within six calendar months after such executors or administrators shall have taken upon themselves the administration of the estate and effects of such person, and the damages to be recovered in such action shall be payable in like order of administration as the simple contract debts of such person (g). Thus, for a tort to the property of another, whether real or personal, a remedy in trespass, trover (h), or case may now be enforced against the personal representatives of the party originally liable.”

But neither the above Act nor the 9 & 10 Vict. c. 93, the provisions of which are hereafter considered (i), will supply any remedy against the representatives of one deceased who has committed a tort to the person of another, whether death has or has not thence resulted.

Lastly, the certificate of a bankrupt is no bar to an action Bankrupts. against him for a tort committed by him prior to his cer-

(d) As to the liability ex delicto of personal representatives generally, see Hambly v. Trott, 1 Cowp. 373, 375, recognised 7 Ad. & E. 429; per Lord Kenyon, C. J., 3 T. R. 549; Com. Dig. “Administration,” (B. 15).

(e) See Morgan v. Ravy, 6 H. & N. 265.

(f) Richmond v. Nicholson, 8 Scott, 134.

(g) See Powell v. Rees, 7 Ad. & E. 426.

(h) Ward v. Audland, 16 M. & W. 862; Le Mason v. Dixon, Sir W. Jones, 173, 174; and authorities cited supra, n. (d).

(i) Post, Book III., Chap. 2.

tificate (k). His assignees, however, are liable for any torts committed by them in their official capacity—though the 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106 (l), annexes conditions to their being sued with respect to any act done by them in pursuance of the statute.

2. Proceedings from Writ to Appearance.

Introductory remarks.

The present practice of our superior Courts of common law, dates from a recent period ; the Common Law Procedure Acts of 1852, 1854, and 1860, and the General Rules of Hilary Term, 1853, and of Michaelmas Vacation, 1854, containing the materials upon which it mainly rests (m) ; although there are, besides these, certain statutes unrepealed, which regulate special matters of practice.

The Procedure Act of 1852 (n) was enacted with a view to rendering the process, practice, and the mode of pleading in the superior Courts of common law “more simple and speedy.” The Procedure Acts of 1854 (o) and 1860 (p) had the two-fold object of further amending the practice of these Courts and of enlarging their jurisdiction. The rules of Hilary Term, 1853 (q) are prefaced by an order of the Judges, that all the then existing written (r) rules of practice in regard to civil actions should be annulled. It will be found, however, that many of these rules have been re-enacted in the same language ; so that we may derive assistance in our interpretation of the code now in force, by referring to earlier

(k) Lloyd v. Peel, 3 B. & Ald. 408 ; Wilmer v. White, 6 Bing. 291 ; see Doe
d. Davies v. Thomas, 6 Exch. 854.

(l) Sect. 159. See Ouchterlony v. Gibson, 1 D. & L. 1.

(m) From time to time additional rules affecting particular points of Practice are issued.

(n) 15 & 16 Vict. c. 76.

(o) 17 & 18 Vict. c. 125.

(p) 23 & 24 Vict. c. 126.

(q) There are two sets of rules of Hil. T., 1853, viz. the Practice and the Pleading Rules, which latter came into operation in Trin. T. of that year.

(r) Unwritten rules of practice remain in force, so far as they are not inconsistent with the rules recently promulgated : Begg v. Forbes, 13 C. B. 614.

decisions of the Courts, and the principles laid down by them in analogous cases. Courts of law have always within themselves the inherent power and right to regulate their own practice (s), or, as Alderson, B., has observed (t), every Court "must necessarily be entrusted with control over its own rules of practice;" a remark applicable to inferior as to superior Courts.

The first step to be taken in an action at law, is that of summoning the party against whom the action is to be brought into the Court in which it is intended to be carried on. Now this is effected in personal and real actions by that particular kind of process which is termed a writ of summons (u). The forms of this writ (which may be obtained in blank at any law stationer's) are given in the schedule (A) to the Common Law Procedure Act, 1852, and will be found to be adapted to the three following cases:—1st, where the defendant resides within the jurisdiction of the Court; 2ndly, where, being a British subject, he resides out of the jurisdiction; and, 3rdly, where, not being a British subject, he resides out of such jurisdiction (x).

It will be convenient, in the first instance, to consider the mode of procedure in the more usual case, viz. where the defendant is resident within the jurisdiction of the Court. Here the writ (which is addressed to the defendant (y))

(s) Per Tindal, C. J., Scales v. Cheese, 12 M. & W. 687; Mellish v. Richardson, 1 Cl. & F. 235; cited per Crompton, J., 7 H. & N. 343; Jackson v. Galloway, 1 C. B. 280; per Lord Wynford, Ferrier v. Howden, 4 Cl. & F. 82. See Fleming v. Dunlop, 7 Cl. & F. 43.

(t) Ex parte Story, 8 Exch. 199.

(u) C. L. Proc. Act, 1852, ss. 2—25; Reg. v. The Saddlers' Co., 1 B. C. Ca. 183. C. L. Proc. Act, 1860, s. 26.

(x) As to the writ of summons—against a trader having privilege of Parliament, see 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 77,—under the Succession Duties Act (16 & 17 Vict. c. 51), see R. G. Mich. T., 1853, 9 Exch. 286,—under the Bills of Exchange Act, see Sched. A. to 18 & 19 Vict. c. 67; Maltby v. Murrells, 5 H. & N. 813.

(y) If there are more defendants than one, all their names should be comprised in the writ: C. L. Proc. Act, 1852, s. 4; see Christie v. Bell, 16 M. & W. 669; Brown v. Fullerton, commands him to cause an appearance to be entered for him in the action within eight days after service of the writ upon him, inclusive of the day of service, and gives notice that, in default of such appearance being entered, the plaintiff may proceed to judgment and execution in the action. To the writ is subscribed a memorandum as to the period within which it must be served (z), and upon it are certain indorsements which will presently be described.

Without attempting to enter into an examination of the very numerous cases decided under the former practice, with reference to irregularities (a) connected with the writ of summons, attention may with advantage be directed to the following point relating to this subject: A difficulty may sometimes be felt as to the mode of describing a defendant, where he has successively resided at different places. Under such circumstances, he ought to be described as of his last known or supposed place of residence; for, as observed by Mr. Justice Coleridge, in Downes v. Garbett (b), commenting on words (c) identical with those used in the 2nd section of the C. L. Proc. Act, 1852, "The Act (d) evidently refers to two states of facts," viz., 1. Where the defendant's residence or supposed residence is known, and he is known or supposed to be residing there. 2. Where he has left his place of residence, and is known or supposed to be in some other place. The description of the defendant's residence, however, whether actual or supposed, ought to be correctly stated in the writ (e); and there is a manifest difference to be noted between 13 M. & W. 556; Goodchild v. Leadham, 1 Exch. 706; Caldwell v. Blake, 2 Cr. M. & B. 249; Pepper v. Whalley, 1 Bing. N. C. 71.

(z) As to date of writ, see sect. 5; Clark v. Smith, 2 H. & N. 753.

(a) See Ross v. Gandell, 7 C. B. 766; Kirk v. Dolby, 6 M. & W. 636; Cantwell v. Earl of Stirling, 8 Bing. 174; and cases supra, n. (y).

(b) 2 D. & L. 944.

(c) "In every such writ and copy thereof the place and county of the residence or supposed residence of the party defendant, or wherein the defendant shall be or shall be supposed to be."

(d) 2 Will. 4, c. 39, s. 1.

(e) Pilbrow v. Pilbrow's Atmospheric R. Co., 3 C. B. 730.

the correct description of a supposed residence and the incorrect description of an actual residence, for the latter might be ground for requiring an amendment of the writ, whereas the former would be in truth a compliance with the requirements of the statute (f).

The common indorsements upon the writ are prescribed by the 6th and 8th sections of the Act of 1852, the former of which directs that the writ shall be indorsed with the name and place of abode of the attorney who sues it out (g) (if an attorney be employed), or with the address of the plaintiff if it be sued out by him in person. The object in requiring this indorsement is, that the defendant may know whither he may go, with a view to settling the action (h). The 7th section further provides a mode of compelling an attorney who sues out a writ, to declare whether it was issued by his authority (i), and to give the name and abode of his client; and if it appears that the attorney had not authorised the issuing of the writ, a stay of proceedings may be obtained. The 8th section requires that in all actions which are brought for payment of any debt (k), the amount of debt and costs shall be stated on the writ. The object of this (which is called the common indorsement) is sufficiently explained in its concluding words, which inform the defendant, that, "if the amount demanded by the indorsement be paid to the plaintiff or to his attorney within four days from the service hereof, further proceedings will be stayed." The plaintiff will not, however (if the defendant allows the action to proceed), be precluded by his indorsement from recovering at the trial an amount exceeding what is specified therein,

Common indorsement.

(f) King v. Hopkins, 2 D. & L. 638.

(g) Ablett v. Basham, 5 E. & B. 1019; Youlton v. Hall, 4 M. & W. 582; Lloyd v. Jones, 1 M. & W. 549; Toby v. Hancock, 4 D. & L. 385.

(h) Dawes v. Solomonson, 6 Scott, 596.

(i) Malpass v. Mudd, 3 H. & N. 246; Johnson v. Buley, 5 B. & Ald. 543; Smith v. Bond, 11 M. & W. 326.

(k) Perry v. Patchett, 2 Dowl. 667; Hobbs v. Young, 2 D. & L. 474; Harris v. Holler, 7 D. & L. 319. See Robinson v. Cotterell, 11 Ex. 476.

though he ought to indorse upon his writ the sum really claimed to be due, because the defendant might otherwise be misled, or even prevented from settling the action (l). If the plaintiff seeks to recover interest upon his debt, as well as the debt itself, he must either indorse upon his writ the amount claimed in respect of interest, or he must state the date from which he claims it (m).

Special indorsement.

That particular species of indorsement upon a writ of summons, which is called a special indorsement, can only be made in certain cases, viz. when the defendant is resident within the jurisdiction of the Court (n), and the claim happens to be for “a debt or liquidated demand (o) in money, with or without interest, arising upon a contract express or implied,” as on a bond, bill of exchange, promissory note, cheque, or other simple contract debt. Under these circumstances, the plaintiff will be at liberty to make, upon the writ and copy, a “special indorsement” of the particulars of his claim, in a form given in the schedule of the Act. The advantage of making such special indorsement is this: the plaintiff may, if the defendant make default in appearing to the writ, sign final judgment against him (p) for any sum not exceeding that indorsed on the writ, together with interest (q) to the date of the judgment, and a certain sum for costs (r). The special indorsement upon the writ will dis-

(l) Elliston v. Robinson, 2 Cr. & M. 843.

(m) Chapman v. Becke, 3 D. & L. 350; Burdell v. Miller, 7 C. B. 753; Hodding v. Stutchfield, 2 D. & L. 597; Allen v. Dussey, 4 D. & L. 430.

(n) Sect. 25.

(o) Hodsoll v. Baxter, E. B. & E. 884; Green v. Bicknell, 8 Ad. & E. 715; Jacquet v. Bower, 7 Dowl. 331; Hall v. Scotson, 9 Exch. 238; Rogers v. Hunt, 10 Exch. 474; Reg. Gen., Pr. rr. 19-21.

(p) Rowberry v. Morgan, 9 Exch. 730. By C. L. Proc., 1852, s. 27, a defendant may be let in to defend after final judgment by default, where the writ has been specially indorsed upon accounting satisfactorily to a judge for the non-appearance, and disclosing a defence on the merits. Warrington v. Leake, 11 Exch. 304; Hall v. Scotson, 9 Exch. 238.

(q) Rodway v. Lucas, 10 Exch. 667; Rogers v. Hunt, 10 Exch. 474.

(r) Sect. 27.

pense with the necessity of giving particulars of demand (s), unless indeed they be expressly ordered by a Judge (t). The special indorsement will not, however, dispense with the ordinary indorsement, which must always be made under the 8th section of the Act, where the claim is for "any debt."

When the writ of summons has been duly prepared (in accordance with what has been already said) by the plaintiff or his attorney, it must be taken to the Writ Office of the Court in which the action is brought to be authenticated by the seal of the Court (u), and the attorney must then deliver to the officer a memorandum, called a præcipe, which contains the names of the parties to the action, the name of the attorney issuing the writ, and the date. This memorandum is filed by the officer and may be of use (in case of a fraudulent alteration of the date of the writ)—as showing the precise day on which it really issued and on which therefore the action was commenced (x).

Writ to be sealed.

Præcipe.

When the writ has been thus sealed or stamped—it must be served upon the defendant or defendants in the action, unless where the defendant's attorney undertakes to appear for him; for such undertaking, which may be enforced against the attorney by a summary application to the Court or a Judge, will dispense with the necessity of personally serving the writ.

Service of writ.

It is worthy of remark, that service of the writ is required on grounds of natural justice—which demands that every man shall have notice of legal proceedings instituted against him, in order that he may defend himself accordingly—this proposition, which scarcely needs authority to support it, may be illustrated by cases where it has been held to be a sufficient answer to an action upon a foreign judgment in our

(s) As to which see post, p. 168.

(u) See Gibson v. Varley, 7 R. &

(t) See Fromant v. Ashley, 1 R. & B. 49.

B. 723.

(x) See sect. 5.

Courts, that notice of the proceedings abroad was not duly given to the defendant. Thus, in Ferguson v. Mahon (y), to an action on a judgment obtained in the Court of Common Pleas in Ireland, the defendant pleaded that he had never been arrested upon, or served with, nor at any time had notice of any process of the Court at the plaintiff's suit for the cause of action on which the judgment was obtained, and that he (the defendant) had never appeared to the action; and this plea was held good, because, said Lord Denman, C. J., "when it appears, as here, that the defendant has never had notice of the proceeding or been before the Court, it is impossible for us to allow the judgment to be made the foundation of an action in this country."

Mode of service.

Service, then, of the writ of summons being clearly essential, it becomes necessary to consider how it must be effected. This is generally done by delivering a copy of the writ to the defendant personally, and at the same time showing him the original, if demanded (z). With a view, moreover, to facilitating service of the writ where there are several defendants resident in different parts of the country, or where there is a single defendant whose precise residence is not known, it is now competent to a plaintiff (under the 9th section of the first Procedure Act) to issue "concurrent" writs at any time whilst the original writ is in force, such writs being stamped with the word "concurrent" and duly dated, and thus to effect service on the defendants or defendant without unnecessary delay (a).

Concurrent writs.

Care must, of course, be taken to serve the proper party with the writ: and how obvious soever may be the truth of this remark, questions of difficulty have sometimes arisen in

(y) 11 Ad. & E. 179; see Mecus v. Thellusson, 8 Exch. 638; Sheehy v. Professional Life Ass. Co., 13 C. B. 787; Leg. Max., 4th ed., 114 et seq.

(z) See Poole v. Gould, 1 H. & N. 99.

(a) See Cole v. Sherard, 11 Exch.

482. As to service—on Public Company, see C. L. Proc. Act, 1852, s. 16; Towne v. London and Limerick Steam Ship Co., 5 C. B., N. S., 730;—on lunatic, see Kimberley v. Alleyne, 2 H. & C. 223.

consequence of the wrong party having been served. Let us consider what course should be adopted by an individual thus mistakenly served with a writ of summons. In the first place it is clear, that, if the cause proceed to trial, he will have a good defence upon the merits (b) ; but should the plaintiff persevere, either through obstinacy or ignorance, in the action, it is undeniable that much inconvenience and some pecuniary loss may thus be entailed upon the defendant (c). In the case supposed, however, the defendant certainly would not be well advised to disregard altogether the service of the writ, and to take no notice of subsequent proceedings in the action ; for, as remarked in Stevenson v. Thorne (d), a defendant is not the less liable upon a judgment because he has been sued throughout by a wrong name. He ought, then, at once to inform the plaintiff of his mistake, in order that the proceedings erroneously instituted against him may be discontinued. But if, instead of adopting this straightforward course, the defendant act as if he were really the individual intended to be sued, and thus lure on the plaintiff with the motive of making him pay costs, the trick will probably be defeated by some interlocutory application to the Court during the progress of the cause, and, if detected, the defendant will infallibly be visited with such pecuniary punishment in the shape of costs as may be thought to meet the justice of the case (e).

Another case sometimes occurring in practice is where proceedings are had, and judgment is obtained, against a party who has not been served with a writ. This occasionally happens by reason of an attorney appearing for an individual without authority from him ; and in this case the Court will set aside the judgment and appearance with (b) Griffin v. Gray, 5 Dowl. 331.

(e) Walker v. Medland, 1 D. & L.

(c) See Davies v. Jenkins, 11 M. & W. 745.

159 ; Goodered v. Belcher, 4 C. B.

472 ; Richards v. Hanley, 10 Jur.

(d) 13 M. & W. 149.

1057.

costs, and leave the plaintiff to recover them (if he can) from the delinquent attorney by summary application to the Court (f).

Evading personal service.

Again—it not unfrequently happens, that a defendant, knowing that a writ has been issued against him, evades service of it. Under such circumstances, the 17th section of the first Procedure Act has provided the course which ought to be adopted. The words there used are, that in case it shall appear to the Court or Judge “that reasonable (g) efforts have been made to effect personal service, and either that the writ has come to the knowledge of the defendant, or that he wilfully evades service of the same, and has not appeared thereto,” the Court or Judge may order that the plaintiff be at liberty to proceed as if personal service had been effected, subject to such conditions as may seem fit. The object of this section is to provide an efficient substitute for the former clumsy and oppressive method of compelling an appearance by distringas (h).

Absconding debtor.

Certain statutory provisions have in modern times been made to protect a creditor, when compelled to sue for recovery of his debt or for damages to the amount of 20*l.* or upwards, and where there is reason to believe that his debtor is about to quit the country. Thus, under 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, the creditor has, subject to certain restrictions, a right to arrest his debtor on mesne process, or he may have recourse to the peculiar powers conferred upon him by the Absconding Debtors Arrest Act (i). If these proceedings are taken,

(f) Bailey v. Buckland, 1 Exch. 1, 7; Hubbart v. Phillips, 13 M. & W. 702.

(g) Gorringe v. Terrewest, 2 L. M. & P. 12; Naef v. Mutter, 12 C. B., N. S., 816; Flower v. Allan, 33 L. J., Ex., 88; Barringer v. Handley, 12 C. B. 720; Wakeley v. Teesdale, 2 L. M. & P. 85.

(h) See per Jervis, C. J., Barringer v. Handley, 12 C. B. 720; C. L. Com., 1st Rep., p. 4.

(i) 14 & 15 Vict. c. 52, s. 1; Williams v. Gibbon, 33 L. J., Q. B., 33, where the Court dissent from Masters v. Johnson, 8 Exch. 63; Eld v. Vero, Id. 655; Steward v. Waugh, 33 L. J., Q. B., 86.

still a writ of summons must have been issued, though it need not necessarily be served before the writ of capias (upon which the debtor is to be arrested) can be obtained (k). The duty of the sheriff in executing the writ of capias on mesne process was much considered in the case of Howden v. Standish (l), which shows that the sheriff is bound at his peril to provide such a force as will enable him to effect a caption of the defendant, in spite of any resistance which he has reason to anticipate. This case illustrates the very stringent nature of the obligation cast by law upon the sheriff of executing the king's writ.

By the C. L. Proc. Act, 1852, important and beneficial changes have been effected, both as regards the place where and the time within which the writ of summons may under ordinary circumstances be served. Formerly, the writ could only be served in the county specified therein, or within 200 yards of its boundary; now it may be served anywhere within the jurisdiction of the Court. Formerly, the period of duration or continuance of the writ was four calendar months; now it is in force for six months (m). And although, prior to the Act of 1852, the writ of summons could have been continued by what were called alias and pluries writs (n), this statute has provided a better mode of renewing the writ by a stamp upon the writ itself, "bearing the date of the day, and month, and year of its renewal" (o). If, moreover, a concurrent (p) writ be issued, it may likewise be renewed in the same way. By the express words of the Act, "a writ of summons so renewed shall remain in force and renewal

Duration
of writ.

(k) See as to the writ of capias on mesne process, Copeland v. Child, 1 B. C. Ca. 176; Bagl. Pr. 340 et seq., where the reader will find a brief statement of the practice under 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110; Gadsden v. M'Lean, 9 C. B. 283; Cunliffe v. Maltass, 7 C. B. 695. (l) 6 C. B. 521.

(m) See Anon., 1 H. & C. 664.

(n) As to which see Broom's Prac., vol. 1, p. 659.

(o) Sect. 11. See Nazer v. Wade, 1 B. & S. 728; Black v. Green, 15 C. B. 262.

(p) See sect. 9.

and be available to prevent the operation of any Statute of Limitations, and for all other purposes, from the date of the issuing of the original writ." Under s. 13, the renewed writ will, on its production, be evidence of the "commencement of the action as of the first date of such renewed writ."

Indorsement of service.

If service of the writ be effected, it is requisite that the date of service be specified in an indorsement on the writ within three days after such service (q).

Appearance.

The writ of summons is issued to cause the defendant to appear to the action, in order that the plaintiff may proceed therewith; and so essential to the prosecution of the suit was 'appearance' formerly deemed, that it was necessary for the plaintiff, in default of the defendant appearing, and upon affidavit of personal service of the writ, to enter an appearance for him before proceeding in the action. But now, if the defendant omit to appear within the eight days specified in the writ of summons, the plaintiff may, on filing an affidavit of personal service of the writ, proceed as if the defendant had appeared. This may be done under the 28th section of the first Procedure Act, which also makes apparent the disadvantage entailed on a plaintiff (r) who has neglected to indorse his writ specially, when under the 25th section he might have done so, inasmuch as it provides that the plaintiff shall not in such case be entitled to more costs than if he had made such special indorsement and signed judgment upon non-appearance.

How to be entered.

The practical mode of entering an appearance to the action is prescribed by the 30th and 31st sections of the statute. It is by delivery of a memorandum in a specified form to the proper officer of the Court. By the 29th section, an appearance may now be entered at any time before judgment, though a defendant appearing after the time appointed by the writ will not be entitled to any further time for pleading

(q) Sect. 15; Wakeley v. Teesdale,
2 L. M. & P. 85.

(r) Rouberry v. Morgan, 9 Exch.
730.

or taking any other necessary proceeding in the suit, than if he had appeared within the appointed time.

The result of what has been thus far said is, that, where a defendant is resident within the jurisdiction of the Court, a plaintiff may, in most cases, proceed to judgment against him; because, if the writ is personally served, he may then, on filing an affidavit of such service, sign judgment by default, or in some cases final judgment, under the 27th and 28th sections of the Act. If the defendant cannot be personally served, the plaintiff may then proceed in the manner pointed out by the 17th section (s). And cases cannot very often occur in practice where a serious difficulty will be experienced by a plaintiff, who acts bonâ fide, in providing an affidavit conformable to the requirements of that section.

Where the defendant is out of the jurisdiction of the Court, it is clear that the provisions of the Act above adverted to would not apply. Before the C. L. Proc. Act, 1852, the only mode of proceeding in this case (and that a very imperfect one) was by distringas, with a view to outlawry, which, as stated by the Common Law Commissioners in their First Report (t), was "in theory a judgment pronounced for contumacy in neglecting to appear in one of the superior Courts to be amenable to proceedings there instituted." It is now abolished by the 24th section of the above-named Act, and in lieu of it a writ may be issued and made available as a means for obtaining final judgment against a defendant, whether he be a British subject or foreigner, resident (u) out of the jurisdiction.

Service of writ where defendant is out of jurisdiction.

Where the defendant is a British subject (x) residing out

Writ where defendant is

(s) See Barringer v. Handley, 12 C. B. 721; ante, p. 154.

(t) P. 5.

(u) On a defendant casually abroad, service of the ordinary writ of summons cannot properly be effected; see Minet v. Round, 1 L. M. & P. 654; nor will such writ (unless amended) be available against a defendant resident abroad; see Heaketh v. Fleming, 24 L. J., Q. B., 255.

(x) See Ingate v. La Commissione del Lloyd-Austriaco, Prima Sezione, 4 C. B., N. S., 704.

a British subject resident out of jurisdiction.

How served.

of the jurisdiction, the plaintiff may now, under sect. 18, issue a writ in the form contained in the Schedule (A) to the Act, the distinguishing feature of which is, that the time allowed therein for appearance by defendant, instead of being eight days as in ordinary cases, is to be regulated by the distance from England of the place where the defendant is residing. This writ must be either personally served upon the defendant, or it must be shown by affidavit that reasonable efforts were made to effect personal service of it upon him (y), that it came to his knowledge, and that he either wilfully neglects to appear to it, or is living out of the jurisdiction in order to defeat and delay his creditors. Besides this, the affidavit must show that the cause of action (z) arose within the jurisdiction (a) of the Court issuing the writ, or is in respect of the breach of a contract made within the jurisdiction. Upon the Court or Judge being satisfied with such affidavit, and if the time allowed for appearance be thought reasonable (b), the plaintiff will obtain leave to proceed in the action, subject to such conditions as may seem fit (c). But he will nevertheless be afterwards required, prior to obtaining judgment, to prove the amount of his claim either before a jury upon a writ of inquiry, or before one of the Masters of the Court in which the action is brought (d).

Writ where defendant is a foreigner resident out of jurisdiction.

Where the defendant is a foreigner and resident out of the jurisdiction, a particular form of writ of summons has been provided by the C. L. Proc. Act, 1852; but in this case, in

(y) Davies v. Westmacott, 7 C. B., N. S., 829.

(z) Ante, p. 72; and Book I., Chap. 3; Binet v. Picot, 4 H. & N. 395; see Peacock v. Bell, 1 Wms. Saund. 74; Com. Dig. Courts, P. (9); In re Fuller, 2 E. & B. 575; Buckley v. Hann, 5 Exch. 43; Hernaman v. Smith, 10 Exch. 659; Walsh v. Ionides, 1 E. & B.

383; Thom v. Chinnoek, 1 Scott, N. B., 141.

(a) Forbes v. Smith, 10 Exch. 717.

(b) Hutton v. Whitehouse, 1 H. & N. 32.

(c) Bates v. Bates, 9 C. B., N. S., 561.

(d) C. L. Proc. Act, 1852, ss. 18 & 94.

lieu of serving a copy of the writ, a notice of it is to be served upon the defendant; and "such service shall," under the 19th section, "be of the same force and effect as the service of the writ of summons in any action against a British subject resident abroad;" and upon production of an affidavit similar to that already described, the like proceedings may be taken thereupon with a view to judgment as in the case just specified.

Service
notice of writ.

Under the 22nd section of the Act, a writ for service within the jurisdiction may be issued and marked as "concurrent" with one for service out of the jurisdiction, and vice versa. By the preceding section a substitution of one of these forms of writ for another by mistake or inadvertence may be amended by a Judge, without costs; and the 20th section contains provisions with respect to amending the writ of summons in some other cases.

Amendment
of writ.

3. Proceedings from Appearance to Notice of Trial.

The Pleadings in the Action.

So soon as the defendant has appeared, the pleadings in the action (e) will commence, unless the litigants, being

(e) There are seven species of trial enumerated and described by Blackstone as existing in his time (3 Com., p. 330), viz., 1, by record; 2, by inspection or examination; 3, by certificate; 4, by witnesses; 5, by wager of battle; 6, by wager of law; 7, by jury. The wager of battle was abolished by 59 Geo. 3, c. 46, and the wager of law (see King v. Williams, 2 B. & C. 538) by 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42. The trial by inspection, though not abolished by statute, never occurs in practice. The trial by record is applicable where no trial record has been pleaded; and the issue thereon is decided in favour of the plaintiff by production of the record in question before the Court on a certain day. Trial by certificate was rarely resorted to. It is said to have been "allowed in such cases where the evidence of the person certifying is the only proper criterion of the point in dispute" (3 Bla. Com. p. 333), as where the ordinary certified on an issue raised by a plea of ne unques accouple en loyal matrimony in an action of dower. When the trial by witnesses (per testes) was permitted (3 Bla. Com. p. 336), the issue of fact was left to the determination of the judge, without the intervention of a jury.

agreed as to the questions of fact or law to be decided consent to proceed to trial forthwith, without formal pleadings, upon a statement embodying the matters at issue between them. Under these circumstances a Judge may make an order that the question shall be so tried (f).

Object of pleading.

The more usual method, however, of raising questions in dispute for decision in the superior Courts, is by formal written pleadings made in alternate series by the plaintiff and defendant of their respective grounds of action and defence (g). The object of pleading is to ascertain by a process of elimination the matters really in controversy between the parties, thus avoiding all discussion and inquiry as to those facts and matters which are not disputed. The effect of this process is to simplify the subject-matter for the decision of the Judge or jury (whose provinces are distinct), and to save the parties unnecessary trouble and expense, which might otherwise be incurred in collecting evidence in support of facts which at the trial were found to be uncontested, in rebutting claims which were not advanced, or in meeting allegations which had not been made.

Mode of
pleading ;

Now to accomplish the object just indicated, the plaintiff is in the first place called upon to state the facts which constitute his cause of action. The defendant is then required to answer the claim put forth, and in so doing he must at his option adopt one of the following courses : either he must plead some matter in delay or abatement of the suit, or he must deny the statement of the plaintiff ; or confessing it, must avoid the legal consequences flowing from it by asserting some fresh fact ; or else, admitting the facts alleged, he must deny the legal effect ascribed to them by the plaintiff (h). Should the defendant rely upon fresh facts adduced by him, —by confession and avoidance ;

—by demurrer.

(f) C. L. Proc. Act, 1852, ss. 42-48 ; Doe d. Duntze v. Duntze, 6 C. B., 100. See C. L. Proc. Act, 1854, ss. 3-17.

(g) C. L. Com., 1st Rep., p. 17.

(h) As to pleading and demurring simultaneously, see post, p. 162.

it will then devolve upon the plaintiff to neutralise the effect of the plea either by denying it, or by confessing and avoiding it, or by calling in question its operation in point of law. And in this manner the parties will alternately proceed till it is ascertained that there is some fact asserted by the one side and denied by the other, or that there is some proposition of law affirmed by the one party from which his adversary dissents (i). In either of these cases the particular series of pleadings which so terminates is said to be brought to issue (k), i. e. to be ripe for decision either by a jury or the Court.

It does indeed sometimes happen that after verdict the pleading is found on examination to have miscarried, and failed to effect its proper object—of raising a material question between the parties. In such a case the Court will, according to circumstances, either award a repleader (l) with a view to curing the particular defect, or give such judgment as upon the facts disclosed by the pleadings may appear proper, or direct a trial de novo (l).

Repleader

In illustration of our system of pleading let us suppose (m) that the plaintiff complains in his declaration of an assault by the defendant. If the defendant in his plea denies the assault, an issue in fact is at once raised—if, admitting the fact of the assault, he pleads that he committed it in self-defence, here, nothing being as yet denied, no issue is raised between the parties, but fresh matter being alleged, the plaintiff will be necessitated to reply to it. If in so doing he denies the truth of the plea, the parties will be at issue; but, instead of taking this course, he may admit the plea to be true, and say that he assaulted the defendant to prevent his

(i) C. L. Com., 1st Rep., p. 11.

(k) "Issue, exitus, a single, certain, and material point issuing out of the allegations or pleas of the plaintiff and defendant:" Co. Litt. 126. a.

(l) Doogood v. Rose, 9 C. B. 132; Crossfield v. Morrison, 7 C. B. 286. See R. G. Fl. reg. 24.

(m) See C. L. Com., 1st Rep., pp. 11-12.

own goods and chattels from being taken away by him ; and to this the defendant might rejoin by a denial, or by saying that the goods were on his (defendant's) land and that he was in the course of removing them,—to which the plaintiff might answer, that he had the leave and license of the defendant for putting them on his land. We have now reached, in pursuing the alternations of the pleading, that stage, rather unusual in practice, denominated the rebutter (n), and it will be evident that when the various matters put forward by way of defence or explanation on each side respectively are exhausted, either one party will at length be compelled to deny the preceding statement of the other, and so an issue will be raised ; or else one of the parties will be constrained, admitting the truth of such antecedent statement, to deny its legal sufficiency as an answer, and in this case also the parties will be brought to issue.

In point of fact, it frequently, indeed usually, happens, that, instead of only one series or succession of pleadings between litigating parties arising out of a particular transaction, there are several such series ; and it is also true, that issues as well of fact as of law may now (o) be educed from one particular count or from one material averment in the declaration (p) ; but still the example just given will suffice to show that there must in every case be eventually certain definite questions evolved between the parties, upon the decision and settlement whereof will depend the success or failure of the plaintiff (q).

(n) The different steps in pleading after declaration are respectively designated the plea, replication, rejoinder, surrejoinder, rebutter, surrebutter, beyond which, in modern times at least, the pleadings are hardly known to extend. There is an instance of pleading to surrejoinder in Taplin v. Florence, 10 C. B. 744 ; and to rebutter in Sheehy

v. Professional Life Ass. Co., 13 C. B. 787.

(o) C. L. Proc. Act, 1852, s. 80.

(p) Post, p. 170.

(q) An examination of the Year Books is recommended to any one inclined to investigate the comparative advantages of oral and written pleading. The earliest reports of oral plead-

"Special pleading considered in its principle," it has been observed, "is a valuable forensic invention, peculiar to the common law of England, by effect of which the precise point in controversy between the parties is developed and presented in a shape fit for decision" (r). If that point is found to consist of matter of fact, the parties are thus apprised of the exact nature of the question to be decided by the jury, and are enabled to prepare their proofs with proportionate precision. If, on the other hand, it turns out to be matter of law, they have the means of immediately obtaining the decision of the cause, without the expense and trouble of a trial, by demurrer (s), that is, by referring the legal question so evolved to the determination of the Judge.

To carry out the legitimate object of pleading (a science which is governed as well by positive rules as by a known course of precedents (t)), not only must it be conducted with the special intent to raise material issues, but each stage of ings are contained in the first volume of the Year Books, and date from the reign of Edward II. (see Steph. Pl., 5th ed., 23-25; 2 Reeves, Hist. Eng. L., 2nd ed., pp. 344-349).

In the First Report of the Com. Law Commissioners, pp. 19, 20, the mischievous technicalities and useless subtleties, which deformed the science of pleading at different times, are ingeniously referred to its oral origin. Under this system, when trifling objections were offered, they were either overruled at once or cured by an immediate amendment. When, however, similar objections were allowed to written pleadings, and similar means of easy amendment were not permitted, the abuses of the system became very grievous, and the legislature has interfered, more or less effectually, by divers statutes (commencing with the 32 Hen. 8, and ending with the C. L. Proc. Act, 1860), with a view to remedy the evils in question, which pressed heavily on suitors. See 32 Hen. 8, c. 30; 18 Eliz. c. 14; 21 Jac. 1, c. 13; 16 & 17 Car. 2, c. 8; 4 & 5 Anne, c. 16; 5 Geo. 1, c. 30; 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42; and the C. L. Proc. Acts.

(r) C. L. Com., 1st Rep., p. 12. See the remarks of Lord Tenterden, C. J., upon the advantages of special pleading; Selby v. Bardons, 3 B. & Ad. 16. In Robinson v. Raley, 1 Burr. 320, Lord Mansfield, C. J., observes that the substantial rules of pleading "are founded in strong sense, and in the soundest and closest logic, and so appear when well understood and explained: though, by being misunderstood and misapplied, they are often made use of as instruments of chicanery." See also Smith, de Republica Anglorum, Lib. II. c. 16.

(s) Post, p. 170.

(t) Per Maule, J., Woolf v. City Boat Co., 7 C. B. 104.

the legal controversy should be characterised by three qualities, viz., certainty, precision, and brevity (u).

Declaration. The first step in the pleadings is the declaration (x).

Venue, The declaration (as well as every other pleading), must be intitled of the proper Court and of the day when it was pleaded (y). It must also contain the statement of a venue. Formerly, every material fact in the declaration had to be "laid with a venue," i. e. was alleged to have happened in a certain place (z), but now the venue is confined to the margin of the declaration (a), local description, however, not being precluded in the body thereof when requisite. The substantial use of a venue is to inform the defendant where the cause is proposed to be tried, and to certify to the sheriff whence the jury is to be summoned to try the cause.

—local or transitory

The venue is either local or transitory. It is local when the cause of action stated in the declaration could by no possibility have had reference to any other but a particular locality, as in trespass, qu. cl. fr., or ejectment (b); but at the present day, in the great majority of cases,—wherever indeed the idea of locality does not necessarily attach,—the venue in the action is altogether transitory, may be laid by the plaintiff in any county, and, when so laid, can only be (u) See per Williams, J., Reindel v. Schell, 4 C. B., N. S., 116.

(x) If the plaintiff do not declare within one year after the writ of summons is returnable, he will be deemed out of court. C. L. Proc. Act, 1852, s. 58; (Eadon v. Roberts, 9 Exch. 227; Chaplin v. Showler, 6 D. & L. 227; Ross v. Green, 10 Exch. 891.) This section does not apply to ejectment; Scope v. Paddison, 6 H. & N. 641. If the plaintiff do not declare within one term next after the appearance is entered, judgment of nonpros may be signed against him; a notice requiring him to declare having been first given him. C. L. Proc. Act, 1852, R. Pr. r. 7; Foster v. Pryme, 8 M. & W. 664.

(y) C. L. Proc. Act, 1852, s. 54.

(z) Co. Litt. 125. a.; Reg. v. Burdett, 4 B. & Ald. 175.

(a) R. G. Pl., r. 4. See Simmons v. Lillystone, 8 Exch. 431; Hutchins v. Hollingsworth, 7 Moo. P. C. C. 228; Brownlow v. Tomlinson, 1 M. & Gr. 484. As to venue in the action of ejectment, see C. L. Proc. Act, 1852, s. 182. As to venue generally, see 3 Bla. Com. p. 294; Bac. Abr. "Vine or Venue;" Toml. L. Dict. "Venue."

(b) See C. L. Proc. Act, 1852

changed by consent of the parties, or by order of the Court or of a Judge (c).

A form for the commencement and conclusion respectively of the declaration is given in the C. L. Proc. Act, 1852 (d), and these forms, or others "to the like effect," must be observed.

Commencement and conclusion of declaration.

In the body of the declaration, the plaintiff must show a state of facts which will, if unanswered, entitle him to judgment; i. e., he should put forward his complaint, expressed in language neither insensible nor ambiguous (e), and in such a shape that he will, in point of law and in the absence of any good and sufficient defence, have a right to some redress (f). When a written instrument is sued on, it may be set forth in the declaration, according to its legal effect, and need not necessarily be so totidem verbis (g). The declaration concludes with a claim for damages, which should be to an amount sufficient to cover the whole of the plaintiff's demand (h).

Body of declaration.

As well in framing the declaration, as in the other pleadings in an action, certain rules must be observed and certain defects must be shunned. Of these, the more important are briefly noticed in the ensuing pages.

Rules of pleading.

(c) R. G. Pl., reg. 18; Daric v. Hopwood, 7 C. B., N. S., 835; Jackson v. Kidd, 8 C. B., N. S., 354; per Byles, J., Id. 355; Schuster v. Wheelwright, Id. 383; Greenhow v. Parker, 6 H. & N. 882.

(d) Sects. 59 & 60.

(e) Ambiguum placitum interpretari debet contra proferentem; see Co. Litt. 308. b.

As to an ambiguity in pleading being cured by pleading over, see Boydell v. Harkness, 3 C. B. 168; per Bayley, J., Hobson v. Middleton, 6 B. & C. 302; Moffatt v. Dickson, 13 C. B. 543; Emmens v. Elderton, 4 H. L. Ca. 624;

S. C., 13 C. B. 495.

(f) Wood v. Curling, 15 M. & W. 626; S. C., 16 M. & W. 628; Coe v. Platt, 6 R. & C. 752; S. C., 7 R. & C. 460, 923; Brown v. Mallett, 5 C. B. 599.

(g) See Lloyd v. Oliver, 18 Q. B. 471. In pleading, except in deducing title, a deed may, at the option of the party pleading it, be set out, either in its terms, leaving the Court to construe it, or according to its legal effect: Lord Newborough v. Schröder, 7 C. B. 342.

(h) Cheveley v. Morris, 2 W. Bla. 1300; Pickwood v. Wright, 1 H. Bla. 643.

Duplicity

Repugnance.

Pleadings must neither be double nor repugnant. “Duplicity” in a declaration occurs when any count thereof alleges several distinct causes of action, in support of the same demand, by any one of which allegations that demand is sustainable (i); and “repugnancy” is said to appear when the different allegations contained in any one count are inconsistent with each other. A plaintiff, under certain circumstances, however, may escape from the difficulty of electing between different modes of presenting his case, by inserting in his declaration several counts exhibiting his cause of action under different forms. But, as a general rule, several counts on the same cause of action are not allowed (j). And any count in violation of this rule may, on application of the defendant, be struck out, unless the plaintiff is prepared to prove to the satisfaction of the Court or Judge that the particular count objected to is proper for determining the real question in controversy on its merits (k), otherwise he must be prepared at the trial to establish “a distinct cause of action” in respect of it (l), and if he fail to do so, he will have to pay all the costs which the insertion of the superfluous count may have occasioned.

Different causes of action, of whatever kind—excepting those which give rise to replevin and ejectment—provided they be by and against the same parties and in the same right, may be joined in the same suit—power being reserved to the Court or Judge to order separate trials when such joinder appears inexpedient (m).

(i) Per Maule, J., Shepherd v. Shepherd, 3 D. & L. 202; Esdaile v. Trustwell, 1 Exch. 373. As to duplicity in pleading, see Webster v. Watts, 11 Q. B. 311; Fearn v. Cochrane, 4 C. B. 274; Harrison v. Cotgreave, Id. 562; Smith v. Lovell, 10 C. B. 6.

(j) That is to say,—where the cause of action appearing in each of several counts, when examined with the eyes of a pleader, is one and the same. See per Maule, J., Ramsden v. Gray, 7 C. B. 967-8; James v. Bourne, 4 Bing. N. C. 420; Hernod v. Wilkin, 11 Q. B. 1.

In practice, a special count is often joined with a common count, though founded on the same transaction.

(k) R. G. Pl., r. 2.

(l) Id. r. 3.

(m) C. L. Proc. Act, 1852, s. 41.

In Sched. (B) to the C. L. Proc. Act, 1852, are contained forms of declarations adapted to facts of ordinary occurrence. Whilst, however, it is enacted that these statutory precedents shall be sufficient, it is also provided, that "the like forms may be used with such modifications as may be necessary to meet the facts of the case," and that nothing in the Act contained "shall render it erroneous or irregular to depart from the letter of such forms so long as the substance is expressed without prolixity" (n). Undoubtedly, therefore, some latitude is in every case to be allowed in framing the declaration (o); and this further appears from sect. 50, which enacts, that where issue is joined on demurrer "the Court shall proceed and give judgment according as the very right of the cause and matter in law shall appear unto them, without regarding any imperfection, omission, defect in or lack of form; and no judgment shall be arrested, stayed, or reversed for any such imperfection, omission, defect in or lack of form." This provision, however, will not justify the pleader in indulging in inaccurate or verbose language. He must still take heed that he neither plead that which is mere matter of evidence (p), nor that of which the Court takes notice ex officio, nor that which would come more properly from the other side (q); nor should he allege circumstances which the law presumes, or which are necessarily implied; nor affect an excessive particularity, on the one hand, which is not essential to his case, nor allow, on the other, a statement to be made so vague and general in its terms as to Prolixity.

Verbosity.

Pleading evidence.

Particularity.

Vagueness.

(n) Id. s. 91.

(o) See Wilkinson v. Sharland, 10 Exch. 724; Fagg v. Nudd, 3 E. & B. 650; Place v. Potts, 8 Exch. 709.

(p) Hancock v. Noyes, 9 Exch. 388.

(q) Wheeler v. Bavidge, 9 Exch. 668.

It is sometimes laid down as a rule, that "pleadings should be true;" if understood in the sense that no one in pleading should lend himself to concoct false or sham pleas, the rule is too obvious to need statement. It certainly never referred to the conventional fictions of law. See Smith v. Backwell, 4 Bing. 514; Nutt v. Rusk, 4 Exch. 490.

give to his adversary information which is not sufficiently specific (r).

Departure.

Another fault in pleading is committed when a "departure" occurs. This is the term used when either party to the action, having taken up one ground of complaint in the declaration, or of defence in the plea, at a subsequent stage of the pleading deserts it in favour of another ground inconsistent therewith (s). Again "argumentativeness" will not be sanctioned in Courts of law, for it is evidently essential, with a view to the conclusive determination of disputes, that both parties should "advance their positions of fact in an absolute form, and not leave them to be collected by inference and argument only" (t). Against undue laxity, moreover, a section (u) of the C. L. Proc. Act, 1852, has been specifically levelled, enacting, that if any pleading be so framed, as to prejudice, embarrass, or delay the fair trial of the action, the opposite party may apply to the Court or Judge to strike out or amend such pleading (x).

Argumentativeness.

It has been above observed (y), that one important attribute of pleading is "certainty." To this term in former times was attached a technical signification, and many statements which are now rendered unnecessary (z)—such as of (r) Grizewood v. Blanc, 11 C. B. 526; Wilson v. Braddgill, 9 Exch. 718.

(s) As illustrating the nature of a "departure," see Smith v. Marsack, 6 C. B. 486; Elliot v. Von Glehn, 13 Q. B. 632; Morris v. Walker, 15 Q. B. 589; Callow v. Jenkinson, 6 Exch. 666; Brine v. Great Western R. Co., 2 B. & S. 402; Bartlett v. Wells, 1 B. & S. 836.

(t) Steph. Pl., 5th ed., p. 422; Sharland v. Leifchild, 4 C. B. 529; Smith v. Lovell, 10 C. B. 6, (which case presents several examples of bad pleading); Weedon v. Woodbridge, 13

Q. B. 462; Reade v. Lamb, 6 Exch. 130; Stewart v. Collins, 10 C. B. 634; Leaf v. Tuton, 10 M. & W. 393.

As to construing pleadings, see Moore v. Forster, 5 C. B. 220.

(u) Sect. 52.

(x) Measiter v. Rose, 13 C. B. 162; Forsyth v. Bristowe, 8 Exch. 347; Trent v. Hunt, 9 Exch. 21. See Nutt v. Rush, 4 Exch. 490; Levy v. Railton, 14 Q. B. 418; Cutts v. Surridge, 9 Q. B. 1015; Smith v. Backwell, 4 Bing. 512.

(y) Ante, p. 160.

(z) C. L. Proc. Act, 1852, s. 49.

time, quantity, quality, value, &c., even when they had not to be proved, being immaterial to the issue—were then required to be made in the pleadings (a), with a view to producing “certainty” therein. At the present day, this useless kind of particularity is abolished; but provision is made for securing to the defendant sufficient information as to the subject-matter of the complaint laid against him, when he really may require it, by enforcing upon the plaintiff the delivery of “particulars of demand” in aid, as it were, of his declaration (b). In the indebitatus counts, for example, recently framed by the legislature, the statements of the plaintiff’s claim are very general (c); but, practically, the object of certainty is attained whenever common counts, or counts founded on causes of action of a like nature are used, by the plaintiff being called on—except when the writ has been specially indorsed—to “deliver or file full particulars of his demand. In default thereof, a Judge may order such particulars to be supplied” (d).

Particulars of demand.

Two additional remarks having reference to the declaration in common with the subsequent steps in pleading may be offered:—1. Profert and oyer are no longer necessary in pleadings (e); but when any document is referred to by the Profert and oyer.

(a) Playter’s case, 5 Rep. 34 b; C. L. Com., 1st Rep., pp. 16, 18, 22, 23; Harris v. Phillips, 10 C. B. 650.

(b) See Law v. Thompson, 4 D. & L. 54, 57; Berkley v. De Vere, Id. 97; Stannard v. Ullithorne, 3 Bing. N. C. 326; per Tindal, C. J., Bulnois v. Mackenzie, 4 Bing. N. C. 132.

(c) C. L. Proc. Act, 1852, Sched. (B), No. 1-14; Bracegirdle v. Hinks, 9 Exch. 361. “Though formerly Courts were strict, yet now they draw nearer to common sense. There was a time when assumpsit pro bonis et mercimoniis generally, would have been wondered at; and Holt used to say, he was a bold man that first ventured on them :” Hayes v. Warren, 2 Str. 933.

(d) R. G. Pr., rr. 19—21; Fussell v. Gordon, 13 C. B. 847; Harris v. Montgomery, 11 C. B. 393.

These rules as to particulars of demand apply to particulars of set-off, when the latter contain “claims of a similar nature as those in respect of which a plaintiff is required to deliver or file particulars :” R. G. Pr., r. 19.

(e) C. L. Proc. Act, 1852, s. 55. As to the former practice in regard to profert and oyer, see C. L. Com., 1st Rep., p. 25.

verments
f condi-ons preceent.

one party in his pleading, it may be set out, either wholly or in part, by his opponent, and is to "be deemed and taken to be part of the pleading in which it is set out" (f). 2. When the rights of a party pleading depend upon the performance of conditions precedent, performance of such conditions may be averred generally (g); and "the opposite party shall not deny such averment generally, but shall specify in his pleading the condition or conditions precedent, the performance of which he intends to contest" (g).

he defence

There are several different modes in which a defendant may answer the plaintiff's claim. He may set up a defence, either, 1, by way of demurrer (h) to the declaration; or, 2, by pleading in abatement (i); or, 3, by pleading in bar of the action; or, 4, he may both plead and demur (k) to the declaration; or, 5, he may pay money into Court and plead such payment; or, 6, he may set up certain equitable defences.

demurrer

A defendant, who wishes to demur to his adversary's declaration, must, according to the form of demurrer given by the 89th section of the C. L. Proc. Act, 1852, allege that it is "bad in substance" (l); and the same section further enacts, that in the margin of the demurrer "some substantial matter of law intended to be argued shall be stated; and, if any demurrer shall be delivered without such (f) Sect. 56; Sim v. Edmonds, 15 C. B. 240.

(g) Sect. 57. See C. L. Com., 1st Rep., p. 25; Bamberger v. Commercial Credit, &c., Society, 15 C. B. 676; Rust v. Nottidge, 1 E. & B. 99; Phelps v. Prothero, 16 C. B. 370.

(h) Objections to pleadings by way of special demurrer are taken away by the C. L. Proc. Act, 1852, s. 51.

(i) As to a plea to the jurisdiction, see Munden v. Duke of Brunswick, 10 Q. B. 656; Spooner v. Juddow, 6 Moore P. C. C. 257.

(l) C. L. Proc. Act, 1852, s. 80.

It is altogether within the discretion of the Court or a Judge to allow of both a plea and a demurrer under this section: Thompson v. Knowles, 24 L. J., Ex., 43. See Lumley v. Gye, 22 L. J., Ex., 9; Sheehy v. Professional Life Ass. Co., 13 C. B. 801; Price v. Hewett, 8 Exch. 146; Lawton v. Elmore, 27 L. J., Ex., 141.

(l) The same form, mutatis mutandis, is applicable at any stage of the pleadings.

statement, or with a frivolous statement, it may be set aside by the Court or a Judge, and leave may be given to sign judgment as for want of a plea" (m). With respect to the time within which a defendant may thus demur or plead in bar, it is enacted, that when he is within the jurisdiction of the Court where the action is brought, the time allotted for so doing, unless extended by the Court or a Judge, shall be eight days; and a notice requiring the defendant to plead in eight days, otherwise judgment may, whether the declaration be delivered or filed, be indorsed upon the declaration, or delivered separately (n). But, if the defendant plead in abatement, he must do so within four days.

Time for pleading.

Plea in abatement;

—of nonjoinder.

A plea in abatement does not propose to answer the cause of action, but "shows ground for abating or quashing the original writ in a real or mixed action, or the declaration in a personal action, and makes prayer to that effect" (o). Such pleas have been discouraged in modern times (p), as exhibiting a tendency on the part of the defendant to evade, by technical objections, the trial of the matter alleged against him. The most common plea of this kind is for nonjoinder of those who ought to have been parties to the suit. Carrying out the principle, that a plea in abatement should give the plaintiff a better writ of declaration, it has been enacted, that when nonjoinder of any person as co-defendant is so pleaded, the defendant must allege in his plea that such person is resident within the jurisdiction of the Court, and verify his residence with convenient certainty by affidavit (q). The pro-

(m) As to the practice relating to demurrers, see R. Pr. 1853, rr. 14—17.

(n) C. L. Proc. Act, 1852, s. 63; R. Pr. rr. 9, 174—176.

As to the time for pleading after amendment, see C. L. Proc. Act, 1852, s. 90.

(o) Steph. Pl., 5th ed., pp. 52—56;

Chit. Pl., 7th ed., Vol. I., pp. 462 et seq.; Id., Vol. III., pp. 9 et seq.

(p) Broadbent v. Ledward, 11 Ad. & E. 209. A plea in abatement must be verified by affidavit: 4 Anne, c. 16, s. 11.

(q) 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, s. 8; Joll v. Curzon, 4 C. B. 249.

visions, moreover, of the C. L. Proc. Act, 1852 (r), by which greater facility than was previously permitted is given for amendments, both before and at the trial, in respect of non-joinder of plaintiffs in an action, have rendered the use of this plea infrequent.

Certainty, brevity, and precision, which have been before alluded to as qualities requisite in the declaration, are no less essential in all the subsequent pleadings (s). But there are also divers special rules affecting pleas which should here be mentioned.

Pleas in bar.

Pleas in bar (t) are divided into pleas by way of traverse—and by way of confession and avoidance.

Traverse.

A plea which answers the declaration by way of traverse (u), may either contradict specifically, in terms, some one or more essential or material allegation therein—which is called the ‘common traverse’—or it may deny generally its entire allegations, or the principal fact or facts on which it is founded (x).

(r) Sects. 34—40, 222. See R. G. Pr., r. 6. If nonjoinder of plaintiffs be pleaded, the writ and other proceedings in the action may be amended without order. Craufurd v. Cocks, 6 Exch. 287; Cowburn v. Wearing, 9 Exch. 207.

As to amendment at the trial, post, p. 199.

(s) As to certainty in pleas, see Janson v. Stuart, 2 Smith L. C., 5th ed., p. 55.

(t) As to pleas in estoppel, which are of comparatively rare occurrence, see Steph. Pl., 5th ed., pp. 227, 228, 250, 251.

(u) Special traverses are now abolished (see C. L. Proc. Act, 1852, s. 65), or at all events rendered unnecessary.

(x) See C. L. Proc. Act, 1852, ss. 76-79. By the 76th section, “a defendant may either traverse generally such of the facts contained in the declaration as might have been denied by one plea, or may select and traverse separately any material allegation in the declaration, although it might have been included in a general traverse:” see Cooling v. Great Northern R. C., 15 Q. B. 486. The provision in the latter part of the above section is an innovation on the former rules of pleading: see Suherland v. Pratt, 11 M. & W. 312, 313.

By the 79th section of the above Act, it is provided, that “either party may plead in answer to the plea or subsequent pleading of his adversary, that he joins issue thereon,” according to a certain form there given; and “such form of joinder of issue shall be deemed to be a denial of the substance of the plea or other subsequent pleading, and an issue thereon.” As to the operation of this form of joining issue in a replication, see Glover v. Dixon, 9 Exch. 158.

In this latter case the form of traverse is called the 'general issue' (y). General issue.

At different periods in the history of pleading, the defences (z) permitted to be set up under the general issue have materially varied. Before the Rules of Hil. T., 4 Will. 4, the general issue was held to comprehend, in actions where it could be pleaded, many grounds of defence which, since those rules, have been withdrawn from its operation. The pleading Rules of Hil. T. 1853, conjointly with the enactments of the first C. L. Proc. Act (a), determine what defences can now be properly raised under the general issue and what must be specially pleaded—a point proper to be noticed, inasmuch as a plea amounting to the general issue is clearly objectionable, as violating the rule imposing brevity on the pleader; and such a plea might give rise to an application to a Judge to have it amended (b).

With regard to the general issue of non assumpsit (c), Non assumpsit. the sixth pleading rule directs, that, "in all actions on simple contract, except as hereinafter excepted, the plea of non assumpsit, or a plea traversing the contract or agreement alleged in the declaration, shall operate only as a denial in fact of the express contract, promise, or agreement alleged, or of the matters of fact from which the con-

(y) With respect to traversing matters of "inducement," it has been said, "whatever is material inducement, if not traversed, is admitted. Nothing is admitted by the plea of not guilty, except what is material to raise the duty, or create the obligation, for the breach of which the action is brought:" Judgm., Grew v. Hill, 3 Exch. 801; post, p. 174.

As to inducements generally, see Steph. Pl., 5th ed., pp. 212, 277; Smith v. Trowdale, 3 E. & B. 83.

(z) 1 Chitt. Pl., 7th ed., pp. 489 et seq.

(a) R. G. Pl., rr. 5-8, 10-12, 15-17, 19-21; C. L. Proc. Act, 1852, s. 76.

(b) See Owen v. Challis, 6 C. B. 115; Solly v. Neish, 2 Cr. M. & R. 355; Morrison v. Chadwick, 7 C. B. 266; Dawson v. Collis, 10 C. B. 523; Sutherland v. Pratt, 11 M. & W. 312, 313; Newton v. Cubitt, 5 C. B., N. S., 627.

As to the scope of the Rules of Hil. T., 4 Will. 4, see per Maucl, J., Varney v. Hickman, 5 C. B. 282.

(c) See the form of this plea, C. L. Proc. Act, 1852, Sched. (B), No. 37.

tract, promise, or agreement alleged may be implied by law" (d).

Nunquam indebitatus.

The plea of non assumpsit, however, is inadmissible where that of nunquam indebitatus is applicable (e). This latter plea, which is the general issue in the action of debt, operates "as a denial of those matters of fact from which the liability of the defendant arises; ex. gr., in actions for goods bargained and sold, or sold and delivered, the plea will operate as a denial of the bargain and sale, or sale and delivery, in point of fact" (f). In all actions for "money had and received," it will operate as a denial both of the receipt of money and the existence of those facts which make such receipt by the defendant a receipt to the use of the plaintiff (g). The general issue is specially prohibited in actions upon bills of exchange and promissory notes. In such actions a plea in denial must traverse some matter of fact, as the drawing, making, indorsing, accepting, or presenting of the bill or note (h).

General issue not allowed in action on bill or note.

Non est factum

The plea of non est factum (i), which occurs in an action on a bond or other specialty, will operate as a denial of the execution of the specialty declared on "in point of fact only" (k). And non detinet, which is the general issue in detinue (l), puts in issue the detention of the goods only in respect of which the plaintiff sues, but not his property therein (m).

Non deti-net.

Not guilty.

In actions for torts, the plea of not guilty (n) will "operate as a denial only of the breach of duty or wrongful act alleged to have been committed by the defendant, and not of the

(d) Examples of the operation of non assumpsit are annexed to reg. 6.

(e) See the form of this plea, C. L. Proc. Act, 1852, Sched. (B), No. 36.

(f) Martin v. Andrews, 7 E. & B. 1.

(g) R. G. Pl. reg. 6.

(h) R. G. Pl. reg. 7.

(i) See the form of this plea, C. L. Proc. Act, 1852, Sched. (B), No. 38.

(k) R. G. Pl. reg. 10. Fazakerly v. M'Knight, 6 E. & B. 795.

(l) Ante, p. 121.

(m) R. G. Pl. reg. 15.

(n) See the form of this plea, C. L. Proc. Act, 1852, Sched. (B), No. 43.

facts stated in the inducement; and no other defence than such denial shall be admissible under that plea; all other pleas in denial shall take issue on some particular matter of fact alleged in the declaration" (o). Thus, "in an action for a nuisance to the occupation of a house by carrying on an offensive trade, the plea of not guilty will operate as a denial only that the defendant carried on the alleged trade in such a way as to be a nuisance to the occupation of the house, and will not operate as a denial of the plaintiff's occupation of the house. In an action for obstructing a right of way, such plea will operate as a denial of the obstruction only, and not of the plaintiff's right of way. In an action for slander of the plaintiff in his office, profession, or trade, the plea of not guilty will operate in denial of speaking the words, of speaking them maliciously, and in the defamatory sense imputed, and with reference to the plaintiff's office, profession, or trade; but it will not operate as a denial of the fact of the plaintiff holding the office or being of the profession or trade alleged."

So, in actions for trespass to land, the plea of not guilty operates merely "as a denial that the defendant committed the trespass alleged in the place mentioned in the declaration;" and "in actions for taking, damaging, or converting the plaintiff's goods, the plea of not guilty shall operate as a denial of the defendant having committed the wrong alleged, by taking, damaging, or converting the goods mentioned, but not of the plaintiff's property therein" (p).

It should here be noticed, that, although in an action "several pleas, replications, or subsequent pleadings, or several avowries or cognizances founded on the same ground of answer or defence, shall not be allowed" (q); yet it is

What pleas may be pleaded together.

(o) R. G. Pl. reg. 16. Kenrick v. Horder, 7 E. & B. 628; Linford v. Lake, 3 H. & N. 276.

(p) R. G. Pl. reg. 19, 20.

(q) R. G. Pl. reg. 2; see also reg. 3; Gales v. Lord Holland, 7 E. & B. 336.

within the discretion of the Court or Judge before whom the matter is brought to suspend this rule in any case where, by so doing, the determining of the real question between the parties on its merits would seem likely to be secured. But "the following pleas, or any two or more of them, may be pleaded together as of course, without leave of the Court or a Judge; that is to say, a plea denying any contract or debt alleged in the declaration, a plea of tender as to part, a plea of the Statute of Limitations, set-off, bankruptcy of the defendant, * * * * * plene administravit, plene administravit præter, infancy, coverture, payment, accord and satisfaction, release, not guilty, a denial that the property an injury to which is complained of is the plaintiff's, leave and license, son assault demesne," and any other pleas which the Judges may hereafter allow by any rules duly made (r). But by leave of the Court or a Judge, the defendant may "plead, in answer to the declaration or other subsequent pleading of the plaintiff, as many several matters as he shall think necessary for his defence" (s); although an affidavit of the party applying for leave to plead, or his attorney, may be required by the Court or Judge, "to the effect that he is advised and believes that he has just ground to traverse the several matters proposed to be traversed by him, and that the several matters sought to be pleaded as aforesaid by way of confession and avoidance (t) are respectively true in substance and in fact" (u).

What must be specially pleaded.

With respect to pleas which must be specially pleaded, it is directed (x), that in any species of action on contract, as well as in tort, "all matters in confession and avoidance, including not only those by way of discharge, but those which shew the transaction to be either void or voidable in (r) C. L. Proc. Act, 1852, s. 84.

(s) Id. s. 81.

(t) As to pleading in confession and avoidance, ante, p. 161.

(u) C. L. Proc. Act, 1852, s. 81; and see Id. ss. 80, 82-86.

(x) R. G. Pl. rr. 8, 12, 17.

point of law on the ground of fraud or otherwise, shall be specially pleaded." Thus, "infancy, coverture, release, payment, performance, illegality of consideration either by statute or common law, drawing, indorsing, accepting, &c., bills or notes by way of accommodation, set-off, mutual credit, unseaworthiness, misrepresentation, concealment, deviation, and various other defences," must be specially pleaded (y).

Pleas in confession and avoidance may be, 1, in justification or excuse; 2, in discharge; or, 3, to the foundation of the action: these three classes of pleas are clearly distinguishable from each other. The characteristic of a plea belonging to class 1 is this,—that, whilst admitting the allegations contained in the declaration to be true, it puts forth new matter to excuse or justify the act charged against the defendant (z); in illustration of this class may be mentioned the pleas of son assault demesne, and leave and license.

Pleas in confession and avoidance—how classified.

In a plea falling within the 2nd of the above classes, the complaint set forth in the declaration is likewise admitted to be true; but matter in discharge of the liability sought to be imposed on the defendant is presented as a defence to the action (a), as, for instance, in a plea of payment, set-off, or the Statute of Limitations; to each of which pleas, being of frequent occurrence and practical importance, a few remarks will be here directed, before considering specifically the third and last class of pleas above mentioned.

The form of a plea of payment before action, given by the first C. L. Proc. Act (b), is as follows, "that before action he (the defendant) satisfied and discharged the plaintiff's claim by payment" (c). If a ready-money transaction takes Payment.

(y) R. G. Pl. reg. 3.

(z) Weaver v. Ward, Hob. 134. See Tighe v. Cooper. 7 E. & B. 639.

(a) See an analytical table of defences to actions on contracts not under seal, 1 Chitt. Pl., 7th ed., p. 488; Dresser

v. Gabriel, 15 C. B. 622; Flockton v. Hall, 14 Q. B. 380.

(b) Sched. (B), No. 40; R. G. Pl. reg. 14.

(c) As to satisfying a debt by the payment of a less sum than that due, place, i.e., a simultaneous exchange of goods for money, or a prepayment of money in anticipation of the consideration being performed, it has been held that the nature of this transaction need not be the subject of a special plea, but may be shown under the general issue (d); and if payment were made after the action had been commenced, and it were accepted in full satisfaction and discharge of all the causes of action in respect of which it was made, and of damages and costs (e), the fact of such payment would still be a good defence (f). Payment may also be pleaded in satisfaction when the defendant has discharged (g) his debt by giving a bill or promissory note, taken by the plaintiff as money (h), for the debt, though the latter be greater in amount than the security thus given in satisfaction thereof.

Tender.

A plea of tender (i) is always accompanied in actions ex contractu by payment of money into Court (k). It is only available to the defendant when the plaintiff's demand is certain in its character and is in the nature of a debt, although its amount may not have been expressly agreed upon between the parties (l). A tender cannot be pleaded to an action for purely unliquidated damages, as for breach of see Sibree v. Tripp, 15 M. & W. 23; post, Bk. II., Chap. 2; Gaskill v. Skene, 14 Q. B. 664; and Note to Cumber v. Wane, 1 Smith, L. C., 5th ed., 288.

(d) Bussey v. Barnett, 9 M. & W. 312; but see Littlechild v. Banks, 7 Q. B. 739; Smith v. Winter, 12 C. B. 487.

(e) Cook v. Hopewell, 11 Exch. 555.

(f) Corbett v. Swinburne, 8 Ad. & E. 673; Ansell v. Smith, 3 Dowl. 193.

(g) Sard v. Rhodes, 1 M. & W. 153; Gaskill v. Skene, 14 Q. B. 664; Griffiths v. Owen, 13 M. & W. 58, 64; James v. Williams, Id. 828; Belshaw v. Bush, 11 C. B. 191; Sayer v. Wagstaff, 5 Beav. 415. As to the appropriation of payments to specific debts, see Leg. Max., 4th ed., 777 et seq.

As to payment of the debt of another by a stranger, see per Willes, J., Cook v. Lister, 13 C. B., N. S., 594.

(h) Caine v. Coulton, 1 H. & C. 764.

(i) Wade's case, 5 Rep. 114 a; Dixon v. Clark, 5 C. B. 365; Smith v. Manners, 5 C. B. 632; Walsh v. Southworth, 6 Exch. 150; Thompson v. Jackson, 1 M. & Gr. 242.

(k) James v. Yane, 29 L. J., Q. B., 169; Pether v. Shelton, 1 Str. 638.

(l) Smith v. Manners, 5 C. B., N. S., 632.

an agreement (m), nor where the intervention of a jury or reference to a master is necessary for ascertaining the amount really due. It should be observed, with respect to the mode of tender, that to be good it must be unconditional (n).

The C. L. Proc. Act, 1852 (o), made express provision with respect to the plea of payment of money into Court. And the C. L. Proc. Act, 1860, has extended the right, under certain conditions, to pay money into Court in actions of replevin, on bonds, and for detaining goods of the plaintiff (p). The form of the plea given by statute (q), sufficiently explains its character. It states that the defendant "brings into Court the sum of £—, and says that the said sum is enough to satisfy the claim of the plaintiff, in respect of the matter herein pleaded to." Money may be thus paid into Court "by way of compensation or amends" in all actions "except actions for assault and battery, false imprisonment, libel, slander, malicious arrest or prosecution," or "debauching of the plaintiff's daughter or servant" (r).

The effect of the plea of payment into Court is to admit some cause of action (s); and it is of importance to note the nature and extent of the admission which the defendant makes thereby. In recent cases, this question has been carefully considered (t), and we may deduce therefrom, that,

(m) Dearle v. Barrett, 2 Ad. & E. 82.

(n) 1 Wms. Saund., 6th ed., 33 e; Bowen v. Owen, 11 Q. B. 130; Finch v. Miller, 5 C. B. 428; Richardson v. Jackson, 8 M. & W. 298; Bevans v. Rees, 5 M. & W. 306.

(o) Sects. 70-73; Pr. R. rr. 11, 12.

(p) Sects. 23-25.

(q) C. L. Proc. Act, 1852, s. 71.

(r) Id. s. 70. Thompson v. Sheppard, 4 E. & B. 53; see 6 & 7 Vict. c.

96, s. 2.

(s) Jones v. Reade, 5 Dowl. 216.

(t) Schreger v. Carden, 11 C. B. 351; Perren v. Monmouthshire R. Co., 11 C. B. 855; Story v. Finnis, 6 Exch. 123; see Thompson v. Sheppard, 4 E. & B. 53.

In an action on a bond, where breaches are assigned under the 8 & 9 Will. 3, c. 11, it was held that money could not be paid into Court under C. L. Proc. Act, 1852, s. 70; Bishop of

on a general count in indebitatus assumpsit or debt, the plea of payment into Court admits only a cause of action to the amount paid into Court, and no more, and is an admission for no other purposes whatever. If, in such a case, the payment be made by two or more defendants jointly sued, it will not operate as an admission of any partnership or joint contract between them, which could render them liable beyond the amount so paid in ; so that, if the plaintiff seeks to recover an additional amount, he will have to prove a contract under which the defendants are jointly liable to an amount exceeding that paid in. If, however, the declaration is framed on a special agreement, the rule is different, for payment into Court will admit the contract and the breach of it as alleged. In an action of tort, "when the declaration is general and unspecific, the payment of money into Court, though it admits a cause of action, does not admit the cause of action sued for ;" so that the plaintiff, in order to recover larger damages than the amount paid into Court, must give evidence of the cause of action sued for (u). But, if the declaration is specific, so that nothing would be due to the plaintiff from the defendant, unless the defendant admitted the particular claim made by the declaration, payment of money into Court admits the cause of action sued for, and so stated specifically in the declaration ; although even then, in some cases, it may be necessary for the plaintiff to prove his cause of action, with a view to the amount of damages.

The pleas of tender and of payment into Court have been said (x) to present exceptions to the rule, that pleas must be either by way of traverse or in confession and avoidance of the cause of action. In strictness they are pleas in confession and satisfaction by matter subsequent to the commencement of the suit, of the claims put forth. It has been deemed convenient, however, to notice them in this place.

London v. M'Neil, 9 Exch. 490 ; but see C. L. Proc. Act, 1860, s. 25, as regards actions on bonds and in detainue.

(u) Judgm., Perren v. Monmouthshire R. Co., 11 C. B. 865-6.

(x) Steph. Pl., 5th ed., pp. 252-3.

The form of a plea of set-off given in Schedule (B) of the C. L. Proc. Act, 1852 (y), is that "the plaintiff, at the commencement of this suit, was and still is indebted to the defendant in an amount equal to the plaintiff's claim, for [here state the cause of set-off, as in a declaration], which amount the defendant is willing to set off against the plaintiff's claim." The opportunity thus extended to a defendant to forego a cross action, in respect of the subject-matter of his plea of set-off, is given by statute (z), but this plea is allowable only "where there are mutual debts between plaintiff and defendant" due in the same right (a), "or (if either party sue or be sued as executor or administrator) when there are mutual debts between the testator or intestate and either party" (b). The right of set-off exists "notwithstanding that such debts are deemed in law to be of a different nature, unless in cases where either of them accrues by reason of a penalty contained in any bond or specialty" (c)

A plaintiff may, however, preclude the necessity of a plea of set-off, by giving credit for such cross demands as his opponent might otherwise have made the subject of a plea of this nature. And by the 13th pleading rule (d), it is ordered, that (y) No. 41.

(z) 2 Geo. 2, c. 22; 8 Geo. 2, c. 24.

(a) Isberg v. Bowden, 8 Exch. 852; Watkins v. Clark, 12 C. B., N. S., 277; Pedder v. Mayor, &c., of Preston, 12 C. B., N. S., 535; Bell v. Carey, 8 C. B. 887; Castelli v. Bodington, 1 E. & B. 66; Richards v. James, 2 Exch. 471; Eyton v. Little-dale, 4 Exch. 159; Grant v. Royal Exchange Ass. Co., 5 M. & S. 439; Gale v. Luttrell, 1 Y. & J. 180; Simpson v. Lamb, 7 E. & B. 84; Owen v. Wilkinson, 28 L. J., C. B., 3; see

C. L. Proc. Act, 1860, s. 20.

(b) 2 Geo. 2, c. 22, s. 13; Atwooll v. Atwooll, 2 E. & B. 23; Mardall v. Thellusson, 18 Q. B. 857; S. C. (in Error), 6 E. & B. 976; but see Watts v. Rees, 9 Exch. 696; S. C., 11 Id. 410.

(c) 8 Geo. 2, c. 24, s. 5. As to when a plea of payment or of set-off should be pleaded, see Thomas v. Cross, 7 Exch. 728.

(d) See also R. G. Pr. reg. 19; Fussell v. Gordon, 13 C. B. 847.

"in any case in which the plaintiff (in order to avoid the expense of the plea of payment or set-off) shall have given credit in the particulars of his demand for any sum or sums of money therein admitted to have been paid to the plaintiff, or which the plaintiff admits the defendant is entitled to set-off, it shall not be necessary for the defendant to plead the payment or set-off of such sum or sums of money. But this rule is not to apply to cases where the plaintiff, after stating the amount of his demand, states that he seeks to recover a certain balance, without giving credit for any particular sum or sums, or to cases of set-off where the plaintiff does not state the particulars of such set-off."

Pleas of payment, set-off, and all other pleadings capable of being construed distributively, are to be so construed; "and if issue is taken thereon, and so much thereof as shall be sufficient answer to part of the causes of action proved shall be found true by the jury, a verdict shall pass for the defendant in respect of so much of the causes of action as shall be answered, and for the plaintiff in respect of so much of the causes of action as shall not be so answered" (e).

Statutes of Limitation.

The object of the Statutes of Limitation is, we are told (f) "to preserve the peace of the kingdom, and to prevent those innumerable perjuries which might ensue if a man were allowed to bring an action for any injury committed at any distance of time."

The leading Statutes of Limitation are 21 Jac. 1, c. 16, with which should be read 19 & 20 Vict. c. 97; 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27; 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42. In connection with these must be considered 9 Geo. 4, c. 14 (commonly called Lord Tenterden's Act), which was enacted to meet numerous questions which had "arisen in actions founded on simple contract as to the proof and effect of acknowledgments and promises offered in evidence for the purpose of taking cases out of the operation" of the above-mentioned Statute of James.

(e) C. L. Proc. Act, 1852, s. 75, (f) 3 Bla. Com., p. 307; see also Paterson v. Harris, 2 B. & S. 814, per Story, J., Bell v. Morrison, 1 and cases there cited; Gabriel v. Peters (U. S.) R. 360. Dresser, 15 C. B. 627.

Under 21 Jac. 1, c. 16, s. 1, an uninterrupted adverse possession for twenty years operated as a complete bar to an action in ejectment, except under circumstances of disability enumerated in the 2nd section of that statute, viz. infancy, coverture, unsoundness of mind, imprisonment, and absence beyond seas. In these cases, the party who was suffering under disability at the time when the right of entry first accrued, was allowed to bring his action (g) at any time within ten years after its removal; and now, under 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 2, no person shall make an entry or distress, or bring an action to recover any land or rent (h), but within twenty years next after the time at which the right to make such entry or distress, or to bring such action shall have first accrued (i) to some person through whom he claims; or if such right shall not have accrued to any person through whom he claims, then within twenty years next after the time at which the right to make such entry or distress, or to bring such action, shall have first accrued to the person making or bringing the same (k). By the 16th section of the last-mentioned statute, persons under the disabilities

Limitation of actions—ejectment,
&c.
21 Jac. 1,
c. 16.

3 & 4 Will.
4, c. 27.

(g) See notes to Nepean v. Doe, and Taylor d. Atkyns v. Horde, 2 Smith L. C., 5th ed., pp. 476 et seq.; Lafond v. Ruddock, 13 C. B. 813, which was decided under sect. 7 of the Statute of James. See Ruckmaboye v. Lulloobhoy Mottichund, 8 Moore, P. C. C. 4; Strithorst v. Grème, 3 Wils. 145.

(h) James v. Salter, 3 Bing. N. C. 544, 552; Dean and Chapter of Ely v. Cash, 15 M. & W. 617; Doe d. Lansdell v. Gower, 17 Q. B. 589; Doe d. Baddeley v. Massey, Id. 373; Smith v. Lloyd, 9 Exch. 562; Humfrey v. Gery, 7 C. B. 567; Manning

v. Phelps, 10 Exch. 59.

(i) Doe d. Dury v. Ozenham, 7 M. & W. 131; Keyse v. Powell, 2 E. & B. 132; De Beauvoir v. Owen, 5 Exch. 166; Cork and Bandon R. C. v. Goode, 13 C. B. 618, 826; Randall v. Stevens, 2 E. & B. 641; Austin v. Llewellyn, 9 Exch. 276; Doe d. Palmer v. Eyre, 17 Q. B. 366; Doe d. Baddeley v. Massey, Id. 373.

(k) Grant v. Ellis, 9 M. & W. 113; Forsyth v. Bristolwe, 8 Exch. 716; Melling v. Leak, 16 C. B. 652; Manning v. Phelps, 10 Exch. 59.

enumerated therein are allowed ten years from the termination of such disability, or their representatives the same period from their death or the termination of their disability, whichever shall first happen, to bring actions of the kind now alluded to ; though by a proviso in the 17th section, no such action shall be brought but within forty years next after the right of action shall have accrued.

3 & 4 Will.
4, c. 42.

Under the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, s. 3, all actions of debt for rent upon an indenture of demise, or of covenant or debt upon any bond (l) or other specialty, &c., and actions of debt or sci. fa. upon recognizance shall be commenced and sued within twenty years after the cause of such actions or suits ; and actions for penalties, damages, or sums of money given by statute to parties grieved, within two years after the cause of such actions and suits accruing ; and actions of debt upon any award when the submission is not by specialty, or for any fine due in respect of any copyhold estate, or for an escape, or for money levied on any fi. fa., within six years after the cause of action shall have accrued. The 4th section contains a proviso with regard to persons labouring under the disabilities therein mentioned (m) ; and the 5th section provides, that in cases of due acknowledgment in writing or payment on account of principal or interest, then the statute shall not preclude an action for the cause acknowledged till twenty years after such acknowledgment (n).

Limitation of action upon simple
contract.
21 Jac. 1, c.
16, s. 3.

With respect to the period of limitation in actions of simple contract, it is enacted by 21 Jac. 1, c. 16, s. 3, that all actions of account and of assumpsit (other than for such accounts as concern the trade of merchandise between merchant and merchant (o), their factors or servants), and all

(l) Sturgis v. Darell, 4 H. & N. 622 ; S. C., 6 Id. 120 ; Amott v. Holden, 18 Q. B. 593 ; Kempe v. Gibbon, 12 Q. B. 662.

(m) See 19 & 20 Vict. c. 97, s. 10 ; p. 185 n. (l).

(n) Blair v. Ormond, 17 Q. B. 439 ; Kempe v. Gibbon, 12 Q. B. 662 ; Goode v. Job, 1 E. & E. 6.

(o) With respect to the limitation of action for Merchants' Accounts, see 19 & 20 Vict. c. 97, s. 9 ; Webber v.

actions of debt grounded upon any lending or contract without specialty (p), and all actions of debt for arrearages of rent (q), shall be commenced and sued within six years next after the cause of such action or suit, and not after (r). The 7th section of this Act (s) relates to persons labouring under particular disabilities, (which have been revised by the Mercantile Law Amendment Act, 1856 (t)), and enacts, that persons so situated must sue within six years after the particular disability shall have ceased (u). 19 & 20 Vict.
c. 97.

The 9 Geo. 4, c. 14, was passed (so far as it relates to the limitation of suits) with the express view that a defendant should not lose the benefit of the Statute of James by such an informal or casual acknowledgment of a debt or contract as might previously have been interpreted to bar the operation of the latter statute (x). The 9 Geo. 4, c. 14, does not 9 Geo. 4, c.
14.

Tivill, 2 Wms. Saund. 124; Robinson v. Alexander, 2 Cl. & F. 717, 737; Inglis v. Haigh, 8 M. & W. 769; Pott v. Clegg, 16 M. & W. 321.

(p) Cork and Bandon R. C. v. Goode, 13 C. B. 826; Webster v. Kirk, 17 Q. B. 944; Tobacco Pipe Makers' Co. v. Loder, 16 Q. B. 765.

(q) See 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 42.

(r) See Hartland v. Jukes, 1 H. & C. 667, 675; Bush v. Martin, 33 L. J., Ex., 17.

(s) See also, as to defendants, 4 & 5 Ann. c. 16, s. 19; Fannin v. Anderson, 7 Q. B. 811; Towns v. Mead, 16 C. B. 123; Lane v. Bennett, 1 M. & W. 70; Forbes v. Smith, 11 Exch. 161.

(t) In respect of the absence beyond seas or imprisonment of the creditor, see 19 & 20 Vict. c. 97, s. 10; Cornill v. Hudson, 8 E. & B. 429.

(u) The term "beyond the seas" is defined by 19 & 20 Vict. c. 97, s. 12.

(x) The 9 Geo. 4, c. 14, s. 1, enacts,

"That in actions of debt or upon the case grounded upon any simple contract, no acknowledgment or promise by words only shall be deemed sufficient evidence of a new or continuing contract, whereby to take any case out of the operation of" the 21 Jac. 1, c. 16, "or to deprive any party of the benefit thereof, unless such acknowledgment or promise shall be made or contained by or in some writing to be signed by the party chargeable thereby;" Hyde v. Johnson, 2 Bing. N. C. 776; Clark v. Alexander, 8 Scott, N. R., 147. The section above cited also makes provision respecting the chargeability of joint contractors (as to which, see Whitcomb v. Whiting, 1 Smith L. C., 5th ed., 555, and Note thereto), and proceeds:—"Provided always, that nothing herein contained shall alter or take away or lessen the effect of any payment of any principal or interest made by any person whatsoever;" Hollis v. Palmer, 2 Bing. N. C. 713; Turney v. Dodwell, 3 E. & B. 136;

alter the law as to the effect of an acknowledgment of a debt; it alters only the manner in which the acknowledgment must be proved (y). Very numerous cases—some of which are below cited—have been decided as to what is an “acknowledgment” of a debt generally, and what is the effect of the statute here adverted to (z).

Limitation of actions
ex delicto.

With regard to actions ex delicto, the respective periods of limitation assigned by the Statute of James above mentioned are as follows:—in trespass, qu. cl. fr., or de bonis asp.; in trover, detinue (a), replevin, and case (b) (except for slander), six years; in trespass for assault, battery, or false imprisonment (c), four years; and in case for slander, two years. Besides the enactments as to the limitation of actions just considered, special provisions occur in various other statutes restricting the time within which particular actions must respectively be brought (d). Such provisions are in Bodger v. Arch, 10 Exch. 333. And see sect. 4 of the Act which applies to set-off.

(y) Per Williams, J., Smith v. Thorne, 18 Q. B. 134; Jackson v. Woolley, 8 E. & B. 778.

(z) Cornforth v. Smithard, 5 H. & N. 13, and cases there cited; Godwin v. Culley, 4 H. & N. 373; Walker v. Butler, 6 E. & B. 506; Rackham v. Marriott, 1 H. & N. 236; S. C., 233, 196; Collis v. Stack, 1 H. & N. 605; Holmes v. Mackrell, 3 C. B., N. S., 789; Tanner v. Smart, 6 B. & C. 603; Buckmaster v. Russell, 10 C. B., N. S., 745; Cockrill v. Sparks, 1 H. & C. 699; Bush v. Martin, 33 L. J., Ex., 17; Tippets v. Heane, 1 Cr. M. & B. 252; Hooper v. Stephens, 4 Ad. & E. 71; Williams v. Griffith, 3 Exch. 335; Howcutt v. Bonser, Id. 491; Sims v. Brutton, 5 Exch. 809; Foster v. Dawber, 6 Exch. 839; Turney v. Dodwell, 3 E. & B. 136; Cleave v. Jones, 6 Exch. 573; Davies v. Ed- wards, 7 Exch. 22; Bamfield v. Tupper, Id. 27; Evans v. Simon, 9 Exch. 282; Cawley v. Furnell, 12 C. B. 291; Kempe v. Gibbon, 12 Q. B. 662; Smith v. Thorne, 18 Q. B. 134; Wilkins v. Smith, 4 E. & B. 185; Bradley v. James, 13 C. B. 822; Hunter v. Gibbons, 1 H. & N. 459; Everett v. Robertson, 23 L. J., Q. B., 23; Francis v. Hawkesley, Id. 370; Goode v. Job, Id. 1; Bush v. Martin, 2 H. & C. 311.

(a) See Plant v. Cotterill, 5 H. & N. 430.

(b) Backhouse v. Bonomi, 9 H. L. Ca. 503; S. C., E. B. & E. 622, 646; Whitehouse v. Fellowes, 10 C. B., N. S., 765, 785, 786. See Duke of Brunswick v. Harmer, 14 Q. B. 185 (which was an action for libel); Imperial Gas Co. v. London Gas Co., 10 Exch. 39.

(c) Coventry v. Apsley, 2 Salk. 420.

(d) See 31 Eliz. c. 5; 4 & 5 Anne, c. 16 (as to which see Lane v. Bennett, general framed for the protection of certain classes of defendants on grounds of public policy.

Whenever a Statute of Limitation is prima facie pleadable, the precise point of time from which it appears to run should carefully be marked, and likewise the legal status of the party entitled to sue at that epoch, the maxim of law being contra non valentem agere nulla currit præscriptio; conformably to which rule the several provisions with respect to 'disability,' already (e). mentioned, suspend the operation of the statute in question until such disability has ceased. So soon, however, as a complainant has a right to commence an action, the statute begins to run; ex. gr., if by an agreement money is to be paid on the happening of a certain contingency, the statute will begin to run when that event has occurred and a breach of the agreement has been committed. But whenever the time of limitation has once begun to run, it continues so to do (f). Again, where in assumpsit on a plea of the Statute of Limitations the breach of contract was shown to have occurred more than six years before the commencement of the proceedings, the plea was held to be a good bar to the action, although the plaintiff did not discover the injury resulting from the breach till within the six years (g). Nor is it an answer to a plea of the Statute of Limitations that the plaintiff was prevented by the fraud of the defendant from knowing of the cause of action until after the period of limitation had expired; for, as remarked by Pollock, C.B., it would open a flood of litigation if Courts of

1 M. & W. 70); 24 Geo. 2, c. 44, s. 8; 5 & 6 Vict. c. 97; 9 & 10 Vict. c. 93; 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, s. 138; 11 & 12 Vict. c. 44, s. 8. Ante, p. 114.

(e) Ante, p. 185.

(f) Curlewis v. Earl of Mornington, 7 E. & B. 283; Rhodes v. Smethurst, 4 M. & W. 42; S. C., 6 M. & W. 351; Baird v. Fortune, 4 Macq. H. L. Ca.

127. See Lafond v. Ruddock, 13 C. B. 813, 819.

(g) East India Co. v. Paul, 7 Moo. P. C. C. 111; Short v. M'Carthy, 3 B. & Ald. 626; Brown v. Howard, 2 B. & B. 73; Howell v. Young, 5 B. & C. 259; Granger v. George, Id. 149; Bree v. Holbech, 2 Dougl. 654.

law were to hold that the statute does not run in cases where fraud has been practised (h).

Pleas to the foundation of the action.

The third sub-division of pleas in confession and avoidance (i) comprises those which go to the foundation of the action, as pleas of fraud, or misrepresentation inducing to a contract, illegality, or coverture when pleadable in bar (k). A plea belonging to this class, whilst admitting an ostensible or prima facie ground of action, is aimed at showing that the cause put forth never had any substantial existence or legal entity. In any case such as is now adverted to, the plaintiff discloses a claim which is on the face of it valid and unimpeachable. The defendant, however, by special averments neutralizes the legal character of, and thus entitles himself to deny the legal consequences flowing from the facts alleged by the plaintiff.

Equitable defences, &c.

The equitable pleas, &c., alluded to at page 170 as being, in certain cases, permissible in Courts of common law, are founded on the 83rd and three following sections of the C. L. Proc. Act, 1854, enacting that "It shall be lawful for the defendant, or plaintiff in replevin, in any cause in any of the superior Courts in which, if judgment were obtained, he would be entitled to relief against such judgment on equitable grounds, to plead the facts which entitle him to such relief by way of defence, and the said Courts are hereby empowered to receive such defence by way of plea: provided that such plea shall begin with the words 'for defence on equitable grounds,' or words to the like effect;" and further enacting, that "the plaintiff may reply, in answer to any plea of the defendant, facts which avoid such plea upon equitable grounds;" and providing that in case it shall appear to the Court or any Judge thereof that any such (h) Imperial Gas Light Co. v. London Gas Light Co., 10 Exch. 43.

(i) Ante, p. 177.

(k) Such pleas are, on adequate authority, included under the general head of pleas in confession and avoidance: see R. G. Pl., reg. 8.

equitable plea or equitable replication cannot be dealt with by a Court of law, so as to do justice between the parties, it shall be lawful for such Court or Judge to order the same to be struck out, on such terms as to costs and otherwise as to such Court or Judge may seem reasonable (l).

The Courts have, hitherto, limited equitable defences to those cases in which a Court of Equity would grant a perpetual, complete, and unconditional injunction (m)—"would restrain the plaintiff from suing absolutely and unconditionally" (n).

(l) C. L. Proc. Act, 1854, s. 86.

The sections alluded to supra, concerning equitable defences, do not apply to the action of ejectment, in which there are no pleadings: Neave v. Avery, 16 C. B. 329.

(m) See Mines Royal Societies v. Magnay, 10 Exch. 489 (where the matter of an equitable plea disallowed at law, was afterwards entertained in equity). S. C., 3 Drew. 130; Taylor v. Burgess, 5 H. & N. 1; Watts v. Shuttleworth, Id. 235; Mutual Loan Fund Association v. Sudlow, 5 C. B., N. S., 449; Sloper v. Cottrell, 6 E. & B. 497; Wood v. Dwarris, 11 Exch. 493; Minshull v. Oakes, 2 H. & N. 793; Wodehouse v. Farebrother, 5 E. & B. 277; Chilton v. Carrington, 16 C. B. 211; Phelps v. Prothero, 16 C. B. 370; Scott v. Littledale, 8 E. & B. 815; Atterbury v. Jarvie, 2 H. & N. 114; Reis v. Scottish Equitable Life Assurance Society, 2 H. & N. 19; Luce v. Izod, 1 H. & N. 245; Hunter v. Gibbons, Id. 459; Balfour v. Sea Fire Life Assurance Co., 3 C. B., N. S., 309; Jonassohn v. Ransome, Id. 779; Wood v. Governor and Company of Copper Miners in England, 17 C. B. 561; Vorley v. Barrett, 1 C. B., N. S., 225; Perez v. Oleaga, 11 Exch. 506; Clerk v. Laurie, 1 H. & N. 452.

In Mines Royal Societies v. Magnay, supra, Parke, B., observed, "In my opinion the equitable defence allowed to be pleaded by this statute means such a defence as would, in a Court of equity, be a complete answer to the plaintiff's claim, and would, as such, afford sufficient ground for a perpetual injunction, granted absolutely and without any conditions." See also Burgoyne v. Cottrell, 24 L. J., Q. B., 28; Flight v. Gray, 3 C. B., N. S., 320; Cumberlege v. Lawson, 1 C. B., N. S., 709.

(n) See C. L. Com., 3rd Report. In Farebrother v. Welchman, 24 L. J., Ch., 412, Kindersley, V.-C., observed, "When I find that by the Common Law Procedure Act parties are entitled to set up matters which would be a good defence in equity, it seems to me that the very purpose of the enactment was to prevent those against whom actions are brought from being obliged to come to a Court of Equity, to get the benefit of an equitable defence. The defendant has put in certain pleas, and they have been replied to. I must assume, therefore, that if the defendant can support his pleas, judgment will be in his favour. This is my view of the case; and if I were to hold otherwise, I should, I think, be deciding that the Act of Parliament is Replication. The next step (p) in the suit is the replication, which, like the plea must be framed with reference to the established rules of pleading (q). Thus, it is enacted, that "a plaintiff shall be at liberty to traverse the whole of any plea or subsequent pleading of the defendant by a general denial; or, admitting some part or parts thereof, to deny all the rest, or to deny any one or more allegations" contained therein (r); and further, that "either party may plead in answer to the plea or subsequent pleading of his adversary, that he joins issue thereon;" and "such form of joinder of issue shall be deemed to be a denial of the substance of the plea or other subsequent pleading and an issue thereon, and in all cases where the plaintiff's pleading is in denial of the pleading of the defendant, or some part of it, the plaintiff may add a joinder of issue (s) for the defendant" (t). The object, as a learned judge has observed, of the form of pleading thus given by the Act, "is merely to enable a party in a compendious manner to traverse all those allegations in a plea which he could have traversed before" (u); and indeed this mode of denying the substance of the plea "is in the nature of a general replication de injuriâ (x). But such matters as inoperative, and cannot be carried out. There is no matter of complicated accounts involved here, it is a mere question of fact; and I cannot understand why it is necessary to have it tried in this Court." Wake v. Harrop, 1 H. & C. 202; S. C., 6 H. & N., 768; Borroman v. Rosset, 33 L. J., C. P., 111; per Willes, J., Davis v. Nisbett, 10 C. B., N. S., 764; Gorsuch v. Cree, 8 C. B., N. S., 574; per Pollock, C. B., Phillips v. Ward, 33 L. J., Ex., 6. As to an equitable set-off, see Cochrane v. Green, 9 C. B., N. S., 448. See further as to equitable pleas, Schlumberger v. Lister, 29 L. J., Q. B., 157; S. C., 30 Id. 3.

(p) See C. L. Proc. Act, 1852, s. 53.

(q) For an example of replying double and demurring to a plea, see Marshall v. Bishop of Exeter, 6 C. B., N. S., 722; 7 Id. 643; 13 Id. 820.

(r) C. L. Proc. Act, 1852, s. 77.

Analogous provisions are made with respect to the subsequent steps of the pleading. By sect. 78 "A defendant shall be at liberty in like manner to deny the whole or part of a replication or subsequent pleading of the plaintiff."

(s) The adding of a joinder in issue is technically called adding a similiter.

(t) C. L. Proc. Act, 1852, s. 79.

(u) Per Pollock, C. B., Glover v. Dixon, 9 Exch. 160.

(x) The learning, now obsolete, connected with which is to be found in before the Act must have been replied specially must still be so replied" (y)—whether by traverse or by pleading in confession and avoidance.

The pleadings subsequent to replication (z) are conducted on the same plan as those already noticed, either by joining issue when tendered on the other side, or by demurring, traversing, or pleading in confession and avoidance. Subsequent pleadings.

If the issue tendered be one of law, "the party demurring may give a notice to the opposite party to join in demurrer in four days" (r), with the alternative of judgment being signed against him at the expiration of that time. On joinder, the demurrer will, at the request of either plaintiff or defendant, be set down for argument in the special paper of the Court in which it is to be determined, four clear days before the argument takes place (b). Copies of the pleadings relating to the demurrer have to be made up (c) and delivered to the judges in the mode prescribed by the Practice Demurrer.

Crogate's case, 1 Smith L. C., 3rd ed., 53.

(y) Per Parke, B., Glover v. Dixon, supra.

A replication by way of new assignment is permitted, when the defendant, owing to the general form of the declaration, has given an answer in his plea, not to the real cause of complaint, but to another, to which the language of the declaration may also be applicable. The plaintiff is then allowed to explain as it were the real object of his declaration by new assigning his cause of action; and the defendant is prohibited, except by leave of the Court or a judge, from answering the matter of the new assignment by a repetition of the plea which he has employed in reply to the declaration, unless, indeed, that was a plea in denial. In regard to new assignments, see C. L. Proc. Act, 1852, ss. 87, 88; Roberts v. Rose, 33 L. J.,

Ex., 1; Glover v. Dixon, 9 Exch. 158; Hayling v. Okey, 8 Exch. 531; Humfrey v. London and North Western R. C., 7 Exch. 328; Moore v. Webb, 1 C. B., N. S., 673; Eastern Counties R. C. v. Dorling, 5 C. B., N. S., 821; 1 Chitt. Pl., 7th ed., pp. 653 et seq.

(z) As to a plea puis darrein continuance, see C. L. Proc. Act, 1852, ss. 68, 69; R. G. Pl., rr. 22, 23; Todd v. Emly, 9 M. & W. 606; Dunn v. Loftus, 8 C. B. 76; Wagner v. Imbrie, 6 Exch. 380; Solomon v. Graham, 5 E. & B. 309; Howarth v. Brown, 1 H. & C. 694; Lancashire Waggon Co. v. Fitzhugh, 6 H. & N. 502; Barnett v. London and North Western R. C., 5 H. & N. 604.

(a) R. G. Pr. reg. 14.

(b) R. G. Pr. reg. 15.

(c) See R. G. Pr. reg. 16, 17; Dorsett v. Aspdin, 2 L. M. & P. 625.

Rules. If, besides the demurrer, there are issues of fact to be tried, in the event of the judgment on the demurrer being for the defendant on a plea answering the whole action, the only judgment which the plaintiff can have upon issues of fact previously found for him, is nil capiat per breve (d), but, in the event of the judgment being for the plaintiff under similar circumstances, he should proceed to have the issues of fact brought before the Jury, and damages also assessed upon the issue of law (e).

Judgment
by default.

Should the defendant at any stage of the suit omit to plead in due time, judgment by default may be signed; and when the claim is for a debt or "liquidated demand" in money, such judgment is final (f). When, however, the claim is for damages, the amount of which "is substantially a matter of calculation, it shall not be necessary to issue a writ of inquiry (g), but the Court or a judge may direct that the amount for which final judgment is to be signed shall be ascertained by one of the masters of the said Court" (h). Where the damages are wholly unliquidated, a writ of inquiry is necessary.

Notice of trial.

The action being now ripe for trial (i), notice of trial (k) must be given to the defendant (l).

Notice to plaintiff to try.

It may, however, happen that, although the defendant is ready, the plaintiff fails to bring on his case for trial. This (d) 1 Wms. Saund. 80 (1); Young v. Beck, 3 Dowl. 804.

(e) See Smith v. Hartley, 11 C. B. 678.

(f) C. L. Proc. Act, 1852, s. 93.

(g) A "writ of inquiry" is usually directed to the sheriff of the county in which the venue in the action is laid. It states the former proceedings in the action, and "because it is unknown what damages the plaintiff hath sustained," it commands the sheriff by a jury to inquire the same, and return the inquisition into Court.

(h) C. L. Proc. Act, 1852, s. 94.

(i) As to the writ of trial, and when it may issue, see 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, ss. 17-19.

(k) This notice is frequently given on the back of the "issue," which is a copy of the entire pleadings made by the plaintiff—the form of which may be seen, R. G. Pr. Sched. No. 1. It should correspond with the record: Worthington v. Wigley, 5 Dowl. 210.

(l) C. L. Proc. Act, 1852, ss. 97-99, and Rr. Pr. 34-43.

contingency is met by the 101st section of the C. L. Proc. Act, 1852, by virtue of which a defendant may, after the lapse of a certain period therein more particularly defined, give the plaintiff twenty days' notice to bring on the issues to be tried at the next sittings or assizes, and if he shall neglect to do so, the defendant may sign judgment for his costs (m); or after default by the plaintiff in proceeding to trial, the defendant may take the cause down to trial (n) giving the plaintiff due notice thereof.

Before the subject of the pleading in an action is dismissed, it will be necessary to refer to certain clauses contained in the second C. L. Proc. Act, by which discovery and interrogatories have been introduced into the practice of the common law (o). The result of the provisions in question may be thus briefly stated:—

1. The Court or a judge may, upon the application founded on a sufficient affidavit of either party (p), order that his opponent shall state—also on affidavit—what documents relating to the matters in dispute are in his possession, power, or knowledge; and further, that—if he objects to produce any such documents—he shall state the grounds of his objection (q). When any document of this nature is shown to be in the hands of either party, the Court may order that an inspection of it may be had, and (if necessary) a copy be made of it by the opposing party in all cases in

Discovery and inspection of documents.

(m) See also R. G. Pr., reg. 58; Farthing v. Castles, 1 Bail C. Ca. 142; Judkins v. Atherton, 3 E. & B. 987; Morgan v. Jones, 8 Exch. 128; Truscott v. Latour, 9 Exch. 420; Hall v. Sootson, Id. 238; see Haddrick v. Heslop, 12 Q. B. 267. As to signing judgment of nonsuit, see argument in Taylor v. Nezfield, 4 E. & B. 467.

(n) This is called trial by proviso. See C. L. Proc. Act, 1852, s. 116; R. G. Pr. reg. 42; 2 Wms. Saund. 336 a, n. (b).

(o) Why the proceedings mentioned in the text were thus borrowed from Courts of equity, is set forth in the C. L. Commissioners' 2nd Report.

(p) Christopherson v. Loting, 33 L. J., C. P., 121; Herschfield v. Clarke, 11 Exch. 712.

(q) C. L. Proc. Act, 1854, s. 50; Forshaw v. Lewis, 10 Exch. 712; Scott v. Zygomala, 4 E. & B. 484; Adams v. Lloyd, 3 H. & N. 351; Bray v. Finch, 1 H. & N. 468.

which, previous to the passing of the 14 & 15 Vict. c. 99, he might have obtained a discovery by filing a bill, or by any other proceeding in a Court of equity (r).

Interrogatories.

2. The Court or judge may, in certain cases, order the plaintiff with his declaration, or the defendant with his plea (or either of them at any other stage of the suit, by leave granted by the Court or a judge) to deliver to the opposite party (if liable to be called as a witness) interrogatories in writing upon the matters relating to the action as to which discovery may be sought, and these interrogatories must be answered on affidavit; and further, the Court or judge may order an oral examination, before a judge or master, of any party whose affidavit appears insufficient (s). The application for an order to exhibit interrogatories must be founded upon an affidavit of the party proposing to interrogate, and of his attorney or agent. Such affidavit (or affidavits) must generally state that the party interrogating "will derive material benefit" from the discovery which he seeks, and "that there is a good cause of action or defence upon the merits" (t). And if the application is made on the part of the defendant, it must further state, "that the discovery is not sought for the purpose of delay." The cases cited below will show how these several enactments have been applied in various instances (u).

(r) See 14 & 15 Vict. c. 99, s. 6; Riccard v. Inclosure Commissioners, 4 E. & B. 329; Owen v. Nickson, 30 L. J., Q. B., 125; Chartered Bank of India, &c., v. Rich, 32 L. J., Q. B., 300; Gomm v. Parrott, 3 C. B., N. S., 47; London Gas Light Co. v. Vestry of Chelsea Parish, 6 C. B., N. S., 411; Colman v. Trueman, 3 H. & N. 871; Collins v. Yates, 27 L. J., Ex., 150; Temperley v. Willett, 6 E. & B. 380; Metropolitan Omnibus Co. v. Hawkins, 4 H. & N. 146; Thompson v. Robson, 2 H. & N. 412; Wright v. Morrey, 11 Exch. 209. Until the passing of the 2nd C. L. Proc. Act, the above provision was available in comparatively few cases. See Hunt v. Hewett, 7 Exch. 236; Rayner v. Allhusen, 2 L. M. & P. 605; and C. L. Com. 2nd Rep. pp. 34, 35. As to the right of inspection, independently of the statute, see Bluck v. Gompertz, 7 Exch. 70, 71; Shadwell v. Shadwell, 6 C. B., N. S., 679.

(s) Turk v. Syne, 27 L. J., Ex., 54.

(t) Crookes v. Morrison, 5 E. & B. 984. See Oxlade v. North Eastern R. Co., 12 C. B., N. S., 350.

(u) C. L. Proc. Act, 1854, sects. 51-

Previous to the trial, the important duty devolves upon the litigants of preparing evidence in support of the case upon which each intends to rely. This will be either documentary or oral. Documentary evidence may be adduced at the trial either on admission or by proof. Either party may call on the other "by notice (v) to admit any document, saving all just exceptions; and, in case of refusal or neglect to admit, the costs of proving the document shall be paid by the party so neglecting or refusing, whatever the result of the cause may be, unless at the trial the judge shall certify that the refusal to admit was reasonable;" and no costs of proving any document shall be allowed in general, unless such notice be given.

Evidence;
•
—documentary.

If a document be not admitted it must be proved; unless—as in the case of a deed thirty years old—it proves itself; and it is now unnecessary to call the attesting witness to prove "any instrument, to the validity of which attestation is not requisite, and such instrument may be proved by admission or otherwise, as if there had been no attesting witness thereto (x)." Should any document required for evidence by either party be in the possession of his adversary, notice should be given him to produce it. If, again, it be 57; Rew v. Hutchins, 10 C. B., N. S., 829; Zychlinski v. Maltby, Id. 838; Wolverhampton New Water Works Co. v. Hawksford, 5 C. B., N. S., 703; Edwards v. Wakefield, 6 E. & B. 462; Whateley v. Crowter, 5 E. & B. 709; Crookes v. Morrison, Id. 984; Horton v. Bott, 2 H. & N. 249; Robson v. Crawley, Id. 766; Chester v. Wortley, 17 C. B. 410; S. C., 18 C. B. 239; Bird v. Malzy, 1 C. B., N. S., 310; Tetley v. Easton, 18 C. B. 643; Moor v. Roberts, 2 C. B., N. S., 671; Scott v. Zygomala, 4 E. & B. 483; S. C., 24 L. J., Q. B., 129; Martin v. Hemming, 10 Exch. 478; but see James v. Barns, 17 C. B. 596; Thöl v.

Leask, Id. 704; Osborn v. London Dock Co., 10 Exch. 698; and Tupling v. Ward, 6 H. & N. 749, are commented on in Bartlett v. Lewis, 12 C. B., N. S., 249; Judgm., Reg. v. Boyes, 1 B. & S. 329; May v. Hawkins, 11 Exch. 210. Refusing to answer or insufficiently answering interrogatories is punishable as a contempt of Court by attachment. Turk v. Syne, supra, note (s); Von Hoff v. Hoerster, 27 L. J., Ex., 299.

(v) C. L. Proc. Act, 1852, s. 117. See form of notice to admit R. G. Pr. reg. 29.

(x) C. L. Proc. Act, 1854, s. 26.

in the hands of a third party, its production may be enforced by a subpœna duces tecum.

Attendance of witnesses.

The attendance of a witness to give oral evidence is procured by serving him with a subpœna ad testificandum. The mode of doing this and the liability of witnesses neglecting to attend when duly summoned, will be found stated in Books of Practice, to which the reader must here be referred. It should, however, be noticed, that, if a witness is unable to attend personally, provision has been made by statute for his examination upon interrogatories or otherwise (y). When the inability to attend arises by reason of the residence of the witness in India or the British colonies, he may be examined where he resides by the local tribunals (a writ "in the nature of a mandamus" having been issued to them for that purpose (z)), or by a commission appointed by the Court or a judge where the suit is pending (a). The latter mode of examination under a commission may be ordered, indeed, and pursued, in respect of other places out of the jurisdiction of the Court, besides those just referred to; and if witnesses are within its jurisdiction a commission may also be thus employed, when it seems to the Court or a judge that the circumstances of the case justify such a course. The depositions, having been taken, are filed in the Master's Office (b), and become a record of the Court, and may be read at the trial as evidence in the cause.

Record.

The Nisi Prius record, which is a copy of the issue (c), must also be made up before going to trial. This is the authentic account of the suit up to the date of the trial, by which alone the judge can be guided as to the questions in dispute, and it must be duly "delivered to the proper officer (y) 1 Will. 4, c. 22, s. 1, extending 13 Geo. 3, c. 63. See C. L. Proc. Act, 1854, ss. 51-57.

(z) 13 Geo. 3, c. 63, and 1 Will. 4, c. 22.

(a) 1 Will. 4, c. 22, s. 4; Farnworth v. Hyde, 14 C. B., N. S., 719.

(b) R. G. Pr., reg. 33.

(c) Ante, p. 192, n (k).

of the Court in which the cause is to be tried " (d). Assuming that all preliminaries (some of which it is not necessary here to describe) have been performed, the cause is set down, and will be duly called on, in its proper turn, for trial at Nisi Prius (e).

4. The Trial at Nisi Prius.

Unless the judge by consent of the parties undertake to try the issues of fact (f), or unless the matters in dispute be referred to arbitration or decided in a summary manner (g), the action is now before the tribunal appointed to dispose of it, viz., the jury and the judge. It is the duty of the sheriff, to summon, upon a precept issued to him by the judges (h) of assize, jurors for the trial of all issues, civil and criminal, which may come on for trial at the assizes. Formerly, the jurors in civil suits were merely the witnesses who spoke from their own knowledge, or as they had been taught and told, with reference to the facts in issue—so that what the country knew, the country testified. If, for instance, a deed was pleaded, the witnesses named in the attesting clause were summoned upon the jury, because they were the persons whose evidence, being already recorded, was deemed essential to a decision of the case. So, when an estate was created by parol, and the names of the persons who heard the declarations were ascertained, they were ordered to be on the panel; and, acting on the same principle in other cases, the sheriff followed the direction of the writ, and returned the names of the good and lawful men by whom the truth could best be

(d) C. L. Proc. Act, 1852, s. 102; and see Sched. to R. G. Pr., No. 2.

(e) Cottam v. Banks, 1 B. C. C. 302.

(f) C. L. Proc. Act, 1854, s. 1; Andrewes v. Elliott, 6 E. & B. 338.

(g) C. L. Proc. Act, 1854, s. 3.

(h) C. L. Proc. Act, 1852, ss. 104-113. The precept to the Sheriffs of London and Middlesex is issued by a Judge of one of the Superior Courts of Common Law. And see C. L. Proc. Act, 1854, s. 59.

known :—in other words, he selected the parties who happened to be best cognisant of the facts, those, for instance, who had seen the peaceable possession of the demandant of land, and the unlawful entry upon it of the intruder. Such methods of deciding civil controversies were, indeed, well adapted to a state of society, when the actual possession of land was the most usual and important point which could come before a jury, and when all transactions by which the right of property was acquired had every possible publicity. But the neighbouring freeholders or inhabitants of a district were ill competent to declare the truth, when they were called upon to give their verdict concerning questions arising out of transactions, which were gradually withdrawn from their notice, as the social system grew more refined, and became more complicated (i). Hence, “ during the earliest ages of our judicial history, juries were selected for the very reasons which would now argue their unfitness, viz., their personal acquaintance with the parties and the merits of the cause ” (k).

The jury summoned to try the cause are sworn to give their verdict according to the evidence, and either party has at this juncture the opportunity afforded him of challenging either to the array or to the poll (l).

Opening the case.

The jury being sworn, the case is opened by the plaintiff or defendant (as may be) in person or by counsel making a statement as well of the purport of the pleadings on the record as of the evidence which it is proposed to offer in support of them. The right to begin devolves most commonly upon the plaintiff, in virtue of the rule that he on whom the burden of making out the affirmative of the issue lies—in other words, the party against whom, if no evidence were offered on either side, the verdict would pass (m),—is entitled to begin.

(i) Palgr. Orig., Auth. of King's Counc., pp. 53-55.

(k) Note to Mostyn v. Fabrigas, 1 Smith, L. C., 5th ed., 607.

(l) As to the different modes of challenging, see 1 Chitt. Arch. Pr., 11th ed., pp. 433 et seq., 3 Bla. Com. p. 358.

Assuming that the plaintiff begins, and that the case has been duly opened, his counsel calls evidence in its support, which is then summed up by a second address to the jury (n), unless it be previously announced that evidence is to be offered on the other side. In this latter event, the second speech of plaintiff's counsel is deferred until the evidence thus announced has been laid before the Court, and summed up by the defendant's counsel. Thus it will be perceived that where evidence is offered for the defendant, the party beginning has the general reply—that is, the opportunity afforded him of commenting on the whole case, as well on his own evidence as on that of his opponent.

Order of proceedings.

The evidence on behalf of the defendant is in like manner first stated by counsel, then adduced, and afterwards summed up by him in his turn, although of course if he do not offer evidence, his sole duty will be to comment on that of the other side (o).

During the trial, it is within the province of the presiding judge to rule as to (or to reserve for future consideration) all questions of law which present themselves. Upon him devolves the duty of deciding as to the admissibility of evidence (p), the allowing of amendments in the record (q), Province of the Judge.

(m) Huckman v. Fernie, 3 M. & W. 505; Allen v. Cary, 7 E. & B. 464; C. L. Com. 2nd Rep., p. 18.

(n) Hodges v. Ancrum, 11 Exch. 214.

(o) C. L. Proc. Act, 1854, s. 18.

(p) Tattersall v. Fearnley, 17 C. B. 368.

(q) C. L. Proc. Act, 1852, s. 222; C. L. Proc. Act, 1854, s. 96. See Garrard v. Guibilei, 11 C. B., N. S., 616; S. C., 13 Id. 832; Banco di Torino v. Hamburger, 2 H. & C. 330; Holden v. Ballantyne, 29 L. J., Q. B.,

148; St. Losky v. Green, 9 C. B., N. S., 370; Roles v. Davis, 4 H. & N. 434; May v. Footner, 5 E. & B. 505; Brennan v. Howard, 1 H. & N. 138; Saunders v. Bate, Id. 402; Carpenter v. Parker, 3 C. B., N. S., 206; Wickens v. Steel, 2 C. B., N. S., 438; Morgan v. Pike, 14 C. B. 473; Wilkin v. Reed, 15 C. B. 192; Ritchie v. Van Gelder, 9 Exch. 762; Buckland v. Johnson, 15 C. B. 145; Edwards v. Hodges, 15 C. B. 477; per Pollock, C. B., Emery v. Webster, 9 Exch. 246.

As to amendments upon a trial by permitting adjournments of the trial (r), adding pleas (s), and various other matters which may incidentally occur in the course of the cause. It remains, further, for the judge to 'sum up' and explain to the jury the whole of the evidence which has been adduced, with a view to their delivering their verdict on the issues presented by the record for their determination.

Province of jury.

Although in theory it is the office of the jury to deliver their verdict on all the issues of fact raised by the pleadings, yet in practice, where these issues are numerous, or the evidence before the Court is complicated and difficult in its legal application, the direction of the judge will not only assist the jury in the elucidation of the evidence and its connection with specific issues, but it will virtually determine—as indeed it ought to do—how these latter are to be found and entered on the record. That the jury may persist in finding on any issue contrary to the expressed opinion and direction of the judge, is undoubtedly true; but if this should subsequently be made apparent (in a mode which will be presently explained) to the Court in banc, the verdict might be set aside as being against evidence, or perverse. The jury, however, are usually content to exercise the discretionary power confided to them, subject to and in accordance with the advice or suggestions proffered by the judge.

Special verdict.

Another important point to be here noticed is, that, under the direction of the judge, the jury may return a special verdict, in which the facts of the case are found, and may leave the Court subsequently to pronounce as to the legal effect and signification of such verdict.

Directing and reserving leave to enter ver-

Again, as in the exercise of his authority to rule on matters of law at the trial the judge frequently directs a nonsuit or a record, see Noble v. Chapman, 14 C. B. 400; Hunter v. Emanuel, 15 C. B. 290.

(r) C. L. Proc. Act, 1854, s. 19.

(s) Mitchell v. Crasweller, 13 C. B. 237.

verdict for either party to be entered (t), without calling on the jury to interfere; so he may reserve for the consideration of the Court in banc a point which, if then decided by him, would determine the verdict (u). To do this, the consent of the party in whose favour the opinion of the judge inclines, must be obtained; but if the other side have leave to bring the question subsequently for argument before the Court, then, according to the determination of the latter tribunal thereon (who deal with it as the judge at Nisi Prius might have dealt with it had he been so pleased), the verdict or nonsuit will, according to leave reserved, be entered or set aside (x). A 'nonsuit,' just alluded to, occurs when a plaintiff withdraws (y) from the contention at Nisi Prius, either because he is satisfied that he cannot then support his case, or upon the judge expressing his opinion (z) that the action is not maintainable. It remains, indeed, notwithstanding the opinion so judicially expressed, within the discretion of the plaintiff himself, to submit to be nonsuited (a)—a course which it will in general be prudent to adopt, inasmuch as if the verdict, in deference to the judge's direction to the jury, be against him, his right of action would be barred; but should he be only nonsuited, he may re-assert his claim at some future time.

dict or nonsuit.

Nonsuit.

Further, a bill of exceptions may be tendered at the trial to the judge by either side, if dissatisfied with his direction

Bill of exceptions.

(t) See Allen v. Cary, 7 E. & B. 463.

(u) See Siordet v. Kucynski, 17 C. B. 251; Eames v. Smith, 1 Jur., N. S., 1025.

(x) As to carrying the decision of the Court into error, see C. L. Proc. Act, 1854, s. 34. Only those points made at the trial can be argued either on appeal or in the Court below: per Cole-ridge, J., and Williams, J., Cuthbert v. Cummings, 11 Exch. 405.

(y) "At common law, the subject has a right to be nonsuited at any stage of the proceedings he may please, and thereby to reserve to himself the power of bringing a fresh action for the same subject-matter:" per Parke, B., Outhwaite v. Hudson, 7 Exch. 381.

(z) Harman v. Johnson, 3 Car. & K. 272; Briers v. Rust, Id. 294. See Hutchins v. Hollingworth, 7 Moo. P. C. C. 228.

(a) See Alexander v. Parker, 2 C. & J. 133; Corsar v. Reed, 17 Q. B. 540; per Parke, B., Standiffe v. Clarke, 7 Exch. 446.

in point of law to the jury, or with his ruling as to the admissibility and legal effect of evidence in the case. This bill of exceptions, when tendered, the judge is bound to seal (b), that the matter therein stated (having been first attached to the record, and thus made part of it) may be submitted to a Court of error (c).

Certificate
as to costs.

To the judge also appertains the duty of granting or withholding in certain cases his certificate as to costs; the effect of which under various provisions of the County Court Acts has been already adverted to (d). Other statutes also, under certain circumstances, impose upon a successful plaintiff the necessity of obtaining from the judge at Nisi Prius a certificate, to enable him to recover costs. Of such statutes, some of the more important are below cited (e). It may be remembered, also, that the extra costs of trial by a special jury (f) are thrown upon the party applying for it, whatever the verdict may be, unless the judge certifies that the case was one suitable to be so tried.

Jury discharged,
when.

Further, it is within the discretion of a judge at Nisi Prius, under particular circumstances, to discharge the jury from giving any verdict, as where they cannot agree therein, and the judge sees fit to excuse their so doing—the barbarous alternative being, to compel unanimity by keeping them in duress “without meat, drink, or fire — candle-light only excepted” (g).

(b) Black v. Jones, 6 Exch. 213. See Newton v. Boodle, 3 C. B. 795; Earl of Glasgow v. Hurlet and Campsie Alum Co., 3 H. L. Ca. 25.

(c) 13 Edw. 1, c. 31, s. 11; Money v. Leach, 3 Burr. 1742. See also C. L. Proc. Act, 1854, ss. 34-42.

(d) Ante, p. 70.

(e) See C. L. Proc. Act, 1860, s. 34; 3 & 4 Vict. c. 24, s. 2; 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29, s. 75; 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 30, s. 41; 10 Geo. 4, c. 44, s. 41; 16 & 17

Vict. c. 107, ss. 313-322. See also Gray on Costs, Chaps. i. and viii.-xiv.

(f) As to trying by a special jury, see R. G. Pr., rr. 44-47; C. L. Proc. Act, 1852, ss. 104-115; C. L. Proc. Act, 1854, ss. 58, 59.

(g) See C. L. Com., 2nd Rep., pp. 6-8.

A juror is sometimes withdrawn by the consent of both parties.

As to the effect of withdrawing a juror, see per Pollock, C. B., Gibbs v.

The verdict, having with the judicial assistance above indicated been delivered, is by the associate shortly minuted on the back of the record (h), after which the successful party (if not prevented by proceedings presently to be noticed) will be entitled to sign judgment (i), with a view to issuing execution thereon. And with respect to the time within which these steps may be taken, it is enacted, that "when a plaintiff or defendant has obtained a verdict in term, or in case a plaintiff has been nonsuited at the trial in or out of term, judgment may be signed (k) and execution issued thereon in fourteen days, unless the judge who tries the cause, or some other judge or the Court, shall order execution to issue at an earlier or later period, with or without terms" (l).

Signing
judgment.

Execution is founded upon a record, and is levied under the authority of a writ issued out of the Court in which the record is (m), and directed to the sheriff of the county wherein it is to be executed, the object being to obtain thereby, either directly or indirectly, satisfaction of the debt or damages for which judgment has been signed (n). The ordinary writs of execution are, 1. Fieri facias; 2. Elegit; 3. Capias ad satisfaciendum.

1. The writ of fieri facias commands the sheriff to cause to be made, of the goods of the judgment debtor, the sum recovered in the action, together with interest thereon from the date of the judgment being entered; and on the return day of the writ to have the same in court, together with the writ and Fieri facias.

Ralph, 14 M. & W. 805; per Lord Abinger, C. B., Harries v. Thomas, 2 M. & W. 37-38.

(h) This, when formally drawn up and indorsed on the record, is called the Postea.

(i) When the costs are taxed and inserted on the Postea, the final judgment is said to be signed: 1 Chitt. Arch. Prac. 11th ed., p. 521. This is done by the Master affixing an official seal to the Postea: Id. p. 523.

(k) Fewins v. Lethbridge, 4 H. & N. 418.

(l) R. G. Pr., r. 57; C. L. Proc. Act, 1852, s. 120.

(m) 2 Wms. Saund. 37 a (2).

(n) C. L. Proc. Act, 1852, s. 121.

The mode of proceeding to execution against companies and their shareholders will be found in Lindley on Partnership, Book II., Chap. 3, s. 4.

the manner in which it has been executed (o). Under this writ, the sheriff may seize all the goods and chattels, moneys, notes, cheques, bills, specialties, and securities for money (p) belonging to the defendant at the time of the writ being delivered to the sheriff, with the exception of wearing apparel (q), and (in a qualified degree) certain agricultural produce (r); the levy of goods and chattels, moreover, being made subject to the claim (if any) of the landlord of the judgment debtor for a year's rent (s), and to some other claims which need not here be particularised.

Elegit.

2. The writ of elegit has been much extended in its operation by the 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110 (t). It is employed to obtain satisfaction from the land as well as the goods of the judgment debtor, as may be seen from the form (u) of the writ, which recites the recovery of the judgment debt, and that the judgment creditor "chose to be delivered to him all the goods and chattels" of the judgment debtor in the sheriff's bailiwick,—“except his oxen and beasts of the plough (x), and also all such lands, tenements, rectories, tithes, rents, and hereditaments,” including those of copyhold tenure, as the same judgment debtor (or any trustee on his behalf) is in possession of or has disposing power over to exercise for his own benefit—on the day when the judgment was entered up or any time afterwards, until the debt and interest thereon

(o) See forms of the writ in Sched. to R. G. Pr., Nos. 1-6.

(p) As to charging Government Stocks, &c., in which the judgment debtor is interested, see 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110; 3 & 4 Vict. c. 82; Taylor v. Turnbull, 4 H. & N. 495.

(q) See 8 & 9 Vict. c. 127, s. 8; 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, s. 12. As to attachment of debts, see C. L. Proc. Act, 1854, ss. 61-67; Johnson v. Diamond, 11 Exch. 73; Holmes v. Tutton, 5 E. & B. 65; Tilbury v. Brown, 30 L. J., Q. B., 46; Baynard v. Simmons, 5 E.

& B. 59.

(r) 56 Geo. 3, c. 50; and see 14 & 15 Vict. c. 25, s. 2. As to property of bankrupts, see 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106.

(s) 8 Ann. c. 14, s. 1.

(t) This writ was first given by 13 Edw. 1, c. 18. The 29 Car. 2, c. 3, subsequently enlarged the effect of the above statute. See generally, as to the writ of elegit, the notes to Underhill v. Devereux, 2 Wms. Saund. 68.

(u) See R. G. Pr. Sched., Nos. 9-14.

(x) Keen v. Priest, 4 H. & N. 235.

should be liquidated ; and the writ then commands the sheriff to cause the above-mentioned goods and chattels to be delivered to the creditor at a reasonable price, and also all (y) the lands, &c., referred to in the writ (z).

As regards the goods and chattels upon which execution is to be levied under a writ of elegit, a jury must be empaneled to make inquisition of and appraise them ; and if their value be insufficient, then the lands are delivered over by the sheriff to the execution creditor (a). The writ, with the inquisition, is then returned to the Court out of which it issued.

3. The writ of capias ad satisfaciendum (b) commands the sheriff to take the body of a judgment debtor, and him safely keep, to satisfy the creditor the amount of the judgment debt. This mode of execution cannot be enforced when the judgment debt does not exceed 20*l.* exclusive of costs (c). It must, however, be borne in mind that certain classes of persons are privileged from arrest under this process (d).

Capias ad satisfaciendum.

Besides the above ordinary writs of execution, some others less frequent in practice must be enumerated.

The writ of levari facias issues with a view to obtaining satisfaction of the judgment debt out of the lands and chattels of the judgment debtor. Except in the case of outlawry, however, this writ has been almost wholly super-

Levari facias.

(y) Before the 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, only a moiety of the debtor's land was thus subject to execution. Estates tail, trust and other estates were also not liable under the writ of elegit, see 2 Wms. Saund. 11 (17).

(z) As to how the writ of elegit affects property purchased or mortgaged without notice, see 2 & 3 Vict. c. 11. See also the provisions of 23 & 24 Vict. c. 38, with regard to the necessity of registering the writ of execution or process on judgment, in order to bind a bona fide purchaser or mortgagee of estates of a judgment debtor.

(a) 2 Wms. Saund. 68 g.

(b) See the forms of the writ in Sched. to R. G. Pr. 15-22.

(c) 7 & 8 Vict. c. 96, s. 57. See 2 Wms. Saund. 68 b; Holbert v. Starkey, 4 H. & N. 125.

(d) As to privilege, see 1 Chitt. Arch. Pr., 11th ed., p. 682 et seq.

seded by that of elegit, and it need not therefore here be further noticed.

Extent.

The writ of extent is issued for the purpose of enforcing execution on behalf of the Crown. The practice and learning in regard to it, which cannot here be discussed, may be collected from the authorities below cited (e).

Execution upon revived judgment.

At any time within six years from the recovery of a judgment in a personal action, if the parties thereto are living, execution may issue thereon (f), "But where by reason either of lapse of time," "or of a change by death or otherwise of the parties entitled or liable to execution" (g), a revival of the judgment, before execution can issue upon it, becomes necessary, such revival may be effected under the provisions of the C. L. Proc. Act, 1852 (g), by suing out a writ of revivor or by suggestion made upon the roll.

When execution has been levied in any of the modes above indicated (h)—and its validity remains unquestioned—the final results of a personal action are, so far as may be practicable, attained, and the ordinary procedure therein is brought to a close.

5. Proceedings by Motion or in Error, subsequent to Verdict.

New trial.

If either plaintiff or defendant in an action be dissatisfied with the result of the trial, it is competent to him to move for a new trial, a rule absolute for which may be granted by the (e) See Edwards v. Reg. (in error), 9 Exch. 628; S. C., Id. 32, cited per Cur. Wright v. Mills, 4 H. & N. 491, 493, 494; 3 Bla. Com. p. 420; West on Extents; Manning Exch. Pr. Bk. 1.

(f) C. L. Proc. Act, 1852, s. 128.

(g) Id. ss. 128-131.

(h) Attachment of debt of garnishee may be made under C. L. Proc. Act, 1854, ss. 61-67. Jones v. Thompson, E. B. & R. 63; Dresser v. Johns, 6 C. B., N. S., 429; Innes v. The East India Company, 17 C. B. 351; Newman v. Rook, 4 C. B., N. S., 485; Turner v. Jones, 1 H. & N. 878; Hartley v. Shemwell, 1 B. & S. 1.

The Judge may exercise his discretion in refusing to interfere in proceedings to attach debts. See C. L. Proc. Act, 1860, ss. 28-31.

Court on any of the following grounds :—if evidence material to the verdict during the progress of the trial was either improperly received or rejected (i) ; if the Judge has misdirected the jury (k), or omitted to direct them at all (l) on some point of law relative to the case, or was disqualified by reason of pecuniary interest in the subject-matter before the Court (m) ; if the successful party (n), or officer of the Court (o), or the jury (p) have been guilty of gross misconduct ; if a mistake has been made in entering the verdict (q) ; or if the damages awarded by the jury be glaringly excessive (r) or palpably insufficient (s). It is also deemed good ground for requiring that the issues should be submitted to another jury, if it is made out that the verdict was obtained by ‘surprise’ (t),

(i) Doe d. Welsh v. Langfeld, 16 M. & W. 497 ; Hughes v. Hughes, 15 M. & W. 701 ; Crease v. Barrett, 1 Cr. M. & R. 909. See Cattlin v. Barker, 5 C. B. 201 ; Ferrand v. Milligan, 7 Q. B. 730 ; Bosanquet v. Shortridge, 4 Exch. 699 ; Stindt v. Roberts, 5 D. & L. 460.

(k) Per Maule, J., East Anglian R. C. v. Lythgoe, 10 C. B. 726 ; per Parke, B., Pennell v. Aston, 14 M. & W. 415 ; Huckman v. Fernie, 3 M. & W. 505 ; Elliott v. South Devon R. C., 2 Exch. 725 ; see Clarke v. Arden, 16 C. B. 227. See per Manafeld, C. J., Fentum v. Pocock, 5 Taunt., 195, 196.

As to new trial on the ground of improperly directing a nonsuit, see per Lord Lyndhurst, C. B., Alexander v. Barker, 2 Cr. & J. 133.

(l) Hadley v. Bazendale, 9 Exch. 341 ; Gee, app., Lancashire and Yorkshire R. C., resp., 6 H. & N. 211. See Robinson v. Glowow, 5 Bing. N. C. 166.

(m) Dimes v. Grand Junction Canal Co., 3 H. L. Ca. 759 ; and see Williams v. Great Western R. C., 3 H. & N. 869.

(n) Coster v. Merest, 2 B. & B. 272.

(o) Bentley v. Fleming, 3 D. & L. 23.

(p) Straker v. Graham, 4 M. & W. 721 ; per Lord Abinger, C. B., Morris v. Vivian, 10 M. & W. 140. See Standewick v. Hopkins, 2 D. & L. 502 ; Ramadge v. Ryan, 9 Bing. 333 ; Hall v. Poyser, 13 M. & W. 600 ; Allum v. Boulton, 9 Exch. 738 ; Vasie v. Delaval, 1 T. B. 11. See Cooling v. Great Northern R. C., 15 Q. B. 486 ; Cooksey v. Haynes, 27 L. J., Exch. 371.

(q) Roberts v. Hughes, 7 M. & W. 399 ; Raphael v. Bank of England, 17 C. B. 161.

(r) Creed v. Fisher, 9 Exch. 472. See Masters v. Barnwell, 7 Bing. 224 ; Price v. Severn, 7 Bing. 316, and cases there cited ; Rolin v. Steward, 14 C. B. 395.

(s) Richards v. Rose, 9 Exch. 218 ; Chambers v. Caulfield, 6 East, 244. See Apps v. Day, 14 C. B. 112 ; Tedd v. Douglas, 5 Jur., N. S., 1029 ; Mostyn v. Coles, 7 H. & N. 872 ; post, Bk. II., Chap. 6.

(t) Per Maule, J., Hoare v. Silverlock, 9 C. B. 22 ; Austin v. Evans, 2 M.

or that new evidence, discovered subsequent to the trial, is now available to the applicant, or that the verdict was procured and obtained by perjury and conspiracy (u), or was manifestly against the weight of evidence, or was perverse (x): and generally upon satisfying the Court that there has been a miscarriage of justice remediable by a new trial (y), it will be granted to the applicant who moves for it in time (z) either absolutely or upon such conditions as may seem equitable (a). It must always, however, be remembered, that whilst it is a principle with our Courts that failure of justice should be corrected and its perfect administration be secured (b), yet another important object, which legal tribunals must not lose sight of, "is that causes should be determined and determined finally" (c).

Appeal on motion for a new trial.

Important provisions with respect to motions for new trials have been introduced by the C. L. Proc. Act, 1854 (d), which, inter alia, enacts that upon the hearing of the motion the & Gr. 430; Edger v. Knapp, 5 M. & Gr. 753.

(u) Thurtell v. Beaumont, 1 Bing. 339.

(x) Hawkins v. Alder, 18 C. B. 640; Gurney v. Womersley, 4 E. & B. 133; Harrison v. Fane, 1 M. & Gr. 550; Honeyman v. Lewis, 23 L. J., Exch., 204. See C. L. Proc. Act, 1854, s. 1, ad fin.

(y) Williams v. Evans, 2 M. & W. 220; Allum v. Boulton, 9 Exch. 738; Honeyman v. Lewis, ubi supra; Fox v. Clifton, 9 Bing. 115; Benett v. Peninsular and Oriental Steam Boat Co., 16 C. B. 29; C. L. Proc. Act, 1854, s. 31.

(z) R. G. Pr., rr. 50-54; Harrison v. Great Northern R. Co., 11 C. B. 542; Watkins v. Packman, 14 C. B. 419; Black v. Jones, 6 Exch. 213.

As to costs of a new trial, see C. L. Proc. Act, 1854, s. 44; Evans v. Ro- binson 11 Exch. 40.

(a) In Hughes v. Hughes, 15 M. & W. 704, Alderson, B., says: "The granting a new trial, strictly speaking, is in the discretion of the Court: although the Court regulates its discretion as nearly as possible by the rules applicable to bills of exceptions." But see C. L. Proc. Act, 1854, s. 35.

(b) See per Lord Kenyon, C. J., Calcraft v. Gibbs, 5 T. R. 19; per Mansfield, C. J., Swinerton v. Marquis of Stafford, 3 Taunt. 232; Gibson v. Muskett, 4 M. & Gr. 160, 171.

(c) Per Willes, J., Great Northern R. Co. v. Mossop, 17 C. B. 140; citing the maxim, Ne lites sint immortales dum litantes sunt mortales.

(d) See ss. 31, 33, 35-42, 45; R. G. Pr., rr. 50-54. See Drayson v. Andrews, 10 Exch. 472; Gurney v. Womersley, 4 E. & B. 133; Evans v. Robinson, 11 Exch. 40.

Court may direct oral examination of witnesses and other evidence to be produced (e), and an appeal is given in certain cases from the ruling of the judges sitting in banc (f). Further, whenever a Court of Appeal may be thus referred to, it may give such judgment as ought to have been given in the Court below, and may adjudge payment of costs, and order restitution (g).

When the rule for a new trial is applied for, the motion is frequently conjoined with one to enter a verdict or nonsuit pursuant to leave reserved by the judge (h) at the trial; for the Court will sometimes see fit to grant the former in preference to allowing the latter course to be taken.

The object of moving for a venire or trial de novo (i) is the same as that of moving for a new trial. An important distinction, however, between an award of a venire de novo and a rule for a new trial appears to be, that the former is always founded upon some irregularity or miscarriage apparent upon the face of the record, whilst the latter is more commonly an interference by the Court in the discretionary exercise by it of a species of equitable jurisdiction for the purpose of relieving a party against a latent grievance (k). Thus, when claimable at all, a venire de novo can be claimed of right and unconditionally, as if it appears on the record that challenges to the jury have been improperly allowed or disallowed (l), or that the verdict is in itself imperfect (m), or when the damages are wrongly given with reference to novo.*

*Venire de

(e) C. L. Proc. Act, 1854, ss. 46-49.

(f) Sects. 34-42. See Withers v. Parker, 4 H. & N. 810; S. C., 5 Id. 725; Levy v. Green, 28 L. J., Q. B., 819.

There is no appeal from the judgment of the Court of Exchequer on a motion for a new trial in a revenue case: Att.-Gen. v. Sillem, 33 L. J., Ex., 92; S. C., in Dom. Proc., 4 New Rep., 29.

(g) C. L. Proc. Act, 1854, ss. 41, 42; and see C. L. Proc. Act, 1860, ss. 4-10.

(h) Ante, p. 201.

(i) C. L. Proc. Act, 1852, s. 105.

(k) Gould v. Oliver, 2 M. & Gr. 238, n.; per Alderson, B., Hughes v. Hughes, 15 M. & W. 704; Young v. Billiter, 8 H. L. Ca. 682.

(l) R. v. Edmonds, 4 B. & Ald. 471.

(m) William v. Lewis, 1 Wils. 48.

the breaches alleged (n), or when a mis-trial has occurred by a wrong person being placed on the jury at the trial of the cause (o).

A trial de novo may also issue from a Court of error if its decision on a bill of exceptions (p) is in favour of the party who has tendered the bill, and error may now at once be brought "upon an award of a trial de novo by any one of the superior Courts, or by the Court of error" (q).

Although the result of the trial be not disturbed by any of the proceedings already indicated, the successful plaintiff is not altogether sure of enjoying the fruits of his success. There yet remains to the defendant an opportunity of moving in arrest of judgment; whilst the plaintiff (r), on his part, if his adversary has secured the verdict at the trial, may apply to the Court for judgment non obstante veredicto; resort to a Court of error being also open to the defeated party.

Arrest of judgment.

Judgment will be arrested, when, upon the face of the record, it appears to the Court that the plaintiff has no right to recover.

Judgment
non obstante veredicto.

Judgment non obstante veredicto, on the other hand, is given by the Court where the defendant, by his pleading, has confessed the cause of action, whilst the matter which he has pleaded in avoidance is insufficient for the purpose (s). But if either plaintiff or defendant move the Court in the manner just specified, it is now competent "for the party, whose pleading is alleged to be defective, by leave of the Court, to suggest the existence of the omitted fact or facts, or other (n) Leach v. Thomas, 2 M. & W. 427; Gould v. Oliver, ubi sup. n. (k); Emblin v. Dartnell, 12 M. & W. 830.

(o) Doe d. Ashburnham v. Michael, 16 Q. B. 624; Muirhead v. Evans, 6 Exch. 447.

(p) Ante, p. 201.

(q) C. L. Proc. Act, 1854, s. 43.
See R. G. Pl., r. 24.

(r) Rand v. Vaughan, 1 Bing. N. C. 767; Reg. v. Darlington School, 6 Q. B. 682.

(s) As to when judgment non obstante and repleader are respectively appropriate, see per Abbott, C. J., Lambert v. Taylor, 4 B. & Cr. 152; ante, p. 161.

matter, which, if true, would remedy" (t) the defects, and the suggestion may then be pleaded to and tried in like manner as the issue in an ordinary action (u).

The proceeding to error is now a "step in the cause" (x), Proceedings in error. brought with a view to reversing the judgment previously entered up, and must be taken according to the provisions of the C. L. Proc. Acts (y). Error is either in law or in fact (z):—

Error in law may be maintained (a), if, on the face of the record, the judgment appears not to be the legal consequence of the pleadings—as where the declaration (b), by reason of any substantial defect therein, is insufficient to support the action; or, again, if the proceedings in other respects are shown on the face of the record to be erroneous—as where the execution awarded is not the legal consequence of the judgment, or where the cause below was coram non judice (c). Error in law.

Error in fact must be substantiated by affidavit (d) showing Error in fact. that the party against whom the judgment has been given (t) C. L. Proc. Act, 1852, s. 143; Manley v. Boycot, 2 E. & B. 46.

(u) See the C. L. Proc. Act, 1852, ss. 144, 145; R. G. Pr., r. 50.

(x) C. L. Proc. Act, 1852, s. 148. By this section the writ of error is abolished. "Error," says Lord Coke, "lieth when a man is grieved by any error in the foundation, proceeding, judgment, or execution. . . But without a judgment, or an award in the nature of a judgment, no writ of error doth lie . . . and that judgment must regularly be given by Judges of record, and in a Court of record." Co. Litt. 288. b.

(y) C. L. Proc. Act, 1852, ss. 146-167; C. L. Proc. Act, 1854, ss. 32, 36, 43. See R. G. Pr., rr. 64-69.

(z) See generally as to error, the notes to Jaques v. Caesar, 2 Wms.

Saund. 100.

(a) As to the Court in which error is to be tried, see 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 70; 1 Chitt. Arch. Pr. 11th ed., p. 549. The ultimate Court of appeal is the House of Lords.

The proceedings in error must be brought generally within six years after judgment is signed: C. L. Proc. Act, 1852, ss. 146, 147.

(b) When the declaration is insufficient to maintain the action, the error is called common; in other cases it is called special error.

(c) As to where error may be assigned instead of suggested and the mode of pleading, see C. L. Proc. Act, 1852, s. 152 ad fin.

(d) C. L. Proc. Act, 1852, s. 153.

was not properly before the Court—as, for instance, that, being an infant, he appeared by attorney (e).

If the grounds of error “appear frivolous, the Court or a judge upon summons may order execution to issue” (f) ; and if the proceedings in error are taken contrary to the agreement of parties (g) or against good faith, or in any case where they will not properly lie (h), a Court of error has power to quash them. Execution will not be “stayed or delayed by proceedings in error or supersedeas thereupon without the special order” of the Court or a judge, unless sufficient bail be given by the appellant as security to his adversary to prosecute the proceedings in error with effect, and also to satisfy and pay (if the said judgment be affirmed or the proceedings in error be discontinued by the plaintiff therein) such sum of money and costs as have been or may be adjudged due in respect of the judgment recovered, and all costs and damages to be awarded for the delaying of execution (i). The statutory provisions here referred to, together with the ample powers of amendment (k) which the Courts of law now possess, and the rules as to costs in error, protect, to a great extent, parties who have been successful at the trial from being on insufficient grounds deprived of the fair result thereof ; at the same time, to facilitate the correction of defects which have really occurred in a cause, it is enacted that Courts of error may in all cases “give such judgment and award such process as the Court from which error is brought ought to have done without regard to the party alleging error” (l).

(e) Jackson v. Marshall, 4 E. & B. 669. See Dick v. Tolhausen, 4 H. & N. 695.

(f) C. L. Proc. Act, 1852, s. 150. See R. G. Pl., r. 27.

(g) Garrard v. Tuck, 8 C. B. 258.

(h) C. L. Proc. Act, 1852, s. 156. 1 Chitt. Arch. Prac., 11th ed., p. 551.

(i) C. L. Proc. Act, 1852, s. 151 ; James v. Cochrane, 9 Exch. 552 ; R. G. Pr., r. 110.

(k) Wilkinson v. Sharland, 11 Exch. 33. This authority shows, that the record may be amended up to the day of the sitting in error.

(l) C. L. Proc. Act, 1852, s. 157.

As to restitution by writ of scire

Proceedings in error being thus applicable in those cases only where either party has committed such mistakes as above specified during the progress of the suit, there yet remains a possibility of injustice being done to a defendant against whom judgment has been given, by enforcing it when he has become possessed subsequently thereto of a good defence to the action. Under these circumstances such defence, whether legal (m) or equitable (n), is allowed to be set up by way of audita querelâ (o). The writ of audita querelâ, however, has been seldom employed in modern times (p), the object in view being more conveniently (q) attained by motion; and indeed a defendant, in order to avail himself of a writ of audita querelâ, must now procure a rule of Court or order of a judge (r) before it can be issued.

Audita querelâ.

SECT. II.—Suit in the County Court.

The practice of the county courts, as at present constituted, is regulated by various statutes, the more important of which are mentioned below (s), and by rules made in respect of all important particulars in pursuance of the Practice of the county court—how constituted.

facias after a reversal in error, see C. L. Proc. Act, 1852, s. 132.

(m) 3 Bla. Com., p. 406.

(n) C. L. Proc. Act, 1854, s. 84.

(o) "An audita querelâ is a writ to be delivered from an unjust judgment or execution by setting them aside for some injustice of the party that obtained them, which could not be pleaded in bar to the action:" Bac. Abr. tit. Aud. Quer. See Com. Dig. Aud. Quer. Turner v. Davies, 2 Wms. Saund. 137, n. and notes thereto, and 147, n. 1.

(p) Dearie v. Ker, 4 Exch. 82; Newton v. Rowe, 7 M. & G. 334 n. (a). See Williams v. Roberts, 1 L. M. & P.

331; Sutton v. Bishop, 4 Burr. 2283.

(q) Plerin v. Henshall, 10 Bing. 26.

(r) R. G. Pr., r. 79.

(s) 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95; 12 & 13 Vict. c. 101; 13 & 14 Vict. c. 61; 15 & 16 Vict. c. 54; 17 & 18 Vict. c. 16; 19 & 20 Vict. c. 108; 21 & 22 Vict. c. 74; 22 & 23 Vict. c. 57.

As to the jurisdiction of the county court generally, ante, pp. 59 et seq. There are many statutes in force which relate to the jurisdiction and practice of county courts in particular cases, as to which see Broom's Prac. C. C., 2nd ed., app. 2.

19 & 20 Vict. c. 108, s. 32. The general principles which govern the practice of the superior Courts of common law may also be applied at the discretion of the judges of the county courts to proceedings therein (t).

Plaint. The suit in a county court is commenced (u) by plaint, Summons. upon entry whereof a summons to appear is issued to the bailiff of the Court (x), to be by him served on the defendant ten clear days at least before the holding of the Court at which it is returnable (y). To the summons must be annexed a copy of the plaintiff's particulars of demand, in those cases where they are required (z).

Particulars of demand.
Course of pleading. There are no written pleadings in a suit in the county court; but if any one or more of certain defences are intended to be set up, notice thereof, unless the plaintiff consent to waive it, must be given to him. These defences are Infancy, Coverture, the Statute of Limitations, and discharge under any Statute relating to Bankrupts (a). All other defences are available to the defendant at the trial, whether by traverse or confession and avoidance, without any formal joinder of issue. When no jury has been impanneled, the judge himself determines matters as well of fact as of law; but a jury may be summoned on the requisition of either party to the suit, as matter of right, whenever the amount claimed exceeds £5; and in any case where such amount does not exceed £5, the judge may, on the application of either party, order the action to be tried by a jury (b).

The hearing. Assuming that both parties to the suit appear, the judge, either with or without a jury, as the case may be, proceeds (t) See Chinn v. Bullen, 8 C. B. 447.

(u) 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, s. 59, and r. 33.

(x) R. 11.

(y) 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, s. 59, and r. 44. As to the mode of service generally, see Broom's Prac. C. C., 2nd ed., p. 122.

(z) See rules 35-37; Howard v. Remer, 2 E. & B. 915; Smith v. Douglas, 16 C. B. 31.

(a) 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, s. 76.

(b) Id. s. 70; and see rr. 77-80.

to hear the cause. If neither counsel nor attornies attend, the judge must endeavour to elicit from the parties and their witnesses (whose attendance is procured by summons (c)), such facts as will enable him to determine the question or questions in dispute. When the case is closed on both sides, the judge, if unassisted by a jury, decides both on fact and law; but, if assisted by a jury, he will direct them in point of law, whilst they decide upon the facts. Judgment is then given for the plaintiff or defendant—unless, indeed, the former be nonsuited—and entered on the minutes of the Court. The judge also directs the mode of payment (which in certain cases may be by instalments), of any sum to which he may find the plaintiff entitled (d). The costs of the action abide the event, unless the judge shall otherwise order, and execution “may issue for the recovery of any such costs in like manner as for any debt adjudged in the said Court” (e).

Judgment.

The judgment, when entered up (f), may be enforced by execution against the goods, or in certain cases by the commitment of the defaulting party. Execution against the goods is leviable by writ of fieri facias; and it may be worth notice, that the wearing apparel and bedding of the judgment debtor or his family, and the tools and implements of his trade, to the value of £5, are protected from seizure (g).

Execution

—against the goods,

Execution against the person may be obtained on sum-

—against the person.

(c) 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, ss. 85-87.

418.

(d) 19 & 20 Vict. c. 108, s. 45; and r. 110.

(g) 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, ss. 94, 96; 8 & 9 Vict. c. 127, s. 8.

(e) 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, s. 88.

When an order has been made for the debt to be paid by instalments, execution will not issue till after default in payment of an instalment; and it may then issue for the whole sum due: Id. s. 95.

With respect to execution generally, see Broom's Prac. C. C., 2nd ed., Pt. 2, c. 6. An action in a superior Court does not lie on a judgment of a county court: Berkeley v. Elderkin, 1 E. & B. 805; Austin v. Mills, 9 Exch. 238. See Moreton v. Holt, 10 Exch. 707.

(f) Pewins v. Lethbridge, 4 H. & N.

mons, where default is made in complying with the order of the judge for payment of the money recovered (h).

New trial.

It is competent to either party, dissatisfied with the verdict or decision of the case, to apply for a new trial, which the judge may in his discretion refuse, or order upon such terms as he shall think reasonable (i).

Proceedings
by certiorari.

The mode of removing a cause from the jurisdiction of the county court to that of a superior Court, is by writ of certiorari (k). The right of so removing a cause exists at common law, but conditions have been annexed by statute to the exercise of the right in the cases of county court litigation. By the 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, a cause may be thus removed when the debt or damage claimed exceeds £5, by leave of a judge of one of the superior Courts, if the cause shall appear to him proper to be so removed, and on such terms as he shall deem fit to impose (l). But even if the claim in the county court do not exceed £5, it may, under the 19 & 20 Vict. c. 108 (m), be removed by certiorari to a superior Court, if such Court or judge shall deem it desirable that the cause be tried there, and if the party applying (h) See 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, ss. 98, 99 (as modified by 22 & 23 Vict. c. 57, ss. 101, 103).

The power of a County Court Judge to imprison on default, is barely touched upon in the text, as the expedience of maintaining it is now under the consideration of the legislature.

That part of the 102nd sect. of the 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, which enacted that no protection granted by any Court of Bankruptcy or Insolvency should be available to discharge a defendant committed by order of a County Court Judge, was repealed by 19 & 20 Vict. c. 108, s. 2; Copeman v. Rose, 7 E. & B. 679.

(i) Rules 128, 129; Jones v. Jones,

5 D. & L. 628; Robinson v. Lenaghan, 2 Exch. 337; Sparrow v. Reed, 5 D. & L. 633; Ely v. Moule, 5 Exch. 918; Mossop v. Great Northern R. Co., 16 C. B. 580; In re Carter, 24 L. J., Q. B., 141.

(k) See Broom's Prac. C. C., 2nd ed., Pt. 3, Chap. 5.

As to costs where the action is removed by certiorari, see Perry v. Bennett, 14 C. B., N. S., 402.

(l) S. 90; 13 & 14 Vict. c. 61, s. 16; Box v. Green, 9 Exch. 503; Symonds v. Dimsdale, 6 D. & L. 17; Munjean v. Wheatley, 6 Exch. 88, 98; Moreton v. Holt, 10 Exch. 707.

(m) Sect. 38.

for the writ, shall give the security required by the Act (n), and comply with the conditions imposed by such judge in the exercise of his discretion. One of the usual grounds for granting the writ is, that difficult questions of law will arise in the suit (o).

If either party to a suit in the county court, when the claim is for a sum between £20 and £50, or when jurisdiction is given by agreement (unless the right of appeal is specially excluded also by agreement (p)), is dissatisfied with the determination or direction of the said Court in point of law, or upon the admission or rejection of any evidence (q), such party may appeal from the same to any of the superior Courts of common law at Westminster (r). Before, however, the appeal is allowed to be prosecuted, sufficient security must be given by the appellants (s).

Appeal to superior Court.

In the foregoing pages has been exhibited a brief sketch of the ordinary course of procedure connected with a suit in the county court,—a subject which must be pursued in detail by reference to Books of Practice. Here the present chapter is brought conveniently to a close, and I shall next proceed to inquire as to some Extraordinary Remedies permitted to an aggrieved party, or afforded under peculiar circumstances by our Courts of law.

(n) See Re Young v. Brompton, &c., Waterworks Co., 1 B. & S. 675.

(o) See Rees v. Williams, 7 Exch. 51; Parker v. Bristol and Exeter R. Co., 6 Exch. 184; Longbottom v. Longbottom, 8 Exch. 203, 208.

(p) 17 & 18 Vict. c. 16, s. 1.

(q) Cawley v. Furnell, 12 C. B. 291; East Anglian R. Co. v. Lythgoe, 10 C. B. 726; S. C., 2 L. M. & P. 221; Templeman v. Haydon, 12 C. B. 507; Cuthbertson v. Parsons, Id. 304; Clarke v. Stancliffe, 7 Exch. 439. See Foster v. Green, 6 H. & N. 793.

(r) 13 & 14 Vict. c. 61, s. 14, as altered by 15 & 16 Vict. c. 54, s. 2.

See 19 & 20 Vict. c. 103, s. 68; Harris v. Dreesman, 9 Exch. 485; Mayer v. Burgess, 4 E. & B. 655; In re Hacking v. Lee, 29 L. J., Q. B., 204; London and North Western R. Co. v. Dunham, 18 C. B. 826.

(s) 13 & 14 Vict. c. 61, s. 14; see rr. 139-150; Daniels v. Charsley, 11 C. B. 739.

As to costs on appeal, see P. & N. C. C. Pr., 5th ed., 190.

As to the appeal from a judgment in respect of actions of replevin, proceedings in interpleader, and the recovery of small tenements, see 19 & 20 Vict. c. 103, s. 68.

CHAPTER V.

EXTRAORDINARY REMEDIES.

BESIDES suit in a Superior Court of common law, or in the County Court, there are other remedies of an "extra-judicial or eccentric" (a) character, which are permitted in certain cases, and may here be treated of under the title of "Extraordinary Remedies." These are applicable for the redress of divers injuries which are "of such a nature that some of them furnish, and others require a more speedy remedy than can be had in the ordinary forms of justice" (a).

Extraordinary remedies—how classified.

A wrong may, in certain cases, be redressed, or its continuance be prevented: I. By the act of the party injured (b); II. By the mere operation of law, independently of the ordinary mode of procedure; III. By the exercise of the extraordinary powers of the Court (c).

Self defence.

I. Under the first of the above three classes falls the remedy by self-defence, which is founded on the right derived to us from the law of nature to repel force by force. But although the law permits this to be done in certain cases, it behoves one who thus undertakes his own protection, or that of his dependents, not to overstep the

(a) 3 Bla. Com., p. 3.

(b) As to which see Evans's Decis. of Id. Mansfield, vol. 2, pp. 122-128.

(c) According to ancient authorities, under the head of Extraordinary Remedies should be included accord and arbitration. Of which the former is defined to be "a satisfaction agreed upon between the party injuring and the party injured, which, when performed, is a bar of all actions upon this account:" 3 Bla. Com., p. 15. Arbitration is generally the "judgment or decree of persons elected by the parties to arbitrate of the things submitted to them:" Com. Dig. Arbitrament, (A). But see C. L. Proc. Act, 1854, ss. 317.

bounds of moderation, nor use force exceeding in degree what may be necessary for effecting the end in view ; for, by so doing, he may perchance constitute himself an aggressor (d). Nor is the licence thus conceded restricted to a defence of the person merely ; for the rightful owner, in peaceable possession of property, may defend such possession by force, and will be therein justified (e).

Recaption is a remedy in certain cases given to a man Recaption. when he has been wrongfully deprived of his goods by another. "If a man takes my goods and carries them into his own land, I may justify my entry into the said land to take my goods again ; for they came there by his own act" (f). But if it cannot be shown that my own goods so came there, the mere fact of their being on another man's land will not justify my entering thereon and repossessing myself of my goods (g). If, however, they are found on a common, in a fair, or at a public inn, it is laid down that they may be lawfully re-seized by the rightful owner (h).

Besides the justification thus in certain cases afforded to one who enters upon the premises of another to repossess himself of goods tortiously placed there, parties may similarly right themselves, without resorting to law, under some other circumstances : for example, in the case of fruit dropping from one man's tree on to the land of another, or of trees themselves falling thereon. In such case the owner of the fruit or of the trees may justify entering his neighbour's land to recover his property on the ground of accident (i).

(d) See 3 Bla. Com., p. 4 ; 1 Selw. N. P., 12th ed., pp. 32 et seq.

(e) Judgm., R. v. Wilson, 3 Ad. & E. 825.

(f) Vin. Abr. Trespass, I. (a) ; Burridge v. Nicholetta, 6 H. & N. 383, 392.

(g) Per Parke, B., Patrick v. Colerick, 3 M. & W. 486 ; Anthony v. Haney, 8 Bing. 186.

(h) 3 Bla. Com. p. 4 ; per Pollock, C. B., Burridge v. Nicholetta, 6 H. & N. 389. See Earl of Bristol v. Wilmore, 1 B. & C. 514.

(i) Per Tindal, C. J., Anthony v. Haney, 8 Bing. 192, commenting on Millen v. Hawery, Latch. 13 ; and Vin. Abr. Trespass, H., a. 2., and L., a ; Webb v. Beavan, 3 Scott, N. R., 937, n. 15. As to recovery of loppings

This natural right of recaption, as it has been called (k), may justify an assault by the owner of goods to repossess himself of them when wrongfully in the possession of another (l).

Eviction.

An entry by the lawful owner upon lands and tenements of which another is in possession without right, is also in some cases permitted. There is no doubt that where one has taken or holds possession wrongfully of land, the lawful owner may make a peaceable entry thereon (m), and, after notice, may eject with no unnecessary violence the tenant in possession. In Newton v. Harland (n), an important point was raised in connection with the subject now before us, which, after three trials of the cause, and various arguments in banc, cannot yet be considered as finally and satisfactorily settled. The broad question there discussed was, whether a landlord is liable in trespass who forcibly enters upon the demised premises, and ejects a tenant holding over after the expiration of his term. It is clear that a tenant holding over cannot treat the landlord who enters peaceably as a trespasser; and if a landlord so enters, he may, after notice, eject with no unnecessary violence the tenant in possession, because the one is lawfully in possession, and the other, by continuing on the land after notice, is a trespasser. And notwithstanding some difference of opinion (o) upon the subject, it seems that, in an action of trespass, "it is a perfectly good justification to say that the plaintiff was in possession of the land against the will of the defendant, who which necessarily fall on to the lands of another, see Yr Bk. 6 Edw. 4, fo. 1^s, 19, and Millen v. Hawery, ubi supra.

(k) 3 Bla. Com., p. 4.

(l) Blade v. Higgs, 10 C. B., N. S., 713; Smith v. Wright, 6 H. & N. 821. See Chambers v. Miller, 13 C. B., N. S., 125.

(m) Per Lord Kenyon, C. J., Taylor v. Cole, 3 T. R. 295, cited per Lord Denman, C. J., Harvey v. Brydges, 1

Exch. 263. See judgment, R. v. Wilson, 3 Ad. & E. 824. As to what constitutes eviction, see judgment, Upton v. Townend, 17 C. B. 30; Furnivall v. Grove, 8 C. B., N. S., 496.

(n) 1 M. & Gr. 644.

(o) See Newton v. Harland, supra; per Cresswell, J., Davis v. Burrell, 10 C. B. 825; per Parke, B., and Alderson, B., Harvey v. Brydges, 14 M. & W. 437; S. C., 1 Exch. 261.

was owner, and that he entered upon it accordingly, even though in so doing a breach of the peace was committed" (p).

Again; subject to the condition that no riot be committed by the act, a nuisance (q) may be abated, i. e. removed by the party injured thereby, whether it be a private nuisance—such as the obstruction of an individual's ancient lights—or a public nuisance,—as where a gate is placed unlawfully across the king's highway (r). It has been held, indeed, that notice must, under certain circumstances, be given, prior to abating a private nuisance, to the party on whose land it exists. Various authorities bearing upon this point are cited and reviewed in Jones v. Williams (s), where Parke, B., says,—“It is clear that if the plaintiff himself was the original wrongdoer, by placing the filth (which was the nuisance in question) upon the locus in quo, it might be removed by the party injured without any notice to the plaintiff; and so, possibly, if by his default in not performing some obligation incumbent on him—for that is his own wrong also; but if the nuisance was levied by another, and the defendant succeeded to the possession of the locus in quo afterwards, the authorities are in favour of the necessity of a notice being given to him to remove before the party aggrieved can take the law into his own hands.” Further, the Court intimated an opinion that “it might be necessary—in some cases where there was such immediate danger to life or health as to render it unsafe to wait—to remove without notice.” In Perry v. Fitzhove (t), some material points of private nuisance.

Abatement

(p) Per Parke, B., Harvey v. Brydges, 14 M. & W. 442; judgm., Blades v. Higgs, 10 C. B., N. S., 721. See Pollen v. Brewer, 7 C. B., N. S., 371.

(q) Post, Bk. III. Chap. 3.

(r) Judgm., Mayor of Colchester v. Brooke, 7 Q. B. 377, citing 3 Bla.

Com., p. 5.

(s) 11 M. & W. 176; and see Baten's case, 9 Rep. 53 b, 54 b, Penruddock's case, 5 Rep. 100 b.; Earl of Lonsdale v. Nelson, 2 B. & C. 302; Morrice v. Baker, 3 Bulst. 198; Arlett v. Ellis, 7 B. & C. 346.

(t) 8 Q. B. 757 (with which acc.

in reference to the subject now under consideration were determined. The action there was in trespass; and the main question presented for discussion was, whether the defendant could lawfully pull down the plaintiff's dwelling-house, he and his family being in it at the time, and the dwelling-house in question having been wrongfully erected upon a place over which the defendant had a right of common, which was thus infringed? In determining this question the Court observed, that a person who is injured by a private nuisance may, as a general rule, abate it; and within this rule the case of a commoner is included, so that he may abate a nuisance which interferes with his right, so far as may be necessary for its exercise. Nor does the nature of the building which may obstruct the exercise of the right seem material. A house may be pulled down just as much as a barn or any other building. Does, then, the fact that individuals are in the house at the time in question, render the act of pulling it down unlawful? Reasoning by analogy from the law of distress, it seems to do so. A horse on which a man is riding, or tools which he is using, cannot be distrained, on account of the imminent risk which there would be of a breach of the peace taking place if such a distress were permitted (u); and surely, it was argued, the risk of a breach of the peace is much more imminent in the case of pulling down a house in which persons actually are (x). An act done under such circumstances would be specially calculated to excite violence; and the law will not permit any man to pursue his remedy at such risk.

The decision just adverted to, which is one of some importance, has been commented upon, but never overruled.

Jones v. Jones, 1 H. & C. 1, 6; 649.

Dimes v. Petley, 15 Q. B. 256, 283;

Dawson v. Wilson, 11 Q. B. 890.

(u) Field v. Adams, 12 Ad. & E.

(x) See Knapp v. London, Chatham, and Dover R. Co., 2 H. & C. 212.

No very general principle, however, can safely be deduced from it. It certainly would not be true to say that the rightful owner of land could not justify the forcible expulsion from it of a mere trespasser who had taken possession, or the pulling down of a house wrongfully built upon it by such a trespasser. It cannot be, that a mere stranger acquires a title by intrusion, except where his possession has continued during the period prescribed by the Statutes of Limitation. In such a case the owner of the soil may enter, and, with a view to ejecting the tenant, pull down any house which he may have erected there, although he be inhabiting it at the time (y).

In the case of Perry v. Fitzhove, it will be found that the plea of justification did not contain any averment of notice to the plaintiff previous to the alleged trespass. If there be such notice, that decision will not avail as a precedent: for there is a wide distinction between the case of parties suddenly coming to a dwelling-house in actual occupation, and without notice or demand forcibly pulling it down, and the case in which the occupier has had previous notice, and has been requested to remove the building, but has persisted in remaining in the house with his family in defiance of the notice. In Darries v. Williams (z), it was expressly held, that where a house has been wrongfully built upon a common, and obstructs the enjoyment of the right of common, a commoner may, after notice and request to the plaintiff to remove the house, pull it down, although the plaintiff is actually inhabiting it and present therein.

In regard to the abating of a public nuisance, it is laid down (a), that "if a new gate be erected across the public highway, which is a common nuisance, any of the king's subjects passing that way may cut it down and destroy

Abatement of public nuisance.

(y) Burling v. Read, 11 Q. B. 904;
Darison v. Wilson, Id. 890.

(z) 16 Q. B. 546.

(a) 3 Bla. Com., p. 5.

it." The cases below referred to (b), however, show that to justify a private individual in abating on his own authority such a nuisance, it must appear that it does him a special injury; and he can only interfere with it as far as may be necessary to exercise his right of passing along the highway with reasonable convenience, and not because the obstruction happens to be there.

Distress.

Another "case in which," says Blackstone, "the law allows a man to be his own avenger, or to minister redress to himself, is that of distraining cattle (c) or goods for non-payment of rent or other duties; or distraining another's cattle damage feasant, that is, doing damage or trespassing upon his land" (d). The right of distress is also given to enforce the recovery of other "duties besides those in the nature of debt;—for example, assessments and rates under special Acts of Parliament" (e). Into the mode of enforcing a remedy by distress in any of these cases, it is not the object of this work minutely to enter (f).

Remedies
by operation of law.

II. Remedies by the mere operation of law—independent of the ordinary mode of procedure—are afforded when parties are so peculiarly circumstanced that for some reason they cannot appeal through the usual channels of justice for redress; and "the benignity of the law is such as, when to preserve the principles and grounds of law it depriveth a man of his remedy without his own fault, it will rather put

(b) Dimes v. Pelley, 15 Q. B. 276; Bridge v. Grand Junction R. Co., 3 M. & W. 244; Davies v. Mann, 10 M. & W. 546; Mayor of Colchester v. Brooke, 7 Q. B. 339; Bateman v. Bluck, 18 Q. B. 870; Roberts v. Rose, 33 L. J., Ex., 1.

(c) Keen v. Priest, 4 H. & N. 236.

(d) 3 Bla. Com., p. 6.

(e) Per Lord Mansfield, C. J., Hall v. Harding, 4 Burr. 2426. To this right is allied that of seizing a heriot on behalf of the lord, and a waif, wreck, or estray by the person entitled to it: 3 Bla. Com., p. 15.

(f) See Woodf. L. & T., 8th ed., Bk. 2, Chap. 11.

The distinction between the "old common law distresses, which were in nature of a nomine prenie, to compel payment;" and such distresses, "when the things distrained may immediately be sold by way of satisfaction" or execution, is pointed out by Lord Mansfield in Hutchins v. Chambers, 1 Burr. 579.

him in a better degree and condition than in a worse"(g).

These remedies are :

1. By retainer—when a creditor is made executor or administrator to his debtor ; under which circumstances the personal representative may retain out of the assets of the deceased the debt due to himself, in preference to paying other creditors whose debts are of equal degree with his own (h).

Retainer.

2. By remitter—"where he who hath the true property or jus proprietatis in lands, but is out of possession thereof, and hath no right to enter without recovering possession in an action, hath afterwards the freehold cast upon him by some subsequent, and of course defective, title. In this case he is remitted, or sent back by the operation of law to his ancient and more certain title" (i).

Remitter

III. As a general rule, our Courts will not interfere on motion to adjudicate between litigating parties upon rights which may by action at law be duly investigated (k). A motion indeed is very often ancillary or in some manner incidental to a pending suit—it may arise out of—but cannot ordinarily be used as a substitute for—the remedy by action. To this rule there are, however, some exceptions. Thus, an attorney, being an officer of the Court and in that character amenable to its surveillance, may sometimes be compelled by motion in a summary way to do that, for the not doing of which an action would have lain, and he may also sometimes on motion be punished for negligence (l).

Remedial process afforded by the Courts. Motion.

(g) Bac. Max., reg. 9.

(h) 1 Wms. Saund. 333, n. 6 ; De Tastet v. Shaw, 1 B. & Ald. 664.

(i) 3 Bla. Com., p. 19. See Doe d. Daniel v. Woodroffe, 2 H. L. Ca. 811 ; S. C., 15 M. & W. 769 ; 10 M. & W. 608.

(k) But see C. L. Proc. Act, 1860, s. 14, with regard to summary jurisdiction in certain interpleader proceedings.

(l) Long v. Orsi, 18 C. B. 610 ; Cox v. Leech, 1 C. B. N. S. 617 ; Meggs v. Binns, 2 Ring. N. C. 625 ; Hartins v. Harwood, 4 Exch. 503 ; Cooper v. Stephenson, 21 L. J., Q. B., 292 ; Tharvatt v. Trevor, 7 Exch. 161 ; and cases cited Broom's Prac. vol. 1, pp. 114 et seq.

The jurisdiction exercised by the Courts in such cases depends upon the character assumed by the party against whom a complaint is put forth, so that it has been repeatedly held that the Court will not interfere summarily to compel payment of money or the restitution of deeds detained by an attorney, unless the deeds or monies were received by him in the character of attorney, or whilst acting as such for the applicant; "where," says Lord Tenterden, C. J. (m), "an attorney is employed in a matter wholly unconnected with his professional character, the Court will not interfere in a summary way to compel him to execute faithfully the trust reposed in him (n). But where the employment is so connected with his professional character as to afford a presumption that his character formed the ground of his employment by the client, there the Court will exercise this jurisdiction." In Re Hilliard (o), Coleridge, J., observes "that the Court does not interfere merely with a view of enforcing contracts, on which actions might be brought, in a more speedy and less expensive mode; but with a view to securing honesty in the conduct of its officers, in all such matters as they undertake to perform or see performed, when employed as such, or because they are such officers."

To punish, "by attachment, misconduct or disobedience in its officers" would seem to be the main object for which the

(m) Re Aikin, 4 B. & Ald. 49; Ex parte Bodenham, 8 Ad. & B. 959; Re Lord Cardross, 5 M. & W. 545.

The Courts will, in some cases, on equitable principles, interfere between an attorney and his articulated clerk, to order that the premium paid by the latter be refunded wholly or in part: Ex parte Hayley, 9 B. & C. 621; Ex parte Fisher, 1 Chit. R. 694; Ex parte Frankerd, 3 B. & Ald. 257; In re Thompson, 1 Exch. 864.

(n) In Re Blake, 30 L. J., Q. B., 32,

Cockburn, C. J., states the rule adverted to supra thus broadly, "That when an attorney is shown to have been guilty of gross fraud, although it may not be such a fraud as may make him subject to criminal proceedings, and although the fraud was not committed by him while the relation of attorney and client was subsisting, or in his character of attorney," his misconduct will be summarily punished.

(o) 2 D. & L. 219.

Court interferes on motion (p) in the class of cases referred to. Indeed, the jurisdiction of a Court of law on motion, not merely over its officers, but generally, is essentially regulated by its discretion, in the exercise whereof an extraordinary remedy will sometimes be extended to an applicant, in pursuance of the great principle, that "where there is a right there is a remedy;"—sometimes it will be refused, viz., where private convenience is made to bend to general considerations of expediency or motives of policy.

The extraordinary jurisdiction exercised by our legal tribunals in cases other than those above alluded to, is for the most part: 1, by writ of mandamus; 2, by writ of injunction; 3, by writ of prohibition; 4, by proceedings in the nature of a writ of quo warranto; 5, by writ of certiorari; 6, on interpleader; 7, by summary proceedings for the recovery of possession of small tenements; 8, by proceedings for the specific delivery of chattels; 9, by criminal information; 10, by writ of habeas corpus.

1. The writ of mandamus is termed a high prerogative; Mandamus, writ (q) issuing in the Queen's name out of the Court of Queen's Bench on special application made to it by motion. The writ commands those to whom it is directed to perform some specified duty (r). It is granted on the oath of the party injured, in all cases where he "hath a right to have anything done, and hath no other specific means of compelling its performance" (s); and also in some cases where the method of redress provided by the law is tedious or

(p) See Thompson v. Gordon, 15 M. & W. 610; Ex parte Clifton, 5 D. P. C. 218; Duncan v. Richmond, 7 Taunt. 891; Collins v. Johnson, 16 C. B. 589; Guilford v. Sims, 13 C. B. 871. See R. G. Pr., r. 8; Mew v. Lloyd, 2 C. B., N. S., 409.

(q) As to the meaning of the term "prerogative" as applied to the writ of Mandamus, see Tapping on Manda- mus, p. 4; per Lord Mansfield, C. J., R. v. Cowle, 2 Burr. 855; R. v. Heathcote, 10 Mod. 54.

(r) 3 Bla. Com., p. 110.

(s) Ex parte Bird, 28 L. J., Q. B., 223. See per Martin, B., Mayor of Rochester v. Reg., 27 L. J., Q. B., 434 (in Error); S. C., 7 E. & B. 910.

incomplete (t); the Court, however, will refuse to exert its extraordinary powers of redress by mandamus, where the ordinary remedy by action at law is adequate to enforce the legal right in question (u). And although a mandamus will be granted "when that has not been done which a statute orders to be done," it will not be allowed to go "for the purpose of undoing what has been done" (x).

The proceeding by mandamus appears indeed to have been "originally confined in its operation to a very limited class of cases affecting the administration of public affairs; such as the election of corporate officers, the restoration of officers improperly removed, the compelling inferior courts to proceed in matters within their jurisdiction, or public officers to perform duties (y) imposed upon them by common law or by statute, as to make a rate and the like" (z). In more recent times, however, the applicability of the remedy in question has been extended, not merely to the cases first above mentioned, but to some others. In the course of modern legislation, no session of Parliament occurs in which Acts of Parliament do not pass for making railways, forming docks, building bridges, improving towns, and for carrying out an infinite variety of public works, for the most part to be done by joint-stock corporations or companies for the benefit of (t) See per Sir W. Pollett, arguing, Veley v. Burder, 12 Ad. & E. 266, citing R. v. Bishop of Chester, 1 T. B. 404; Frost v. Mayor, &c., of Chester, 5 E. & B. 531; and R. v. Marquis of Stafford, 3 T. B. 652. See Dr. Askew's case, Burr. 2188-9; R. v. St. Katherine's Dock Co., 4 B. & Ad. 360; R. v. Severn and Wye R. Co., 2 B. & Ald. 646, commented on per Lord Denman, C. J., Reg. v. Gamble, 11 Ad. & E. 72.

(u) Reg. v. Hull and Selby R. Co., 6 Q. B. 70; Reg. v. Hopkins, 1 Q. B. 161; Reg. v. Chapter of St. Peter's, Exeter, 12 Ad. & E. 512; Reg. v. Mayor, &c., of Oxford, 6 Ad. & E. 340; Reg. v. Bristol and Exeter R. Co., 3 Railw. Cas. 777. See Moffatt v. Dickson, 13 C. B. 543; Ex parte Overseers of Downton, 8 E. & B. 856; Reg. v. Commissioners of Southampton, 1 B. & S. 5.

(x) Per Lord Campbell, C. J., Ex parte Nash, 15 Q. B. 95.

(y) See Mayor of Rochester v. Reg., supra, n. (s); Reg. v. Mainwaring, &c., B. & E. 474.

(z) C. L. Com., 2nd Rep., p. 40.

shareholders. Now in almost every Act of this kind, provisions are to be found, which direct that the company shall do certain works for the benefit of individuals, ex. gr., "making communications between lands intersected by works authorised by the Acts, substituting new buildings for others which have been necessarily removed, making roads and communications in lieu of old ones blocked up or injured," and various other works of a similar character (a). In the event of non-compliance with these enactments, the individual who suffers detriment therefrom may resort to the remedy of mandamus.

Further, the Court of Queen's Bench will in general exercise control over inferior courts by mandamus, when the latter, having jurisdiction, refuse to act (b); but the writ is never granted on the ground that in any particular case the Court below has come to an unjust or improper conclusion (c). It is also sometimes issued in aid of legal proceedings, as by ordering that a creditor of a company should be at liberty to inspect the register of the shareholders with a view to his issuing execution against them (d)—or by commanding a clerk of a County Court to issue execution after judgment recovered (e),—or it may issue to the mayor and (a) C. L. Com., 2nd Rep., p. 40, where the reader will find the former practice relating to mandamus described.

(b) Reg. v. Brown, 7 E. & B. 757.

(c) Reg. v. Justices of Worcestershire, 3 E. & B. 477; Surgis v. Joy, 2 E. & B. 740; Reg. v. Welch, 2 E. & B. 357; Reg. v. Archbishop of Canterbury, 11 Q. B. 483; Reg. v. Fletcher, 2 E. & B. 279. See Ex parte Mawby, 3 E. & B. 718.

The 11 & 12 Vict. c. 44, s. 5, has provided a procedure by rule, which may be employed instead of that by mandamus, for the purpose of determining any question as to the legality or illegality of any official act, which a justice of the peace may have refused to perform: Reg. v. Deverell, 3 E. & B. 374; Reg. v. Justices of Bristol, Id. 479, note.

(d) Reg. v. Derbyshire, &c., Co., 3 E. & B. 784; Reg. v. Harrison, 9 Q. B. 794.

(e) Reg. v. Fletcher, 2 E. & B. 279.

When it is doubtful whether the act to be done in pursuance of a mandamus issued to a county court judge would not subject him to an action, the rule will not be granted: Reg. v. Dowling, 2 E. & B. 204.

assessors of a borough commanding them to revise the burgess list (f).

Return to the writ.

It may be observed, that the writ, in the first instance, commands the party to whom it is addressed to do the act required, or to make a return thereto, by showing cause why he does not do it (g) ; and unless he does the act or succeeds in quashing the writ as being insufficient on the face of it, he must proceed in answer to the writ either by plea or demurrer,—but if judgment is given against him, the Court then awards a peremptory mandamus, and, in cases of private injury, damages and costs (h).

When a rule is applied for, asking that a writ in the alternative shall thus issue, such a rule may be nisi only, or may be absolute in the first instance, and, if the Court shall think fit, it “ may bear teste on the day of its issuing, and may be made returnable forthwith, whether in term or in vacation ” (i).

A peremptory writ of mandamus may also issue after judgment recovered in an action of mandamus, founded upon the C. L. Proc. Act, 1854 (k). When under this Statute, “ judgment shall be given for the plaintiff that a mandamus do issue, it shall be lawful for the Court in which such judgment is given, if it shall see fit, besides issuing execution in the ordinary way for the costs and damages,” (in those cases where they are claimed in addition to the writ of mandamus)

(f) Reg. v. Mayor of Rochester, 7 E. & B. 910.

(g) See Reg. v. Commissioners of Southampton, 1 B. & S. 5.

(h) As to the costs of these proceedings, see Reg. v. Justices of Surrey, 9 Q. B. 37 ; Reg. v. Harden, 1 B. C. C. 214 ; Reg. v. South Eastern R. C., 3 H. L. Ca. 471.

(i) C. L. Proc. Act, 1854, s. 76. By s. 77, the provisions of the C. L. Proc. Act, “ so far as they are applicable, shall apply to the pleadings and proceedings upon a prerogative writ of mandamus.” The other statutes, by which proceedings by mandamus are regulated, are 4 Anne, c. 16 ; 9 Anne, c. 20 ; 1 Will. 4, c. 21 ; 6 & 7 Vict. c. 67. By the last-mentioned stat., s. 2, a judgment in mandamus may be taken into a Court of error : see, for instance, Reg. v. Saddlers' Co., 32 L. J., Q. B., 337.

(k) Ante, p. 123.

"also to issue a peremptory writ of mandamus to the defendant commanding him forthwith to perform the duty to be enforced" (l); and a writ so issued will have the same force as "a peremptory writ of mandamus issued out of the Court of Queen's Bench, and in case of disobedience may be enforced by attachment" (m).

2. Of the writ of injunction also given to the superior Courts of Common Law by the C. L. Proc. Act, 1854 (n), I have already spoken (o). The proceedings in connection with it are required to be the same as nearly as may be, and subject to the like control, as in an action to obtain a mandamus (p). Injunction.

3. The writ of prohibition issues out of a superior Court at Westminster (q), and is directed to the judge of an inferior Court, or the parties to a suit therein, or both conjointly, requiring that the proceedings which have been commenced there be either conditionally stayed or peremptorily stopped (r). The object of the writ is the keeping of the court to which it is directed within its proper jurisdiction (s), or to repress the assumption of authority by any pretended court (t). Prohibition.

The writ of prohibition, it is now settled, may issue to a court ecclesiastical (u), where something is being done by it Prohibition to Ecclesiastical Court.

(l) C. L. Proc. Act, 1854, s. 71.

(m) Id., s. 73.

(n) Id., ss. 79-82.

(o) Ante, p. 128.

(p) C. L. Proc. Act, 1854, s. 81.

(q) Com. Dig. Prohibition (B.); Anon., 1 P. Wms. 476; Blackborough v. Davis, Id. 43. See 13 & 14 Vict. c. 61, s. 22.

As to whether the granting of a prohibition is ex debito justitiæ or discretionary, see Bac. Abr. Prohibition (B.).

(r) Anon., 6 Mod. 308; Bac. Abr. Prohibition (F.).

(s) Com. Dig. Prohibition (C.);

Salk. 552; Reg. v. Herford, 29 L. J., Q. B., 249, which shows that prohibition may issue to a Court having criminal jurisdiction.

(t) Chambers v. Jennings, Salk. 553.

(u) In earlier times, one of the main uses of the writ of prohibition was to restrain the jurisdiction of the Ecclesiastical Courts; and the reader is referred to Coke, 2nd Inst. tit. "Articuli Cleri" for the history of the disputes between the common law and ecclesiastical courts, in respect of the prohibitions issued to the latter by the former; he will there also learn how it

“contrary to the general law of the land, or manifestly out of the jurisdiction of the court” (x).

Thus, if an ecclesiastical court “meddle with a matter purely temporal” (y), civil, or criminal (z), or with a wrong for which at common law there is a remedy (a), it oversteps its jurisdiction—and so where, either in the construction of a statute the spiritual court errs, or where a suit therein is “determined contrary to the right by the common law” (b), the remedy is by prohibition. This principle indeed of the pre-eminence of the common law is broadly laid down by Lord Ellenborough, C. J., when he says, “The Courts of common law have in all cases in which matter of temporal nature happens that the grounds for a prohibition against a spiritual court (the practice of which is founded on the civil law) are in some respects different from those upon which the writ is granted against other inferior courts. See per Coltman, J., Toft v. Rayner, 5 C. B. 162. Many authorities as to granting this writ are collected in the notes to Ex parte Tucker, 1 M. & Gr. 519. See also Hallack v. Cambridge Univ., 1 Q. B. 593; Re Dean of York, 2 Q. B. 1; Burder v. Veley, 12 Ad. & E. 233; Ex parte Denison, 4 E. & B. 292; 3 Bla. Com. 112; In re Gorham v. Bishop of Exeter, 5 Exch. 630; S. C., 10 C. B. 102; 15 Q. B. 52.

The jurisdiction of the Ecclesiastical Courts has been greatly abridged by stats. 20 & 21 Vict. cc. 77 & 85.

(x) Per Littledale, J., Ex parte Smyth, 3 Ad. & E. 724; per Talfourd, J., Ex parte Story, 12 C. B. 777; Vin. Abr. Prohibition (Q.).

Where the judge of any inferior court, spiritual or temporal, is interested in a cause, a prohibition will issue to restrain him from hearing it. See Ex parte Medwin, 1 E. & B. 603. See also Reg. v. Justices of Hertford- shire, 6 Q. B. 753; Dimes v. Grand Junction Canal Co., 3 H. L. Ca. 759.

(y) As opposed to mere “spiritualia:—sic dicta quia non habent mixturam temporalium:” 2 Inst. 488.

(z) Bac. Abr. Prohibition (L.).

(a) Galizard v. Rigault, Salk. 552; Free v. Burgoyne, 5 B. & C. 400; Townsend v. Thorpe, 2 Ld. Raym. 1507.

As to what was “ecclesiastical slander,” see Smith v. Wood, Coxeter v. Parsons, 2 Salk. 692; and Acebery v. Barton, Id. 693. But the 18 & 19 Vict. c. 41, abolishes the jurisdiction of ecclesiastical courts for defamation.

(b) Com. Dig. Prohibition (G. 23); per Lord Ellenborough, C. J., Gould v. Gapper, 5 East, 386; Ex parte Medwin, 1 E. & B. 609; Ex parte Story, 12 C. B. 767; per Lord Kenyon, C. J., Leman v. Goulty, 3 T. R. 4; Duke of Rutland v. Bayshawe, 14 Q. B. 869.

Where the jurisdiction in the common law and ecclesiastical courts is concurrent, the proceedings in the latter must be pro salute animæ—to punish the sin, not to recover damages: Bac. Abr. Prohibition (L. 5).

has incidentally arisen, granted prohibitions to courts acting by the rules of the civil law, where such courts have decided on such temporal matters in a manner different from that in which the Courts of common law would decide upon the same" (c).

Prohibition to the temporal courts is limited to those cases where they act either without, or in excess of jurisdiction (d). Thus the writ will not lie in respect of mere irregularities which may have occurred in the proceedings of the inferior court (e), nor because the judge, in deciding any particular question properly before him, has erred in his judgment upon the law (f); but the applicant (g) may be put to declare in prohibition if the question raised on argument appear doubtful (h), or, perhaps, if it is required by the party against whom the application is made (i). In the declaration must be set forth the grounds on which the prohibition is de-

Prohibition to the temporal courts.

(c) Gould v. Gapper, 5 East, 371; Breedon v. Gill, 5 Mod. 272; Bac. Abr. Prohibition (L. 5). But where the spiritual court has sole jurisdiction, its proceedings need not be governed by the rules of common law: Com. Dig. Prohibition (G. 22).

(d) See Cox v. Mayor of London, 2 H. & C. 401; S. C., 1 Id. 338; Tinniswood v. Pattison, 3 C. B. 243; Lilley v. Harcey, 5 D. & L. 648; Zohrab v. Smith, 5 D. & L. 639; Jones v. Jones, 5 D. & L. 623; Marsden v. Wardle, 3 K. & B. 695; Thompson v. Ingham, 14 Q. B. 710; Re Bowen, 21 L. J., Q. B., 10. Earl of Harrington v. Ramsay, 8 Exch. 379; S. C., 2 E. & B. 669; Mossop v. Great Northern R. C., 16 C. B. 585; S. C., 17 C. B. 180.

(e) Ex parte Story, 8 Exch. 195. But see Ex parte M'Fee, 9 Exch. 261.

(f) Ex parte Rayner, 5 C. B. 162; Ellis v. Watt, 8 C. B. 614.

See 13 & 14 Vict. c. 61, s. 22, in respect of the writ issuing to the judge of a county court.

As to writs of prohibition to the Admiralty Courts, see In re Place, 8 Exch. 704; Lord Camden v. Home, 4 T. R. 382; to the Vice-Chancellor, &c., of the University of Cambridge, see Ex parte Death, 18 Q. B. 647; to sheriff and commissioners, under 9 & 10 Vict. c. 38, see Chabot v. Lord Morpeth, 15 Q. B. 446; to magistrates to stay proceedings, even after conviction, Rich v. Anderson, 3 Ir. Ch. Rep. 463; R. v. Burnaby, 2 Ld. Raym. 900.

(g) As to who may apply for the writ, see Com. Dig. Prohibition (E.); 2 Inst. 607; Wadsworth v. Queen of Spain, and De Haber v. Queen of Portugal, 17 Q. B. 171.

(h) Ex parte Tucker, 1 M. & Gr. 534; Mossop v. Great Northern R. C., 16 C. B. 585.

(i) Remington v. Dolby, 9 Q. B. 167.

manded; to this declaration "the party defendant may demur or plead such matters by way of traverse or otherwise as may be proper to show that the writ ought not to issue" (k), and the proceedings are then continued as in an ordinary action to judgment (l). If the verdict and judgment be for the plaintiff, the writ of prohibition issues (m), and all proceedings must be suspended, by those to whom it is directed, upon pain of attachment.

It only remains to notice that a prohibition may issue in some instances after judgment (n) has been given below; and though it cannot go after execution has been completed (o), yet when goods seized in execution remain unsold in the hands of the high bailiff, the writ may go to stay further proceedings (p).

Quo warranto.

4. The writ of Quo Warranto—now obsolete—was a writ of right of the Crown, issuing out of the Queen's Bench, and lay only in respect of an usurpation on the rights or prerogative thereof (q). Proceedings by information (r) in the nature of a writ of quo warranto are now substituted in the place of the ancient writ, and considerable light has been thrown upon their applicability and scope by the judgment in Darley v. Reg. (s), where it is said that the writ was wont to be brought for property of or franchises derived from the Crown; but the practice of filing informations also by the (k) 1 Will. 4, c. 21, s. 1.

(l) As to the time at which a prohibition should be applied for, see Pull v. Hutchins, Cowp. 422; Ricketts v. Bodenham, 4 Ad. & E. 441; Byerley v. Windus, 5 B. & C. 1.

(m) If, after the writ has been issued, it appears to the Court that it ought not to have been granted, a writ of consultation may go, which in fact resolves the prohibition: 18 Edw. 1, st. 2; 3 Bla. Com. p. 114.

(n) Marsden v. Wardle, 3 E. & B. 695; Com. Dig. Prohib. (D.); 2 Inst. 602.

(o) Robinson v. Lenaghan, 2 Exch. 333.

(p) Kimpton v. Willey, 1 L. M. & P. 280.

A clause containing an order of restitution is sometimes inserted in a writ of prohibition: Jones v. Owen, 5 D. & L. 669.

(q) Per Lord Kenyon, C. J., King v. Shepherd, 4 T. R. 381; Frost v. Mayor of Chester, 5 E. & B. 531.

(r) As to the meaning of the term "information," see post.

(s) 12 Cl. & F. 520.

Attorney-General ex officio, in lieu of this writ, is very ancient (t). In modern times moreover (before the 9 Anne, c. 20, which regulated such proceedings, but did not, as has sometimes been said, first give rise to them), informations have been exhibited by the king's coroner and attorney, at the instance of private prosecutors (u). By a previous statute (4 & 5 W. & M. c. 18), certain conditions had indeed been imposed in restraint generally of the filing of informations by private prosecutors; and under the provisions of this statute and of stat. 9 Anne, just referred to, the sanction of the Court must have been obtained prior to taking such proceedings (x), the judges exercising "a discretion to grant or refuse them to private prosecutors, according to the nature of the case" (y). The authorities are conflicting as to the circumstances under which the Court should thus exercise its discretion and allow the remedy in question, as regulated by the statute, to be employed. But in Darley v. Reg., already cited, it is laid down that "this proceeding by information in the nature of quo warranto, will lie for usurping any office, whether created by charter alone or by the Crown with the consent of parliament, provided that the office be of a public nature and a substantive office—not merely the function or employment of a deputy or servant held at the will and pleasure of others; for with respect to such an employment, the Court certainly will not interfere, and the information will not properly lie" (z).

What information will lie for.

(t) As may be seen by referring to Coke's Entries.

(u) See the first reported case, in which the course was pursued, R. v. Mayor of Hertford, 1 Ld. Raym. 426. See also R. v. Gregory, 4 T. R. 240, n. (a); R. v. Williams, 1 Burr. 402, where the right to file an information at common law by the king's coroner and attorney against a person for improperly holding a court of record is recognised.

(x) See also 32 Geo. 3, c. 58; 7 Will. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 73; and 6 & 7 Vict. c. 89. The older statutes regulating the writ of quo warranto are 6 Edw. 1, c. 1, and 18 Edw. 1, st. 2.

(y) Per Tindal, C. J., 12 Cl. & F. 538.

(z) Per Tindal, C. J., 12 Cl. & F. 541, 542; see per Lord Brougham, Id. 545; R. v. Archdall, 8 Ad. & E.

Thus three tests of the applicability of the proceeding by information in the nature of a quo warranto are presented—the source of the office, its tenure, and its duties (a); and, within the limits indicated in Darley v. Reg., it is the appropriate civil (b) remedy to try disputes between private parties as to the authority by which an office or franchise should be held (c), and to oust those who have improperly assumed to exercise either (d).

Certiorari.

5. The writ of certiorari is issued for the purpose of removing a suit from an inferior into one of the superior Courts of common law (e); it is directed to the judge or officers of an inferior court, commanding him or them to return the record of a cause there depending, to the end that more sure and speedy justice may be done between the parties (f). The 284, n. (a); Reg. v. Fox, 8 E. & B. 939.

(a) Per Erle, J., Reg. v. Guardians of St. Martin's, 17 Q. B. 163; where see also the remarks of the other learned Judges upon Darley v. Reg.

(b) "Of late years a quo warranto information has been considered merely in the nature of a civil proceeding," and a new trial may therefore be had therein: R. v. Francis, 2 T. R. 484; but error under the C. L. Proc. Act, 1852, cannot be brought: Reg. v. Seale, 5 E. & B. 1.

(c) Selw. N. P., 12th ed., p. 1179; Ex parte Ramshay, 18 Q. B. 173.

(d) In re Harris, 6 Ad. & E. 475.

As to what may be brought under the notice of the Court by the Attorney-General, and what may be tried at the relation of a private individual, by leave of the Court, see per Lord Tenterden, C. J., R. v. Ogden, 10 B. & C. 233; R. v. Corporation of Carmarthen, 2 Burr. 869; R. v. M'Kay, 5 B. & C. 640, 645; R. v. White, 5 Ad. & E. 613. With respect to who may be the relator, see R. v. Hedges, 11 Ad. & E. 163; R. v. Quayle, Id. 508; R. v. Parry, 6 Ad. & E. 810; Reg. v. Alderson, 11 Ad. & E. 3; and generally as to the pleading, evidence, and judgment in these proceedings, see Selw. N. P., 12th ed., Tit. "Quo Warranto;" 2 Hawk. P. C. c. 26, ss. 3, 4; 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, s. 25.

(e) As to removing a judgment, rule, or order of an inferior court, by Judge's order, without a writ of certiorari, see 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, s. 22.

To remove criminal proceedings, the writ issues in general from the Queen's Bench (Bac. Abr. Certiorari (A.)); but as to removing indictments to the Central Criminal Court, see 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 86, s. 16; Reg. v. Sill, Dearl. 10; Reg. v. Wilks, 5 E. & B. 690. See also 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 50, s. 95; Reg. v. Inhab. of Sandon, 3 E. & B. 547.

(f) Bac. Abr. Certiorari (A.), (F.); Landens v. Sheil, 2 Dowl. 90; Ex parte Phillips, 2 Ad. & E. 586.

A certiorari cannot go as of course to a Court not of record. As to the proper right of thus removing a cause exists at common law (g), but has been limited to some extent in its applicability by statute (h).

If the superior Court should consider that a cause has been thus improperly removed, it may issue a writ of procedendo (i), commanding the inferior Court to proceed, or the writ of certiorari may be quashed on motion.

6. Proceedings by interpleader were devised by statute to enable courts of law to give relief against adverse claims made upon persons having no interest in the subject of such claims (j). For this purpose, it is enacted that, if a defendant sued in any action of assumpsit, debt, detinue, or trover, in the superior Courts of Westminster, shall, after declaration and before plea, show that he does not "claim any interest (k) in the subject-matter of the suit, but that the right thereto is claimed (l) or supposed to belong to some third party, who has sued or is expected to sue for the same; and that such defendant does not in any manner collude (m) with such third party, but is ready to bring into Court, or to pay or dispose of the subject-matter of the action in such manner as the Court or any judge thereof may order or direct" (n); then the Court or judge may order such third mode of removing a suit from such a Court, see Ex parte Phillips, 2 Ad. & E. 536; Edwards v. Bowen, 5 B. & C. 206.

(g) Symonds v. Dimadale, 2 Exch. 533.

(h) See 21 Jac. 1, c. 23, s. 2; 1 & 2 P. & M. c. 13; 19 Geo. 3, c. 70, s. 4; 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 71; 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, s. 90; 13 & 14 Vict. c. 61, s. 16; 16 & 17 Vict. c. 80, s. 4; Reg. v. Jewell, 7 E. & B. 140; Reg. v. Mayor of Manchester, 7 E. & B. 453; Reg. v. Dickenson, Id. 837; Reg. v. Wilks, 5 E. & B. 690. As to certiorari lying to county court, ante, p. 216; Reg. v.

Hull Dock Co., 3 Railw. Ca., 795; Reg. v. Lancaster] and Preston R. C., 6 Q. B. 759; Brookman v. Wenham, 2 L. M. & P. 233.

(i) Reg. v. Scaife, 18 Q. B. 773.

(j) See 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 58, s. 1; Baker v. Bank of Australasia, 1 C. B., N. S., 515.

(k) Patoni v. Campbell, 12 M. & W. 277. See Holt v. Frost, 3 H. & N. 821.

(l) Roach v. Wright, 8 M. & W. 155.

(m) Belcher v. Smith, 9 Bing. 82.

(n) 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 58, s. 1.

party to appear and state the nature of his claim, and maintain or relinquish it; and the judge may further "order such third party to make himself defendant in the same or some other action," and also "direct which of the parties shall be plaintiff or defendant on such trial, or, with the consent of the plaintiff and such third party," "dispose of the merits of their claims, and determine the same in a summary manner" (o). Sheriffs and other officers, in execution of process of the superior Courts, who are thereby exposed to the hazard and expense of actions, in respect of claims made to goods seized by assignees of bankrupts and other persons, may also apply to the Court for relief and protection by interpleader (p). The C. L. Proc. Act, 1860, has introduced yet further and important provisions affecting the practice in suits of interpleader. By this statute the proceedings of interpleader may be taken "though the titles of the claimants to the money, goods, or chattels in question, or to the proceeds or value thereof, have not a common origin, but are adverse to and independent of one another" (q). So also when any similar claim is set up by a third party to goods taken in execution by the bailiff of a county court, he may compel the execution creditor and the claimant to interplead (r), and

(o) Id.; Deller v. Prickett, 15 Q. B. 1081; Ridgway v. Allen, 29 L. J., Q. B., 97; per Pollock, C. B., Horton v. Earl of Devon, 4 Exch. 499; Dalton v. Midland R. Co., 12 C. B. 458; Turner v. Mayor, &c., of Kendal, 13 M. & W. 171.

Interrogatories may be delivered on an interpleader issue: White v. Watts, 12 C. B., N. S., 267.

(p) 1 & 2 Will. 4, s. 58, s. 6; Cooper v. Asprey, 3 B. & S. 982; Crump v. Day, 4 C. B. 760; White v. Binstead, 13 C. B. 304; Gadsden v. Barrow, 9 Exch. 514; Winter v. Bartholomew, 11 Exch. 704.

And see 1 & 2 Vict. c. 45, giving to a judge the same powers as the Court for relief of sheriffs: Figgin v. Langford, 10 M. & W. 556; Shortridge v. Young, 12 M. & W. 5.

(q) Sect. 12. See Best v. Hayes, 1 H. & C. 718.

By sect. 13 the Court or judge may direct a sale of the goods seized in execution and claimed by a third party. By sect. 14 power is given to the Court or judge to decide summarily in certain cases. By sect. 15 a special case is allowed to be stated when facts are undisputed. Provision is also made for taking such case to error, s. 16.

(r) Ante, p. 69. Foster v. Prichard, 2 H. & N. 151; 9 & 10 Vict. c.

the Court may dispose of the matter in dispute (s), including any question of trespass which may arise out of the execution (t).

7. The summary proceedings which have been provided, for enabling a landlord to recover possession of small tenements from a tenant, who holds over after the determination of his term, may be taken before justices of the peace, under 1 & 2 Vict. c. 74, or before the judge of a county court, under 19 & 20 Vict. c. 108 (u). The former of these statutes applies where the premises are held at will, or for any term not exceeding seven years; and the tenant is liable either to pay no rent or a rent under 20*l.* a-year (x). Proceedings under the county court statute, which are commenced by plaint and summons, and refer only to the ordinary relation of landlord and tenant (y), are restricted to those tenancies "where neither the value of the premises, nor the rent payable in respect thereof," exceeds the sum of 50*l.* per annum. If the term of tenancy of such premises has expired or been duly determined by notice, but the tenant persist in holding over, then upon the necessary proofs being adduced before the judge, he may order possession to be given to the landlord; and if such order be not obeyed, the registrar of the court may issue a warrant to the high bailiff, authorising him to give such possession, who may in obedience to the warrant take with him all necessary assistance (z).

Recovery of small tenements.

95, s. 118; 19 & 20 Vict. c. 108, ss. 68, 72; Reg. v. Stapylton, 21 L. J., Q. B., 8; Berwick v. Boffey, 9 Exch. 315; Ex parte M'Fee, Id. 261.

(s) Mann v. Buckerfield, 2 L. M. & P. 60; Fraser v. Fothergill, 14 C. B. 298; Bloor v. Huston, 15 C. B. 266.

(t) Tinkler v. Hilder, 4 Exch. 187; Jessop v. Oranley, 15 Q. B. 212; Guter v. Chignell, Id. 217.

(u) Sects. 50-56.

(x) Sect. 1. See Jones v. Chapman, 14 M. & W. 124.

(y) Jones v. Owen, 5 D. & L. 669; Banks v. Rebbeck, 2 L. M. & P. 452; Crowley v. Vitty, 7 Exch. 319; Fearon v. Norvall, 5 D. & L. 444; Re Earl of Harrington, 2 E. & B. 669; Kerkin v. Kerkin, 8 E. & B. 399.

(z) 19 & 20 Vict. c. 108, ss. 50-56; and see Broom's Pract. C. C., 2nd ed., pp. 282-294.

Delivery of specific chattels.

8. In the list of Extraordinary Remedies has, on account of its peculiar stringency, been included the procedure available for compelling the delivery to plaintiff of specific goods or chattels under the C. L. Proc. Act, 1854, s. 78 (a), or the Merc. L. Amendment Act, 1856, s. 2 (b).

Criminal information.

9. A criminal information is a proceeding in the Court of Queen's Bench (c), by which the Attorney-General or the Queen's attorney and coroner "gives the Court to understand and be informed of" a misdemeanor. It differs from an indictment principally in this respect, that the latter is found and presented by the grand jury (d), "whereas an information is only the allegation of the officer who exhibits it" (e).

The Attorney-General, and in his absence the Solicitor-General (f), has a right, ex officio, to file a criminal information in respect of any misdemeanor; but he rarely asserts this right, except when cases brought under his notice appear of so grave a character that they affect good government, as being imminently dangerous to the public welfare or directly derogatory to the dignity of the Crown (g). An information on the other hand, filed at the relation of a private individual, by the Queen's coroner, is always in respect of some misdemeanor, which, though serious in its

(a) Ante, p. 121; see Pusey v. Pusey, 1 Vern. 273 n. (l); Wood v. Rowcliffe, 2 Ph. 382.

(b) Which concerns specific delivery of goods on verdict for plaintiff in any action for breach of contract to deliver such goods.

(c) An information in the Court of Exchequer is brought in respect of property or revenue of the Crown, for intrusion, for breach of the excise laws, &c., see Manning's Exchequer Pract.

(d) Post, Bk. IV., Chap. 4.

(e) Bac. Abr. Informations (A.).

As to the legality of informations at common law, and their prosecution in the Star Chamber, see Prynn's case, 5 Mod. 459. See also Shower's learned "intended argument," in R. v. Bercket, 1 Show. 107. For the constitutional character of the proceedings by information, see note to 13 State Tr., pp. 1369-71.

(f) In re Wilkes, 19 St. Tr. 1102, 1127.

(g) Reg. v. Douglas, 13 Q. B. 42, 74; R. v. Burdett, 3 B. & Ald. 717; and 4 B. & Ald. 115; 2 Chitt. Crim. L., p. 88; R. v. Harvey, 3 D. & R. 464; and cases, n. (e), supra. See 2 Hawk. P. C. c. 26; Bac. Abr. Informations (B.).

nature, assumes a character less formidable and flagitious. Nor can proceedings be taken in this latter mode without leave of the Court being first obtained, and security thereupon given to prosecute with effect, and pay costs to the defendant if he should be acquitted (h). The Court exercises its discretion in thus granting or refusing permission to file a criminal information, on reference to the nature of the offence alleged, and the surrounding circumstances. It will decline to allow an information to be filed in respect of any trivial offence (i), or where the accused is a very poor person (k), or after unnecessary delay has occurred in applying to the Court (l); or, generally, unless flagrant misconduct on the part of the alleged misdemeanant, and entire rectitude on the part of the applicant, be made apparent (l). On the other hand the remedy in question is granted by the Court in cases of gross libel on public bodies (m), or on the public conduct of individuals holding eminent position (as peers and members of the House of Commons (n)), or dignified office (as judges and magistrates of the land (o)); and in some cases the Court will lend its protection when private individuals and their families (p) have been subjected to malicious and excessive insult and slander. Criminal informations may also be filed against judges and magistrates for illegal, unjust, and wilfully oppressive conduct, arising from corrupt and malignant motives (q), as distinguished from error of judgment.

(h) 4 & 5 W. & M. c. 18. But as to defendant recovering costs, see 6 & 7 Vict. c. 96; Reg. v. Latimer, 15 Q. B. 1077.

(i) Bac. Abr. Informations (A.).

(k) Per Lord Mansfield, C. J., Anon., Lofft, 155.

(l) R. v. Robinson, 1 W. Bl. 541; R. v. Jollie, 4 B. & Ad. 867; R. v. Hartley, R. v. O'Meara, Id. 869, n. (a).

(m) R. v. Williams, 5 B. & Ald. 195; R. v. Jenour, 7 Mod. 400; R.

v. Osborne, 2 Barnard. 106, 138; 2 Swanst. 502, n. (c).

(n) R. v. Haswell, 1 Dougl. 387.

(o) As regards slander on magistrates, see Ex parte Chapman, 4 Ad. & E. 773; 3 Chitt. Crim. L. 893; Ex parte Duke of Marlborough, 5 Q. B. 955.

(p) Reg. v. Gregory, 8 Ad. & E. 907; R. v. Dennison, Lofft, 148; R. v. Benfield, 2 Burr. 980.

(q) Per Lord Campbell, C. J., R. v.

Again, a criminal information lies for bribery or an attempt to bribe at a parliamentary or other public election (r), or for using means to pervert or vilify public justice (s), for challenging another to fight a duel (t), or for grievous personal assault (u), as well as in other cases which need not be here particularised (x).

It is important to observe, however, that the Court will never, even under circumstances such as those just indicated, lend its sanction to the employment of the extraordinary remedy in question, when he who seeks it has participated in any way in the misconduct complained of (y), nor where he does not come for the assistance of the Court "with clean hands" (z); nor if he has retaliated with the same weapons of the use of which against himself he complains (a); nor if he has resorted to other means of obtaining redress or satisfaction (b). Hence, where an information is applied for in respect of a libel, the applicant must, in general, swear to his innocence of the imputations made against him (c); and, in all cases he must adduce, in the Marshall, 4 E. & B. 480; R. v. Barker, 1 East, 186; per Ashhurst, J., R. v. Jackson, 1 T. R. 653; R. v. Sainsbury, 4 T. R. 457; R. v. Borron, 3 B. & Ald. 432; per Patteson, J., Ex parte Pentiman, 2 Ad. & E. 129; per Ashhurst, J., R. v. Brooke, 2 T. R. 190. See Reg. v. Badger, 4 Q. B. 468.

(r) R. v. Isherwood, 2 Kenyon, R. 202.

(s) R. v. Jolliffe, 4 T. R. 285; R. v. Watson, 2 T. R. 199.

(t) R. v. Larrieu, 7 Ad. & E. 277.

(u) R. v. Gwill, 11 Ad. & E. 587.

(x) See Cole Crim. Inform. pp. 38-42.

(y) R. v. Peach, 1 Burr. 548; R. v. Steward, 2 B. & Ad. 12; R. v. Gwill, 11 Ad. & E. 587.

(z) Per Lord Mansfield, C. J., Lofft, 315.

As to proceedings on criminal informations, see Reg. v. Newman, 1 E. & B. 268, 588; S. C., Dears. C. C. 85.

(a) Per Lord Denman, C. J., Reg. v. Proprietors of the Nottingham Journal, 9 Dowl. 1043.

(b) Reg. v. Marshall, 4 E. & B. 475; Ex parte Anon., 4 Ad. & E. 576, n. (a).

Where a rule nisi for a criminal information in respect of a libel is discharged in the Queen's Bench, the applicant is not precluded from bringing an action in another Court in respect of the same libel: Wakley v. Cooke, 16 M. & W. 822.

(c) R. v. Haswell, 1 Dougl. 387; Cole Crim. Inform. p. 53.

first instance, sufficient ground in support of his motion (d). Accordingly, a rule nisi for a criminal information is sometimes moved for by one who would clear himself from false and slanderous accusations, the main object of the applicant being simply to employ the opportunity thus afforded him of filing exculpatory affidavits (e).

The trial on a criminal information takes place on the civil side of the Court, evidence being gone into touching the facts which constitute the offence (f). If the defendant be found guilty, he may move for a new trial, or in arrest of judgment; but should he take neither of these courses, matters of aggravation and extenuation may be entertained upon affidavit, when he is called up for judgment.

10. The reader of English history being necessarily familiar with the nature of the writ of habeas corpus, will readily understand wherefore this, the festinum remedium, must be here considered amongst Extraordinary Remedies. The record of the struggles made to maintain this mode of relief in its full force and integrity proves the value attached to it in former times. At earlier epochs, during transitional stages of our constitution (g)—when legal rights were less perfectly defined or less capable of enforcement than they now are, and the various elements in the state were unsettled and ill balanced—the virtue and applicability of the writ of habeas corpus were not unfrequently impugned, albeit as often vigorously re-asserted. It exists in these days, the most important remedy of the class now under notice which a Court of common law can be called on to afford: a remark whereof the truth becomes more obvious,

Habeas Corpus.

(d) R. v. Inhabitants of Barton, 9 Dowl. 1022; R. v. Eve, 5 Ad. & E. 780.

(e) Per Lord Denman, C. J., Ex parte Duke of Marlborough, 5 Q. B. 956.

(f) R. v. Sharpness, 1 T. R. 229;

R. v. Withers, 3 T. R. 428; R. v. Burdett, 4 B. & Ald. 314, 319. As to costs, see Reg. v. Savile, 18 Q. B. 783.

(g) See Hall. Const. Hist., 8th ed., vol. 3, p. 12; Rowland's Man. Eng. Const., pp. 549-553.

when it is remembered, that the writ here spoken of is adapted (h) to effect the great object enunciated in Magna Charta (i), that “no man shall be taken or imprisoned unless by lawful judgment of his peers or by the law of the land.” How essential it was deemed to insist upon this great principle of common law may be seen, moreover, by reference to subsequent pages of the statute book. Thus the 25 Edw. 3, st. 5, c. 4, after reciting the above clause in Magna Charta, which is designated as “the great charter of our liberties,”—proceeds to enact, that thenceforth none shall be taken by petition or suggestion made to our Lord the King or to his council, unless it be by indictment or presentment of the good and lawful people of the same neighbourhood, or by process made on writ original at common law; and in another statute of the same reign (k) the like doctrine is again unequivocally declared.

On one memorable occasion (l), when the principles affirmed in Magna Charta and the practical method of asserting them (m) by writ of habeas corpus were contested, the arguments both of the bench and of the bar not only set forth elaborately the learning connected with the writ in question, but also show in how many antecedent cases the liberty of the subject had been violated with impunity, and how important consequently it was, that the law which assumed to protect that liberty should be vindicated. It will be remembered, that one of the marked consequences of this case was the Petition of Right (n), which was followed by the statute abolishing the Star Chamber (o), and by an (h) 4 Inst. 182, 290.

(i) 9 Hen. 3, c. 29, which is only declaratory of the common law, 2 Inst., Pref. 46.

(k) 42 Edw. 3, c. 3.

(l) Darnell's case, 3 How. St. Tr. 1; and see the General Index to the same work (vol. 27), tit. Habeas Corpus, for further references.

(m) 2 Inst. 55.

(n) 3 Car. 1, c. 1. See Hall. Const. Hist., 8th ed., vol. 1, p. 414; Macaulay, Hist. Eng., vol. 1, Chap. 2.

(o) 16 Car. 1, c. 10; Rowland's Man. Eng. Const., p. 334.

“Act for the better securing the Liberty of the Subject,” &c., usually styled the Habeas Corpus Act (p).

This latter enactment introduced no new principle into the law of England; there being abundant evidence to show that the right to the writ now spoken of existed at common law (q). The provisions of the Habeas Corpus Act were, however, mainly levelled against this right being rendered inoperative, and against the keeping in illegal custody of those who had “been committed for criminal or supposed criminal matters,” contrary “to the known laws of the land, whereby many of the king’s subjects have been, and hereafter may be, long detained in prison in such cases where by law they are bailable, to their great charges and vexation” (r). The 2nd section, therefore, proceeds to enact how the writ shall be promptly returned and obeyed in all such cases of criminal or supposed criminal nature, unless the commitment be “for treason or felony, plainly and specially expressed in the warrant of commitment;” and in this latter case provision is made by the 7th section of the Act, for the speedy trial or discharge from imprisonment, either on or without bail, of the prisoner.

Another important statute (56 Geo. 3, c. 100, intituled “An Act for more effectually securing the Liberty of the Subject”), relating also to the writ of habeas corpus, had for its object the extending of “the remedy of such writ and enforcing obedience thereunto, and preventing delays in the execution thereof,” to those cases where persons are confined “otherwise than for some criminal or supposed criminal matter,” except persons imprisoned for debt or by process in any civil suit (s).

(p) 31 Car. 2, c. 2.

(q) Thomlinson’s case, 12 Rep. 104; Ex parte Sandilands, 21 L. J., Q. B., 342; Ex parte Besset, 6 Q. B. 481; Leonard Watson’s case, 9 Ad. & E. 731, cited infra, n. (u).

And see the Petition of Right, 3 Car.

1, c. 1.

(r) 31 Car. 2, c. 2, s. 1. See Cobbett v. Slowman, 9 Exch. 633; S. C., 4 Exch. 747; Hall. Const. Hist., 8th ed., vol. 2, pp. 352-3.

(s) Sect. 1.

It may be observed, that the writ of hab. corp. ad subjiciendum, to which the above statutes mainly refer, and to which we are now confining our attention, is one only—though incomparably the most important—of a rather large class of writs of habeas corpus (t). Its object (u) being, as already indicated, to effect deliverance from illegal confinement (x), it commands the party detaining the prisoner to produce his body, with the true statement of the time of his caption and the cause of his detention (y). The writ is granted on motion out of any one of the superior Courts of common law, wherever probable and sufficient ground has been assigned for the interposition of its authority (z), and lies to any part of the Queen's dominions, not having a Court of justice with authority to issue such writ, and to granted.

How

(t) These other writs of habeas corpus are ad testificandum, ad prosequendum, ad satisfaciendum, ad respondendum, ad faciendum et recipiendum, &c. The writ ad faciendum et recipiendum (or, as it is sometimes called, of habeas corpus cum causâ) issues to bring up the person of a defendant who is in custody under civil process of an inferior Court, and likewise to remove the suit, connected with which he has been taken in execution, into the superior Court, whence the writ has issued: Mitchell v. Micheson, 1 B. & C. 513: as to the difference between parties proceeding and that by certiorari, see Clerk v. Mayor, &c., of Berwick, 4 B. & C. 649; Palmer v. Forsyth, Id. 401.

See also 21 Jac. 1, c. 23; 1 & 2 P. & M. c. 13; 19 Geo. 3, c. 70; 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 71; 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, s. 90.

(u) As to the case of a prisoner improperly convicted by justices at sessions, see In re Blues, 5 E. & B. 291. As to bringing up the body of a witness before an arbitrator, see Graham v. Glover, Id. 591. See further, as to the object to which this writ may be applied, Mr. Fry's report of The Canadian Prisoners' case; S. C., 5 M. & W. 32, 9 Ad. & E. 731; Re Allen, 30 L. J., Q. B. 38; In re Belson, 7 Moo. P. C. C. 114; R. v. Lord Ferrers, 1 Burr. 631.

(x) Ex parte Child, 15 C. B. 238; In re Hakewill, 12 C. B. 223.

(y) In re Bailey, 3 E. & B. 607. If this writ be issued to bring up the body of a person in private custody, as an infant or a lunatic, the clause cum causâ is omitted: Tidd's Forms, 8th ed., p. 123; Re Belson, 7 Moo. P. C. C. 131-2. See Reg. v. Clarke, 7 E. & B. 186, as to the application of the writ to decide on the proper custody of an infant under the age of ten years.

(z) Hobhouse's case, 3 B. & Ald. 420; Brenan's case, 10 Q. B. 492; Re Dunn, 5 C. B. 215; Re Cowgill, 16 Q. B. 336; Ex parte Bradbury, 14 C. B. 15; Re Catherine Newton, 13 Q. B. 716; Re Francis Newton, 16 C. B. 97.

The writ of hab. corp. may be awarded in vacation on application to a judge at chambers.

insure its due execution (a), for the Sovereign, it has been said, ought to have an account why any of his subjects are imprisoned (b).

The return to the writ is made by producing the prisoner, and setting forth the grounds and proceedings upon which he is in custody (c). If this return is deemed to present sufficient matter in justification of the prisoner's detention, he is remanded to his former custody; if insufficient, he is discharged therefrom (d). The return cannot be traversed (e), nor need it be verified by affidavit (f); but its validity is determined upon argument (g), on the day of the return, though sometimes new matter is allowed to be introduced to guide the discretion of the Court (h). A writ of habeas corpus will indeed sometimes be quashed on the ground of irregularity or fraud, but not for matter that could have been properly returned to it (i).

Return to
the writ.

Although the space—necessarily limited—which has been here devoted to a consideration of the writ of habeas corpus, might be well deemed inadequate thereto, if measured solely by the importance of the theme, yet its social value, as well as its constitutional significance, have been to some extent indicated, and may be more fully appreciated on reference to (a) 25 Vict. c. 20, s. 1. This statute was passed in consequence of the decision in Re Anderson, 30 L. J., Q. B., 129.

(b) Bac. Abr. Hab. Corp. (B.) 2; R. v. Cowle, 2 Burr. 834; Carus Wilson's case, 7 Q. B. 984; Crawford's case, 13 Q. B. 613.

(c) Disobedience to the writ is punishable by attachment: see Corner's Cr. Off. Pr., p. 116.

(d) Re Douglas, 3 Q. B. 825; Hammond's case, 9 Q. B. 92.

(e) Corner's Cr. Off. Pr., pp. 116, 117.

(f) Per Jervis, C. J., in re Hake-will, 12 C. B. 228; Law Mag., Nov.

1855, pp. 287, 289.

(g) As to what is a sufficient return to the writ, see The Canadian Prisoners' case, ubi supra; Re Hake-will, ubi supra; Re Eggington, 2 E. & B. 707; Dimes's case, 14 Q. B. 554; Clarke's case, 2 Q. B. 619; Ex parte Andrews, 4 C. B. 226; Carus Wilson's case, 7 Q. B. 984; Crawford's case, 13 Q. B. 613.

(h) Re Eggington, 2 E. & B. 717; Re Hake-will, ubi supra; per Patteson, J., in Carus Wilson's case, 7 Q. B. 1010.

(i) Carus Wilson's case, 7 Q. B. 984, 1001; and see In re Power, 2 Russ. 583; In re Clarke, 2 Q. B. 619.

the various authorities which have been cited. Under proper regulation and restraint, the writ has proved a safeguard inferior to none afforded by our constitution, whether for the protection of the subject when threatened by the Crown, or generally for the preservation of the weaker members of society from the oppression of the strong. In all cases, remarks Mr. Selden (k), where any right or liberty belongs to the subject by any positive law—written or unwritten—if there were not also a remedy by law for the enjoying or regaining of that right or liberty when violated or taken from him, the positive law were most vain and to no purpose; and as regards the right to liberty of the person, if there were not a remedy available in case of restraint, it were vain to speak of laws ordaining that it was not to be restrained. But there are in law divers remedies for the enlarging of a freeman imprisoned, amongst which the most common and best known, and (as above shown) the most practically beneficial, is that by habeas corpus.

(k) See his argument in debate on the Petition of Right, 3 How. St. Tr. 95.

Extraordinary remedies at common law in addition to those mentioned in the text, where a subject desires to prefer against the Crown a claim for the restitution of either real or personal property, are by—1. Petition de Droit, or Petition of Right; 2. Monstrans de Droit, or Plea of Right; 3. Traverse of Office.

The Petition of Right is employed when the Crown is in possession of hereditaments or chattels to which the petitioner in alleging his right controverts that of the Crown (3 Bla. Com. 256). The Petition of Right Act, 1860 (23 & 24 Vict. c. 34), has for its object to amend and simplify the proceedings by Petition of Right. It also repeals the ancient rule of law in connection therewith, that the Crown neither gives nor receives costs. But it further enacts that any suppliant may, if he will, follow the former practice in preference to that provided by the statute. See Chitt. Pre. Cr., Chap. 13; Tobin v. Reg., 14 C. B., N. S., 505.

BOOK II.

CONTRACTS.

CHAPTER I.

CONTRACTS GENERALLY—THEIR CLASSIFICATION AND ATTRIBUTES.

IN its widest and most general sense, the word Contract signifies an engagement, obligation (a), or compact (b),—which may be either unilateral or inter partes (c). Meaning of term
"contract."

A contract may be of record—special or simple: if simple, it requires a "consideration" to support it (d). Before, however, treating of or even attempting to discriminate between the specific kinds of contracts just mentioned, some remarks may be offered touching contracts generally, and the legal properties inherent in them.

A contract or compact between two or more parties (e) may be executory or executed,—express or implied.

(a) Obligationum substantia in eo consistit, ut alium nobis obstringat ad dandum aliquid, vel faciendum, vel præstandum : D. 44. 7. 3, pr.

"A contract is a transaction in which each party comes under an obligation to the other, and each reciprocally acquires a right to what is promised by the other : " 1 Powell Contr. pp. 6, 7.

(b) Roget Thesaur. (768, 769).

(c) Contractus proprie ultro citroque obligatio, quam Græci συνδλλαγμα vocant : Brisson. ad verb. Contractus.

Omnem obligationem pro contractu habendam, existimandum est ; ut, ubicunque aliquis obligetur, et contrahi videatur ; quanvis non ex crediti causa debeat : D. 5. 1. 20.

Contractus dicitur quasi actus contra actum : 2 Rep. 15. a.

(d) The definition of a "consideration" is given in connection with the subject of simple contracts, post.

(e) Fletcher v. Peck, 6 Cranch (U. S.) R. 136. Et est pactio, duorum pluriumve in idem placitum consensus : D. 2. 14. 1, s. 2.

Contract,
executory executed.

An executory contract is one in which a party binds himself to do or not to do a particular thing (f). A contract executed is one in which the 'object of contract' is performed (g). "If A. agrees to change horses with B., and they do it immediately, in which case the possession and the right are transferred together," we have before us an instance of an executed contract. If A. and B. agree to exchange horses next week, "here the right only vests, and their reciprocal property is not in possession but in action" (h); the contract accordingly, in this latter case, is executory only. A contract may be executed as regards one of the parties to it, and executory as regards the other; as, for instance, if A., on the actual delivery and receipt of B.'s horse, promises and undertakes to deliver over his own horse to B. in the course of the week ensuing.

Upon an executed, as well as upon an executory contract, a right of action may be founded; and the former as well as the latter may contain obligations binding in futuro on the parties to it; ex. gr., a grant in its own nature amounts to an extinguishment of the right of the grantor, and implies a contract not to re-assert that right, so that a party is technically said to be estopped by his own grant (i), or to have impliedly covenanted that he will not do any act in derogation of his own deed (j).

Contract,
express;

An express contract is one of which the terms are, at the time of making it, defined in writing or openly uttered and avowed (k), as where an agreement is entered into whereby

(f) A contract is usually said to be executory either when one party performs and the other is trusted, or when neither party performs but each trusts the other: 1 Powell Contr., p. 235.

(g) Fletcher v. Peck, supra. A contract executed is usually described by some particular term applicable to its nature, as a sale, a grant, a lease, an assignment, a mortgage, or the like: 1 Powell Contr., p. 234.

(h) 2 Bla. Com. 443.

(i) Per Marshall, C. J., Fletcher v. Peck, 6 Cranch (U. S.) R. 137.

(j) See Aulton v. Atkins, 18 C. B. 249.

(k) 2 Bla. Com. 443.

either of the parties to it promises the other that something is done already or shall be done at some future time, or where goods of a certain kind and quality are ordered,—to be paid for at a specified rate.

An implied contract, on the other hand, is one “which reason and justice dictate, and which the law, therefore, presumes that every man undertakes to perform” (l). In it, accordingly, the law implies, from the antecedent acts of persons, what their obligations are to be; whereas, if an express contract be made, the parties themselves thereby define or assume to define them. —implied.

In the case of an implied contract, however, the law does not vary or introduce new terms into an existing agreement or compact; it merely declares that particular acts, unaccompanied or unexplained by express stipulations, give rise to particular duties or liabilities; and it then proceeds as if the parties had precisely stipulated for their performance. Thus, to take the example of an implied contract, which Sir W. Blackstone gives (m): “If I employ a person to do any business for me or to perform any work, the law implies that I undertook or contracted to pay him as much as his labour deserves” (n); and such amount may be recovered from me just as surely as if there had been a written agreement between the other party and myself to that effect. If, however, I am desirous beforehand that the work in question should be done for a fixed sum, I ought to have an express agreement specifying it, and so limiting and defining my liability.

To exhibit the purport of what has been just said in a somewhat different form, contracts, whether express or im-

(l) 2 Bla. Com. 443. See Pell v. Daubeney, 5 Exch. 955; Walker v. Bartlett, 18 C. B. 845; Collen v. Wright, 8 E. & B. 647; S. C., 7 Id. 301.

(m) 2 Com. 443.
(n) In Roberts v. Smith, 4 H. & N. 315, there was no contract under which the plaintiff could claim to be remunerated.

plied, are founded upon the actual agreement of the parties thereto, the only distinction between them being in regard to the mode of proof. In an implied contract the law only supplies that which, although not stated, must be presumed, so as to complete the agreement intended by the parties. As where a person avails himself of the benefit of services done for him, although without his positive authority or request, the law supplies the formal words of contract, and presumes him to have promised an adequate compensation. So, where a person buys an article without stipulating for the price, he is presumed to have undertaken to pay its market value or what it is fairly worth; and where he holds the money of another as trustee or bailee, the law supposes a promise to restore it (o).

Consent is of the essence of
contract.

Bearing in mind, then, what a contract is, and what is meant by a contract "executory" or "executed"—"express" or "implied," we must in the next place observe, that a contract is founded on consent (p), on the aggregatio mentium or "union of minds in regard to some particular matter." It is of the essence of every contract or agreement, that the parties to be bound thereby should consent, expressly or impliedly, to whatever is stipulated therein; for otherwise no obligation or reciprocal right can be created between them (q). To this effect the civil law lays down, that, in omnibus rebus quæ dominium transferunt, concurrat, oportet, affectus ex utràque parte contrahentium: nam sive ea venditio, sive donatio, sive conductio, sive quælibet alia causa contrahendi fuit, nisi animus utriusque consentit, perducì ad effectum id quod inchoatur non potest (r).

(o) See Beirne v. Dord, 1 Selden (U. S.) R. 102.

(p) "Assent," remarks Erle, J., 5 E. & B. 374, "is an ambiguous word: it may mean an external act or a resolution of the mind."

(q) 1 Powell Contr., p. 9. See Hardman v. Booth, 1 H. & C. 803, 807.

(r) D. 44. 7. 55.

The law of contracts accordingly will be found to fall under the first of the three subdivisions of the jus privatum of the Romans. The jus privatum, it may be remembered, was that particular part of the Roman law which concerned the rights of individuals—jus privatum est quod ad singulorum utilitatem spectat (s); and, as we read in the Digest, omne jus aut consensus fecit, aut necessitas constituit, aut firmavit consuetudo (t). Now, a contract or agreement may, with the most perfect accuracy, be said to be synonymous with jus quod consensus fecit,—to be a law which the parties have framed and voluntarily prescribed to themselves for their own guidance.

Consent obviously implies acquiescence of the mind in something proposed or affirmed. The term involves, in contemplation of law, the existence of a physical and moral power of assenting, as well as a deliberate and free exercise of such power. Hence, the absence of any of these capacities in either of the parties to a contract, renders the person labouring under it incapable of binding himself thereby (u).

Incapacity to contract.

But, besides incapacity to contract arising from any one of the causes just indicated, the law sometimes interferes to prohibit the making of certain kinds of contracts, or to annul them if made. The law, as remarked by Maule, J. (x), does not often interfere to prevent persons, who have attained their majority, from contracting in any way they think proper. Generally speaking, the rule is, that people may contract as they please. "That is the general law of the land. But occasionally there occur in the course of experience cases in which it is found desirable to depart from that general principle—cases of particular inconvenience in particular trades or employments, and with reference to particular classes: for instance, in the case of seamen, whose

Legislative prohibitions.

(s) I. 1. 1. 4; D. 1. 1. 2.

(t) D. 1. 3. 40.

(u) See 1 Powell Contr., p. 10.

(x) 13 C. B. 176.

contracts are the subject of special legislative provisions—the law considering that particular class of men to be in a state of perpetual pupillage.”

So, again, with reference to the Truck Act (1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 37), the same learned judge has observed that the intention of that statute was to “afford protection to a class of persons not very well able to protect themselves;” and that the restriction imposed by that enactment was found necessary, inasmuch as the leaving to parties the unfettered right to contract in respect of labour in such way as they may choose, is, in certain trades, replete with mischief and inconvenience (y).

The foregoing remarks may, for the present, suffice to show, that the capacity to contract, which, as a general rule, is inherent in every man, is sometimes partially abrogated by the legislature with a view to protecting and benefiting particular classes of the community.

Even where the legislature does not expressly interfere to prohibit contracts, acknowledged principles of law may operate in such a manner as materially to vary or qualify them.

Sometimes, no doubt, parties may be presumed to have contracted with reference to, and to have tacitly intended to be bound by, the lex loci: for instance, if A. promises by a written instrument, worded in the form of a promissory note, to pay to B. or order 100*l.* at sixty days after sight, the sum specified will, by operation of law, become really due and payable sixty-three days after sight; and, in the case here put, both the payee and the maker of the note may reasonably be supposed to have had the rule of the Law Merchant in their contemplation.

Lex loci—
how it operates.

(y) Per Maule, J., 13 C. B., 176; 132, and cases there cited; Wilson, * per Keating, J., Archer v. James, 2 app., Cookson, resp., 13 C. B., N. S., B. & S. 73; per Byles, J., Id. 83. 496.
See Ingram v. Barnes, 7 E. & B. 115,

Cases may, however, occur, where contracting parties, ignorant of the rules of law, find their expressed intentions thwarted and defeated thereby; and where the lex loci may be considered as governing the contract, not by consent of the parties, but by its own superior force and efficacy (z).

Two ordinary instances will suffice in illustration of the above remark, and may serve to throw some further light upon the doctrine of consent in reference to contracts as well as upon the mode in which the lex loci operates upon them. Let us suppose that a mortgagor stipulates that the mortgagee shall have the land mortgaged absolutely, if the debt be not paid at the time stipulated, here, the lex loci, nevertheless, steps in and declares that the mortgagee's title shall not be absolute, but that the estate shall be redeemable, although the mortgage debt be, in fact, not repaid at the time appointed (a).

So, if a man, in consideration of an immediate loan of 50*l.*, binds himself in a penalty of 100*l.* to repay the 50*l.* within a year, and makes default, the lex loci will require him to pay the 50*l.* with interest only.

Now, in each of the foregoing cases, the law of the land overrules to some extent, and governs, the particular contract entered into; so that it would not even be competent (z) See this question discussed: Judgm., 7 Cushing (U. S.) R. 30-1.

(a) In Trent v. Hunt, 9 Exch. 21-22 (followed in Snell v. Finch, 13 C. B., N. S., 651), the Court observed that "The relation of mortgagee and mortgagor in the law of England is a very peculiar one. By the form of mortgage used for centuries in this country the entire interest of the mortgagor in the property which is the subject of the mortgage, is generally conveyed to the mortgagee subject to a condition that if the money be repaid upon a certain day (generally within a few months from the date of the deed), the mortgagor may re-enter and repossess himself of his former estate, otherwise the estate to the mortgagee is to be absolute. In the great majority of cases, however (and indeed it may be said almost universally), the mortgagor remains in possession of the mortgaged property, and does not pay the money borrowed on the appointed day; but nevertheless continues to receive the profits or rent of the land just as before, and pays to the mortgagee the interest of the money borrowed as upon an ordinary unsecured debt."

to the contracting parties, by any express stipulation, altogether to exclude its operation (b). In the sense, therefore, indicated by the preceding remarks, it will be true to say, that every contract is founded on consent, and governed by the lex loci.

Obligatory force of
contract.

Assuming that contracts are thus mainly founded on consent, what, it may be asked, is it which gives to a contract its binding force and legal efficacy? Contracts and agreements, it may be said, are, in their terms and language, infinitely diversified; they deal with matters of every conceivable kind, and impose upon parties liabilities correspondingly various, such, indeed, as no human law, statutory or customary, could possibly have anticipated or devised. There can be no doubt that the obligatory force of contracts is in every civilised country derived tacitly from the law, by reason of the manifest necessity which exists, with a view to the well-being of the community, that every man should fairly and honestly perform what he has undertaken to do (c). No state, perhaps, ever declared, by statute or positive law, that contracts shall be obligatory; but all states, assuming the pre-existence of the obligation of contracts, have super-added merely, by municipal law, the means of carrying the pre-existing obligation into effect (d).

So far back, it has been said (e), as human research carries us, we find the judicial power, as a part of the executive, administering justice by the application of remedies to violated rights or broken contracts. We find that power applying these remedies, on the idea that there is a pre-existing obligation imposed on every man to do what he has promised to do; that the breach of this obligation is an injury for (b) 2 Bla. Com. 160, n.; Leg. Max., 4th ed., 669.

(c) Quid enim tam congruum fidei humanæ, quam ea, quæ inter eos placuerunt, servare: D. 2. 14. 1, pr.

(d) Ogden v. Saunders, 12 Wheaton

(U. S.) R. 213. See also Cook v. Moffatt, 5 Howard (U. S.) R. 295; Bank of Cincinnati v. Buckingham's Executors, Id. 323.

(e) See per Marshall, C. J., Ogden v. Saunders, supra.

which the injured party has a just claim to compensation ; and that society ought to afford him a remedy for that injury. We find allusions to the mode of acquiring property, but we find no allusion, from the earliest time, to any supposed act of the governing power giving obligation to contracts ; and hence we may infer, that the doctrine in question is coeval with the existence of society, and, although it may be controlled, was not expressly given by human legislation (f). Obligatio, as we read in the Institutes of Justinian (g), est juris vinculum quo necessitate astringimur alicujus rei solvendæ secundum nostræ civitatis jura. Natural law says, that contracts (if not impeachable on special grounds), shall be binding ; and municipal law indicates the manner in, or means by, which they may be enforced.

But although it be true that natural law and moral duty, acknowledged by the dictates of conscience, bind men to keep faith and to perform their engagements, yet the duty thus cast upon them is not defined with sufficient precision and exactness to form a practical rule for the government of society in the various exigencies daily occurring. For instance, the law of nature requires that a person competent in point of age to make a promise or contract shall be bound by it ; but it does not approach to the determination of the question, what shall be the age of majority (h),—a question which has, consequently, to be determined by positive arbitrary enactment.

It seems, then, in regard to the obligatory force of a contract, correct to say, that both municipal law and moral obligation concur in constituting it. And this is true, in regard as well to contracts made and to be executed within the state or country where the remedy is sought, as to those which are to be executed, or upon which the remedy is sought, in a state or country where the contract was not made. Universal (f) Id.

(g) Lib. 3, tit. 14.

(h) Judgm., 7 Cushing (U. S.) R.

32.

law and natural obligation on the one hand, and municipal law on the other, are not antagonistic to each other. On the contrary, municipal law assumes the existence of moral duty arising from natural law, and regulates it so that it may form a plain and practical rule, adapted to the requirements of a civilised community (i).

The term 'obligation' has been thus far used as equivalent to "binding force" or "vinculum juris," and as consisting in the efficacy of the law which attaches to the contract, and, if it cannot enforce its performance, at all events, gives pecuniary compensation in lieu of performance; but it must be remembered, that the word 'obligation' is also used as correlative to 'right,' so that 'whatever I, by my contract, give another a right to require of me, I thereby lay myself under an obligation to give or to do.' This secondary meaning of the term in question flows immediately from its primary signification already adverted to. There can, indeed, be no legal duty or obligation unless there be a legal mode of compelling its performance, and a contract imposes no obligation upon parties, unless it be a contract recognised as valid by the law.

The requisites of a valid contract will become more apparent as we advance through this part of the volume; and, without pausing just now to inquire concerning them, these remarks, introductory to the subject of contracts, may conclude with one observation,—that a contract will not be considered as fulfilled, nor its obligation as discharged, save by compliance with the requirements of law in relation thereto; or, to exhibit the same proposition more concisely, a contract must be performed secundum nostræ civitatis jura,—in that manner which the law prescribes, and in that sense which the law puts upon its language.

Law, indeed, to some considerable extent, gives to a contract its character, makes it what it is, regulates its limits and obligation, fixes the time when it shall commence, how it shall be executed or satisfied, and how it shall be terminated and discharged (k).

Contracts may properly be classified under three heads :
 1st. Contracts of record, such as judgments, cognovits (l), and recognisances (m); 2ndly. Contracts by specialty or under seal, which admit of subdivision into contracts unilateral, as bonds; and contracts inter partes, as indentures of demise; 3rdly. Simple contracts, or contracts not under seal, which are either written or verbal.

Classification of contracts.

The three great classes of contracts just specified have been advisedly arranged as above, for this reason, that contracts of record must be considered as of a higher nature than contracts of any other kind; and special, as superior in efficacy to simple contracts. With this preliminary remark, I shall at once proceed to point out the peculiar characteristics of each of the three great classes of contracts above mentioned.

(k) See 7 Cushing (U. S.) R. 37.

(l) A cognovit is a written confession of an action, supposed to be given by the defendant in Court, which authorises the plaintiff, under circumstances specified, to enter up judgment and issue execution thereon against the defendant. The R. G. H. T., 17 Vict., contain certain provisions (reg. 25-28) relative to cognovits and warrants of attorney.

(m) A recognisance is an obligation of record entered into before some Court of record or magistrate duly authorised, with condition to do some particular act: 2 Bla. Com. 341.

A recognisance may be entered into either to the Crown—as, where a person enters into recognisances to appear to answer a criminal charge; or to a subject—as where bail is given. A recognisance by statute is either founded on a statute merchant or statute staple, or is in nature of a statute staple under the 23 Hen. 8, c. 6: 3 Rep. 11, note (a).

A judgment of a Court of record is said to be of a higher nature than a statute staple, statute merchant, or any recognisance acknowledged by assent of the parties without judicial proceeding: 6 Rep. 45 b. As to the effect of a statute staple, see, further, Judgm., Ellis v. Reg., 6 Exch. 925; S. C., 4 Exch. 652.

Contracts
of record.

Of contracts of record, the most practically important kind is that constituted by the judgment of a court of record of competent jurisdiction (n). A judgment of one of the superior Courts of common law (for to the consideration of this species of contracts of record I shall now confine myself) has these peculiar properties or characteristics: It effects or works a merger of the original cause of action; it operates as an estoppel, and is conclusive as between the parties to it; it does not need any consideration to support it; it binds the land of the judgment debtor.

Merger.

The true nature and effect in regard to the doctrine of merger of a judgment at common law will be apparent from the following remarks:—Let us suppose that there has been a breach of some specific contract entered into between A. and B. A. being the contractee, and B. the party who has failed to perform his contract; now, if A. recovers a verdict for damages against B., and signs final judgment thereupon, A.'s cause of action in respect of the breach of contract ceases to exist,—It becomes merged in the judgment. So, if judgment be recovered for a debt due by bond, the debt thus due becomes “by judicial proceeding and act in law,” “transformed and metamorphosed into a matter of record” (o); upon which latter security, whilst it remains in force and unreversed, the plaintiff's remedy, if any, must, in such manner as the law allows, be had.

The doctrine of merger now under consideration is clearly explained by the Court of Exchequer in King v. Hoare (p) in these words:—“If there be a breach of contract or wrong done, or any other cause of action, by one against another, and judgment be recovered in a Court of record, the judg-

(n) “A debt of record is a sum of money which appears to be due by the evidence of a Court of record. Thus, when any specific sum is adjudged to be due from the defendant to the plaintiff on an action or suit at law; this is a contract of the highest nature, being established by the sentence of a Court of judicature:” 2 Bla. Com. 465.

(o) Higgins's case, 6 Rep. 45.

(p) 13 M. & W. 494, 504.

ment is a bar to the original cause of action, because it is thereby reduced to a certainty, and the object of the suit attained, so far as it can be at that stage; and it would be useless and vexatious to subject the defendant to another suit for the purpose of obtaining the same result." Hence the legal phrase transit in rem judicatam derives its force and aptitude; "the cause of action is changed into matter of record, which is of a higher nature, and the inferior remedy is merged in the higher." The above remarks equally apply "where there is but one cause of action, whether it be against a single person or many. The judgment of a Court of record changes the nature of that cause of action, and prevents its being the subject of another suit, and the cause of action being single cannot afterwards be divided into two." It was held accordingly, in the case whence the above extracts are taken, that a judgment, even without satisfaction, recovered against one of two joint debtors, is a bar to an action against the other (q). In an action against one of several joint contractors, a plea in estoppel of judgment obtained by another co-contractor must show that the former action was successfully resisted on some ground available in common to all the joint contractors (r).

The doctrine of merger, as above stated, holds not merely where the original action was founded upon contract, but also where it was founded upon a tort or 'wrong independent of contract'; the judgment in this latter case, as well as in the former, when obtained, constituting a contract of record, in which the right of action ex delicto is wholly merged, "if," therefore, "one hath judgment to recover in trespass against one, and damages are certain," (that is, converted

(q) King v. Hoare, 13 M. & W. 494. In Morgan v. Price, 4 Exch. 619, Parke, B., remarks:—"Suppose two persons jointly and severally liable to a party who recovers the whole amount from one of them, he cannot sue the other." Acc. per Popham, C. J., in Brown v. Wootton, or Broome v. Wootton, infra, as explained per Cur. in King v. Hoare.

(r) Phillips v. Ward, 33 L. J., Ex., 7.

into certainty by the judgment,) "although he be not satisfied, yet he shall not have a new action for this trespass" (s).

So if A. wrongfully converts goods, sells, and receives the money for them, and judgment in trover is obtained against him by the owner, such judgment, though unproductive, would be a bar to another action against A. for money had and received. And upon the same principle, if two jointly convert goods, and one of them receives the proceeds, the rightful owner cannot, after recovering against one in trover, sue the other for the same conversion, or maintain an action against him for money had and received, to recover the value of the goods, for which in the former action a judgment has already passed (t). "Varying the form of claim, where the claim itself is the same, does not prevent the application of the rule of law," to which reference has been here made; for instance, in Slade's case (u) it is said, that "a recovery or bar" in assumpsit, "would be a good bar in an action of debt brought upon the same contract."

In any such case, the original cause of action transit in rem judicatam; and we may conclude that "where judgment has been obtained for a debt as well as for a tort, the right given by the record merges the inferior remedy by action for the same debt or tort against another party" (x).

The next peculiarity to notice in a contract of record is, that "a record imports in itself truth" (y), and concludes all men against whom it is producible from denying anything appearing within the record (z); so that, if an action be

Estoppel
by matter
of record.

(s) Per Popham, C. J., Broome v. Wooton, Yelv. 67; S. C., Cro. Jac. 73; cited 13 M. & W. 504, 505; Lindall v. Penfold, 1 Lev. 19.

(t) Per Jervis, C. J., Buckland v. Johnson, 15 C. B. 161.

(u) 4 Rep. 94 b. Judgm., Routledge v. Hislop, 29 L. J., M. C., 90.

(x) Judgm., King v. Hoare, 13 M. & W. 506.

(y) Floyd v. Barker, 12 Rep. 23. A record thus importing "credit and verity" "shall be tried only by itself," i. e., by production and inspection, the reason being, that there may thus be an end of controversy: 1 Inst. 260. a.; Leg. Max., 4th ed., 327, 909. See Preston v. Peeke, E. B. & E. 336.

(z) Hynde's case, 4 Rep. 71 b.

brought, and the merits of the question at issue be discussed between the parties, and a final judgment be obtained by either, the parties are concluded and cannot canvass the same question again in another action, although, perhaps, some objection or argument might have been urged upon the first trial, which would have led to a different result (a). A judgment then obtained inter partes (b) will estop either of those parties from again agitating the matter decided between them (c). But, according to the well-known rule—res inter alios acta alteri nocere non debet—a judgment cannot be used to estop or fix with liability one who is neither a party nor privy to it, who has had no opportunity to cross-examine the witnesses called upon the trial, or to dispute the conclusions to be drawn from the evidence there offered (d).

(a) Per Lord Kenyon, C. J., Greathead v. Bromley, 7 T. R. 456; Marrriot v. Hampton, 7 T. R. 269. See Dick v. Tolhausen, 4 H. & N. 497.

(b) A judgment in rem operates directly on the status of the thing adjudicated upon: Cammell v. Sewell, 5 H. & N. 728; S. C., 3 H. & N. 617; Imrie v. Castrique, 8 C. B., N. S., 405; Castrique v. Behrens, 30 L. J., Q. B., 163; Place v. Potts, 5 H. L. Ca. 383.

(c) For information upon the subject here alluded to the reader is referred to the Duchess of Kingston's case, 2 Smith L. C., 5th ed., 642, and Note thereto. A judgment on the same point between the same parties is, if pleaded by way of estoppel, conclusive—where there is no opportunity of pleading it, it would seem to be conclusive as evidence: Id., p. 623. Per Maule, J., Wilkinson v. Kirby, 15 C. B. 439. See Judgm., Boileau v. Rutlin, 2 Exch. 681; cited per Willes, J., Gordon v. Whitehouse, 18 C. B.

751; and in Howlett v. Tarte, 10 C. B., N. S., 826; Hutt v. Morrell, 3 Exch. 240; Guest v. Warren, 9 Exch. 379.

In Lord Feversham v. Emerson, 11 Exch. 390-1, the Court observed that “the rule is established by a series of cases, that if a party means to insist on an estoppel he must plead it. If a party intends to rely on a subject-matter of defence which the law does not favour, he must at his own peril take the earliest opportunity of setting it up;” and again, “it is perfectly well settled law . . . that if a party does not take the first opportunity which the pleadings afford him of relying on an estoppel, he leaves the matter at large, and it is competent for the jury to determine upon the evidence without regard to strict law.”

As to the requisites of a plea of res judicata, see Nelson v. Couch, 15 C. B., N. S., 99.

(d) Judgm., King v. Norman, 4 C. B. 398; Petrie v. Nuttall, 11 Exch.

But although, as between the parties to it, a judgment is thus conclusive, it is clearly impeachable where the maxim Nemo debet esse iudex in propria causa has been infringed (e), or on the ground of fraud or of deception practised on the Court; for, as remarked in the Duchess of Kingston's case (f), "fraud is an extrinsic collateral act which vitiates the most solemn proceedings of Courts of justice. Lord Coke says (g) it avoids all judicial acts, ecclesiastical or temporal." To a like effect the Court of Queen's Bench, in Philipson v. Earl of Egremont (h), observe that "fraud, no doubt, vitiates everything; and the Court, upon being satisfied of such fraud, has a power to vacate, and would vacate, its own judgment," a remedy being afforded to the aggrieved party by motion to the Court, or in some cases—ex. gr., to a declaration in scire facias—by plea (i). A judgment even of the highest tribunal may be treated as a nullity, if obtained by fraud (k). "There is," as remarked by 569; Overton v. Harvey, 9 C. B. 324. See Reg. v. Ambergate N. & B. R. Co., 1 E. & B. 372; Reg. v. Haughton, Id. 501; Callow v. Jenkinson, 6 Exch. 666.

(e) Leg. Max., 4th ed., 118. See Ellis v. Hopper, 3 H. & N. 766; Reg. v. Recorder of Cambridge, 8 E. & B. 637; Re Hopkins, E. B. & E. 100; London and North Western R. Co. v. Lindsay, 3 Macq. H. L. Ca. 99.

(f) 2 Smith L. C., 5th ed., 650; Shedden v. Patrick, 1 Macq. H. L. Ca. 535.

(g) Fermor's case, 3 Rep. 78 a.

(h) 6 Q. B. 587, 635, citing Bradley v. Eyre, 11 M. & W. 450.

(i) Philipson v. Earl of Egremont, 6 Q. B. 587, 604. Per Tindal, C. J., Fowler v. Rickerby, 2 M. & Gr. 777; per Parke, B., Re Place, 8 Exch. 704; Shattock v. Carden, 6 Exch. 725; De Medina v. Grove, 10 Q. B. 152, 168. "There is no doubt of the jurisdiction of Courts of equity to grant relief against a former decree, where the same has been obtained by fraud and imposition; for these will infect judgments at law and decrees of all Courts; but they annul the whole in the consideration of Courts of equity." Story Eq. Pl., 3rd ed., s. 426; Id. ss. 780-784; Earl of Bandon v. Becher, 3 Cl. & F. 479, 510. See also Alleyne v. Reg., 5 E. & B. 399; Dodgson v. Scott, 2 Exch. 457. As to setting aside a judgment on the ground of mistake, see Cannan v. Reynolds, 5 E. & B. 301. The judgment of a foreign Court is impeachable in certain cases. See Cammell v. Sewell, 3 H. & N. 617, 646; S. C., 5 H. & N. 728. See also Sheehy v. Professional Life Ass. Co., 3 C. B., N. S., 597; S. C., 2 Id. 211; Simpson v. Fogo, 1 Johns. & H. 18.

(k) Shedden v. Patrick, 1 Macq. H. L. Ca. 535.

Pollock, C. B. (l), "no more stringent maxim than that no one shall be permitted to aver against a record ; but where fraud can be shown this maxim does not apply."

No consideration is necessary to support an action founded upon a judgment—inasmuch as whilst the judgment remains in force, a legal liability to pay has been already ascertained thereby (m). Debt will, consequently, lie upon the judgment of a Court of record (n), or the judgment may, according to circumstances, be proceeded upon by scire facias or by writ of revivor (under various provisions of the First C. L. Proc. Act, ss. 128-133), or it may be enforced by execution in the ordinary manner.

No consideration necessary to support judgment.

A judgment obtained in a Court of law now binds the land of the debtor of which he was seised or possessed at the time of entering up the judgment or at any time afterwards (o). Before, however, lands which have passed into the hands of purchasers can be affected by a judgment obtained against the vendor under the provisions of the statutes below cited, the name, abode, and description of the debtor, with the amount of the debt or damages and costs

Judgment binds the land.

(l) Rogers v. Hadley, 2 H. & C. 247.

v. Rathbone, 6 H. & N. 301.

(m) In like manner a foreign or colonial judgment in favour of plaintiff "imposes upon the defendant a moral obligation to pay the debt, which moral obligation is a good foundation for an action against him here : " Arg, Kelsall v. Marshall, 1 C. B., N. S., 255. See Hutchinson v. Gillespie, 11 Exch. 798, 810, where Alderson, B., observes, "It is laid down that wherever there is the judgment of a Court of competent jurisdiction for payment of a sum of money, an action will lie thereon ; for the law gives so much credit to the judgment as to consider that the sum is due." See Vanquelin v. Bonard, 15 C. B., N. S., 341, 367-8 ; Brissac

A plea of judgment recovered in the Consular Court of Constantinople was held good in Barber v. Lamb, 8 C. B., N. S., 95 ; distinguished in Frayes v. Worms, 10 Id. 149. See Cox v. Mitchell, 7 C. B., N. S., 55.

(n) See Arg., Prince v. Nicholson, 5 Taunt. 667 ; 1 Chitt. Pl., 7th ed., p. 124 ; Sheehy v. Professional Life Ass. Co., supra, n. (i) ; Jackson v. Everett, 1 B. & S. 857. As to the finality of an award, see Hodgkinson v. Fernie, 3 C. B., N. S., 189 ; and as to its operating as an estoppel, see Newall v. Elliot, 1 H. & C. 797.

(o) 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, s. 13 ; Sugd. V. & P., 14th ed., 523.

recovered against him, together with the date of registration and other particulars, are required to be registered in an index, which the Act directs to be kept for the warning of purchasers at the office of the Court of Common Pleas (p). The registration here adverted to, in order that it may be effectual, must be repeated every five years (q); and even if a purchaser of land should have express notice of any such judgment recovered against the vendor, he will not be affected by it unless and until a minute of such judgment shall have been left at the office aforesaid for entry in the register there kept (r).

Judgment is a consensual
contract.

A judgment being ordinarily rendered in invitum, cannot, it may perhaps be thought, accurately be designated a consensual contract. The point suggested is not unworthy of consideration. Let us suppose that A. sues and recovers judgment against B. for breach of a special agreement. The judgment in this case, founded on the verdict of the jury, fixes the amount of damages, and not merely imposes on B. an obligation to pay such amount; but also raises an implied undertaking on his part that he will pay it, whence his consent to pay the amount recovered may strictly be inferred. Debt therefore lies on a contract of record, in like manner as where there is, under circumstances quite dissimilar, a legal duty or obligation to pay money. Without, however, resorting to technical reasoning for the purpose of disclosing in this peculiar species of contract the element of consent, another view of the matter before us may be presented. Every member of the community who appears, whether as plaintiff or defendant in a Court of justice, must be regarded as submitting himself to the course of procedure which it recognises—to the directions which it may promulgate—to such compulsory process consequent upon judgment, as it may countenance or award. It seems proper, therefore, to speak of a judgment as a contract assented to by both parties—the law implying an assent by the party against whom the judgment passes, to conform to its requirements.

(p) 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, s. 19; 2 & 3 Vict. c. 11, s. 3; 23 & 24 Vict. c. 38; Re Turner, 33 L. J., Ch., 232; Sugd. V. & P., 14th ed., 529.

(q) 2 & 3 Vict. c. 11, s. 4.

(r) 3 & 4 Vict. c. 82, s. 2. See, further, as to the above subject, 18 & 19 Vict. c. 15; Sugd. V. & P., 14th ed., pp. 527 et seq.

A contract under seal or specialty is a contract in writing, the execution whereof is accompanied with certain solemnities which not merely indicate the assent of the contracting parties (s), but give to their contract peculiar force and efficacy (t).

Contracts under seal—general remarks as to.

A contract may be constituted by statute, and, if so, is a specialty of the highest kind (u).

An instrument under seal, when used between private persons, is, as Blackstone tells us (x), called a deed (factum) "because it is the most solemn and authentic act that a man can possibly perform with relation to the disposal of his property," or with a view to affecting in any manner his own interests. The instrument in question may be unilateral or made by one party only; or it may be inter partes, i. e. made between two or more parties. At common law the rule is, that the right of action upon a deed inter partes is restricted to those only who are parties to it (y). This rule, however, has been broken in upon by the stat. 8 & 9 Vict. c. 106,

(s) "The general rule of law is that the assent of a party to a deed conveying property to him is to be presumed, and a grant of goods, like any other common law conveyance operating by grant, passes the property without assent." Judgm., Siggers v. Evans, 5 E. & B. 380.

(t) The strict definition of a deed, as given in Shepp. Touch. p. 50, is this:—"A writing or instrument written on paper or parchment, sealed and delivered, to prove and testify the agreement of the parties whose deed it is to the things contained in the deed."

(u) Cork and Bandon R. C. v. Goode, 13 C. B. 826; Shepherd v. Hills, 11 Exch. 55, 67; 1 Wms. Saund. 38, 38 a. See per Cockburn, C. J., 6 C. B., N. S., 157.

(x) 2 Com. 295.

(y) Anderson v. Martindale, 1 East, 497; Lord Southampton v. Brown, 6 B. & C. 718; per Lord Ellenborough, C. J., Storer v. Gordon, 3 M. & S. 322.

s. 5, which provides, that, under an indenture executed after the first of October, 1845, an immediate estate and interest in any tenements or hereditaments, and the benefit of a condition or covenant respecting them, may be taken, although the taker thereof be not named as a party to the said indenture; and the section of the Act just cited further provides, that a deed purporting to be an indenture shall have the effect of an indenture, although not actually indented.

A specialty, as already intimated, is distinguished from a simple contract in writing by certain solemnities attendant on its execution—viz., by sealing and delivery. It may indeed be laid down as clear law, that, prior to the Statute of Frauds, signing was in no case deemed essential to the validity and obligatory force of a deed which had been executed by sealing and delivery (z). Even now, the absence of the signature of a party to a deed, the subject matter of which comes within the operation of that statute, would seem to be immaterial (a), for the object of that enactment was “to prevent matters of importance from resting on the frail testimony of memory alone.” It was not intended to apply to instruments already authenticated by a ceremony of a higher nature than a signature or a mark (b).

Delivery is essential to the due execution of a deed (c); so that if executed after the day on which it purports to bear date, it takes effect from the day of delivery and not from the day of the date, according to the maxim Traditio loqui

(z) Co. Litt. 35. b.; Shepp. Touch. 56.

(a) The signature of a party may, however, be required by the express provisions of the power or authority under which a deed is executed: 2 Bla. Com., 21st ed., 305, n. (18).

(b) Per Rolfe, B., Cherry v. Hemming, 4 Exch. 636-7.

(c) As to evidence of delivery, see

Xenos v. Wickham, 13 C. B., N. S., 381; S. C., 14 Id. 435; Kidner v. Keilh, 15 C. B., N. S., 35; Tupper v. Foulkes, 9 C. B., N. S., 797.

Delivery is not necessary in the case of a body corporate, for the fixing their common seal to the deed is tantamount to a delivery: Com. Dig. “Fait” (A. 3).

facit chartam (d). "A deed," says Bayley, J. (e), "has no operation until delivery."

Although the usual practice in delivering a deed is to place the finger upon the seal or wafer (which has, in general, been previously affixed to the instrument), and to repeat the formula "I deliver this as my act and deed," yet it is clear, on the one hand, that delivery without words is sufficient (f), and, on the other, that a deed may be delivered by words without any act of delivery (g).

If, moreover, when a deed has been formally sealed and delivered, with apt words of delivery, it is retained by the party executing it, such retention will not per se affect the operation of the deed (h). And it is also clear, that delivery to a third person for the use of the party in whose favour the deed is made, provided the grantor parts with all control over the instrument, will make the deed effectual from the instant of such delivery; for the law will presume, if nothing appear to the contrary, that a man will accept what is for his benefit (i).

A deed may, however, be delivered as an escrow, i.e., it may be delivered to a stranger to be kept by him until certain specified conditions be performed, and then to be delivered over to the grantee (k). If, in point of fact, the deed is delivered not to take effect as a deed until some condition is performed, it will operate as an escrow, notwithstanding the delivery is in form absolute (l). But if a deed

(d) Steele v. Mart, 4 B. & C. 272; Goddard's case, 2 Rep. 4; Clayton's case, 5 Rep. 1; per Patteson, J., Browne v. Burton, 17 L. J., Q. B., 50.

(e) Styles v. Wardle, 4 B. & C. 911.

(f) Co. Litt. 36. a; 9 Rep. 136. b., 137. a.

(g) Co. Litt. 36. a.; Shepp. Touch. 58.

(h) Doe d. Garnons v. Knight, 5 B. & C. 671; cited and distinguished Xenos v. Wickham, 14 C. B., N. S., 467, 470.

In Jeffries v. Alexander, 8 H. L. Ca. 594, a question arose whether an instrument was a deed or a testamentary paper.

(i) Doe d. Garnons v. Knight, supra; 3 Rep. 26 b.

(k) 4 Kent Com., 10th ed., 544; Co. Litt. 36. a.; Millership v. Brookes, 5 H. & N. 797.

(l) Per Pollock, C. B., Christie v. Winnington, 8 Exch. 290; per Jervis, be delivered as an escrow, upon certain conditions, to the party to whom it is made, the delivery is nevertheless absolute, for in traditionibus chartarum non quod dictum sed quod factum est inspicitur (m).

The legal consequences which flow from the execution (n) of a written contract by sealing and delivery are most important. Directly that an instrument containing a contract is sealed by the parties thereto, it becomes a deed (o), and as such is clothed with the following properties, which do not attach to a simple contract in writing. It works a merger; it operates by way of estoppel; it requires no consideration to support it; it will in some cases bind the heir of the covenantor or obligor; it can only be discharged by an instrument under seal, by the judgment of a Court of competent authority, or by Act of Parliament.

The limits necessarily prescribed for this treatise will not of course allow of any attempt on my part to consider the forms of deeds, or the various modes which have been devised for effecting, through their intervention, objects which are in kind almost infinitely diversified. The reader will bear in mind, however, that in every valid deed there must be parties able to contract, and also a thing or subject matter to be contracted for, all which must be specified and set forth with some sufficient degree of certainty and precision; for instance, in every grant there must be a grantor, a grantee,

C. J., Davis v. Jones, 17 C. B. 634; per Crompton, J., Pym v. Campbell, 6 E. & B. 374; Gudgen v. Besset, Id. 986; Murray v. Earl of Stair, 2 B. & C. 81; 2 Bla. Com., 21st ed., 307, n. (20).

(m) Shepp. Touch. 59; Thoroughgood's case, 9 Rep. 136 a.; per Cresswell, J., Cumberlege v. Lawson, 1 C. B., N. S., 718.

"The maxim of law, as well as of reason and good sense, is non quod dictum, sed quod factum est inspicitur:" per Martin, B., 6 H. L. Ca. 722.

(n) There cannot be a partial execution of a deed: see Wilkinson v. Anglo-Californian Gold Mining Co., 18 Q. B. 728.

(o) Per Coleridge, J., Hall v. Bainbridge, 12 Q. B. 707. See Davidson v. Cooper, 13 M. & W. 348, 353.

and a thing granted ; in every lease, a lessor, a lessee, and a thing demised (p).

The agreements of parties under seal usually contain, however, in addition to the above simple elements, stipulations and conventions, called covenants (q), more or less elaborately worded, whereby either party vouches for the truth of certain facts, or binds himself to do or to refrain from doing certain things. Thus, the grantor of an estate may covenant that he hath a right to convey, or that the grantee shall quietly enjoy the land ; a lessee may covenant to pay his rent or to keep the premises in repair (r).

Covenant—
what.

No particular form of words is necessary to create a covenant ; any words are sufficient for that purpose “ which show an intention to be bound by the deed to do or omit that which is the subject of the covenant ; any such words are sufficient, and some such words are necessary to make a covenant ” (s). It will readily be supposed that, where a deed has been informally prepared, much difficulty may be felt in determining the intention of the parties to it, and in interpreting their covenants. Upon this subject it may suffice to say that, although where the words of a covenant are clear and free from doubt, effect must be given to them ; yet, if “ a covenant may have two meanings, each of which is equally probable, in each of which the words are capable of expressing the same thing, and the question is, in which of

(p) 2 Bla. Com. 296.

(q) A covenant may be defined to be “ an agreement between two or more persons by an instrument in writing sealed and delivered, whereby some of the parties engage, or one of them engages, with the other or others of them, that some act hath or hath not already been done ; or for the performance or nonperformance of some specified duty.” Platt on Cov. p. 8.

(r) 2 Bla. Com. 304. A man may covenant that a thing is already done, or that it shall be done. In the one case the covenant is executed ; in the other, executory : Shepp. Touch. 162.

(s) Judgm., Rashleigh v. South-Eastern R. Co., 10 C. B. 632 ; Wood v. Copper Miners' Co., 7 C. B. 906 ; per Parke, B., Rigby v. Great Western R. Co., 14 M. & W. 815. See Smith v. Mayor, &c., of Harwich, 2 C. B., N. S., 651 ; Farrall v. Hilditch, 28 L. J., C. P., 221 ; Platt on Cov. pp. 27 et seq.

the two senses it is to be understood, that meaning which it is most probable the parties contemplated is the one that is to be adopted" (t).

"Generally speaking," remarks the learned judge, whose words are above cited, "the construction of a written contract is for the Court; but when it is shown by extrinsic evidence that the terms of the contract are ambiguous, evidence is admissible to explain the ambiguity, and to show what the parties really meant. That is one of Lord Bacon's maxims (u). Where there is an election between two meanings it is properly a question for the jury. So, if a man devise land to his 'cousin John,' and it appears that he has two cousins named John, extrinsic evidence is admissible to show to which of them he meant the land to go" (x).

Covenants—

independent;

—dependent;

—concurrent.

Covenants, when viewed in relation to each other, will be found to be divisible into three classes. 1. Independent covenants,—that is to say, where either party may recover damages from the other for the injury he may have sustained by a breach of the covenants in his favour, and where it is no excuse for the defendant to allege a breach of the covenants on the part of the plaintiff. 2. Covenants which are conditions and dependent,—that is, in which the performance of one covenant depends on the prior performance of another; so that till the prior condition be performed, the other party is not liable to an action on his covenant. 3. Covenants, sometimes called concurrent, which are mutual conditions to be performed at the same time; and in these if one party is ready and offers to perform his part, and the other neglects or refuses to perform his, he who is ready and offers thus legally fulfils his engagement, and may therefore maintain an action against the other party for (t) Per Maule, J., West London R. 522, 529.

O. v. London and N.-W. R. C., 11 (u) Bac. Max. reg. 23.

C. B. 324; Bland v. Crowley, 6 Exch.

(x) Smith v. Thompson, 8 C. B. 59.

his default, even though neither be obliged to do the first | act (y).

Covenants, besides admitting of the classification above given, are also designated, regard being had to their nature and to the subject-matter which they may concern, as real, personal, or collateral. A covenant real being such as is annexed to an estate and to be performed on it; a covenant personal being one whereof some person in particular shall have the benefit, or whereby he shall be charged, or one which is to be performed personally by the covenantor alone. The term collateral, when applied to a covenant, is commonly used in contradistinction to the term real, as above defined. A covenant is said to be collateral when the thing to be done in pursuance of it is "merely collateral to the land, and doth not touch or concern the thing demised in any sort" (z), or not so immediately as to pass with it to an assignee. Such a covenant is also said to be in gross.

Covenants real, personal, and collateral.

If, for instance, a lessee covenant to pay rent or to repair, or if a lessor grant to his lessee the liberty of taking wood from off the demised premises to burn within his house or to

(y) Per Lord Mansfield, Kingston v. Preston, cited Jones v. Barkley, 2 Dougl. 689. Respecting the above classes of covenants, the reader is referred to Pordage v. Cole, 1 Saunds. 319; 1 Wms. Saund. 320 a, (4); Platt on Cov. p. 70; per Tindal, C. J., Stavers v. Curling, 3 Bing. N. C. 368; cited per Keating, J., Seeger v. Duthie, 8 C. B., N. S., 70; Friar v. Grey, 15 Q. B. 891, and 5 Exch. 584; London Gas Light Co. v. Vestry of Chelsea, 8 C. B., N. S., 215; Ellen v. Topp, 6 Exch. 424; Sibthorp v. Brunel, 3 Exch. 826.

In Pordage v. Cole, supra, it was "agreed" between A. (the plaintiff) and B. (the defendant) by instrument under seal, that B. should pay to A., before a day named, a sum of money for his lands, &c. (whereof 5s. was actually paid as earnest). It was, in the first place, held, that, by this agreement, a covenant on the part of A. was raised to convey the land; and, secondly, that the covenants to pay the money and to convey were independent of each other, so that A. might sue for the residue of his purchase money before any conveyance by him of the land. See also Marsden v. Moore, 4 H. & N. 500; Hemans v. Picciotto, 1 C. B., N. S., 646; Eastern Counties R. C. v. Philipson, 6 C. B. 2; Phillips v. Clift, 4 H. & N. 168; Baylis v. Le Gros, 4 C. B., N. S., 537; White v. Beeton, 7 H. & N. 42.

(z) Spencer's case, 5 Rep. 16, 2nd Resol.

repair his fences during the term, the covenant is 'real;' it passes with the land to its assignee, so that he who takes the one becomes immediately subject to the other (a). On the other hand, a covenant to pay a sum of money, or a covenant by a lessee not to hire certain persons to work in a mill about to be erected on the land demised (b), would be 'personal' to the covenantor, and would not bind his assignee. In this latter case the covenant might be said to be altogether 'collateral' to the land.

To Spencer's case (c), which is the leading authority to show what covenants do or do not 'run with land,' i.e., pass with it from assignee to assignee, reference must be made for information upon that subject. It may, however, be well to present shortly the principal rules there laid down, as stated by Wilmot, C.J., in Bally v. Wells (d). "Covenants in leases," says that learned judge, "extending to a thing 'in esse,' parcel of the demise, run with the land and bind the assignee, though he be not named—as to repair, &c. And if they relate to a thing not 'in esse,' but yet the thing to be done is upon the land demised, as to build a new house or wall, the assignees, if named, are bound by the covenants; but if they in no manner touch or concern the thing demised, as to build a house on other land, or to pay a collateral sum to the lessor, the assignee, though named, is not bound by such covenants; or if the lease is of sheep or other personal goods, the assignee, though named, is not bound by any covenant concerning them. The reasons why the assignees, though named, are not bound in the two last cases are not the same. In the first case it is because the thing covenanted to be done has not the least reference to the thing demised; it is a substantive, independent agree-thereto.

(a) Id. ibid.

(b) Mayor of Congleton v. Pattison,
10 East, 130.

(d) Wilmot's Notes, 344, cited per Holroyd, J., Vernon v. Smith, 5 B. &
Ald. 7, and in 2 Wms. Saund. 304,
n. (12).

(c) 5 Rep. 16; 1 Smith L. C., 5th ed., 43, with the Note appended ment, not quodam modo, but nullo modo, annexed or appurtenant to the thing leased. In the case of the mere personality, the covenant doth concern and touch the thing demised, for it is to restore it or the value at the end of the term ; but it doth not bind the assignee, because there is no privity, as there is in the case of a realty between the lessor and lessee and his assigns in respect of the reversion (e).

Again, a covenant may be express or implied. "There are," says Sir E. Coke (f), "two kinds of covenants, viz., a covenant in deed, and a covenant in law." A 'covenant in law,' properly speaking, being "an agreement which the law infers or implies from the use of certain words having a known legal operation ;" for instance, if a man by deed demise land for years, an action of covenant will lie at suit of the tenant after ouster upon the word "demise," which imports or makes a covenant in law for quiet enjoyment. Here the word in question, after having had its primary operation in creating the estate, derives from the law a secondary force, by being held to imply an agreement on the part of the grantor to protect and preserve the estate so by that word already created (g). A general rule applicable in interpreting deeds is this—expressum facit cessare tacitum—an express covenant excludes or controls an implied covenant having reference to the same subject-matter (h).

Covenants—express and implied.

Having now explained sufficiently for my present purpose the office of a covenant, having also pointed out the leading classes into which covenants are divisible, and shown how these classes are distinguishable from each other, I propose to exhibit very briefly the nature and structure of a bond, and then to notice the peculiar properties inherent in instruments under seal.

(e) See Gorton v. Gregory, 3 B. & S. 90.

(f) Co. Litt. 139, b.

(g) Judgm., Williams v. Burrell, 1 C. B. 429, 430 ; Platt on Cov., Pt. 1, Ch. 2, s. 3.

(h) Leg. Max., 4th ed., 626 ; per Pollock, C. B., Mathew v. Blackmore, 1 H. & N. 768, 772,

Bond—
what.

A bond is "an instrument under seal, whereby one person becomes bound to another for the payment of a sum of money, or for the performance of any other act or thing. The person thus bound is called the obligor, and he to whom the bond is given the obligee. And this obligation may be either by or to one or several persons" (i).

If a bond be merely for the payment of money, or for the performance of some particular act, without any condition in or annexed to it, the bond is said to be single; but there is in general a condition added to the bond in the nature of a defeasance, stipulating that if the obligor duly performs the act specified, the obligation shall be void, otherwise that it shall remain in full force. In case this condition is not performed the bond becomes forfeited (k), so that the entire penalty named therein was formerly recoverable at law. Now, however, by virtue of the stat. 4 & 5 Ann. c. 16, ss. 12 and 13, in the case of a bond conditioned for the payment of money, the payment of the principal sum due, with interest and costs, even though the bond be forfeited, and a suit has been commenced thereon, will be a full satisfaction and discharge (l). Also, by the stat. 8 & 9 Will. 3, c. 11, s. 8, damages and costs of suit only are recoverable in an action upon a bond executed by way of security for the performance of covenants contained in any deed or indenture (m).

Doctrine of merger as applicable to deeds generally.

Of specific properties inherent in a deed, the first to be noticed is that of merger. A deed being of a higher nature than a simple contract, will, if given or entered into in relation to the same subject-matter, altogether merge or

(i) Hurlstone on Bonds, p. 1.

2, s. 3.

(k) 2 Bla. Com. 340. The condition of a bond being for the benefit of the obligor must, in general, be strictly performed: Hurlstone on Bonds, Ch.

(l) 2 Bla. Com. 341.

(m) As to the effect and operation of this enactment, see Hurlstone on Bonds, pp. 129, 131.

swallow up the latter, and extinguish any right of action which might have been founded upon it (n). For instance, by the acceptance of a bond for a simple contract debt, the debt (according to the accustomed phraseology) will merge in the higher security (o); and if a covenant be entered into to pay a sum of money actually due, the remedy thenceforth must be upon the covenant, and not upon the original cause of action (p).

In Middleditch v. Ellis (q) it is observed,—“The general principle is clear, that, where a debt is secured by a bond, covenant, or other specialty, there the obligation by simple contract is gone: the lesser security is merged in the greater;” and the principle thus stated was forcibly applied by the Court to the facts before them in the case just mentioned. There the plaintiff was mortgagee under a mortgage from the defendant, with a power of sale; the mortgage deed containing the ordinary covenant by the defendant to pay the principal sum secured, with interest. The mortgaged property was sold by the plaintiff under the power thus given, but did not produce sufficient to discharge the debt due to him; and a meeting afterwards took place between the plaintiff and defendant, at which an account was stated between them charging the defendant with the full amount of principal and interest, and giving him credit for the net proceeds of the sale. It was held, upon these facts, that an action of debt upon the account stated would not lie, the balance found to be due thereby from the defendant to the (n) A debt due for rent is not, however, merged by giving a bond; because rent is a specialty debt: per Cresswell, J., 10 C. B. 574; Bull. N. P., 7th ed., 182 a. Nor can one bond merge another bond: 6 Rep. 45 b.

(o) Bac. Abr. Oblig. (D.); Higgins's case, 6 Rep. 44 b; per Lord Ellenborough, C. J., Drake v. Mitchell, 3

East, 251; see Mowatt v. Lord Lonsborough, 4 E. & B. 1. A specialty does not, strictly speaking, “merge or extinguish the debt; but it merges the remedy by way of proceeding upon the simple contract:” per Maule, J., 10 C. B. 573.

(p) Post, p. 279.

(q) 2 Exch. 623.

plaintiff having in truth arisen upon the deed, and not upon the subsequent settlement (r).

In order to trace out the full operation of the doctrine of merger, let us suppose that A., being indebted to B. in the sum of 100*l.* for goods sold and delivered, accepts a bill of exchange drawn upon him by B. at a date certain for that amount, and that the bill is taken by B. in lieu of immediate payment, the effect of this transaction will be to suspend or postpone, until the bill falls due, B.'s right of action against A. in respect of the goods sold (s). Let us next suppose, that the bill thus given is dishonoured at maturity, and that B., in lieu of then proceeding against A., as he would be entitled to do, in respect either of his original demand or upon the bill, agrees to take A.'s bond in the penal sum of 200*l.*, conditioned for the payment to B. of the 100*l.* above mentioned, and interest thereupon, at some future day. Now, if default be made in payment of the amount thus secured, the only remedy at law available to B. against A. will be by action upon the bond, his right of suit, whether in respect of his original claim or of the bill, having become merged in and extinguished by the instrument under seal. To pursue this inquiry a step further, let us suppose that B. recovers judgment in an action of debt upon the bond against A., the sole mode of obtaining satisfaction from his debtor thenceforth available to B. will be upon the judgment in which the bond debt will itself have become merged, in accordance with a principle already explained, and which is expressed by the legal phrase transit in rem judicatam (t).

But although the doctrine of merger in connection with specialties is in theory thus simple, difficulty occurs not unfrequently in applying it, for the rule in question is subject to some qualifications, which must now accordingly be noticed.

(r) See Petch v. Lyon, 9 Q. B. 147.

(s) Ante, p. 277.

(t) Ante, p. 261. See Florence v. Jennings, 2 C. B., N. S., 454.

"In general," says Bayley, J., in Twopenny v. Young (u), "where a simple contract security for a debt is given, it is extinguished by a specialty security, if the remedy given by the latter is co-extensive with that which the creditor had upon the former." Observing the qualification thus introduced into the rule, we may conclude that a bond given for a limited sum would not operate to merge a debt of indefinite amount (x), and that the contract under seal of a surety will not by operation of law extinguish the simple contract debt of the principal (y). So, if one of two makers of a joint and several promissory note executes to the holder a mortgage to secure the amount, and covenants therein to pay it, the other maker is not thus discharged; the remedy given by the specialty being confined to one of the debtors only, and therefore not co-extensive with that which the creditor had upon the note (z).

Again, where it clearly appears on the face of an instrument under seal that the intention of the parties to it was, that the original debt secured thereby should continue to exist, or that the security (if any) previously given should remain in force, some doubt may upon decided cases reasonably be felt, whether the deed will or will not necessarily have the effect of extinguishing the prior security or debt. If, indeed, a bond or covenant be entered into simpliciter for an existing debt, a plea stating this fact will be good to an action founded on the simple contract, although it do not allege that the instrument was given "in satisfaction of" the debt (a)—the reason being, that by force of law the simple contract merges in the higher security. "Prima facie," says Jervis, C. J., in Price v. Moulton (b), "the general rule is, that, where (u) 3 B. & C. 208.

(z) Norfolk R. C. v. M'Namara, 3 Exch. 628, 631.

(y) White v. Cuzler, 6 T. B. 176; Holmes v. Bell, 3 M. & Gr. 213.

(a) Ansell v. Baker, 15 Q. B. 20;

Solly v. Forbes, 2 Brod. & B. 38; Twopenny v. Young, 3 B. & C. 208.

(a) Per Parke, B., Norfolk R. C. v. M'Namara, 3 Exch. 631-2.

(b) 10 C. B. 561, 572.

a security of a higher nature is taken for the same debt, it operates a merger of the lower security; a party cannot sue for money had and received where he has got a security for the same debt, which gives him a remedy of a higher degree."

The remarks just made seem also applicable where the obligation under seal is expressly stated to be given as a "security for payment of a debt." In either of the foregoing cases the policy of our law is, that there shall not be two subsisting remedies, one upon the deed, and another upon the simple contract by the same person against the same person for the same demand (c).

It seems, then, quite established that the intention of parties not expressed upon the face of a deed can in no degree affect its legal operation in regard to merger. And it may perhaps be doubted, regard being had to the remarks of the Court of Common Pleas in Price v. Moulton (d), whether an expression even of the intention of the parties to exclude the operation of the doctrine of merger appearing in the deed would, per se, alter or qualify its strict legal operation, fortior et potentior est dispositio legis quam hominis (e).

Estoppel
by deed.

Inasmuch as a deed is a "solemn and authentic act," "a man," says Sir William Blackstone (f), "shall always be estopped by his own deed, or not permitted to aver or prove anything in contradiction to what he has once so solemnly and deliberately avowed." "The principle," says Taunton, J. (g), "is that, where a man has entered into a solemn engagement

(c) Per Maule, J., 10 C. B. 574.
See Mathew v. Blackmore, 1 H. & N. 762; Marker v. Kenrick, 13 C. B. 188, 199.

(d) 10 C. B. 561, with which, however, compare the observations of Bayley, J., and Holroyd, J., in Twopenny v. Young, 3 B. & C. 208.

(e) Co. Litt. 333 a.

(f) 2 Com. 295.

(g) Bowman v. Taylor, 2 Ad. & E. 291. "The principle of estoppel is that, whether there be a cause of action or not, the party cannot allege it:" per Coleridge, J., Parkes v. Smith, 15 Q. B. 312.

by deed under his hand and seal as to certain facts, he shall not be permitted to deny any matter which he has so asserted."

As illustrating the operation of the rule just stated, Horton v. The Westminster Improvement Commissioners (h) may be consulted. There the plaintiff sued upon a bond, the condition of which recited that, by virtue of certain Acts of Parliament, the defendants were authorised to borrow money for the purposes thereof, &c.; and that they in pursuance of the Acts, had borrowed of one P. a certain sum of money "for enabling them to carry the purposes of the said Acts into execution." To the declaration, which set out the above condition, the defendants pleaded, inter alia, that 'they did not, in pursuance of the said Acts of Parliament, borrow of P. the said sum, or any part thereof, for enabling them to carry the purposes of the Acts or any or either of them into execution, nor was the same lent or advanced by P. or any other person for those purposes.' This plea was on demurrer held bad, on the ground that the defendants were estopped by their deed from setting up the defence disclosed in it.

Precisely to a similar effect it was decided in Hill v. The Proprietors of the Manchester Water-works (i) that the obligor of a bond reciting a certain consideration is estopped from pleading that the consideration was in fact different from that recited.

Both the foregoing cases, besides exemplifying the doctrine of estoppel by deed, may usefully be consulted with reference to this important qualification of it—that a deed is not in all cases conclusive by way of estoppel, but is impeachable for fraud or illegality.

(h) 7 Exch. 780, and cases there cited; London and Continental Ass. Soc. v. Redgrave, 4 C. B., N. S., 524; Bowman v. Taylor, supra; Hills v. Laming, 9 Exch. 256. The subject of estoppel by deed is fully discussed in the Note to the Duchess of Kingston's case, 2 Smith L. C., 5th ed., pp. 705 et seq.

(i) 2 B. & Ad. 544.

Collins v.
Blanter.

The leading authority, however, in support of the qualification just specified of the doctrine of estoppel by deed is Collins v. Blanter (k), which established that illegality may be pleaded as a defence to an action on a contract under seal. There, to a declaration in debt on a joint and several bond for 700*l.* the defendant pleaded the following facts:—That, before and at the time of making the bond in question, and the promissory note presently mentioned, his (the defendant's) co-obligors, together with three other parties, stood indicted at the suit of one John Rudge for wilful and corrupt perjury, and had severally pleaded not guilty to the charge; that, when the trial was about to come on, it was agreed between John Rudge (the prosecutor), the plaintiff, and the parties indicted, that the plaintiff should give to the prosecutor his note for 350*l.* as a consideration for his not appearing to give evidence at the trial; it being further agreed that the bond sued upon should be executed by the defendant Blanter and his co-obligors to the plaintiff, to indemnify him in respect of the note on which he had, as just mentioned, become liable to the prosecutor.

Upon general demurrer to the above plea, it seems to have been mainly contended on behalf of the plaintiff, that, the bond appearing on the face of it to be good and lawful, no averment could be admitted to show that it had, in fact, been given upon an illegal consideration.

In the judgment delivered by Wilmot, C. J., in the above celebrated case, three points solemnly discussed demand our attention:—1. Whether, on the facts alleged, the consideration for giving the bond was illegal. 2. Whether a bond given for an illegal consideration is void at common law ab initio. 3. Whether, supposing the bond to be void, the facts disclosed in the plea to show that it was so, could by law be averred and specially pleaded.

With regard to the 1st point above specified, the Court remarked, "This is an agreement to stifle a prosecution for wilful and corrupt perjury, a crime most detrimental to the commonwealth; for it is the duty of every man to prosecute, appear against, and bring offenders of this sort to justice" (l). . . . "The promissory note was certainly void: what right, then, hath the plaintiff to recover upon this bond, which was given to indemnify him from a note that was void? They are both bad, the consideration for giving them being wicked and unlawful."

As to the 2nd point, the Court held the bond to be void ab initio, according to the principle laid down in the Institutes of Justinian (m) Quod turpi ex causâ promissum est, veluti si quis homicidium vel sacrilegium se facturum promittat, non valet.

"This," the Court proceeded to observe, with reference to the case before them, "is a contract to tempt a man to transgress the law, to do that which is injurious to the community; it is void by the common law, and the reason why the common law says such contracts are void is for the public good. You shall not stipulate for iniquity. All writers upon our law agree in this,—no polluted hand shall touch the pure fountains of Justice. Whoever is a party to an unlawful contract, if he hath once paid the money stipulated to be paid in pursuance thereof, he shall not have the help of a Court to fetch it back again."

As to the 3rd point, viz., whether the matter relied upon as a defence could be pleaded? the Court remarked—"It is now objected as a maxim, that the law will not endure a fact in pais dehors a specialty to be averred against it, and that a deed cannot be defeated by anything less than a deed, and

(l) See Keir v. Leeman, 6 Q. B. 308; S. C., 9 Q. B. 371; Reg. v. Hardey, 14 Q. B. 529; Reg. v. Blakemore, Id. 544; Masters v. Ibberson, 8 C. B. 100; Alleyne v. Reg., 5 E. & B. 399.
(m) I. 3. 20. 24.

a record by a record (n) ; and that, if there be no consideration for a bond, it is a gift. I answer that the present condition is for the payment of a sum of money, but that payment to be made was grounded upon a vicious consideration, which is not inconsistent with the condition of the bond, but strikes at the contract itself in such a manner as shows that in truth the bond never had any legal entity ; and if it never had any being at all, then the rule or maxim, that a deed must be defeated by a deed of equal strength, does not apply to this case. The law will legitimate the showing it void ab initio, and this can only be done by pleading" (o).

It would be wholly unnecessary to cite many cases at length (p), with a view to fortifying the conclusions arrived at on arguments so convincing as those above abstracted ; but I cannot refrain from directing attention to some few additional authorities in regard to the particular qualification of the rule as to estoppel by deed now under consideration.

In The Gas Light and Coke Company v. Turner (q), a plea to an action of covenant for rent due under a lease alleging that the premises in question were demised to the defendant for an unlawful purpose, was held to be good.

(n) An obligation by record may, however, be released by deed : per Parke, B., Barker v. St. Quintin, 12 M. & W. 453. See the authorities cited Leg. Max., 4th ed., pp. 842 et seq.

(o) As to the mode of raising the defence of fraud or illegality in answer to an action on a deed, see further, post, p. 288.

(p) See Duvergier v. Fellowes, 1 Cl. & F. 39 ; Simpson v. Lord Howden, 9 Cl. & F. 61 ; Jones v. Waite, Id. 101 ; Evans v. Edmonds, 13 C. B. 777 ; Canham v. Barry, 15 C. B. 597.

(q) 5 Bing. N. C. 666 ; S. C., 6 Id. 324, with which compare Feret v. Hill, 15 C. B. 207 : there plaintiff had been forcibly expelled by defendant from premises held under a written agreement into which defendant had been induced by plaintiff's misrepresentations to enter. Ejectment was held maintainable, inasmuch as an interest in the demised premises had actually passed by the agreement. The ground of the decision in Feret v. Hill is stated per Maule, J., 15 C. B. 611 ; et vide per Blackburn, J., Reg. v. Saddlers' Co., 32 L. J., Q. B., 843. See also Lord Ward v. Lumley, 5 H. & N. 87.

"The objection that has been urged on the part of the defendant," said Tindal, C. J., delivering the judgment of the Court in that case, "is, that this is an action founded upon a contract, and that a Court of law will not lend its aid to enforce the performance of a contract between parties which appears upon the face of the record to have been entered into by both the contracting parties for the express purpose of carrying into effect that which is prohibited by the law of the land. And we think, both from authority and reason, this objection must be allowed to prevail. That no legal distinction can be supported between the application of this objection to parol contracts and to contracts under seal appears the necessary inference from the cases of Collins v. Blantern (r) and Paxton v. Popham (s), in both which cases the principle above laid down was acted upon by the Court; and in each of which the action was upon a bond; and it would, indeed, be inconsistent with reason and principle to hold, that, by the mere ceremony of putting a seal to an instrument, that is, by the voluntary act of the parties themselves, a contract which was void in itself on the ground of its being in violation of the law of the land, should be deemed valid, and an action be maintainable thereon in a Court of justice."

In Higgins v. Pitt (t), the plaintiff sued for the breach of a covenant contained in a composition deed, whereby the defendant and others had covenanted to indemnify the plaintiff from all loss, &c., in respect of certain acceptances of his outstanding at the execution of the said deed. To this declaration the defendant pleaded that before executing the said indenture an agreement was entered into between the defendant, J. H. (his partner), and the plaintiff, under which the defendant and J. H. were to receive from the plaintiff more than his other creditors. The Court held this plea to be good, on the ground that every such secret bargain is a fraud on the creditors and void when it is made; so that it cannot be enforced even against a particeps criminis (u).

(r) Ante, p. 282.

(s) 9 East, 408.

(t) 4 Exch. 312.

In Mallalieu v. Hodgson (x), the effect of fraud in invalidating a deed was also much considered. There, to a count for goods sold and delivered, money lent, &c., a release was pleaded. To this plea the plaintiff replied, that the release was had and obtained from him by the fraud, covin, and misrepresentation of the defendants and others in collusion with them; to which the defendants rejoined a denial that the release was obtained by fraud, &c., as alleged. It appeared by the evidence in this case that the defendants, being indebted to several persons, and, amongst others, to the plaintiff, proposed a composition, which was agreed to by the majority of the creditors, but was refused by the plaintiff, unless upon the condition that he was paid more than the other creditors upon one part of his debt, and, as regarded the other part, was paid in full. Upon receiving notes for the amount agreed upon, and being assured by the defendants that no other creditor than himself was preferred, he signed a release for his entire debt. The assurance of the defendants, however, that no other creditor was preferred was untrue. Under the circumstances here detailed accordingly a twofold fraud was made manifest:—1st, the fraud upon the creditors, wherein both the plaintiff and the defendants participated; 2ndly, the misrepresentation put forth by the defendants to the plaintiff prior to his execution of the release. The question to be decided consequently was whether, on the above facts and pleadings, the plaintiff could successfully insist on the fraud practised towards him by the defendants, or whether his connection with the (u) See Atkinson v. Denby, 7 H. & 706, 707. See per Parks, B., Smith v. Salzmann, 9 Exch. 543.

(x) 16 Q. B. 689, and cases cited Id.

original fraud upon the creditors, whence it sprung and with which it was connected, did not effectually preclude him from so doing. This latter view of the question was taken by the majority of the Court. "The whole consideration for his (plaintiff's) release," observed Coleridge, J., "is the fraudulent preference promised to himself, and the withholding any such preference from other creditors: he (the plaintiff) cannot allege the former as a fraud on himself to vitiate the release, for he is particeps fraudis; and the latter is so entirely mixed up with it, deriving all its materiality from it, that the same disability seems to me to exist as to it."

The decision of the Court of Error in Fisher v. Bridges (y) is important with reference to the subject above adverted to. There, to a declaration in covenant for the payment of a certain sum of money, the defendant pleaded that, before the making of the deed declared upon, it was unlawfully agreed between the plaintiff and defendant that the former should sell and the latter purchase of him a conveyance of land for a term of years, in consideration of a sum of money to be paid by the defendant to the plaintiff, "to the intent and in order and for the purpose, as the plaintiff at the time of the making the said agreement well knew," that the land should be sold by lottery, contrary to the form of the statutes in such case made and provided; that afterwards, "in pursuance of the said illegal agreement," the land was assigned for the term, and, a part of the purchase-money remaining unpaid, the defendant, to secure the payment thereof, made the deed and covenant in the declaration mentioned. Upon these pleadings the Court of Queen's Bench held, that the contract in question appeared to have been made after the illegal transaction between the plaintiff

(y) 3 E. & B. 642 (reversing judgment in S. C., 2 E. & B. 118), with which compare Hill v. Fox, 4 H. & N.

359. See A.-G. v. Hollingworth, 2 H. & N. 416; O'Connor v. Bradshaw, 5 Exch. 882.

and defendant had terminated; that it formed no part of such transaction, and was consequently unaffected by it. The judgment thus given was, however, reversed in error upon reasoning of the following kind, which seems conclusive;—the original agreement was clearly tainted with illegality, inasmuch as all lotteries are prohibited by the stat. 10 & 11 Will. 3, c. 17, s. 1; and by the 12 Geo. 2, c. 28, s. 4, all sales of houses, lands, &c., by lottery are declared to be void to all intents and purposes. The agreement being illegal, then, no action could have been brought to recover the purchase-money of the land which was the subject-matter thereof; and the covenant accordingly, being connected with an illegal agreement, could not be enforced (z). And, further, even if the plea above abstracted were not to be understood as alleging that the covenant declared upon was given in pursuance of an illegal agreement, it would, remarked the Court of Exchequer Chamber, still show a good defence to the action, for “the covenant was given for the payment of the purchase-money. It springs from and is the creature of that illegal agreement; and if the law would not enforce the illegal contract, so neither will it allow parties to enforce a security for purchase-money which, by the original bargain, was tainted with illegality.”

Since the case of Collins v. Blantern it has been held as settled law, that a deed is impeachable on the ground of illegality or of fraud, which, as already stated (a), “vitiates everything,” and to which the reasoning of Lord Chief Justice Wilmot, already cited, applies quite as forcibly as to illegality; either of these defences being properly raised by a special plea, as, indeed, is now expressly required by the Pleading Rules, Hil. T. 1853 (reg. 8).

But although the general rule is free from doubt, that fraud or illegality may, if aptly pleaded, afford a good defence to an action upon a contract under seal, it would be erroneous to affirm that a deed tainted with illegality or fraud in its inception is necessarily void, and without "any legal entity" (b), as between all parties and for all purposes.

(z) Paxton v. Popham, 9 East, 408; C. 324; S. C., 5 Id. 666.
Gas Light Co. v. Turner, 6 Bing. N. (a) Ante, p. 264.

It could not, indeed, be contended after perusing the cases below cited (c), that a party to a contract under seal is in general estopped from alleging his own fraud, or his own participation in an illegal transaction by way of answer to an action upon the deed. But nevertheless a conveyance made in contravention of some particular statute may be invalidated thereby quoad the object contemplated by the parties, and yet may remain good and effectual as against the grantor. Thus a conveyance made for the mere purpose of conferring a vote has been held void only to the extent of preventing the right of voting from being acquired, but valid between the parties to pass an interest in the land (d). And an assignment of goods in fraud of creditors may be binding and unimpeachable as between the assignor and assignee (e). In these and other cases of a like kind, the legal maxim would seem forcibly to apply,—Quod fieri non debet factum valet. Every transaction is, moreover, according to an universal rule, presumed to be valid; so that the proof of fraud lies upon the party by whom it is impugned (f).

The mode of raising the defence of estoppel by deed is by

(b) Ante, p. 284.

(c) Collins v. Blantern, ante, p. 282; Higgins v. Pitt, ante, p. 285; (with which, however, compare Mal-lalieu v. Hodgson, ante, p. 286, and the remarks per Cur. in Doe d. Roberts v. Roberts, 2 B. & Ald. 369, 370); Fisher v. Bridges, 3 E. & B. 642; Geers v. Mare, 2 H. & C. 339, 345, 346; Evans v. Edmonds, 13 C. B. 777; Wontner v. Shairp, 4 C. B. 404; Watson v. Earl of Charlemont, 12 Q.

B. 856, 864.

(d) Phillipotts v. Phillipotts, 10 C. B. 85, and cases cited per Maulc, J., Id. 95. See Marshall v. Bowen, 7 M. & Gr. 188; Callaghan v. Callaghan, 8 C. & F. 374.

(e) Bessey v. Windham, 6 Q. B. 166, recognising Doe d. Roberts v. Roberts, 2 B. & Ald. 367. Bowes v. Foster, 2 H. & N. 779, is clearly distinguishable from the cases cited supra.

(f) Per Parke, B., 8 Exch. 400.

pleading it if there be an opportunity (g); by demurrer, where the estoppel appears on the face of the record (h); or, by evidence, in other cases,—as where the proceedings take place in a County Court (i).

“The doctrine of estoppel,” says Lord Denman, C. J. (k), “has been guarded with great strictness; not because the party enforcing it necessarily wishes to exclude the truth, for it is rather to be supposed that that is true which the opposite party has already recited under his hand and seal, but because the estoppel may exclude the truth.” It is, therefore, a recognised rule that estoppels must be certain (l), and that a plea by way of estoppel must be certain to every intent,—which seems to amount to this,—that it must meet and remove by anticipation every possible answer of the adversary (m).

It may be well to add, that, where the matter relied upon as an estoppel occurs in the recital of a deed, the Court will look narrowly at the words used; for, although when a recital is intended to be a statement which all the parties to the deed have mutually agreed to admit as true, it is an estoppel upon all; yet when it is intended to be the statement of one party only, the estoppel is confined to that party; the intention being ascertained from construing the instrument (n).

Although, as shown in the preceding pages, fraud may be set up as a good defence at law to an action, even upon so

Relief in equity against fraudulent deed.

(g) 1 Smith L. C., 5th ed., 707; per Lord Campbell, C. J., Reg. v. Inhab. of Haughton, 1 E. & B. 512.

(h) 1 Smith L. C., 5th ed., 707.

(i) Shaw v. Beck, 8 Exch. 392; Sargent v. Wedlake, 11 C. B. 732.

(k) 2 Ad. & E. 289.

(l) Kepp v. Wiggett, 10 C. B. 35.

(m) Steph. Pl., 5th ed., 390.

(n) Judgm., Stronghill v. Buck, 14 Q. B. 787; Young v. Raincock, 7 C.

B. 310; Wiles v. Woodward, 5 Exch. 557; Carpenter v. Buller, 8 M. & W. 212; per Martin, B., South Eastern R. Co. v. Warton, 6 H. & N. 527; Ister v. Mentor Ass. Co., 3 E. & B. 47. An estoppel by deed, in like manner as an estoppel by record, extends to persons claiming under the party who is estopped: 2 Smith L. C., 5th ed., 708.

solemnly authenticated an instrument as a deed, and although the stat. 13 Eliz. c. 5 has rendered utterly void as against creditors fraudulent bonds, grants, or conveyances, &c., it is nevertheless to Courts of equity that recourse is usually had where the execution of a deed has been obtained by collusion or through misrepresentation or fraud. Courts of equity, indeed, are much better able to deal with such cases than Courts of law, because their decrees can so be moulded as to do complete justice between litigating parties; whereas the verdict of a jury (which, however, is often made ancillary to the settlement of a case in equity), must be confined to saying yea or nay with regard to each particular issue submitted to their decision. Courts of equity, moreover, as remarked by Dr. Story (o), "do not restrict themselves by the same rigid rules as Courts of law do in the investigation of fraud, and in the evidence and proofs required to establish it." In practice, therefore, where execution of a deed, ex. gr. a bond, has been obtained by a party under circumstances savouring of fraud, it may often be advisable to file a bill in equity with a view to having the deed declared void, and for its delivery up and cancellation, rather than to await proceedings upon it in a Court of law. Where, moreover, proceedings have been there actually commenced upon a deed obtained by fraud, it will very possibly be deemed expedient to apply to equity for an injunction to restrain the action rather than to go to trial before a jury upon an issue as to fraud (p).

Closely related to the doctrine of estoppel is this proposition—that 'a deed requires no consideration to support it.' Where a contract has been duly executed by sealing and delivery—not being a deed of feoffment, nor operating Consideration not necessary to support deed.

(o) Eq. Jurisp., 6th ed., s. 190.

(p) As to the grounds on which equity will interpose where the execution of a deed has been obtained by fraud, see Mitf. Pl., 5th ed., p. 150; Story, Eq. Jurisp., 6th ed., ss. 695, 700, et seq.; Reynell v. Sprye, 1 De G. M. & G. 660.

by the Statute of Uses—the solemnity of the instrument dispenses, as between the parties to it (if it be a deed inter partes), or, as between the obligor and obligee (if it be a bond), with the necessity of a consideration. “A man may, therefore,” as once observed by Lord Mansfield (q), “without consideration, enter into an express covenant under hand and seal;” and as Blackstone (r) tells us, if a man enters into a voluntary bond, “he shall not be allowed to aver the want of a consideration, in order to evade the payment; for every bond, from the solemnity of the instrument, carries with it an internal evidence of a good consideration;” so that Courts of justice will support it, in the absence of fraud, as against the obligor himself, though not, in general, “to the prejudice of creditors or strangers to the contract” (s).

A deed, however, as we have already seen (t), is impeachable for fraud; and one main ingredient in fraud, or in the proof of it, is not unfrequently a want of consideration (u). When, moreover, the inquiry is respecting the operation of a deed with reference to the rights of third parties, proof of the absence of consideration may be almost conclusive evidence of collusive dealing and of an intention to defraud; and this remark will apply, whether the transaction in question be considered according to the principles of our common law, or with reference to the specific provisions of the statutes 13 Eliz. c. 5 (x), (upon which Turyne's case (y) was decided), and 27 Eliz. c. 4.

(q) Shubrick v. Salmond, 3 Burr. 1639; Judgm., Morley v. Boothby, 3 Bing. 111, 112.

(r) 2 Com. 446; per Lord Kenyon, C. J., Fallowes v. Taylor, 7 T. R. 475, 477; per Abbott, C. J., Irons v. Smallpiece, 2 B. & Ald. 551, 554; Smilk v. Scott, 6 C. B., N. S., 771.

(s) 2 Bla. Com. 446.

(t) Ante, p. 281.

(u) Equity, however, will not relieve against a voluntary gift, if there were no undue influence: Judgm., Huguenin v. Baseley, 14 Ves. 290. The cases in which equity interposes or refuses its aid in favour of volunteers, are collected in the Note to Ellison v. Ellison, 1 White & Tud. Eq. L. C., 2nd ed., 199.

(x) Made perpetual by the stat. 29 Eliz. c. 5.

(y) 3 Rep. 80, and 1 Smith L. C., 5th ed., 1; to which case, with the Note appended thereto in Mr. Smith's collection, the reader is referred.

Assuming, however, that there is consideration for a deed, that consideration may be of one or other of two kinds—it may be a good or it may be a valuable consideration. The distinction here presenting itself is clearly explained by Blackstone (2), who says, that “a good consideration is such as that of blood, or of natural love and affection,” and “is founded on motives of generosity, prudence, and natural duty;” whereas, a “valuable consideration is such as money, marriage, or the like, which the law esteems an equivalent given for the grant.”

Now, the above distinction is in very many cases extremely material, inasmuch as a voluntary deed, i.e., a deed made without any consideration at all, or even for a good, though not for a valuable consideration, is void as against subsequent bond fide purchasers for value, and even with notice, by the statute 27 Eliz. c. 4, above mentioned, and also (when executed by an insolvent party), as against creditors, by virtue of the 13 Eliz. c. 5 (a).

But, besides cases of the above class, there are others, connected with the transfer of realty, in which the question as

(2) 2 Com. p. 297. See also Shepp. Touch. p. 64.

(a) In Gale v. Williamson, 8 M. & W. 405, Rolfe, B., speaking of the stat. 13 Eliz. c. 5, observes, “It is a mistake to suppose that the statute makes void, as against creditors, all voluntary deeds. All that it says is, that a practice of making covinous and fraudulent deeds had prevailed, and therefore, that all feoffments, gifts, &c., of any lands or goods and chattels, as against the persons whose actions, debts, &c., by such covinous and fraudulent devices and practices, shall be disturbed, hindered, delayed, or defrauded, shall be void. The Courts, in construing the statute, have held it to include deeds made without consideration, as being primâ facie fraudulent, because necessarily tending to delay creditors. But the question in each case is, whether the deed is fraudulent or not; and to rebut the presumption of fraud, the party is surely at liberty to give in evidence all the circumstances of the transaction, not to contradict the consideration stated in the deed, but to take it out of the operation of the statute.” “The rule of law,” says Alderson, B., in the above case, “is, that a deed made merely in consideration of natural love and affection primâ facie imports fraud; that alone shows that it is not conclusively, but only presumptively fraudulent. It follows, therefore, that evidence may be adduced to show that no fraud was, in fact, intended.” to the existence of a consideration for a deed, or even as to the nature of such consideration, may have an important bearing on the rights and liabilities of parties. In equity, for instance, a feoffment to a stranger without consideration or declaration of a trust, is (irrespectively of statute law) regarded as made for the use of the feoffor, although in this case the legal estate would, prior to the Statute of Uses, have become transferred to and vested in the feoffee. From the absence of consideration for the grant and of any indication of a contrary intention, equity presumed that the feoffment was intended to be for the use of the feoffor, though such presumption might be rebutted by showing that any the smallest consideration had passed from the feoffee.

The effect of the Statute of Uses being to transfer the use into possession, its operation in the case supposed, that, namely, of a feoffment without consideration, would be to give to the feoffor the seisin and possession of the land, notwithstanding livery of seisin had been duly made to the feoffee, the use (according to the technical phrase), under the circumstances supposed, resulting to the feoffor. If, however, the feoffment be made "to the use" of the feoffee, the case is different, inasmuch as those words would, before the statute, have raised a trust for the benefit of the feoffee, and now, by its operation, vest in him the seisin and possession of the land. This subject will be found clearly and concisely explained in the treatise below cited (b), where the result is shortly stated to be, that, since the Statute of Uses, it has become requisite to a feoffment, either that there should be a consideration for the gift, or that it should be expressed to be made not simply "unto," but "unto and to the use of" the feoffee. An inspection of any ordinary conveyance will show, that the receipt of the nominal consideration expressed therein is acknowledged by the grantor, who would consequently thus be estopped at law, in the absence of fraud, from calling in question, at any future time, the fact of a consideration having passed (c).

(b) Williams' Real Prop., 3rd ed., pp. 122, 132.

Passing on to a notice of deeds other than conveyances, and assuming that there is neither fraud nor illegality in the transaction out of which the particular instrument originates, nor anything appearing in contravention of the Bankrupt or any other Acts, the mere absence or failure of consideration for a bond or covenant will, in a Court of law, be wholly immaterial (d). Hence arises a noticeable distinction between the case of a deed founded on a past and insufficient consideration, and a deed executed with a view to carrying out an illegal purpose; the former, inasmuch as no consideration at all is required to support the contract, being good (e), whilst the latter will be wholly void (f).

With respect to contracts under seal, founded upon illegal considerations, I need here say nothing further, inasmuch as I shall presently have to inquire generally, and at some length, into the nature of the consideration for a promise and of the subject-matter of an agreement.

Another peculiar characteristic of a contract under seal is this, that, in certain cases, it will bind the heir and sometimes even the devisee of the contracting party. Where, for instance, a person by bond, covenant, or other specialty, binds himself and his heirs, the heir and devisee are each liable and must be jointly sued for the default of the ancestor or testator, to the extent of assets freehold and copyhold which they have taken by descent or devise (g).

Specialty binds the heir.

(c) See R. v. Inhab. of Cheadle, 3 B. & Ad. 833, 838.

(d) Per Parke, B., Wallis v. Day, 2 M. & W. 277.

(e) Arg., Beaumont v. Reeve, 8 Q. B. 485, and cases there cited; Nye v. Moseley, 6 B. & C. 133; Friend v. Harrison, 2 C. & P. 584; Fallowes v. Taylor, 7 T. B. 475, 477. See Fisher

v. Bridges, 2 E. & B. 118, 126, 127; S. C. (in error), 3 Id. 642, cited ante, p. 257.

(f) Binnington v. Wallis, 4 B. & Ald. 650, 652; Walker v. Perkins, 3 Burr. 1568; Fisher v. Bridges, supra.

(g) 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 47, s. 3. If there be no heir, the devisee may be sued alone: Id. s. 4. As to

In order, however, to render the heir liable on the ancestor's specialty, it is necessary, 1st, that he be expressly named in the bond or covenant (h); and 2ndly, that he have assets by descent from the covenantor; for though the covenant descends to the heir, whether he inherits any estate or not, it cannot be effectually put in suit until he has assets by descent (i).

This liability of the heir existed at common law, though the devisee was first rendered liable in an action of debt by the stat. 3 & 4 W. & M. c. 14 (k), and now in an action of debt or covenant by stat. 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 47, which repeals the former enactment.

The heir of an obligor will clearly not be liable unless named in the ancestor's bond (l), though the personal representatives of one who contracts by specialty are, although not named, liable to the extent of assets, except on a covenant which, from its nature, must be performed by the covenantor and determines by his death (m).

A very remarkable distinction thus presents itself between a specialty and a simple contract, for liability in respect of the latter must be enforced, if at all, against the personal representatives of the contractor. It will, of course, be remembered that I have been here speaking of the rights and liabilities of parties at common law; for the freehold and copyhold estates of a deceased debtor have, by recent statutes, been declared assets in equity for the payment of his debts, the operation of the above statute, see Re Taylor's Estate, 8 Exch. 384; Broom's Pract., Vol. 1, p. 503.

(h) Platt. on Cov. 449; Bac. Abr. "Heir" (D.) and (I.); Derisly v. Cusance, 4 T. R. 75.

(i) 2 Bla. Com. 244.

(k) See Farley v. Briant, 3 Ad. & E. 847, 850, 859; per Grosz, J., Wilson v. Knubley, 7 East, 135; Dyke v. Sweeting, Willes, 585, 587; Hunting

v. Sheldrake, 9 M. & W. 256.

(l) See Barber v. Fox, 2 Wms. Saund. 136, 137 b; Co. Litt. 209. a.

(m) Hyde v. Dean of Windsor, Cro. Eliz. 552, 553; cited per Wightman, J., Penfold v. Abbott, 32 L. J., Q. B., 67, 68; Judgm., Taylor v. Caldwell, 3 B. & S. 835; Wills v. Murray, 4 Exch. 843; per Parke, B., Siboni v. Kirkman, 1 M. & W. 423; Wentworth v. Cock, 10 Ad. & E. 42.

as well by simple contract as by specialty ; nevertheless, it is enacted (n), that, in the administration of such assets, "all creditors by specialty, in which the heirs are bound, shall be paid the full amount of the debts due to them before any of the creditors by simple contract or by specialty, in which the heirs are not bound, shall be paid any part of their demands."

The last characteristic of a specialty which here requires notice is, that it can only be discharged by an instrument under seal, or by the judgment of a Court of competent authority, or by statute. The proposition holds true at law (o), that a contract thus solemnly authenticated can only be dissolved, released, or discharged by matter of as high a nature as itself.

Specialty how discharged.

It is obvious, that, where matter of discharge by parol from a liability under seal exists at all, it must have arisen either before or after a breach of the special contract. If it has arisen before breach, the rule just stated strictly holds ; if after breach, the matter of discharge may sometimes afford ground of defence to an action for damages.

Of the former of these two propositions, The Mayor, &c., of Berwick v. Oswald (p) illustrates the truth. There the defendant was sued in covenant upon a bond which he had entered into as surety for the due performance of his duty by one M., who had been elected to fill the office of treasurer of the town of Berwick. The breaches assigned were, that the said M. had not paid over, nor truly accounted for, certain monies to the plaintiffs. In answer to this declaration the defendant pleaded, inter alia, that, after the making of the bond in question, and before any of the breaches of covenant

(n) 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 104. See also 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 47, s. 9 ; 11 & 12 Vict. c. 44.

(o) See per Pollock, C. B., 1 H. & N. 458.

(p) 1 R. & B. 295 ; S. C., 3 Id.

658, 5 H. L. Ca. 856, with which compare Mayor, &c., of Cambridge v. Dennis, E. B. & E. 660, and cases there cited ; Blake's case, 6 Rep. 44 ; Snow v. Franklin, 1 Lutw. 358 ; Days v. Waghorn, 1 Taunt. 428.

alleged, the said M., and others as his sureties, executed and delivered to the plaintiffs, and the plaintiffs accepted and received from them, another bond "in full satisfaction and discharge of" that declared upon, and of all covenants, &c. contained therein. The bond thus alleged to have been given in lieu of that declared upon was similar to it, save that the defendant was not named therein as a surety. The Court held that the plea thus put on the record was clearly bad, because an accord and satisfaction cannot be pleaded to an action upon a deed before breach, and there was nothing in the second deed which could operate as a release of that previously executed (q).

In conformity with the decision of the Court of Queen's Bench above-mentioned is that of the Court of Exchequer in Spence v. Healey (r), where it was held, that a covenant to pay a sum certain, after notice given, could not, before breach, be discharged by matter in pais, such as the delivery to the covenantee of goods and chattels by the covenantor:

But although it is true, that, if an action be brought on a specialty, the defendant cannot allege by way of legal discharge a parol agreement made before breach, that the covenant or obligation shall not be performed; yet, after breach, a parol agreement may, where the damages sought to be recovered are unliquidated, operate by way of accord and satisfaction (s), and matter in pais, as payment, may so be pleaded. "Nothing," however, says Parke, B. (t), "can dis-

(q) Accord and satisfaction may however be pleaded in discharge of the condition of a bond, for "though the bond is under seal, the condition is of a thing resting on evidence only. It may be compared to matter in pais:" 1 Selw. N. P., 12th ed., 581, citing per Tindal, C. J., West v. Blakeway, 2 M. & Gr. 751; Pinnel's case, 5 Rep. 117 n.

(r) 8 Exch. 668, and cases cited Id. 669 n. (b). See also Smith v. Trowe- dale, cited post, p. 300; West v. Blakeway, 2 M. & Gr. 729; Harris v. Goodwyn, Id. 405.

(s) "The meaning of an accord and satisfaction is, that there has been an agreement, and that that agreement has been completely performed, and so there has been a total extinguishment of the original cause of action:" per Maule, J., Gabriel v. Dresser, 15 C. B. 628.

(t) Pool v. Tumberidge, 2 M. & W.

charge a covenant to pay on a certain day but actual payment or tender on that day." Blake's case (u) may be regarded as the leading authority in support of the qualification of the general rule just specified. That was an action for breach of a covenant to repair, brought against the assignee of the lease, to which the defendant pleaded an accord between himself and the plaintiff, and execution thereof, in satisfaction and discharge of his default in not repairing. Upon demurrer to this plea it was objected, that the "action of covenant was founded on the deed, which could not be discharged but by matter of as high a nature, and not by any accord or matter in pais, for nihil tam conveniens est naturali æquitati ut unumquodque dissolvi eo ligamine quo ligatum est; and it appears by all our books, that neither arbitrament nor accord with satisfaction is a plea when the action is grounded on a deed." But, in answer to this objection, it was resolved by the whole Court, that "the defendant's plea was good in the case at bar, for there is a difference when a duty accrues by the deed in certainty, tempore confectionis scripti, as by covenant, bill, or bond, to pay a sum of money, there this certain duty takes its essence and operation originally and solely by the writing, and, therefore, it ought to be avoided by a matter of as high a nature" . . . "but when no certain duty accrues by the deed, but a wrong or default subsequent, together with the deed, gives an action to recover damages," . . . "for such wrong or default accord with satisfaction is a good plea."

Applying the rules thus stated to the facts before them, the Court further observed, in Blake's case, that the covenant to repair did not, at the time of making it, give the plaintiff

223, 226 (sited Judgm., Haldane v. Johnson, 8 Exch. 695), where it is observable that the learned judge is represented to have added the following words, which, however, do not appear in the S. C. as reported 6 L. J., N. S.,

Exch. 74 :—"Although if the party afterwards chooses to receive the money that may be pleaded by way of accord and satisfaction."

(u) 6 Rep. 43 b.

any cause of action; but the wrong or default after in not repairing, together with the deed, gave a right to recover damages (x): and then laid down generally, that, in all actions, where damages only (y) are to be recovered, accord with satisfaction may be pleaded (z); though (as we elsewhere read) "where the covenant is for the payment of a sum certain, the covenantee has a right to object that the discharge is not by deed" (a).

Smith v. Trowsdale (b) merits consideration in connection with the subject just adverted to; there the declaration, after stating that a submission to arbitration under seal had been entered into between the plaintiff and the defendants, and that an award had been made thereupon, set forth as the gist of the action the non-payment of money due under the award. The plea to this declaration set up a new agreement, after the breach of duty arising out of the award, whereby, in consideration of the defendants' paying a smaller sum at an earlier time, the parties mutually stipulated that this new agreement and the performance of it by the defendants should be accepted by the plaintiff, in satisfaction of all that was to be done under the award and of all damages sustained by reason of the breach of it. The Court were of opinion that this plea was substantially a plea of accord and satisfaction, and that there was no necessity for showing that the agreement which it set up was under seal, the action not (x) "The distinction appears to be this: there can be no dispensation with a contract under seal except by a release under seal. Accord and satisfaction before breach is therefore a bad plea in covenant, because it amounts to a dispensation. But accord and satisfaction after breach is a good plea, because the subject-matter of the payment and acceptance in satisfaction is,—not the covenant, which remains entire,—but the damages sustained by the particular breach of it, for which the action is brought:" 6 M. & Gr. 262 (a). See also Doe d. Muston v. Gladwin, 6 Q. B. 953; Rawlinson v. Clarke, 14 M. & W. 187. *

(y) By which expression, apparently, must be understood unliquidated damages.

(z) 6 Rep. 44 b; Peytoc's case, 9 Rep. 77.

(a) Spence v. Healey, 8 Exch. 670.

(b) 3 E. & B. 83, with which compare Braddick v. Thompson, 8 East, 344.

being brought directly on the deed of submission, but for the breach of duty in not performing the award. "The deed," remarked Wightman, J., "is only stated by way of inducement, to show that the arbitrator had authority to bind the parties. The declaration need not have alleged that the submission was by deed."

The result of what has been above stated seems to be, that "accord and satisfaction" before breach cannot be pleaded in answer to an action of covenant; but that "accord and satisfaction" after breach will, in this action, be a good plea where "no certain duty accrues by the deed," using that phrase in the sense assigned to it in Blake's case (c).

In the particular case of a covenant or bond to pay a sum of money on a day named, payment ad diem would in effect be a plea of performance,—in the one case of the covenant—in the other of the condition of the bond, and, therefore, might, at common law, be pleaded by way of defence in an action upon the specialty. And it must be remarked, that, by statute 4 Ann. c. 16, s. 12, where debt is brought upon any bond, with a condition or defeasance to make void the same upon payment of a lesser sum at a day or place certain, if the obligor, his heirs, executors, or administrators have before the action brought paid to the obligee, his executors or administrators, the principal and interest due by the condition or defeasance, though such payment was not made strictly according to the condition or defeasance, yet it may be pleaded in bar of such action (d).

A simple contract, is a contract either in writing not under seal or verbal or implied from the acts and conduct of the parties (e). It may be either executory or executed (f).

Simple
contract
—what

(c) Ante, p. 299.

(d) See the Form of a Plea of Payment, ante, p. 177.

(e) A simple contract is sometimes in part evidenced by writing, and in part by words or conduct.

(f) Ante, pp. 249, 250.

An executory simple contract, is an agreement,—either in writing not under seal or verbal or implied,—of two or more persons on sufficient consideration, to do or not to do a particular thing (g).

A simple contract may be either wholly executed, i. e., each party to it may have performed that which he originally undertook to do, or it may be executed as regards one of the contracting parties, and executory as regards the other (h).

The distinctions here adverted to as existing amongst simple contracts, as well as the nature of an implied contract, will become apparent, not merely from a perusal of the pages immediately following, but from many portions of this Book,—especially those which treat of the operation of the Statute of Frauds, and of contracts mercantile or between particular persons. For the present, I purpose to restrict myself to such remarks in regard to simple contracts generally as may lay the foundation for more minute knowledge upon this subject, directing attention from time to time to a few selected cases in illustration of what is said.

Terms of contract must be definitively settled.

By the term “contract” used in the preceding paragraphs, must be understood an agreement or convention between parties, the terms of which have been definitively arranged and settled; for, upon an agreement inchoate merely, and incomplete, no legal remedy can be enforced. Efficacy being imparted to a contract by the mutual consent of the contractor and contractee, no such force attaches to it so long as the negotiation is still pending and open, for “till both parties are agreed either has a right to be off” (i).

(g) See 2 Bla. Com., p. 442.

(h) Ante, p. 250. The following cases may serve to illustrate the distinction between contracts, executory and executed: Graham v. Gibson, 4 Exch. 768; Tanner v. Moore, 9 Q. B. 1; Hochster v. De la Tour, 2 R. & B. 678.

(i) Per Best, C. J., Routledge v. Grant, 4 Bing 661; Fellhouse v. Bindley, 11 C. B., N. S., 869; Governor, &c., of the Poor of Kingston-upon-Hull v. Petch, 10 Exch. 610; Gilkes v. Leonino, 4 C. B., N. S., 485; Duncan v. Topham, 8 C. B. 225; Dunlop v. Higgins, 1 H. L. Ca. 381;

Cope v. Albinson (k) will illustrate the above remark. There the defendant through his agent made an offer to the plaintiffs in these words, viz., "to pay a composition of seven shillings in the pound on your (the plaintiffs') account against his (the defendant's) nephew, J. A., the younger, and on your giving proper indemnification to both. In the event of your accepting the offer I will thank you to forward me full particulars of your account, in order that the same may be properly examined." This offer was accepted by the plaintiffs, and the particulars of their account forwarded accordingly; and a reasonable time, as was alleged, having elapsed for the payment of the composition by the defendant, they brought their action against him to compel payment of the same. The Court held the action not maintainable, the agreement not having been completed between the parties. "This," observed Parke, B., "is an agreement for a composition upon terms thereafter to be settled, and is like a contract for the purchase of an estate for such a sum as the parties may think fair."

Again, if application for an absolute and unqualified allotment of shares in a projected company be made, and the letter of allotment contain the qualification that the shares are not transferable, the proposal and acceptance, not being ad idem, will together fail to evidence a binding contract between the applicant for shares and the company (l).

Bayley v. Fitzmaurice, 6 E. & B. 868; S. C., 8 Id. 664; 9 H. L. Ca. 78; Cheveley v. Fuller, 13 C. B. 122; Jordan v. Norton, 4 M. & W. 155.

(k) 8 Exch. 185.

(l) Duke v. Andrews, 2 Exch. 290, cited per Alderson, B., Wiley v. Parrott, 3 Exch. 213; Chaplin v. Clarke, 4 Exch. 403; Vollans v. Fletcher, 1 Exch. 20; Moore v. Garwood, Id. 686; Wontner v. Shairp, 4 C. B. 404; Hamilton v. Terry, 11 C. B. 954; Hudspeth v. Yarnold, 9 C. B. 625. See Hegarty v. Milne, 14 C. B. 627; Baines v. Woodfall, 6 C. B., N. S., 657; Andrews v. Garrett, Id. 262; Barker v. Allan, 5 H. & N. 61; Russell v. Thornton, 4 H. & N. 788; S. C., 6 Id. 140 (with which acc. Holland v. Russell, 1 B. & S. 424; S. C. 32 L. J., Q. B., 297); Stones v. Dowler, 29 L. J., Ex., 123; Bog Lead Mining Co. v. Montague, 10 C. B., N. S., 481, 491.

But though the terms of a contract, as for the sale of goods, must be mutually agreed upon and arranged between the parties to it (m), the omission of the particular mode or time of payment, or even of the price itself, will not necessarily invalidate the contract. Goods, it has been remarked (n), may be sold, and frequently are sold, when it is the intention of the parties to bind themselves by a contract which does not specify the price or the mode of payment, leaving them to be settled by some future agreement; or to be determined by what is reasonable under the circumstances. And, accordingly, if the evidence in any given case shows that the parties intended to bind themselves by a contract of sale, the agreement may be binding, so as to pass the property in the thing bargained for, although one or other of the matters just mentioned has not been definitively settled (o). In any such case the Court will endeavour to ascertain the real intention of the parties, and, having done so, to effectuate it (p).

With reference more particularly to mercantile contracts, which are so frequently concluded by written correspondence between parties, it may be proper to add that, where a contract is made by letter between A. and B., A. making an offer, and B. accepting that offer unconditionally, the contract will be complete when B.'s letter is posted, although it may chance not to reach its destination (q).

Mutuality—
what.

Again, there must be reciprocity of assent between the parties to a contract in order that it may be complete and binding (r); and if the term mutuality be used as synony-

(m) See further upon this subject, Foster v. Smith, 18 C. B. 156; Daniels v. Charaley, 11 C. B. 739.

(n) Valpy v. Green, 4 C. B. 837, 864. See also Atkinson on the Contract of Sale, pp. 49 et seq.

(o) Valpy v. Green, supra.

(p) See Read v. Fairbanks, 13 C. B.

692.

(q) Duncan v. Topham, 8 C. B. 225; Dunlop v. Higgins, 1 H. L. Ca. 381; per Wilde, C. J., Harvey v. Johnston, 6 C. B. 304; Adams v. Lindsell, 1 B. & Ald. 681. See Harman v. Coryton, 5 Exch. 453.

(r) Ante, p. 252.

mous with "reciprocity of assent," it will be true to say, that there must be mutuality in a contract (s). The term in question is, however, often employed to signify "reciprocity of obligation," and in this sense the rule which has been just stated does not invariably hold true. Important classes of contracts might indeed be specified, in which, on their inception, legal liability attaches and can be enforced as against one only of the contracting parties (t). For instance, an agreement within the 4th section of the Statute of Frauds will bind the party who has signed it, although there may be no legal remedy at his suit against the other by reason of this latter party having omitted to sign it (u). The contract of an infant is in most cases voidable at his election, though quoad an adult contracting with him it absolutely binds (x). The individual who executes a guarantee assumes liability, without having any power to compel the party to whom such security is given to supply the goods, or to extend the credit in pursuance of the terms of the guarantee (y). This is clearly explained in the case infra (z), by Parke, B., who remarks that where one person says to

(s) A simple instance, showing what is meant by "mutuality," presents itself in the ordinary contract of sale. "There must," says Wilde, C. J., in Wood v. Copper Miners' Co., 7 C. B. 936, "be two parties to a transaction to make it enure as a purchase. When two persons mutually agree that one of them shall purchase goods of the other, that amounts to a contract that the one shall sell and that the other shall buy." The above proposition is, however, controverted by Martin, B., Bealey v. Stuart, 7 H. & N. 757.

As to mutuality in contracts of hiring and service, see Reg. v. Welch, 2 B. & B. 357; Hartley v. Cummings, 5 C. B. 247; Pilkington v. Scott, 15 M. & W. 657; Whittle, app., Frankland, resp., 2 B. & S. 49; Emmens v. Elder- ton, 13 C. B. 495; S. C., 4 H. L. Ca. 624; Rust v. Nottidge, 1 E. & B. 99; Bealey v. Stuart, 7 H. & N. 753; Sykes v. Dixon, 9 A. & E. 693.

(t) See Harvey v. Johnston, 6 C. B. 295; Mills v. Blackall, 11 Q. B. 358, 366; Gibson v. Carruthers, 8 M. & W. 321; Marsh v. Wood, 9 B. & C. 659; Kearsey v. Carstairs, 2 B. & Ad. 716; Fairburn v. Eastwood, 6 M. & W. 679.

(u) Laythorpe v. Bryant, 2 Bing. N. C. 735; post, Chap. 2, s. 1.

(x) Holt v. Ward, 2 Stra. 937; post, Chap. 5, s. 2.

(y) Per Wightman, J., Mills v. Blackall, 11 Q. B. 366.

(z) Kennaway v. Treacavan, 5 M. & W. 501.

another "in case you choose to employ this man as your agent for a week, I will be responsible for all such sums as he shall receive during that time and neglect to pay over to you:"—the party indemnified is not therefore bound to employ the person designated by the guarantee; but if he do employ him, then the guarantee attaches and becomes binding on the party who gave it (a).

Burton v. The Great Northern R. C. (b) may be cited for the purpose of showing what is meant by "want of mutuality" in a contract. There the plaintiff, by a memorandum of agreement between himself and a railway company (the defendants), undertook to provide waggons, horses, &c., for the cartage of merchandise between H. and W., and to convey all such as might be presented to him for conveyance between those places. And he further undertook to perform all business entrusted to him, promptly and carefully, at a certain specified rate. And it was mutually agreed that the arrangement aforesaid should continue in force for the period of twelve months from the date thereof. The defendants having, before the expiration of that period, by written notice, terminated the agreement, the plaintiff sued them for breach of contract. But the Court of Exchequer, besides holding that the declaration, as framed upon the above agreement, was not supported by it, intimated a strong opinion that no action at all could, even if an amendment were made in the declaration, be maintained upon the contract in question against the company, inasmuch as it contained no provision binding them to send goods to the

(a) See Westhead v. Sproson, 6 H. & N. 728.

(b) 9 Exch. 507. As to want of mutuality—in contracts under seal, see Aspdin v. Austin, 5 Q. B. 671; Dunn v. Sayles, Id. 685;—in contracts under seal, executed by one party only, see British Empire Mutual Life Ass. Co. v. Browne, 12 C. B. 723; Morgan v. Pike, 14 C. B. 473; Swatman v. Amler, 8 Exch. 72; Pitman v. Woodbury, 3 Exch. 4; Wheatley v. Boyd, 7 Exch. 20;—in contracts with corporations, post, Chap. 5, s. 1.

plaintiff for conveyance, and was, in fact, unilateral merely, and without mutuality.

If we attempt to analyse a simple contract, the terms of which have been definitively arranged between the parties to it (c), or to trace the progressive steps in its creation, we shall find that there must have been a request to the contractee by the contractor—a consideration moving from the contractee to the contractor—a promise by the contractor to the contractee to do, or to refrain from doing, a particular thing. Of these three ingredients in a contract, viz., the request—the consideration—and the promise—I shall briefly treat in the order just indicated, although it will be desirable for the reader, before perusing that which immediately follows, to familiarise himself with the definition of a “consideration” given at p. 315.

Analysis of a simple
contract.

1. To constitute a contract valid in law there must have been a request to the contractee by the contractor. This request, however, need not in all cases have been express; it will very often be implied by law. Let us first take the case of an executory contract, as “in consideration that you will serve me a year—I will give you 10*l*.” This is equivalent to saying, “in consideration that you, at my request, will serve me,” &c. In this case, therefore, and in every case where the consideration of a promise is executory, there must have been a request, or something tantamount to it, on the part of the promisor (d).

Request.

Where, however, the act relied upon as the consideration for a promise is wholly past and executed (e), it is obvious that such act may or may not have been done at the request of the promisor, ex. gr., it may have been a mere voluntary courtesy. The rule first to be noticed upon this subject accordingly is, that “a bygone consideration, unless supported by a request, will not sustain a subsequent promise” (f).

(c) Ante, p. 302.

(d) 1 Smith L. C., 5th ed., 138.

(e) Post, pp. 325 et seq.

(f) Per Tindal, C. J., Thornton v.

"If," says Mr. Chancellor Kent (g), "the consideration be wholly past and executed before the promise be made, it is not sufficient, unless the consideration arose at the instance or request of the party promising." Thus, if a man disburse money about the affairs of another without request, and then the latter promise that, in consideration of the former having laid out the money for him, he will pay him 10*l.*, that is not a good consideration, being completely executed (h).

Where, indeed, the act stated as the consideration for a promise cannot, from its nature, have been a gratuitous kindness, but necessarily imports a request, such request need neither be averred nor specifically proved,—as in the case of money lent; for the mere statement that money was lent, implies that it was advanced at the request of the party to whom the loan was made (i).

Again, where the party whom it is sought to charge upon a contract has derived benefit from that which is alleged to be the consideration for his promise, the acceptance and enjoyment of this benefit will, in legal contemplation, suffice to imply an antecedent request. If, for instance, a man buys goods for me without my knowledge or request, and afterwards I agree to receive the goods, my conduct, as showing a ratification of the contract, will dispense with the necessity of proving an express request (k), according to the maxim Omnis ratihabitio retrotrahitur et mandato priori equiparatur (l). So, if A., unauthorised by me, makes a contract on my behalf with B., which I afterwards recognise and adopt, Jenyns, 1 M. & Gr. 188, citing Hunt v. Baker, Dyer, 272, and West v. West, 1 Rolle Abr. 11; King v. Sears, 2 Cr. M. & R. 48.

(g) Comm., 10th ed., vol. 2, p. 632.

(h) Judgm., 1 M. & Gr. 188-9; Lampleigh v. Brathwait, Hob. 105, explained judgm., Kennedy v. Brown, 13 C. B., N. S., 740.

(i) Victors v. Davies, 12 M. & W. 758, citing 1 M. & Gr. 265, n.; M'Gregor v. Graves, 3 Exch. 34; with which compare Brittain v. Lloyd, 14 M. & W. 762, cited Lewis v. Campbell, 8 C. B. 541, and post.

(k) 1 Wms. Saund. 264 (1).

(l) Leg. Max., 4th ed., p. 833; Fitzgerald v. Dresler, 7 C. B., N. S., 374.

there is no difficulty in dealing with this contract as having been originally made by my authority. If B. entered into the contract on the understanding that he was dealing with me, when I afterwards agree to admit that such was the case, B. is precisely in the condition in which he meant to be. If, on the other hand, B. did not believe A. to be acting for me, his condition is not altered by my adoption of the agency ; for he may sue A. as principal at his option, and has the same equities against me if I sue which he would have had against A. (m).

The request to do the act which is to constitute the consideration for the subsequent promise may, as already observed (n), be express or implied, i.e., the request may be direct and explicit, or it may be indirect, to be collected from circumstances, and supplied by intendment of law. In support of these remarks a few illustrative observations may be needed.

It is clear, then, that if one requests another to pay money for him to a stranger, there is to be implied, in the absence of any express promise, an undertaking to repay it ; so that the amount, when paid, is a debt due to the party paying from him at whose request it is paid : and it is here wholly immaterial whether the money is paid in discharge of a debt due to the stranger, or as a loan or gift to him. The request to pay, and the payment according to it, create a legal liability which attaches to the party making the request. But, further, whether the request be direct—as where the party is expressly desired by the defendant to pay ; or indirect—as where he is placed by him under a liability to pay, and does pay, is immaterial. If one ask another, instead of paying money for him, to lend him his acceptance for his accommodation, and the acceptor is obliged to pay it, the amount is money paid for the borrower, although the borrower be no party to the bill, nor in any way liable to the person who ultimately receives the amount. The borrower, by requesting the acceptor to assume that character, which ultimately obliges him to pay, impliedly requests him to pay, and is as much liable to repay as he would be on a direct request to pay money for him with a promise to repay it (o).

(m) Judgm., Bird v. Brown, 4 Exch. 798-9 ; cited per Willcs, J., Berwick v. Horsfall, 4 C. B., N. S., 454 ; Mitcheson v. Nicol, 7 Exch. 929 ; Peto v. Reynolds, 9 Exch. 410 ; James v.

Isaacs, 12 C. B. 791 ; per Lord Wensleydale, Ridgway v. Wharton, 6 H. L. Ca. 296-7 ; Ancona v. Marks, 7 H. & N. 686.

(n) Ante, p. 307.

The case last suggested illustrates the important proposition, that where one party for and at the request of another enters into a legal liability to pay money, a request to pay the money is implied by law from the fact of entering into the engagement (p). If the debt or liability is incurred entirely for a principal, the surety having become liable for him at his request, and being obliged to pay, is held at law to pay on an implied request from the principal that he will do so (q).

From the rule just laid down, which is applicable in its terms to the particular case of principal and surety, may readily be derived the doctrine of contribution amongst joint contractors. In a joint contract entered into for the benefit of all, each contractor takes upon himself a liability to pay the whole debt, and each, in effect, takes upon himself a liability for each to the extent of the amount of his share; each, therefore, may be considered as becoming liable for the share of each one of his co-contractors, at the request of such co-contractor, and on being obliged to pay such (o) Judgm., Brittain v. Lloyd, 14 M. & W. 773.

(p) See Jones v. Orchard, 16 C. B. 614.

(q) Judgm., 2 E. & B. 296. "The count for money paid proceeds on one of two suppositions: either that the plaintiff has paid the money for the defendant at his request, or that he has been compelled to pay money for which the defendant was liable to the person receiving it, as in the case of a surety paying the debt of his principal, and similar cases:" Judgm., Sayles v. Blane, 14 Q. B. 205; Marsack v. Webber, 6 H. & N. 1.

share, a request to pay it is implied as against the party who ought to have paid it, and who is relieved from paying what, as between himself and the party who pays, he ought himself to have paid according to the original arrangement (r).

The principle just stated applies where one of several joint contractors has, by legal process, been compelled to pay the joint debt, whether the action was brought against him alone, or whether, judgment having been obtained against all the parties jointly liable, execution was issued and satisfaction enforced against one only (s). But this right to contribution will be affected by any original arrangement or convention inter partes, inconsistent with the understanding that each is to pay his own share only. If, by express arrangement, one of the joint contractors, though liable to the creditor, is not, as between himself and his co-contractors to be liable to pay any portion of the debt, it is clear that no action to compel contribution could be maintained against him (t). So, where one surety enters into an engagement of suretyship at the request of his co-surety, it has been held, that the co-surety, paying the whole debt, can maintain no action (u). In such cases, the rule applies—expressum facit cessare tacitum—the request to pay, which, as above explained, the law ordinarily implies from one joint contractor to his co-contractor, can have no existence where there is an express contract inconsistent with it. Nor, to anticipate a little what I shall presently have to say, could there, under such circumstances, be implied a promise for repayment, because, “promises in law,” as remarked by Buller, J. (x), “only

(r) Batard v. Hawes, 2 E. & B. 287, 296. See Wallis v. Swinburne, 1 Exch. 203; Reynolds v. Wheeler, 10 C. B., N. S., 561.

(s) Toussaint v. Martinnant, 2 T. R. 100; Earl of Mountcashell v. Barber, 14 C. B. 53. See Bevan v. Whitmore, 15 C. B., N. S., 433.

(t) Turner v. Davies, 2 Esp. 478; Done v. Walley, 2 Exch. 198.

(u) See Judgm., Batard v. Hawes, 2 E. & B. 297.

(x) Toussaint v. Martinnant, 2 T. R. 105; Driver v. Burton, 17 Q. B. 989.

exist where there is no express stipulation between the parties."

Without attempting to pursue any further the inquiry as to the rights of a surety against his principal or co-surety, or of one of several joint contractors who has been compelled to pay the joint debt against his co-contractors (y), we may conclude that, in every case in which there has been a payment of money by a plaintiff to a third party at the request of the defendant, express or implied, on a promise, express or implied, to repay the amount, an action for "money paid by the plaintiff for the defendant at his request" (z) will lie (a); and, further, we may conclude, that a request to pay will be implied whenever the consideration consists in the plaintiff's having been compelled to do that to which the defendant was legally compellable (b).

But, besides the class of cases just considered, another presents itself, the characteristic of which is, that the plaintiff has voluntarily done that to do which the defendant was legally compellable; in such cases the law will imply an antecedent request, provided the defendant has, in consideration of the plaintiff's act, expressly promised to indemnify or reimburse him (c).

In each of the cases below cited (d) which have been considered as falling within the above rule, if scrutinised, there seems to have been either acquiescence on the part of the defendant during the performance of the act alleged as a consideration by the plaintiff (e), or something equivalent to (y) These subjects are discussed at length in 1 Smith L. C., 5th ed., pp. 144 et seq.

(z) C. L. Proc. Act, 1852, Sched. (B).

(a) Judgm., Brittain v. Lloyd, 14 M. & W. 773; cited Judgm., Westropp v. Solomon, 8 C. B. 370. See Judgm., Bowlby v. Bell, 3 C. B. 293.

(b) 1 Smith L. C., 5th ed., 140.

See Eurle v. Maugham, 14 C. B., N. S., 626.

(c) 1 Smith L. C., 5th ed., 140; Wennall v. Adney, 3 B. & P. 250, n.

(d) Wing v. Mill, 1 B. & Ald. 104; Paynter v. Williams, 1 Cr. & M. 810.

(e) See per Bayley, B., 1 Cr. & M. 819, 820; Lamb v. Punce, 4 M. & S. 275.

an acknowledgment by the defendant, that the plaintiff had acted at his request (f), or a retainer of the plaintiff and adoption of his services (g).

Again, where the act of the plaintiff and the promise of the defendant take place at one and the same time, the law does not require, as in the case of a bygone transaction, that, in order to make the promise binding, the plaintiff should have acted at the request of the defendant. In Tipper v. Bicknell (h) the declaration stated that, the defendants being in possession of certain mortgage deeds, of which A. was desirous to obtain an assignment by the payment of 500*l.*, the plaintiff consented, at A.'s request, to accept bills to that amount drawn by A., upon A.'s procuring the defendants to deliver the deeds to the plaintiff as a security; and that the defendants, in consideration of the plaintiff's accepting the bills (but without alleging any request on their part), undertook to deliver the deeds to him upon his paying them the amount of the bills: it was held, that a sufficient consideration appeared for the defendants' promise, as, from the above statement, it must be inferred that the act of the plaintiff and the promise of the defendants were simultaneous, taking place in the presence of the parties, and, therefore, rendering it unnecessary that the plaintiff should have acted at the defendants' request (i). The case just cited will be found to illustrate the nature of a "concurrent" consideration hereafter adverted to (k), and is expressly in point to show, that, where the consideration moving from the one party and the promise or undertaking of the other are simultaneous, the law dispenses with proof of any previous request from the promisor to the promisee.

Massey v. Goodall (l) offers a good illustration of the (f) Per Bayley, J., 1 B. & Ald.

108.

(g) Per Bayley, B., 1 Cr. & J. 819.

(h) 3 Bing. N. C. 710.

(i) Tipper v. Bicknell, 3 Bing. N.
C. 710.

(k) Post, p. 324.

(l) 17 Q. B. 310.

nature of a "continuing" consideration (m), and shows that, where there is such a consideration, an express request by the party whom it is sought to charge will be unnecessary. There the declaration stated that "the defendant had become and was tenant from year to year to plaintiff of a certain farm," &c., on certain stipulations, for non-observance whereof specific penalties were to be payable by the defendant, and in consideration thereof he (the defendant) then promised the plaintiff that he would pay the plaintiff all such penalties as he might be liable to pay, according to the said stipulations, &c. The breach alleged was non-payment of certain penalties. Upon demurrer to defendant's plea to the above declaration, it was, inter alia, argued on his behalf that the declaration was bad, inasmuch as from the consideration there laid, which was by-gone (n), no promise such as was there laid could, in the absence of an express request, be implied by law. To this argument, however, Patteson, J., replied, "I take it that it is only necessary to lay a request where the consideration was wholly by-gone and executed at the time of the promise, and that it is not necessary when it is a continuing consideration, as this is, where the terms would continue after the promise throughout the whole tenancy. King v. Sears (o), and other cases, I think, establish that distinction." And, again, the same learned Judge observed, "I agree that a past consideration will support the promise implied by law, and, as a general rule, will support no other promise. But here the defendant became tenant to the plaintiff on certain terms; whatever those terms were, the law would imply a promise to observe them; and the promise laid here is no more than a promise to observe one of those terms, that is, to pay penalties according to those stipulations."

The point decided in the preceding case will probably be better understood when the nature of a legal consideration, past, concurrent, and continuing, future or executory, has been investigated.

(m) As to which, see post, p. 324.

(n) Post, p. 325.

(o) 2 Cr. M. & R. 48.

To sum up what has been said in the preceding pages respecting the first of the three ingredients (viz., the request) already specified (p) as forming a complete contract. In every executory contract there must, ex necessitate rei, have been a request on the part of the person promising (q). In certain species of executed contracts, as where money has been lent, there must also necessarily have been a request antecedent to the consideration. In general, however, where a contract is executed, the law requires that a request express or implied be shown. And a request will be implied—1. Where the doctrine of ratihabitio properly applies—2. Where the plaintiff has been compelled to do that which the defendant was legally compellable to do—3. Where the plaintiff has voluntarily done that which the defendant was legally compellable to do, and the latter has afterwards expressly promised—4. Where the consideration moving from the plaintiff and the promise of the defendant were simultaneous—5. Where the consideration is continuing.

2. Any act of the plaintiff from which the defendant derives a benefit or advantage, or any labour, trouble, detriment, or inconvenience, performed, taken, or sustained by the plaintiff, however small the benefit or inconvenience may be (r), may suffice, in law, as a “consideration” to support a promise, and to sustain an action ex contractu. “A prejudice to the promisee incurred at the request of the promisor may be a consideration, as well as a benefit to the promisor proceeding from the promisee: but this must be a Consideration—what.

(p) Ante, p. 307.

(q) Ib.

(r) 1 Selw. N. P., 10th ed., 42.

See Id., 12th ed., 43; Scutson v. Perry, 6 H. & N. 295.

prejudice on entering into the contract, not a prejudice from the breach of it" (s). A promise without consideration will not support an action (t).

"An engagement," says Parke, B. (u), "by a person to remunerate the act of another, which benefits the former, or puts the latter to any inconvenience or loss, is a binding engagement." And, again, "consideration," says Patteson, J. (x), "means something which is of some value (y) in the eye of the law, moving from the plaintiff. It may be some benefit to the defendant, or some detriment to the plaintiff, but, at all events, it must be moving from the plaintiff" (z), that is to say, there must be some kind of privity between the plaintiff and defendant in order to sustain an action ex contractu at suit of the former against the latter.

Privity—
what

The term "privity," when used by legal writers, must be understood to mean "a connection or bond of union (a) (ligamen) existing between parties in relation to some particular transaction;" and when it is said that an action will not lie for "want of privity" this phrase signifies that the plaintiff and defendant are strangers to each other quoad the subject-matter in dispute (b), or, at all events, that the plaintiff, the contractee, did not with sufficient directness conduce to the consideration for the undertaking or promise of the defendant, the contractor.

It will readily be inferred from the definitions of a legal "consideration" above given, that its nature may infinitely

(s) Judgm., Gerhard v. Bates, 2 E. & B. 487-8; Crowther v. Farrer, 15 Q. B. 677, 680.

(t) Deacon v. Gridley, 15 C. B. 295.

(u) Moss v. Hall, 5 Exch. 50.

(x) Thomas v. Thomas, 2 Q. B. 859.

(y) Haigh v. Brooks, 10 Ad. & E. 409; Hart v. Miles, 4 C. B., N. S., 371; Westlake v. Adams, 3 Id. 248; Nash v. Armstrong, 10 C. B., N. S., 259; Shadwell v. Shadwell, 9 C. B., N. S., 159; Nuton v. Brooks, 7 H. & N. 499. See Couturier v. Hastie, 5 H. L. Ca. 673; Gorgier v. Morris, 7 C. B., N. S., 588.

(z) Tweedle v. Atkinson, 1 B. & S. 393. See also, per Erle, J., Kilham v. Collier, 21 L. J., Q. B., 65.

(a) Per Wilde, C. J., Elandy v. De Burgh, 6 C. B. 634.

(b) See Boulton v. Jones, 2 H. & N. 564.

vary (c), "wherever," indeed, "a man may do an act without a breach of any legal or moral obligation, that act may be a valid consideration for a promise to pay money to him" (d), or to do any other thing. A few cases must, however, here suffice to show the nature of a good legal consideration, as well as of that privity which is requisite in order to support an action upon simple contract.

The compromise of a claim may be a good consideration for a promise, though litigation may not have actually commenced (e).

Where plaintiff stipulated to discharge A. from a portion of a debt due to himself, and to permit B. to stand in his place as to that portion, defendant stipulating in return that B. should give plaintiff a promissory note, the consideration moving from plaintiff, viz., his agreement to permit B. to stand in the place of A. as his debtor, being an undertaking in legal contemplation detrimental to him, was held sufficient to sustain the promise by defendant (f).

In connection with the preceding case, Lyth v. Ault (g) may be consulted, which offers a curious illustration of the nature and sufficiency of the consideration which will support a promise at law. There the acceptance by a creditor of the sole and separate liability of one of two joint debtors was held to be a good consideration for an agreement to discharge the other debtor from liability. It might, indeed, primâ facie, seem that the contract here disclosed was a mere nudum pactum, on the ground that the creditor would get nothing in return for his relinquishment of his claim against such last-mentioned party; but a little reflection will show that the substituted liability was in its nature

(c) See Hartley v. Ponsonby, 7 E. & B. 872.

(c) Cook v. Wright, 1 B. & S. 559.

(d) Per Lord Campbell, C. J., Hall v. Dyson, 21 L. J., Q. B., 224, 226; S. C., 17 Q. B. 785.

422.

(f) Peate v. Dickes, 1 Cr. M. & R.

(g) 7 Exch. 669.

different from that which originally subsisted, so that, inasmuch as the Court will not inquire into the adequacy of the consideration for a promise (h), the agreement in question would be unimpeachable in a strictly legal point of view. It is, moreover, demonstrable, as remarked by Alderson, B., in the case before us, that the sole security of A. may be a better thing than the joint security of A. and B.; for by accepting the sole security of A., instead of the joint security of both debtors, the creditor possesses a legal remedy against A. during his lifetime, and against his assets after his death, and no security whatever against B. Whereas, in the case of a joint security, after the death of A., there exists a legal liability of B., and no legal liability of A.'s assets, but an equitable remedy against the assets of A., subject to the necessity of making B. a party to a suit in equity. Now, these two securities are different things, and therefore a bargain to take the one for the other is good. Cases may be suggested of A. being rich and B. poor, in which the advantage of taking A. as the debtor in lieu of A. and B. is clear; or it may be that A. is as rich as B., in which case the creditor may fairly consider that one debtor alone is preferable to both together (i).

But, although a Court of law will not inquire into the adequacy of the consideration for a promise, it will inquire so far as to satisfy itself that the consideration is of some value (k), and not illusory merely (l). Where, therefore, the consideration for the defendant's promise was stated to be the release and conveyance by the plaintiff of his interest in certain premises at the defendant's request, but the declaration did not show that the plaintiff had any interest in the (h) Per Parke, B., 7 Exch. 671.

(i) 7 Exch. 674-5.

(k) Per Patteson, J., Thomas v. Thomas, cited ante, p. 316; Jndgm., Haigh v. Brooks, 10 Ad. & E. 320; said premises, except a lien upon them, which was expressly reserved by him, the declaration was held bad as disclosing no legal consideration for the alleged promise (m). So, in Fremlin v. Hamilton (n), a declaration setting forth a memorandum of agreement of demise and for a lease was held bad, on the ground that it disclosed no consideration for the alleged agreement on the part of the testator; and it was remarked per Cur., that, although "the Procedure Act has no doubt afforded great latitude in pleading," yet "it has not removed the necessity of stating a consideration for an agreement upon which a party is sought to be charged" (o).

Hall v. Conder, 2 C. B., N. S., 22; cited Smith v. Neale, Id. 89.

(l) White v. Bluett, 23 L. J., Ex., 36.

Again, where, A. being indebted to the plaintiff in a certain amount, and B. being indebted to A. in another amount, the defendant, in consideration of being permitted by A. to sue B. in his name, promised to pay A.'s debt to the plaintiff, and A. gave such permission; whereupon the defendant recovered from B.: judgment was arrested, on the ground that the plaintiff was a mere stranger to the consideration for defendant's promise, having done nothing of trouble to himself or of benefit to the defendant (p).

It will be remarked, that the case last cited shows not only the nature of a sufficient legal consideration for a promise, but also the necessity of privity (q) between the parties to an action founded upon promises, in order that it may be sustainable (r). In Cobb v. Becke (s) this latter point receives apt illustration; there B., the country attorney of A.; sent a sum of money to the defendants, who were B.'s

(m) Kaye v. Dutton, 7 M. & Gr. 807, cited Smart v. Sanders, 5 C. B. 904; Edwards v. Baugh, 11 M. & W. 641; Strickland v. Turner, 7 Exch. 208; Wright v. Colls, 8 C. B. 150; Ashworth v. Mounsey, 9 Exch. 175. See Bridgman v. Dean, 7 Exch. 199.

(n) 8 Exch. 308.

(o) See Hutchinson v. Read, 4 Exch.

761; Orme v. Galloway, 9 Exch. 544.

(p) Bourne v. Mason, 1 Ventr. 6; Tweedle v. Atkinson, 1 B. & S. 393, 397; Crow v. Rogers, 1 Stra. 592; Price v. Easton, 4 B. & Ad. 433.

(q) Ante, p. 316.

(r) See Griffiths v. Daubuz, 5 E. & B. 746, 755.

(s) 6 Q. B. 930.

London agents, to be paid to C. on account of A., and the defendants promised B. to pay the money transmitted according to his, B.'s, directions ; but afterwards, being applied to by C., refused to pay it, claiming a balance due to themselves from B. on a general account between them. Upon this state of facts it was held, that an action for money had and received would not lie against the defendants at suit of A. "The general rule," said Lord Denman, C. J., "undoubtedly is, that there is no privity between the agent in town and the client in the country : the former cannot maintain an action against the latter for his fees, nor the latter against the former for negligence. Something, therefore, is necessary, beyond the mere relation of the parties to each other as above stated, to make the agent in town liable to the client." The subject here touched upon is more fully explained in Robbins v. Fennell (t), where it is laid down that the client cannot maintain an action for money had and received against the town agent of his attorney, "unless the law will imply a contract to pay on request, from the relation which the several parties bear towards each other." Now the client employs the country attorney, is answerable to him for costs, and in case of negligence or misconduct must come upon him for redress. He is entitled to credit for all sums which the attorney may happen to owe him, and though he probably knows that the business must be carried on by a town agent, his payment for it to such agent is no discharge to him against the attorney (u). In like manner the attorney employs and is liable to the town agent, who knows nothing of the client but his name, and is not even to that extent known by him. The town agent could not maintain an action for work and labour against the client by whom he was not employed ; and the rights and liabilities of the parties in such a case would be reciprocal (x).

(t) 11 Q. B. 248, 256.

(x) Judgm., 11 Q. B. 256. See

(u) Yates v. Freckleton, 2 Doug. 623.

Robbins v. Heath, Id. 257 (c).

It has been held that an infant suing by prochein amy may recover from the attorney in the action damages and costs paid by the defendant as money had and received to the use of the infant (y).

A simple instance of the necessity of privity between parties in order to sustain an action founded upon contract is given by Parke, J., in Baron v. Husband (z), who says, "If I give a sum of money to my servant to pay a tradesman, the latter cannot maintain an action for money had and received against the servant." So, where A. contracts with B., acting as agent for C., the legal privity is between A. the contractor and C. the contractee: so that B. can in general neither sue nor be sued upon the contract (u).

But, although "the remedy for breach of contract is by the general rule of our law confined to the contracting parties" (b), there are some cases, as we shall presently see, in which the law will imply not merely the request but also the promise of the contractor (c); and there are other cases in which an obligation to pay money is imposed, either by the law of the land, or by virtue of the bye-law of some corporate body—which bye-law within its limits, and with respect to the persons upon whom it lawfully operates, has the same effect as an Act of Parliament has upon the com-

(y) Collins v. Brook, 4 H. & N. 270; S. C., 5 Id. 700. See Wilkinson v. Grant, 18 C. B. 319, where the solicitor of a proposed mortgagee was held not entitled to recover the amount of his charges from the proposed mortgagor—the negotiation for the mortgage having gone off through the default of the latter party.

(z) 4 B. & Ad. 611, 612; Williams v. Everett, 14 East, 582; Lilly v. Hays, 5 Ad. & E. 548; cited and distinguished in Noble v. National Discount Co., 5 H. & N. 228, and in Liversidge v. Broadbent, 4 Id. 611.

(a) See, further, as to want of privity, Litt v. Martindale, 18 C. B. 314; Watson v. Russell, 3 B. & S. 34; Barkworth v. Ellerman, 6 H. & N. 605; Hill v. Kitching, 3 C. B. 299; Barlow v. Browne, 16 M. & W. 126; Hooper v. Treffry, 1 Exch. 17; Driver v. Burton, 17 Q. B. 989; Kilham v. Collier, 21 L. J., Q. B., 65; Robertson v. Wain, 8 Exch. 299.

(b) Per Coleridge, J., Lumley v. Gye, 2 E. & B. 246.

(c) Ante, p. 307; post, p. 325.

CONTRACTS GENERALLY.

munity at large (d). Further, an action of debt will lie not merely where there is a contract express or implied between the parties, but wherever there is a legal right on the one side to receive the money sued for, and a legal liability on the other to pay it (e). Debt will also lie for recovery of a penalty under a statute (f).

In Gerhard v. Bates (g), the first count of the declaration alleged, that, before the defendant's promise after mentioned, the defendant and others had formed a company, the capital of which was divided into a certain number of 1*l.* shares, out of which 12,000 were to be appropriated to the public at 12*s.* 6*d.* per share, free from further calls—that the defendant was a promoter and managing director of the company, and, in offering the said 12,000 shares to the public, had, in such character, “guaranteed and promised to the bearers” of those shares a minimum annual dividend of 33 per cent., payable half-yearly, and that the said guarantee and promise should remain in force until the said 12*s.* 6*d.* per share should be thus repaid to the bearers of the 12,000 shares before mentioned. The declaration then averred, that the plaintiff, confiding in the defendant's said promise, became the purchaser and bearer of 2,500 of the 12,000 shares at 12*s.* 6*d.* per share, and took the same on the faith of the defendant's guarantee and promise, and not otherwise, and had fulfilled the engagement on his part, yet that the defendant had not paid any dividend. This count of the declaration was held to be bad on demurrer: 1st, because it did not sufficiently allege any promise to the plaintiff (h); 2ndly, because there appeared to be an entire absence of consideration, inasmuch as it was not stated, that, “from the plaintiff's buying and becoming bearer of” the shares mentioned, any

(d) Per Lord Abinger, C. B., Hopkins v. Mayor of Swansea, 4 M. & W. 640; 3 Bla. Com. 160.

(e) Addison v. Mayor of Preston,

12 C. B. 108, 133.

(f) 3 Bla. Com. 161.

(g) 2 R. & B. 476.

(h) As to which, post, p. 325.

benefit accrued to the defendant; or that, at the time when the contract was supposed to have been entered into, any prejudice accrued to the plaintiff; 3rdly, because, there was nothing to show any request by the defendant to the plaintiff, and no privity was established between them. I have mentioned this case at some length, in order that the count above abstracted, may be compared with the second count of the declaration hereafter noticed in connection with actions founded upon tort, and with the rule as to privity applicable in the latter class of cases.

With the facts and decision in Gerhard v. Bates, so far as above mentioned, may usefully be contrasted that peculiar class of cases there alluded to by Lord Campbell, in which it has been held, that an action may be maintained for a reward offered in a public advertisement, at suit of one who has fulfilled the conditions indicated therein (i). In such cases there might at first sight seem to be a want of privity; there is, however, a distinct promise to any one who shall bring himself within the terms of the advertisement; and there is a good consideration for the promise in the benefit to accrue to the promisor,—as in showing that he is heir-at-law to a person who died seised of real property and intestate; or prejudice to the promisee,—as, that he shall entitle himself to the reward by voluntarily coming forward as a witness. Those cases, nevertheless, remarked Lord Campbell, although not now to be questioned, are somewhat anomalous, and “the party who makes the discovery might perhaps have been permitted to sue for work and labour done and performed at the request of the defendant, the sum stated in the advertisement being used as evidence of what ought to be recovered on a quantum meruit.”

(i) See Williams v. Carwardine, 4 B. & Ad. 621; Lockhart v. Barnard, 14 M. & W. 674; Lancaster v. Walsh, 4 M. & W. 16; Thatcher v. England, 3 C. B. 254; M'Kune v. Joynton, 5 C. B., N. S., 218; Neville v. Kelly, 12 C. B., N. S., 740; Judgm., Williams v. Ryne, 1 Moo. P. C. C., N. S., 198.

The meaning of the term 'consideration' and of 'privity' being now apparent, it will be convenient to notice, that the consideration may be altogether past and executed at the time when the promise is made; it may be contemporaneous or concurrent with the promise (k), as, where two persons meet together and reciprocally promise to do certain specified things, the promise of the one party being the consideration for the promise of the other (l). It may sometimes be correctly designated as 'continuing,' as in Powley v. Walker (m), where the subsisting relation of landlord and tenant was held to be a sufficient consideration for the tenant's promise to manage a farm in a husbandlike manner. Lastly, the consideration may be executory—as, where A., in consideration that B. will do something specified at a future day, promises that he will himself do some other thing (n). Now, in this case, difficulty may be felt in determining whether the promise made by one of these parties is, in truth, the consideration for that made by the other of them, or whether the performance of the one promise be the consideration for the other, in which latter case such performance will constitute a condition precedent to the right to sue. This difficulty can only be surmounted by looking narrowly at the words of the agreement entered into, and at the intention of the contracting parties (o).

(k) See West v. Jackson, 16 Q. B. 380; Tipper v. Bicknell, cited ante, p. 313; Thornton v. Jenyns, 1 M. & Gr. 166; Harvey v. Johnston, 6 C. B. 295.

(l) See Christie v. Borelly, 7 C. B., N. S., 561, 567. "Mutual promises to perform agreements" are not to be averred in pleading: C. L. Proc. Act, 1852, s. 49.

(m) 5 T. R. 373; recognised Beale v. Sanders, 3 Bing. N. C. 850. See also Massey v. Goodall, cited ante,

p. 313.

(n) See Hicks v. Gregory, 8 C. B. 378, 387; Payne v. Wilson, 7 B. & C. 423.

(o) See Thorpe v. Thorpe, 1 Ld. Raym. 662; Graves v. Legg, 9 Exch. 709; S. C., 11 Id. 642; 2 H. & N. 210; cited Pust v. Dowie, 32 L. J., Q. B., 179, 180.

Performance of conditions precedent may now be averred generally in pleading: C. L. Proc. Act, 1852, s. 57.

3. The third ingredient which enters into the conception of a simple contract, complete in all its parts, is the promise to do or not to do a particular thing made by the contractor to the contractee (p). In every executory contract it is clear that there must be a promise—express or implied—by the former of these parties to the latter; for, if A. request B. to do something for him, and B. does it, the law will (if necessary) imply a promise by A. to remunerate B. for the trouble taken or inconvenience suffered on his behalf; though this implication may be rebutted by circumstances.

The promise
—what.

So, “where a relation exists between two parties, which involves the performance of certain duties by one of them, and the payment of reward to him by the other, the law will imply, or the jury may infer, a promise by each party to do what is to be done by him” (q).

In the case, also, of an executed consideration moved by a previous request (r), express or implied, the law will, in general, in the absence of any express promise, imply a promise by the contractor (s). There are, however, exceptions to this rule, the more important of which are as follow:—1. Under the particular circumstances specified at p. 312, viz., where the plaintiff has voluntarily done that whereunto the defendant was legally compellable; for there, as already shown, an express promise by the defendant is necessary, in order that an action against him may be sustainable for breach of contract. 2. In the case of a barrister, who cannot make a contract of hiring and service concerning advocacy in litigation (t); or of a physician, who, although he

(p) Ante, p. 307.

(q) Judgm., Morgan v. Ravey, 6 H. & N. 276.

(r) The general rule, it will be remembered, is, that a past consideration will not support a subsequent promise, unless moved by a previous request, ante, p. 308; Hayes v. Warren, 2

Str. 933.

(s) See Nordenstrom v. Pitt, 13 M. & W. 723; Streeter v. Horlock, 1 Bing. 34.

(t) Kennedy v. Broun, 13 C. B., N. S., 677; Broun v. Kennedy, 33 L. J. Chanc. 71.

may have acted at the request of the patient, will not, at common law (u), without proof of an actual contract, be entitled to sue him for services professionally rendered (x) ; the presumption of law being here against the existence of a contract for remuneration (y). 3. In the case of an infant who cannot bind himself except for necessities, and whose express promise, unless made in writing after he comes of age, will not suffice to charge him. 4. In the case of a feme covert, whose contract, with some rare exceptions, is absolutely void (z). 5. In certain cases where the legal remedy is barred, although the right remains (u). Cases falling under one or other of the three latter of the classes just specified will be further alluded to in subsequent portions of this work.

Where the consideration, although past and executed, will support an action by reason of there having been an antecedent request, express or implied, it is a general and very important rule, that the consideration "will support no other promise than such as would be implied by law" (b).

Thus, where an account has been stated between parties, and a balance ascertained to be due from one of them to the other, the law implies a promise by the debtor to pay on request, so that any ex post facto promise by him differing in its nature therefrom, ex. gr., to pay on a particular day named, would be nudum pactum, unless made upon a new consideration. If this were not so, there would, in truth, (u) See Gibbon v. Budd, 2 H. & C. 92, decided under the stat. 21 & 22 Vict. c. 90.

(x) Chorley v. Bolcot, 4 T. R. 317 ; Veitch v. Russell, 3 Q. B. 928.

(y) Per Coleridge, J., 3 Q. B. 937.

(z) It will be almost superfluous to observe, that a contract void in its inception cannot be rendered valid by a subsequent express promise.

(a) Post, p. 329.

(b) "According to the current of recent authorities, beginning with Hopkins v. Logan, infra, and ending with Roscorla v. Thomas, infra, where the consideration is past and executed, it will support only such a promise as the law will imply from that executed consideration : " Judgment, 6 C. B. 174, and cases cited post.

be "two co-existing promises on one consideration" (c)—a state of things manifestly incongruous and nonsensical.

Roscorla v. Thomas (d) is usually cited with reference to the extent and nature of the promise which may be supported by an executed consideration: there the declaration (in assumpsit) stated, that, in consideration that plaintiff, at the request of defendant, had bought of defendant a horse at a certain price, defendant promised that the horse was sound and free from vice, &c., whereas he was not free from vice; after verdict for the plaintiff it was objected, in arrest of judgment, that the precedent executed consideration was insufficient to support the subsequent alleged promise; and this objection was held fatal by the Court of Queen's Bench, for the promise must, as a general rule, be co-extensive with the consideration; but, "in the present case the only promise that would result from the consideration as stated, and be co-extensive with it, would be to deliver the horse upon request;" and "the consideration stated would not raise an implied promise by the defendant that the horse was sound or free from vice." Lord Denman, C. J., after making the remarks above cited, proceeds to consider whether the consideration specified would support an express promise, and concludes, from the cases that it would not; because, "a consideration past and executed will support no other promise than such as would be implied by law."

Emmens v. Elderton (e) will henceforth be regarded as a leading authority, with reference to the rule, that a past consideration will support no promise other than what the law would imply. There the action was brought by a solicitor against the secretary of an insurance company, the declaration stating, that "it was agreed by and between the plaintiff

*Emmens v.
Elderton*

(c) Hopkins v. Logan, 5 M. & W. 7 Exch. 572.
241, 249.

(d) 3 Q. B. 234; Kaye v. Dutton, 495; 6 C. B. 160; 4 C. B. 479; Latimore v. Garrard, 1 Exch. 809.
7 M. & Gr. 807; Atkinson v. Stephens, and the said company, that, from the 1st of January then next, the plaintiff, as the attorney and solicitor of the company, should receive and accept a salary of 100*l.* per annum in lieu of rendering an annual bill of costs for general business transacted by the plaintiff for the said company as such attorney and solicitor, and should and would, for such salary of 100*l.* per annum, advise and act for the said company on all occasions in all matters (with certain specified exceptions) connected with the said company." That, the said agreement being so made, afterwards, "in consideration that the plaintiff had, at the request of the said company, promised the said company to perform and fulfil the same in all things on his part, the said company promised the plaintiff to perform and fulfil the same in all things on their part, and to retain and employ him as such attorney and solicitor of the said company, on the terms aforesaid." The breach alleged was, that the company did not nor would continue to retain or employ the plaintiff as their solicitor on the terms stated, but wrongfully and without reasonable cause dismissed him. The technical question which arose upon the count of the declaration above set out, and which was discussed successively in the Court of Common Pleas, in the Exchequer Chamber, and in the House of Lords, was, whether the alleged promise to retain and employ was to be implied from the agreement stated, or whether it did not, in some measure, enlarge the general promise to perform that agreement, so as to be nudum pactum, unless supported by some new consideration.

(e) 4 H. L. Ca. 624; S. C., 13 C. B.

"If," said Crompton, J., delivering his opinion in regard to the validity of the declaration to the House of Lords, "the agreement itself contains this same promise to retain and employ as such attorney on the terms aforesaid, then these words, being surplusage, will not prejudice the count, and must be taken as merely pointing the promise to the breach afterwards assigned, for ceasing to retain and employ."

"If, on the other hand, the words in question at all enlarge the previous agreement by binding the company to retain the plaintiff in any manner in which the agreement did not bind them, as by binding the company to find him any particular work, or to keep him in work, or to employ him in any of the business which he was not to do for the 100*l.* per annum, or to continue him in the employment for any time for which they were not bound by the agreement,—the count will be bad for want of a consideration to support this additional promise" (f).

Such being the precise questions for decision in Emmens v. Elderton, the majority of the Judges held, and in conformity with their opinion the House of Lords determined, that the former of the two views above suggested, with reference to the legal meaning of the words used in the declaration, was correct, and that the declaration itself was consequently good. The promise to "retain and employ" being restricted and limited by the terms of the agreement therein previously set out as having been made between the parties.

But, although it is generally true, as above stated, that a consideration past and executed will support only such a promise as the law will imply therefrom (g), that strict rule has, in certain cases, been departed from, and the Courts have held, that, where the consideration for a promise was originally beneficial to the party promising, yet, if he be protected from liability by some provision of the statute or common law meant for his advantage, he may renounce the benefit of that law; and, if he promises to pay the debt, which is only what an honest man ought to do, he is then bound by the law to perform it (h).

As exemplifying the qualification just stated of the general

(f) "If a person contracts with another to do a certain thing, he cannot make the performance of it a consideration for a new promise to the same individual:" per Wilde, B., Scotson v. Peggy, 6 H. & N. 301.

(g) Ante, 326.

(h) Judgm., Earle v. Oliver, 2 Exch. 90, citing note to Wrennall v. Adney, 3 B. & P. 252.

rule, let us take the case of a debt barred by the Statute of Limitations. A debt so barred, says Parke, B. (i), is unquestionably a sufficient consideration for every promise, absolute or unqualified, qualified or conditional, to pay it. Promises to pay a debt simply or by instalments, or when the party is able, are all equally supported by the past consideration, and, when the debt has become payable instantly, may be given in evidence to support an indebitatus count in the declaration for its recovery (k). So, when the debt is not already barred by the statute, a promise to pay the creditor will revive it, and make it a new debt, and a promise to an executor to pay a debt due to his testator creates a new debt to him. But although an express promise revives the debt in any of the cases just mentioned, it must not thence be inferred that the debt will be a sufficient consideration to support a promise to do a collateral thing—as to supply goods, or to perform work and labour (l). In such case, the promise would be but an accord unexecuted, and no action would lie for not executing it (m).

In Flight v. Reed (n), it was held by a majority of the Court of Exchequer, that bills of exchange given since the repeal of the usury law in renewal of bills given while that law was in force, to secure payment of money lent with usurious interest, were valid—the receipt of the money by way of loan being a sufficient consideration to support the new promise to pay it, and this proposition being relied upon “that a man by express promise may render himself liable

(i) See Reeves v. Hearn, 1 M. & W. 323.

(k) In Smith v. Thorne, 18 Q. B. 139, Parke, B., observes, “The acknowledgment must be consistent with an intention to pay either on request, or else (which practically comes to the same thing) at the end of a particular period which has elapsed, or on some condition which has been fulfilled.”

Et vide per Wigram, V.-C., Philips v. Philips, 3 Hare, 281, 299; per Williams, J., Buckmaster v. Russell, 10 C. B., N. S., 749, 750; per Martin, B., Cockrill v. Sparkes, 1 H. & C. 700.

(l) See Reeves v. Hearn, 1 M. & W. 323.

(m) Judgm., 2 Exch. 90.

(n) 1 H. & C. 703, 716.

to pay back money which he has received as a loan though some positive rule of law or statute intervened at the time to prevent the transaction from constituting a legal debt."

One class of cases, viz., where there has been a moral consideration for a subsequent express promise, must here be specially noticed, because it was at one time thought that the obligation thus created might sustain and render binding a subsequent express promise; but this doctrine seems to have been shaken by Littlefield v. Shee (o); and has been definitively exploded in Eastwood v. Kenyon (p) and Beaumont v. Reeve (q), where Lord Denman states the result of the cases to be, that "an express promise cannot be supported by a consideration from which the law could not imply a promise," save only in certain cases which he specifies (r).

Moral consideration.

The doctrine now accordingly established upon the point in question may be supported by reasoning such as Dr. Story urges in his Treatise on Bailments (s): "There are," says that eminent jurist, "many rights and duties of moral obligation which the common law does not even attempt to enforce. It deems them of imperfect obligation, and therefore leaves them to the conscience of the individual. And, in a practical sense, there is wisdom in this course; for judicial tribunals would otherwise be overwhelmed with litigation, or would become scenes of the sharpest conflict upon questions of casuistry and conscience" (t).

From what has been just said, it follows that the mere moral obligation on a father to maintain his child affords no inference of a legal promise to pay his debts; so that,

(o) 2 B. & Ad. 811.

(p) 11 Ad. & E. 438.

(q) 8 Q. B. 483; recognised in Fisher v. Bridges, 3 E. & B. 642, reversing judgment in S. C., 2 E. & B. 118.

(r) The cases as to moral consideration are collected in Flight v. Reed, supra.

(s) 5th ed., p. 183.

(t) Courts of law therefore "decide according to the legal obligations of parties:" per Alderson B., Turner v. Mason, 14 M. & W. 117.

"if a father turns his son upon the world, the son's only resource, in the absence of anything to show a contract on the father's part, is to apply to the parish, and then the proper steps will be taken to enforce the performance of the parent's legal duty" (u). If, indeed, a father does any specific act, from which it may reasonably be inferred that he has authorised his son to contract a debt, he may be liable in respect of the debt so contracted (x). But the law does not authorise a son to bind his father by his contracts (y). Nor is there any legal obligation on the personal representative of the mother of a bastard child to expend the assets of the deceased in the maintenance of the child (z).

Although, when strictly and technically examined, a simple contract may doubtless be analysed as in the preceding pages, and, if thus analysed, will be found, as there stated, to consist of a request, a consideration, and a promise; yet so minute and critical an inquiry into its elements is not in very many cases needed, preliminary to adjudicating in an action founded upon it. The truth of this remark will sufficiently appear from what has been already said relative to implied contracts, promises, and requests (a). And we should also remember that in very many cases no question at all is raised as to the fact of some contract having been entered into between the parties, the sole issue at the trial having reference to the precise terms and nature of such contract.

(u) Per Jervis, C. J., Shelton v. Springett, 11 C. B. 455. Per Lord Abinger, C. B., Mortimore v. Wright, 6 M. & W. 482. A promise to the plaintiff (an unmarried woman), that, if she will abstain from affiliating a child, the defendant will pay for its maintenance, is founded on good legal consideration: Linnegar v. Hodd, 5 C. B. 437; Jennings v. Brown, 9 M. & W. 496. See Crowhurst v. Lave- rack, 8 Exch. 208; with which compare Smith v. Roche, 6 C. B., N. S., 223; ante, p. 326; Cooper v. Parker, 14 C. B. 118.

(x) Per Lord Abinger, C. B., Mortimore v. Wright, supra.

(y) Per Maule, J., 11 C. B. 456.

(z) Ruttinger v. Temple, 33 L. J., Q. B., 1.

(a) Ante, pp. 251, 307, 325.

The same facts will, moreover, frequently serve to evidence either an executed or an executory contract, at the option of the pleader (b), according as they are regarded by him à priori or ex post facto.

It sometimes happens, also, that a consideration, which at first sight appears to have been past at the time of the alleged promise, and therefore insufficient to support it, is found on examination to have been in truth concurrent, and consequently unexceptionable. In Steele v. Hoe (c), the Court of Queen's Bench take occasion to observe, that "The expression that a promise is founded upon a consideration conveys the notion that the consideration precedes the promise in the mind of the party making the promise; he promises because the consideration exists; and this form of expression is shown by the authorities to have been frequently used when the consideration and the promise are concurrent. Each side of a contract is consideration or promise according to the party speaking of it; and if each party were to put into writing his own promise, each side of the contract would in turn appear to have preceded the other, though both formed one agreement." When the words of an agreement in their ordinary acceptation are thus capable of expressing either a past or a concurrent consideration, and where upon one construction the instrument would be void, the other construction is to be adopted which makes it valid (d), ut res magis valeat quam pereat.

We thus see that various reasons may be adduced explanatory of what has been above said; viz., that any minute analysis, such as has been heretofore submitted, of a simple

(b) See Payne v. Wilson, 7 B. & C. 423; cited 2 H. & N. 524; Streeter v. Horlock, 1 Bing. 34.

(c) 14 Q. B. 431, 445.

(d) Judgm., Steele v. Hoe, 14 Q. B. 445; Goldshede v. Swan, 1 Exch. 154; Bainbridge v. Wade, 16 Q. B. 89; Oldershaw v. King, 2 H. & N. 517; S. C., Id. 399; cited per Bramwell, B., Hoad v. Grace, 7 H. & N. 497, and in Westhead v. Sproson, 6 H. & N. 732; Thornton v. Jenyns, 1 M. & Gr. 166, 188-9.

contract is, in very many cases which occur to the practitioner, wholly unnecessary. And if, furthermore, we call to mind that the common indebitatus counts will often alone suffice in an action of debt on simple contract, we shall readily see why it is that questions involving distinctions so nice and subtle as those which have been latterly under discussion, comparatively seldom present themselves for judicial notice or inquiry.

Some rules of general application relating to contracts—special or simple.

Having in the previous pages characterised and classified according to their rank the various kinds of contracts—having successively adverted to contracts of record—to special and to simple contracts, I propose to consider briefly some few rules of general and extensive application, which influence our Courts in adjudicating upon them, and which may with truth be said to have a direct and important bearing upon even the most ordinary dealings between man and man.

Effect of fraud on contracts.

Now, with reference to contracts, of whatsoever kind they be, the primary rule is, that good faith must be observed between the contracting parties—ex dolo malo non oritur actio (e).—“No contract,” says Patteson, J. (f), “can arise out of a fraud, (i.e., unless the party upon whom such fraud was practised chooses to accept and ratify the contract (g).)”

(e) To the remarks upon this maxim in Leg. Max., 4th ed., pp. 702 et seq., the reader is referred for additional information as to the subject touched upon in the text.

(f) Campbell v. Fleming, 1 Ad. & R. 42; Jones v. Yates, 9 B. & C. 532, 539.

(g) See White v. Garden, 10 C. B. 919, 927 (where Talfourd, J., says, “A contract for the sale of goods, though obtained by fraud, is perfectly good, if the party defrauded thinks fit to ratify it”). Kingsford v. Merry, 1

H. & N. 577, reversing S. C., 11 Exch. 503.

In Stevenson v. Newnham, 13 C. B. 265, 303, the Court observe, “It must be considered as established, that fraud only gives a right to avoid a contract or purchase.” And see the cases cited Ib.; Young v. Billiter, 8 H. L. Ca. 682, reversing S. C., 6 E. & B. 1, 17, 25; per Parke, B., Murray v. Mann, 2 Exch. 541.

In The Deposit and General Life Ins. Co. v. Ayrrough, 6 E. & B. 761, Lord Campbell, C. J., says, “It is now and an action brought upon a supposed contract which is shown to have arisen from fraud may be resisted." It might, indeed, be impossible to give a definition of what constitutes fraud so as to meet all the various combinations of circumstances to which that word would apply; but there can be no difficulty in saying, that "whenever any one has by wilful misrepresentation induced another to part with his rights on the belief that such representation was true," this is, in the plainest and most obvious sense, a fraud which a Court of justice will not tolerate (h). The terms explanatory of what fraud is, here used, being very general, may, it is conceived, be so understood as to include any case involving it which can readily be suggested—whether the contract in question be executed or executory—special or simple (i).

On the ground of fraud, artifice, or deceit, as we have already seen (k), the judgment of a Court of law may be set aside (l), and a deed although duly executed may be successfully impugned; à fortiori, then, may fraud be alleged to nullify a contract not under seal, or with a view to compelling the restitution of property transferred or money paid in pursuance of it. "A person," it has been said, "who is induced to part with his property on a fraudulent contract, may, on discovering the fraud, avoid the contract, and claim a return of what has been advanced upon it. Fraud destroys the contract ab initio, and the fraudulent purchaser has no well settled that a contract tainted by fraud is not void, but is only voidable at the election of the party defrauded." Et vide per Pollock, C. B., Rogers v. Hadley, 2 H. & C. 247.

As to rescinding a contract on the ground of fraud, see Clarke v. Dickson, E. B. & E. 148; cited per Blackburn, J., Reg. v. Saddlers' Co., 32 L. J., Q. B., 343; Cole v. Bishop, E. B. & E. 150, n. (l).

(h) Per Lord Cranworth, Reynell v. Sprye, 1 De G., M. & G. 691. See Curson v. Belworthy, 3 H. L. Ca. 742. For a definition of fraud, consult also Richardson Dict. and Roget's Thesaur., ad verb.

(i) As to evidence of fraud, see Horsfall v. Thomas, 1 H. & C. 90.

(k) Ante, pp. 264, 281 et seq.

(l) See Bowen v. Evans, 2 H. L. Ca. 257.

title. But if the party defrauded would disaffirm the contract, he must do so at the earliest practicable moment after discovery of the cheat. That is the time to make his election, and it must be done promptly and unreservedly. He must not hesitate, nor can he be allowed to deal with the subject-matter of the contract and afterwards rescind it. The election is with him : he may affirm or disaffirm the contract, but he cannot do both ; and if he concludes to abide by it as upon the whole advantageous, he shall not afterwards be permitted to question its validity " (m).

Moral and legal fraud.

A few cases shall presently be cited in illustration of the remark that fraud will vitiate and avoid a simple contract. I would, however, first observe, that a distinction undeniably exists between moral and legal fraud ; that there are many kinds of moral fraud which clearly could not be made available, either as ground of action or by way of defence, in a Court of law. Thus a vendor is entitled to sell for the best price he can get, and is not in any way liable at law for a simple commendation of his own goods, however worthless they may be, provided he has not made any false statement as to their quality or condition, nor asserted anything respecting them which may amount to a warranty in legal contemplation (n).

In a recent case (o), it was held that the sale of a glandered horse by a person knowing it to be so, gives no right of action to a buyer ignorant of the defect, and, in consequence of it, sustaining damage. Here, remarked Bramwell, B., the buyer knows of the possible existence of the defect, or he does not. On the former assumption, he has no right of complaint if he chose to purchase without a warranty: on the latter assump-

(m) Masson v. Boet, 1 Denio (U.S.) R. 73-4 : Campbell v. Fleming, 1 Ad. & E. 40 ; and see cases cited supra n. (g).
(n) Leg. Max., 4th ed., 749, and cases there cited.

(o) Hill v. Balls, 2 H. & N. 299, 305-6 ; with which compare Cooke v. Waring, 2 H. & C. 332, where the action was in tort.

tion, he ought not to be any better off for his ignorance. The rule caveat emptor is in truth applicable under the circumstances supposed. It has been held, too, that the vendor of a chattel, in which there is a patent defect which greatly diminishes its value, will not incur liability by silence with regard to it (p); and if A. treats with B. for the purchase of an estate knowing that there is a valuable mine under it, and B. makes no inquiry, there is authority to show that A. is not bound either at law or in equity to give information as to the existence of the mine (q). Now, in any of the cases here suggested, although the moralist might possibly condemn, our law would decline to give redress. Non omne quod licet honestum est (r).

As, on the one hand, there may thus be an intention to mislead, or even an attempt to induce a person unknowingly to sacrifice his own interest, without fraud in law; so, on the other hand, legal fraud may exist, without any serious amount of moral turpitude. "The cases," says Parke, B., in Murray v. Mann (s), "show a distinction between legal and moral fraud. For instance, where a person purports to accept a bill of exchange by procuration, when in fact he has no such authority, that has been held (t) a legal fraud, rendering the party liable to an action of deceit," although the jury negatived the existence of fraud.

As to the sufficiency of "legal" fraud to support an action when unaccompanied by any degree of "moral" fraud, judicial opinions have conflicted. A principal, it has been urged, may in many cases be responsible for the fraud of his agent, although quite innocent in a moral point of view.

(p) Leg. Max., 4th ed., 750, 751. The maxim, "silence gives consent," does in some cases apply: for instance, "where there is a duty to speak, and the party does not, an assent may be inferred from his silence;" per Bramwell, B., Russell v. Thornton, 4 H. & N. 798.

(q) Per Lord Eldon, Turner v. Harrey, Jac. 178.

(r) D. 50. 17. 144.

(s) 2 Exch. 538, 541.

(t) Polhill v. Walter, 3 B. & Ad. 114. See Thom v. Bigland, 8 Exch. 725, 729; Eastwood v. Bain, 3 H. & N. 738.

"Whether," remarks Lord Lyndhurst, in Attwood v. Small (u), "a particular representation be made by the principal, or by the agent whom he employs for the purpose of the contract, is wholly immaterial. If the agent acts fraudulently, even without the knowledge of the principal, what is that to the party contracting? The contract is vitiated." And again, according to the opinion of Lord Abinger, C. B., diss. in Cornfoot v. Fowke (x), (a remarkable case, which seems however to have been well decided (y)), "it is not correct to suppose, that the legal definition of fraud and covin necessarily includes any degree of moral turpitude. Every action for the breach of a promise—for deceit—for not complying with a warranty, or for a false representation, is founded upon a legal fraud, which is charged as such in the declaration, although there be no moral guilt in the defendant. The warranty of a fact which does not exist, or the representation of a material fact contrary to the truth, are both said, in the language of the law, to be fraudulent, although the party making them suppose them to be correct."

The weight of authority, however, viewed independently of the decision of the Court of Exchequer in Cornfoot v. Fowke, and in Udell v. Atherton, presently noticed, where the judges of the same Court were equally divided in opinion, is against the views propounded by the eminent individual last named. "It is settled law," says Parke, B., in Thom v. Bigland (z), "that, independently of duty (a), no action will lie for a misrepresentation, unless the party making it knows it to be

(u) 6 Cl. & F. 413. And see, per Lord Campbell, 1 H. L. Ca. 615. His Lordship there says, "In an action upon contract, the representation of an agent is the representation of the principal; but, in an action on the case for deceit, the misrepresentation or concealment must be proved against the principal." See also, per Pollock, C. B., Atkinson v. Pocock, 1 Exch. 796, cited arg. 6 C. B. 322. Per Rolfe, B., 6 M. & W. 370.

(x) 6 M. & W. 358; cited 8 E. & B. 252; and in Moens v. Heyworth, 10 M. & W. 155.

(y) See per Lord St. Leonards, 2 Macq. H. L. Ca. 144.

(z) 8 Exch. 731.

(a) Post, Book III., Chap. 1.

untrue, and makes it with a fraudulent intention to induce another to act on the faith of it, and to alter his position to his damage. This appears from the cases of Collins v. Evans (b), and Ormrod v. Huth (c), which have perfectly settled the law on that point."

In Wilde v. Gibson (d), it was contended, that an action of deceit might be maintained, without proof of actual fraud; but Lord Campbell answered, "From that position I entirely dissent. If you mean by 'fraud,' an intention to injure the party to whom the representation is made, or to benefit the party who makes the representation, there may be an action of deceit without fraud; but there must be falsehood: there must be an assertion of that which the party making it knows to be untrue; the scienter must either be expressly alleged, or there must be an allegation that is tantamount to the scienter of the fraudulent representation, and this allegation must be proved at the trial" (e); and his Lordship adds, "If that falsehood is stated, without any view of benefiting the person who states the falsehood, or of injuring the person to whom the falsehood is stated, in one sense of the word you may say it is not fraudulent, but it is a breach of moral obligation, it is telling a lie; and if a lie is told, whereby a third person is prejudiced, although there may be no profit to the person who tells it, and although no injury was intended to the party to whom it is told, but a benefit to a third person, it is clearly a breach of moral obligation, and is a fraud which will support an action of deceit." The proposition here printed in italics seems to be altogether unimpeachable, and indicates the nature of the fallacy into which those have fallen who contend that legal fraud may exist without any admixture whatever of "moral turpitude."

(b) 5 Q. B. 820; Childers v. Wooler, 2 E. & B. 287, 306, 308; explaining and distinguishing Humphrys v. Pratt, 5 Bligh, N. S., 154.

(c) 14 M. & W. 651.

(d) 1 H. L. Ca. 605, 633.

(e) Citing Foster v. Charles, 7 Bing. 106; Polhill v. Walter, 3 B. & Ad. 123; Corbett v. Brown, 8 Bing. 37.

Additional authorities might readily be cited in support of the view here advocated. In Taylor v. Ashton (f), Parke, B., distinctly states his adhesion to the doctrine, that "an action for deceit will not lie, without proof of moral fraud;" and he further observes, that "there may undoubtedly be a fraudulent representation, if made dishonestly, of that which the party does not know to be untrue, if he does not know it to be true." Further, in delivering their judgment in the case just cited, the Court of Exchequer lay down, that in an action for false representation, and damage resulting therefrom, it is not necessary to show that the defendant knew the fact affirmed by him to be untrue; if he stated a fact which was untrue for a fraudulent purpose, he at the same time not believing that fact to be true, there would, under such circumstances, be both a legal and a moral fraud (g).

In connection with the subject just discussed, it is worthy of notice that a very learned judge has thus expressed himself: "I conceive, that, if a man, having no knowledge whatever on the subject, takes upon himself to represent a certain state of facts to exist, he does so at his peril; and if it be done, either with a view to secure some benefit to himself or to deceive a third person, he is in law guilty of a fraud, for he takes upon himself to warrant his own belief of the truth of that which he so asserts. Although the person making the representation may have no knowledge of its falsehood, the representation may still have been fraudulently made" (h). In the case here put, it would be impossible successfully to contend that no element of moral fraud presents itself.

As connected with the subject before us, the two following cases must be noticed :—

(f) 11 M. & W. 401.

(g) Judgm., 11 M. & W. 415.

(h) Per Maule, J., Evans v. Edmonds, 13 C. B. 786; and in Milne v.

Marwood, 15 Id. 781. See per Cresswell, J., and Wilde, C. J., 6 C. B. 322; per Alderson, B., Moens v. Heyworth, 10 M. & W. 158.

In Cornfoot v. Fowke (i) a principal was held irresponsible for a mis-statement innocently made by his agent without authority from himself. The principal there sued for breach of contract, and on fraud being pleaded, obtained judgment, it being, as observed by Alderson, B., "impossible to sustain a charge of fraud when neither principal nor agent has committed any; the principal, because, though he knew the fact, he was not cognisant of the misrepresentation being made, nor ever directed the agent to make it; and the agent, because though he made a misrepresentation, yet he did not know it to be one at the time he made it, but gave his answer bond fide."

In Udell v. Atherton (k) the action was ex delicto, founded on dolus dans locum contractui, producing damage, to which the defence, under a plea of Not Guilty, was that the fraud was that of the agent who made the contract, not of the defendant, the principal, who neither authorised nor knew of it (l). The broad question raised in this case was "whether a principal who has had the benefit of a contract made by his agent is responsible for a deliberate fraud committed by his agent in the making of the contract, by which fraud alone the contract was obtained?" (m). In regard to the question thus stated the Court were equally divided in opinion.

But although it be a moot point, whether legal fraud can exist without any degree of moral delinquency, there can be no doubt, that, in the vast majority of cases involving fraud, trickery, or covin, which come under the cognisance of Courts of justice, no questions have to be discussed respecting the distinctions—sometimes rather fine and unsatisfactory—just adverted to. Fraud, it must however be observed, is not actionable nor available by way of defence to an action, unless, in the one case, it has occasioned damage

(i) 6 M. & W. 358.

(k) 7 H. & N. 172.

(l) Post, Book III., Chap. 1.

(m) Per Wilde, B., 7 H. & N. 179.

to the complainant, or, in the other, has induced the defendant to contract. A bare lie, for instance, albeit told with an intent to injure, would not, if unproductive of damage, lay the foundation of an action (n), nor would a misrepresentation, however corruptly made, afford a good defence to an action founded upon contract, unless it were shown to have operated as an inducement to the defendant to enter into the alleged contract.

The test proposed by Lord Brougham in Attwood v. Small (o), seems to be the most accurate and practically useful which can be given in reference to one large and important class of frauds—those, viz., which are evidenced by misrepresentations and mis-statements. In order to constitute such fraud, it is there said, three circumstances must combine: it must appear, 1st, that the representation was contrary to the fact; 2ndly, that the party making it knew it to be contrary to the fact; and, 3rdly, and chiefly, that it was the false representation which gave rise to the contracting of the other party—there must be dolus dans locum contractui, i.e., not merely a fraudulent attempt at over-reaching, but an attempt so far successful as to have operated as an inducement to the other party to contract. “We consider it clear law,” remark the Court of Queen’s Bench in Gerhard v. Bates (p), “that if A. fraudulently makes a representation which is false, and which he knows to be false, to B., meaning that B. shall act upon it, and B. believing it to be true, does act upon it, and thereby suffers a damage, B. may maintain an action on the case against A. for the deceit, there being here the conjunction of wrong and loss (n) Judgm., 2 M. & W. 531; per Buller, J., 3 T. R. 56.

(o) 6 Cl. & F. 444; per Lord Wensleydale, Smith v. Kay, 7 H. L. Ca. 775; Milne v. Marwood, 15 C. B. 778; Burnes v. Purnell, 2 H. L. Ca. 529 et seq. Moens v. Heyworth, 10 M. & W. 147; Pasley v. Freeman, 2 Smith L. C., 5th ed., 68, and Note thereto.

(p) 2 R. & B. 488, citing Com. Dig. “Action upon the Case for a Deceit” (A. 9, 10).

entitling the injured and suffering party to a compensation for damages."

When the conditions thus indicated are fulfilled, there can be no doubt, that, according as the party on whom fraud has been practised is plaintiff or defendant, he may rely upon it as ground of action or as matter of defence against the party who has practised it; and in illustration of this remark the cases below cited may be consulted (q).

Where damage is caused by an act prima facie savouring of false representation, an action of course will not lie, if no element of fraud, either legal or moral, enters into it.

"If," it is judicially observed in Barley v. Walford (r), "every untrue statement which produces damage to another would found an action at law, a man might sue his neighbour for any mode of communicating erroneous information—such (for example) as having a conspicuous clock too slow—since plaintiff might be thereby prevented from attending to some duty or acquiring some benefit." A doctrine calculated to create legal responsibility so wide in cases where blame cannot really attach to any one must, they further observe, be restrained within some limits. "If, indeed, the defendant were under any legal obligation (s) to state the truth correctly to the plaintiff, there would be a grievance in misleading him, for which an action on the case would lie; still more so, if he made the false representation with a view to some unfair advantage to himself" (t).

It will have been noticed, that, in the course of the pre-

(q) Behn v. Kemble, 7 C. B., N. S., 260; per Williams, J., Way v. Hearn, 13 C. B., N. S., 305; Clarke v. Dickson, E. B. & E. 148; 6 C. B., N. S., 453; Scott v. Dickson, 29 L. J., Ex., 62 note; Bedford v. Bagshaw, 4 H. & N. 538; Jarrett v. Kennedy, 6 C. B. 319; Wontner v. Shairp, 4 C. B. 404; Murray v. Mann, 2 Exch. 538; Vane

v. Cobbold, 1 Exch. 798; Pilmore v. Hood, 5 Bing. N. C. 97, 109. See Atkinson v. Pocock, 1 Exch. 796; per Lord Denman, C. J., Wright v. Crookes, 1 Sc. N. R. 698; Connop Levy, 11 Q. B. 769.

(r) 9 Q. B. 197, 208.

(s) Post, Book III., Chap.

(t) Judgm., 9 Q. B. 203.

ceding pages, I have had occasion repeatedly to specify an action on the case as the appropriate remedy for deceit or fraud productive of damage. Reference to this peculiar form of action will have, at greater length, to be made in Book III. of this work, which treats of Wrongs and Remedies ex Delicto; a question of some interest here, however, demands a brief digression, viz., whether, in an action strictly founded upon contract, the motive, which may have influenced the defendant, can properly be investigated. The result of this inquiry will show us why it is that case is the proper civil remedy for fraud and covin.

Now, the breach of a contract, express or implied, executed or executory, per se, vests a right of action in the contractee, on the assumption, that is, that he has himself done every thing which it was incumbent on him to do towards or for the behoof of the other contracting party; this being so, it can, as a general rule, be in no way material to make any inquiry as to the motive which may have prompted the contractor to his breach of contract. If A. covenants with B. to do or not to do a particular thing, and A. commits a breach of this covenant, he will, ipso facto, incur liability to B. for all damage resulting directly from the breach; and whilst, on the one hand, the excellence of his motive in doing or omitting to do the particular act cannot be allowed to avail him, so, on the other hand, any inquiry as to the existence of a malicious or fraudulent intention on his part to injure the covenantee, would, in an action founded on the breach of covenant, be wholly irrelevant. So, again, if goods supplied by A. to B., in pursuance of a contract of sale, prove to be inferior in quality, or do not correspond with the sample, A. will be liable, in an action of assumpsit, to make good the loss sustained, albeit he never even saw the specific goods supplied, and was ignorant of their condition or quality. Where an action "sounds in contract," then, the motive or animus of the defendant is "to be entirely disregarded, and the damages are strictly" to be "limited to the direct pecuniary loss resulting from the breach of the agreement in question" (u).

Such is no doubt the general rule with reference to actions ex contractu; the rule there applies to restrict the parties at Nisi Prius to the production of evidence touching the breach of contract alleged in the declaration. Proof of fraud being excluded, the parties are limited to the discussion of the issue actually raised on the record. "No form of action," it has been observed by a learned writer (x), "has yet been devised for the fraudulent breach of an agreement." But in this case the complainant should according to ordinary precedents, frame his declaration, either on the breach of contract or on the fraud (y), unless indeed, as in Gerhard v. Bates (z), he think it desirable to combine with a count founded upon contract one framed in tort, so as to meet either view of the case which may be established at the trial. In the great majority of cases, then, a charge of fraud cannot with propriety be introduced into a count founded upon contract.

(u) Sedgw. Dam., 2nd ed., 204. It is sufficient in this place to state the general principle applicable in actions founded upon contract. Some modifications of this principle will be specified post, Chap. 6.

(x) Sedgw. Dam., 2nd ed., 206.

(y) An allegation of falsehood and fraud, improperly introduced, may, however, be struck out of a declaration, provided a good cause of action is still apparent therein: per Parke, B., 8 Exch. 730. See Hopkins v. Tanqueray, 15 C. B. 130, cited post, p. 350.

In cases of marine insurance any material mis-statement or concealment vitiates or renders voidable the contract; and whether it be fraudulently made or not is immaterial, except with reference to the return of the premium: Anderson v. Thornton, 8 Exch. 425, 427

(with which compare Wheelton v. Hardisty, 8 E. & B. 232, and Fowkes v. Manchester and London Life Ass. Co., 32 L. J., Q. B., 153, where the action was on a life policy); Behn v. Burness, 3 B. & S. 751, reversing S. C., 1 Id. 877; Holland v. Russell, 1 B. & S. 424; Russell v. Thornton, 6 H. & N. 340; S. C., 4 Id. 788. The non-disclosure, however, of a material fact, unless fraudulent, does not vitiate a guarantee: North British Ins. Co. v. Lloyd, 10 Exch. 523.

In an action for breach of promise of marriage it will not be a good defence that the plaintiff had previously engaged herself to another man: Beechey v. Brown, E. B. & E. 796.

(z) 2 E. & B. 476, cited ante, p. 322.

Neither can evidence of the defendant's fraud be ordinarily relevant in support of the plaintiff's case, save indeed where the action is brought to recover back money paid, on the express ground that the plaintiff was fraudulently induced to part with it, and has received no consideration for it. In such cases, however, proof of fraud is in truth given by way of answer to some defence anticipated from the other side, and does not in strictness itself furnish the gist and foundation of the action. Thus, if the action be for money had and received, or to recover back a deposit paid in consequence of some fraudulent statement put forth by the defendant as director of a projected company, the plaintiff here founds his right to recover upon the total failure of the consideration on which the payment was made (a); he has, however, to meet the objection that the money in question was not "had and received to his (the plaintiff's) use," but was to be applied according to some express understanding between the defendant and himself (usually evidenced by the subscribers' agreement or deed of settlement of the company)—that the money was in fact received upon certain specific trusts, which either have been faithfully executed, or will hereafter be executed, pursuant to their terms. Anticipating this line of defence, the plaintiff meets it, if he can, by proof of fraud operating as an inducement to the execution of the deed, or to the signing of the agreement, and therefore invalidating it, and, perhaps, also operating as an inducement to the payment of the deposit money. Many cases of this kind, offering instances in great variety of circumstantial fraud, are to be found in our Reports, of which Wontner v. Shairp (b) should especially be consulted.

Without pursuing the digression which has been here

(a) Walstab v. Spottiswoode, 15 M. & W. 501.

(b) 4 C. B. 404; Clarke v. Dickson, E. B. & E. 148; Watts v. Salter, 10

C. B. 477; Mowatt v. Lord Lonsborough, 3 E. & B. 307; Ward v. Lord Lonsborough, 12 C. B. 252; and cases cited ante, p. 343, n. (q).

ventured on, we may, perhaps, conclude that fraud can only come collaterally under notice in an action for breach of contract—that an action “sounding in tort” is the proper form of remedy for covin and deceit.

Great care is often requisite in discriminating accurately between three classes of cases :—1. Where fraud is involved. 2. Where a warranty has been given. 3. Where a representation or statement has been made, erroneous indeed, but neither fraudulent nor incorporated with the contract. As to the first of these three classes enough has been already said (c); it remains, therefore, to distinguish—1st, breach of warranty from fraud; and 2ndly, a mere representation from a warranty.

1st. By way of illustration, let us take the case of a sale of goods, and we shall at once see that the distinction between a warranty that a personal chattel is sound and a fraud in the sale of it is broad and manifest (d).

Distinction between breach of warranty
and fraud.

If a man sell a horse to another, and expressly warrant him to be sound, the contract is broken if the horse prove otherwise (e). The purchaser in such case relies upon the contract; and it is immaterial to him whether the vendor did or did not know of the unsoundness of the horse. In either case he is entitled to recover all the damages which he has sustained by reason of the breach of that contract. “A warranty,” says Lord Mansfield (f) “extends to all faults known and unknown to the seller.”

Again, if the vendor say to the purchaser, “I do not know

(c) See also the remarks, post, pp. 351, 354.

(d) The remarks ensuing in the text are extracted from the judgment of Waite, J., Bartholomew v. Bushnell, 20 Day (U. S.) R. 275-6. See Williams v. Swansea Harbour Trustees, 14 C. B., N. S., 845.

(e) But “in a contract of sale, even in the case of an express warranty, defects patent and known to the buyer must be taken to be excluded from the warranty :” per Cockburn, C. J., Burges v. Wickham, 3 B. & S. 684; Leg. Max., 4th ed., 751.

(f) Stuart v. Wilkins, 1 Dougl. 20. Per Lord Brougham, 6 Cl. & F. 444.

whether the horse is or is not sound, and therefore will not warrant him; all I can say is, that I have long owned him, and know of no unsoundness;" here manifestly is no warranty, and, if the vendor spoke the truth, no fraud. If, however, the vendee can show that the horse was unsound, that the vendor knew it to be so at the time of the sale, and that in consequence of the false representations made by him, the purchaser was defrauded, the vendor would be liable, not for a breach of a contract of warranty, for he made no such contract, but for making representations which he knew to be false. In such case the guilty knowledge of the vendor would constitute an essential ingredient in the fraud, and in an action against him should be both alleged and proved.

To entitle the vendee to recover under such circumstances, his action must be founded—not upon a breach of a contract of warranty but—upon the fraud practised by the vendor, or, at least, there should be a count adapted to a charge of that nature (g).

In the case just put by way of illustration, the warranty (if any) is supposed to be express. Equally obvious, however, is the distinction between fraud and the breach of an implied warranty. A warranty may be implied from the course and mode of dealing between parties. If A. orders B., a tradesman, to make an article well known in the trade, and of which the use is understood, B., on supplying it, must be presumed to mean and undertake that it shall be reasonably fit for the particular purpose for which he knew that it was intended (h). And where merchandise, which the buyer

(g) Per Waite, J., 20 Day (U. S.) R. 275-6.

(h) Shepherd v. Pybus, 3 M. & Gr. 868; Ollivant v. Bayley, 5 Q. B. 288; Brown v. Edgington, 2 M. & Gr. 279. Generally, as to what is a warranty, see Cranston v. Marshall, 5 Exch. 395; Taylor v. Bullen, Id. 779; Chandelor

v. Lopus, 1 Smith L. C., 5th ed., 160, and Note thereto; Simond v. Bradon, 2 C. B., N. S., 324; Hall v. Conder, Id. 22. Dawson v. Collis, 10 C. B. 523, shows, that the purchaser of goods by sample, with a warranty that they are equal to sample, must either bring a cross action for breach of war-has no opportunity of inspecting, is sold, not by sample and without express warranty, a condition is implied that the goods shall fairly and reasonably answer the description in the contract (i). In such case the party who impliedly warrants will be bound by his warranty, and liable for a breach of it, without proof of fraud or of the scienter.

Again—"When a skilled labourer, artizan, or artist is employed, there is on his part an implied warranty that he is of skill reasonably competent to the task he undertakes,—expondes peritiam artis. Thus if an apothecary, a watch-maker, or an attorney be employed for reward, they each impliedly undertake to possess and exercise reasonable skill in their several arts. The public profession of an art is a representation and undertaking to all the world that the professor possesses the requisite ability and skill. An express promise or express representation in the particular case is not necessary" (k).

Further—If a man makes a contract as agent for another he must be taken in law to promise that he is what he represents himself to be, and must answer for any damage which directly results from confidence being given to his representations (l).

The distinction between a warranty and a representation (m) is sometimes rather fine (n). There is no doubt that a repre-

Distinction between warranty and representation.

ranty, or rely on the non-correspondence of the bulk with the sample as a ground for reducing the damages; he cannot, it seems, refuse to receive the goods. As to implied warranty, see also Chanter v. Hopkins, 4 M. & W. 399, followed in Prideaux v. Burnett, 1 C. B., N. S., 613; Emmerton v. Mathews, 7 H. & N. 586.

(i) Wieler v. Schilizzi, 17 C. B. 619. See Smith, Merc. L., 6th ed., p. 517.

(k) Judgm., Harner v. Cornelius, 5 C. B., N. S., 246; per Jervis, C. J., Jenkins v. Betham, 15 C. B. 188-9.

(l) Collen v. Wright, 7 E. & B. 301; S. C., 8 Id. 647; Pow v. Davis, 1 B. & S. 220; Randall v. Trimen, 18 C. B. 786. See also Simons v. Patchett, 7 E. & B. 568; Richardson v. Dunn, 8 C. B., N. S., 655, 664.

(m) "A representation is a statement or assertion made by one party to the other, before or at the time of the contract, of some matter or circumstance relating to it:" Judgm., Behn v. Burness, 3 B. & S. 753.

(n) Whether a descriptive statement in a written instrument is a mere resentation[•] intended by the vendor as a warranty, and acted on as such by the vendee, amounts in law to a warranty (o); and it is also well settled that such representation so operates, although made during the treaty for a sale, and some days before the sale was finally agreed upon, if it appear that it was not withdrawn, and provided the contract of sale does not exclude it by its terms. When, however, negotiations have actually terminated in a written contract, the parties thereby tacitly affirm that such writing contains the whole contract between them, and no new terms are allowed to be added to it by extraneous evidence (p).

So where the contract between parties has not been reduced into writing, the tests for determining whether a statement made by one of them does or does not amount to a warranty will be: was it made pending the contract? was it intended, and reasonably and bona fide accepted, as a warranty (q)?

In Hopkins v. Tanqueray (r), the declaration stated that the defendant, by falsely and fraudulently representing and warranting a horse to be then sound, sold it to the plaintiff; yet the said horse was not then sound, as the defendant then knew, &c. There was no evidence offered of fraud, but the facts proved were these—the defendant, having sent a horse to Tattersall's to be sold by auction, went into the stable where it was on the day before the sale, and there found the plaintiff, with whom he had been previously acquainted, examining the horse's legs; upon which the defendant said, "You have nothing to look for; I assure you he is perfectly presentation or a substantive part of the contract is a question of construction for the Court: Judgm., Behn v. Burness, 3 B. & S. 754, which is instructive with reference to the distinction above mentioned.

(o) See Bannerman v. White, 10 C. B., N. S., 844.

(p) See Randall v. Rhodes, 1 Curtis (U. S.) R. 92; Stucley v. Baily, 1 H. & C. 405.

(q) Stucley v. Baily, supra; Russell v. Nicolopulo, 8 C. B., N. S., 362.

(r) 15 C. B. 130. See Carter v. Crick, 4 H. & N. 412.

sound in every respect : ” to this the plaintiff replied, “ If you say so, I am satisfied,” and he desisted from his examination. On the next day the horse was put up for sale by public auction without a warranty, and the plaintiff purchased him for 280 guineas, having, as he stated, “ made up his mind to buy the horse, relying on the defendant’s positive assurance that he was sound.” The horse subsequently turned out to be unsound ; and the plaintiff, having re-sold him for less than he had given for him, sued the defendant for the loss and damage thus sustained. After verdict for the plaintiff, the question raised for the decision of the Court in banc, on motion for a nonsuit, was whether there was any evidence from which the jury could infer a warranty. The Court held that there was not—that what was said before the sale amounted to a representation only, and not to a warranty ; and that the defendant could not be liable for a mere representation, although contrary to the fact, unless it were fraudulently made.

A mere expression of opinion then, or of intention (s), will not be deemed tantamount to a warranty ; and further, in order to be operative as such, the representation relied upon must be shown to have been made pending the contract (t).

Where a mis-statement has been made anterior to the completion of the contract, the question for consideration will be :—Is there evidence of dolus dans locum contractui (u) ? Upon this point, the remarks of Lord Langdale, M. R., in Clapham v. Shillito (x), claim attention. Their purport is to show, that cases frequently occur, in which, upon entering into contracts, misrepresentations made by one party have not been in any degree relied on by the

(s) Benham v. United Guarantee, &c., Co., 7 Exch. 744.

(t) Per Maule, J., Hopkins v. Tanqueray, ante. See further as to the distinction between a representation and a warranty, 2 Wms. Saund. 200 c.

(u) Ante, p. 342.

(x) 7 Beav. 149. See Harris v. Kemble, 2 Dow. & Cl. 463.

other party. If the party to whom the representations were made himself resorted to the proper means of verification before he entered into the contract, it may appear that he relied upon the result of his own investigation, and not upon the statements made to him on the other side ; or, if the means of investigation and verification were at hand, and the attention of the party receiving the representations were drawn to them, the circumstances of the case may lead a jury to impute to the party alleged to have been misled such a knowledge of the facts as upon due inquiry he ought to have obtained, the notion of any reliance having been placed on the representations made to him being necessarily excluded.

Again, in endeavouring to ascertain what reliance was placed on representations, they should be considered with reference to the subject-matter which they concern, and the relative knowledge of the parties. If the subject is capable of being accurately known, and one party is or is supposed to be possessed of accurate knowledge, and the other is entirely ignorant, and a contract is entered into after representations made by the party who knows or is supposed to know, without any means of verification being resorted to by the other, it may well enough be presumed, that the ignorant man relied on the statements made by him who was supposed to be better informed ; but, if the subject is in its nature uncertain,—if all that is known about it is matter of inference from something else, and if the parties making and receiving representations on the subject have equal knowledge and means of acquiring knowledge, and equal skill, it is not easy to presume that representations made by one would have much or any influence on the other (y). The remarks here made will serve to show, not only the mode in which a Court of equity will distinguish between fraud and mere mis-statement, but likewise how the evidence in the class of cases here alluded to should be analysed in a Court of law (z).

Passing on to a brief notice of contracts and considerations which are illegal—as being in violation of positive law, or opposed to public policy, or immoral, I must repeat (a), that the remarks which follow will be found generally applicable as well to Special as to Simple Contracts. As regards the former of these, the L. J. Knight Bruce has observed (b), that, “Notwithstanding the solemnity and force which the law ascribes to deeds, and all the strictness with which, in general, it prohibits the introduction of extrinsic evidence to prove that an instrument goes beyond, or does not fully contain, or incorrectly exhibits, the terms of the contract, which it was written and signed for the purpose of expressing or recording, the rule is settled (and not merely in Courts of equity) that a deed, ex facie just and righteous, may be vitiated and avoided by alleging and adducing extrinsic evidence to prove that it was founded on a consideration, or had a view or purpose, contravening law or public policy.”

Of contracts illegal—opposed to public policy
—immoral.

So, in The Gas Light and Coke Company v. Turner (c), Lord Abinger says, that all the decisions show, that, at common law, a contract entered into to effect an illegal purpose is void and cannot be enforced, and it makes no difference that the contract is under seal. “It is true,” continues that learned Judge, “that you cannot add to a contract under seal anything to vary the contract, but you may show dehors the instrument that such contract was entered into for an illegal purpose; such proof does not vary the terms of the contract, but merely shows the illegal object.”

(z) Attwood v. Small, 6 Cl. & F. 232, is the leading case upon the subject adverted to in the text.

(a) See the remarks, ante, p. 334.

(b) Reynell v. Sprye, 1 De G., M. &

G. 672.

(c) 6 Bing. N. C. 324, 327; and see per Tindal, C. J., in S. C., 5 Bing. N. C. 666, 675, cited ante, p. 254; Stevens v. Gourley, 7 C. B., N. S., 99.

The objection of illegality applies then alike to special as to simple contracts. "Promises," as Paley tells us in his Moral Philosophy (d), "are not binding where the performance is unlawful;" thus—to anticipate a little what I shall presently have to say—if two parties mutually agree, that one of them shall do an act contrary to the express provisions of a public statute, the act to be done being illegal, the promise that it shall be done is void.

Contracts
in direct violation of law.

An action, then, cannot be maintained upon a contract which is in direct violation of law, whether statutory or unwritten—which is of an immoral tendency—or contrary to sound policy. "The common law maxims are (e), Ex turpi causâ non oritur actio, ex dolo malo non oritur actio. They prohibit everything which is unjust or contra bonos mores. The object of all law is to repress vice and to promote the general welfare of society, and it does not give its assistance to a person to enforce a demand originating in his breach or violation of its principles and enactments. Contracts in violation of statutes are void, and they are so whether the consideration to be performed or the act to be done be a violation of the statute" (f).

It would be useless to adduce a cloud of authorities in support of the foregoing propositions:—"What," says Lord Ellenborough, C. J., "is done in contravention of the provisions of an Act of Parliament cannot be made the subject matter of an action" (g). "Where a contract," says Lord Tenterden, C. J., "which a plaintiff seeks to enforce is expressly, or by implication, forbidden by the statute or common (d) Vol. 1, p. 130; Whewell El. Moral. pp. 233, 245-6.

(e) See Harris v. Runnels, 12 Howard (U. S.) R. 83.

(f) Ibid. Where, however, the act which is the subject of the contract may according to the circumstances be lawful or unlawful, it will not be presumed that the contract was to do the unlawful act; the contrary is the proper inference: per Lord Abinger, C. B., Lewis v. Davison, 4 M. & W. 654, 657.

(g) Langton v. Hughes, 1 M. & S. 596; cited Judgm., De Begnis v. Armistead, 10 Bing. 110.

law, no Court will lend its assistance to give it effect. And there are numerous cases in the books where an action on the contract has failed because either the consideration for the promise or the act to be done was illegal, as being against the express provisions of the law, or contrary to justice, morality, and sound policy" (h).

It is, indeed, sufficiently obvious that a contract may be illegal quoad the consideration or quoad the promise. A distinction, however, here requires notice: a consideration bad in part is bad altogether (i); whereas the promise may be to do several distinct and independent acts, of which some are legal and some are illegal; if so, the promise will be valid in regard to the former, void as to the latter of such acts (k). So, a written agreement may be single and entire, founded on one entire consideration—it may be severable in its nature, and deal with matters which are unconnected with and independent of each other (l). And, as remarked by Mr. Smith in his Note to Collins v. Blantern (m), "in cases where the consideration is tainted by no illegality, but some of the conditions (if the contract in question be a bond) or promises (if it be a contract of any other description) are illegal, the illegality of those which are bad does not communicate itself to or contaminate those which are good, except where, in consequence of some peculiarity in the

Either the consideration or the promise may be illegal.

(h) Wetherell v. Jones, 3 B. & Ad. 226; Judgm., Cope v. Rowlands, 2 M. & W. 157. See Smith v. Lindo, 5 C. B., N. S., 587; 4 C. B., N. S., 395; Mayor, &c., of Norwich v. Norfolk R. Co., 4 E. & B. 397. And see a curious illustration of the doctrine of our law as to illegal contracts put by Lord Campbell, C. J., and Wightman, J., in Nicholson v. Gooch, 5 E. & B. 1015.

(i) Waite v. Jones, 1 Bing. N. C. 656, 662 (citing Featherstone v. Hutchinson, Cro. Eliz. 199): Howden v. Haigh, 11 Ad. & E. 1036; per Tindal, C. J., Shackell v. Rosier, 3 Bing. N. C. 646, who remarks:—"Undoubtedly, when a promise rests on two considerations, one of which is impossible or unintelligible, you may reject the impossible or unintelligible, and resort to that which is possible and plain."

(k) See Bank of Australasia v. Breillat, 6 Moo. P. C. C. 152, 201.

(l) Hopkins v. Prescott, 4 C. B. 578, 593. See Sterry v. Clifton, 9 C. B. 110.

(m) 1 Smith L. C., 5th ed., p. 310.

contract, its parts are inseparable or dependent upon one another."

Penalty implies prohibition.

Again, it may be safely laid down, notwithstanding some dicta apparently to the contrary, that, if a contract be rendered illegal by statute, it can make no difference in point of law whether the statute which makes it so has in view the protection of the Legislature or any other object. The sole question will be—Does the statute mean to prohibit the contract (n)? Such an intention on the part of the Legislature may be manifested as well by the infliction of a penalty as by express prohibitory words, for a penalty implies a prohibition (o).

It seems to follow à fortiori from what has just been said, that, "if two parties enter into an agreement, whereby it is stipulated that one of them shall be enabled to commit an act that is contrary to public policy, and contrary to the provisions of an Act of Parliament, though not expressly prohibited thereby, except by the imposition of a penalty, the agreement is illegal and void" (p).

Upon this part of the subject, I will merely add, that statutes giving rise to questions as to the right to recover the price of goods by vendors who have not complied with the terms of such statutes, are of two classes,—the one class of statutes having for their object the raising and protection of the revenue,—the other class being directed either to the protection of buyers and consumers or to some object of public policy (q). In connection with the former of these two (n) Cope v. Rowlands, 2 M. & W. 149, 157; acc. Smith v. Mauchood, 14 M. & W. 452, 464 (which recognises Johnson v. Hudson, 11 East, 180), and Taylor v. Crowland Gas, &c., Co., 10 Exch. 293, 296; Bailey v. Harris, 12 Q. B. 905; Bull v. Chapman, 8 Exch. 444; Foster v. Oxford, &c., R. C., 13 C. B. 200. See Smith v.

Lindo, cited supra, n. (h); Lewis v. Bright, 4 E. & B. 917.

(o) Per Lord Holt, Bartlett v. Vinor, Carth. 252; Cope v. Rowlands, supra; Fergusson v. Norman, 5 Bing. N. C. 76, 84, 85.

(p) Per Maule, J., Ritchie v. Smith, 6 C. B. 462, 477.

(q) Judgm., Cundell v. Dawson, 4 classes, the difficulty most likely to occur to the practitioner will be in determining whether the infliction of a penalty implies a prohibition of the contract. In connection with the latter, the inquiry will, in the absence of any special contract, most probably be, whether, by reason of the vendor's non-compliance with the provisions of some specific statute, the law will decline to imply a promise on the part of the purchaser to pay for the goods sold (r).

Assuming that a transaction has occurred clearly in contravention of law, and that the various points already suggested as likely to present difficulty have been satisfactorily disposed of, it may still be necessary to inquire whether the connection subsisting between such illegal transaction and the contract under consideration is sufficiently close to invalidate the latter.

We have seen, that, where a contract grows immediately out of an illegal act, a Court of justice will not lend its aid to enforce it; a man, for instance, who imports goods for another in violation of our law, cannot maintain an action for the value or freight of the goods, or for advances made on them (s). So it has been held, that one of two parties to an agreement to suppress a prosecution for felony cannot maintain an action against the other for an injury arising out of the transaction in which they have both been illegally engaged (t). And where, in consideration that plaintiff had published a libel at the defendant's request, and had, at the like request, consented to defend an action brought against plaintiff for such publication, the defendant promised to indemnify plaintiff from the costs of the action: the promise so to do was held to be void (u).

C. B. 376, 397. See Forster v. Taylor, 5 B. & Ad. 887, 896; Smith v. Bromley, 2 Cowp. 696, note.

(r) Judgm., 4 C. B. 397.

(s) Armstrong v. Toler, 11 Wheaton (U. S.) R. 258, which will be found well worthy of perusal: Holman v. Johnson, Cowp. 341, with which compare Clugas v. Penaluna, 4 T. R. 466.

(t) Fivaz v. Nicholls, 2 C. B. 501.

(u) Shackell v. Rosier, 2 Bing. N. C. 634.

So, if the contract in question be in part only connected with the illegal transaction, it will nevertheless be tainted thereby, ex. gr., if the importation of goods contraband of war were the result of a scheme to consign the goods to a third person on behalf of the importer, in order that he might protect and defend them for the owner in case they should be brought into jeopardy by seizure or by legal process, a bond afterwards given or promise made by the owner to the consignee by way of indemnity to the latter would, it is conceived, be invalid as constituting a part of the original transaction, although purporting to be a new and independent contract (x).

Thus far, then, the doctrine under consideration may, with tolerable precision, be enunciated. But then the question arises, does the taint in the original transaction infect and vitiate every contract growing out of it, however remotely connected with it? This cannot with reason be contended for; inasmuch as the consequence of such a rule would be, that parties innocently contracting might suffer for a precedent illegality connected with or perhaps giving rise to the subject-matter of their contract (y). If, under such circumstances as here adverted to, doubt is entertained, the test most likely to prove serviceable to the practitioner would seem to be, does the plaintiff require aid from the illegal transaction in order to establish his claim (z)? if so, his declaration will, according as the defect is or is not apparent therein, be exposed either to a demurrer or to a special plea of illegality.

Lastly, where the consideration and the matter to be performed are both legal, a plaintiff would not, it seems, be precluded from recovering by an infringement of the law

(x) Armstrong v. Toler, 11 Wheat (U. S.) R. 258; Collins v. Blantern, cited ante, p. 282.

(y) Armstrong v. Toler, 11 Wheat.

(U. S.) R. 258, where examples illustrating the text are given.

(z) Simpson v. Bloss, 7 Taunt. 246. See Bone v. Eckless, 5 H. & N. 925.

collateral to and not contemplated by the contract in the performance of something to be done on his part (a).

The decision of the Court of error in Fisher v. Bridges (b) is important with reference to contracts illegal by reason of their being opposed to the statute law. There, to a declaration in covenant for the payment of a certain sum of money, the defendant pleaded, that, before the making of the deed declared upon, it was unlawfully agreed between the plaintiff and defendant that the former should sell and the latter purchase of him a conveyance of land for a term of years, in consideration of a sum of money to be paid by the defendant to the plaintiff, "to the intent and in order and for the purpose, as the plaintiff at the time of the making the said agreement well knew," that the land should be sold by lottery, contrary to the form of the statutes in such case made and provided; that afterwards, "in pursuance of the said illegal agreement," the land was assigned for the term, and a part of the purchase-money remaining unpaid, the defendant, to secure the payment thereof, made the deed and covenant in the declaration mentioned. Upon these pleadings the Court of Queen's Bench held, that the contract in question appeared to have been made after the illegal transaction between the plaintiff and defendant had terminated; that it formed no part of such transaction, and was consequently unaffected by it. The judgment thus given was, however, reversed in error upon reasoning of the following kind, which seems conclusive:—the original agreement was clearly tainted with illegality, inasmuch as all lotteries are prohibited by the stat. 10 & 11 Will. 3, c. 17,

(a) Per Lord Tenterden, C. J., Wetherell v. Jones, 3 B. & Ad. 226; Fergusson v. Norman, 5 Bing. N. C. 76, 84; Pidgeon v. Burslem, 3 Exch. 470-1, followed in Jessop v. Lutwyche, 10 Exch. 614. See Rosewarne v. Billing, 15 C. B., N. S., 316.

(b) 3 E. & B. 642, reversing judgment in S. C., 2 E. & B. 113, followed in Geere v. Marc, 2 H. & C. 339, 345, 346. See A.-G. v. Hollingworth, 2 H. & N. 416; O'Connor v. Bradshaw, 5 Exch. 882.

s. 1; and by the 12 Geo. 2, c. 28, s. 4, all sales of houses, lands, &c., by lottery are declared to be void to all intents and purposes. The agreement being illegal, then, could not be enforced, and no action could have been brought to recover the purchase-money of the land which was the subject-matter thereof; the covenant accordingly being connected with an illegal agreement, could not be enforced (c).

Even if the plea above abstracted were not to be understood, as alleging that the covenant declared upon was given in pursuance of an illegal agreement, it would, remarked the Court of Exchequer Chamber, still show a good defence to the action, for "the covenant was given for the payment of the purchase-money. It springs from and is the creature of that illegal agreement; and, if the law would not enforce the illegal contract, so neither will it allow parties to enforce a security for purchase-money which, by the original bargain, was tainted with illegality."

Contracts opposed to public policy.

When a contract is said to be void as "opposed to public policy," reference is made to that principle of law, in accordance with which "no subject can lawfully do that which has a tendency to be injurious to the public or against the public good—which may be termed, as it sometimes has been, the policy of the law, or 'public policy,' in relation to the administration of the law" (d). The "doctrine of the public

(c) Paxton v. Popham, 9 East, 408; Gas Light Co. v. Turner, 6 Bing, N. C. 324; S. C., 5 Id. 666.

(d) Per Lord Truro, Egerton v. Earl Brownlow, 4 H. L. Ca. 196, where the meaning of the term in question was much discussed. In that case, Parke, B., observes, that "'Public policy' is a vague and unsatisfactory term, and calculated to lead to uncertainty and error when applied to the decision of legal rights; it is capable of being understood in different senses; it may and does in its ordinary sense mean 'political expedience,' or that which is best for the common good of the community, and in that sense there may be every variety of opinion according to the education, habits, talents, and dispositions of each person who is to decide whether an act is against public policy or not. To allow this to be a ground of judicial decision would lead to the greatest uncertainty and confusion." And see per Alderson, B., Id. 106, and 5 M. & W. 467.

good or the public safety, or what is sometimes called public policy," as remarked by a learned Judge, "being the foundation of law, is supported by decisions in every branch of the law; and an unlimited number of cases may be cited (e), as directly and distinctly deciding upon contracts and covenants on the avowed broad ground of the public good, and on that alone" (f). This doctrine is asserted by Sir E. Coke, under the maxim Nihil quod est inconveniens est licitum (g).

Primâ facie, as we have already seen, all persons are free to make such contracts as they please (h), and are morally and legally bound by them, provided they adopt the formalities required by the common and statute law. Contracts have, however, been deemed to be illegal and void in many cases as opposed to public policy. Thus, at common law, wagers which are foolish, or tend to annoy others, or to waste the time of the Court (i), or to outrage decency (k) have been discountenanced. And if a wager were laid by a judge upon the event of a cause which he would be called upon to decide, it would be against the established rule—nemo in propriâ causâ judex esse debet (l)—and, irrespective of express enactment (m), would be void (n).

(e) Generally, as to agreements against public policy, see Shrewsbury & Birmingham R. C. v. London & N.-W. R. C., 6 H. L. Ca. 113; Simpson v. Lord Houden, 9 Cl. & F. 61; Preston v. Liverpool, Manchester, and Newcastle R. C., 5 H. L. Ca. 605; Coppock v. Bower, 4 M. & W. 361; Mittelholzer v. Fullarton, 6 Q. B. 989, with which compare Santos v. Illidge, 8 C. B., N. S., 861; S. C., 6 C. B., N. S., 841; Millward v. Littlewood, 5 Exch. 775; per Lord Mansfield, C. J., Jones v. Randall, 1 Cowp. 39; and in Holman v. Johnson, Id. 343; Kilham v. Collier, 21 L. J., Q. B., 65; Scott v. Avery, 8

Exch. 487, 497; S. C., 5 H. L. Ca. 811; cited ante, p. 44; Humphreys v. Welling, 2 H. & C. 7.

(f) Per Pollock, C. B., Egerton v. Earl Brownlow, 4 H. L. Ca. 144-5.

(g) Co. Litt. 66. a.

(h) Ante, p. 253.

(i) Eltham v. Kingsman, 1 B. & Ald. 683, 688.

(k) Da Costa v. Jones, Cowp. 729; Thackoorseydass v. Dhondmull, 6 Moo. P. C. C. 300, 310.

(l) Ante, p. 264.

(m) See 8 & 9 Vict. c. 109.

(n) Jones v. Randall, Cowp. 37.

Many other contracts have also been held to be illegal on principles long recognised by the common law, ex. gr., marriage brocage bonds—that is, bonds for the procuring of marriages (o); contracts not to marry (p); deeds and agreements made in contemplation of a future separation between husband and wife (q); contracts made with a view to compromising prosecutions for felonies or misdemeanors (r); contracts in restraint of trade or against alienation of land, including those which violate the law of perpetuities. So, in bankruptcy, the object and policy of the bankrupt laws is to make a rateable distribution of the bankrupt's property amongst all his creditors; and preferences given to particular creditors by a trader in contemplation of bankruptcy, or to induce a creditor to sign the composition deed (s), are in violation of the policy of the bankrupt laws, and are therefore held to be fraudulent and void (t). And, without multiplying instances of contracts which are opposed to public policy, we may conclude, in the words of Lord Ellenborough (u), that, “wherever the tolerating of any species

(o) Hall v. Potter, 3 Lev. 411; where the House of Lords held, that “all such contracts concerning marriages are of dangerous consequence, and not to be allowed.” See also the cases on this subject cited arg., 15 Q. B. 469; Earl of Chesterfield v. Janssen, 1 Atk. 352.

(p) Morley v. Rennoldson, 2 Hare, 570; Lowe v. Peers, 4 Burr. 2225; S. C., Wilmot, 364; Baker v. White, 2 Vern. 215; Hartley v. Rice, 10 East, 22.

(q) Hindley v. Marquis of Westmeath, 6 B. & C. 200. But a deed providing for the wife's support on an immediate separation is good: Jones v. Waite, 9 Cl. & F. 101, affirming judgment in S. C., 5 Bing. N. C. 341. In Wilson v. Wilson, 1 H. L. Ca. 538, the authorities upon this subject are collected.

See Randle v. Gould, 8 E. & B. 457.

(r) Ante, p. 283, n. (b). Fivas v. Nicholls, 2 C. B. 501; Ex parte Critchley, 3 D. & L. 527; Ward v. Lloyd, 6 M. & Gr. 85; Haigh v. Jones, 5 M. & Gr. 634; Osbaldiston v. Simpson, 13 Sim. 513.

(s) Atkinson v. Denby, 7 H. & N. 934; S. C., 6 Id. 778, following Smith v. Bromley, 2 Dougl. 695 n., and Smith v. Cuff, 6 M. & S. 160.

(t) Per Cresswell, J., 4 H. L. Ca. 87. See Smith v. Salzmänn, 9 Exch. 535; Wilkin v. Manning, Id. 575; Hills v. Mitson, 8 Exch. 751; Coles v. Strick, 15 Q. B. 2, where a contrivance in fraud of the Court of Bankruptcy was held to avoid an agreement.

(u) Gilbert v. Sykes, 16 East, 156 (as to which see the remarks, 4 H. L. Ca. 125, 148, and in 6 Moo. P. C. C.

of contract has a tendency to produce a public mischief or inconvenience, such a contract has been held to be void."

Of the various kinds of contracts above enumerated, those in restraint of trade, by reason of their practical importance, require some especial notice. Upon this subject the leading case is Mitchel v. Reynolds (x); and in the Note appended thereto in Mr. Smith's Selection of Leading Cases (y), the law relating to contracts in restraint of trade is fully set forth. It may be shortly stated thus: that although a bond, covenant, or agreement in restraint of trade generally is bad, yet a contract in partial restraint of trade, if made upon a consideration actual and bond fide and not colourable merely, will, provided it does not impose an unreasonable degree of restriction, be upheld (z).

Contracts in restraint of trade.

The judgment of the Court of Exchequer in Mallan v. May (a) exhibits very clearly the general principles which have actuated our tribunals, as well of equity as of law, in upholding (with certain important limitations) contracts of the kind alluded to. Contracts in total restraint of trade (it is there said), which the law so much favours, are absolutely bad. Contracts in partial restraint of trade, if nothing more appears, are presumed to be bad (b); but if the circum-

312); see Cook v. Field, 15 Q. B. 460; Doe d. Williams v. Evans, 1 C. B. 717. As to contracts for the sale of offices, see 2 Bing 229, 247; Sterry v. Clifton, 9 C. B. 110. As to contracts originating out of gambling transactions, see Quarrier v. Colston, 1 Phill. 147. As to champerty and maintenance, see Anderson v. Radcliffe, E. B. & E. 806; Sprye v. Porter, 7 E. & B. 58; Simpson v. Lamb, Id. 84; Earle v. Hoynwood, 9 C. B., N. S., 566; Findon v. Parker, 11 M. & W. 675; Reynell v. Sprye, 1 De G., M. & G. 660.

(x) 1 P. Wms. 181.

(y) P. 340 (5th ed.).

(z) See Jones v. Lees, 1 H. & N. 189; Dendy v. Henderson, 11 Exch. 194.

(a) 11 M. & W. 653, 665; Price v. Green, 16 M. & W. 346, 352; S. C., 13 M. & W. 695; Mumford v. Gething, 7 C. B., N. S., 305.

(b) Acc. per Williams, J., Sainter v. Ferguson, 7 C. B. 730.

It is observable, that, in Tallis v. Tallis, 1 E. & B. 391, the Court of Queen's Bench remark thus:—"In Mitchel v. Reynolds it is said, 'wherever such contract (in restraint of trade) stat indifferenter, and for aught appears may be either good or bad, the law presumes it prima facie to be bad.'

stances are set forth, that presumption may be excluded ; and the Court are to judge of those circumstances, and to determine whether the contract submitted for their consideration be valid or not.

Therefore, if there be simply a stipulation, though in an instrument under seal, that a trade or profession shall not be carried on in a particular place, without any recital in the deed, and without any averments showing circumstances rendering such a contract reasonable, the instrument is void. But if there are circumstances recited in the instrument (or probably if they appear by averment), it is for the Court to determine, whether the contract in question be a fair and reasonable one or not ; and the test appears to be—whether it be prejudicial or not to the public interest ; for it is on grounds of public policy alone that these contracts are supported or avoided. Contracts for the partial restraint of trade are upheld, not because they are advantageous to the individual with whom the contract is made, and a sacrifice pro tanto of the rights of the community, but because it is for the benefit of the public at large that they should be enforced. Many of these partial restraints on trade are perfectly consistent with public convenience and the general interest, and have been supported ; such is the case of the disposing of a shop in a particular place, with a contract on the part of the vendor not to carry on a trade in the same place. This is, in effect, the sale of a goodwill, and offers an encouragement to trade, by allowing a party to dispose of all the fruits of his industry (c). And such is the class of cases of much more frequent occurrence, of a tradesman, manufacturer, or professional man taking a servant or clerk into his service, with a contract that he will not carry on the same

But, according to the tenor of the later decisions, the contract is valid, unless some restriction is imposed beyond what the interest of the plaintiff requires.”

(c) See Prugnell v. Gosse, Aleyn, 67 ; Broad v. Jolliffe, Cro. Jac. 596 ; Jelliel v. Broad, Noy, 98.

trade or profession within certain limits (d). In such a case, the public derives an advantage in the unrestrained choice which such a stipulation gives to the employer of able assistants, and the security it affords, that the master will not withhold from the servant instruction in the secrets of his trade, and the communication of his own skill and experience, from the fear of his afterwards having a rival in the same business (e).

Such being the general reasoning now recognised with regard to contracts in partial restraint of trade (f), let us inquire what conditions are essential to their validity, that is, under what circumstances such contracts will be deemed "fair and reasonable" by the Courts.

Now, in the first place, a contract in restraint of trade must have some consideration to support it. If there be no consideration for it, or a consideration of no real value (g), the contract must "either be a fraud upon the rights of the party restrained or a mere voluntary contract, a nudum pactum, and therefore void" (h). The Court, however, will not inquire respecting the adequacy of the consideration. This point was finally determined in Hitchcock v. Coker (i), since which case the law there laid down with reference to it has been uniformly adhered to (k).

Some consideration necessary.

The Court can have no judicial perception of the ratio of the consideration to the restriction; if there were a legal consideration of value, passing to the contractor, the contract

(d) See Chesman v. Nainby, 2 Ld. Raym. 1456; Carnes v. Nisbett, 31 L. J., Ex., 273.

(e) Judgm., 11 M. & W. 665-6; per Erle, C. J., Mumford v. Gething, 29 L. J., C. P., 109, 110; S. C., 7 C. B., N. S., 305.

(f) Such contracts were, however, formerly held to be illegal. See per Lord St. Leonards, 4 H. L. Ca. 237-9.

(g) See per Lord Abinger, C. B., Leighton v. Wales, 3 M. & W. 550.

(h) 6 Ad. & E. 438, 457. The former rule, as to the adequacy of the consideration, will be found stated in Young v. Tummins, 1 C. & J. 331; Horner v. Graves, 7 Bing. 735.

(i) 6 Ad. & E. 438.

(k) Per Williams, J., Sainter v. Ferguson, 7 C. B. 730.

will be enforced, without reference to the quantum of that value (l).

If the restraint of trade contemplated by the agreement between the parties be unreasonable, such agreement is void altogether; if not, it is lawful, the only question being whether there is a consideration to support it; and the adequacy of the consideration the Court will not inquire into, but will leave the parties to make the bargain for themselves (m).

Assuming that there is some consideration to support an agreement in restraint of trade, the reasonableness and validity of the contract will have mainly to be determined by reference to the degree of restraint which it seeks to impose, and which may be considered in regard as well to its duration as to the superficial area over which it is intended to be operative.

Duration of restraint.

In regard to the duration of the restriction, it is now settled that it may continue during the life of the contractor, and that it is limited neither to the period during which the contractee may carry on his business, nor even to the term of his life (n).

The reasoning in support of this doctrine is as follows:—
“The goodwill of a trade is a subject of value and price. It may be sold, bequeathed, or become assets in the hands of the personal representative of a trader. And if the restriction as to time is to be held to be illegal if extended beyond the period of the party by himself carrying on the trade, the value of such goodwill considered in those various points of view is altogether destroyed” (o). If then (to take a case of ordinary occurrence) it be not unreasonable, as undoubtedly (l) Judgm., Tallis v. Tallis, 1 E. & v. Cummings, 5 C. B. 247.

B. 410.

(n) See Dendy v. Henderson, 11

(m) Per Alderson, B., Pilkington v. Exch. 194.

Scott, 15 M. & W. 660, cited in Reg. v. Welch, 2 E. & B. 363, and Hartley

(o) Judgm., Hitchcock v. Coker, 6 Ad. & E. 454.

it is not, to prevent a servant from entering into the same trade in the same town in which his master lives so long as the master carries on the trade there, it does not seem unreasonable that the restraint should be carried further, and should be allowed to continue if the master sells the trade, or bequeaths it, or if it becomes the property of his personal representative; that is, if it be reasonable that the master should by an agreement secure himself from a diminution of the annual profits of his trade, it does not appear unreasonable that the restriction should go so far as to secure to the master the enjoyment of the price or value for which the trade would sell, or secure the enjoyment of the same trade to his purchaser, or legatee, or executor. And this can only be effected by making the restriction of the servant's setting up or entering into the trade or business within the given limit co-extensive with the servant's life (p).

The principle established by Hitchcock v. Coker, and recognised in subsequent cases, accordingly is, that a restriction reasonably limited as to space, but enduring for the life of the party restrained, may be valid (q).

In determining as to the reasonableness of a contract in restraint of trade, regard being had to the extent of area over which it is to be in force, our Courts will consider whether the restraint in question, to which some limit must be assigned (r), is larger and wider than the protection of the party with whom the contract is made can possibly require; if it be so, such restraint must be deemed unreason-

Limitation in regard to space.

(p) Judgm., Hitchcock v. Coker, 6 Ad. & E. 454-5; Archer v. Marsh, Id. 959; Wallis v. Day, 2 M. & W. 273.

(q) Judgm., Elves v. Crofts, 10 C. B. 259, citing Mallan v. May, 11 M. & W. 653; Rannie v. Irvine, 7 M. & Gr. 969; Pemberton v. Vaughan, 10 Q. B. 87; Hastings v. Whitley, 2

Exch. 611; Atkyns v. Kinnier, 4 Exch. 776; acc. Tallis v. Tallis, 1 E. & B. 391.

(r) Per Parker, C. J., Mitchel v. Reynolds, 1 P. Wms. 181; Tallis v. Tallis, 1 E. & B. 411; Ward v. Byrne, 5 M. & W. 548; Hinde v. Gray, 1 M. & Gr. 195; per Best, C. J., Homer v. Ashford, 3 Bing. 326.

able in law, and the contract which would enforce it will be void (s).

Sometimes difficulty may be felt in applying the general principle just stated to particular facts; and where the question turns upon the reasonableness or unreasonableness of the restriction of the party from carrying on trade or business (t) within a certain space or district, the answer may depend upon various circumstances that may be brought to bear upon it: such as the nature of the trade or profession, the populousness of the neighbourhood, the mode in which the trade or profession is usually carried on (u), and other matters with which the Court cannot in reason be supposed to be conversant (x). From decided cases we collect, however, that the interest of the party claiming protection has been held to extend very widely. Thus, contracts between professional men have been supported where the area of exclusion was apparently greater than the area of the plaintiff's practice. In Horner v. Graves (y), where the area of exclusion from practice as a dentist was a circle round York of the diameter of 200 miles, although holding the restriction too large the Court observe, that, unless the case was such that the restraint was plainly and obviously unnecessary, they would not feel themselves justified in interfering. In Mallan v. May (z), where exclusion from the practice of a dentist in London was held to be reasonable and valid, the Court say, "it would be better to

(s) Judgm., Hitchcock v. Coker, 6 Ad. & E. 454.

(t) As to the meaning of the phrase "carrying on business" at a place, see Turner v. Evans, 2 E. & B. 512; S. C., 2 De G., M. & G. 740; Brampton v. Beddoes, 13 C. B., N. S., 538.

(u) Judgm., Hitchcock v. Coker, 6 Ad. & E. 454; acc. Pemberton v. Vaughan, 10 Q. B. 87; Horner v. Graves, 7 Bing. 735, 743.

(x) As to the mode of raising on the record the question as to the reasonableness of a restraint of trade, see Tallis v. Tallis, 1 E. & B. 413-4.

(y) 7 Bing. 735, 744, citing Davis v. Mason, 5 T. R. 118, and Bunn v. Guy, 4 East, 190.

(z) 11 M. & W. 667; and as to the construction of the agreement in this case, see S. C., 13 M. & W. 511.

lay down such a limit as under any circumstances would be sufficient protection to the interest of the contracting party, and, if the limit stipulated for does not exceed that, to pronounce the contract to be valid." In Price v. Green (a), a covenant not to carry on a certain trade "within the cities of London or Westminster, or within the distance of 600 miles from the same respectively," was held to be divisible—good, so far as it related to London and Westminster; but void as to the other part. And, in Tallis v. Tallis (b), a covenant was held good, by which the defendant restricted himself from carrying on the business of a canvassing publisher in London and within 150 miles of the General Post Office, or in Liverpool or Manchester, or within a like distance of either of those towns; such restriction, regard being had to the nature of the plaintiff's business, not appearing to the Court to be unreasonable.

In accordance with the policy of our law, which is opposed to any undue restraint of trade, a bond was in Hilton v. Eckersley (c) held void, by which the obligors, who were mill-owners in a manufacturing town, agreed to carry on their trade conformably to the will of the majority; the bond being designed to counteract a combination amongst the operatives, though not supported by any good consideration. Primâ facie, remarked the Court of Exchequer Chamber in this case, it is the privilege of a trader in a free country, in all matters not contrary to law, to regulate his own mode of carrying on trade, according to his own discretion and choice. If the law has in any matter regulated or restrained his mode of doing this, the law must be obeyed;

(a) 16 M. & W. 346; S. C., 13 M. & W. 695; acc. Nicholls v. Stretton, 10 Q. B. 346; S. C., 7 Beav. 42.

(b) 1 E. & B. 391. An agreement by a party not to be "concerned in any trading establishment" within a considerable portion of a county, was upheld in Avery v. Langford, 1 Kay, 663; in the note to which case (Id. 667-8) a useful abstract is given of the recent decisions of the Courts of law and equity with reference to contracts in restraint of trade.

(c) 6 E. & B. 47.

but no power short of the general law ought to restrain his free discretion.

Immoral
contracts.

A few instances will suffice to show, that a contract of immoral tendency cannot, as between the parties thereto, be made the foundation of an action (d):—an agreement with a view to future illicit cohabitation is void (e); the rent of lodgings let to an immodest woman, to enable her to consort therein with the other sex cannot be recovered (f); a print-seller cannot recover the price of libellous or indecent prints delivered to the defendant (g).

It is clear, that past cohabitation or previous seduction would not be a good consideration for a parol promise, neither would it be an illegal consideration,—it would be no consideration at all. Inasmuch, however, as an instrument under seal does not require a consideration to support it, a bond given for the maintenance of a woman, founded on past cohabitation would be good; but it by no means thence follows, that a covenant to pay a sum of money tainted with illegality can be enforced (h). And if an agreement had been made to pay a sum of money in consideration of future cohabitation, and after cohabitation the money had remained unpaid, a bond given to secure that money could not under the circumstances be enforced (i).

To sum up briefly what has here been said as to the effect of fraud and illegality upon a contract, whatever be its nature or subject-matter, the strictest good faith ought, both (d) See Moore v. Woolsey, 4 E. & B. 243, and cases infra.

(e) Walker v. Perkins, 3 Burr. 1568.

(f) Girardy v. Richardson, 1 Esp. 13; Appleton v. Campbell, 2 Car. & P. 347. See Jennings v. Throgmorton, R. & M. 251; Bowry v. Bennet, 1 Camp. 348; Lloyd v. Johnson, 1 B. &

P. 340; Feret v. Hill, 15 C. B. 207; Hamilton v. Grainger, 5 H. & N. 40.

(g) Fores v. Johns, 4 Esp. 97. See Stockdale v. Onwhyn, 5 B. & C. 178.

(h) Judgm., Fisher v. Bridges, 3 E. & B. 650; ante, p. 287.

(i) Judgm., Fisher v. Bridges, supra.

in its inception and performance, to be observed by the contracting parties. A want of bona fides may be evinced as well by the wilful suppression of facts as by their misstatement: qui tacet consentire videtur is a rule well recognised in law, and of no infrequent applicability. There may be a fraudulent representation sufficient to avoid a contract or to be the ground of an action, without actual active declaration by the party contracting (k).

But, although good faith in its broad and comprehensive sense is thus required, and although a man will not be permitted to benefit by his own fraud or to take advantage of his own wrong (l), our law nevertheless expects that due care and a reasonable degree of caution should be exercised by either party to a contract. Sometimes, therefore, it will say to the disappointed suitor—vigilantibus non dormientibus jura subveniunt; and at other times, where evidence presents itself of a gross amount of negligence and want of caution, it will remind a purchaser, however innocent, that qui vult decipi decipiatur. Lastly, where an individual, seeking repayment of money improperly obtained from him, is shown to be contaminated with fraud, or to have participated in a transaction objectionable on moral grounds, or opposed to the word, intent, or policy of the law, it will altogether refuse to interfere, answering his application in the words of C. J. Wilmot (m), that “no polluted hand shall touch the pure fountains of justice.”

And yet, whether lending or withholding its aid when supplicated for breach of contract, our law (which has been not inaptly designated as norma recti (n), jubens honesta et (k) Per Coltman, J., Pilmore v. Hood, 5 Bing. N. C. 109. See Keates v. Earl of Cadogan, 10 C. B. 591 (which explains Hill v. Gray, 1 Stark. N. P. C. 434), and cases there cited ante, p. 337, n. (p).

(l) Leg. Max., 4th ed., 275.

(m) Ante, p. 233.

(n) 3 Bulstr. 313.

prohibens contraria (o) in no case acts contrary to the spirit of the rule laid down by the Prætor, but says with him —Pacta conventa, quæ neque dolo malo neque adversus leges facta erunt, servabo (p).

(o) 2 Inst. 587.

(p) D. 2. 14. 7, § 7.

CHAPTER II.

THE STATUTE OF FRAUDS, ETC.

IN the preceding pages the nature of a simple contract has been to some extent examined, and certain general rules applicable thereto have been laid down. No attempt, however, has yet been made fully to compare a simple with a special contract in respect of those characteristics appertaining to the latter which have been specified at p. 270. That a 'consideration' is requisite to support a contract not under seal has indeed been shown, and from the explanation offered touching the doctrine of 'merger,' it will probably have been surmised that that particular doctrine, at all events, does not and cannot in strictness apply where the solemnity of a seal is wanting. Before, however, proceeding further with the comparison suggested, it becomes essential to indicate in what respects a simple contract evidenced by writing differs from an oral agreement, and to exhibit some of the more important statutory regulations bearing upon this subject. In the present chapter I purpose, then, to commence with a brief view of the wording and practical operation of certain sections of the Statute of Frauds, and to conclude with some few additional remarks as to simple contracts generally.

"All contracts are by the laws of England distinguished into agreements by specialty and agreements by parol; nor is there any such third class as contracts in writing; if they are merely written and not specialties they are parol:" such are the words of Skynner, C. B., as reported in Rann v.

Parol contract—
what.

Hughes (a). But, although this is so, our common law, which requires, as a general rule, that the best evidence of every transaction which the nature of the case admits of shall be given, ascribes a certain degree of weight and importance to a written, which it denies to an oral or merely verbal contract; that is to say, our law considers that, where an agreement between two parties has been reduced into writing, that writing itself offers the best evidence which can be given for determining what the intentions of the parties really were (b), and what their reciprocal obligations are.

Hence, if there be a written contract between A. and B., which is duly signed by them, and is meant to constitute per se a complete and entire agreement (c), evidence is (unless fraud be in issue (d)) inadmissible to show what passed by word of mouth between the parties, either before the written instrument was made, or during the time that it was in a state of preparation and adjustment, so as to vary its effect (e). When, however, an agreement has actually been

(a) 7 T. R. 350 (a).

(b) "It is contrary to the rules of law to admit extrinsic evidence to show that the intention of a party executing a written instrument is different from that apparent on the face of the instrument itself:" per Abbott, C. J., Woodbridge v. Spooner, 3 B. & Ald. 233. See also Martin v. Pycroft, 2 De G., M. & G. 785.

(c) See Harris v. Rickett, 4 H. & N. 1; Pym v. Campbell, 6 E. & B. 370, 374 (where Erle, J., says, "The distinction in point of law is, that evidence to vary the terms of an agreement in writing is not admissible, but evidence to show that there is not an agreement at all is admissible"); Rogers v. Hadley, 2 H. & C. 227, 249; Wallis v. Little, 11 C. B., N. S., 369, 375; judgm., Barker v. Allan, 5 H. & N. 72, citing Ridgway v. Wharton, 6 H. L. Ca. 238.

An invoice is only evidence of a contract—not a contract per se: Holding v. Elliott, 5 H. & N. 117.

(d) Holton v. Browne, 9 C. B., N. S., 442.

(e) Goss v. Lord Nugent, 5 B. & Ad. 64-5; per Martin, B., Langton v. Higgins, 4 H. & N. 408; 2 Phil. Ev., 10th ed., 363-4. "There is an ambiguity in the term 'parol evidence,' or rather there are two sorts of parol evidence, as to the admissibility of which discussion has arisen in many of the cases: the first is oral evidence as to the state of facts existing at the time the written agreement is made: the second is parol evidence of what is reduced into writing, it is at common law competent to the parties at any time before breach of it by a new contract not in writing, either altogether to waive, dissolve, or annul the former agreement, or in any manner to add to, or, as it seems, to vary or qualify the terms of it, and thus to make a new contract, which is to be proved partly by the written agreement and partly by the subsequent verbal terms engrafted upon what may be thus left of the written agreement (f).

What has been above said admits, in part, of illustration by reference to one of the most important instruments known to the law merchant. Thus, it is not competent to the acceptor of a bill of exchange to set up an oral contract entered into before his acceptance of the bill, and which is inconsistent with the contract appearing ex facie upon it (g). Neither can a like contemporaneous agreement, incompatible with that evidenced by the bill, be set up to vary or restrain it: ex. gr., evidence cannot be received of an oral agreement, that a bill drawn payable at three months shall not be payable till the expiration of four months from its date (h). "It would," says Lord Abinger, C. B., in Adams v. Wordley (i), "be very dangerous to allow a party to alter in such a manner the absolute contract on the face of a bill of exchange; the effect of the cases is, that you are estopped from saying that you made any other contract than the absolute one on the face of the bill (k). A contract, said on the occasion:" per Byles, J., Mumford v. Gething, 29 L. J., C. P., 107; S. C., 7 C. B., N. S., 305.

(f) Goss v. Lord Nugent, supra; Douglas v. Watson, 17 C. B. 685. See Giles v. Spencer, 3 C. B., N. S., 244.

(g) Besant v. Cross, 10 C. B. 895.

(h) Judgm., Manley v. Boycot, 2 E. & B. 56. See Salmon v. Webb, 3 H. L. Ca. 510. But evidence may be given by parol of an agreement at the time a bill is drawn and indorsed which is consistent with the written instrument, as, for example, that a bill is indorsed and handed over for a particular purpose, without giving the bailee the usual rights of indorsee of the bill: Manley v. Boycot, supra.

(i) 1 M. & W. 374, 380.

(k) See also per Willes, J., Strong v. Foster, 17 C. B. 222; Taylor v. Burgess, 5 H. & N. 1; Pooley v. Har- which seeks by subsequent oral matter to discharge altogether the contract created by the bill and create a new one, is wholly different, and may no doubt be given in evidence : it is consistent with the bill, but this is inconsistent with it."

The following case also illustrates the doctrine of our law just mentioned : Money was advanced upon the security of a joint and several promissory note by a loan society, and at the time of effecting the loan and making the note, a printed book of the society's rules was given to the defendant, who was one of the makers of the note. Now, the rules contained in this book would, if admissible in evidence, have varied the engagement which the defendant entered into as maker of the note. Nothing, however, appeared in writing to connect the rules in question with the note, and the Court held, that the express contract and engagement on the face of the note could not be varied save by a contemporaneous written agreement (l), the reception of which in evidence might have been altogether unobjectionable (m).

The strictness of the above rule, which excludes parol evidence at variance with the written contract may, however, be qualified on equitable grounds, e.g. on the ground of mistake in framing the contract (n).

In Eden v. Blake (o) the action was brought by an auctioneer to recover the price of a dressing-case sold by him to the defendant at a public auction. The dressing-case in question had, in the printed catalogue of articles intended for sale, been described as having silver fittings ; whereas, in point of fact, radine, 7 E. & B. 431 : Greenough v. McClelland, 2 E. & E. 424, 429.

(l) Brown v. Langley, 4 M. & Gr. 466. See Halhead v. Young, 6 E. & B. 312.

(m) See Fishmongers' Co. v. Dimsdale, 6 C. B. 896.

(n) Wake v. Harrop, 1 H. & C.

202 ; S. C., 6 H. & N. 768 ; Lawrence v. Walsley, 12 C. B., N. S., 799. See Borrowman v. Rossel, 33 L. J., C. P., 111.

(o) 13 M. & W. 614, with which compare Shelton v. Livius, 2 C. & J. 411.

the fittings were plated only. In support, however, of the action, it was proposed to prove, that prior to the dressing-case being put up for sale, the auctioneer stated publicly, in the hearing of the defendant, that the catalogue was incorrect in describing the fittings as silver, and that the dressing-case would be sold as having plated fittings. The reception of this evidence was objected to, on the ground that it tended to vary the printed particulars of sale ; the evidence tendered was, nevertheless, admitted, and, as the Court in banc held, rightly so, there having been no written contract between the parties. In this case the Statute of Frauds had no application, inasmuch as the price of the article sold was less than 10*l.*; the decision arrived at consequently illustrates the general rule (p) of evidence already stated. It has recently been held that in an action for a breach of warranty on the sale of goods under a written contract oral evidence is not admissible to show that the vendor's agent at the time of the sale represented the goods to be of a particular quality (q).

Thus much, then, as to the superior efficacy which our common law attributes to a written over a merely verbal contract. It is in the next place to be remarked, that under the provisions of various statutes, particular kinds of contracts are expressly required to be in writing ; and, where any such statute applies, it is quite clear that the whole of the contract which falls within its operation must be in writing, so that a written agreement or engagement between parties made conformably to its terms could not subsequently be varied by word of mouth (r). Foremost in point of practical importance amongst such enactments stands the Statute of Frauds (29 Car. 2, c. 3) (s).

(p) As to this rule, see further, post, Chap. 4.

(q) Harnor v. Groves, 15 C. B. 667.

(r) Various cases, hereafter cited, will be found to establish the truth of this proposition in regard to the Statute of Frauds.

(s) With reference to statutes such as above alluded to, the following remarks of Maule, J., in Morton v. Copeland, 16 C. B. 535, deserve attention :—The learned judge observes that

The Statute of Frauds was passed, as the preamble states, "for prevention of many fraudulent practices which are commonly endeavoured to be upheld, by perjury and subornation of perjury." It has a most important bearing, by virtue of several of its provisions, upon the law merchant; and with reference more particularly to that branch of law attention will now be directed to it. The statute requires that certain contracts and agreements therein specified shall be in writing, or, at all events, shall be evidenced by some note or memorandum thereof in writing. It further indicates disabilities, which, in default of compliance with its requirements in this respect, will or may be entailed upon parties. In order to determine the precise nature of the disabilities, which, under given circumstances, may thus be incurred, close attention must be paid to the wording of the particular section of the Act bearing upon the transaction in question.

Omitting any allusion to those portions of the Act which relate to parol conveyances of land, leases, and assignments, to nuncupative wills, devises, declarations of trust, and other matters not properly falling within the scope of these Commentaries, I shall proceed to analyse, illustrate, and explain, by decided cases, its 4th and 17th sections; my object a special object may sometimes be aimed at in requiring an instrument to be in writing, "viz., to identify the act as the act of the party, as in the case of a will, and in other instances mentioned in the Statute of Frauds, where the instrument is expressly required to be signed by the party to be charged thereby. In those cases the signature of the party serves to identify the writing as the very writing by which the party is to be bound. In some of the cases provided for by that statute the signature may be either that of the party himself, or that of an 'agent thereunto lawfully authorised by writing,' as in the case of leases (s. 3); or of 'some other person thereunto by him lawfully authorised,' as in the case of agreements (s. 4); or by 'some other person in his presence and by his express directions,' as in the case of a devise of land (s. 5); or 'in his presence and by his direction and consent' (s. 6); or by 'their agents thereunto lawfully authorised,' as in the case of the sale of goods (s. 17). The necessity of signature arises in every case from the express requirement of the statute. Signature does not necessarily mean writing a person's christian and surname, but any mark which identifies it as the act of the party."

being to call attention, albeit briefly, to every point of real practical importance connected with or likely to arise upon them.

The 4th section of the statute enacts "That no action shall be brought." 29 Car 2.
c. 3, s. 4.

— whereby to charge any executor or administrator upon any special promise to answer damages out of his own estate ;

— or, whereby to charge the defendant upon any special promise to answer for the debt, default, or miscarriages of another person ;

— or, to charge any person—upon any agreement made upon consideration of marriage ;

— or, upon any contract or sale of lands, tenements, or hereditaments, or any interest in or concerning them ;

— or, upon any agreement that is not to be performed within the space of one year from the making thereof ; unless the agreement upon which such action shall be brought, or some memorandum or note thereof, shall be in writing and signed by the party to be charged therewith, or some other person thereunto by him lawfully authorised."

Now looking at the above section, it will be found to enumerate five distinct classes of contracts, in regard to each of which it is enacted, that no action shall be brought unless the agreement which is the foundation of such action, or some memorandum or note thereof, shall be in writing and signed by the party to be charged therewith or his duly authorised agent. It becomes, then, very material, in limine, to consider what may be the meaning of the word "agreement" just used. It has been formally decided, that this word "agreement" must be understood in its strict legal sense as including not merely the terms of the contract, but likewise the consideration upon which it is founded. Upon

Meaning of word
"agreement" there used.

this point Wain v. Warlters (f) must still be regarded as the leading authority, although it is no longer necessary, as we shall presently see, that the consideration for which a guarantie was given should be stated therein (u). There Lord Ellenborough, C. J., observes, that "It seems necessary for effectuating the object of the statute, that the consideration should be set down in writing as well as the promise, for otherwise the consideration might be illegal, or the promise might have been made upon a condition precedent, which the party charged may not afterwards be able to prove, the omission of which would materially vary the promise by turning that into an absolute promise which was only a conditional one: and then it would rest altogether on the conscience of the witness to assign another consideration in the one case, or to drop the condition in the other, and thus to introduce the very frauds and perjuries which it was the object of the Act to exclude, by requiring that the agreement should be reduced into writing, by which the consideration as well as the promise would be rendered certain."

The word "agreement," then, occurring in the 4th section of the Statute of Frauds, means an agreement complete as regards its material terms (x), and will be satisfied by a writing which states the names of the parties (y), the subject-matter of the contract, and (except where the instrument is a guarantie) the consideration upon which it is ^f (f) 5 East, 10, cited per Erle, J., E. B. & E. 980; Powers v. Fowler, 4 E. & B. 511, 516.

Numerous cases upon the point in question are collected in note (b) to French v. French, 2 M. & Gr. 649; of which see particularly Jenkins v. Reynolds, 3 B. & B. 14, 20, and Saunders v. Wakefield, 4 B. & Ald. 595, 600. See also Bainbridge v. Wade, 16 Q. B. 99, 100; Caballero v. Slater, 14 C. B.

300.

(u) 19 & 20 Vict. c. 97, s. 3, cited post, p. 384.

(x) See Fitzmaurice v. Bayley, 9 H. L. Ca. 78; S. C., 8 E. & B. 664; 6 Id. 868.

(y) Williams v. Lake, 2 E. & E. 349, approved in Williams v. Byrnes, 1 Moo. P. C. C., N. S., 154, 199. See Leroux v. Brown, 12 C. B. 822, 825, 827.

founded (z). Several documents, moreover, which on the face of them are connected together by reference or otherwise, may be put in evidence as constituting an agreement or a memorandum or note thereof, sufficient within the statute. Upon the point now adverted to, Boydell v. Drummond (a) is a leading authority, and the principle there acted upon has in many other cases been recognised (b).

The written agreement required under the 4th section of the Statute of Frauds need be signed by "the party to be charged therewith" only (c). In Laythoarp v. Bryant (d), the vendor of leasehold premises who had not signed the memorandum of sale was held entitled to sue the purchaser who had signed it, the words of the 4th section of the statute being deemed explicit, and being thought to afford a ready answer to the argument founded on 'want of mutuality' (e). "It is said," observed Tindal, C. J., in the case just mentioned, "that, unless the defendant signs, there is a want of mutuality. Whose fault is that? The defendant might have required the vendor's signature to the contract; but the object of the statute was to secure the defendant's." It is settled that a written proposal, containing the terms of a projected contract, signed by the defendant, and assented to orally by the plaintiff, will satisfy the 4th section of the statute (f).

(z) Per Tindal, C. J., Laythoarp v. Bryant, 2 Bing. N. C. 744; Roberts v. Tucker, 3 Exch. 632; Sweet v. Lee, 3 M. & Gr. 452.

(a) 11 East, 142.

(b) Per Williams, J., Peek v. North Staffordshire R. Co., E. B. & E. 958, 1000; S. C., 32 L. J., Q. B., 241; Ridgway v. Wharton, 6 H. L. Ca. 238; Saunderson v. Jackson, 2 B. & P. 238, and cases cited Id. (a); Dobell v. Hutchinson, 3 Ad. & E. 355, 371; Jackson v. Lowe, 1 Bing. 9; Phillimore v. Barry, 1 Camp. 513; Ham- mersley v. Baron de Biel, 12 Cl. & F. 45; Coldham v. Showler, 3 C. B. 312; Johnson v. Dodgson, 2 M. & W. 653; Allen v. Bennet, 3 Taunt. 175.

(c) As to signing by an agent, see the remarks in connection with s. 17, post.

(d) 2 Bing. N. C. 735; Liverpool Borough Bunk v. Eccles, 4 H. & N. 139, recognising Laythoarp v. Bryant, supra.

(e) Ante, p. 305.

(f) Smith v. Neale, 2 C. B., N. S.,

Let us now consider for a moment what consequences will result from a non-compliance with the requirements contained in the concluding portion of the 4th section of the Act. To satisfy ourselves with regard to these consequences, we must look at the introductory part of the same section, which says, that "no action shall be brought" in any of the various cases subsequently specified, unless the directions of the legislature have been complied with; but it does not say that, in the event of non-compliance therewith, the contract itself shall be void; and the distinction here suggested may sometimes be material (g).

Bearing in mind the preceding observations, let us make some inquiry respecting each of the five specific clauses into which the 4th section of the Statute of Frauds is divisible; and, first, as to "any special promise" by an executor or administrator "to answer damages out of his own estate." In order that an action may be maintainable against the personal representative upon such a promise, a writing signed by him or his agent must be produced in evidence, containing the promise, and disclosing—not necessarily in express terms, but at all events by its tenor—the consideration upon which the promise is founded (h). A proposal made and accepted in writing, which was not intended to operate as an unqualified promise, but to form a part only of a suggested arrangement which was not, in its entirety, acquiesced in by the other party, will not Promise by executor, &c., to answer damages personally.

67, recognised in Liverpool Borough Bank v. Eccles, 4 H. & N. 139; and in North Staffordshire R. C. v. Peek, E. B. & E. 994; S. C., 32 L. J., Q. B., 241; Watts v. Ainsworth, 1 H. & C. 83.

(g) Leroux v. Brown, 12 C. B. 801, cited ante, p. 46. As to the effect of that part of the 4th section of the Statute of Frauds considered in the text, see Griffith v. Young, 12 East, 513; per Tindal, C. J., Sweet v. Lee, 4 Scott, N. R., 90.

(h) Rann v. Hughes, 7 T. R. 350, n.; S. C., 4 Bro. P. C. 27; 2 Wms. Ex., 5th ed., p. 1610.

"The common law requires that there should be a sufficient consideration to support the promise; and the statute adds a still further requisite, namely, that the promise should be in writing:" 1 Wms. Saund. 211 (2).

satisfy the statute (i). Where the plaintiff declared in assumpsit that the defendant's testator was indebted to a third party, who after the testator's death assigned the debt to the plaintiff, and appointed him to receive it to his own use; and that the defendant in consideration that the plaintiff would accept the defendant as his debtor, promised to pay it to the plaintiff; the consideration alleged was held to be insufficient to support the promise, so as to charge the defendant personally (k). If, however, in this case the promise had been in consideration of forbearance by the assignee of the debt to sue the executor, that would have been a valid consideration in law (l).

The second clause of the 4th section of the Statute of Frauds concerns "any special promise to answer for the debt, default, or miscarriages of another person." Upon which it is enacted, that "no action shall be brought" unless the agreement containing such promise be "in writing, signed by the party to be charged therewith, or some other person thereunto by him lawfully authorised."

Promise to answer for debt, &c., of another.

A guarantie is, in fact, a promise to answer for the payment of some debt, or the performance of some duty, in the event of the failure of another person, who is in the first instance liable for such payment or performance (m), and consequently must, in order that an action may lie upon it, be in writing (n).

Of guaranties.

As to the form of this instrument, it will suffice to observe, 1st. That the intention of the guarantor with regard to the period during which the guarantie is to be in force should be clearly expressed, otherwise embarrassing questions of con-

(i) Hamilton v. Terry, 11 C. B. 954.

(k) Forth v. Stanton, 1 Saund. 210. See Nelson v. Serle, 4 M. & W. 795.

(l) 1 Wms. Saund., 6th ed., 209 a (1).

(m) See Fell on Guar., 2nd ed., p. 1.

(n) See Fish v. Hutchinson, 2 Wils. 94; Chater v. Beckett, 7 T. R. 201.

struction may arise. The guarantor should say whether he means to be liable for future advances only, or for past as well as future advances (o) ; 2ndly. Inasmuch as the 4th section of the Statute of Frauds does not require the contract itself to be in writing but a memorandum of it, and as a memorandum, properly signed, of a by-gone contract is sufficient to satisfy the Act, if words be introduced into a paper signed by "the party to be charged;" or if an alteration be made in it; the addition or alteration thus made may be considered as authenticated by the signature already on the instrument, provided it be plain that it was meant to be so authenticated (p).

The special promise above mentioned must, according to the rule stated in the preceding chapter, be founded on a good consideration, though by the 19 & 20 Vict. c. 97, s. 3, it shall not "be deemed invalid to support an action, suit, or other proceeding, to charge the person by whom such promise shall have been made, by reason only that the consideration for such promise does not appear in writing, or, by necessary inference, from a written document."

The meaning of the word "agreement," ascertained by the series of decisions noticed at page 380, has, so far as regards the particular clause of the 4th section of the Statute of Frauds now under notice, been thus materially modified, and the Courts will henceforth be relieved from discussing the question, often found most embarrassing (q),—Does the consideration sufficiently appear upon the face of the guarantee?

But, although the recent statute abrogates the rule laid down in Wain v. Warlters (r), and enables a plaintiff to give

(o) See Broom v. Batchelor, 1 H. & N. 255; Horlor v. Carpenter, 3 C. B., N. S., 172.

(p) Bluck v. Gompertz, 7 Exch. 862.

(q) See, for instance, Oldershaw v.

King, 2 H. & N. 517, 390; cite Bramwell, B., Hoad v. Grace, 7 N. 497.

(r) Ante, p. 380.

parol evidence of the consideration for a guarantie, it must be borne in mind that "a consideration expressed in writing formerly discharged two offices: it sustained the promise and might also explain it. Now, however, parol evidence, though it may supply the consideration, cannot go further and explain the promise" (s).

Let us in the next place briefly consider what cases are within, and what are excluded from, the operation of that particular clause of the Statute of Frauds, the effect whereof we have been discussing. The clause in question applies where the object of the party seeking to avail himself of the guarantie is to charge the defendant upon his promise "to answer for the debt, default, or miscarriages of another." It has, therefore, no application where the evidence adduced discloses a direct liability attaching to the guarantor (t), or an absolute transfer of liability to him from the original debtor. Where the individual whose debt is said to have been guarantied ceases altogether, upon the so-called guarantie being given, to be liable, there the transaction in question is not one which requires to be evidenced by writing within the Statute of Frauds. In Birkmyr v. Darnell (u), the distinction between a direct and a collateral liability is thus illustrated by the Court: "If," they say, "two come to a shop, and one buys, and the other, to gain him credit, promises the seller, 'If he does not pay you I will,' this is a collateral undertaking, and void without writing by the (s) Judgm., Holmes v. Mitchell, 7 C. B., N. S., 370, adopted per Williams, J., Peck v. North Staffordshire R. Co., 29 L. J., Q. B., 103; S. C., E. B. & — 223; 32 L. J., Q. B., 241.

Forth v. Stanton, 1 Wms. Saund. 1; Fitzgerald v. Dressler, 7 C. S., 374; Reader v. Kingham, B., N. S., 344; Macrory v. Scott, 5 Exch. 907, citing Castling v. Aubert, 2 East, 325; Liverpool Borough Bank v. Logan, 5 H. & N. 464.

(u) Salk. 27; Tomlinson v. Gell, 6 Ad. & E. 564; Butcher v. Stewart, 11 M. & W. 857; Goodman v. Chase, 1 B. & Ald. 297; Bird v. Gammon, 3 Bing. N. C. 889; Browning v. Stal-lard, 5 Taunt. 450; Andrews v. Smith, 2 Cr. M. & R. 627; Dixon v. Halfeld, 2 Bing. 439; Lane v. Burghart, 1 Q. B. 933.

Statute of Frauds. But if, he says, 'Let him have the goods, I will see you paid,' this is an undertaking as for himself, and he shall be intended to be the very buyer, and the other to act but as his servant." It should be observed, that the cases here put by the Court are meant as examples merely, and by way of showing that the surrounding circumstances must be looked at, with a view to determining whether a particular transaction does or does not amount to a guarantie within the Statute of Frauds. The question will in truth be one of fact, as may be seen by comparing the case of Matson v. Wharam (x) with that of Birkmyr v. Darnell just cited.

The subject before us is explained in the notes to Wms. Saund (y), where it is said that the subject of inquiry at Nisi Prius very often is—to whom was credit given? and such nice distinctions have been taken on the wording of the promise as to make it impossible to lay down any precise rule of construction with reference to it; but the jury must determine to whom the credit was given. If it appears that the credit was given to the defendant—that is, if the goods, &c., were really sold to him, the statute then cannot apply. But if it appears that the person for whose use the goods were furnished is liable, and a sufficient promise in writing by the defendant to pay the debt is produced, the plaintiff will then be entitled to recover, if he declare specially upon the promise in question as collateral (z). "If," observes Pollock, C. B., in a recent case (z), "a man says to another, 'If you will at my request put your name to a bill of exchange, I will save you harmless,' that is not within the statute. It is not a responsibility for the debt of another. It amounts to a contract by one that if the other will put (x) 2 T. R. 80.

(y) 1 Wms. Saund., 6th ed., 211
b, c. See Walker v. Hill, 5 H. & N.
419.

(z) Batson v. King, 4 H. & N. 739,
740, commenting on Green v. Cresswell,
10 Ad. & E. 453, 459.

himself in a certain situation, the first will indemnify him against the consequences."

Such being the general mode of determining whether a case is or is not within the statute, it may be well to specify the following states of facts, in which it has been held or intimated by the Court that the statute would not apply:—

1. If A. agree to accept C., a debtor of B., as his debtor in lieu of B., such an arrangement clearly involves a transfer of liability from B. to C., and is very different from a guarantie by C. as surety of B.'s debt to A. (a): here consequently the statute does not apply.

2. The statute applies only to promises made to the person to whom another is already or is to become answerable. It must be a promise to be answerable for a debt of or a default in some duty by that other person towards the promisee (b).

3. If A. undertake to B. that C. shall do a particular thing, no privity existing between B. and C., the liability assumed by A. will be direct, and not collateral (c).

4. Where, in consideration of a del credere commission, A. undertakes to be responsible to B. for due payment of the purchase money of goods to be sold through the agency of A., this undertaking does not fall within the statute, and need not be in writing (d); for, though the engagement thus entered into by A. may terminate in a liability to pay the debt of another, that is not the immediate object for which the consideration is given (e).

The clause before us applies, however, to promises to

(a) Judgm., Gull v. Lindsay, 4 Exch. 52.

(b) Hargreaves v. Parsons, 13 M. & W. 561, 570; Reader v. Kingham, 13 C. B., N. S., 344, 353, 356; Cripps v. Hartnoll, 32 L. J., Q. B., 381, reversing S. C., 2 B. & S. 697.

(c) Hargreaves v. Parsons, supra.

(d) Couturier v. Hastie, 8 Exch. 40; the judgment in which case was reversed in error on a point other than that mentioned in the text: see Hastie v. Couturier, 9 Exch. 102; S. C., 5 H. L. Ca. 673. See Re Willis, 4 Exch. 530.

(e) Judgm., 8 Exch. 55, 56.

answer for the tortious default or miscarriage of another as well as for his breach of contract ; and accordingly, where A. had, without leave, ridden the plaintiff's horse and caused his death, a promise by the defendant to pay the plaintiff the damage which he had sustained, in consideration of the plaintiff forbearing to sue A., was held to be void because not in writing (f).

The policy of the particular clause of the Statute of Frauds under consideration, obviously was to prevent that fraud and perjury which had been found by experience or was thought likely to arise from trusting to evidence of less authority than that of a written document, for fixing upon a defendant the responsibility for the debt, default, or miscarriage for which another person was primarily liable (g). The clause in question seems to have successfully accomplished its object until a mode was discovered of evading it by shaping the demand, not upon a special promise of the defendant, which is within the letter of the statute, but, upon a tort or wrong done to the plaintiff by some false or fraudulent representation of the defendant, made in order to induce him (the plaintiff) to contract with some third party ; evidence of such representation when oral only, and insufficient therefore by reason of the statute to support an action ex contractu, being relied upon to sustain an action on the case (h).

It was to remedy the inconvenience resulting from the frequency of actions framed in the manner just described, of which Pasley v. Freeman (i) offers the first reported example, that Lord Tenterden introduced into the stat. 9 Geo. 4, c. 14, its 6th section, (k) which enacts, that "no action

Stat. 9 Geo.
4, c. 14, s. 6.

(f) 1 Wms. Saund., 6th ed., 211 c
(1), citing Kirkham v. Marter, 2 B. &
Ald. 613.

(g) Per Lord Abinger, C. B., 1 M.
& W. 117.

(h) See, per Parke, B., 1 M. & W.
114 ; 1 Smith L. C., 5th ed., 166.

(i) 3 T. R. 51.

(k) As to which see per Pollock, C.
B., 18 C. B. 381.

shall be brought whereby to charge any person upon or by reason of any representation or assurance made or given concerning or relating to the character, conduct, credit, ability, trade, or dealings of any other person, to the intent or purpose that such other person may obtain credit, money, or goods upon (l), unless such representation or assurance be made in writing, signed by the party to be charged therewith."

The general scope of the foregoing section, and especially the precise meaning which should be assigned to the word "ability" therein used, were much discussed in the case of Lyde v. Barnard (m), to which, as the point there raised was not finally determined, owing to a difference of opinion amongst the members of the Court, and yet remains unsettled, a bare reference will here suffice (n). The requirements of this section will be satisfied if a false representation in writing be made which substantially contributed to the damage complained of, although an oral representation by the defendant may in part have contributed to it (o). Assuming, however, that an agreement really falls within that part of the 4th section of the Statute of Frauds latterly considered, or within the 6th section of Lord Tenterden's Act, and must therefore be in writing, one thing is quite clear, viz., that when so written it cannot afterwards be varied or altered orally, for otherwise the intentions of the legislature might manifestly be thwarted. This is a principle to which I have already had occasion to refer, and which is recognised in equity as well as at law, as will be seen by looking at the judgment in Emmet v. Dewhurst (p), where several authorities bearing upon the subject before us are collected.

(l) As to the error here apparent in the wording of the Act, see 1 M. & W. 104, 110, 115, 123.

(m) 1 M. & W. 101.

(n) The statute was held to apply in Swann v. Phillips, 8 Ad. & E. 457;

Haslock v. Fergusson, 7 Ad. & E. 86;

Devaux v. Steinkeller, 6 Bing. N. C.

84. See Turnley v. Macgregor, 6 M. & Gr. 46.

(o) Tatton v. Wade, 18 C. B. 371.

(p) 3 Mac. & G. 587, 595.

Agreement made upon consideration of marriage.

The third clause of the 4th section of the Statute of Frauds has reference to "any agreement made upon consideration of marriage." It may be dismissed with the remark, that these words do not apply to a promise to marry (q), but merely to contracts for the performance of collateral acts in consideration of marriage (r).

Contract
concerning land, &c.

Passing on then to the next clause, which concerns actions brought to charge any person "upon any contract or (s) sale of lands, tenements, or hereditaments, or any interest in or concerning them." It has been observed, that the words "lands, tenements, or hereditaments" here used, seem to have been intended by the legislature as equivalent to "fee simple;" and the words "any interest in or concerning them" seem to have been used to denote a chattel interest, or some interest less than the fee simple (t). In regard to the true meaning of these latter words doubt has not unfrequently been felt. What is an interest in or concerning land? What is "a contract of an interest in lands" (u)? To these questions conflicting answers have, under special circumstances, been given; but, nevertheless, the principles which are to guide us in replying to them are now very definitely ascertained. Little hesitation need be felt in affirming that an agreement to convey an equity of redemption (x); a contract under which the plaintiff, in consideration of a sum of money, agrees to surrender his tenancy, and to procure the defendant to be accepted in his place (y); a (q) Cork v. Baker, 1 Str. 34; Harrison v. Cage, 1 Ld. Raym. 386, ad fin.; Bull. N. P., 7th ed., 280, c. See Jorden v. Money, 5 H. L. Ca. 185.

(r) See Montacute v. Maxwell, 1 P. Wms. 618; S. C., Prec. Chanc. 526; Hammersley v. De Biel, 12 Cl. & F. 45, cited Lassence v. Tierney, 1 Mac. & G. 571, 572.

(s) The word "of" was here probably intended.

(t) Per Littledale, J., Evans v. Ro- berts, 5 B. & C. 839, and in Smith v. Surman, 9 B. & C. 573.

(u) See per Bayley, B., 1 C. & J. 397.

(x) Massey v. Johnson, 1 Exch. 241.

(y) Cocking v. Ward, 1 C. B. 858, followed in Kelly v. Webster, 12 C. B. 283, and in Smart v. Harding, 15 C. B. 652. See Lavery v. Turley, 6 H. & N. 239; Laycock v. Pickles, 33 L. J., Q. B., 43.

contract to let furnished lodgings (z), provided that the executory contract if executed would have conferred such an interest or property in land as to give a right to maintain a possessory action (a); or, an agreement for a future lease of land (b); or, a contract whereby the plaintiff agrees to let a house to the defendant, to sell him certain furniture and fixtures therewith, and to make certain alterations and improvements therein, the defendant on his part agreeing to take the house and to pay for the furniture, fixtures, and alterations—is within the statute (c). So, where A., being possessed of a messuage and premises for the residue of a term of years, agreed with B. to relinquish possession to him, and to suffer him to become tenant of the premises for the residue of the term, in consideration of B.'s paying a sum of money towards the dilapidations, this was held to be within the Act (d). Where, indeed, anything is done which substantially amounts to a parting with an interest in land, or which relates to the sale of such an interest, the agreement is within the statute (e).

(z) Edge v. Stafford, 1 C. & J. 391; Inman v. Stamp, 1 Stark. N. P. C. 12.

(a) Per Blackburn, J., Wright v. Stavert, 29 L. J., Q. B., 161, 164.

(b) Foquet v. Moor, 7 Exch. 870.

(c) Vaughan v. Hancock, 3 C. B. 766; Mechelen v. Wallace, 7 Ad. & E. 49; Earl of Palmouth v. Thomas, 1 C. & M. 89.

(d) Buttemere v. Hayes, 5 M. & W. 456.

(e) Per Maule, J., Kelly v. Webster, 12 C. B. 289, 290.

But if the transfer of an interest in land be effected, and the transferee admits to the transferor that he owes him the stipulated price, the amount in question may be recovered in a count upon an account stated: Cocking v. Ward, 1 C. B. 858; and see Lemere

v. Elliott, 6 H. & N. 656; arg., 12 C. B. 287-9; Teall v. Auty, 4 Moore, 542.

A contract for investigating the title to land has been held not to be within the statute: Jeakes v. White, 6 Exch. 873. Nor is a contract for the sale of shares in a railway company, Bradley v. Holdsworth, 3 M. & W. 422; or in a waterworks company, Bligh v. Brent, 2 Y. & C. 268; or in a mining company conducted on the cost-book principle, Watson v. Spratley, 10 Exch. 222 (as to which see, per Maule, J., Toppin v. Lomas, 16 C. B. 161); Powell v. Jessopp, 18 C. B. 336. See Walker v. Bartlett, Id. 845.

Goss v. Lord Nugent, 5 B. & Ad. 58, which shows that a written contract for the sale of land cannot be varied orally, is cited post.

Where indeed, as recently remarked, "a contract consists of two collateral agreements, one only of which relates to an interest in land, then, if that part of the contract has been executed, the fact of the whole contract not being in writing will not preclude an action on the other part founded on a promise to be performed after such execution (f). But one contract founded upon one consideration cannot be bisected so as to make a new contract and a new consideration out of one half" (g).

Let us now turn for a moment to notice a class of cases differing somewhat from the above, and presenting greater difficulty, viz., those which concern things annexed to land and falling within the operation of a well-established maxim, Quicquid plantatur solo solo cedit (h),—whatever is affixed to the soil becomes presumably (i) in contemplation of law a part of it and subjected to the same incidents as the soil itself. Under this subdivision of my subject, I shall speak, first, of the growing produce of land, such as crops, fruit, and the like; secondly, of fixtures.

Now, it is to be observed that Lord Coke carefully distinguishes between land and the growing produce of the land. Upon the death of tenant for life, he says (k), although the land belongs to the reversioner, the growing crop goes to the executor of the tenant for life as part of his personal estate. So, if a man be seised of land in right of his wife, and sow the ground, and die, his executors shall have the corn; and if his wife die before him, he shall have it; for, although upon the death of the husband or wife the interest of the former in the land ceases, yet the growing corn is considered as part of his personal estate, and belongs to him or his 503.

(f) Green v. Saddington, 7 E. & B. ed., 387.

(g) Per Lord Campbell, C. J., Hodgson v. Johnson, R. B. & E. 689, 690.

(i) See Lancaster v. Eve, 5 C. B., N. S., 717, 727.

(k) Co. Litt. 55. b.

(h) As to which, see Leg. Max., 4th executors. In these cases, Lord Coke considers the growing produce of the land as a personal chattel independent of and distinct from the land itself. And, reasoning by analogy to what is here said, our Courts have held, that a sale of any growing produce of the earth (reared by labour and expense), in actual existence at the time of the contract, whether it be in a state of maturity or not, is to be considered not as a sale of an interest in or concerning land within the meaning of the 4th section of the Statute of Frauds, but rather as a contract for the sale of goods, wares, and merchandises within the 17th section of the Act (l).

A contract, accordingly, for the sale of growing potatoes, which come within the description of emblements, and are deemed chattels by reason of their being raised by labour and manurance, is not required to be in writing (m), whereas growing grass does not come within the description of goods and chattels, it goes to the heir and not to the executor, and cannot be taken under a fi. fa. (n) ; and these latter remarks are also applicable to growing fruit (o) and to growing trees (p), unless, indeed, it clearly appear from the terms or nature of the particular contract, that the parties to it were dealing exclusively with the produce of the trees when they should be cut down and severed from the freehold (q).

Tenants' fixtures attached to (but not parcel of) the (l) Evans v. Roberts, 5 B. & C. 840-1; Judgm., 10 Ad. & E. 758; per Hullock, B., 1 Y. & J. 308; 1 Wms. Saund., 6th ed., 277 c.

(m) Evans v. Roberts, 5 B. & C. 829; Warwick v. Bruce, 2 M. & Gr. 205; Sainsbury v. Matthews, 4 M. & W. 343; Jones v. Flint, 10 Ad. & E. 753; Parker v. Staniland, 11 East, 362.

(n) Crosby v. Wadsworth, 6 East,

602; Carrington v. Roots, 2 M. & W. 248; Jones v. Flint, 10 Ad. & E. 753.

(o) Rodwell v. Phillips, 9 M. & W. 501.

(p) Scorell v. Boxall, 1 Y. & J. 396; Com. Dig. Biens (H); Teall v. Auty, 4 Moore, 542.

(q) Smith v. Surman, 9 B. & C. 561. See Watts v. Friend, 10 B. & C. 446.

freehold (r) bear a very strong resemblance, it has been observed (s), to those growing crops which are not the 'spontaneous produce of the earth, but are raised by the labour and expense of the occupier of the land: even whilst thus attached they may be treated for some purposes as chattels (t); for instance, in most cases they may be seized and sold under a fi. fa. (u), and will go in like manner as crops of corn or other fructus industriales to the executor (x). On the other hand, trover will not lie for tenants' fixtures before severance (y), nor can they be treated as goods sold and delivered in an action for their price (z). They are, indeed, of a somewhat anomalous character, and whether or not they fall within the operation of the Statute of Frauds does not appear on any occasion to have been fully and satisfactorily determined. It is clear, that a contract concerning an interest in land and fixtures must be in writing (a); but, when things annexed to the freehold are sold in contemplation of an immediate severance, and the contract does not transfer any interest whatever in the soil or freehold, ex. gr., between an outgoing tenant at the expiration of his term and the incoming tenant under a new demise, or wherever the subject of the contract is in the view of the parties a mere chattel, as where fixtures have been appraised and valued under an oral agreement for their sale, it may reasonably be contended that the Statute of Frauds does not apply (b).

(r) As to the various meanings of the word "fixtures," see judgment, Wiltshire v. Cottrell, 1 E. & B. 690; Leg. Max., 4th ed., 404.

The test by which to distinguish between tenant's and landlord's fixtures is specified in the judgment Hellawell v. Eastwood, 6 Exch. 312, followed in Waterfall v. Penistone, 6 E. & B. 876, 888, and distinguished in Walmsley v. Milne, 7 C. B., N. S., 115, 130-2.

(s) Per Littledale, J., 5 B. & C. 841.

(t) Judgment, 1 C. M. & R. 275.

(u) Poole's case, 1 Salk. 368. Per Parke, B., Horsfall v. Hey, 2 Exch. 779; Hellawell v. Eastwood, 6 Exch. 295; Amos & F. on Fixt., 2nd ed., pp. 321 et seq.

(x) Amos & F. on Fixt., 2nd ed., p. 180.

(y) Ante, p. 126.

(z) Lee v. Risdon, 7 Taunt. 188.

(a) Kelly v. Webster, 12 C. B. 283.

(b) Amos & F. on Fixt., 2nd ed.,

If, however, an entire agreement be made for the sale of real and personal estate, and the agreement as to the land be within the statute and void, it cannot be supported as to the personal property which was sold with it (c).

The fifth clause of the 4th section of the Statute of Frauds relates to "any agreement that is not to be performed within the space of one year from the making thereof," the meaning of which words is explained in Peter v. Compton (d), where it was held, that if the agreement in question is to be performed upon a contingency, but is not expressly to be performed after the year, there, inasmuch as the contingency might happen within the year, a note in writing is not necessary; but contra where it appears by the whole tenor of the agreement that it is to be performed after the expiration of the year (e).

Agreement not to be performed within a year.

Hence a contract for the maintenance of a child, to enure 'so long as the defendant should think proper,' was held not to be within the statute (f); whilst, on the other hand, a contract for a year's service, to commence at a future day, is within the statute as being an agreement not to be performed (i.e., completely performed) within the year (g); and a contract for service for more than a year subject to determination within the year upon the happening of a given event must be in writing (h). Should it, moreover, appear from the nature of the contract that its performance was not contemplated within the year, the mere circumstance 258; Hallen v. Runder, 1 C. M. & R. 266. See Petrie v. Dawson, 2 Car. & K. 138; Sleddon v. Cruikshank, 16 M. & W. 71.

(c) Sugd. Conc. V. of the Law of V. & P., p. 78, where the cases are cited; Salmon v. Watson, 4 Moore, 78.

(d) Skin. 358; Wells v. Horton, 4 Bing. 40.

(e) Peter v. Compton, supra. Boydell v. Drummond, 11 East, 142, is a leading authority upon the above point. See also M'Kay v. Rutherford, 6 Moo. P. C. C. 413.

(f) Souch v. Strawbridge, 2 C. B. 808. See Crowhurst v. Laverack, 8 Exch. 208.

(g) Bracegirdle v. Heald, 1 B. & Ald. 722; Snelling v. Lord Huntingfield, 1 C. M. & R. 20. See Cawthorne v. Cordrey, 13 C. B., N. S., 406.

(h) Dobson v. Collis, 1 H. & N. 81.

that it is defeasible within the year will not take it out of the operation of the statute, as shown by Birch v. Earl of Liverpool (i) and Roberts v. Tucker (k).

It has, however, been expressly decided that the clause of the Act now under notice applies to such contracts only as are not to be performed on either side within the year (l).

An agreement, consequently, whereby all that is to be done by the plaintiff constituting one entire consideration for the defendant's promise is capable of being performed within a year, and no part of what the plaintiff is to do constituting such consideration is intended to be postponed until after the expiration of the year, is not within the 4th section of the Act, notwithstanding the performance on the part of the defendant is or may be extended beyond that period (m).

It follows from what has been just said, that the case of Peter v. Compton already alluded to, might have been decided upon a ground other than that on which the judgment actually rests, inasmuch as on looking at that case it will be seen that the contract there sued upon had in fact been wholly executed by one of the parties to it.

As before stated, a proposal in writing signed by the person to be bound, and accepted orally by the person to whom it is made, is a sufficient agreement to satisfy the statute (n).

Where an agreement falls within the words which we have been considering, and has been reduced into writing under the Act, it clearly cannot be varied by any subsequent oral contract between the parties. This proposition may be illustrated by the case of Giraud v. Richmond (o), where it was

(i) 9 B. & C. 392.

(k) 3 Exch. 632, 643.

(l) Cherry v. Heming, 4 Exch. 631, affirming Donellan v. Read, 3 B. & Ad. 899; per Tindal, C. J., South v. Straubridge, 2 C. B. 814.

(m) Smith v. Neale, 2 C. B., N. S., 67.

(n) Ante, p. 381.

(o) 2 C. B. 835; Williams v. Jones, 5 B. & C. 108.

held, that an agreement by which the plaintiff entered into the defendant's service at a salary payable yearly (which agreement, from its general scope and nature, clearly fell within the Statute of Frauds) could not be varied by evidence of a subsequent verbal agreement that the salary should be paid quarterly.

All contracts for the sale of goods when "not to be performed within the space of one year from the making thereof," are of course within the operation of that clause of the 4th section of the Statute of Frauds which has been just noticed. Contracts for the sale of goods for the price of 10*l.* or upwards fall within the words of its 17th section, which will be presently discussed. Contracts for the sale of goods at a price less than 10*l.*, to be performed within the year, are regulated by the common law.

The following purely elementary propositions respecting the contract of sale and its effects at common law may conveniently be stated before we examine the wording and operation of the 17th section of the above-mentioned Act.

A contract of sale is a contract for the transfer of property in consideration of money from one man to another (p). It may be intended to take effect in presenti or in futuro: that is to say, it may be intended to pass the property instantly or at some future and perhaps unascertained period.

Contract of sale.

To constitute a sale which shall immediately pass the property, it is necessary that the thing sold should be certain, and that its price should be either ascertained or ascertainable (q).

(p) See 2 Bla. Com. 446.

"A sale imports a quid pro quo in some way or other enuring to the benefit of the party selling:" per Holroyd, J., 4 B. & C. 246.

A "sale for cash" signifies that "the seller shall have a present right to the money, or to an action against the purchaser if the money be not presently paid:" per Wilde, C. J., Nelson v. Patrick, 3 C. B. 775.

(q) Logan v. Le Mesurier, 6 Moo. P. C. C. 132.

"The omission," says Wilde, C. J., in Valpy v. Gibson (r), "of the particular mode or time of payment, or even of the price itself, does not necessarily invalidate a contract of sale. Goods may be sold and frequently are sold when it is the intention of the parties to bind themselves by a contract which does not specify the price or the mode of payment, leaving them to be settled by some future agreement, or to be determined by what is reasonable under the circumstances."

Where a contract is for the sale of unascertained goods, the passing of the property may depend, according to the contract, either on mutual consent of both the contracting parties, or on the act of the vendor communicated to the purchaser, or on the act of the vendor alone (s).

Payment—earnest given—delivery.

If at the time of sale of specific goods the whole or part of the purchase-money is paid to the vendor, or if earnest-money, although it be but a penny, is handed over to him, or if the thing bought, or any portion thereof in the name of the whole, be delivered to the vendee, in any one of these cases the effect of the transaction which has taken place is to alter the property in the goods in question, and to transfer it from the bargainor to the bargainee (t). The former of these parties becoming entitled to sue for the price of the goods if wholly or in part unpaid, the latter, on tendering the residue (if any) of the purchase-money, to recover the goods themselves or the undelivered portion of them by action (u).

As regards the effect of giving something by way of earnest, at common law, reference may be made to Langfort v. Tiler (x), where Lord Holt ruled that earnest only binds the

(r) 4 C. B. 864.

(s) Judgm., Browne v. Hare, 4 H.

& N. 822; S. C., 3 Id. 484.

(t) 1 Shepp. Touch. 224; 2 Bla. Com. 447; Hinde v. Whitehouse, 7

East, 558; Gardner v. Grouet, 2 C. B.,

N. S., 340; Noy Max. 87.

(u) 2 Bla. Com. 448.

(x) 1 Salk. 118, cited Hinde v. Whitehouse, 7 East, 571.

bargain, and gives the party a right to demand the goods on tendering the residue of the purchase-money ; and, further, that after earnest given, the vendor cannot sell the goods to another without a default in the vendee ; and therefore, if the vendee does not come and pay and take the goods, the vendor ought to go and request him, and then, if he still makes default and does not take away the goods in convenient time, the agreement is dissolved, and he is at liberty to sell them to any other person.

Where a vendor and vendee agree as to the sale and purchase of a specific chattel, the moment the agreement is made the property passes (y), and delivery of the chattel will not be necessary in order to vest it in the vendee (z).

Delivery—
whether necessary to pass the property.

The following authorities may be cited in support of the proposition just stated :—" If I sell my horse for money, I may keep him until I am paid, but I cannot have an action of debt until he be delivered ; yet the property of the horse is, by the bargain, in the bargainee or buyer. But if he presently tender me my money and I refuse it, he may take the horse or have an action of detinue " (a).

Again, " if I offer money for a thing in a market or fair, and the seller agree to take my offer, and whilst I am telling the money as fast as I can, he doth sell the thing to another ; or, when I have bought it, we agree that he shall keep it until I can go home to my house to fetch the money ; in both these cases, especially in the first, the bargains are good, so as the seller may not sell them afterwards to another ; and, upon the payment or tender and refusal of the money agreed upon, I may take or recover the things " (b).

So we read in Blackstone's Commentaries (c), " if the vendor says the price of a beast is four pounds, and the (y) Per Erle, J., Aldridge v. Johnson, 7 E. & B. 900.

(z) Per Parke, J., Dixon v. Yates, 5 B. & Ad. 340.

(a) Noy Max. 88.

(b) 1 Shepp. Touch. 225.

(c) Vol. 2, p. 447 ; Noy Max. 87.

vendee says he will give four pounds, the bargain is struck, and they neither of them are at liberty to be off, provided immediate possession be tendered by the other side. But if neither the money be paid nor the goods delivered, nor tender made, nor any subsequent agreement be entered into, it is no contract, and the owner may dispose of the goods as he pleases;" that is to say, the contract, even if at any moment it had been definitely concluded between the parties, must nevertheless be regarded as having been rescinded by mutual consent, so that the property in the subject-matter of the contract will not, under the circumstances here supposed, be altered.

It is clear, then, that by the law of England, which differs in this respect from the Roman law (d), the property in a specific chattel may pass without delivery. It will so pass, where, at the time of the bargain, everything is already done, which according to the intention of the parties was necessary, to transfer the property (e). The reason of this being, that the very appropriation (f) of the chattel is equivalent to delivery by the vendor; and the assent of the vendee to take the specific chattel and to pay the price is equivalent to his accepting possession. The effect of the contract, therefore, is to vest the property in the bargainee (g).

Where goods are sold and nothing is said as to the time of delivery or the time of payment, and everything the seller has to do with them is complete, it is true, as a general proposition, that the property vests in the buyer; the seller being bound to deliver them whenever they are demanded

(d) Traditionibus et usucapionibus dominia rerum, non nudis pactis, transferuntur. Cod. 2. 3. 20.

(e) Wait v. Baker, 2 Exch. 9.

(f) See Langton v. Higgins, 4 H. & N. 402. The different senses in which the word "appropriation" here used may be understood, are specified by Parke, B., in Wait v. Baker, 2 Exch.

8, 9. See Sheridan v. New Quay Co., 4 C. B., N. S., 618.

(g) Per Parke, J., Dixon v. Yates, 5 B. & Ad. 340; per Willes, J., Godts v. Rose, 17 C. B. 238.

Secus, if the vendee does not assent to the appropriation: Campbell v. Mersey Docks, 14 C. B., N. S., 412.

upon payment of the price, the buyer having no right to the possession of the goods till he pays the price: payment or a tender of the price being a condition precedent on the buyer's part, so that, until he makes such payment or tender, he has no right to the possession (h).

When goods are sold upon credit, and nothing is agreed upon as to the time of delivering the goods, the vendee is immediately entitled to the possession, and the right of possession and the right of property vest at once in him (i). "If," says Wilde, C. J., "a vendor agrees to sell for a deferred payment, the property passes, and the vendee is entitled to call for a present delivery, without payment" (k).

"The sale of a specific chattel on credit," says Lord Denman, C. J. (l), "though that credit may be limited to a definite period, transfers the property in the goods to the vendee, giving the vendor a right of action for the price and a lien upon the goods, if they remain in his possession, till that price be paid." And an unpaid vendor would clearly be guilty of a conversion if, without default in the vendee, he resold the chattel (m), for mere non-payment does not rescind the contract: the reason of this being, that, "in a sale of chattels, time is not of the essence of the contract, unless it is made so by express agreement, than which nothing can be more easy, by introducing conditional words into the bargain" (n).

Where goods are delivered "on sale or return," and are not returned within a reasonable time, the sale of the goods becomes absolute (o). And a vendee of goods who has used (h) Judgm., Bloxam v. Sanders, 4 B. & C. 948; Tarling v. Baxter, 6 B. & C. 364, 365; per Bayley, J., Simmons v. Swift, 5 B. & C. 862, and in Miles v. Gorton, 2 C. & M. 511; Milgate v. Keble, 3 M. & Gr. 100.

(i) Judgm., Bloxam v. Sanders, 4 B. & C. 948.

(k) 10 C. B. 212, 216.

(l) Martindale v. Smith, 1 Q. B. 395; Chinery v. Fiall, 5 H. & N. 288, 293.

(m) Chinery v. Fiall, 5 H. & N. 288.

See Johnson v. Stear, 15 C. B., N. S., 330; Pigot v. Cubley, Id. 701.

(n) Martindale v. Smith, supra.

(o) Moss v. Sweet, 16 Q. B. 493.

or sold a portion of them after he has discovered that they are not in accordance with the contract, cannot repudiate the contract and recover back the price of the goods (p), unless the vendor has acquiesced in the vendee's thus dealing with them (q).

Another important proposition relating to the contract of sale is this—that, where under the contract something remains to be done by the vendor (r) of goods, as between himself and the vendee, before they are to be delivered, a complete present right of property in the goods is not in general vested by the contract in the buyer (s). “If the thing sold is not ascertained, and something is to be done before it is ascertained, it does not pass till it is ascertained” (t). “Where there is a sale of goods generally, no property in them passes till delivery, because until then the very goods sold are not ascertained” (u). In like manner, where a bargain is made for a certain quantity out of a greater quantity of goods, and there is a power of selection in the vendor to deliver which particular lot or parcel of goods he thinks fit, the right of property in the subject-matter of the contract does not pass to the vendee until the vendor has made his selection. “If I agree to deliver a certain quantity of oil, as ten out of eighteen tons, no one can say which part of the whole quantity I have agreed to deliver until a selection is made” (x). There is in this case no individuality until the parcel has been divided from the bulk. As soon, however, as the vendor has appropriated a (p) Harnor v. Groves, 15 C. B. 667.

(q) Lucy v. Mouffet, 5 H. & N. 229.

(r) See Judgm., Turley v. Bates, 2 H. & C. 211.

(s) Hanson v. Meyer, 6 East, 614; Wallace v. Breeds, 13 East, 522; Kay v. Minett, 11 East, 210, and cases cited post, p. 408.

(t) Per Erle, J., 7 E. & B. 900, 901.

(u) Per Parke, J., Dixon v. Yates, 5 B. & Ad. 340.

(x) Per Bayley, B., Gillet v. Hill, 2 C. & M. 535; White v. Wilks, 5 Taunt. 176; Busk v. Davis, 2 M. & S. 397. See Cunliffe v. Harrison, 6 Exch. 903; Lery v. Green, 8 E. & B. 575.

specific part of the bulk for the benefit of the vendee, and the latter has assented to such appropriation (y), the property in that specific part passes to the vendee (z). The property in goods, though not specifically appropriated, may, however, pass by estoppel (a), or, where the intention of the parties that it should pass, is clearly indicated (b).

As well in the class of cases just adverted to as in those which raise the question whether or not there has been a delivery of goods actual or constructive, very nice distinctions, which can only be appreciated by a careful comparison of decided cases, have been taken. As illustrating the nature of a 'constructive' delivery, the cases below cited may be consulted (c).

Delivery to the agent of the vendee will in ordinary cases be equivalent to a delivery to the vendee himself. It is, indeed, generally true, as remarked in Bryans v. Nix (d), that, if the intention of the parties to pass the property, whether absolute or special, in ascertained chattels is established, and they are placed in the hands of a depositary on account of the person who is to have that property, and the depositary assents, it is enough, and it matters not by what documents this may be effected. With reference to the legal consequences which may result from a delivery of goods to a common carrier, Lord Cottenham, C., in Dunlop v. Lambert (e), thus observes: "It is no doubt true, as a general

(y) Godts v. Rose, 17 C. B. 229, 238.

(z) Aldridge v. Johnson, 7 E. & B. 897; Rohde v. Thwaites, 6 B. & C. 388; Alexander v. Gardner, 1 Bing. N. C. 671. See Tripp v. Armitage, 4 M. & W. 687, and cases there cited.

(a) See ex. gr., Woodley v. Coventry, 2 H. & C. 164.

(b) Turley v. Bates, 2 H. & C. 200.

(c) Boulter v. Arnott, 1 C. & M. 383; Simmons v. Swift, 5 B. & C. 857; Smith v. Chance, 2 B. & Ald.

753, 755; Wimshurst v. Bowker, 7 M. & Gr. 882; Key v. Cotesworth, 7 Exch. 595.

(d) 4 M. & W. 791. Per Parke, B., Wait v. Baker, 2 Exch. 7.

(e) 6 C. & F. 620. See Coombs v. Bristol and Exeter R. Co., 3 H. & N. 510; Daves v. Peck, 8 T. R. 330; Fragano v. Long, 4 B. & C. 219; Swain v. Shepherd, 1 M. & Rob. 223; Brandt v. Bowlby, 2 B. & Ad. 932; Freeman v. Birch, 1 N. & M. 420.

*rule, that the delivery by the consignor to the carrier is a delivery to the consignee, and that the risk is after such delivery the risk of the consignee (f). This is so, if without designating the particular carrier, the consignee directs that the goods shall be sent by the ordinary conveyance: the delivery to the ordinary carrier is then a delivery to the consignee, and the consignee incurs all the risk of the carriage. And it is still more strongly so if the goods are sent by a carrier specially pointed out by the consignee himself, for such carrier then becomes his special agent." But this rule may, as the Lord Chancellor proceeds to remark in the case just cited, be varied by arrangement between the parties (g) or by their mode of dealing.

Where goods are ordered to be made for and on account of an intended purchaser, whilst the goods are actually in progress, the materials used in their construction belong, under ordinary circumstances, to the maker, and the property in the goods does not vest in the party who gave the order, until they are completed, and have been accepted by the intended purchaser, or appropriated to him with his assent (h). And if an order be given for a chattel to be made subject to the approval of the intended vendee, the latter will be entitled—acting bonâ fide, and not from mere caprice—to reject it if not in conformity with his taste (i).

Bearing upon the subject just adverted to, the following

(f) Browne v. Hare, 3 H. & N. 484. A manufacturer who contracts to deliver a manufactured article at a distant place must stand the risk of any extraordinary or unusual deterioration in it; but the vendee is bound to accept the article if only deteriorated to the extent that it is necessarily subject to in its course of transit from the one place to the other, or, in other words, he is subject to, and must bear the risk of, the deterioration necessarily consequent upon the transmission: Judgm., Ball v. Robinson, 10 Exch. 346.

(g) Et vide per Blackburn, J., Calcutta and Burmah Steam Nav. Co. v. De Matos, 32 L. J., Q. B., 328, citing Dunlop v. Lambert, supra.

(h) Wilkins v. Bromhead, 6 M. & Gr. 963, and cases there cited. See Clay v. Yates, 1 H. & N. 73; Lee v. Griffin, 1 B. & S. 272.

(i) Andrews v. Belfield, 2 C. B., N. S., 779.

remarks occur in a recent case (k):—"Where a man contracts with another to make any article for him for a given price, the general rule is, in the absence of all circumstances from which a contrary conclusion may be inferred, that no property passes in the chattel until it is completed and ready for delivery; on the other hand, where a bargain is made for the purchase of an existing ascertained chattel, the general rule in the same absence of opposing circumstances is, that the property passes immediately to the vendee; that is, that there is at once a complete bargain and sale. But these general rules are both and equally founded on the presumed intention of the parties. If, in the first, there are attendant circumstances from which the intention may be inferred, that the property shall pass in the incomplete and growing chattel as the manufacture of it proceeds, or even in ascertained materials from which it is to be carried to perfection, that intention will be effectuated; and equally in the latter, if it appear that the parties intended to postpone the transfer of the property till the payment of the price, or the performance of any other condition, such intention will be upheld in the Courts of law. This principle we believe to be settled, and whatever apparent difference may be found in the leading decisions on this point, turns rather on the weight given to particular circumstances as evidences of intention, that is to say, in the application of the same principle to the determination of the cases rather than to any dispute about the principle itself."

Again, where a contract of sale has been entered into for an article in an unfinished state, which is to be completed by the vendor, the question,—in whom is the property vested at any given moment? will usually depend upon the construction of the contract. Is an immediate sale of the article contemplated thereby (l)? Is it a contract for an article to (k) Judgm., Wood v. Bell, 5 E. & B. 791-2, and cases there cited; S. C. 692; Wood v. Bell, supra.

 (l) See Reid v. Fairbanks, 13 C. B. 692; Wood v. Bell, supra.
 (in Error), 6 E. & B. 355.

be finished? In this latter case the article must be finished before the property vests. A chattel which is to be delivered in futuro does not usually pass by the contract (m). To the contract of sale, indeed, the maxim Modus et conventio vincunt legem strikingly applies; for, although it is generally true that to constitute a sale which shall immediately pass the property in a chattel, it is necessary that the thing sold should be ascertained, and, further, that its price should be ascertained or ascertainable, yet parties may buy or sell a given thing at a price to be afterwards ascertained, either in a manner indicated by the contract of sale or upon a quantum valeat; they may agree that the sale shall be complete, and that the property in the specific thing shall pass, although the delivery of possession is postponed, and although something may remain to be done by the seller before delivery; or they may agree that nothing remains to be done for ascertaining the thing sold, yet that the sale shall not be complete and the property shall not pass before something is done to ascertain the amount of the price. The question must, therefore, in any case such as is now alluded to, be, what was the intention of the parties in regard to the passing of the property? And their intention is of course to be collected from the terms of the contract. If those terms do not show an intention of passing or transferring the property until something is done by the seller, before delivery of possession, then the sale cannot be deemed perfected, and the property does not pass until that thing is done (n).

²⁹ Car. 2,
c. 3, s. 17.

Let us now turn to the 17th section of the Statute of (m) Per Parke, B., Laidler v. Bur-linson, 2 M. & W. 615; *Clarke v.

Spence*, 4 Ad. & E. 448; *Woods v.
Russell*, 5 B. & Ald. 942; *Mucklow v.
Mangles*, 1 Taunt. 318; *Carruthers
v. Payne*, 5 Bing. 270. See *Goode v.
Langley*, 7 B. & C. 28.

(n) Logan v. Le Mercurier, 6 Moo.
P. C. C. 116, 132; Simmons v. Swift,
5 B. & C. 857; Swanwick v. Sothorn,
9 Ad. & E. 895; *Calcutta and Burmah
Steam Nav. Co. v. De Mattos*, 32 L.
J., Q. B., 322, 328.

Frauds, which has a most important bearing upon that particular branch of the Law Merchant which relates to the sale of goods (o). It enacts, that "*no contract for the sale of any goods, wares, or merchandises, for the price of 10*l.* sterling or upwards, shall be allowed to be good, except*

- the buyer shall—accept part of the goods so sold, and actually receive the same ;
- or give something—in earnest to bind the bargain ;
- or in part of payment—or that some note or memorandum in writing of the said bargain be made and signed by the parties to be charged by such contract or their agents thereunto lawfully authorised " (p).

Shares in a joint-stock bank (q) or railway company (r) are not within the operation of this section, nor is railway scrip (s) ; neither does the section apply to a contract for the sale of foreign stock (t) ; or of shares in a mining company conducted on the cost-book principle (u).

At one time, moreover, it was thought doubtful (x) whether (o) This section concerns only direct sales—not contracts relating to or connected with them : Judgm., Warlow v. Harrison, 1 E. & E. 317.

(p) In Harnor v. Groves, 15 C. B. 675, Maulc, J., observes that the object of the Statute of Frauds, "as appears from its title and preamble, was to prevent frauds and perjuries; the legislature knew that parties who make bargains with each other often take very different views of them ; and therefore they provided, in order to remove the temptation as much as possible, that in cases of contracts for the sale of goods exceeding the value of 10*l.*, the contract, or some note or memorandum thereof, shall be in writing. The intention of the legislature was that the writing should be the evidence, and the only evidence, of the contract, and that there should be no occasion to look beyond it. The usages of trade (post, Chap. 4) form the exception, because parties are supposed to contract with reference to them."

(q) Humble v. Mitchell, 11 Ad. & E. 205.

(r) Duncuft v. Albrecht, 12 Sim. 189 ; Bowlby v. Bell, 3 C. B. 284 ; Tempest v. Kilner, Id. 249.

(s) Knight v. Barber, 16 M. & W. 66. See Tempest v. Kilner, supra.

(t) Heseltine v. Siggers, 1 Exch. 856. As to the scope of the above section, see also Duncan v. Tindall, 13 C. B. 258, 267.

(u) See Watson v. Spratley, 10 Exch. 222, and cases cited ante, p. 391, n. (e).

(x) See the remarks of Littledale, J.,

the above section was applicable to any executory contract, the subject-matter of which did not exist at the time of contracting or was to be delivered afterwards ; and, accordingly, by the 7th section of Lord Tenterden's Act (9 Geo. 4, c. 14), the enactment in question is expressly extended "to all contracts for the sale of goods of the value (y) of 10*l.* sterling and upwards, notwithstanding the goods may be intended to be delivered at some future time, or may not at the time of such contract be actually made, procured, or provided, or fit or ready for delivery, or some act may be requisite for the making or completing thereof, or rendering the same fit for delivery." The above clause of Lord Tenterden's Act and the 17th section of the Statute of Frauds are to be read together (z), so that if an order be given for goods made, and for others to be made, this will form one entire contract, and acceptance of the former goods will take ^athe case out of the statutes as regards the latter also (a).

Passing on to inquire respecting the operation of the 17th section of the Statute of Frauds, and its effect in regard to a contract for the sale of "goods, wares, or merchandises," we shall at once remark that the words affecting the efficacy of the contract there used, assuming it to fall within but not to fulfil the requirements of that section differ essentially from the corresponding words in the 4th section of the Act ; for, whereas the last-mentioned section merely provides that "no action shall be brought" in any one of the cases therein specified, unless the agreement sued upon be in writing, the 17th section says, that "no contract" therein referred to "shall be allowed to be good" if it be neither in Smith v. Surman, 9 B. & C. 574 ; 587.

Groves v. Buck, 8 M. & S. 178.

(y) See, per Tindal, C. J., Hoadly v. M'Laine, 10 Bing. 487.

(z) Per Lord Abinger, C. B., Scott v. Eastern Counties R. C., 12 M. & W. 33 ; Harman v. Reece, 18 C. B.

(a) Scott v. Eastern Counties R. C., supra. See further, as to the scope of the 7th section of Lord Tenterden's Act, Harman v. Reece, 18 C. B. 587 ; per Pollock, C. B., 1 H. & N. 78.

part performed in the manner there specified, nor evidenced by writing.

The 4th section of the Act, then, does not avoid contracts not signed in the manner thereby prescribed, it only precludes any right of action upon them. The 17th section is stronger, and avoids contracts not made as it directs (b).

Keeping the above remark in mind, the 17th section will be found to render void every contract for the sale of goods of the value of 10*l.* or upwards, unless there be on the part of the buyer an acceptance and actual receipt of part of the goods (c), or something given by way of earnest or in part payment, or unless there be a note or memorandum in writing of the bargain signed by the parties to be charged thereby, or their agents.

What then is an 'acceptance and actual receipt' of goods sufficient to satisfy the section of the Act above set out? It is obvious that in very many cases the answer to this question will depend purely and strictly upon the facts adduced in evidence, and will not consequently involve any legal difficulty whatsoever. A few cases decided under the above section are abstracted in the following pages (d).

Tomkinson v. Staight (e) shows that an acceptance by one in the character of vendee may suffice, although the precise terms of the contract be disputed.

Gardner v. Grout (f) shows that where goods are bought in bulk, and after the sale the purchaser takes a sample from the bulk, this may amount to a delivery and acceptance of part of the thing sold, so as to satisfy the statute.

(b) Per Bosanquet, J., Laythorpe v. Bryant, 2 Bing. N. C. 747; Leroux v. Brown, 12 C. B. 801. Commented on in Williams, app., Wheeler, resp., 8 C. B., N. S., 299. See Waters v. Towers, 8 Exch. 401, 403.

(c) Cusack v. Robinson, 1 B. & S.

299.

(d) The operation of the 17th section of the Statute of Frauds has been "universally disapproved of" (per Martin, B., 5 H. & N. 285).

(e) 17 C. B. 697.

(f) 2 C. B., N. S., 340.

In Saunders v. Topp (g) the facts were these :—The defendant verbally agreed to buy some sheep, which he selected from the plaintiff's flock and directed to be sent to his own field. The sheep were driven to the defendant's farm accordingly, and after an interval of two days were counted by him and found in number to be correct. Shortly afterwards, however, the defendant repudiated the purchase of the sheep, and when sued for their price set up as a defence the Statute of Frauds, on the ground that there had been no part payment (which was true), nor any acceptance of the sheep. The Court, however, held that there was evidence for the jury of an acceptance and receipt within the meaning of the statute.

In Beaumont v. Brengeri (h), a receipt and an acceptance were held to have been properly inferred from the following facts :—A. (the defendant) agreed to purchase of B. (the plaintiff) a carriage, then standing in B.'s shop ; and, after some alterations had been made in the carriage by the defendant's order, he requested that it might remain (as in fact it did) on the plaintiff's premises, but the defendant himself made use of it on one occasion. It was argued, in this case, that there had been no delivery to the defendant, nor any acceptance and actual receipt by him of the carriage ; and many authorities were cited in support of that view : but the Court nevertheless held, that there had been both a sufficient delivery and acceptance of the carriage ; that the defendant had dealt with it as his own ; and that the plaintiff, in retaining the actual ostensible possession of the carriage, was, under the circumstances, to be regarded as filling the character of a mere agent or warehouseman for the defendant.

With the two cases last cited may usefully be compared Holmes v. Hoskins (i), and Curtis v. Pugh (j). In the

(g) 4 Exch. 390.

gerald, 3 B. & Ald. 680.

(h) 5 C. B. 301.

(j) 10 Q. B. 111.

(i) 9 Exch. 753 ; Tempest v. Fitz- former of these cases the facts in evidence were as follow :— The defendant, who was a butcher, verbally agreed with the plaintiff to purchase of him some cattle then being in his (the plaintiff's) field. After the bargain was concluded, the defendant, finding that he had not got his cheque-book with him, told the plaintiff to call at his house in the evening and he should be paid. It was then arranged that the cattle should remain in the plaintiff's field for a few days, and should be fed with the plaintiff's hay by the defendant. This was accordingly done, and the defendant having afterwards repudiated the bargain, the question arose whether there was evidence of an acceptance and a receipt of the cattle within the statute. The Court of Exchequer held that no reasonable evidence to this effect appeared ; there had been no actual receipt of the cattle by the defendant ; and the act of feeding the cattle with the plaintiff's assent could not be deemed an exercise of such an act of ownership as to amount to an acceptance by, and constructive delivery to, the defendant.

In Curtis v. Pugh (k) the evidence was, that a quantity of glue had been sent to the defendant as purchaser, and unpacked by him with a view to an examination of its quality ; and, although the condition of the glue was thereby materially altered, so that it could not be repacked as it had originally been, the Court of Queen's Bench thought, that, from that fact alone, an acceptance of the goods within the statute was not necessarily to be inferred.

It will be remembered, that, to satisfy the Statute of Frauds, there must be both an acceptance and a receipt of the goods (l). Now, a receipt implies delivery (m), which may be actual or constructive ; the statutory words ' actual receipt ' signifying " delivery of the possession of the goods |

(k) 10 Q. B. 111.

(m) Per Parke, B., Saunders v.

(l) See, per Parke, B., Holmes v. Topp, 4 Exch. 394.
Hoskins, 9 Exch. 755.

on behalf of the vendor to the vendee, and the receipt of the possession by the vendee" (n). A 'constructive receipt' may of course be evidenced in very many different ways. "Where goods are ponderous and incapable of being handed over from one to another, there need not," says Lord Kenyon, C. J., "be an actual delivery; but it may be done by that which is tantamount, such as the delivery of the key of a warehouse in which the goods are lodged, or by delivery of other indicia of property" (o). The larger the bulk of the goods, indeed, the more impracticable does a manual receipt become; something there must consequently be in the nature of constructive receipt, as there is constructive delivery (p). It will therefore usually be a question for the jury, whether any particular instance of acting or forbearing to act amounts to an acceptance and receipt (q).

It is obvious that there may be an acceptance and receipt of goods, although they remain in the possession of the vendor. For instance, if the vendee takes the goods and gives them to a porter, and as he is about to carry them away the vendee says to the vendor 'I would rather leave them here until to-morrow;' under such circumstances a jury might fairly conclude that there had been an acceptance and actual receipt of the goods in question so as to satisfy the statute (r).

If, however, there be no delivery, either actual or constructive, there can be no receipt. Suppose, for instance, that, after negotiations have taken place for the sale of goods, some act remains to be done by the purchaser, which must necessarily precede delivery, as the selection and marking of (n) Farina v. Home, 16 M. & W. 119, 123; cited per Crompton, J., Castle v. Swoorder, 6 H. & N. 838.

(o) Chaplin v. Rogers, 1 East, 191, 194. See Bentall v. Burn, 3 B. & C. 423; Farina v. Home, supra.

(p) Per Williams, J., Bushel v. Wheeler, 15 Q. B. 445.

(q) Per Coleridge, J., Bushel v. Wheeler, supra. See Bill v. Bament, 9 M. & W. 36.

(r) Per Pollock, C. B., 9 Exch. 755.

growing timber ; whilst such act remains to be done, there can be no delivery to, and consequently no receipt by, the purchaser (s).

What, in the next place, is an acceptance of goods within the meaning of the statute ? This question cannot, regard being had to recent decisions, be quite satisfactorily answered. It strikes us at once, however, that acceptance implies something more than a mere receipt. Thus, if goods be sent on approval, or with a right expressly reserved to the buyer to elect to return them by a time specified if found in quality unsatisfactory, the mere fact of the goods having been received by him subject to such condition, and having been kept for a time in his possession, but returned whilst the right of election still remained to him, would not per se constitute an acceptance of the goods within the statute (t).

If, however, acts of ownership be exercised by the purchaser over goods which have been ordered by him or on his account, from such acts may often be inferred an acceptance of the goods by him so as to satisfy the statute.

In Morton v. Tibbett (u) the facts were these :—The defendant purchased wheat of plaintiff by sample, and directed that the bulk should be delivered on the next morning to a carrier named by himself, who was to convey it to the market town of W., and the defendant himself took the sample away with him. On the following morning the bulk was delivered to the carrier, and the defendant resold it at W., on that day, by the same sample. The carrier conveyed the wheat by order of defendant, who had never seen it, to the subvendee, who rejected it as not corresponding with the sample ; and the defendant, on notice thereof, repudiated his contract with the plaintiff on the same ground. Upon this state of facts, the Court of Queen's Bench held, that the jury were war-

(s) Acraman v. Morrice, 8 C. B. 903 ; Hart v. Mills, 15 M. & W. 85 ; 449, and cases there cited. Lillywhite v. Devereux, Id. 295.

(t) Cunliffe v. Harrison, 6 Exch. (u) 15 Q. B. 428.

ranted in finding an acceptance and actual receipt of the wheat by the defendant, so as to satisfy the requirements of the 17th section of the Statute of Frauds; a decision which seems quite sustainable on this short ground, that the vendee, having resold the goods and altered their destination in the carrier's hands, had exercised acts of ownership over the goods.

Under circumstances at all similar to those above detailed, the question, whether or not there has been an acceptance and receipt, seems to be one of fact rather than of law, and hence has arisen a discrepancy amongst the cases (x). Where, however, goods are ordered to be sent by sea, but no ship is named by the vendee, it seems clear that the mere delivery on board a ship unnamed by him, and the signing by the master of that ship of a bill of lading to carry the goods for the vendee, would not constitute a sufficient acceptance and receipt within the statute (y). Though, if goods, or the indicia of the property in goods, remain long under the control of the vendee, especially where he has in any respect acted as owner of the goods, there may be sufficient evidence of an acceptance and receipt by him, although the goods themselves are not received (z). And it may be well to add, that, if there be a joint and entire contract for two different classes of goods, or for several different articles, acceptance of one class of goods or of one such article will be a sufficient acceptance of part within the 17th section of the Statute of Frauds, or within the 7th section of Lord Tenterden's Act (a). It seems clear, too, that the vendor of a

(x) These cases will be found collected in the judgm. Morton v. Tibbitt, supra.

(y) Meredith v. Meigh, 2 E. & B. 364; Hart v. Bush, E. B. & E. 494; Hanson v. Armitage, 5 B. & Ald. 557; Hart v. Sattley, 3 Camp. 528, must be considered as over-ruled.

(z) Per Crompton, J., Meredith v.

Meigh, 2 E. & B. 374; Currie v. Anderson, 29 L. J., Q. B., 87; Bushel v. Wheeler, 15 Q. B. 442; with which case compare Norman v. Phillips, 14 M. & W. 277; recognised in Coombs v. Bristol and Exeter R. Co., 3 H. & N. 516.

(a) Elliott v. Thomas, 3 M. & W. 170, followed in Bigg v. Whisking, 14 chattel may retain it on behalf of the vendee, and as his agent, so as to satisfy the Statute of Frauds, the nature of the vendor's possession being changed (b).

Thus far, then, no special difficulty, save in regard to estimating the weight of proof adduced, might, in connection with the subject before us, be thought likely to present itself. In Morton v. Tibbett (c), (the facts in which case have been above stated), the Court of Queen's Bench took occasion, however, to examine minutely the precise meaning of the statutory phrase, 'acceptance and actual receipt' as applied to goods sold; and Lord Campbell there, in an elaborate judgment, reviews the prior cases decided with reference to the phrase in question, and arrives at these conclusions:—that the acceptance contemplated by the Act is to precede, or at any rate to be contemporaneous with, the actual receipt of the goods, and is not to be a subsequent act after the goods have been actually received, weighed, measured, or examined; that there may be an acceptance and receipt of goods by a purchaser within the Statute of Frauds, although he has had no opportunity of examining them, and although he has done nothing to preclude himself from objecting that they do not correspond with the contract; that the acceptance which will suffice to let in parol evidence of the contract is a different kind of acceptance from that which would afford conclusive evidence of the contract having been fulfilled (d). In a more recent case also (e), the learned Judge above named observes, "Of the law there is no doubt. To make an acceptance it is not necessary that the vendee should have acted so as to preclude himself from afterwards making objection to the quality of the article

C. B. 195; Baldey v. Parker, 2 B. & C. 37. See Williams v. Burgess, 10 Ad. & E. 499.

(b) Marvin v. Wallis, 6 E. & B. 726. See Taylor v. Wakefield, Id. 765.

(c) 15 Q. B. 428; ante, p. 413.

(d) Acc. per Crompton, J., Currie v. Anderson, 29 L. J., Q. B., 93.

(e) Parker v. Wallis, 5 E. & B. 21, 26.

delivered ; but he must have done something indicating that he has accepted part of the goods (f) and taken to them as owner. This may be indicated by his conduct, as when he does any act which would be justified if he was the owner of the goods and not otherwise. In such a case the vendee doing that act is supposed to have accepted the goods and become owner of them."

But, although the decision in the above case of Morton v. Tibbett, upon the facts there appearing, seems unimpeachable, it must not perhaps be regarded as settled, that there can be an 'acceptance and actual receipt' of goods within the statute, where the vendee has had no opportunity of judging whether the goods sent correspond with the order ; in Hunt v. Hecht (g) an opinion is expressed that an acceptance to satisfy the statute must be something more than a mere receipt, that it means "some act done after the vendee has exercised or had the means of exercising his right of rejection." On the other hand the Court of Queen's Bench has more recently declared—"The intention of the legislature seems to have been, that the contract should not be good unless partially executed, and it is partially executed if, after the vendee has finally agreed on the specific articles which he is to take under the contract, the vendor, by the vendee's directions, parts with the possession, and puts them under the control of the vendee, so as to put a complete end to all the rights of the unpaid vendor as such,"—and hence the acceptance to satisfy the statute may precede the receipt (h).

(f) As to evidence of acceptance, see Simmonds v. Humble, 13 C. B., N S, 258 ; Castle v. Swarder, 6 H. & N. 828, reversing S. C., 5 Id. 281.

(g) 8 Exch. 814. Coombs v. Bristol and Exeter R. C., 3 H. & N. 510, 517, 518. The judgment in Morton v. Tibbett seems to have been brought under the notice of the Court of Common Pleas in Duncan v. Tindall, 13 C. B. 258, 263 ; but no intimation of opinion with reference to it was there requisite.

(h) Judgm., Cusack v. Robinson, 1 B. & S. 310.

With respect to that part of the 17th section which has reference to part payment, and upon which no particular difficulty presents itself, it will be sufficient to say, that, in order to satisfy the words of the Act here alluded to, there must be an actual payment of money by the purchaser to the vendor, or, if no money passes, there must be an actual discharge or extinguishment of some debt due from the latter to the former (i).

Pausing for a moment at this point of our inquiry as to the effect of the 17th section of the Statute of Frauds, we may conclude as follows—that, although where the price of goods amounts to 10*l.* or upwards the law regards a written memorandum of the bargain as of primary importance, it nevertheless dispenses with such evidence where by mutual consent there has been part performance of the contract. Where, therefore, there has been payment of any sum in earnest to bind the bargain or by way of part payment,—this act, on the part of the buyer, if acceded to on the part of the vendor, is sufficient, and the same effect is given to the corresponding act by the vendor of delivering part of the goods sold to the buyer, if the buyer shall accept such part and actually receive the same. As, on the one hand, part payment, however minute the sum paid may be, is sufficient to satisfy the statute; so, on the other, part delivery and acceptance, however minute the portion delivered and accepted may be, will suffice: and if either of these conditions be fulfilled, then the necessity of giving written evidence of the contract is waived, and it may be established by oral evidence, just as it might have been before the Statute of Frauds passed (k). Where, however, a party sues upon a contract falling within the 17th section of the Act, he must be prepared to show a good contract actually in existence at the time of action brought; and, to make it a good contract under the statute, there must be one of the requisites therein mentioned; so that a written memorandum or part payment after action brought will not be sufficient to satisfy the statute (l).

(i) Blenkinsop v. Clayton, 7 Taunt. 597; Walker v. Nussey, 16 M. & W. 302.

(k) See the judgm., Morton v. Tibbett, 15 Q. B. 438-4.

To pursue our inquiry as to the operation of the 17th section:—In the absence of acceptance and actual receipt of part of the goods sold, of anything given in earnest or in part of payment, the concluding words of the section before us render necessary some note or memorandum in writing of the bargain, signed by the parties to be charged by the contract, or their agents thereunto lawfully authorised. Now, with regard to these concluding words, it is worthy of remark, that the note or memorandum in writing relied upon as satisfying the statute should so far set forth the terms of the contract actually made, that they may not be left in dubio, and that fraud and mistake respecting them may be excluded (m); for instance, although a letter from the plaintiff to the defendant, together with the answer to it, would, if sufficiently explicit in regard to the particular agreement concluded between them (n), constitute a sufficient memorandum in writing within the 17th section, yet it would be otherwise if all the terms of the contract specifically agreed to were not thus expressed; for, in such case, there would be no written evidence by an appeal to which any question in dispute between the parties might be decided (o); and it must, of course, be made to appear that the contract evidenced by the memorandum was that really (l) Bill v. Bament, 9 M. & W. 40-1; per Erle, J., 17 Q. B. 107.

(m) Per Lord Abinger, C. B., 2 M. & W. 658.

(n) See Bailey v. Sweeting, 9 C. B., N. S., 843; Forster v. Rowland, 7 H. & N. 103, which was decided under a.

4 of the statute.

(o) Archer v. Baynes, 5 Exch. 625, and cases there cited; Goodman v. Griffiths, 1 H. & N. 574; Johnson v. Dodgson, 2 M. & W. 663. See Cunliffe v. Harrison, 6 Exch. 903.

concluded between the parties (p). If the price of goods sold or contracted for has been arranged between the parties, it should appear in the memorandum of their bargain (q); whereas, if no particular price has been stipulated for, it will suffice to put down in writing the terms of the contract really concluded (r).

The names of both parties to the contract must appear in the note or memorandum required by the 17th section, or in some writing sufficiently connected with it (s); but the signature of the party "to be charged" by the contract, is sufficient (t). And, although, if the original contract were itself in writing, signed by both parties, that whilst unrescinded would be the binding instrument, so that no subsequent memorandum signed by one party only could have any effect; yet it seems clear, that if a contract perfect and definite in its terms be made without writing, and if a (p) Moore v. Campbell, 10 Exch. 323.

(q) Elmore v. Kingscote, 5 B. & C. 583.

(r) Hoadly v. McClaine, 10 Bing. 482.

As to the question, when may a contract of sale be said to be definitively concluded? see Hutchison v. Bowker, 5 M. & W. 535; Jordan v. Norton, 4 M. & W. 155; ante, pp. 304, 397.

(s) See Sarl v. Bourdillon, 1 C. B., N. S., 188, which case, also, may assist in determining—what is a sufficient memorandum within the 17th section? Et vide Ridgway v. Wharton, 6 H. L. Ca. 238; Lee v. Griffin, 1 B. & S. 272.

(t) Laythorpe v. Bryant, 2 Bing. N. C. 735; Liverpool Borough Bank v. Eccles, 4 H. & N. 139; Allen v. Bennett, 3 Taunt. 169; Johnson v. Dodgson, 2 M. & W. 653; Durrell v. Evans, 1 H. & C. 174, 186; S. C., 6 H. & N. 660; Saunderson v. Jackson, 2 B. &

P. 238; Egerton v. Mathews, 6 East, 307; per Patteson, J., Sievwright v. Archibald, 17 Q. B. 114.

In the judgment, Williams v. Byrnes, 1 Moo. P. C. C. 195-6, we read in reference to the 17th section of the statute as follows:—"The words require a written note of a bargain or contract; the statute clearly making no distinction between these two words. This language cannot be satisfied unless the existence of a bargain or contract appear evidenced in writing; and a bargain or contract cannot so appear unless the parties to it are specified either nominally or by description or reference. It is true that the statute does not require the whole bargain in all its terms to be stated; it stipulates only for a note or memorandum of it signed by the party to be charged, but it does in effect require that, the essentials, i. e., all those things without which it can be no bargain at all, shall be stated."

note or memorandum merely in writing be at some future period made, embodying that contract, and be signed by the party to be charged or his agent, the statute will be satisfied (u).

Signature
by agent :

The signature to the "note or memorandum in writing," under the 17th section of the Act, may be that of the "agent" of the party to be charged "thereunto lawfully authorised." It may, for instance, be that of a traveller employed by a mercantile firm, acting within the scope of his regular duties and of the powers conferred upon him—it may be that of an auctioneer, of a factor (x), or of a broker.

—by auctioneer.

On the sale of goods by auction, the auctioneer usually acts as agent as well for the buyer as the seller (y). He is not, however, ex vi termini, agent for both parties : whether he is so or not will depend upon the facts of the particular case (z). Assuming that he is duly authorised by the vendor, and that the biddings proceed with regularity, the proper mode of complying with the requirements of the statute on a public sale of goods to the amount of 10*l.* or upwards, is for the auctioneer to write down in his sale book (which should contain a copy of the conditions of sale), the Christian and surname of the highest bidder as purchaser, and also the amount of the purchase-money opposite to the lot purchased (u). When the auctioneer, (u) Per Patteson, J., 17 Q. B. 114.

(x) See Durrell v. Evans, 1 H. & C. 174; S. C., 6 H. & N. 660.

(y) Simon v. Motivos, 3 Burr. 1921. The auctioneer is clearly agent for the vendor. The assent of both parties is, however, necessary to make the contract binding; assent is signified on the part of the seller by knocking down the hammer; on the part of the purchaser by bidding. But it seems that a bidder has a locus poenitentiae, and may retract his bidding before the hammer falls: Payne v. Cave, 3 T. R. 148, 149; and, on the other hand, the owner of the chattel put up for sale may at any time before the contract is complete revoke the auctioneer's authority: Judgm., Warlow v. Harrison, 1 E. & E. 317.

(z) Bartlett v. Purnell, 4 Ad. & E. 792.

(a) See Kenworthy v. Schofield, 2 B. & C. 945; Hinde v. Whitehouse, 7 East, 558, 568; Roots v. Lord Dormer, 4 B. & Ad. 77; 4 C. B. 645 (a).

or his clerk (b) acting under his direction, thus signs for the purchaser, the Statute of Frauds will be satisfied, because there will thus have been made "a note or memorandum in writing" of the "bargain," signed by the lawfully authorised agent of the vendee. The authority to sign being indeed expressly given or signified on behalf of the purchaser by bidding (c).

It is clear that, in the case just put, the contract between the vendor and vendee of the goods, constituted by the conditions of sale and description of the lot, cannot at the time of sale be varied by any oral statement of the auctioneer (d). If any alteration be required in the conditions or particulars, such alteration should be made in writing before the sale of the lot in question has commenced. In general, moreover, as soon as the sale by auction has taken place, and the deposit-money has been paid, the authority of the auctioneer is at an end; and if goods sent for public sale are not sold, or if there be any alteration in the conditions after the property is knocked down, the sale ought to be treated as one by private contract, and a written agreement should be prepared accordingly, and signed by the principals themselves (e). "No doubt," remarks Pollock, C. B., in Mews v. Carr (f), "an auctioneer at the sale is agent for both seller and buyer so as to bind them by his signature; but the moment the sale is over the same principle does not apply, and the auctioneer is no longer the agent of both parties but of the seller only; and the signature of the seller or his agent cannot bind the buyer."

An auctioneer, it should be observed, is entitled to sue for (b) Bird v. Boulter, 4 B. & Ad. 443. See Gosbell v. Archer, 2 Ad. & E. 500.

(c) Emmerson v. Heelis, 2 Taunt. 38, 48; White v. Proctor, 4 Taunt. 209; supra, n. (y).

(d) Shelton v. Livius, 2 Cr & J.

411; explained and distinguished in Eden v. Blake, 13 M. & W. 614, 617.

(e) Sykes v. Giles, 5 M. & W. 645, 651; Story on Agency, 4th ed., pp. 128-9.

(f) 1 H. & N. 484, 483.

the price of goods sold by him in the course of his business, because not only is he privy to the contract of sale, but he has a special property in the subject-matter of it (g). Now, it has been held, that one of the parties to a sale of goods of the price of 10*l.* or upwards, cannot act as agent for the other party, so as to bind him under the statute by signing for him a memorandum of the sale (h): the auctioneer, therefore, when plaintiff in an action for the price of goods sold by him at auction, will be precluded from availing himself of his signature in his sale book of the defendant's name as a compliance with the Statute of Frauds (i); though, if the signature in question were entered in the sale book by the auctioneer's clerk, that would be sufficient (k).

Signature
by broker.

Another agent commonly concerned in the sale of goods, and "lawfully authorised" to bind his principal under the 17th section of the Statute of Frauds, is a broker (l), who may be defined to be an agent employed to make bargains and contracts between third persons in matters of trade, commerce, or navigation, for a pecuniary compensation, called 'brokerage' or 'commission.'

A broker, who acts as well for the vendor as for the purchaser of "goods, wares, or merchandises," may undoubtedly bind either of his principals by signing a "note or memorandum in writing" of the bargain concluded between them, as required by the statute (m). Difficulty may, however, be

(g) Williams v. Millington, 1 H. Bla. 81; per Park, J., Coppin v. Walker, 7 Taunt. 241; per Lord Abinger, C. B., 5 M. & W. 650; Davis v. Danks, 3 Exch. 435, 437; Taplin v. Florence, 10 C. B. 744, 764.

(h) Graham v. Musson, 5 Bing. N. C. 603; Graham v. Fretwell, 3 M. & Gr. 368; Wright v. Dannak, 2 Camp. 203.

(i) Farebrother v. Simmons, 5 B. & Ald. 333.

(k) Bird v. Boulter, 4 B. & Ad. 443.

(l) Rucker v. Cammeyer, 1 Esp. 105; Hinde v. Whitehouse, 7 East, 569.

A broker cannot, however, without the consent of his principal, delegate his authority; for, delegata potestas non potest delegari: Henderson v. Barnewall, 1 Y. & J. 387; Leg. Max., 4th ed., 806.

(m) Rucker v. Cammeyer, 1 Esp.

felt in determining what constitutes the contract between the parties (n), and what is a note or memorandum of it sufficient within the statute.

To explain this matter satisfactorily, let us refer to the practice of sharebrokers and stockbrokers in the city of London (o). When a contract of sale is there made through the medium of a broker, the broker is bound to enter in his book (p), and sign the contract; and, if he does so, the entry thus made by him will constitute the contract binding on the parties, for, being authorised by the one party to sell, and by the other to buy, in the terms of the contract—when the broker has reduced it into writing and signed it as their common agent, it binds them both according to the Statute of Frauds, as if both had signed it with their own hands.

Such is the duty of the broker, and it is further the practice for him to send what are called the bought and sold notes to his principals—the bought note to the buyer, and the sold note to the seller—by way of intimating that he has acted upon their instructions. Sometimes, however, or rather as it would seem very frequently, the broker omits to enter or sign any contract in his book, but contents himself with sending to his clients the bought and sold notes in the manner just mentioned. If these notes agree, they are held, and justly, to constitute a binding contract, sufficient within the Statute of Frauds; but if there be any material variance between them, the case of Sievwright v. Archibald (q), shows us that they are both nullities, and that, in 105; Chapman v. Partridge, 5 Id. 256. See Pitts v. Beckett, 13 M. & W. 743.

(n) See Moore v. Campbell, 10 Exch. 323.

(o) See Smith v. Lindo, 4 C. B., N. S., 395; S. C., 5 Id. 587. A broker who signs the contract in that character may, by virtue of a local usage, incur liability upon it as principal: Humfrey v. Dale, 7 E. & B. 266; S. C. (in Error), E. B. & E. 1004, cited post, Chap. 4.

(p) See Russell on Factors, pp. 46, 345.

(q) 17 Q. B. 103 (where the cases this case consequently, there is, in the absence of part payment and part acceptance, no binding contract at all between the parties upon which an action could be brought. For contracting parties must consent ad idem; and where the terms of the two notes differ, there can be no reason why faith should be given to the one rather than to the other (r).

It may seem almost superfluous to cite authorities in addition to those specified in the preceding pages (s), with a view to showing that a written contract falling within the operation of the 4th or of the 17th section of the Statute of Frauds, cannot be varied by a subsequent oral agreement between the contracting parties. Two well-considered cases, further illustrating the rule of evidence in question, may, however, here conveniently be mentioned, as being in principle generally applicable where the statute law requires that a contract shall be in writing. The cases alluded to are Goss v. Lord Nugent (t), decided under sect. 4, and Marshall v. Lynn (u), decided under sect. 17 of the Act above mentioned.

In Goss v. Lord Nugent the facts were these:—By an agreement in writing the plaintiff contracted to sell to the defendant several lots of land, and to make a good title thereto; and the deposit-money was paid in pursuance of this agreement by the defendant; it was, however, afterwards discovered that a good title could not be made to one small lot included in the sale; but the defendant said he would accept the title notwithstanding this defect; and possession of the whole was given up to him. On delivery are reviewed); per Parke, B., Moore v. Campbell, 10 Exch. 330. See Trueman v. Loder, 11 Ad. & E. 589, cited post, Chap. 4.

(r) A material alteration in the sold note made by the buyer without the knowledge or consent of the seller will prevent the former from suing on the contract. Mollett v. Wackerbarth, 5 C. B. 151.

(s) Ante, pp. 377, 389.

(t) 5 B. & Ad. 58.

(u) 6 M. & W. 109.

of the abstract of title by the vendor, the defendant's solicitor nevertheless objected to the title so far as regarded the small lot above mentioned, and the defendant refused to complete the purchase. An action having been brought by the vendor to recover the unpaid residue of the purchase-money, it was objected that oral evidence of a waiver by the defendant of his right to have a good title as to the small lot was not admissible, inasmuch as the Statute of Frauds required the whole agreement between the contracting parties to be in writing. And of this opinion was the Court in banc, Lord Denman remarking that the object of the statute was to exclude all oral evidence as to contracts for the sale of land, and to require that any such contract when sought to be enforced should be proved by writing only (x). His Lordship further observed, that in the case before the Court the contract sought to be enforced was not in truth the written agreement, but a new contract entered into by the parties, which it was proposed to prove partly by the original written agreement, and partly by the subsequent verbal agreement; so that the contract put in evidence to support the action was not entirely in writing (y). In this case an opinion was however intimated by the Court, that a written contract concerning the sale of land may be wholly waived and abandoned by a subsequent oral agreement, so as to prevent either party from recovering upon the contract which was in writing (z).

In Marshall v. Lynn (a), it appeared that the defendant had entered into a written contract for the purchase of potatoes, the price whereof exceeded 10*l.*, from the plaintiff, to be shipped on board a vessel named in the contract, when she should next arrive at the port of W. An alteration in regard to the time of shipping the potatoes was afterwards agreed to verbally by the parties; and, in an action against the purchaser for not accepting them according to his contract, the point to be decided was, whether such alteration by parol of the written contract was binding. The Court of Exchequer held that it was not so,—that the same rule must prevail as to the construction of the 17th section as had, in Goss v. Lord Nugent (b), prevailed in regard to the construction of the 4th section of the Statute of Frauds; that, if the original written contract required by either of those sections be varied, and a new contract as to any of its terms be substituted in the place of it, that new contract cannot be enforced in law unless it also be in writing (c). It seems, however, that the rule in question, whereby contracts in writing are not allowed to be subsequently varied by parol, applies only where the particular contract is required by law to be in writing (d).

(x) See also, per Maule, J., ante, p. 407, n. (p). & R. 61, 74.

(y) Acc. Stowell v. Robinson, 3 Bing. & R. 61, 74. See Harvey v. Graham, 5 Ad. & R. 74.

N. C. 928; Harvey v. Graham, 5 Ad. (a) 6 M. & W. 109.

Besides the Statute of Frauds, there are various enactments which, to authenticate transactions specified therein, require that writing shall be used; of these, Lord Tenterden's Act (9 Geo. 4, c. 14) has for the common law practitioner peculiar and obvious importance, relating, as it does, to matters which are constantly falling under his notice. Of this Act, two sections (ss. 6 (e) and 7 (f)) have been already sufficiently considered; and other clauses of the Act in question, particularly sects. 1 and 5, which concern respectively promises to bar the Statute of Limitations (21 Jac. 1, c. 16) (g), and promises by adults to pay debts contracted during

(b) See also Hargreaves v. Parsons, 13 M. & W. 561, 568; Horne v. Wingfield, 3 Scott, N. R., 340.

(c) Judgm., 6 M. & W. 117; Stead v. Dawber, 10 Ad. & E. 57; Moore v. Campbell, 10 Exch. 323, 332.

(d) Per Maule, J., Pontifex v. Wilkinson, 2 C. B. 361; ante, p. 374.

(e) Ante, p. 388.

(f) Ante, p. 408.

(g) Ante, p. 183.

infancy (h), will hereafter be specially adverted to. I shall now, accordingly, without further inquiry as to written contracts in particular, conclude this chapter with some remarks respecting simple contracts generally—oral or written—the object immediately in view being to contrast a simple with a special contract, regard being had to the leading characteristics of either. I shall also specify some few cases, in each of which our law requires that the contract entered into between parties shall be under seal.

Now, on reference to p. 270, it will be seen that a specialty works a merger; operates by way of estoppel; requires no consideration to support it: will in some cases bind the heir of the covenantor or obligor; and can only be discharged by an instrument under seal (i) or by the judgment of a Court of competent authority or by statute. A simple contract on the other hand, which fills the lowest rank amongst obligations recognised in law, cannot, it is obvious, work a merger; although it may operate as an admission, it does not, except in some peculiar cases (k), act by way of estoppel (l). A

A specialty contrasted with a simple contract.

(h) Post, Chap. 5, s. 2.

(i) See Judgm., Frazer v. Jordan, 8 E. & B. 309.

(k) For instance, a tenant is said to be "estopped" from denying his landlord's title. (See Judgm., Cuthbertson v. Irving, 4 H. & N. 754-5; S. C., 6 Id. 135). Delaney v. Fox, 2 C. B., N. S., 768; Watson v. Lane, 11 Exch. 769; per Wilde, B., Duke v. Ashby, 7 H. & N. 602. An agent is not permitted to dispute the title of his principal in the subject-matter of the agency. (Story on Agency, 4th ed., p. 272.) And the doctrine of estoppel has also some application in regard to bills of exchange and promissory notes. (Post, Chap. 3.) See Reg. v. Evans, 3 E. & B. 363.

(l) See Cannam v. Farmer, 3 Exch. 698; Bartlett v. Wells, 1 B. & S. 836, and cases there cited; Graves v. Key,

3 B. & Ad. 313 (which shows that a receipt not under seal is an admission only).

"The acts in pais, which bind parties by way of estoppel, are but few, and are pointed out by Lord Coke (Co. Litt. 352. a.) They are all acts which anciently really were, and in contemplation of law have always continued to be, acts of notoriety not less formal and solemn than the execution of a deed, such as livery, entry, acceptance of an estate, and the like. Whether a party had or had not concurred in an act of this sort was deemed a matter which there could be no difficulty in ascertaining, and then the legal consequences followed." (Judgm., Lyon v. Reed, 13 M. & W. 309, cited Nickells v. Atherstone, 10 Q. B. 949.)

Other instances of estoppel in pais simple contract does (usually (m)) require a consideration to support it (n); it will, as already stated (o), and as we shall hereafter see at greater length, bind the personal not the real—representative of the contractor. An executory contract not under seal may (even, as it seems, when required to be in writing by statute), be discharged by parol before breach (p).

"It is competent," says Parke, B., in a recent case (q), "for both parties to an executory contract, by mutual agreement, without any satisfaction, to discharge the obligation of that contract." But the learned Judge proceeds to remark, that "an executed contract cannot be discharged except by release under seal, or by performance of the obligation, as by payment, where the obligation is to be performed by payment" (r). Leave and license cannot be pleaded to a declaration charging a breach of contract, the plea must allege an exoneration or discharge (s).

To an action for breach of contract, "accord and satisfaction," if properly pleaded, will also afford a good ground of defence (t). Though, "it is clear if the claim be a liquidated and ascertained sum, payment of part cannot be satisfaction of the whole, although it may, under certain circumstances, be evidence of a gift of the remainder. But the gift of a thing of uncertain value may be a satisfaction of any sum will be adverted to in Book III. of this work. See also Waller v. Drakeford, 1 E. & B. 749; Andrews v. Hailes, 2 E. & B. 349, 353; Doe d. Croft v. Tidbury, 14 C. B. 304, 324; Taylor v. Best, 14 C. B. 487; Dunston v. Paterson, 2 C. B., N. S., 495; Worthington v. Sudlow, 2 B. & S. 508, 519. Estoppels bind parties and privies only, not strangers: Richards v. Johnston, 4 H. & N. 660.

(m) See post, Chap. 3.

(n) Ante, pp. 307, 315.

(o) Ante, p. 296.

(p) See Taylor v. Hildary, 1 Cr. M. & R. 741.

(q) Foster v. Dawber, 6 Exch. 851. King v. Gillett, 7 M. & W. 55, is important with reference to the point here adverted to. See also Harris v. Carter, 3 E. & B. 559; Davis v. Bomford, 6 H. & N. 245.

(r) Foster v. Dawber, supra.

(s) Dobson v. Espie, 2 H. & N. 79.

(t) A vested right of action can only be got rid of by a release or an accord and satisfaction: per Williams, J., Cook v. Lister, 13 C. B., N. S., 587-8.

due on a simple contract. If the contract be by bond or covenant, it can be determined only by something of an equal or higher nature (u); but upon a mere simple contract it is clear, that the debtor may give anything of inferior value in satisfaction of the sum due, provided it be not part of the sum itself;" for "if the creditor had the money itself, he might buy with it a thing of however inferior value, and that contract would be good; so he may accept the same thing in satisfaction of the whole sum, and that contract is good" (x).

The reason why, as just stated, part payment cannot be pleaded in satisfaction of a debt, is thus explained in the case of Sibree v. Tripp above cited: "It is undoubtedly true that payment of a portion of a liquidated demand, in the same manner as the whole liquidated demand ought to be paid, is payment only in part, because it is not one bargain but two, viz., payment of part, and an agreement without consideration to give up the residue." "But, if you substitute for a sum of money a piece of paper or a stick of sealing-wax it is different, and the bargain may be carried out in its full integrity. A man may give in satisfaction of a debt of 100*l.* a horse of the value of 5*l.*, but not 5*l.*" If, however, the time or place of payment of the money given in satisfaction be different from that of the debt due, the smaller sum may be a satisfaction of the larger, ex. gr., "if, for money, you give a negotiable security, you pay it in a different way; the security may be worth more or less, it is of uncertain (u) Ante, p. 297. Wilson v. Brad-dyll, 9 Exch. 718; Rippinghall v. Lloyd, 5 B. & Ad. 742; cited per Bramwell, B., Kirk v. Gibbs, 1 H. & N. 814.

(x) Per Parke, B., Sibree v. Tripp, 15 M. & W. 33-4, where Cumber v. Wane, Stra. 426, is observed upon; Grinsley v. Parker, 3 Exch. 610, following Tattersall v. Parkinson, 16 M.

& W. 752. See Gaskill v. Skene, 14 Q. B. 664; Thame v. Boas, 12 Q. B. 808; Beaumont v. Greathead, 2 C. B. 494; Goodwin v. Cremer, 18 Q. B. 757; Cook v. Hopewell, 11 Exch. 555.

Pinnel's case, 5 Rep. 117, which was an action of debt upon a bond, is a leading authority on the above subject.

value" (y), and may therefore, in law, be an equivalent for a larger amount actually due.

The withdrawal by defendant of a plea of infancy has been held to be a sufficient consideration for an agreement by the plaintiff to accept a smaller in satisfaction of a larger sum (z). And by way of further illustrating this subject, since the decision in Good v. Cheesman (a), "the law," says Williams, J., in Boyd v. Hind (b), "has been regarded as settled, that a composition agreement by several creditors, although by parol so as to be incapable of operating as a release, and although unexecuted so as not to amount in strictness to a satisfaction, will be a good answer to an action by a creditor for his original debt if he accepted the new agreement in satisfaction thereof; and that for such an agreement, there is a good consideration to each creditor, viz., the undertaking of the other compounding creditors to give up a part of their claim. But no such agreement can operate as a defence if made merely between the debtor and a single creditor; the other creditors or some of them must also join in the agreement with the debtor, and with each other, for otherwise it would be a bare contract to accept a less sum in satisfaction of a greater, which would be invalid by reason of want of consideration for relinquishing the residue."

Thus much as to the mode of discharging a parol contract at common law; and now, assuming that the characteristics of a contract, special or simple, have been sufficiently exhibited, one question which may reasonably be supposed to have suggested itself yet remains to be answered: is a deed, under any, and if so, under what circumstances, indispensable to the validity of a transaction by our law? Without attempting

(y) Per Alderson, B., Sibree v. Tripp, 15 M. & W. 38 (where the cases are collected); per Parke, B., Curlew v. Clark, 3 Exch. 378. See also Lyth v. Ault, cited ante, p. 317; Jones v. Sawkins, 5 C. B. 142; and cases, supra, n. (x).

(z) Cooper v. Parker, 14 C. B. 118; S. C., 15 C. B. 822.

(a) 2 B. & Ald. 328.

(b) 1 H. & N. 938, 947.

fully to answer this question, I may observe, that there are certain transactions which at common law, and certain other transactions which by statute, are required to be evidenced by deed. At common law, no incorporeal right or hereditament can be created or transferred otherwise than by deed: such a right is said to lie in grant and not in livery (c), and to pass by the mere delivering of the deed of grant or of assignment; a right of common, for instance, which is a profit a prendre, or a right of way, which is an easement or right in nature of an easement, cannot be granted or conveyed in fee simple, for life, or for years, without a deed (d). An auctioneer, accordingly, who is employed under a parol agreement to sell goods upon the premises of a third party, has no such interest in the goods as will make the license given him to enter upon the premises for the purpose of selling them irrevocable (e); and a license to an outgoing tenant to re-enter upon the demised premises in order to take away fixtures left there, will not, unless under seal, be a valid grant of such privilege as against an incoming tenant who was not party to the license (f). Again, at common law, an authority to an agent to execute a deed for his prin-

Deed—when requisite at common law.

(c) Incorporeal property is so termed because it has no corpus, and is not tangible or visible, but exists only in legal contemplation. It may indeed produce something substantial and beneficial to the owner, as in the instance of the right to tithes; but, being incapable of actual possession, and passing by the mere deed of grant, it is therefore said to lie in grant. The possession of corporeal property on the other hand, ex. gr., houses and land, is capable of actual and visible delivery and transfer, and is therefore said to lie in livery (meaning delivery of seisin or possession): Chitt. Gen. Pr., vol. 1, p. 203.

By stat. 8 & 9 Vict. c. 106, s. 2, a corporeal hereditament "shall, as regards the conveyance of the immediate freehold thereof, be deemed to lie in grant as well as in livery."

(d) Wood v. Leadbiter, 13 M. & W. 838 (which is a leading case upon this subject); Adams v. Andrews, 15 Q. B. 284, 296; Bird v. Higginson, 6 Ad. & E. 824; S. C., 2 Ad. & E. 696; Thomas v. Fredricks, 10 Q. B. 775; Williams v. Morris, 8 M. & W. 488. See Smart v. Jones, 15 C. B., N. S., 717.

(e) Taplin v. Florence, 10 C. B. 744.

(f) Roffey v. Henderson, 17 Q. B. 574. See Leader v. Homewood, 5 C. B., N. S., 546.

principal must itself be under seal (g). A corporation must in general contract by deed (h). A gift of a chattel inter vivos, if not perfected by delivery, must be evidenced by deed (i). And a mere verbal gift of a chattel to a person in whose possession it is does not pass any property in the chattel to the donee (k). “By the law of England,” says Lord Tenterden (l), “in order to transfer property by gift, there must either be a deed or instrument of gift (m), or there must be an actual delivery of the thing to the donee.”

Deed—when required by the statute
law.

Under the statute law, the transfer of certain kinds of property is expressly required to be by deed. For instance, the Real Property Amendment Act (8 & 9 Vict. c. 106) provides (s. 3), that a feoffment (unless made under a custom by an infant) shall be void at law if not evidenced by deed—that a partition, exchange (except of copyholds), or lease required by law to be in writing, an assignment of a chattel interest (not being copyhold), or a surrender in writing of an interest in any hereditament not being a copyhold and not being an interest which might by law have been created without writing, shall also be void at law unless made by (g) Harrison v. Jackson, 7 T. R. 207, 210; Wilks v. Back, 2 East, 142; Berkeley v. Hardy, 5 B. & C. 355; Judgm., Hunter v. Parker, 7 M. & W. 343.

(h) Post, Chap. 5, s. 1.

(i) Irons v. Smallpiece, 2 B. & Ald. 551. A chattel may be mortgaged by parol: Flory v. Denny, 7 Exch. 581. See Barton v. Gainer, 3 H. & N. 387.

(k) Shower v. Pilck, 4 Exch. 478.

(l) Irons v. Smallpiece, 2 B. & Ald. 552. See Congreve v. Evetts, 10 Exch. 298; Baker v. Gray, 17 C. B. 462.

(m) The expression here attributed to the learned Judge seems to imply that the assignment of a chattel may be effected by an instrument not under seal—a proposition unsustainable by the authorities: see, per Maulc, J., Lunn v. Thornton, 1 C. B. 381-2, and Note by Serjt. Manning, Id. 381 (d). In Oulds v. Harrison, 10 Exch. 575, Parke, B., observes, “It has been held that a gift is not binding unless it be by deed, or the subject of the gift be actually delivered; but if the point were res nova it would perhaps be decided differently.” The decision in Lunn v. Thornton, supra (recognised in Hope v. Hayley, 5 E. & B. 846) is “founded on the maxim, Nemo dat qui non habet :” per Willes, J., Chidell v. Galsworthy, 6 C. B., N. S., 478. See Carr v. Allatt, 27 L. J., Ex., 385. As to the effect of a grant of a chattel by deed, see further, Siggers v. Evans, 5 E. & B. 367; Reeve v. Whitmore, 33 L. J., Chanc., 63; S. C., 32 Id. 497.

~~deed~~ (n). So under the Merchant Shipping Act (17 & 18 Vict. c. 104), s. 55 (o), the transfer of any registered ship, or any share therein, to a person qualified to be owner of a British ship, is to be effected by bill of sale or instrument under seal, in the form given in the Schedule to the Act. And the statute in question likewise contains provisions (ss. 66, 73) regulating the mode of mortgaging a ship or any share therein, and of making a transfer of such mortgage, for either of which purposes a deed is expressly rendered necessary.

It would be of little use, even did space permit, to enumerate the various contracts, to the validity of which a deed or a writing not under seal is rendered necessary by the statute law. When difficulty arises in regard to any contract or transaction regulated by statute, such difficulty must be solved by reference to the precise words of the Legislature applicable to the particular case; and general principles cannot, it is obvious, be deduced from special and arbitrary enactments. Upon this part of the subject, therefore, nothing further will here be said; and, in the ensuing Chapter, I shall proceed to speak of certain contracts required to be in writing by the Law Merchant (p).

(n) See Shelf. Real Prop. Stats., 7th ed., pp. 619, 620.

(o) As to which see Maude and P. on Merch. Shipp., 2nd ed., p. 21, n. (c).

(p) In the preceding Chapter no reference has been made to the Stamp Acts. Where any doubt occurs in regard to the necessity for a stamp or its amount, Mr. Tilsley's Treatise upon the Stamp Laws, with the Supplements thereto, may safely be consulted.

CHAPTER III.

NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS (a).

Negotiable instrument
—what.

THE term 'negotiable instrument' will here be used to signify an instrument which may be transferred by assignment from one person to another, so as to vest a legal title to the property represented or secured by it and a right of action directly founded upon it in the transferee (b).

Every 'negotiable' instrument, accordingly, presents an exception to that general rule of our common law, which says, that 'choses in action' shall not be assignable (c). In order to understand the meaning and scope of this rule, some few remarks are necessary.

Chose in action—
what;

In the first place, then, what is a 'chose in action'? This question may be answered by reference to the Termes de la Ley (d), where we read that a chose in action "is where a man hath cause or may bring an action for some duty due to him," as an action of debt upon an obligation, an action of

(a) An elementary view merely has in this chapter been attempted of the subject above specified. The author has contented himself with exhibiting a brief outline of the law applicable to it, and with pointing out from a multitude of cases those to which the attention of the student should especially be directed.

(b) See Webst. Dict. ad verb. "Negotiable."

(c) In Liversidge v. Broadbent, 4 H. & N. 610, Martin, B., specifies "two legal principles" which "have never been departed from. One is that, at common law, a debt cannot be assigned so as to give the assignee a right to sue for it in his own name, except in the case of a negotiable instrument." The other principle is, "that a bare promise cannot be the foundation of an action—ex nudo pacto non oritur actio." Again, in Noble v. National Discount Co., 5 H. & N. 228, Bramwell, B., observes, "There is no doubt as to the law, that if one person is indebted to another he cannot become under an obligation to a third party without the agreement of all three."

(d) Ed. 1708, p. 121.

covenant, of trespass, or the like; and, indeed, wherever a thing is not in possession, but where, for recovery of it, a man is driven to his action (and consequently enjoys a right merely), such thing is called a chose in action.

Now, it is to be observed, that, by an ancient maxim of the common law, a chose in action cannot be granted or transferred to a stranger, so as to enable the transferee to sue upon it at law (e). The policy of our law being, that maintenance, suppression of right, and stirring up of suits may thus be avoided; nothing in action or entry, says Sir E. Coke (f), "can be granted over, for so, under colour thereof, pretended titles might be granted to great men, whereby rights might be trodden down and the weak oppressed, which the common law forbiddeth."

—not assignable.

The rule which forbids the assignment of a chose in action applies generally as well to specialties as to simple contracts. Our law, observes a modern writer (g), "will not permit a person not privy to a contract to found a legal claim or remedy thereon in his own name by assignment from the party with whom the obligation was entered into. It will not permit a person to become the creditor of another, without his consent; and the reason is, not only that there are wanting the mutuality and privity (h) essential to constitute a contract, but that oppression and unjust litigation would be encouraged, if persons—strangers to the stipulating party—(and with whom, perhaps, he would not have contracted) could purchase causes of suit, and divest the original creditor of his legal right of action" (i). "It is," accordingly, "a well

(e) Supra, n. (c). Co. Litt. 266. a.; per Maule, J., Tempest v. Kilner, 2 C. B. 308; Jones v. Carter, 8 Q. B. 134, with which compare Jones v. Robinson, 1 Exch. 454. And see, per Buller, J., Master v. Miller, 4 T. R. 340, 341; per Willes, J., Balfour v. Sea Fire, &c., Co., 3 C. B., N. S., 308.

(f) Co. Litt. 214. a.; Lampel's case, 10 Rep. 48 a.

(g) Chitt., jun., on Bills, vol. 1, p. 30.

(h) Ante, pp. 304, 316.

(i) It appears to be the duty of a debtor in many cases, as in debt on known rule that a bond is not assignable at common law so as to enable the assignee to sue upon it in his own name" (k). And there is authority for saying that "a party cannot make an instrument negotiable and not negotiable at the same time" (l).

Such being the doctrine of our law, an interesting question suggests itself, viz., whether a chose in action, not assignable under the Law Merchant or by statute, could, at its original creation, be made so by the express contract and intent of the parties to it. We may, with reason, conclude, that this could not be done (m); for, although in general the express terms of a contract constitute the law by which the rights of the contracting parties must be regulated, it does not seem to be competent for them to attach to their engagements qualities not recognised by law as inherent in them, any more than it is competent to a man capriciously to attach conditions to land, which are opposed to the doctrines or spirit of our law (n). It seems to be a true and unimpeachable proposition, that a parol contract, as for the payment of money, cannot be endowed with a negotiable quality at the mere will of the parties to it, without reference to the recognised forms and usage of the Law Merchant; that a deed could not be rendered transferable and negotiable like a bill of exchange or an Exchequer bill (o).

To the rule above stated with reference to the assignment of choses in action, certain exceptions have been allowed; for instance, Courts of law were not bold enough to tie up the bond, to find out his creditor, if he be within the realm. This duty would be one very difficult of performance on the part of the debtor, if choses in action were assignable. Hence, perhaps, one reason why such assignments are not allowed at common law: Note (a), 6 C. B. 290.

(k) Per Martin, B., Young v. Hughes, 4 H. & N. 84. Nor is the rule stated supra touched on by the 19 & 20 Vict. c. 97, s. 5.

(l) Per Crompton, J., Carlon v. Ireland, 25 L. J., Q. B., 114; S. C., 5 E. & B. 765.

(m) See Dixon v. Bovill, 3 Macq. H. L. Ca. 1; Hybart v. Parker, 4 C. B., N. S., 211.

(n) Ante, p. 9.

(o) Per Parke, B., 6 M. & W. 216.

property of the Crown, or to prevent it from being transferred, so that the transferee might sue for it in his own name (p). In the event of death, bankruptcy, or marriage, an assignment of a right of action may occur. Where a covenant runs with land, the right to sue upon it passes from assignee to assignee of the term or reversion, though it is observable that in this case a peculiar kind of privity—viz., that of estate—is created between the parties. Further, under particular Acts of Parliament, certain instruments, ex. gr. railway bonds (in some cases); bail bonds; and replevin bonds, have been made assignable (q).

The most important classes of instruments, however, in regard to which the technical rule under consideration does not hold, are bills of exchange and promissory notes, when drawn, made, and indorsed in a manner which will presently be pointed out. The instruments just named are, indeed, altogether anomalous, and such as the common law, acting consistently with its ancient principles, would not sanction. They are the creatures of, and owe their origin to, the Law Merchant, to mercantile custom gradually recognised and reduced to a certain uniform system by the decisions of our Courts of justice and, in part, by legislative interference (r).

To the Italian merchants, the introduction of bills of exchange into use amongst the mercantile community of Europe is referable (s), these instruments having been known in the 14th century, although, as remarked by an able writer (t), the first case relating to them to be found in our (p) Termes de la Ley (ed. 1708), "Chose in Action;" per Buller, J., Master v. Miller, 4 T. R. 340.

(q) Broom's Pract., vol. 1, p. 202; Vertue v. East Anglian R. C., 5 Exch. 280; East. Union R. C. v. Cochrane, 9 Exch. 197. See Thompson v. Bell, 3 E. & B. 236; Selby v. East Anglian R. C., 7 Exch. 53; 13 & 14 Vict. c.

60, ss. 5, 22, 27, 35; Young v. Hughes, 4 H. & N. 76; Smith M. L., Book II., Chap. 4.

(r) Chitt., jun., on Bills, vol. 1, p. 28.

(s) Rocens, by Ingersoll, pref. p. 10.

(t) Byles on Bills, 8th ed., pref. p. 8.

Reports is Martin v. Boure (u), decided in the Exchequer Chamber, in the first year of James I.

In the infancy of our commerce, when its true interests were but imperfectly understood, Courts of law seem to have been reluctant to give their full effect to bills of exchange, and allowed them only between merchants (x); the reluctance of our Courts to recognise these instruments being doubtless manifested in order to discourage innovation, and to suppress novelties in derogation of the common law.

In order to appreciate the extent of the innovation caused by the introduction of the instruments in question, we must first consider the negotiable quality attaching to a bill of exchange, and remember that, if originally made payable to order or to bearer, it may in the one case be endorsed, and in the other delivered over, so as to vest a right of action upon the bill in any bonâ fide holder. Nor in such case is the express consent of the party primarily liable on the bill at all necessary in affirmance of the holder's title. Neither is any actual privity between these parties requisite, in order to entitle the holder to sue in his own name upon the contract.

Here, then, we have an instance, complete in all respects, of the assignment of a chose in action; and if it be asked whence this assignable quality is derived, we answer, originally from the usage of merchants, which usage has been long sanctioned judicially and by Parliament, so as to form at this day a component portion of our common law.

It is not, however, solely in respect of the quality just adverted to, that a bill of exchange differs from an ordinary simple contract. It differs therefrom in another important particular, viz., that a consideration for the bill will be presumed until the contrary appear, or at least until suspicion has been thrown upon the holder's title. A defendant

(u) Cro. Jac. 6.

(x) Oaste v. Taylor, Cro. Jac. 306; Byles on Bills, 8th ed., pref. p. 10.

in an action upon a bill is not permitted to call upon the plaintiff to prove the consideration which he gave for it, unless the defendant can, in the first instance, make out a prima facie case against the holder and impeach his title, as by showing that possession of the bill was obtained by undue means, or that the bill had been lost, or was originally infected with illegality (y).

The above being the two principal points in respect of which a bill of exchange differs from a written contract not negotiable, I will now proceed to examine the nature of this instrument, its form, and leading properties.

A bill of exchange is a written order or request by one person to another for the payment of money at a specified time, absolutely and at all events (z). “A bill of exchange,” observes Grose, J. (a), “is only a transfer of a chose in action according to the custom of merchants; it is an authority to one person to pay to another the sum which is due to the first.”

Bill of exchange—
how defined.

Let us briefly examine the various parts of the definition above given :—

A bill of exchange must be in writing, for so the usage of merchants requires (b), and the statute law now virtually enjoins (c). It seems also to be essential to the validity of the bill, that it should be addressed, or in some manner specifically directed, to the party who is ordered or requested to pay, in other words, that it should have a drawer and a drawee (d). A written authority to pay money on account of the person giving it will not constitute a valid bill, (y) Per Pollock, C. B., May v. Seyler, 2 Exch. 566; post.

(z) See Bayley on Bills, 6th ed., p. 1.

(a) Mead v. Young, 4 T. R. 32.

(b) “A bill of exchange,” says Lord Hardwicke, “is a contract of a very particular nature, depending on the custom of merchants, and must be in writing :” Thomas v. Bishop, Rep.

temp. Hardw. 2; Claxton v. Swift, Lutw. 878. See Geary v. Physic, 5 B. & C. 234.

(c) 19 & 20 Vict. c. 97, s. 6, cited post; 1 & 2 Geo. 4, c. 73, s. 2.

(d) See Peto v. Reynolds, 9 Exch. 410; S. C., 11 Id. 418, and cases there cited; Fielder v. Marshall, 9 C. B., N. S., 606, 611; Stoessiger v. South Eastern R. C., 3 E. & B. 549.

although it may be evidence of an agreement (e). The payee must be a person ascertained, or who is capable of being ascertained, at the time the instrument is drawn (f). A bill must be for the payment of money. An order for the delivery of goods to a third party, although worded in other respects like a bill of exchange, could not be declared on as such, nor would it have any similar or analogous properties. Neither would a written order to pay money and do some other act be a good bill (g).

Again, the amount for which the bill is drawn must be made payable absolutely, and at all events, for certainty is a great object in mercantile instruments. It would perplex the commercial transactions of mankind if negotiable securities were issued out into the world incumbered with conditions and contingencies, and if the persons to whom they were offered in negotiation were obliged to inquire when those uncertain events would probably be reduced to a certainty; and, accordingly, unless they carry their own validity on the face of them, and conform to what is recognised by mercantile custom, they will not be negotiable (h). In Alexander v. Thomas (i), the bill upon which the plaintiff sued was made payable "ninety days after sight, or when realised;" and the insertion in the bill of these latter words led after verdict to an arrest of judgment, on this short ground,—that the bill was made payable on a contingency, and was not, consequently, "a good bill of exchange drawn according to the custom of merchants." Such an instrument cannot, then, be made payable on a contingency, which may (e) Hamilton v. Spottiswoode, 4 Exch. 200.

(f) Yates v. Nash, 8 C. B., N. S., 581.

(g) Bayley on Bills, 6th ed., p. 10; Story on Bills, p. 53; Martin v. Chauntry, Stra. 1271; Follett v. Moore, 4 Exch. 410; which cases decide, in regard to promissory notes, the point above stated.

(h) Carlos v. Fancourt, 5 T. R. 485, 486.

(i) 16 Q. B. 333; per Cur. Dawkes v. Lord Deloraine, 2 W. Bl. 782. The cases upon the above subject are collected in Story on Bills, ss. 46, 47.

never happen ; it must be payable at a time certain, or at sight, or at so many days after sight, or at all events on the happening of an event which must at some period take place, as so many months (by which will be understood calendar months (k)) after the death of A. B. (l).

Such being the definition of a bill of exchange, it will be convenient to observe its ordinary form, which is as under :—

Form of bill.

“ London, 1st January, 1855.

“ [Three] months after date [or, On demand, or, At sight, or, At [ten] days after sight], pay C. D., or order [or, bearer], [or, pay to my order] One Hundred Pounds (m).

“ To Mr. E. F., Merchant, } A. B.” Park Street, Bristol.” }

In the corner of the above instrument is usually written, in figures, the amount [100*l.*], for which the bill is payable (n) ; and it must be stamped according to the statutory scale of duties which may be in force.

Without pausing in this place to examine minutely the requisites of a bill of exchange in regard to form, let us proceed to consider its practical use. The use of negotiable paper in commercial dealings is well illustrated by Sir W. Blackstone in his Commentaries (o), and by Chancellor

Its use in mercantile transactions.

(k) Per Littledale, J., Reg. v. Chawton, 1 Q. B. 250 ; Bayley on Bills, 6th ed., p. 244. But, except in the case of mercantile instruments, the word “month” signifies in law a lunar month : Id. ibid ; Simpson v. Margitson, 11 Q. B. 23.

(l) Cook v. Coleham, Stra. 1217 ; Storm v. Stirling, 3 E. & B. 333.

(m) The words “for value received,” being inoperative, are omitted in the form here given.

Across the bill is written the acceptance thus ; “Accepted E. F.”

The acceptance of a bill of exchange, “whether inland or foreign,” must be “in writing on such bill, or, if there be more than one part of such bill, on one of the said parts, and signed by the acceptor or some person duly authorised by him :” 19 & 20 Vict. c. 97, s. 6. As to what is an inland bill, Id. s. 7.

(n) As to the effect of a variance between the amount written in the body of the bill and that specified in the margin, see Saunderson v. Piper, 5 Bing. N. C. 425.

(o) Vol. 2, p. 466.

Kent (p). Let us suppose that B., residing in Liverpool, wishes to receive 1000*l.*, which await his orders in the hands of F. at New York. He applies to D., going from Liverpool to New York, to pay him the above amount less the usual rate of discount, and to take his draft or bill on F. for the 1000*l.*, payable at sight. Now, this arrangement may, in truth, accommodate both B. and D., for B. receives the amount of his debt on transferring it to D., and D. carries his money across the Atlantic in the shape of a bill of Exchange without danger or risk in the transportation, and, on arriving at New York, he presents his bill to F. and is paid. The bill of exchange operates then in this way, that, if accepted, it effects a transfer of the right of action as against F. (the party originally indebted) from B. to D.

The illustration thus given by Sir W. Blackstone at once introduces to us the three immediate parties to a bill of exchange as originally drawn, and before it has been put in circulation, viz., B., the drawer of the bill; F., the drawee and (should he accept the bill) acceptor; D., the payee. Of these F. is the party primarily liable at suit of the payee, and B. is (with reference to F.) to be regarded in the light of a surety, and will be liable to D. in case of the non-acceptance or non-payment of the bill by F.

Accommodation bill
—what.

An accommodation bill—that is, a bill accepted without consideration for the convenience of the drawer, and with a view to his raising money upon it, or otherwise using it (q)—stands indeed on a somewhat peculiar footing, inasmuch as in this case there is an implied undertaking on the part of the drawer to indemnify the acceptor against claims which may be made upon him in respect of the bill; and upon this implied contract of indemnity an action will lie against the former of these parties at suit of the latter, if obliged to take up the bill (r). Even in the case of an accommodation bill, however, the drawer is not primâ facie the party to pay it ; upon the face of such a bill, the party who is bound to pay is the accommodation acceptor (s).

But the use of mercantile instruments, such as are now spoken of, would be attended with very limited advantage if restricted to the immediate parties to them, i.e., if they were devoid of the quality of negotiability, which, in fact, they usually possess. This negotiable quality is indeed inherent by mercantile custom in bills of exchange when drawn in the ordinary form, i.e., where such instrument is stated on the face of it to be payable to C. D. or “ bearer,” or to “ order ” of the payee (t), in the former of which cases it will pass like a bank note by delivery, whilst in the latter it requires the indorsement of the payee to make it negotiable. It here, accordingly, becomes necessary to advert to the precise form and effect of an indorsement of a bill.

An indorsement may be in blank or special: if in blank, it is effected by the holder merely writing his name on the back of the bill ; if special, the indorser names the payee to whose order it is to be payable. Now the great difference between these two modes of indorsement is this—that, if the payee merely write his name on the back of a bill payable to order, i.e., if he indorse it in blank, it thereupon becomes payable to any bonâ fide holder ; whereas, if the payee indorse the bill specially, i.e., make it payable to “ C. D. or order,” it will require C. D.’s indorsement, either in blank or special, before it become again assignable, so as to convey a right of action in respect of it to the next holder (u).

When a bill of exchange has been indorsed over we have

(r) Beech v. Jones, 5 C. B. 696 ;
Sleigh v. Sleigh, 5 Exch. 514 ; Reynolds v. Doyle, 1 M. & Gr. 753 ; Judgm., 9 C. B. 181 ; Driver v. Burton, 17 Q. B. 989.

(s) Per Jervis, C. J., 13 C. B. 914.

(t) See the form, ante, p. 441.

A bill made payable to C. D., but not to “ order ” or to “ bearer,” would not be negotiable.

(u) Cunliffe v. Whitehead, 3 Bing. N. C. 828 ; post, “ Indorsement ” two new characters, that of indorser and that of indorsee, brought to notice, and we must therefore briefly inquire what are the respective rights and liabilities of those parties.

Now, on the one hand, "a transfer by indorsement vests in the indorsee a right of action against all the parties whose names are on the bill in case of default of acceptance or payment" (x); and, on the other hand, "every indorser of a bill is in the nature of a new drawer, and is liable to every succeeding holder in default of acceptance or payment by the drawee" (y). The acceptor being still primarily liable upon the bill, the drawer and each indorser thereof being collaterally liable to the holder, provided certain steps rendered necessary by the law merchant be duly taken by him.

Steps to be taken by holder of bill when due.

In order to show what these preliminary steps are and what course should be adopted by the holder of a bill when it falls due, let us suppose that it is payable to order—that it has been accepted and indorsed in proper form—that it has come into the holder's hands neither in its inception nor during its transfer tainted with illegality or fraud. Immediately such a bill becomes due—that is, under ordinary circumstances, on the fourth day inclusive, or on the third day exclusive, of that on which the bill is expressed to be payable—the holder should present it, or cause it to be presented, for payment to the acceptor. If on presentment the bill be refused payment, then notice of dishonour should be given to every party (other than the acceptor) whose name appears upon the bill, and against whom the holder may wish to secure a remedy.

Present-
ment.

Notice of dishonour.

So essential, indeed, are presentment and notice of dishonour to the success of an action against any party to the bill intermediate between the holder and the acceptor, that such action will in general fail if either of the preliminary steps just specified has been omitted, i.e., if the bill has not been presented for payment on the day when it became due, or if proper notice of dishonour has not been given.

From what has just been said, it will be seen in how different a position relatively to the holder stands the acceptor of a bill (drawn and accepted according to the form given at p. 441) from that in which any intermediate party to it is placed; for the engagement entered into by the acceptor is to pay the bill at maturity, or at any time after maturity, until his liability may have become barred by the Statute of Limitations. The acceptor, therefore, will not be discharged by non-presentment of the bill when due (z); nor, of course, can he require notice of dishonour (a).

In the elaborate judgment delivered by the Court of Common Pleas in Jones v. Broadhurst (b), the legal relation subsisting between the parties to a bill is fully commented on and explained. It is to be observed, the Court there remark, that the drawer and acceptor are parties to the same instrument as contractors with each other, and not as joint-contractors with a third person; and that by the indorsement of the bill independent and different contracts arise on the respective parts of the drawer and the acceptor with the indorsees. The acceptor is primarily and absolutely liable to pay the bill according to its tenor. The drawer is liable only upon the contingencies of the acceptor's or drawee's

(a) "A person who accepts a bill of exchange, or makes a promissory note payable on a given day is liable to pay it when that day arrives, although no demand is made. He must be aware of the contract which he has entered into; and he has no right to say that he is taken by surprise, for he is bound to provide for payment on the day when the bill becomes due:" per Channell, B., Malby v. Murrell, 5 H. & N. 823.

(a) In Heylyn v. Adamson, 2 Burr. 669, the question was solemnly debated, whether, in an action by indorsee against the payee and indorser of a bill, notice of dishonour must be given to the drawer (not being payee), it was there finally settled that no such notice is necessary, although the indorsee must prove a demand upon and due diligence to obtain payment from the acceptor. Lord Mansfield's judgment in this case, exhibiting some of the elementary principles applicable to bills of exchange and promissory notes, is well worthy of perusal.

(b) 9 C. B. 173; cited post, p. 485.

making default, and of the holder's performing certain conditions precedent—such as presenting the bill according to its tenor, and giving due notice of the failure of the acceptor or drawee to pay upon a proper presentment (c).

So requisite, indeed, is notice of dishonour to the maintenance of an action against any of the intermediate parties to a bill, that it is now a settled rule, that “knowledge of the probability, however strong, that a bill of exchange will be dishonoured, cannot operate as a notice of dishonour, or dispense with it” (d). Nor will mere knowledge of the fact, that the bill has been dishonoured, be equivalent to notice, for “notice means something more than knowledge” (e). Besides, it is quite competent to the holder of a bill to give credit to the acceptor, and the effect of this, in accordance with a well-known principle of law, would be, to discharge the parties collaterally liable on the bill. Some intimation accordingly must be given by the holder to any intermediate party whom he means to charge, that he does not intend to give credit to the acceptor.

Notice—when not requisite.

The well-known case of Bickerdike v. Bollman (f) shows, however, one rather important exception to the rule requiring notice of dishonour, viz., where the action is against a party who has drawn an accommodation bill having at the time no effects in the hands of the acceptor, and who had moreover no reasonable grounds for thinking that the bill would be paid. “The law,” says Buller, J., in that case, “requires notice to be given, for this reason, because it is presumed that the bill is drawn on account of the drawee's having effects of the drawer in his hands; and if the latter has notice that the bill is not accepted or not paid, he may

(c) As to the proper mode of presenting a bill, when accepted payable at a particular place, see post, pp. 452, 453.

(d) Caunt v. Thompson, 7 C. B. 400.

(e) Per Ashhurst, J., Tindal v. Brown, 1 T. R. 167; per Rolfe, B., Allen v. Edmundson, 2 Exch. 719, 725.

(f) 1 T. R. 405.

withdraw them immediately. But, if he has no effects in the other's hands, then he cannot be injured for want of notice." Further, in Carter v. Flower (g), the Court of Exchequer observe, that every bill will be presumed to have been drawn for value received, that is, on a person who was to accept and pay by reason of having value, and if the drawer draws on one who is not his debtor, nor has received any value for the bill, he must be considered (at least prima facie) to request him to accept and pay on account of the drawer, or, in other words, for his accommodation (h); and if the drawer does not provide funds in time, he necessarily knows that the bill will not be paid at maturity, and will not, therefore, be entitled to notice. But the case of an indorser of a bill of exchange stands on a different footing from that of a drawer. He is in the nature of a surety or guarantor of its payment on due presentment, and is presumed to know nothing about the arrangement between the drawee and drawer. He is, therefore, as a general rule, entitled to notice; nor, as against him, will the necessity for notice be dispensed with, by alleging that he indorsed without value, or had no effects in the hands of the prior parties to the bill (i).

An exception has thus, for the reasons above explained, been established to the rule which requires that notice of dishonour should be given. The decision in Bickerdike v. Bollman, however, as remarked in Carter v. Flower (k), has been "often reluctantly acquiesced in;" and the exception in question will not, we may fairly presume, be further extended by the Courts.

It can scarcely be too often repeated, that, in the particular

(g) 16 M. & W. 750-1.

(h) Ante, p. 442.

(i) Judgm., 16 M. & W. 751, where authorities in support of the propositions above laid down are cited. See, also, Bayley on Bills, 6th ed., pp. 29J-308.

(k) 16 M. & W. 748. See, also, Lafite v. Slatter, 6 Bing. 623; Cory v. Scott, 3 B. & Ald. 619, 622, 623; Mallace v. Siddle, 6 C. B., N. S., 494.

contract created by a bill of exchange, the acceptor is regarded as the principal contractor, whilst the indorsers are looked upon as his sureties; and this mode of considering the subject should steadily be kept in view, inasmuch as it will not merely facilitate a comprehension of the forms of pleadings applicable to bills, but must conduce to a right appreciation of the liabilities of the various parties whose names are attached to such instruments.

Not only the above important principle, but also the necessity for a presentment being made and notice of dishonour being given, may readily be kept in mind by the case of Rushton v. Aspinall (1), where, in an action against the indorser of a bill, the omission to allege a demand of payment and refusal by the acceptor on the day when the bill fell due was held fatal even after verdict, as was also the omission to allege notice of dishonour to the defendant. But, besides these points, the general principle just now mentioned is well stated and explained in the course of the argument in the case referred to, where it is said, that the contract by the indorser to pay the bill is not absolute but conditional, i.e., it is a contract to pay in the event of a demand being made on the acceptor at maturity, and his refusal; and the demand just specified must therefore be in order to render the indorser liable.

Such is the nature of the liability assumed by the acceptor of a bill of exchange—such the correlative right of the holder of the bill against him. Let us, in the next place, briefly inquire what particular kind of contract or engagement is entered into by the drawer and by the indorser of a bill respectively.

The nature of the contract which the drawer of a bill enters into with the indorsee and holder may be thus stated, almost in the words used by the Court of Exchequer in a modern case (m); where the bill is payable after date, the drawer undertakes that the drawee shall accept it if it is presented to him before the time of payment, and, having so accepted it, shall pay it when it is in due course presented for payment; or, if the bill should not be presented for acceptance at all, then the drawer undertakes that the drawee shall pay it when duly presented for payment. In the case of a bill made payable after sight, the drawer undertakes that the drawee shall, on the bill being presented to him within a reasonable time from its date, accept the same, and, having so accepted it, shall pay it when duly presented for payment according to its tenor (n).

Should the drawee make default in accepting the bill, the holder, upon the non-acceptance, followed in the case of an inland bill by notice thereof to the drawer, in the case of a foreign bill by protest and notice (o), acquires an immediate right of action against the drawer—a right of action, not in respect of any special damage caused by the non-acceptance, but a right of action on the bill, i e., to recover the full amount of the bill. The effect of the refusal to accept is, that the drawee says to the holder, “I will not pay your bill; you must go back to the drawer, and he must pay you.” The holder thus acquires by the non-acceptance the most complete right of action against the drawer which the nature of the case admits of. He is, however, bound on failure of acceptance to give immediate notice to the drawer, and if he omits to do so he forfeits all right of action against him, not only in respect of the default of acceptance, but also in respect of the subsequent non-payment (p).

A bill drawn upon a third person in discharge of a present

(m) Whitehead v. Walker, 9 M. & W. 506.

(n) Judgm., 9 M. & W. 514-5; Allen v. Kemble, 6 Moo. P. C. C. 314, cited per Martin, B., 9 Exch. 29.

(o) As to the peculiar form and nature of a foreign bill, see post, p. 468.

(p) Judgm., Whitehead v. Walker, 9 M. & W. 516.

debt may in truth be regarded as an offer by the drawer, that if the payee will give time for payment, he will give an order on his debtor (the acceptor) to pay a given sum at a given time and place. The payee agrees to take this order, and to give the time required, with a proviso that if the acceptor do not accept and pay the bill, and he the payee (or the holder of the bill) give notice to the drawer of that default, the drawer shall pay him the amount specified in the bill, with lawful interest (q).

The indorsement of a bill implies an undertaking from the indorser to the person in whose favour it is made, and to every other person to whom the bill may afterwards be transferred, similar to that which is implied by drawing a bill (r), so that every indorser is said to be in the nature of a new drawer (s).

Having now suggested to the reader some general idea of the mode in which bills of exchange are used in the commercial world, of the relative positions in which the parties whose names appear on them stand towards each other, and of their mutual rights and obligations, I shall direct attention more minutely to the nature of the acceptance, indorsement, and notice of dishonour; shall advert to the nature of a cheque, of a foreign bill, of a promissory note, and of a bank note; and specify some of the ordinary grounds of defence in actions upon such securities.

Nature of the acceptance.

In the first place, then, what is the precise nature of an acceptance? It is laid down, that an acceptance is an engagement to pay a bill according to the tenor of the acceptance; a general acceptance is an engagement to pay according to the tenor of the bill (t). This engagement is made by the drawee of the bill, or by some one per procu-

(q) Judgm., Gibbs v. Fremont, 9 Exch. 30.

(r) Bayley on Bills, 6th ed., p. 171.

(s) Ante, p. 444; per Parke, B.,

Allen v. Walker, 2 M. & W. 318; per Littledale, J., 5 Ad. & E. 439.

(t) Bayley on Bills, 6th ed., p. 174.

ration of the drawee, or for the honour of the drawee or of some other party to the bill.

Let me first speak of an acceptance by the drawee of a bill.

By the statute 1 & 2 Geo. 4, c. 78, s. 2, it is enacted that ^{1 & 2 Geo. 4, c. 78, s. 2.} "no acceptance of any inland bill of exchange shall be sufficient to charge any person, unless such acceptance be in writing on such bill, or, if there be more than one part of such bill, on one of the said parts" (u). With reference to this section, a curious question arose in Lindus v. Bradwell (x). There a bill of exchange, addressed to the defendant, W. B., was accepted by his wife in her own name; there was no evidence of any express authority given to the wife thus to accept the bill, but there was evidence that, on the bill, after it became due, being presented to the husband, he said that he knew all about it and would pay it. He was held to be liable as acceptor (y).

An acceptance is either absolute or conditional, and either according to or varying from the tenor of the bill (z).

The effect of an acceptance may, as against the drawer, be restrained by a contemporaneous agreement in writing between the acceptor and himself (a); but evidence of an oral agreement qualifying its operation would be inadmissible (b). If a person puts his name to a blank form of bill, either as drawer or acceptor, it may be filled up with any (u) See also 19 & 20 Vict. c. 97, s. 6. An inland bill is not usually drawn in parts.

(x) 5 C. B. 583. See Stephens v. Reynolds, 29 L. J., Ex., 278 (where Martin, B., observes that "a man may be liable on bills accepted in any name whatever, if by his authority"); S. C., 5 H. & N. 513; Gurney v. Evans, 3 H. & N. 122.

(y) As to the presumption respecting the date of an acceptance, see Roberts

v. Bathell, 12 C. B. 778.

As to revoking or cancelling an acceptance, see Cox v. Troy, 5 B. & Ald. 474; Ingham v. Primrose, 7 C. B., N. S., 82.

(z) Bayley on Bills, 6th ed., pp. 177-8; Fanshawe v. Peet, 4 H. & N. 1; Smith v. Vertue, 9 C. B., N. S., 214.

(a) Bowerbank v. Monteiro, 4 Taunt. 844.

(b) Aute, p. 375.

amount which the stamp impressed upon it will bear, and he will not be allowed to shelter himself from liability by any private instructions given orally or contained in a separate document, of which the rest of the world are ignorant (c).

An acceptance, although varying from the tenor of the bill, will bind the person making it, but the holder of a bill which has been transferred before acceptance is entitled, from the undertaking of the drawer and indorsers, to expect an absolute acceptance by the drawee engaging for payment of the entire sum mentioned in the bill according to its tenor, specifying (if none be mentioned in the body of the bill) a place for its payment, and expressing (if the bill be payable within a limited time after sight) the time of its presentment for acceptance ; and the holder may accordingly reject any acceptance proffered which does not satisfy these conditions (d).

1 & 2 Geo. 4,
c. 78, s. 1.

Again—the 1st section of the statute last cited (1 & 2 Geo. 4, c. 78) enacts, “that if any person shall accept a bill of exchange, payable at the house of a banker or other place, without further expression in his acceptance, such acceptance shall be deemed and taken to be to all intents and purposes a general acceptance of such bill ; but if the acceptor shall in his acceptance express that he accepts the bill payable at a banker’s house or other place only, and not otherwise or elsewhere, such acceptance shall be deemed and taken to be to all intents and purposes a qualified acceptance of such bill, and the acceptor shall not be liable to pay the said bill except in default of payment, when such payment shall have been first duly demanded at such banker’s house or other place.”

The effect of the above statutory provision (e) is, that a

(c) Per Pollock, C. B., Barker v. Sterne, 9 Exch. 686 (explaining Young v. Grote, 4 Bing. 253). See, also, Montague v. Perkins, 187 ; Temple v.

Pullen, 8 Exch. 389 ; Aude v. Dixon, 6 Exch. 869.

(d) Bayley on Bills, 6th ed., p. 202.

(e) As to the state of the law upon bill of exchange drawn generally on a party may be accepted in three different forms: either (1) generally, or (2) payable at a particular banker's, or (3) payable at a particular banker's and not elsewhere.

(1.) If the drawee accepts generally, he undertakes to pay the bill at maturity.

(2.) If he accepts payable at a banker's, he undertakes (since the statute) to pay the bill at maturity when presented for payment either to himself or at the banker's.

(3.) If he accepts payable at a banker's and not elsewhere, he contracts to pay the bill at maturity provided it is presented at the banker's, but not otherwise (f).

Whether a bill be accepted in one or in another of the above forms may be most material. In the first place, where a bill drawn generally on a party is accepted generally, it will be remembered (g) that presentment is not (unless the bill be payable at or after sight) requisite as a preliminary to charging the acceptor. "No request or presentment is necessary to charge the acceptor of a bill or the maker of a note, he is bound to pay it at maturity, and to find out the holder for that purpose" (h). The general rule is, that "the debtor must seek out his creditor" (i). And a person who guaranties payment of a bill by the acceptor, cannot defend himself on the ground of want of presentment, unless he has sustained some damage by the laches (k) of the holder (l).

Where a bill is made payable in the body at a particular this point prior to the passing of the stat. 1 & 2 Geo. 4, c. 78, see judgm., Gibb v. Mather, 8 Bing. 220.

(f) Judgm., Halstead v. Skelton, 5 Q. B. 93-4.

(g) Ante, p. 445.

(h) Per Parke, B., Walton v. Mas-call, 13 M. & W. 458; Norton v. Ellam, 2 M. & W. 461.

(i) Per Colman, J., Hitchcock v.

Humfrey, 5 M. & Gr. 563.

(k) "Laches" has been defined to be "a neglect to do something which, by law, a man is obliged to do." Per Lord Ellenborough, C. J., Sebag v. Abulbol, 4 M. & S. 462; cited per Lord Tenterden, C. J., 4 B. & C. 2.

(l) Hitchcock v. Humfrey, 5 M. & Gr. 559, 572.

place (m), or is accepted payable at a particular place, but is not made or accepted payable there only, the holder is not bound to present it at the banker's (n), in order to charge the acceptor. And, accordingly, where the holder of a bill, accepted payable at a banker's, but not made payable there only, omitted to present the same until three weeks after it was due, during all which time the banker had in his hands a balance in favour of the acceptor exceeding the amount of his bill, the acceptor was held not to be discharged by the failure of the banker in the interval (o).

Where, however, a bill is accepted payable at a particular place and "not otherwise or elsewhere," presentment at that place, though not necessarily on the very day when the bill falls due (p), is by the statute necessary in order that the acceptor may be chargeable.

The above statute applies only as between the acceptor of a bill and other parties to it: an acceptance may be still special as regards other parties to a bill, although general as against the acceptor (q). The statute applies where an action is brought against the acceptor of a bill, but it does not extend to an action against the drawer or indorser; at all events, if a bill be addressed to the drawee at his residence, and the drawee accept it payable at a banker's, presentment at the banker's must be proved in an action against the drawer or indorser (q).

The doctrine of estoppel has some application as against the acceptor of a bill. In an action by indorsee against acceptor of a bill made payable to the order of the drawer, the defendant cannot dispute the signature of the drawer (r),

Application of doctrine of estoppel as against acceptor.

(m) Selby v. Eden, 3 Bing. 611;
Fayle v. Bird, 6 B. & C. 531.

(n) See the judgm., Halstead v. Skellon, 5 Q. B. 93; Blake v. Beaumont, 4 M. & Gr. 7.

(o) Turner v. Hayden, 4 B. & C. 1; Scbag v. Abubol, 4 M. & S. 462.

(p) See Rhodes v. Gent, 5 B. & Ald. 244, 246.

(q) Saul v. Jones, 28 L. J., Q. B. 37, 40; S. C., 1 K. & E. 59; Gibb v. Mather, 8 Bing. 214, 221.

(r) Saunderson v. Collman, 4 M. & Gr. 269.

nor can he plead that the drawer had no capacity to draw or to indorse (s), as by reason of her having been a married woman at the time of her drawing, and of her having continued to be so until the time of her indorsing the bill; in such a case the defendant cannot "blow hot and cold;" having, by his acceptance, undertaken to pay to the order of the drawer, he cannot, when sued as acceptor, set up her incapacity, existing at the time of his acceptance, to make an order (t). The acceptor of a bill is not, however, estopped from pleading her own coverture at the date of the acceptance (u). Nor is the acceptor estopped from denying the handwriting of an indorser, or his ability to indorse (x).

Where a bill of exchange is accepted or indorsed per procuration (y), these words give notice to all persons that the agent is acting under a special and limited authority, and the party holding such a bill has to establish the existence of the authority (z). A person taking a bill thus accepted (a) or indorsed (b) will therefore, if prudent, make inquiry as to whether or not the special authority confided to the agent has been properly pursued; should it turn out that the agent has exceeded his authority in accepting or indorsing the bill, the holder of the bill will have no redress as against the supposed principal (c). If, however, a bill be addressed to a

(s) Haltifax v. Lyle, 3 Exch. 446; Prince v. Brunatte, 1 Bing. N. C. 435, 438; Ashpüel v. Bryan, 3 B. & S. 474, 489; Taylor v. Croker, 4 Esp. 187; Pitt v. Chappelow, 8 M. & W. 616; Braithwaite v. Gardiner, 8 Q. B. 473. See Beeman v. Duck, 11 M. & W. 251.

(t) Smith v. Marsack, 6 C. B. 486. See Lord v. Hall, 8 C. B. 627; Baker v. Bank of Australasia, 1 C. B., N. S., 515.

(u) Cannam v. Farmer, 3 Exch. 698.

(x) Smith v. Chester, 1 T. B. 654.

(y) Ante, p. 450.

(z) Judgm., Grant v. Norway, 10 C. B. 688-9. See Smith v. Johnson, 3 H. & N. 222.

(a) Attwood v. Munnings, 7 B. & C. 285; cited per Pollock, C. B., Smith v. McGuire, 3 H. & N. 560; per Park, J., Wuthington v. Herring, 5 Bing. 458.

(b) Alexander v. Mackenzie, 6 C. B. 766.

(c) Stagg v. Elliott, 12 C. B., N. S., 373.

firm, and accepted "per proc.," though really without authority from the firm, by one of the partners in his individual name, the party signing the bill will be liable upon it (d). A stranger who accepts a bill per procuration of the drawee without his sanction, may be liable in an action of tort for the misrepresentation of which he has been guilty towards the holder (e).

Acceptance
for honour.

For the purpose either of promoting the negotiation of a bill where the drawee's credit is suspected, or to save the reputation and prevent the suing of some of the parties to a bill where the drawee cannot be found, or is not capable of making himself responsible (ex. gr., by reason of his infancy), or refuses acceptance, an acceptance by a stranger is not uncommon; this is called an acceptance for the honour of the person on whose account it is made, and enures to the benefit of all the parties subsequent to that person (f). An acceptance for honour offers, accordingly, an exception to the general rule, that he alone can accept a bill and render himself responsible upon it as acceptor to whom it is addressed (g).

If the acceptor for honour pay, he is entitled to have recourse for repayment to the person for whose honour he accepted, and to all other parties to the bill who are liable to that person (h).

Indorsement.

The indorsement of a bill, as already stated (p. 443), may be in blank (i), or it may be special. By a blank indorse-

(d) Owen v. Van Uster, 10 C. B. 318, and cases there cited. See Nicholls v. Diamond, 9 Exch. 154; Mare v. Charles, 5 E. & B. 978; Penrose v. Murtyr, E. B. & E. 492, 503.

(e) Polhill v. Walter, 3 B. & Ad. 114.

(f) Bayley on Bills, 6th ed., p. 178.

(g) See Polhill v. Walter, 3 B. & Ad. 114, 122; Davis v. Clarke, 6 Q. B. 16.

(h) Bayley on Bills, 6th ed., p. 181. As to the nature of an acceptance for honour, see, further, Williams v. Germaine, 7 B. & C. 468, 477; Hoare v. Cazenove, 16 East, 391; 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 53.

(i) The stat. 17 Geo. 3, c. 30, s. 1 (made perpetual by the 27 Geo. 3, c. 16), which enacted that if a bill or note be for less than 5*l.*, the indorsement must mention the name ment, the indorser directs the bill to be paid to any lawful holder of it; by a special indorsement the indorser directs it to be paid to a particular person mentioned in the indorsement, or his order (k).

In either of the above cases, in order to complete the title of the holder by indorsement there must be a delivery to him, i. e., a delivery unrestricted (l) and for the admitted purpose of transferring the bill (m). Though if a bill be indorsed in blank to A., B. may, by A.'s authority, be constituted holder of the bill, and may as such sue upon it (n).

Under a plea traversing the indorsement of a bill, evidence is admissible that the alleged indorser wrote his name on the bill, and delivered it to the alleged indorsee, for the express purpose of retiring (o) other bills, and on the express condition that they should be retired forthwith; and that such condition has not been complied with (p). Where, however, E. drew and wrote his name on the back of a bill, and and place of abode of the indorsee, bear date at or before the time of making it, and be attested by a subscribing witness, is repealed by 26 & 27 Vict. c. 105, s. 1, which Act is to continue in force for three years (s. 2). See also stat. 48 Geo. 3, c. 88; and the references to that Statute in "Chitty on Bills," 10th ed. (by Russell and MacLachlan); and see Tilsley's New Stamp Acts, 6th ed., p. 59.

If an indorsement be so worded as to restrain the negotiability of the instrument—thus, "pay the contents to J. S. only," it is then called a restrictive indorsement. Such an indorsement puts an end to the negotiability of the instrument. See further, as to restrictive indorsements, Smith M. L., 6th ed., pp. 230, 231; Sigourney v. Lloyd, 8 B. & C. 622.

(k) Adams v. Jones, 12 Ad. & E. 459, cited Harmer v. Steele, 4 Exch.

15. As to the effect of an indorsement in blank, see also Walker v. Macdonald, 2 Exch. 527.

(l) Judgm., Castrique v. Buttigieg, 10 Moo. P. C. C. 108, 109.

(m) Marston v. Allen, 8 M. & W. 494; Jenkins v. Tongue, 29 L. J., Ex., 147; Adams v. Jones, 12 Ad. & E. 455; Gough v. Findon, 7 Exch. 48; per Erle, J., Manley v. Boycot, 2 B. & B. 51; Bromage v. Lloyd, 1 Exch. 32; per Parke, B., Austin v. Kolle, 1d 588; Lysaght v. Bryant, 9 C. B. 46; Harmer v. Steele, 4 Exch. 1; Morris v. Oliver, 15 Q. B. 589; Samuel v. Green, 10 Q. B. 262.

(n) Law v. Parnell, 7 C. B., N. S., 282; see Ancona v. Marks, 7 H. & N. 686.

(o) As to the meaning of this term, see Elsam v. Denny, 15 C. B. 87; Bell v. Buckley, 11 Exch. 631.

(p) Bell v. Vic. Ingentre, 12 Q. B. 317.

delivered it to B. to get it discounted, and B. deposited it for value with T., upon the terms, that, if not redeemed by a certain day, it was to be sold, it was held that there had been a valid indorsement and transfer of the bill from E. to T. (q).

For the purposes of currency and the advantages flowing from an unchecked circulation of bills of exchange, our Law Merchant provides that a bond fide holder for value of a bill indorsed in blank shall not be affected by an intermediate fraud, nor bound to inquire whether the bill has been properly transferred or not. By that law, every person having possession of a bill has (notwithstanding any fraud on his part, either in acquiring or transferring it) full authority to transfer such bill, but with this limitation, that, to make such transfer valid, there must be a delivery, either by him or by some subsequent holder of the bill, to some one who receives such bill bond fide and for value, and who is either himself the holder of it, or a person through whom the holder claims. Anything which shows that the restriction thus imposed on the general rule applies, shows that the party making the transfer had no authority to do so, and that the transfer is not valid (r).

If, then, the holder of a bill puts his name on the back of it, and delivers it to his agent, who delivers it to a third person for value, that is an indorsement from the holder to such third person. And, where a bill is payable to bearer, any person who is the holder for value may sue upon it, whether the party from whom he has taken it had a title or not (s).

The preceding remarks are applicable to a bill payable to bearer, and transferable by delivery: where, however,

(q) Barber v. Richards, 6 Exch. 63. Exch. 63.
See Lord v. Hall, 8 C. B. 627.

(r) Judgm., Marston v. Allen, 8 M. & W. 504 5; Barber v. Richards, 6 1 B. & P. 618.
(s) Per Parke, B., Barber v. Richards, supra, citing Collins v. Martin, indorsement is necessary to the transfer of a bill (t), the indorsement will convey no title except as against the person making it, unless it be made by one who has a right to make the transfer (u).

In case, then, of loss, by theft or accident, of a bill assignable by mere delivery, the thief or finder may confer a title by transferring it; if it be assignable by indorsement only, he cannot confer such title, except as against himself (x).

From the propositions thus stated, in the words of Mr. J. Bayley, consequences flow, of much importance to the commercial world in general, and especially to bankers, whose principal duty consists in cashing negotiable securities on behalf of their customers.

The relation which subsists between a banker and his customer seems to be this:—"The customer lends money to the banker, and the banker promises to repay that money, and, whilst indebted, to pay the whole or any part of the debt to any person to whom his creditor, the customer, in the ordinary way requires him to pay it" (y). The ordinary mode of paying off the debt due from the banker is by honouring cheques and bills made payable at the bank, where he has authority from his customer for that purpose.

When a bill is accepted payable at a banker's, the making the acceptance payable there is tantamount to an order on the part of the acceptor to the banker to pay the bill to the person who is, according to the Law Merchant, capable of giving a good discharge for it. If the bill is payable to order, (t) A person to whom a cheque or bill of exchange payable to order, but undorsed, is delivered (though for value), acquires no better title under it than the person had from whom he received it: Whistler v. Forster, 14 C. B., N. S., 248.

(u) Bayley on Bills, 6th ed., pp. 138-9; Harrop, app., Fisher, resp.,

10 C. B., N. S., 196.

(x) Bayley on Bills, 6th ed., pp. 138, 139.

(y) Per Alderson, B., 16 Q. B. 575. See Pott v. Clegg, 16 M. & W. 321; Hill v. Foley, 2 H. L. Ca. 23; Thompson v. Bell, 10 Exch. 10; Tassell v. Cooper, 9 C. B. 509.

it is an authority to pay the bill to any person who becomes holder by a genuine indorsement. If the bill be originally payable to bearer, or if it afterwards receive a genuine indorsement in blank, the acceptance constitutes an authority to the banker to pay the bill to the person who seems to be the holder (z).

A banker, however, who pays a bill bearing a forged indorsement, cannot charge his customer with the amount (a), for "the general rule is, that no title can be obtained through a forgery" (b). And should the banker wish to avoid the responsibility of deciding on the genuineness of indorsements, he may require his customers to domicile their bills at their own offices, and to honour them by drawing cheques upon the bank. It seems, however, reasonable to say, that where a bill, bearing a suspicious indorsement, is presented for payment to a banker, he will be justified in deferring payment of the bill for a reasonable time, in order that he may make inquiries as to its genuineness (c).

Cheque.

A cheque is, in legal effect, an inland bill of exchange, drawn upon a banker and payable to bearer on demand (d). This particular instrument is, consequently, subject, in

(z) Robarts v. Tucker, 16 Q. B. 560; recognised and distinguished in Woods v. Thiedemann, 1 H. & C. 478.

(a) Robarts v. Tucker, 12 Q. B. 560. As to the banker's remedy against the person presenting the bill, see Cocks v. Masterman, 9 B. & C. 902.

As to the liability of a banker who, by mistake, cancels the acceptance on a bill, which he afterwards receives orders not to pay, see Warwick v. Rogers, 5 M. & Gr. 340; Robson v. Bennett, 2 Taunt. 388.

(b) Per Tindal, C. J., Johnson v. Windle, 3 Bing. N. C. 229.

(c) See Robarts v. Tucker, 16 Q. B. 577-579.

(d) See Byles on Bills, 8th ed., p. 13; 5 C. B. 485 (a); Grant v. Vaughan, 3 Burr. 1516; Keene v. Beard, 8 C. B., N. S., 372.

A cheque is not usually expressed to be payable "on demand." See Doe d. Church v. Pontifex, 9 C. B. 229.

As to a cheque payable to A. B. or order on demand, see Whistler v. Forster, 14 C. B., N. S., 248.

Being payable to bearer, a cheque passes by delivery (see Samuel v. Green, 10 Q. B. 262; Simpkins v. Potheary, 5 Exch. 253). It is not ordinarily indorsed or accepted.

The stat. 18 & 19 Vict. c. 67, applies to cheques: Eyre v. Waller, 5 H. & N. 460.

general, to the same rules as regulate the rights and liabilities of parties to bills of exchange (e), modified, however, by certain customs and usages which have been engrafted on the law applicable to bills, and hold in regard to cheques exclusively (f).

As in the case of an ordinary bill of exchange, so in that of a cheque, a banker has no authority from his principal to pay any such draft unless signed or authenticated by him and presented by some party who can give a lawful discharge for it: a banker, therefore, who pays a forged cheque, will clearly have to bear the loss himself, and cannot throw it on his customer. So, if a banker pays a cheque which has been fraudulently altered as regards the amount, he will have

(e) Per Maule, J., Webb v. Inwards, 5 C. B. 485.

No time less than six years is unreasonable for presentment of a cheque for payment, unless some loss is occasioned to the drawer by the delay: Laws v. Rand, 3 C. B., N. S., 442. See Rickford v. Ridge, 2 Camp. N. P. C. 537; recognised in Hare v. Henty, 10 C. B., N. S., 88.

(f) Of such usages, one of the most remarkable is that of crossing the cheque with a banker's name, or with the words "& Co.," as to the precise effect whereof see 19 & 20 Vict. c. 25; 21 & 22 Vict. c. 79.

The days of grace are not allowed upon a cheque: Story on Promissory Notes, s. 490.

In Mullick v. Radakissen, 9 Moo. P. C. C. 46, it was observed that a banker's cheque "is a peculiar sort of instrument, in many respects resembling a bill of exchange, but in some entirely different. A cheque does not require acceptance; in the ordinary course it is never accepted; it is not intended for circulation, it is given for immediate payment; it is not entitled to days of grace; and though it is, strictly speaking, an order upon a debtor, by a creditor, to pay to a third person the whole or part of a debt, yet in the ordinary understanding of persons it is not so considered. It is more like an appropriation of what is treated as ready money in the hands of the banker, and in giving the order to appropriate to a creditor, the person giving the cheque must be considered as the person primarily liable to pay, who orders his debt to be paid at a particular place, and as being much in the same position as the maker of a promissory note, or the acceptor of a bill of exchange, payable at a particular place and not elsewhere, who has no right to insist on immediate presentment at that place." Cited in Mr. Grant's learned argument in Keene v. Beard, 8 C. B., N. S., 374, where the holder and indorsee of a cheque payable to A. B. or bearer, and by him indorsed, was held entitled to sue A. B. upon the cheque.

As to stamping cheques, see Chitt. Bills, 10th ed., 343; 23 Vict. c. 15.

to suffer, unless he can show that the party out of whose funds and on whose behalf he assumed to pay, by his own gross negligence and laches, facilitated the commission of the fraud (g).

Undoubtedly, says Best, C. J. (h), a banker who pays a forged cheque is in general bound to pay the amount again to his customer, because in the first instance he pays without authority, and because it is the duty of the banker to be acquainted with his customer's handwriting. But, though that rule be perfectly well established, yet if it be the fault of the customer that the banker pays what he ought not to pay, the latter cannot be called on to pay again (i).

To a like effect, in another case (j), Bayley, J., observes, that "the banker, as the depository of the customer's money, is bound to pay from time to time such sums as the latter may order (k). If, unfortunately, he pays money belonging to the customer upon an order which is not genuine, he must suffer; and, to justify the payment, he must show that the order is genuine, not in signature only, but in every respect." In the case which gave occasion to these remarks, the cheque out of which the action originated had been altered by the (g) Young v. Grote, 4 Bing. 253, commented on and explained per Pollock, C. B., Baker v. Stone, 9 Exch. 686-7; Saxan v. North British Australasian Co., 2 H. & C. 175, cited post; Johnson v. Windle, 3 Bing. N. C. 225, 229; British Linen Co. v. Caledonian Insur. Co., 4 Macq. H. L. Ca. 107. See Foster v. Green, 7 H. & N. 881, 886.

(h) Young v. Grote, supra.

(i) This qualification of the rule as to the banker's liability holds only where the customer has been guilty of gross negligence. In The Bank of Ireland v. Trustees of Evans' Char- ties, 5 H. L. Ca. 389, 410, Parke, R., on behalf of the Judges, observes, "If a man should lose his cheque-book, or neglect to lock the desk in which it is kept, and a servant or stranger should take it up, it is impossible, in our opinion, to contend that a banker paying his forged cheque would be entitled to charge his customer with that payment."

(j) Hall v. Fuller, 5 B. & C. 757.

(k) See Marzetti v. Williams, 1 B. & Ad. 415; Rolin v. Steward, 14 C. B. 595; Woodland v. Fear, 7 E. & B. 519, 521.

holder, so as to indicate a much larger sum as payable under it than it had in the first instance been drawn for; the cheque so altered was paid by the banker, who then claimed to charge his customer with the difference between the two amounts. It was held, by applying the principle of law already stated, that he was not justified in doing so, there having been no laches in the customer.

For further information as to the rights of the holder of a worthless cheque or bill payable to bearer, and transferred without the indorsement of the transferor, the reader is referred to the remarks hereinafter made in regard to the transfer of bank notes, and to the defence of "no consideration" by way of answer to an action on a bill or note.

With regard to the indorsement of a bill of exchange a few additional observations will suffice. The transfer of a bill by indorsement may be either before or after acceptance, either before or after it has arrived at maturity. If a bill be indorsed over before it is due, but after acceptance has been refused, the indorsee taking the bill with knowledge of its having been dishonoured will be liable to the same objections as might have been raised against his indorser (l). If an acceptor pay a bill at maturity, the effect of so doing is to take it altogether out of circulation, the bill "has done its work and is no longer a negotiable instrument. No person could sue on it; no person remains liable on it. If put into circulation again, it becomes a new bill payable at sight, and must have a fresh stamp" (m). Where, however, an indorser retires a bill, he merely withdraws it from circulation in so far as he himself is concerned, and may hold the bill with the same remedies as he would have had if in due course he had been called upon to pay, and had paid, the amount to his immediate indorsee (n). An indorser therefore who pays a bill may subsequently indorse or negotiate it (o).

(l) Bayley on Bills, 6th ed., p. 163. See Goodman v. Harvey, 4 Ad. & E. 870.

(m) Per Lord Denman, C. J., Lazarus v. Cowie, 3 Q. B. 465, commented on per Maule, J., Jewell v. Parr, 13 C.

B. 916-7; and see Parr v. Jewell, 16 C. B. 684, 711; Holroyd v. Whitehead, 1 Marsh. 128; Stat. 55 Geo. 3, c. 184, s. 19. See Morley v. Culverwell, 7 M. & W. 174.

Again, where a bill of exchange, indorsed in blank for value before it is due, is transferred by the indorsee after it has become due, by delivery only, without any fresh indorsement, the transferee takes, as against the acceptor, any title which the intermediate indorsee possessed at the date of the indorsement to him (p). And where an overdue bill is transferred by indorsement, the indorsee "takes it subject to all the equities with which it was incumbered while in the hands of the person from whom he received it," though not subject to claims arising out of collateral matters (q). But the bond fide holder of a bill or note cannot be prejudiced in the rights which he, prima facie, has, according to the terms of the instrument, by knowledge subsequently communicated to him after he has become the holder of it, or even by knowledge which he has at the time when he takes it, if there is no evidence of a special agreement at such time to affect the rights and liabilities of the parties (r).

In an action by indorsee against indorser, the latter is estopped from denying the drawing of the bill and its indorsement to himself (s).

When a bill of exchange has been presented (t) and

Notice of dishonour

(n) Elsam v. Denny, 23 L. J., C. P., 190; S. C., 15 C. B. 87.

The effect of payment of a negotiable instrument is further considered, post, pp. 485 et seq.

(o) Bayley on Bills, 6th ed., p. 167; Callow v. Lawrence, 3 M. & S. 95; with which compare Beck v. Robley, 1 H. Bl. 89, n.

(p) Fairclough v. Paria, 9 Exch. 690.

(q) Smith M. L., 6th ed., p. 233, where cases in support of the text are collected; Holmes v. Kidd, 3 H. & N.

891; Oulds v. Harrison, 10 Exch. 572; Parr v. Jewell, 16 C. B. 684; Whitehead v. Walker, 10 M. & W. 696; Story Prom. Notes, 2nd ed., p. 216; Carruthers v. West, 11 Q. B. 143; Lloyd v. Howard, 15 Q. B. 995; Harmer v. Steele, 4 Exch. 1.

(r) Judgm., Manley v. Boycot, 2 E. & B. 56.

(s) Macgregor v. Rhodes, 6 E. & B. 266.

(t) As to presentment, see further, post. As to presentment of a bill accepted payable at a banker's, ante, p.

dishonoured, the holder may either resort to his immediate indorser, giving him due notice of dishonour, or he may resort to any or all of the other indorsers or prior parties, intermediate between him and the acceptor, whose names appear upon the bill, giving to each of these parties respectively notice of dishonour in the same manner as if each were the sole indorser (u); subject, however, to this qualification, that the holder may avail himself of any notice which has been given in due time by any previous indorser, who at the time of giving such notice was under liability to the holder (x).

The effect of the qualification just specified is explained, and the question, within what time must notice of dishonour be given, is answered by Mr Justice Maule in a recent case (y). "The rule," says that learned Judge, "is that the party who is sought to be charged upon the bill is entitled to prompt notice of its dishonour by the acceptor. Where the parties live in the same town, it is said that the notice must be given in time to be received in the course of the day next after the dishonour of the bill, or after the party giving the notice had himself received notice of dishonour. There must be due diligence—not that the party is bound to neglect all other business, and, the moment he receives notice, send a notice to those he means to charge. He has a whole day, and so much more as will enable him using due diligence to communicate the notice to the party sought to be charged. A day is not in all cases the limit. If there are many indorsers, and the notice in fact travels through them all—if there has been no want of diligence between any two of them—whatever time is occupied the notice will be good.

452; Wilmot v. Williams, 7 M. & Gr. 1017.

(u) Story on Promissory Notes, s. 330.

(x) Lysaght v. Bryant, 9 C. B. 46; Harrison v. Ruscoe, 15 M. & W. 231;

Chapman v. Keane, 2 Ad. & E. 193; Wilson v. Swabey, 1 Stark. 34. See also Bayley on Bills, 6th ed., p. 251.

(y) Rowe v. Tipper, 13 C. B. 249, 256.

... The rule is not that each indorser has a day, but the rule is, that due diligence shall be observed in the actual state of circumstances in which the notice is given" (z).

No precise form of words is necessary to constitute a good notice of dishonour, nor will a slight inaccuracy or misdescription invalidate it, provided the party to whom it is given cannot reasonably be supposed to have been misled thereby (a). The rule with reference to notice, laid down in Solarte v. Palmer (b), was, that "such notice ought, in express terms or by necessary implication, to convey full information that the bill has been dishonoured." And it has since been laid down that "where the terms of the notice are such that it appears by reasonable intendment, and would be inferred by any man of business, that the bill has been presented to the acceptor and not paid by him, although it does not appear by express terms or necessary implication, that is sufficient" (c).

Accordingly, a notice of dishonour, whether written or verbal, will be good which conveys to the mind of the person to whom it is addressed the three following facts, so that with common understanding he may comprehend them:—viz., 1st, that the bill was presented when due; 2ndly, that it was dishonoured; and 3rdly, that the party addressed is to be held liable for the payment of it (d).

(z) As to the question, what is due diligence, see Bateman v. Joseph, 12 East, 433; Ronce v. Tipper, supra.

Under ordinary circumstances, each party has a day within which to give notice of dishonour. The holder has his day to give notice to any party whom he may seek to charge; and each of the prior indorsers in turn has his day: per Burrough, J., Dobree v. Eastwood, 3 Car. & P. 250, cited per Jervis, C. J., 13 C. B. 255.

(a) Mellersh v. Rippen, 7 Exch. 578; Chard v. Fox, 14 Q. B. 200; Armstrong v. Christiani, 5 C. B. 687; Caunt v. Thompson, 7 C. B. 400.

(b) 1 Bing. N. C. 194; S. C., 2 Cl. & F. 93. As to Solarte v. Palmer, see per Pollock, C. B., 3 H. & N. 459.

(c) Per Wightman, J., Paul v. Joel, 4 H. & N. 356, citing, per Parke, B., Helger v. Stevenson, 2 M. & W. 799.

(d) Per Parke, B., Lewis v. Gompertz, 6 M. & W. 402-3; per Lord Campbell, C. J., Everard v. Watson, 1 E. & B. 801 (where Solarte v. Palmer, supra, is commented on). In Caunt v. Thompson, 7 C. B. 400, the

Where, on the day after a bill became due, the holder's clerk called upon the drawer and told him that the bill had been duly presented, and that the acceptor could not pay it, to which the drawer answered that "he would see the holder about it," it was held that the jury might from this conversation infer that the drawer had due notice of dishonour (e).

Besides questions respecting the sufficiency of notice of dishonour in point of form, others of no little difficulty present themselves in regard to the sufficiency of the proof offered of the receipt of the notice by the defendant; as to the degree of accuracy and explicitness which may be required in addressing it; and generally as to what will constitute reasonable diligence on the part of the holder of the bill in forwarding the notice of dishonour to the party whom he seeks to charge. Upon such points the cases below cited may usefully be consulted (f). And upon this part of the subject I would merely add that the onus will clearly lie upon the plaintiff of showing that his right of action was complete before the commencement of the suit, i.e., before the issuing of the writ of summons (g).

The remarks to be found in this chapter respecting inland cases as to the sufficiency of notice of dishonour were much considered. They seem to establish (as there observed per Car.), that, "in order to make a prior holder responsible, he must derive—from some person entitled to call for payment—information that the bill has been dishonoured, and that the party is in a condition to sue him,—from which he may infer that he will be held responsible:" Bailey v. Porter, 14 M. & W. 44; Paul v. Joel, 4 H. & N. 355; S. C., 3 Id. 455. See Jennings v. Roberts, 4 E. & B. 615.

(e) Metcalfe v. Richardson, 11 C. B. 10, 11.

(f) Burmester v. Barron, 17 Q. B. 828; Clarke v. Sharpe, 3 M. & W. 166; Houego v. Couene, 2 Id. 348.

In Woodcock v. Houldsworth, 16 M. & W. 124, Parke, B., says, "Notices of dishonour are generally put into the post; where that is done, although by some mistake or delay at the post-office the letter fails to reach its destination in proper time, the party who posted it ought not to be prejudiced; he has done all that was usual and necessary, and he does not guarantee the certainty or correctness of the post-office delivery."

(g) Castrique v. Bernabo, 6 Q. B. 498; ante, p. 110.

may readily be applied to foreign bills, provided the peculiar qualities attaching to instruments of this latter class are kept in view. They will here be very briefly specified.

Foreign bill
—what.

A bill drawn or payable abroad, is a foreign bill (h), the acceptance of which must now be in writing (i).

The form of a foreign usually differs somewhat from that of an inland bill; the first-mentioned being often drawn at one or more usances: the “usage” being the period for payment customary as between the countries or particular places where the bill is respectively drawn and made payable (k).

Foreign bills, moreover, are usually drawn in parts—three, or even more—which circulate together, or of which one or more parts may be circulated whilst another is forwarded for acceptance (l). Each part, however, should specify or refer to the other parts of the set, and express that payment of it is conditional on the other parts of like “tenor and date” as itself remaining unpaid at maturity (m).

Another particular wherein a foreign differs from an inland bill is this, that if acceptance or payment of it be refused, it must by the custom of merchants, in order to charge the drawer, be protested, the protest being a solemn declaration written by a notary under a copy of the bill, stating that payment or acceptance of it has been demanded and refused, the reason (if any) assigned for such refusal, and that the bill is consequently protested. This formality is required in case of dishonour of a foreign bill in conformity with (h) Mahoney v. Ashlin, 2 B. & Ad. 478; Story on Bills, s. 22; Barker v. Sterns, 9 Exch. 684; see 19 & 20 Vict. c. 97, s. 7.

(i) 19 & 20 Vict. c. 97, s. 6.

(k) See Byles on Bills, 8th ed., p. 71. The form of a foreign bill of exchange may be seen in Poirier v. Morris, 2 E. & B. 95; Gibbs v. Fremont, 9 Exch. 25, Story on Bills, s. 26.

(l) See Byles on Bills, 8th ed., p. 367; Pinard v. Klockmann, 3 B. & S. 388.

(m) Story on Bills, s. 67.

As to the stamp requisite for a foreign bill, see Chitt. Bills, 10th ed., 72; 17 & 18 Vict. c. 83, Sched.; 23 Vict. c. 15 the laws of most other countries, and because satisfactory evidence of dishonour is thus afforded to the drawer or indorser; for foreign Courts give credit to the acts of public functionaries, in like manner as a protest under the seal of a foreign notary is good evidence of dishonour in our Courts (n).

Besides the peculiarities above specified as incident to foreign bills, we must remember that, where a bill of exchange drawn in one country is payable in another, a question of much importance and difficulty sometimes presents itself—Is the lex loci contractûs or the lex loci solutionis to be applied to determine the rights and liabilities of the parties?

Let us, by way of showing how the difficulty just alluded to may arise, first consider the case of a bill drawn abroad and accepted in this country. Here the drawer, by his contract, undertakes that the drawee shall accept and shall afterwards pay the bill, according to its tenor, at the place and domicile of the drawee, if it be drawn and accepted generally:—at the place appointed for payment, if it be drawn and accepted payable at a different place from the place of domicile of the drawee. If, then, this contract of the drawer be broken by the drawee, either by non-acceptance or by non-payment, the drawer's liability for payment of the bill will be regulated by the law existing—not where the bill was to be paid by the drawee, but—where he, the drawer, made his contract (o).

In accordance with the proposition just stated, it has been held, that, if a bill of exchange, on the face of which no interest is reserved (p), is drawn in one country payable in (n) Byles on Bills, 8th ed., chap. 19, where ample information respecting the protest and noting of foreign bills is afforded. See Bonar v. Mitchell, 5 Exch. 415.

(o) Allen v. Kemble, 6 Moo. P. C.

C. 314. See Rothschild v. Currie, 1 Q. B. 43; and, generally, as to applying the lex loci contractûs, see ante, p. 45; Ruckmaboye v. Mottickund, 5 Moo. P. C. C. 234.

(p) If a rate of interest be expressly, another, the drawer is liable on its dishonour to pay as damages interest at the current rate in the country where the bill was drawn (q). But although a bill drawn at A. primâ facie bears interest as a debt at A. would do if nothing else appear, yet, if that bill be indorsed at B., the indorser is a new drawer, and it may, as remarked by the Court of Exchequer in the case below cited (q), be a question whether this indorsement is a new drawing of a bill at B., or only a new drawing of the same bill, that is, a bill expressly made at A. If the former view be correct, the bill thus indorsed will carry interest at the rate at B.; if the latter view be correct, it would carry interest according to the rate at A. (r).

Again, if a bill be drawn in one country, not specifying any rate of interest, and be accepted generally in another, upon dishonour of the bill the rate of interest payable will, as against the acceptor, have to be calculated according to the law of the country of his domicile, for a contract to pay generally is governed by the law of the place where it is made (s). And if a bill be sent from one country by the drawer to the drawee in another, who there accepts it generally, and returns it to the drawer, the contract raised by the acceptance must be considered as made in the country of the drawee (t). Where, however, a bill drawn and accepted abroad is made payable here, the mode of payment, and the consequences of non-payment, will, in the absence of any express stipulation by the parties, be governed by our law (u).

or by necessary implication, specified on the face of the instrument, there its amount is of course governed and regulated by the terms of the contract itself: Judgm., 9 Exch. 30.

(q) Gibbs v. Fremont, 9 Exch. 25.

(r) See the authorities upon this subject cited Gibbs v. Fremont, supra; Sharples v. Rickard, 2 H. & N. 57-60.

(s) Story Conf. L., 3rd ed., p. 519.

(t) Per Coleridge, J., Wilde v. Sheridan, 21 L. J., Q. B., 260.

(u) Cooper v. Earl Waldegrave, 2 Beav. 282; Story Conf. L., 3rd ed., p. 579.

A promissory note is a written promise by one person for the payment of money to another person therein named, at a specified time, absolutely and at all events (x). Promissory note—what.

Before inquiring as to the nature and requisites of the above instrument, a few remarks as to its origin and the reason of its introduction amongst us may be proper. In regard to the latter part of this subject, the explanation offered by Mr. Kyd, in his Treatise on Bills of Exchange (y), appears satisfactory. He suggests that, as commerce advanced, the multiplicity of its concerns sometimes rendered necessary amongst mercantile persons a less complicated mode of payment than by bills of exchange. A trader, for instance, whose situation and circumstances rendered credit from the merchant or manufacturer who supplied him with goods absolutely requisite, might have so limited a connection with the commercial world, that he could not easily furnish his creditors with a bill of exchange on another man. But his own credit and respectability might, nevertheless, be such, that his simple promise of payment (reduced to writing for the purpose of evidence) would be quite as good as a bill on another. Hence we may reasonably conjecture that promissory notes originated.

This species of security seems to have become prevalent here about the middle of the 17th century; and, according to Lord Holt (z), was an “invention of the goldsmiths in Lombard-street.”

The precise mode, however, of the introduction into commercial transactions of instruments worded as promissory notes may be more accurately explained as follows:—

Prior to the year 1640, the Royal Mint seems to have (x) Bayley on Bills, 6th ed., p. 1; Story on Prom. Notes, 2nd ed., p. 1.

In Foster v. Jolly, 1 Cr. M. & R. 707, Parke, B., observes, that “every bill or note contains two things, value, either express or implied, and a contract to pay at a specified time.” As to the presumption of consideration, see further, post, p. 487.

(y) P. 18; Story on Prom. Notes, 2nd ed., p. 7.

(z) 6 Mod. 29.

served, to some extent, as a bank or place of deposit for the cash of wealthy merchants, whose custom was to leave their money there when they had no immediate occasion for it, and to draw it thence when wanted. In the year just named, however, King Charles I., as history informs us, took forcible possession of a large amount of funds which had thus been lodged in his Mint, and the merchants ceasing, consequently, to trust the Royal Mint as a place of deposit, were, shortly after the date just named, obliged to have recourse to the goldsmiths, then principally domiciled in Lombard-street, who took upon themselves to act as bankers, and, in return for the sums deposited with them, issued their notes payable to "order" or to "bearer," by way of security (a).

It seems clear, from reported cases (b), that bills of exchange had, long before the time just spoken of, been in use here amongst merchants; but some difficulty exists with reference to the question whether or not promissory notes were, prior to the stat. 3 & 4 Ann. c. 9, negotiable in like manner and to the same extent as bills of exchange. We know, indeed, that Lord Holt strenuously opposed himself to the placing of promissory notes on the same footing as bills of exchange, and to granting similar remedies upon them (c); but, notwithstanding his opposition, there can be no doubt that these instruments had, during the latter half of the 17th century, been recognised in the mercantile world as negotiable, and had there been regarded in the same light as bills of exchange.

From the very obscurity, indeed, observable in the reports of cases upon bills and notes at the time in question, and from the difficulty which exists in determining in any particular case whether the instrument sued upon was in reality

(a) Anderson, Hist. Com., vol. 2, p. 386; Macpher. Ann. Com., vol. 2, pp. 411, 427; Gilbart, Hist. Bank., 3rd ed., pp. 21-2. See Ward v. Evans, 2

Ld. Raym. 928.

(b) Ante, pp. 437, 438.

(c) See Clarke v. Martin, Ld. Raym. 757; Buller v. Crips, 6 Mod. 29.

a bill or note (d), it may fairly be argued that the two classes of securities just named were then, even by lawyers, considered as mainly governed by the same rules, and as dependent upon the same law—that law, viz., which is recognised amongst merchants, and is fashioned according to their exigencies. •

We must not then regard as conclusive, with respect to the question just mooted, the preamble of the statute of Anne, which declares the previously existing law as in accordance with the expressed opinions of Lord Holt.

When, indeed, we reflect, that, prior to the time of Lord Mansfield, the leading principles of mercantile law had been comparatively little investigated, and certainly had not been reduced to any system—when we reflect, that, up to that date, some of the simplest points in connection with negotiable instruments had never been judicially decided (e), we shall hardly wonder that doubt exists as to the precise light in which promissory notes were regarded by our legal tribunals during the latter half of the 17th century (f). However, the general effect of the stat. 3 & 4 Ann. c. 9 (made perpetual by 7 Ann. c. 25, s. 3,) clearly was “to put promissory notes on the same footing with bills of exchange” (g). That statute expressly enacting (h)—1st, That every note payable to an individual, or “order,” or “bearer,” may be put in suit by the payee or holder; 2ndly, That every such note shall be transferable in like manner as a bill of exchange, (d) See 3 Burr. 1525.

(e) See Evans's Decis. of Lord Mansfield, vol. 2, pp. 59-81.

It was, however, reserved for Lord Kenyon to adjudicate, that the days of grace are to be allowed on a promissory note as on a bill: see Brown v. Harradan, 4 T. R. 148.

(f) See further upon this subject a learned note in Cranch (U. S.) R., vol. 1, Appendix.

(g) Per Ashhurst, J., 4 T. R. 153; per Lord Kenyon, C. J., 5 T. R. 485.

(h) The wording of this statute was much considered in Brown v. De Winton, 6 C. B. 356, 359; and in Wood v. Mytton, 10 Q. B. 810, 811.

A promissory note, payable by instalments, is within the statute: Oridge v. Sherborne, 11 M. & W. 374; Carlton v. Kenealy, 12 M. & W. 139.

and so as to vest a right of action upon the instrument as against prior parties to it in the indorsee or holder.

A promissory note, indeed, even when not negotiable, enjoys by our law all the privileges of a note which is negotiable, so far as the maker and the payee are concerned (i); but, if such a note be indorsed by one to whom it has not been properly transferred, the transferee will have no right of action upon the note as against the transferor and indorser (k).

Referring to the definition of a promissory note given at p. 471, the instrument in question will at once be found to possess some important attributes in common with bills of exchange. A promissory note must be in writing (l); it must be for the payment of money absolutely and at all events (m), a written promise to pay money and to do some other act would not be a promissory note (n). A payee must be expressly named in the instrument, or must appear therein by necessary implication (o).

The ordinary form of a promissory note is as follows:—

“£100.

“London, 1st January, 1855.

“[Three] months after date [or On demand, or At sight, or At [ten] days after sight], I promise to pay C. D. or order [or bearer] One Hundred Pounds.

A. B.” (p).

(i) Story on Prom. Notes, 2nd ed., p. 46; Story on Bills, p. 75.

(k) Guinnell v. Herbert, 5 Ad. & E. 436; Byles on Bills, 8th ed., p. 136.

(l) Story on Prom. Notes, 2nd ed., pp. 12-14.

(m) Clarke v. Percival, 2 B. & Ad. 660, and cases there cited. See Jury v. Barker, E. B. & E. 459.

(n) Follett v. Moore, 4 Exch. 410; Martin v. Chauntry, 2 Str. 1271. See Russell v. Phillips, 14 Q. B. 891.

(o) Brown v. De Winton, 6 C. B.

336, and cases cited Id. 354, 355. See Absolon v. Marks, 11 Q. B. 19; Enthoven v. Hoyle, 13 C. B. 373, 394; Meggison v. Harper, 2 Cr. & M. 322; Storm v. Stirling, 3 E. & B. 832; and Cowie v. Stirling, 6 E. & B. 333; which are followed in Yates v. Nash, 8 C. B., N. S., 581, 586; Stebbing v. Spicer, 8 C. B. 827.

(p) As to the statutory scale of stamp duties on promissory notes, see Chitt. Bills, 10th ed., Part I., Chap. 4; 17 & 18 Vict. c. 83, Sched.

The person signing the above instrument is called the maker; the person to whom it is made payable the payee; when transferred by indorsement the immediate parties to such transfer are, as in the case of a bill, termed the indorser and indorsee.

No particular form of words is necessary to constitute a promissory note; and embarrassing questions may arise under the Stamp Acts or otherwise in regard to an instrument ambiguously worded, and presenting some features in common with a promissory note, others in common with an I. O. U. (q), with a mere acknowledgment of a debt (r), or with an unilateral contract, or an agreement inter partes (s). A promissory note, payable to the maker's own order, may, after it has been indorsed and put in circulation, be treated as a note payable to bearer (t), though it is not per se a negotiable instrument within the statute of Anne (t). And, where an instrument is in terms so ambiguous as to make it doubtful whether it is a bill of exchange or a promissory note, the holder will at his election be entitled to treat it as either, for the words of an instrument are in general to be taken most strongly against the party using them (u).

The distinction in general structure and character, which exists between a bill of exchange and a promissory note, is (q) Brooks v. Elkins, 2 M. & W. 74; Fisher v. Leslie, 1 Esp. 426; Melanotte v. Teasdale, 13 M. & W. 216.

(r) Hyne v. Dewdney, 21 L. J., Q. B., 278.

(s) Ibid.; White v. North, 3 Exch. 689 (following Horne v. Redfearn, 4 Bing. N. C. 433); Hamilton v. Spottiswoode, 4 Exch. 200; Sibree v. Tripp, 15 M. & W. 23; Robins v. May, 11 Ad. & E. 213; Davies v. Wilkinson, 10 Ad. & E. 98; Ayrey v. Fearnside, 4 M. & W. 168; Drury v. Macaulay, 16 M. & W. 146; Jarvis v. Wilkins, 7 M. & W. 410.

(t) Masters v. Baretto, 8 C. B. 433; Hooper v. Williams, 2 Exch. 13; Brown v. De Winton, 6 C. B. 336; Gay v. Lander, Ibid.; Absolon v. Marks, 11 Q. B. 19; Wood v. Mytton, 10 Q. B. 805.

(u) Edis v. Bury, 6 B. & C. 433; Lloyd v. Oliver, 18 Q. B. 471; per Lord Denman, C. J., Roffey v. Greenwell, 10 Ad. & E. 225. See Forbes v. Marshall, 11 Exch. 166; Allen v. Sea Fire and Life Ass. Co., 9 C. B. 574; Ellison v. Collingridge, Id. 570; Peto v. Reynolds, 9 Exch. 410; Fielder v. Marshall, 9 C. B., N. S., 606.

thus pointed out by Dr. Story (x). In a bill of exchange, there are usually three original parties, the drawer, the payee, and the drawee, who, after acceptance, becomes the acceptor. In a promissory note, there are but two original parties, the maker and the payee. In a bill of exchange, the acceptor is, in contemplation of law, the primary debtor to the payee, and the drawer is but collaterally liable. In a promissory note, the maker is, in contemplation of law, the primary debtor. When a negotiable note has been indorsed by the payee, then there occurs a striking resemblance in the relations of the parties upon both instruments, although they are not in all respects identical. The indorser of a note stands in the same relation to the subsequent parties to it as the drawer of a bill; and the maker of the note is under the same liabilities as the acceptor of a bill (y). Hence the remarks already made respecting the rights and liabilities of parties to inland bills, may readily be applied to determine the mutual obligations of the parties to promissory notes. This latter subject will, accordingly, be here dismissed with some brief observations.

The contract of the maker of a promissory note, payable at a time certain after date, is of this kind,—he undertakes to pay the amount specified in the note at the time when it becomes due, or (as the common phrase is) at its maturity (z), to the payee or other person entitled to (x) Story on Prom. Notes, 2nd ed., p. 5.

(y) In Heylyn v. Adamson, 2 Burr. 676, Lord Mansfield says, "While a promissory note continues in its original shape of a promise from one man to pay to another, it bears no similitude to a bill of exchange. When it is indorsed the resemblance begins, for then it is an order by the indorser upon the maker of the note to pay to the indorsee. This is the very definition of a bill of exchange."

See also Gwinnett v. Herbert, 5 Ad. & E. 436, 439, 440.

(z) The days of grace (as to which, ante, p. 444) are allowed on a promissory note, even when payable by instalments: Oridge v. Sherborne, 11 M. & W. 374. See also Brown v. Harradan, cited ante, p. 473, n. (e).

receive the same, according to the tenor of the note (a). If, then, the note does not contain a condition, that it is to be presented for payment at some particular place, the maker will be liable to an action immediately the note falls due, without any demand or presentment thereof to him, because in that case his engagement is unconditionally to pay.

That demand or presentment is not, under ordinary circumstances, necessary as against the maker of a note, may be kept in mind by the decision of the Court of Exchequer in Norton v. Ellum (b), which shows that a promissory note, even when payable on demand, is a present debt, and is payable without any demand; and accordingly the Statute of Limitations will begin to run from the date of such a note: the above case, being similar to that of money lent, payable on request,—where no demand or request is necessary before bringing the action, because the debt which constitutes the cause of action arises instantly on the loan being made.

It must be remembered, however, that a note payable on demand, or at a date certain, differs materially (as regards the point now under notice) from one payable at or after sight; for, by the very terms of the contract, in either of these latter cases, the note must be shown to the maker before the action can be brought (c).

Hardship may, no doubt, by operation of the rule of law just stated, be caused to the maker of a note, who, though willing to pay the same at maturity, cannot discover the then holder of the instrument. From the possibility of such hardship being cast upon him, he may, however, relieve

(a) Story on Prom. Notes, 2nd ed., M. 363.
p. 120.

(b) 2 M. & W. 461; Rumball v. Ball, 10 Mod. 38. See, per Abbott, C. J., Macintosh v. Haydon, Ry. &

(c) Dixon v. Nuttall, 1 Cr. M. & R. 307; Holmes v. Kerrison, 2 Taunt. 323.

himself, by inserting a condition, requiring presentment at some particular place, in the note; and, if he do so, the case of Sands v. Clarke (d) is strong to show the necessity of averring and proving presentment of the note before charging him, or of offering a sufficient legal excuse for its omission. There the action was by payee against maker of a promissory note, payable at a particular place. The declaration averred, that, when the note became due, the plaintiff was ready and willing to present it there, and would have done so, but the defendant was then absent from and not to be found at the said place, and had clandestinely departed and absconded from thence, without leaving any effects there or any provision for payment of the note, and that there were not any effects of the defendant there,—it was held, however, that the facts thus alleged would not, if proved, constitute any sufficient excuse for non-presentment. The judgment in Sands v. Clarke conclusively shows that presentment in the case of a note payable at a particular place may be regarded as a condition precedent to the performance of his promise to pay by the maker, and that an avermēt, supported by evidence, that this condition has been duly performed, or has been prevented or dispensed with by the defendant, is essential to sustain the right of the payee or holder to recover upon the note. It has, in other cases, been decided that the known bankruptcy or insolvency of the maker of a note payable at a particular place will not dispense with presentment, nor will a general declaration by the maker of such a note, that he will not pay it, furnish any excuse for non-presentment (e): under (d) 8 C. B. 751, where numerous authorities upon the above subject are collected: Van der Donckt v. Thellusson, 8 C. B., 812; Emblin v. Dartnell, 12 M. & W. 830; Spindler v. Grellett, 1 Exch. 384.

In connection with the case cited in the text, it must be remembered, that the stat. 1 & 2 Geo. 4, c. 78, s. 1 (as to which, ante, p. 452) does not apply to promissory notes.

(e) Bowes v. Howe, 5 Taunt. 30; Judgm., 8 C. B. 759, 760; Arg., Russel v. Langstaffe, Dougl. 515; Eadaile v.

circumstances such as are here suggested a demand at the place specified in the note, unless dispensed with, will be necessary.

The indorser of a promissory note is to be regarded as a surety merely for the party primarily liable upon the note, viz., the maker. As in the case of a bill, so in that of a note, an indorser can only be charged when presentment to the maker has been made, and due notice of dishonour has been given. As regards presentment and notice of dishonour generally, reference may be made to what has been already said upon those subjects (f). Some remarks, however, respecting the necessity for speedy presentment of negotiable paper have, with a view to convenience, been reserved for this place. The point in question is one of much practical importance, as will presently appear.

Now, in the first place, a bill or note payable after sight should be presented for sight within a reasonable time after it has reached the holder's hands. It is, however, in the power of the holder of a bill or note thus payable to postpone for such reasonable time the day of payment, by postponing the date of the presentment for acceptance; and, if so minded, the holder may put the bill or note, whilst unrepresented, into circulation. The question whether, under all circumstances, the presentment of such an instrument has been made within reasonable time, will depend upon the particular facts of the case (g).

Where a bill of exchange payable on demand and accepted, or where a promissory note payable on demand is circulating, it does not necessarily behove the holder of such instrument to present it for payment immediately on its reaching his hands. In the case of a bill payable on demand, or of a cheque, the rule seems to be this—that the presentment

Sowerby, 11 East, 114. See also

Bailey v. Porter, 14 M. & W. 44.

(f) Ante, pp. 444, 464.

(g) Fry v. Hill, 7 Taunt. 397

Shute v. Robins, 1 Moo. & M. 133

Straker v. Graham, 4 M. & W. 721.

should, where the parties live in the same place, be made on the day after it came into the holder's hands (h). A promissory note, however, payable on demand, is often intended to be a continuing security and not like a cheque (i), to be presented speedily (k). Hence it has been held that such a note cannot be treated as over-due (l), merely because it is indorsed some years after its date, no interest having been paid upon it for several years before such indorsement (m).

Bank note.

A bank note is a promissory note made by a banker, payable to bearer on demand (n). A bank note has, however, some peculiar qualities (o), of which the most important is, that it circulates as money, and, in the ordinary course of business, is treated as such (p). In Miller v. Race (q), Lord Mansfield says that bank notes are constantly and universally, both at home and abroad, treated as cash, and paid and received as cash; and it is necessary, for the purposes of commerce, that their currency should be established and secured (r). It was there accordingly held, that a bond fide holder of a bank note for value is entitled to retain it as against a former owner from whom it has been stolen; the Court applying to a bank note the rule of law applicable to money, and observing that, "in the case of money stolen, (h) Robson v. Bennett, 2 Taunt. 388; Moule v. Brown, 4 Bing N. C. 266; Alexander v. Burchfield, 7 M. & Gr. 1061.

(i) It will, however, be no answer to an action by the holder against the drawer of a cheque that it was not presented for payment within a reasonable time, unless in the interval the fund in the banker's hands is lost by his failure: Robinson v. Hawksford, 9 Q. B. 52.

(k) Per Parke, B., Brooks v. Mitchell, 9 M. & W. 18; Heywood v. Watson, 4 Bing. 496; Barrough v.

White, 4 B. & C. 325, 328.

(l) As to the equities which may attach against one taking a negotiable instrument when over-due, ante, p. 464.

(m) Brooks v. Mitchell, supra.

(n) Byles on Bills, 8th ed., p. 9.

(o) Judgm., Guardians of Lichfield Union v. Greene, 1 H. & N. 889.

(p) The notes of the Bank of England constitute a legal tender, except by the Bank itself or its branches: 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 98, s. 6.

(q) 1 Burr. 452.

(r) Et vide judgm., Ingham v. Primrose, 7 C. B., N. S., 85.

the true owner cannot recover it, after it has been paid away fairly and honestly upon a valuable and bond fide consideration." In short, one who takes a bank note bond fide—i.e., giving value for it, and without notice that the party from whom he takes it has no title—may recover upon it, although he may at the time have had the means of knowledge of such fact, and have neglected to avail himself of them (s).

A bank note is expressly intended for circulation, and not meant as a continuing security in the hands of any particular holder. The rule in regard to its presentment must therefore be separately examined—it has manifestly a direct bearing on the question—Under what circumstances will the payment of a debt in bank notes be equivalent to a payment in cash? The case of Camidge v. Allenby (t) is a leading authority upon this subject (u). There the facts were as under:—Certain corn was sold and delivered by the plaintiff to the defendant at York on the Saturday morning, and paid for at three o'clock the same afternoon in notes of the bank of D. & Co., at Huddersfield. The bank in question had, in fact, stopped payment at eleven o'clock in the morning of the day named, and did not resume their payments. The insolvency of D. & Co. was, however, unknown to either of the parties to the transaction above mentioned. The plaintiff neither circulated the notes nor presented them for payment, but a week after their receipt required the defendant to take back the notes and to pay him the amount of them. The question raised accordingly was, whether, under the circumstances, the defendant was legally compellable so to do. The answer to this question was perspicuously given by Mr. Justice Bayley, in a judgment, from

Rule as to presentment of a bank note.

(s) Raphael v. Bank of England, 17 C. B., 161. See, per Crompton, J., and Lord Campbell, C. J., Carlton v. - d, 5 E. & B. 770, 771.

(t) 6 B. & C. 373. See also Turner v. Stones, 1 D. & L. 122; Rogers v. Langford, 1 Cr. & M. 637.

(u) See judgment, 1 H. & N. 890.

which the following passages are extracted :—" The rule," he says, " as to all negotiable instruments is, that, if they are taken in payment of a pre-existing debt, they operate as a discharge of that debt, unless the party who holds the instruments does all that the law requires to be done in order to obtain payment of them. Then the question is, what it was the duty of the plaintiff to do in order to obtain payment of these notes? They were intended for circulation. But I think that he was not bound immediately to circulate them or to send them into the bank for payment; but he was bound, within a reasonable time after he had received them, either to circulate them or to present them for payment. Now, here it is conceded, that if there had not been any insolvency of the bankers, the notes should have been circulated or presented for payment on the Monday. It is clear that the plaintiff on that day might have had knowledge that the bankers had stopped payment, and having that knowledge, if presentment was unnecessary, he had then another duty to perform. In consequence of the negotiable nature of the instruments, it became his duty to give notice to the party who paid him the notes, that the bankers had become insolvent, and that he, the plaintiff, would resort to the defendant for payment of the notes; and it would then have been for the defendant to consider whether he could transfer the loss to any other person; for unless he had been guilty of negligence, he might perhaps have resorted to the person who paid him the notes." Upon such grounds it was held, in Camidge v. Allenby, that the plaintiff, by reason of his laches, was not entitled to recover, but must bear the loss occasioned by the failure of the bank. The learned Judge, whose words have just been cited, remarking, that, though it might be hard that the entire loss should fall upon one individual, yet, " it is a general rule applicable to negotiable instruments, and not to be relaxed in particular instances, that the holder of such an instrument is to present promptly, or to communicate without delay notice of non-payment or of the insolvency of the acceptor of a bill or the maker of a note" (x); and such notice must be communicated within a reasonable time, though not necessarily before the expiration of the time allowed for presentment (y).

Another question, which, as connected with the preceding subject, may here be conveniently discussed, is this:—What right has the holder of a bank note, or of any negotiable instrument passing from hand to hand without indorsement, as against his immediate transferor, should the instrument transferred prove, by reason of some defect inherent in it, to be worthless? Now, it is clear, that such right, if any, will not be founded directly on the instrument itself, nor be enforceable against the defendant as virtually a party thereto. It will rather be founded on some implied undertaking upon his part, connected indeed with, but collateral to, the instrument (z).

A person who receives forged bank notes in payment for goods sold, or who discounts a forged bill, will not in general be precluded from suing for the price of the goods, or for the amount advanced by way of discount, because, in the one case, there has been a total failure of consideration, and, in the other, the payment was made under a mistake as to facts, and likewise without consideration (a).

Gompertz v. Bartlett (b) should be consulted with reference (x) Per Bayley, J., 6 B. & C. 383.

(y) Robson v. Oliver, 10 Q. B. 704.
See James v. Holditch, 8 D. & R. 40.

(z) See Nicholson v. Ricketts, 29 L. J., Q. B., 55.

(a) Jones v. Ryde, 5 Taunt. 488.
See Wilkinson v. Johnson, 3 B. & C. 428; Cocks v. Masterman, 9 B. & C. 902.

(b) 2 E. & B. 849, which affirms Jones v. Ryde, 5 Taunt. 488; Young

v. Cole, 3 Bing. N. C. 724; Gurney v. Womersley, 4 E. & B. 133. See Pooley v. Brown, 11 C. B., N. S., 566; per Lord Kenyon, C. J., Fenn v. Harrison, 3 T. R. 759.

A person who pays into a banker's worthless notes will, if there be no laches in the banker, have to bear the loss: Timmins v. Gibbins, 18 Q. B. 722. See Woodland v. Fear, 7 E. & B. 519.

to this part of the subject, and as showing the application of the maxim Caveat emptor in connection with bills of exchange and promissory notes. The question there arose upon the sale of a bill of exchange, which, on the face of it, purported to be a foreign bill, but had in fact been drawn in London, and was unavailable for want of a stamp. This bill was discounted by the plaintiff for the defendant, who did not indorse it but bonâ fide believed the bill to have been drawn abroad. The question was, whether the plaintiff, having thus purchased a worthless commodity, was entitled to recover his purchase-money from the vendor. The Court of Queen's Bench held that he was—upon this short ground—that even in the absence of fraud a vendee is “entitled to have an article answering the description of that which he bought.” The principle of this decision will be found applicable in a great variety of cases, wherever indeed forged or spurious paper passes for value from hand to hand.

As bearing upon the point now immediately before us, (though not decided with reference to the particular class of instruments to which attention has latterly been confined,) may be cited Lamert v. Heath (c). There the question was, whether the price of certain scrip certificates of shares in the “Kentish Coast R. C.” could be recovered back by the purchaser from the broker whom he had employed to buy them, these certificates, although known and commonly dealt with in the money-market under that designation, being in fact spurious; such being the question raised between the parties, the Court of Exchequer laid down the law applicable to it in these terms:—That, if the scrip actually purchased was the only scrip known in the market by the particular designation, the purchaser, in directing his broker to buy this scrip, and having received it, had in truth got all that he had contracted to buy, and could not therefore recover its price from his broker.

(c) 15 M. & W. 486. See Westropp v. Solomon, 8 C. B. 345, and cases there cited; Nicholson v. Rickells, 29 L. J., Q. B., 55.

Having now particularised the various points, which in connection with bills of exchange and promissory notes specially demand attention, it remains to say somewhat as to matters of defence ordinarily available in actions upon such instruments. As to four only of these grounds of defence, shall I here offer some remarks, viz., Payment—the defence of Fraud and No Consideration—of an unauthorised Alteration of the instrument—of its Loss (d).

Ordinary matters of defence in actions upon bills and notes.

Payment of a bill must, in order that it may operate as a discharge of the acceptor or the drawer, be a payment according to the law merchant—that is, payment of the bill at maturity. If a party pays it before, he purchases it, and is in the same situation as if he had discounted the bill (e). Payment.

It has been said, indeed, that there is no legal reason why the indorsee of a bill may not accept satisfaction of the contingent or absolute liability of the drawer or indorser, without by so doing discharging the acceptor (f), though, in the case of an accommodation bill, which the holder has taken with notice that it is such, payment by the drawer might be pleaded in an action against the acceptor of the bill (g).

Further, it is an established rule, that if the holder of a (d) For minute practical information respecting the above and other ordinary grounds of defence in actions upon bills and notes, reference must be made to standard works treating exclusively of those instruments. My principal endeavour, in briefly alluding to this subject, has been to indicate recent decisions which deserve perusal in connection with the various points here selected for examination.

(e) Per Parke, B., Morley v. Culverwell, 7 M. & W. 182 (citing Burbridge

v. Manners, 3 Camp. 194); Judgm., Harmer v. Steele, 4 Exch. 13.

(f) Judgm., Jones v. Broadhurst, 9 C. B. 181-2; cited and commented on in Cook v. Lister, 13 C. B., N. S., 543, 582, 585 (where the cases bearing on the above point are collected); Milnes v. Dawson, 5 Exch. 948; Jewell v. Parr, 13 C. B. 909; Parr v. Jewell, 16 Id. 684.

(g) Cook v. Lister, 13 C. B., N. S., 543, 589.

bill sues several of the parties liable to him upon it, he has, notwithstanding payment pendente lite, a right to proceed in such actions to recover his costs (h); and, where two actions were concurrently brought upon a bill of exchange, the one against the drawer, the other against the acceptor of the bill, and the defendant in the first action obtained a Judge's order for a stay of proceedings on payment of the debt, interest, and costs, it was held, that the payment under this order could not be pleaded in bar of the further maintenance of the second action—as being a payment in satisfaction and discharge of the causes of action against the acceptor—nor be relied upon as a ground for reducing the damages (i).

The cases below cited (k) will suffice to show what will amount to payment of a bill or note, so as to sustain a plea of payment in an action upon such instrument. Upon this part of the subject I may observe, that, if the payee of a promissory note pay the amount to an indorsee on default by the maker, the payee will not be justified in commencing an action against the maker in the name of the indorsee without authority from him (l). Though, if a bill payable to order of the drawer after indorsement over be dishonoured (h) Goodwin v. Cremer, 18 Q. B., 757 (and cases there cited), recognised in Kemp v. Balls, 10 Exch. 607.

By the new Practice Rules of Hilary T. 1853 (reg. 24), it is provided, that, “in any action against an acceptor of a bill of exchange, or the maker of a promissory note, the defendant shall be at liberty to stay proceedings on payment of the debt and costs in that action only.” Also, by the Pleading Rules of Trin. T. 1853, the payment of a bill or note must be specially pleaded.

(i) Randall v. Moon, 12 C. B. 261; cited and explained per Erle, C. J., 13 C. B., N. S., 584. See Belshaw v. Bush, 11 C. B. 191; cited per Williams, J., 13 C. B., N. S., 588.

(k) Hills v. Mesnard, 10 Q. B. 266; Thorne v. Smith, 10 C. B. 659; Williams v. James, 2 Exch. 798 (in Error); Ralli v. Dennistoun, 6 Exch. 483; Jones v. Gretton, 8 Exch. 773; Turney v. Dodwell, 3 E. & B. 136, distinguishing Foster v. Dawber, 6 Exch. 839; Beaumont v. Greathead, 2 C. B. 494; Bell v. Buckley, 11 Exch. 631.

As to payment supra protest, see Geralopulo v. Wieler, 10 C. B. 690; per Cur., Rotton v. Inglis, 2 Q. B. 685; Goodall v. Polhill, 1 C. B. 233.

(l) Coleman v. Biedman, 7 C. B. 871. See Emmett v. Tottenham, 8 Exch. 884; Rogers v. Chilton, 1 Exch. 862; Arthur v. Beales, Id. 608; Barber v. Lemon, 11 Q. B., 302.

and paid by him, the drawer may return the bill to his indorsee for the purpose of his suing the acceptor upon it as trustee for the drawer (m), or of course he may in his own name sue upon the bill.

The character in which a bill is paid by a party liable on it—ex. gr., whether as indorser or as agent for the acceptor—will clearly be a question of fact (n).

A bill or note, prima facie, imports consideration (o); and a plea of “no consideration” ought, in strictness, to aver fraud or illegality, and circumstances showing an absence of consideration (p).

Defence of
“no consideration.”

In an action by indorsee against the acceptor of a bill or maker of a note, a plea of “no consideration” should show not merely that the defendant received no consideration, but that the plaintiff gave none for the bill or note. At all events, it should show, that the plaintiff took the instrument with notice of the original want of consideration (in which case he will be entitled to recover so much only as he himself gave for it), or that he took it with notice of facts showing that it had been improperly obtained from the defendant, or was tainted with illegality or fraud (q). Further, as between the parties in question, the defence of “no consideration” will fail, if it be shown that any intermediate party to the bill or note gave value for it (r).

The rule in respect to the onus probandi on an issue

(m) Williams v. James, 15 Q. B. 498.

(n) Pollard v. Ogden, 2 E. & B. 459.

(o) See (ex. gr.) Watson v. Russell, 3 B. & S. 34.

(p) Astley v. Johnson, 5 H. & N. 137; per Jervis, C. J., Forman v. Wright, 11 C. B. 492: cited Judgm., Cook v. Wright, 1 B. & S. 567; Crofts v. Beale, Id. 172; Kearns v. Durell, 6 C. B. 596; Boden v. Wright, 12 C.

B. 445; Carruthers v. West, 11 Q. B. 143; Wells v. Hopkins, 5 M. & W. 7; Dobie v. Larkan, 10 Exch. 776; Sully v. Frean, Id. 535; Hulse v. Hulse, 17 C. B. 711; Smith, app., Smith, resp., 13 C. B., N. S., 418.

(q) Robinson v. Reynolds, 2 Q. B. 196. See the Forms of Pleas of Want of Consideration, Bullen & L. Prec. Plead., 2nd ed., pp. 450 et seq.

(r) Hunter v. Wilson, 4 Exch. 489; Masters v. Ibberson, 8 C. B. 100.

taken upon a plea of "no consideration" to an action on a bill has thus been stated by Lord Abinger, C. B. (s), "where there is no fraud, nor any suspicion of fraud, but the simple fact is that the defendant received no consideration for his acceptance, the plaintiff is not called upon to prove that he gave value for the bill;" but if the bill be connected with some fraud, and a suspicion of fraud be raised from its being shown that something has been done with it of an illegal nature—as that it has been clandestinely taken away, or has been lost or stolen,—the holder will be required to show that he gave value for it (t). If, indeed, in an action by indorsee against acceptor of a bill, the ground of defence be, that the bill was obtained illegally from the defendant, and indorsed to the plaintiff without consideration, the defendant will be bound in his plea to aver both the illegality and want of consideration; and if at the trial he proves the illegality, such proof will, according to the rule above stated, throw upon the plaintiff the onus of showing that he gave consideration for the bill. The reason of this rule is explained by Parke, B., in Bailey v. Bidwell (u), who says, that, if the instrument in question were proved to have been obtained by fraud or affected by illegality, that affords a presumption that the person guilty of the illegality would dispose of the bill or note, and would place it in the hands of another person to sue upon it; and such proof casts upon the plaintiff the burden of showing that he was a bonâ fide indorsee for value (x). But where there is a mere absence of consideration between the original parties to the bill no such presump-

(s) Mills v. Barber, 1 M. & W. 425, 432.

(t) Judgm., 1 M. & W. 432.

(u) 13 M. & W. 76; Smith v. Braine, 16 Q. B. 244.

(x) See also, in support of the doctrine here stated, Harvey v. Towers, 6 Exch. 656; Berry v. Alderman, 14

C. B. 95; S. C., 13 Id. 674; Smith v. Braine, 16 Q. B. 244, 251; Mather v. Lord Maidstone, 1 C. B., N. S., 273; Hall v. Featherstone, 3 H. & N. 284; Mills v. Barber, 1 M. & W. 425; Edmunds v. Groves, 2 M. & W. 642; May v. Seyler, 2 Exch. 563, 566.

tion arises, and the defendant must show that plaintiff took the bill without consideration (y).

The defence of "no consideration" is pleadable as to part only of the amount of a bill or note; for instance, by way of answer to an action upon such instrument, "a man might say, that, in adding up an account, he erroneously supposed himself to be indebted in '100*l.*, whereas in truth 10*l.* only was due.' That, in the case of a bill or note, would be a good plea of want of consideration except as to 10*l.*" (z). A partial failure of consideration could not, however, be pleaded as a defence to the whole bill or note (a); nor would it be pleadable as a defence pro tanto, unless the failure of consideration were in respect of a specific ascertained amount (b).

We have already (c) seen, that if a person lends his name to another for his accommodation, the party accommodated undertakes to pay the bill at maturity, and, further, to indemnify the person accommodating him, in case that person is compelled to pay the bill for him. Hence there is "an implied authority to such person to pay it, if he be in that situation that he may be compelled by law to pay the bill, though the holder do not actually compel him to do so; and, after payment, he may sue the party accommodated for money paid on his account; for such payment is in truth under the implied authority given by the contract of accommodation between the parties; and whether this be a payment of the whole bill, or of only a part of it, makes no difference" (d).

(y) Fitch v. Jones, 5 E. & B. 233.

(z) Per Jervis, C. J., Forman v. Wright, 11 C. B. 492.

(a) Clark v. Lazarus, 2 M. & Gr. 167; Camac v. Warriner, 1 C. B. 356; Darnell v. Williams, 2 Stark. N. P. C. 166.

(b) Byles on Bills, 8th ed., p. 119.

(c) Ante, p. 442, and cases cited p.

443 n. (r).

(d) Judgm., Sleigh v. Sleigh, 5 Exch. 517.

By the Pleading Rules (reg. 8), it is provided, that the "drawing, indorsing, accepting, &c., bills or notes by way of accommodation," must be specially pleaded.

Material
alteration of bill or note
—its effect.

From the important case of Master v. Miller (e) is deduced the proposition, that any unauthorised and material alteration of a bill of exchange or promissory note will, unless satisfactorily accounted for, avoid the instrument, whether such alteration be made by the holder himself or by a stranger ; for “ no man shall be permitted to take the chance of committing a fraud without running any risk of losing by the event when it is detected ” (f). And “ a party who has the custody of an instrument made for his benefit is bound to preserve it in its original state ” (g). If he omits to do so, and thus loses his remedy, he has no right to complain, since an alteration cannot be made in the instrument, except through fraud or laches on his part (h).

The principle just stated and explained was in Pigot's case (i) first propounded in regard to deeds (k), and has since been extended to all instruments comprehending words of contract (l). Thus, in Davidson v. Cooper (m), which may be regarded as a leading authority upon the subject before us, the question arose with reference to a guarantie (not under seal) which had been given by the defendants to a banking company, and which, whilst in the plaintiffs' possession, but without their knowledge or consent, had been altered, by the affixing of seals near to the signatures of the defendants ; in consequence whereof the instrument purported to be a (e) 4 T. R. 320 ; S. C. (in Error), 2 H. Bla. 140.

(f) Per Lord Kenyon, C. J., Master v. Miller, supra.

(g) Judgm., Davidson v. Cooper, 13 M. & W. 352 ; cited 15 C. B. 692.

(h) Id. ibid.

(i) 11 Rep. 26 b ; Whelpdale's case, 5 Id. 119 a.

(k) See also Agricultural Cattle Insur. Co. v. Fitzgerald, 16 Q. B. 432 ; cited per Wilde, B., Lord Ward v. Lumley, 29 L. J., Ex., 326 ; S. C., 5 H. & N. 87 ; Doe d. Tatum v. Cato- more, Id. 745 (with which compare Doe d. Shallcross v. Palmer, Id. 747) ; per Lord Denman, C. J., Harden v. Clifton, 1 Q. B. 524. See, per Maule, J., Re Bingle, 15 C. B. 450.

(l) Per Williams, J., 5 C. B. 194 ; per Ashhurst, J., Master v. Miller, 4 T. R. 331 ; Croockewit v. Fletcher, 1 H. & N. 693 ; Gardner v. Walsh, 5 E. & B. 83 ; Fazakerly v. M'Knight, 6 Id. 795.

(m) 11 M. & W. 778 ; S. C., 13 M. & W. 343.

specialty instead of a simple contract. In this case judgment was finally given for the defendants, on the express ground that the adding of the seals constituted a material alteration, inasmuch as it gave in fact a different legal character to the writing to which they were attached, and would, if made with the consent of all interested, have completely changed as well the nature of the relation towards each other of the parties to it as the remedies upon it (n).

The principle now under notice is strictly applied to all negotiable instruments. In Warrington v. Early (o), the action was brought upon a promissory note, which had been made payable five months after date, with lawful interest. It appeared, however, that in the corner of this note had been written, at the plaintiff's request, and unknown to the defendant, the following words:—"Interest to be paid at 6l. per cent. per annum." The alteration thus made was held to be material, and to vitiate the note. So, if after a bill of exchange, accepted generally, has been put in circulation, it be altered without the consent or knowledge of the acceptor, by adding to the acceptance words making the bill payable at a particular place, this alteration will vitiate the bill and discharge the acceptor from liability upon it, even as against a bond fide holder of the bill for value, without notice of the alteration; for, although "the negotiability of bills of exchange is to be favoured," yet, "with this view, it is material that their purity should be preserved" (p). The case of Master v. Miller (q), already cited, establishes that (n) As to what may constitute a "material alteration," within the rule illustrated in the text, see also per Maule, J., Mollett v. Wackerbarth, 5 C. B. 193.

(o) 2 E. & B. 763.

(p) Burchfield v. Moore, 3 E. & B. 683. See also the cases cited Leg. Max., 4th ed., pp. 155-157, in notis.

(q) 1 Smith L. C., 5th ed., 776, and Note thereto, where the authorities are collected; of which see particularly Alderson v. Langdale, 3 B. & Ad. 660 (where, in an action by indorsee against drawer of a bill given in payment for goods sold, a material alteration of the bill by the vendor was held to operate as a satisfaction of the original debt). With the preceding case an unauthorised alteration of a bill, after acceptance, whereby its payment would be accelerated, avoids the instrument. And should an authority be wanted to show that the maker of a promissory note would be bound by an alteration therein, although material, provided he had assented to it or recognised it, reference may be made to the case of Tarleton v. Shingler (r), which goes to the precise point just specified.

Loss of bill or note.

Where a bill of exchange has been lost before falling due and not afterwards recovered, the question arises—can a remedy upon the instrument be enforced at common law? and the answer to this question must depend upon the nature of the bill, and the form in which the defence is presented. If the bill be originally negotiable, i. e., payable to “order” or “bearer,” the cases below cited (s) serve to show that the acceptor is not bound to pay the bill to any one suing as holder, who shall refuse or be unable to deliver up the bill—the reason assigned being, that “by the custom of merchants, the holder of a bill should present the instrument at maturity to the acceptor, demand payment of its amount, and, upon receipt of the money, deliver up the bill”—the acceptor upon paying the bill having a right to its possession “for his own security, and as his voucher and discharge pro tanto” (t) in the account between himself and the party who drew upon him—a right which remains to him equally where the payment is made under the compulsory process of law.

In Crowe v. Clay (u) the loss of a negotiable bill given on compare Atkinson v. Hawdon, 2 Ad. & E. 628.

(r) 7 C. B. 812.

(s) Hansard v. Robinson, 7 B. & C. 90; Ramuz v. Crowe, 1 Exch. 167, where the law laid down in Hansard v. Robinson was extended to the case of a bill payable to the drawer's order, though not indorsed at the time of loss.

As to recovering interest upon a bill without producing it, see Hutton v. Ward, 15 Q. B. 26.

As to giving secondary evidence of a lost bill, see Blackie v. Pidding, 6 C. B. 196.

(t) Judgm., 7 B. & C. 94.

(u) 9 Exch. 604; S. C., 8 Id. 295. See Widders, app., Gorton, resp., 1 C. B., N. S., 576; Jungbluth v. Way, 1 H. & N. 71.

account of a debt, was held to be an answer to an action for the debt as well as to one on the bill. There the action was for goods sold and delivered; and, as to a part of the demand, the defendant pleaded, that, before action, the plaintiff drew on the defendant a bill of exchange for that particular amount, payable to the plaintiff's order at a certain time after date, which the defendant accepted and delivered to the plaintiff for and on account of the said sum. The plea then averred, that the plaintiff afterwards lost the bill out of his possession, and that "from thence hitherto" it remained so lost. The question for determination was, whether this plea afforded matter of defence to the action; and in discussing its validity the Court observed:—A bill given for and on account of money due on simple contract operates as a conditional payment, which may be defeated at the option of the creditor if the bill is unpaid at maturity in his hands, in which case he may rescind the transaction of payment, and sue on the original demand (x). Should the bill be lost, however, the condition on which the payment may be defeated does not arise (y), and the defendant, if compelled to pay the original debt, would be subject to inconvenience of like kind as if compelled to pay the bill (z). Further, it is observable, that, to entitle the plaintiff to sue on a bill, he ought to be the holder of the bill (a), and the bill ought to be due; and should his title to sue be defective in either of these respects, the defendant may avail himself of the defect. Of course, if the bill is not due, that would per se be a good ground of defence to the action; but it is quite competent to a defendant, without taking that particular objection, to plead merely that the bill has been lost; for it may well be (x) See Griffiths v. Owen, 13 M. & W. 58, 64; James v. Williams, Id. 828.

(y) See Belshaw v. Bush, 11 C. B. 191, 201.

(z) See Woodford v. Whiteley, Moo.

& M. 517; Mercer v. Cheese, 4 M. & Gr. 804; Price v. Price, 16 M. & W. 232.

(a) See Emmett v. Tottenham, 8 Exch. 884.

that a person who has given a bill on account of a debt may be able and willing to pay the debt if he can withdraw his bill from circulation, and may object to pay only on the ground that the bill is not forthcoming, without objecting to its not being due (b).

The rule above stated does not seem to hold in case of the loss of a non-negotiable bill or note (c); the reason of the rule being then inapplicable. And it is material to remember, that by the stat. 17 & 18 Vict. c. 125, s. 87, it is now provided, that, in "any action founded upon a bill of exchange or other negotiable instrument, it shall be lawful for the Court or a Judge to order that the loss of such instrument shall not be set up, provided an indemnity is given, to the satisfaction of the Court or Judge or a Master, against the claims of any other person upon such negotiable instrument" (d).

17 & 18 Vict.
c. 125, s. 87.

It will not, of course, be supposed, that the grounds of defence in actions upon bills and notes above commented on alone deserve attention; other noticeable matters, as illegality, fraud, or duress, are in such actions pleadable in bar. In regard to the two former of these matters, the reader is referred to the general remarks bearing upon them contained in the 1st chapter of this Book (e). In regard to the last-named ground of defence, the cases below cited may be consulted (f).

(b) See also Bartlett v. Holmes, 13 C. B. 630, 638, which shows that, where a person has undertaken to pay money or to deliver goods pursuant to a written order, upon its being duly indorsed and presented to him, he is entitled to the possession of the document before he can be called upon to part with the money or the goods.

(c) Per Jervis, C. J., Charnley v. Grundy, 14 C. B. 608, 614; Wain v. Bailey, 10 Ad. & E. 616.

(d) See Aranguren v. Scholfield, 1 H. & N. 494.

(e) Ante, pp. 334, 353, 370.

As to illegality of consideration for a bill or note, see further, Byles on Bills, 8th ed., chap. 10; Masters v. Ibber-son, 8 C. B. 100.

As to the defence of intoxication, see Gore v. Gibson, 13 M. & W. 623; Nagle v. Baylor, 3 Dr. & W. 60.

(f) Kearns v. Durell, 6 C. B. 596, (duress of goods); Duncan v. Scott, Before dismissing the subject of Negotiable Instruments, I may add that:—

1. A bill of lading is a written acknowledgment by the master of a vessel that he has received goods from the shipper, to be conveyed on the terms therein expressed to their destination, and to be then delivered to the parties therein designated (g). The ordinary practice is this: when goods are sent on board ship, the master or person acting for him gives a receipt for them, and the master afterwards signs three parts of a bill of lading; one of which is retained by the captain, another is transmitted to the consignee, and a third is held by the consignor himself for his own security (h). Bill of lading—what.

The bill of lading specifies that the goods sent are to be delivered to the consignee or his assigns or order, or to the order or assigns of the consignor, or to order or assigns merely; and, according to the form of the instrument, it usually passes either by delivery or by indorsement and delivery (i).

At common law, however, a bill of lading transferred merely the property in the goods to which it related, but vested no right of action upon the instrument itself in the assignee (k); who might, however, have sued in trover for the goods, relying upon his documentary title to support the

1 Camp. N. P. C. 100; Cumming v. Ince, 11 Q. B. 112; Stevens v. Underwood, 4 Bing. N. C. 655 (duress of person). See Smith v. Monteith, 13 M. & W. 427.

(g) Abbott on Shipp., 8th ed., p. 323.

(h) Per Buller, J., Lickbarrow v. Mason, 2 T. R. 72; S. C., 1 H. Bl. 357, 6 East, 21, n. But the practice stated in the text is not uniformly observed.

(i) Abbott on Shipp., 8th ed., pp.

528-9; Smith Merc. L., 6th ed., p. 307 (where the form of a bill of lading may be seen).

(k) Thompson v. Dominy, 14 M. & W. 403; Howard v. Shepherd, 9 C. B. 297; Sanders v. Vanzeller, 4 Q. B. 260 (recognised in Zwilchenbart v. Henderson, 9 Exch. 728, and in Kemp v. Clark, 12 Q. B. 653); Evans v. Mariett, 1 Ld. Raym. 271; Judgm., Tindall v. Taylor, 24 L. J., Q. B., 12, 17; S. C., 4 E. & B. 219, 227, 229.

action (l). The action of trover, it will be remembered, is founded, not upon contract, but upon property and the right to possession of chattels; it offers, therefore, no similarity to an action ex contractu, directly founded upon a negotiable instrument (m). The instrument under our notice only represents the goods; and the transfer of the symbol did not, prior to the recent statute, operate more than a transfer of what it represented (n).

The law, however, in regard to bills of lading has been materially altered by the 18 & 19 Vict. c. 111; sect. 1 whereof enacts, that, "Every consignee of goods named in a bill of lading, and every indorsee of a bill of lading to whom the property in the goods therein mentioned shall pass upon or by reason of such consignment or indorsement shall have transferred to and vested in him all rights of suit, and be subject to the same liabilities in respect of such goods as if the contract contained in the bill of lading had been made

(l) Lickbarrow v. Mason, supra, n. (h).

Ever since the great case of Lickbarrow v. Mason, supra, the law has been considered to be, that the bona fide transferee for value of a bill of lading, indorsed by the shipper or his consignee, and put into circulation by the authority of the shipper or consignee, has an absolute title to the goods, freed from the equitable right of the unpaid vendor to stop in transitu as against the purchaser: Judgm., 3 E. & B. 637.

(m) Wilmshurst v. Bowker, 7 M. & Gr. 882; Turner v. Trustees of Liverpool Docks, 6 Exch. 543; Key v. Cotesworth, 7 Exch. 595; Pennell v. Alexander, 3 E. & B. 283; Wait v. Baker, 2 Exch. 1; Van Casteel v. Booker, Id. 691; Browne v. Hare, 4 H. & N. 822; and S. C., 3 Id. 484, may be referred to as showing the effect of the indorsement of a bill of lading upon the title to and jus disponendi over goods.

(n) Judgm., per Lord Campbell, C. J., Gurney v. Behrend, 3 E. & B. 633-4.

In Lickbarrow v. Mason, supra, Lord Loughborough observes, that "As the indorsement of a bill of lading is an assignment of the goods themselves, it differs essentially from the indorsement of a bill of exchange, which is the assignment of a debt due to the payee, and which, by the custom of trade, passes the whole interest in the debt."

Nevertheless, a bill of lading was, even before the recent statute (18 & 19 Vict. c. 111), noticed supra, sometimes spoken of as "negotiable." See, per Tindal, C. J., Jenkyns v. Usborne, 7 M. & Gr. 699.

with himself." Under this Act the rights and liabilities of the consignee or indorsee of the bill of lading pass from him by indorsement over to a third person (o).

2. It might perhaps, at first sight, be supposed, that a scrip certificate (p) of a projected railway company, which passes from hand to hand on the Stock Exchange, offers an instance (quite unexceptionable) of the assignment of a chose in action; but, on examination, we shall find that this is not so, and that the purchase of scrip is, in truth, the purchase of a right to stand in the place of the original allottee, quoad his interest in the concern (q). So that an action for recovery of the deposit money originally paid must be brought in the name of the allottee—not in that of the purchaser of the scrip.

Railway
scrip.

(o) Smurthwaite v. Wilkins, 11 C B., N. S., 842. See Fox v. Nott, 6 H. & N. 630.

(p) A share is a certain amount of interest in a particular company. A scrip certificate is evidence merely of the right to obtain shares. See Waterford, &c., R. C. v. Pidcock, 8 Exch. 279, 283-4; Jackson v. Cocker, 4 Beav. 59.

(q) See Gerhard v. Bates, 2 E. & B. 476; Jackson v. Cocker, supra; per Maule, J., Tempest v. Kilner, 2 C. B. 308; Wilkinson v. Anglo-Californian Gold Mining Co., 18 Q. B. 728.

Various kinds of instruments, more or less perfectly negotiable, other than those mentioned in the text, are specified in the Note to Miller v. Race, 1 Smith L. C., 5th ed., 459 et seq.

CHAPTER IV.

EVIDENCE OF CUSTOM OR USAGE TO EXPLAIN WRITTEN CONTRACTS.

HAVING in the previous chapters of this Book spoken of various kinds of written contracts,—of deeds,—of contracts required to be in writing by the Statute of Frauds and other enactments—of negotiable instruments—it may now be proper to inquire respecting rules of interpretation and evidence applicable to such documents, so far, at all events, as those rules may be of practical importance in connection with ordinary mercantile transactions. An acquaintance with the forms and properties merely of particular instruments—with the principles which determine their validity,—would avail little to the practitioner if unaccompanied by a knowledge of the elementary rules of evidence and of construction.

Of rules applicable for determining the meaning and intention of the parties to a written contract, a division into two classes may be made: whereof the first will include those maxims to which the grammarian or logician would naturally have recourse, in order to explain an inverted sentence or a complicated phrase; and the second will comprise such principles of construction as fall more peculiarly within the lawyer's cognisance, whereby is regulated the admissibility of extrinsic evidence to explain language which either is in itself ambiguous, or, when applied to extrinsic facts, becomes obscure and doubtful.

As falling under the former of the two classes of rules just mentioned (to which, as presenting no especial difficulty, a brief allusion must suffice), the following well-known principles of construction may be specified—that the true meaning of a word may often best be ascertained by looking at the accompanying words, or noscitur à sociis—that the express mention or specification of one thing must usually be understood as implying the exclusion of some other thing eiusdem generis not specified, expressio unius exclusio alterius—that words referred to should usually be read as if incorporated with the clause which makes reference to them, verba relata inesse videntur—that the relative must in general be taken as referring to the next antecedent, ad proximum antecedens fiat relatio, unless some other construction is, with a view to the meaning of the instrument, obviously needed. To the foregoing, some few analogous rules of construction—in their form of expression equally trite, and in their signification equally free from difficulty—might be added.

Now, it is obvious that the rules just enumerated are precisely those which an educated person would (without possessing legal knowledge) bring to bear upon the construction of any document submitted to his consideration. They are, indeed, rules of grammar rather than of law, and may accordingly be dismissed without any further observation (a).

With regard to the second of the two classes of rules above specified, we must remember that, in certain cases, considerations of public policy and convenience require that unwritten contracts shall not be received in evidence;—that where the parties themselves have agreed to reduce into writing their contract, common sense has established the plain and intelligible rule, that the writing must bind, and that no spoken words can be allowed to relax or vary its obligation (b). "If A. and B. make a contract in writing evidence is not admissible to show that A. meant something different from what is stated in the contract itself, and that B. at the time assented to it" (c). These well-known propositions are not, however, to be received without qualification or exception. Sometimes the language of a contract is ambiguous. Sometimes a word or phrase occurring in it is of doubtful significance, or prima facie insensible. What mode of interpretation is then to be adopted with a view to carrying out, if possible, the intentions of the contracting parties? In attempting to answer this question, let us first advert to the rule of Lord Bacon, who tells us (d), that "there be two sorts of ambiguities of words: the one is ambiguitas patens, and the other latens. Patens is that which appears to be ambiguous upon the deed or instrument; latens is that which seemeth certain and without ambiguity for anything that appeareth upon the deed or instrument, but there is some collateral matter out of the deed that breedeth the ambiguity."

(a) As to the rules above enumerated, and others akin to them, see Leg. Max., 4th ed., Chap. viii.

A simple instance of ambiguitas patens presents itself where a blank occurs in some material part of a written contract (e). "A latent ambiguity," says Alderson, B. (f), "is where you show that words apply equally to two different things or subject-matters; and then evidence is admissible to show which of them was the thing or subject-matter intended." The word "ambiguous" is (it may further be remarked) sometimes, not quite correctly, used in reference

(b) Per Lord Denman, C. J., 11 Ad & E. 598.

(c) Per Pollock, C. B., Nichol v. Godts, 10 Exch. 194; Josling v. Kingsford, 13 C. B., N. S., 447, 457.

(d) Max. reg. 23.

(e) Wigr. Extr. Evid., 3rd ed., p. 88. See also Saunderson v. Piper, 5 Bing. N. C. 425; Clayton v. Lord Nugent, 13 M. & W. 200. Parol evidence may be admitted to show that a written contract which has no date was intended not to operate from its delivery, but from a future uncertain period: Davis v. Jones, 17 C. B. 625.

(f) Smith v. Jeffryes, 15 M. & W. 561; Judgm., Bruff v. Conybeare, 13 C. B., N. S., 274, 275; Macdonald v. Longbottom, 1 E. & E. 977, 987.

to that which is comprehensive or general. Properly speaking, however, an expression is "ambiguous" only when, from its very terms, it may mean either one thing or another;—the use of a nomen generale under which several different things may be included, does not necessarily create an ambiguity in the instrument containing it (g).

Now, the short rule to be kept in mind, with reference to the above two kinds of ambiguity is, that whereas extrinsic evidence is admissible to explain a latent, it cannot ordinarily be received to clear up a patent ambiguity. The application of this rule is, however, by no means free from difficulty, and can only be apprehended by a careful study and comparison of decided cases.

In general, no doubt, an ambiguity appearing within the four corners of an instrument must, as Lord Bacon observes (h), be removed, if at all, by construction (i.e., by a careful comparison of other portions of the instrument with that particular part in which the ambiguity arises), or by election (of which an example sometimes presents itself in the case of a grant or gift—the grantee or donee rendering by his election of one specific thing out of several to which the words used might equally apply, that certain which was before uncertain); but never by averment or evidence of extrinsic facts (i).

It would, nevertheless, be quite erroneous to suppose that extrinsic evidence is under no circumstances admissible to clear up a prima facie patent ambiguity in a written contract, for proof of facts may be given with a view to showing that the apparent uncertainty does not in truth exist; for instance, if a thing be designated on the face of an instrument in terms imperfect and equivocal, admitting either of no meaning at all when taken per se, or of a variety of different meanings, and referring tacitly or expressly for the

(g) See per Pollock, C. B., Ashworth v. Mounsey, 9 Exch. 186-7.

(h) Max. reg. 23.

(i) Id., ibid.

ascertainment and completion of their meaning to extrinsic facts, it will be no objection to the reception of evidence of those facts, that the ambiguity in question is manifested and arises directly on the face of the instrument (k).

Evidence to identify subject-matter of contract—

Speaking philosophically, indeed, we must always look beyond the instrument itself, in order to ascertain its meaning (l); thus, if the word Blackacre be used in a lease, there must be evidence to show that the particular field is Blackacre (m); “parcel or no parcel” being a question for the jury (n). Now, here the instrument appears on the face of it to be perfectly intelligible and free from doubt, and yet extrinsic evidence must be received for the purpose of showing what the instrument refers to, or, in other words, with a view to identifying the thing spoken of, or subject-matter of the contract (o). In such cases, courts of law recognise that natural dependence which exists between language and the circumstances with reference to which it is used, and which makes a knowledge of such circumstances or of facts within the knowledge of the parties necessary to a right interpretation of their language (p).

A few cases, illustrating what has been just said, in reference to ordinary trading contracts, may be useful:—

—or parties to it.

Where A. and B. trade under the firm of A., the name A., when used in a contract relating to the particular trade, means A. and B.; and to show that it has such meaning, and with a view to charging B., parol evidence will be admissible (q).

Let us next suppose, that a written contract for the sale

(k) See per Sir Thomas Plumer, M.
R., Colpoys v. Colpoys, Jac. 463-4.

(l) Per Rolfe, B., *Clayton v. Lord
Nugent*, 13 M. & W. 207.

(m) Per Coleridge, J., *Doe d. Preedy
v. Holtom*, 4 Ad. & E. 82. See *Bruff
v. Conybeare*, 13 C. B., N. S., 270, 274; Lord Waterpark v. Fennell, 7
H. L. Ca. 650.

(n) Manning v. Fitzgerald, 29 L.
J., Ex., 24; Harrison v. Hyde, Id.
119; S. C., 4 H. & N. 805.

(o) See Mumford v. Gething, 7 C.
B., N. S., 305; Macdonald v. Long-bottom, 1 E. & E. 977, 987.

(p) Per Coleridge, J., 4 Ad. & E.
82; Wigr. Extr. Evid., 3rd ed., p. 83.

(q) Post, Chap. 5, s. 1.

of goods is signed by C. Evidence will then be admissible to show that, in so signing it, he acted as agent for D., provided the object of such evidence be to charge D., and not to discharge C. This point was decided in Higgins v. Senior (r), the Court observing, "There is no doubt that, where such an agreement is made, it is competent to show that one or both of the contracting parties were agents for other persons, and acted as such agents in making the contract, so as to give the benefit of the contract on the one hand to, and charge with liability on the other, the unnamed principals; and this, whether the agreement be or be not required to be in writing by the Statute of Frauds, and this evidence in no way contradicts the written agreement. It does not deny that it is binding on those whom, on the face of it, it purports to bind; but shows that it also binds another, by reason that the act of the agent, in signing the agreement, in pursuance of his authority, is in law the act of the principal. But, on the other hand, to allow evidence to be given that the party who appears on the face of the instrument to be personally a contracting party is not such, would be to allow parol evidence to contradict the written agreement; which cannot be done" (s).

Again, parol evidence may often be necessary in an action ex contractu, to show that the party sued is the person who made the contract declared upon, and who is bound by it. So whether a person contracts in his own name or in that of another, or in a feigned name, and whether the contract be signed by his own hand or that of an agent, are inquiries not different in their nature from the question—who is the person who has just ordered goods in a shop? If he is sued for the price, and his identity is made out, the contract is not varied by appearing to have been made by him in a name

(r) 8 M. & W. 834.

(s) Judgm., 8 M. & W. 844; Beckham v. Drake, 9 M. & W. 39; S. C., 11 Id. 315; 2 H. L. Ca. 579; per Williams, J., E. B. & R. 1020-2.

not his own (t) ; a man, for instance, may be liable on a bill of exchange accepted in any name whatsoever, if by his authority (u).

The instances above given show that, in the most ordinary transactions, evidence dehors a written contract may be required, and will be admissible, to inform the Court or jury (as to whose respective functions in such cases some remarks will presently be offered) in regard to its true meaning and effect.

Mercantile terms—how explicable

To advance a step further in the inquiry before us, let us next suppose that terms are used in a written contract or mercantile instrument, which, although not familiar to the public, are known and understood by a particular class of persons in a certain special and peculiar sense, evidence to that effect will be admissible, for the purpose of applying the instrument to its proper subject-matter ; and the case will be the same as if the parties in framing their contract had made use of a foreign language, which the Courts are not bound to understand. An instrument so worded is not on that account void ; it is certain and definite for all legal purposes, because it can be made so in evidence through the medium of an interpreter. Conformably with these principles the Courts have long allowed mercantile instruments to be expounded according to the custom of merchants, who have a style and language peculiar to themselves, of which usage and custom are the legitimate interpreters (x).

Besides the case where an expression occurring in a contract is wholly unintelligible, save to persons conversant with the trade to which it relates, a term may chance to be used therein which, in addition to its popular and ordinary meaning, bears also a technical signification. A doubt will (t) Judgm., Trueman v. Loder, 11 Ad. & E. 594-5 (as to which case, see Judgm., 7 E. & B. 278-9; Brown v. Byrne, 3 E. & B. 703) ; per Maulc, J., Lindus v. Bradwell, 5 C. B. 591.

(u) Per Martin, B., Stephens v.

Reynolds, 29 L. J., Ex., 278 ; S. C., 5 H. & N. 513, cited ante, p. 451, n. (x).

(x) Stark. Evid., 4th ed., p. 701, cited in Smith v. Wilson, 3 B. & Ad. 728, 733 ; Myers v. Sarl, 30 L. J., Q. B., 9, 12, 13.

thereupon at once arise :—In which of its two senses, the ordinary or the technical, is the word or phrase in question to be understood? This point will have to be determined by the weight of evidence in favour of either view which may be adduced (y); subject, however, to the preliminary decision of the Court on inspection of the particular contract as to the admissibility of any extrinsic evidence, such as tendered, to explain it. When the meaning of the technical expression has thus been ascertained, the true construction of the contract will be for the Judge, not for the jury, to determine (z).

An examination of the case of Simpson v. Margitson (a) may assist towards a right apprehension of this rule. There the plaintiff, an auctioneer, claimed, under a written contract, certain commission upon the sale of an estate, “if sold by auction or within two months after.” A sale of the estate was effected within two calendar months, though not within two lunar months, after the auction, and the Court held, that, although evidence would have been admissible to show that according to the usage of auctioneers, ‘a month’ signifies a calendar month, yet, in the absence of such evidence, the legal meaning of the word in question should be allowed to prevail. “It is clear,” remarked Lord Denman, C. J., “that ‘months’ denote at law ‘lunar’ months, unless there is admissible evidence of an intention in the parties using the

(y) In Carter v. Crick, 4 H. & N. 417, Pollock, C. B., observes, that “if a party seeks to make out that certain words used in a contract have a different acceptation from their ordinary sense, either for the purposes of trade or within a certain market or a particular county, he must prove it: not by calling witnesses, some of which say it is one way and some the other, and then leaving it to the jury to say which they believe; but by clear, distinct, and irresistible evidence.”

(z) Per Parke, B., Hutchison v. Bowker, 5 M. & W. 542.

In regard to the propositions above laid down, see also Van Baggén v. Baines, 9 Exch. 523; Couturier v. Hastie, Id. 102; S. C., 8 Exch. 40; 5 H. L. Ca. 673; Griffiths v. Rigby, 1 H. & N. 237; Attwood v. Emery, 1 C. B., N. S., 110; Orchard v. Simpson, 2 C. B., N. S., 299; Berwick v. Horsfall, 4 C. B., N. S., 460.

(a) 11 Q. B. 23. ●

word to denote 'calendar' months. If the context shows that calendar months were intended, the Judge may adopt that construction (b). If the surrounding circumstances at the time the instrument was made show that the parties intended to use the word not in its primary or strict sense, but in some secondary meaning, the Judge may construe it from such circumstances, according to the intention of the parties (c). If there is evidence that the word was used in a sense peculiar to a trade, business, or place, the jury must say whether the parties used it in that peculiar sense (d). If the meaning of a word depends upon the usage of the place where anything under the instrument is to be done, evidence of such usage must be left to the jury" (e). The learned Judge further observed, that if technical words are used, the jury may have to assign their meaning.

In accordance with the rules above laid down, Tindal, C. J., remarks, in Shore v. Wilson (f), that where any doubt arises as to the true sense and meaning of words used in a (b) Lang v. Gale, 1 M. & S. 111; Reg. v. Chawton, 1 Q. B. 247.

(c) Goldshede v. Swan, 1 Exch. 154; Walker v. Hunter, 2 C. B. 324; Bac. Max. reg. 10; Mallan v. May, 13 M. & W. 510; Beckford v. Crutwell, 1 Moo. & R. 187.

Where a contract is evidenced partly by writing, partly by proof of the behaviour and conduct of parties, the question as to what the contract was will be for the jury: Moore v. Garwood, 4 Exch. 681; per Lord Campbell, C. J., Foster v. Mentor Life Ass. Co., 3 E. & B. 79.

(d) Smith v. Wilson, 3 B. & Ad. 728, where evidence was held admissible to show, that, by the custom of the country in which a lease was made, the words "One thousand," when applied to rabbits, signified "twelve hundred." This case shows, that the principle which regulates the admissibility of evidence to explain mercantile instruments, is not confined to them, but applies also to other kinds of contracts, those, for instance, between landlord and tenant.

See Grant v. Maddox, 15 M. & W. 737; Myers v. Sarl, 30 L. J., Q. B., 9; Jolly v. Young, 1 Esp. 186; Spicer v. Cooper, 1 Q. B. 424; cited Judgm., Sarl v. Bourdillon, 1 C. B., N. S., 196.

(e) Citing Robertson v. Jackson, 2 C. B. 412; Bourne v. Gatliff, 11 Cl. & F. 45.

(f) 5 Scott, N. B. 1038. See also the observations of Parke, B., Clift v. Schwabe, 3 C. B. 469.

written instrument, or any difficulty presents itself as to their application under the surrounding circumstances, the sense and meaning of the language used may be investigated and ascertained by evidence dehors the instrument itself. Such investigation does of necessity take place in the interpretation of instruments written in a foreign language (g)—in the case of ancient instruments (h), where, by lapse of time and change of manners, their words have acquired in the present age a different meaning from that which they originally bore—in cases where terms of art or science occur—in mercantile contracts, which in many instances use a peculiar language, intelligible to those only who are conversant with trade and commerce—and in other cases in which the words, besides their general common meaning, have acquired by custom or otherwise a well-known peculiar idiomatic meaning in the particular country in which the party using them was dwelling, or in the particular society of which he formed a member, and in which he passed his life. In all these cases evidence is admitted to expound the real meaning of the language used in an instrument, in order to enable the Court or Judge to construe it, and to carry such real meaning into effect.

As illustrating the subject before us, two modern cases may be mentioned. (1.) In Leidemann v. Schultz (i), it appeared that the defendant had chartered the plaintiff's

(g) Ante, p. 504 ; post, pp. 512, 513.

(h) Ancient grants and charters, when ambiguous, may be explained by evidence of modern usage : Calmady v. Rowe, 6 C. B. 861, 893, n. (a) : Reg. v. Powell, 3 E. & B. 377 ; Duke of Beaufort v. Mayor of Swansea, 3 Exch. 413, 425 ; Reg. v. Master of Dulwich College, 17 Q. B. 600 ; Master, Pilots, &c., of Newcastle-upon-Tyne v. Bradley, 2 E. & B. 428, n. (a) ; Bradley v. Master, &c., of Newcastle, 2 E. & B. 427.

(i) 14 C. B. 38, with which compare Hudson v. Clementson, 18 C. B. 213.

See also Lawson v. Burness, 1 H. & C. 396 ; Caine v. Horsfall, 1 Exch. 519 ; Cockburn v. Alexander, 6 C. B. 791 ; Robertson v. French, 4 East, 130 ; cited per Crompton, J., Gumm v. Tyrie, 33 L. J., Q. B., 111 ; Lee-ning v. Snailh, 16 Q. B. 275 ; Moore v. Campbell, 10 Exch. 323 ; Gorriessen v. Perrin, 2 C. B., N. S., 681.

vessel to proceed to Newcastle, and there to be ready forthwith, "in regular turns of loading," to take on board a cargo of coal and coke. The Court of Common Pleas held, that, if there were a usage at the port in question which could explain this particular expression, evidence of such usage was admissible for that purpose. (2.) In Brown v. Byrne (k), the action was for freight by a shipowner against the indorsee of a bill of lading, which made certain goods deliverable to the order of the shipper or his assigns, he or they paying freight for the same at a certain rate per pound. The defendant having received the goods under the bill of lading, the question arose, whether he was entitled, by the custom of Liverpool, to claim a deduction of three months' discount from the freight? The Court held, on the authority of Hutton v. Warren (l), that he was so entitled, for "the contract settles the rate of freight: whether or not discount is to be allowed on the payment, it leaves open; and to that the custom applies" (m).

Evidence to annex terms to written
contract.

Not only may an expression which is susceptible of a technical meaning when occurring in a mercantile contract be thus, often, submitted for translation to the jury, but it is clearly established that an incident may be annexed to a written contract, either by the usage of trade or by the common law of the land (n), in certain cases.

The custom of trade, which is a matter of evidence, may be used to annex incidents to all written contracts—commercial, agricultural, and others,—which do not by their terms exclude it; upon the presumption that the parties

(k) 3 E. & B. 703, cited and explained judgm., Cuthbert v. Cumming, 10 Exch. 815; S. C., 11 Id. 405; and in Hall v. Janson, 4 E. & B. 500; followed in Graves v. Legg, 11 Exch. 645, 646; S. C., 9 Id. 709; 2 H. & N. 210; Lucas v. Bristow, E. B. & E. 907, 913.

(l) 1 M. & W. 466.

(m) See also Jones v. Clarke, 2 H. & N. 725; Allan v. Sundius, 2 H. & C. 123; Gibson v. Crick, Id. 142.

(n) Gibson v. Snall, 4 H. L. Ca. 397; Burges v. Wickham, 8 B. & S. 669, 696; Biccard v. Shepherd, 14 Moo. P. C. C. 471.

have contracted with reference to such usage, if it is applicable (o). "Customs of trade," it has been said, "consistent with the terms of a written mercantile instrument, may be admissible, Tacitè inesse videntur quæ sunt moris et consuetudinis" (p).

Incidents may also be annexed to a contract by the custom of the country, or by the common law (q).

As showing that evidence of custom is admissible to annex terms to a written contract, provided they be not inconsistent with it (r), Wigglesworth v. Dallison (s), should be consulted. It was there held, that a tenant, by lease under seal, might give in evidence a custom of the country (t) that he should have the way-going crop after the expiration of his term, such custom not being repugnant to the express words and covenants of the lease. "The custom," said Lord Mansfield, "only superadds a right which is consequential to the taking—as a heriot may be due by custom, although not mentioned in the grant or lease."

In Syers v. Jonas (u), the contract under consideration of the Court was purely mercantile. It was for the sale of a specific parcel of tobacco which made no reference to any sample, and yet evidence was received to show, that, by the usage of the tobacco trade, all sales were by sample, whether the contract did or did not so specify. The evidence proffered was here held to be receivable, upon the ground that the incident sought to be annexed to the written contract was not inconsistent with it, nor impliedly excluded by it; and

(o) Gibson v. Small, 4 H. L. Ca. 397.

(p) Judgm., Suse v. Pompe, 8 C. B., N. S., 567.

(q) Gibson v. Small, 4 H. L. Ca. 397.

(r) As to this qualification of the rule, see post, pp. 510 et seq.

(s) Dougl. 201.

See also Faviell v. Gaskoin, 7 Exch.

273; Hutton v. Warren, 1 M. & W. 466; Muncey v. Dennis, 1 H. & N. 216; Symonds v. Lloyd, 6 C. B., N. S., 691.

(t) Ante, pp. 11, 15.

(u) 2 Exch. 111, with which compare Phillipps v. Briard, 1 H. & N. 21; Harnor v. Groves, 15 C. B. 667.

See also Lockett v. Nicklin, 2 Exch. 93.

the general rules laid down in former decisions were fully recognised and affirmed.

Again, in Metzner v. Bolton (x), the declaration stated that the plaintiff entered into the service of the defendant as a commercial traveller, at a yearly salary, and that the defendant agreed to continue him in his employ for a whole year, but discharged the plaintiff before the expiry of the time specified. To this declaration the plea was non assumpsit. At the trial the plaintiff himself was called as a witness, and in cross-examination admitted that there was a usage in the trade to dismiss with three months' notice; and the Court thought that evidence of this usage was properly admissible to annex a term to the written contract, for, "general usages are tacitly annexed to all contracts relating to the business with reference to which they are made, unless the terms of such contracts expressly or impliedly exclude them."

In Humfrey v. Dale (y), evidence of usage in a particular trade was held admissible to fix with liability as principals brokers, who in that character had signed a contract for the purchase of oil, which was therein described as sold to their principals—such usage not contradicting the written instrument, but explaining its terms or adding to them a tacitly implied incident (z).

The limitation of the leading rule just intimated must, however, be carefully kept in view. Evidence of usage is inadmissible if it be inconsistent with, or if expressly or by implication it contradict, the terms of the written contract between the parties (a). "Usage," says Lord Lyndhurst,

Evidence of usage inadmissible to vary the terms of a written contract.

(x) 9 Exch. 518, cited per Martin, B., Wheeler v. Bavidge, Id. 671; Parker v. Ibbetson, 4 C. B., N. S., 352.

(y) 7 E. & B. 266; S. C. (affirmed in Error), E. B. & E. 1004, where the prior cases are commented on.

(z) See also Field v. Lelean, 6 H. & N. 617, commenting on Spartali v. Benecke, 10 C. B. 212.

(a) See judgment, 3 E. & B. 703; Preston v. Merceau, 2 W. Bl. 1249.

C. B. (b), "may be admissible to explain what is doubtful ; it is never admissible to contradict what is plain" (c).

In Webb v. Plummer (d), it appeared that the plaintiff had held a farm under a lease containing a covenant, that the lessee should, on an assignment of the term, be paid by the incoming tenant for certain specified matters connected with the cultivation of the farm. The action was brought to recover a sum of money for foldage (e), being an allowance which, by the custom of the country, was payable to an outgoing by an incoming tenant, but which was not mentioned in the covenant. This evidence was held inadmissible, upon the ground that the express stipulation for certain specified allowances excluded a claim for any other matter ; Bayley, J., observing, that if the lease had been silent as to the terms upon which the tenant was to quit, the custom of the country might have been relied upon as evidence in support of the right, but that the distinct mention of some allowances excluded others not named.

The following remarks of Mr. Justice Coleridge, delivering judgment in a recent case (f), exhibit so lucidly the foundation and limits of that particular rule of our law of evidence, to an examination of which this chapter is principally devoted, that any further comments having reference to it will

(b) Blackett v. Royal Exch. Ass. Co., 2 Cr. & J. 249 ; as to which see per Cockburn, C. J., Myers v. Sarl, 30 L. J., Q. B., 13 ; Miller v. Tetherington, 7 H. & N. 954 ; S. C., 6 Id. 278, 288 ; Hall v. Janson, 4 E. & B. 500.

(c) See Godts v. Rose, 17 C. B. 229, 234 ; Hitchin v. Groom, 5 C. B. 515. Smith v. Jeffryes, 15 M. & W. 561, will, if carefully scrutinised, be found useful, as showing the difference which exists between evidence merely explanatory of the meaning of a word used in trade, and evidence which goes beyond this limit, and would have the effect of setting up a new contract between the parties. See also Nichol v. Godts, 10 Exch. 191, 194.

(d) 2 B. & Ald. 746.

See also Re Stroud, 8 C. B. 502, and cases there cited ; Clarke v. Roystone, 13 M. & W. 752.

(e) See Roberts v. Barker, 1 Cr. & M. 808 ; Termes de la Ley, tit. "Faldage."

(f) Brown v. Byrne, 3 E. & B. 703 (the facts in which case are shortly stated, ante, p. 508), followed in Lucas v. Bristow, E. B. & E. 907, 913.

In such cases the Court may at once determine, upon the inspection of the instrument, that it belongs to the province of the jury to ascertain the meaning of the words; and therefore that in the inquiry extrinsic evidence to some extent must be admissible" (n).

Besides the above, there are also some other cases in which the meaning of words employed in a written instrument is a fit subject of inquiry upon evidence before a jury; but these arise not out of the language of the writing itself, but in consequence of facts that are brought to the knowledge of the Court by evidence dehors the instrument. "In such cases, the first duty of the Court is to ascertain the meaning of the words themselves, taken in connection with the whole context, and next to apply them to their proper object. In ascertaining the meaning of any particular terms, the first rule is, that they are to be taken in their plain and ordinary meaning, unless from the context it should appear that the party has used them in a different sense. The first step in the inquiry, therefore, would be, whether it appears upon the face of the instrument itself that the writer has used the terms in any particular or extraordinary sense; for, if that should be the case, then the instrument must be construed according to that particular sense, whether more or less extensive than the primary meaning of the words themselves. But if no such intention appears upon the face of the writing, it then becomes the duty of the Court to construe the words according to their plain, general, ordinary meaning (o), (n) In Lewis v. Marshall, 7 M. & Gr. 743-4, the Court observe, "We take the acknowledged distinction to be this:—If the evidence offered at the trial by either party is evidence by law admissible for the determination of the question before a jury, the Judge is bound to lay it before them, and to call upon them to decide upon the effect of such evidence; but whether such evidence, when offered, is of that character and description which makes it admissible by law, is a question which is for the determination of the Judge alone, and is left solely to his decision."

(o) "The general rule," says Tindal, C. J., 5 Scott, N. R., 1037, "I take to be, that, where the words of any written instrument are free from ambiguity in themselves, and where ex-subject to certain qualifications. First, if the words used be technical terms of law, the Court must take them according to their strict legal acceptation, although in general and ordinary use they may have acquired a more extensive or a more limited sense: secondly, whether they are technical terms of law or words of ordinary use, the Court may give them a more enlarged or more limited construction, whenever it is found that they cannot otherwise be applied at all" (p).

In Gether v. Capper (q), two methods of construing mercantile contracts are thus indicated by Maule, J.,—such instruments, he remarks, "are frequently so framed as to require considerable force of construction to apply them; and in such cases the Courts have considered that they ought to be dealt with so as to give effect to the general intent that is to be gathered from the whole of the instrument," this rule of construction is, however, "to be had recourse to only in cases of necessity, where it is pretty clear that the parties had some intention which cannot take effect at all if a rigid rule of construction be applied to the instrument." But again—it is imperative on the Court "to adhere to the language of the contract where it has provided exactly for the event which ternal circumstances do not create any doubt or difficulty as to the proper application of those words to claimants under the instrument or the subject-matter to which the instrument relates, such instrument is always to be construed according to the strict, plain, common meaning of the words themselves; and that, in such case, evidence dehors the instrument, for the purpose of explaining it according to the surmised or alleged intention of the parties to the instrument, is utterly inadmissible."

"Where the intention of the parties to a contract is sufficiently apparent, effect must be given to it in that sense, though some violence be thereby done to its words. Where the intention is doubtful, the safest course is to take the words in their ordinary sense." Per Cresswell, J., Wilson v. Bevan, 7 C. B. 684.

See Covas v. Bingham, 23 L. J., Q. B., 26; Sweeting v. Darthez, 14 C. B. 538; Reid v. Fairbanks, 13 C. B. 692; Heseltine v. Siggers, 1 Exch. 856; per Parke, B., Bland v. Crowley, 6 Exch. 529.

(p) Per Erskine, J., 5 Scott, N. R., 988-9.

(q) 15 C. B. 707; S. C., Id. 39.

has happened. A party has a right to say—‘I have used language which aptly expresses my intention, and therefore it is unnecessary to have recourse to the power of construction which is applied to obscure and doubtful contracts. I only ask of the Court to give the natural meaning to the words used in the instrument before it, without looking either to the right or to the left.’”

In regard to the third class of cases specified at p. 513, it will be sufficient to say, that where there is an election to be made between two meanings, either of which is assignable to a phrase or expression occurring in a written contract, or between two or more persons or things, to which such contract may relate, the question will properly be one for the jury, not for the Court to determine (r).

Where, moreover, a question as to usage or custom arises upon a mercantile contract or upon a lease, and the jury are charged with its solution, the matter for their consideration will be :—whether there was a recognised practice and usage with reference to the transaction out of which the particular written contract, which is the subject-matter of the action, arose, and to which it related, which gave a particular sense to the words employed in it, so that the parties might be supposed to have used the words in such sense (s); or whether there was, in truth, any local custom such as it had been proposed to annex to the written contract.

The character and description of evidence admissible for the purpose of thus annexing a term to a mercantile contract, is the fact of a general usage and practice prevailing in the particular trade or business, not the judgment and opinion of the witnesses who may be called to speak to it; for a contract may be safely and correctly interpreted by reference to the fact of usage, as it may be presumed that such fact was known to the contracting parties, and that they contracted in conformity thereto (though no such presumption can arise where one of the contracting parties was ignorant of the usage (t)); the judgment or opinion of witnesses, however, affords no safe guide for interpretation, because such judgment or opinion must necessarily be confined to their own knowledge (u).

(r) See per Maule, J., Smith v. Thompson, 8 C. B. 52. (s) Judgm., 7 M. & Gr. 744.

Again, in order to justify the jury in finding for the usage, it must be shown to be certain, and to be general, in the branch of trade or business in regard to which it is set up, so as to authorise a presumption that it is known to those dealing or concerned in that branch of trade or business; for the rights of parties ought to be determined by law, and not by any vague, indeterminate, or partial usage of particular persons or places, a strict adherence to this principle is essential to a sound and consistent administration of justice. A departure from it would work great injustice, for no man could know what were his rights or duties, if they were to be determined by loose evidence of custom or usage (x).

Notwithstanding the adverse opinions expressed by some eminent judges (y), in regard to the policy of admitting evidence of usage or custom to explain or vary (z) written instruments, it will be collected from what has been thus far said, that evidence of usage may be offered for various purposes in connection with their interpretation.

(t) Judgm., Kirchner v. Venus, 12 Moo. P. C. C. 361, 399; acc. Sweeting v. Pearce, 7 C. B., N. S., 449; S. C., 9 Id. 534.

(u) Judgm., 7 M. & Gr. 744.

(x) Berkshire Woollen Co. v. Proctor, 7 Cushing (U. S.) R. 422; Judgm., Re Stroud, 8 C. B. 531.

(y) See, per Lord Denman, C. J., Trueman v. Loder, 11 Ad. & E. 597; per Story, J., Donnell v. Columbian Insur. Co., 2 Sumn. (U. S.) R. 377; Judgm., Hutton v. Warren, 1 M. & W. 475.

As to Trueman v. Loder, supra, see Dale v. Humfrey, E. B. & E. 1004; S. C., 7 E. & B. 266, 277; Brown v. Byrne, 3 E. & B. 703.

(z) The meaning of an instrument is, in truth, varied by annexing a term to it (ante, p. 512), even though such term be not inconsistent with anything in the instrument.

It may, for instance, in some cases be offered to annex incidents to them, to explain a particular word or phrase appearing therein, or to clear up and render definite and precise that which was indefinite and ambiguous. Confining my attention for a moment to the case of an ambiguous contract, we must remember that it rests with the plaintiff suing ex contractu, to set forth in his declaration with precision the agreement upon which he relies, and should he at the trial fail in establishing such an agreement, he may be nonsuited, or, at all events, may have to apply for leave to amend (a). Again, should the contract itself, which he then produces in evidence, be altogether ambiguous and meaningless, he will equally fail, because, as just observed, the onus is cast upon him of making out his right of action, and, further than this, of convincing the Court that the construction which he has put upon the particular contract in declaring, is the true one—all which he would have failed in doing if the matter were left at all doubtful.

In an Anonymous case (b), illustrative of the foregoing remark, the jury found that the contract produced to them was "quite unintelligible;" and the Judge was held justified in ruling thereupon that the plaintiff had failed to sustain

(a) It is moreover a rule, that "ambiguum placitum interpretari debet contra proferentem:" Leg. Max., 4th ed., p. 577.

But, "if a declaration contains allegations capable of being understood in two senses, and if understood in one sense it will sustain the action, and in another it will not; after verdict it must be construed in the sense which will support the action:" per Lord Truro, 13 C. B. 542.

"In pleading (except in deducing title), a deed may be set out, either in its terms, leaving the Court to construe it according to the legal effect of those terms, or the party may take the responsibility of stating it according to the legal effect which it is contended to have:" Judgm., Lord Newborough v. Schröder, 7 C. B. 397.

Where a promise is ambiguous, it is to be construed "according to the sense in which the promisor must be supposed to wish and to believe that the promisee should be understood by the promisee:" Judgm., Mowatt v. Lord Londesborough, 23 L. J., Q. B., 177, 184; S. C., 3 E. & B. 307.

(b) Cited per Jervia, C. J., 10 C. B. 889. See Duncan v. Topham, 8 C. B. 225.

his declaration. Boden v. French (c) may also be consulted upon this subject. There the plaintiff declared against the defendant, who was a coal factor, for a breach of contract, in selling coals "otherwise than for ready money, to wit, at two months' credit." In order to sustain his action, the plaintiff produced a letter of instructions from himself to the defendant, directing him to sell coal "at such price as would realise not less than — per ton net cash." He proved also, that the coal in question had been sold at a credit of two months; but it appeared to be customary in the coal trade to sell coal at such credit, unless it was sold on the wharf. The Court were of opinion that the letter of instructions was essentially ambiguous in its terms—admitting of at least three different significations—and that, regard being had to the usage proved at the trial, the meaning which the plaintiff himself had assigned to the instructions was not the true one. In this case, accordingly, the plaintiff was nonsuited.

Although in the preceding chapter I have not attempted to enter generally upon an examination of even the leading rules of construction applicable to written contracts, I cannot at its conclusion forbear from laying before the student the following brief epitome of some of the rules alluded to—so worded as perchance, without much effort, to fix itself in the memory:—

"The sages of the law," it has been said (d), "in the exposition of treaties, pacts, statutes, testaments, deeds, and other instruments, have used and handed down to us rules which are commended as the dictates of enlightened reason and common sense," whereof the following will suffice for the present, viz.—

(c) 10 C. B. 886.

(d) See arg., Randon v. Toby, 11 Howard (U. S.) B. 511.

1. That the construction be made on the entire instrument and that one part of it do help to expound another, and that every word (if it may be) may take effect, and none be rejected, and that all the parts do agree together, and there be no discordance therein—ex antecedentibus et consequentibus est optima interpretatio, for turpis est pars quæ cum suo toto non convenit, maledicta expositio quæ corrumpit textum.

2. That the construction be such as that the whole and every part of it may take effect, and as much effect as may be for that purpose for which it was made (e).

3. To cavil about the words in subversion of the plain intent of the parties, is a malice against justice and the nurse of injustice (f).

4. A man ought not to rest on the letter only, nam qui hæret in literâ hæret in cortice, but he ought to rely upon the sense, which is the kernel and the fruit, whereas the letter is but the shell (g).

5. Falsa orthographia, falsa grammatica non vitiat cartam vel concessionem; nor the singular instead of the plural number, nor the plural instead of the singular (h).

6. The office of a good expositor is to make construction on all the parts together of an instrument, and not of one part only by itself—nemo enim aliquam partem recte intelligere possit antequam totum iterum atque iterum perlegerit (i).

7. Construction must be made in suppression of the mis- chief and in advancement of the remedy (k).

— Should the construction proffered of an instrument be found to violate any of the rules above laid down, ex. gr., by (e) Shepp. Touch. 87.

(f) See Throckmerton v. Tracy, Plowd. 161.

(g) Eyston v. Studd, Plowd. 467.

(h) Earl of Shrewsbury's case, 9

Rep. 48 a; Co. Litt. 146 b.

(i) Lincoln College case, 3 Rep. 59 b; 8 Vin. Abr. 181.

(k) Co. Litt. 381 b.

dwelling upon a word only in disregard of the preceding and succeeding parts ; should it corrupt the text or go but skin deep into its meaning, overlooking the general purport and effect of the writing—we may at once reject it as fallacious, as based on wrong principles, and as likely to frustrate rather than effectuate the intention of the contracting parties.

CHAPTER V.

THE CAPACITY TO CONTRACT—HOW IT MAY BE AFFECTED.

I HAVE now to speak of the capacity to contract—to show how in some cases this capacity may be affected by the character with which a contracting party is clothed—how, in other cases, where the capacity to contract remains unimpaired, the mode of contracting is nevertheless subjected to modification.

The matters intended for consideration in this Chapter seem naturally to subdivide themselves into two branches, of which the first will involve an examination of contracts by Mercantile Persons, to wit, Principal and Agent—Partners—Incorporated Bodies—Bankrupts; and the second will include such inquiries as may appear requisite in regard to contracts by Non-mercantile Persons, to wit, Females Coverts, Infants, Non Compos Mentis, Executors and Administrators.

In treating of contracts by the particular parties just enumerated, I shall endeavour strictly to confine my attention to the subject indicated by the general heading of this Chapter, referring, for fuller information respecting the various topics touched upon, to such standard works as will from time to time be specified.

SECT. I.—Contracts with Mercantile Persons.

In treating of the mode of contracting by mercantile persons, of the manner in which their contracts may be affected by the characters which they have assumed, or by the relations which exist between them, some brief remarks must first be made on the relation of Principal and Agent, which is one of paramount importance in regard to the proposed inquiry.

Agency—how constituted.

"Agency," says Mr. Chancellor Kent in his Commentaries (a), "is founded upon a contract, either express or implied, by which one of the parties confides to the other the management of some business to be transacted in his name or on his account, and by which the other assumes to do the business and to render an account of it." As the obligatory force of a contract rests on the consent of the contracting parties (b), so the authority of an agent to contract for his principal rests on the consent of his principal; and the question, whether there was consent to the contract or to the authority, is to be tried according to the general principles for trying other questions (c).

The maxim of the Roman law, Qui mandat ipse fecisse videtur (d), indicates briefly, but correctly, the ground of liability of a principal for the act of his agent; and, in the 6th Book of the Decretals (e), (which are a component part of the Corpus Juris Canonici (f)), we meet with the same rule, expressed almost in the form which is so familiar to our lawyers, Qui facit per alium est perinde ac si faciat per seipsum.

The mere enunciation of the rule just stated, shows how wide must be its practical applicability; and a little reflection will convince us, that comparatively few mercantile transactions, or contracts made in the ordinary course of life, are conducted exclusively by the principals, and without the intervention of any third party. A merchant, for example,

(a) 10th ed., vol. 2, p. 848.

(b) Ante, p. 252.

(c) Per Erle, J., Frost v. Oliver, 2 E. & B. 318.

Obligatio mandati consensu contrahentium consistit. D. 17. 1. pr.

(d) Mandare est gerendum quid alicui committere. Brisson. ad verb. "Mandare."

(e) Ad finem. (Reg. Jur. 72.)

(f) As to which see Irving's Civ. L., 4th ed., pp. 231-235.

employs his clerk to write his usual business letters, to keep his books, and, not unfrequently, to conduct his most confidential and important negotiations. So, if a person enters a shop, in order to purchase the common necessities of life, he will, in most cases, have to deal, not immediately with the principal, but with his servant or agent, entrusted with the management of his business, whose duty it is to hand over to customers such things as may be required, and who is authorised to receive from them the price.

It is, moreover, a true proposition, subject only to some few exceptions, that "whatever a man sui juris may do of himself he may do by another" (g); and hence we may readily infer, that the matters transacted through the medium of agents are vastly multifarious. The question, indeed, in all cases in which a plaintiff seeks to fix a defendant with liability upon a contract, express or implied, must necessarily be "whether such contract was made by the defendant by himself or his agent, with the plaintiff or his agent" (h), and not merely whether the contract was entered into by the parties treating directly with each other. "It is a clear rule that where a person is professedly acting as agent for another the principal is bound and not the agent" (i).

There are, indeed, some persons, ex. gr., infants, married women, idiots, lunatics, and outlaws, who, for reasons which will be specified in the subsequent section of this Chapter, are wholly or partially incapable of contracting, and who are

(g) Story on Agency, 4th ed., p. 3.

To the above rule there are, however (as intimated in the text), some exceptions. Thus, in Combes's case, 9 Rep. 76 a, it is said that "there are some things personal and so inseparably annexed to the person of a man that he cannot do them by another." So the performance of a work of taste or art confided to A. could not by him be delegated to B.; nor could a judicial officer, unless under some special statutory provision, depute his functions to another.

(h) Judgm., 15 M. & W. 526. See Coombs v. Bristol and Exeter R. Co., 3 H. & N. 1.

(i) Judgm., Lee v. Evered, 2 H. & N. 291.

therefore, to a like extent, incapacitated from contracting by agent (k). It by no means, however, follows that a person incapable of contracting on his own behalf is incapacitated from acting as agent for another ; thus, a married woman may plead her coverture in answer to an action brought against her as indorser of a promissory note, but she may bind her husband by indorsing it provided she be duly authorised by him for that purpose (l). So, an infant may, in many cases, act as agent for an adult (m).

The authority confided to an agent may be of one or other of three kinds : There may be, 1. an express limited authority given to the agent to do some particular act, or to make some particular contract ; 2. a larger authority, to make all contracts, or to do all acts connected with a particular trade, business, or employment (n) ; or, 3. an authority to do all acts, without reference to their precise character, which the principal may personally do, and which he may, without violating the law, do by deputy. The first of these three kinds of authority will suffice to constitute a special, the second, to constitute a general, the third, to constitute an universal, agency ; but, as this last species of agency is (as may readily be supposed) of rare occurrence, we may here properly confine our attention to the two former kinds.

Of a special agency, an example would occur, if I commissioned a friend to purchase a specific thing for me and on my account ; of a general agency, where my servant orders goods of the neighbouring tradesmen for my use, without any express instructions from me, but in the usual and admitted course of his duty (o).

(k) Story on Agency, 4th ed., p. 6.

Hall, supra.

(l) Lord v. Hall, 8 C. B. 627 ;
Lindus v. Bradwell, 5 C. B. 583 ;
Cotes v. Davis, 1 Camp. 485. See
Smith v. Marsack, 6 C. B. 486.

(n) Story on Agency, 4th ed., p. 19.

(o) See, per Lord Abinger, C. B., 2
M. & W. 181. Summers v. Solomon,
 7 E. & B. 879, exemplifies the nature of a general agency.

(m) Co. Litt. 52. a. See Lord v.

In relation to this latter kind of agency, Dr. Story (p) remarks, that "one man may be a general agent for his principal in one business, and another may be his general agent in another business : and, in such case, each agent will be limited in his authority to the particular business within the scope of his peculiar agency." Thus, "if a man should be at once a banker and a merchant, carrying on each business distinctly, with separate clerks and agents for each branch, an agent in the one would not be deemed to possess any authority to act in the other ; although each would or might, in a legal sense, be deemed a general agent."

Fact of agency—
how proved,

The fact of agency may be proved by showing an express authority given to the alleged agent ; by showing circumstances from which the requisite authority must necessarily or may reasonably be inferred ; or by establishing the existence of a particular relation between parties whence an authority to contract will be implied by law : for instance, the relation of partners, by which relation, when complete, one partner becomes at common law the agent of the firm for all purposes necessary for carrying on their particular partnership, whether general or special, or usually belonging to it ; or the relation of husband and wife, by virtue of which the law, under certain circumstances, considers the husband to make his wife an agent (q).

—in an action for goods sold and delivered, &c.

To explain and illustrate these remarks, let us suppose that an action for goods sold and delivered, or for work and labour, is brought by A. against B. The plaintiff, on whom, in such a case, the burthen of proof lies, must, in order to recover against the defendant, show that he (the defendant) contracted expressly or impliedly with the plaintiff ; expressly, by making a contract with the plaintiff ; impliedly, by giving an order to him under such circumstances as show that it was not to be gratuitously executed ; and if the contract was not made by the defendant in person, it must be proved that it was made by an agent of the defendant duly authorised, and that it was made as his contract (r). Assuming that the contract in the given case was made by a third person, the point for decision will be—whether that third person was an agent for the defendant for the purpose of making it, and made the contract as such (s).

Now, in accordance with what has been already said, the agency may, under the circumstances supposed, be constituted by an express limited authority to make such a contract, or a larger authority to make all contracts falling within the class or description to which it belongs, or a general authority to make any; or it may be proved by showing that such a relation existed between the parties as by law would create the authority. If proof to such effect be given, and if further it be shown that the agent in making the contract acted on the authority given to him, the principal will be bound by the contract, and the agent's contract will be his contract, but not otherwise (t).

Agency, then, may be created by the immediate act of the principal, that is, by really giving authority to the agent, or representing to him that he is to have it; or by constituting that relation to which the law attaches agency. It may also be created by the representation of the defendant to the plaintiff that the party making the contract is the agent of the defendant, or that such relation exists as to constitute him agent; and if the plaintiff really makes the contract on the faith of such representation, the defendant is bound, because he is estopped from disputing the truth of it with respect to that contract (u); and the representation of an (r) Judgm., Reynell v. Lewis, and Wyld v. Hopkins, 15 M. & W. 527; Cross v. Williams, 7 H. & N. 675. See Higgins v. Hopkins, 3 Exch. 163; Bailey v. Macauley, 13 Q. B. 815; Patrick v. Reynolds, 1 C. B., N. S., 727.

(s) See note (r).

(t) Judgm., 15 M. & W. 527.

(u) Collingwood v. Berkeley, 15 C. B., N. S., 145. The rule is that "If a man so conducts himself, whether intentionally or not, that a reasonable person would infer that a certain state authority, is quoad hoc (by virtue of the doctrine of estoppel) precisely the same thing as a real authority given by the defendant to the supposed agent. This representation may be made directly to the plaintiff, or made publicly, so that it may be inferred to have reached him, and may be made by words or conduct (x).

Upon none of the foregoing propositions is there any doubt; and the true decision of all questions involving the law of agency depends upon the proper application of the principles set forth in them to the facts; such application being made by the jury, with due assistance from the Judge.

Assuming that an agency of some kind does in any given case exist, an important difference is to be noted between a 'general' and a 'particular' agency; for, "if a particular agent exceed his authority, his principal is not bound by what he does (y); whereas, if a general agent exceed his authority, his principal is bound, provided what he does is within the ordinary and usual scope of the business which he is deputed to transact" (z). "If a man by his conduct holds out another as his agent—by permitting him to act in that character and deal with the world as a general agent, he must be taken to be the general agent of the person for whom he so acts, and the latter is bound, though in a particular instance the agent may have exceeded his authority" (a).

of things exists, and acts on that inference, he shall be afterwards estopped from denying it:" per Bramwell, B., Cornish v. Abington, 4 H. & N. 556.

(x) Judgm., 15 M. & W. 527-8, 530, where the operation of the above rule is explained. Judgm., Freeman v. Cooke, 2 Exch. 662; cited Bank of Ireland v. Trustees of Evans' Charity, 5 H. L. Ca. 399; Swan v. North British Australasian Co., 2 H. & C. 175; S. C., 7 H. & N. 608; Ex parte Swan, 7 C. B., N. S., 400; and cases cited as illustrating the doctrine of estoppel in pais, post, Book III., Chap. 4. Sweeting v. Pearce, 7 C. B., N. S., 449; S. C., 9 Id. 534.

(y) See, per Eile, C. J., Sickens v. Irving, 29 L. J., C. P., 25, 29; S. C., 7 C. B., N. S., 165; Brady v. Todd, 9 C. B., N. S., 592; Painter v. Abel, 2 H. & C. 113.

(z) Smith Lects. on Contracts, 2nd ed., p. 305; Smith Merc. L., 6th ed., p. 135.

(a) Per Pollock, C. B., Smith v. M'Guire, 3 H. & N. 562.

one person authorises another to assume the apparent of disposing of property in the ordinary course of trade, it must be presumed that the apparent is the real authority, because strangers can only look to the acts of the parties, and to the external indicia of property, and cannot know the private communications which may pass between a principal and his agent (b). If, however, a shopman, who is authorised to receive payment for goods sold over the counter only, receives money elsewhere than in the shop, that payment would not necessarily be good. The principal might be willing to trust the agent to receive money for him in the regular course of business in the shop when the latter was under his own eye, or under the eyes of those in whom he had confidence, but he might not wish to trust the agent with the receipt of money elsewhere (c).

The decision in Cox v The Midland Counties R. C. (d) has peculiar interest with reference to the power possessed by an agent to bind his principal ex contractu. It was there held, that the station master of a railway company could not bind the company by a contract for surgical attendance on an injured passenger without express authority for that purpose, for the employer of an agent for a particular purpose gives only the authority necessary for that agency under ordinary circumstances, or the powers usually exercised by similar agents, if there be any evidence to show a particular usage. "Could it," asked the Court, "be maintained that a coachman, from whose carriage a passenger had fallen and broken his arm, or by which another person had been run over, . . . could bind his master by a contract with a surgeon to cure

(b) Per Lord Ellenborough, C. J., Pickering v. Busk, 15 East, 38; Whitehead v. Tuckett, Id. 400.

(c) Judgm., Kaye v. Brett, 5 Exch. 274; Story on Agency, 4th ed., p. 113.

(d) 3 Exch. 268. Another point raised in this case was, as to the power of the company to appoint the servant, who assumed to act in their behalf, without an instrument under seal—as to which, see post, title "Corporation." See also Giles v. Taff Vale R. C., 2 R. & B. 822; Giff v. Great Northern R. C., 30 L. J., Q. B., 148.

the injured person, and oblige his master to pay the bill? We are of opinion that he could not."

Authority of agent extends to matters incidental to subject-matter of agency.

The authority, however, confided to an agent must, unless a contrary intention manifestly appears, be understood as extending to everything which is necessary for or usually incidental to exercising it with effect, or carrying out the object for which it was entrusted (e). For instance, an attorney, having been once retained in an action, has clearly cast upon him the duty of taking the necessary steps during its progress, but is not obliged to consult his client, or to seek specific instructions from him prior to each successive step in the action. Where, therefore, the town council of a borough retained an attorney to take proceedings in opposition to a rule nisi for a mandamus which had actually been obtained against them, and (the rule having been made absolute) they ordered their return to the writ of mandamus to be filed, this was held to be a sufficient authority for the attorney to appear for the corporation at the trial of certain issues raised on the return (f).

Let us take, on the other hand, the case of an attorney who (without having a general retainer) is authorised to do some particular act; his authority will then necessarily be confined to doing such act; and his right to recover for work done and matters incidental thereto, as against his client, will depend upon whether the business charged for fell within the scope of the authority with which he was invested or not (g). An attorney is not justified in pledging his client's credit to a bailiff or other officer for fees, which, according to the usual course of practice, he ought, in the first instance, to pay out of his own pocket (h). The attorney in the cause has been held liable for the costs of executing a ca. sa. to the bailiff, although not specially nominated by him (i).

(e) Story on Agency, 4th ed., p. 77; Bayley v. Wilkins, 7 C. B. 886; Westropp v. Solomon, 8 Id. 345. "A master who sends his servant to buy goods, and gives him no money to pay, doubtless authorises him to pledge his credit; and a person who employs an agent to purchase goods on the usual terms of any particular trade, gives the like authority, and so in other instances." Judgm., 9 M. & W. 718. (See Summers v. Solomon, 7 E. & B. 879.)

In the above and similar cases, the rule of law and common sense applies quando aliquid mandatur—mandatur et omne per quod pervenitur ad illud (5 Rep. 116); a rule of which the precise mode of application must of course depend upon the particular kind of agency which may chance to be in question, and the nature and extent of the authority usually conferred thereby.

(f) Reg. v. Town Council of Lichfield, 10 Q. B. 534.

Much difficulty often exists in determining the extent of the implied authority of an agent; and, in reference to this point, when it arises, the nature of the agency in question, and the law applicable to it, will demand special consideration (k). A bare allusion to the important subject here mentioned will, in an elementary work like the present, be deemed sufficient. But I may add, that an inquiry as to the peculiar power possessed by the master of a ship in cases of urgency or necessity, to pledge the credit of the owner for repairs done to her, &c. (l)—to sell or hypothecate the ship

(g) See Dawson v. Lawley, 4 Esp. 65.

As to the duty of an attorney who has been retained to conduct a suit, see Whitehead v. Lord, 7 Exch. 691; Harris v. Osbourn, 2 Cr. & M. 629.

As to his power to refer it, see Chown v. Parrott, 14 C. B., N. S., 74, and cases there cited; Smith v. Troup, 7 C. B. 757, 764; Faviell v. Eastern Counties R. C., 2 Exch. 344, 351; Filmer v. Delber, 3 Taunt. 486.

The implied authority of counsel to consent to a compromise was considered in Swinfen v. Swinfen, 1 C. B., N. S., 364; Swinfen v. Lord Chelmsford, 5 H. & N. 890; and Chambers v. Mason, 5 C. B., N. S., 59.

(h) Maile v. Mann, 2 Exch. 608, and cases there cited.

(i) Brewer v. Jones, 10 Exch. 655.

(k) Hawtayne v. Bourne, 7 M. & W. 595, should be consulted in regard to the implied authority of an agent. It was there held, that the resident agent appointed by the directors of a mining company to manage the mine, is not impliedly authorised by the shareholders of the company to borrow money upon their credit in any case of necessity, however pressing. See particularly the judgment of Parke, B., in the above case: Ricketts v. Bennett, 4 C. B. 686; Burmester v. Norris, 6 Exch. 796; Tredwen v. Bourne, 6 M. & W. 461.

(l) Arthur v. Barton, 6 M. & W. 183; Edwards v. Havill, 14 C. B. 107; Beldon v. Campbell, 6 Exch. 886; Organ v. Brodie, 10 Exch. 449; Johns v. Simons, 2 Q. B. 425; Stonehouse v. Gent, Id. 431 (a); Frost v. Oliver, 2 E. & B. 301. See also 19 & 20 Vict. c. 97, s. 8.

As to evidence of ownership and liability of registered owner, see Myers v. Willis, 17 C. B. 77; S. C., 18 Id. 886; Brodie v. Howard, 17 C. B. 109; and cargo (m)—will illustrate the force of the remark above made, and amply repay the student.

Did the agent contract as such?

Besides the difficulty just indicated, another, having reference to fact rather than to law, not unfrequently presents itself, viz., in determining whether the particular act or transaction, in virtue of which it is sought to charge a supposed principal, was done by, or took place with, the agent in that character or on his own individual account; this question will obviously require solution by the jury. Its nature may be illustrated by the cases below cited (n).

What was the meaning and intention of the contracting parties?

Again, inasmuch as "a person acting in the capacity of an agent may undoubtedly contract in such a manner as to make himself personally liable" (o), the meaning and intention of the parties at the time of entering into an alleged contract, must be considered with a view to determining the liability upon it, and, in any case such as alluded to, the true question will be, "whether, from anything that passed between the parties at the time, it was understood by them that the plaintiff was to rely upon the personal security of Hackwood v. Lyall, Id. 124; MacKenzie v. Pooley, 11 Exch. 638; Whitwell v. Perrin, 4 C. B., N. S., 412, 416.

As to the power of one part owner to bind another for repairs, see Preston v. Tamplin, 2 H. & N. 363, 684.

(m) The Gratitude, 3 Rob. 240; Cammell & Sewell, 3 H. & N. 617, 635, 644; S. C., 5 Id. 728; Stainbank v. Fenning, 11 C. B. 51, 88; Stainbank v. Shepard, 13 C. B. 418; Willis v. Palmer, 7 C. B., N. S., 340, 360; Vlierboom v. Chapman, 13 M. & W. 230, 239; Hunter v. Parker, 7 M. & W. 322; Benson v. Duncan, 3 Exch. 644; S. C., 1 Exch. 537; Abbott, Shipp, p. 371. See Atkinson v. Stephens, 7 Exch. 567. Generally as to the duty of the master in case of damage to the ship, see Blasco v. Fletcher, 14 C. B., N. S., 147; Benson v. Chapman, 8 C. B. 950; S. C., 5 C. B. 330; 6 M. & Gr. 792; Story on Agency, 4th ed., pp. 139-148. See also Gibbs v. Grey, 2 H. & N. 22; Grey v. Gibbs, Id. 26; Barker v. Hingley, 15 C. B., N. S., 27; Bristow v. Whitmore, 9 H. L. Ca. 391.

(n) See Holcroft v. Hoggins, 2 C. B. 488; Parrott v. Anderson, 7 Exch. 93; Williams v. Deacon, 4 Exch. 397; Thompson v. Bell, 10 Exch. 10; Wilkinson v. Candlish, 5 Exch. 91; Kent v. Thomas, 1 H. & N. 473, 478; Jones v. Hughes, 5 Exch. 104; Cooke v. Sedey, 2 Exch. 746.

(o) Per Ashhurst, J., Macbeath v. Haldimand, 1 T. R. 181.

the defendant" (p); for it will not suffice that credit was given to the latter party unless he has pledged his credit either expressly or by implication (q).

I will now lay down a few leading propositions, and pass under review a few cases, showing the respective liability of principal and agent on a contract by the agent, 1. oral, wholly or in part; 2. written, but not under seal; 3. by specialty. The inquiry here suggested, however briefly conducted, may be useful, as throwing some further light upon the relative position of principal and agent; the capacity of a soi-disant agent to bind his principal; and the mode in which, with a view to his own protection from liability, an agent should contract.

Respective liability of principal and agent in certain cases.

1. Of contracts by an agent, oral, wholly or in part, the contract of sale specially claims our attention; and, in the first instance, it will be well to determine what are the rights of the seller of goods where the purchase has been made by an agent for a principal disclosed or undisclosed, and whether residing in this country or abroad, at the time of the contract. Now, the law upon this subject was fully discussed in three leading cases (r), viz, Paterson v. Gandasequi (s), Addison v. Gandasequi (t), and Thomson v. Davenport (u), upon which is wholly founded the legal doctrine recognised at this day as applicable to it (x).

Purchase of goods by agent.

The rules thus settled and established may be briefly stated as under:—

Where an agent contracts for the purchase of goods as principal, he, by so doing, incurs a personal liability; and

(p) Per Ashhurst, J., ubi supra; Pennell v. Alexander, 3 E. & B. 283.

(q) Autey v. Hutchinson, 6 C. B. 266 (in connection with which case see 12 & 13 Vict. c. 101, s. 8); Marsh v. Davies, 1 Exch. 668; see Chambres v. Jones, 5 Exch. 229; Moffatt v. Dickson, 13 C. B. 543.

(r) See the Note appended to these cases in Mr. Smith's Selection, 5th ed., vol. 2, p. 320.

(s) 15 Fast, 62.

(t) 4 Taunt. 574.

(u) 9 B. & C. 75.

(x) Per Maule, J., Smyth v. Anderson, 7 C. B. 34.

if the real principal be known to the vendor at the time of a contract for the sale of goods being entered into by the agent dealing in his own name, and credit be given to the agent, this latter party only can be sued on the contract (y). If, however, in this case, the seller of the goods make his election to debit the principal, he cannot afterwards resort to the agent (z). The question whether credit was given to the agent or to the principal being for the jury, for whose guidance in resolving it, evidence of custom and usage will (subject to the remarks made in the preceding chapter) be admissible (a).

Where the real principal in a contract for the purchase of goods (residing in this country) is unknown at the time of contracting, whether the agent represent himself as agent or not, the vendor may, on discovering the principal, debit either at his election (b), unless, indeed, something has been done to show an election on the part of the seller to take the agent as the actual buyer (c), and to exonerate the principal (d).

"I take it to be a general rule," says Lord Tenterden, C. J., in Thomson v. Davenport (e), "that if a person sells goods (supposing at the time of the contract he is dealing with a principal), but afterwards discovers that the person with whom he has been dealing is not the principal in the transaction, but agent for a third person, though he may in the meantime have debited the agent with it, he may after-(y) Paterson v. Gandasequi, 15 East, 62; Addison v. Gandasequi, 4 Taunt. 574; Thomson v. Davenport, 9 B. & C. 78.

(z) Per Lord Tenterden, C. J., and Littledale, J., Thomson v. Davenport, supra.

(a) The liability of an agent who purchases goods at a sale by auction was considered in Williamson v. Barton, 7 H. & N. 899.

(b) Thomson v. Davenport, 9 B. & C. 78. Per Parke, J., Robinson v. Gleadow, 2 Bing. N. C. 161, 162; Paterson v. Gandasequi, 15 East, 62; Railton v. Hodgson, 4 Taunt. 576, n.; Wilson v. Hart, 7 Taunt. 295.

(c) Per Maule, J., Smyth v. Anderson, 7 C. B. 34.

(d) Per Bayley, J., 9 B. & C. 89.

(e) 9 B. & C. 86.

wards recover the amount from the real principal; subject, however, to this qualification, that the state of the account between the principal and the agent is not altered to the prejudice of the principal," who in the case here put "is the real buyer, and ought to pay, unless there be something in the transaction which makes it inequitable or unjust that he should pay" (f). "If," says Martin, B., in a recent case (g), "the principal has paid the agent, or if the state of accounts between them would make it unjust that the seller should call upon the principal for payment, that would be an answer to the claim" of the vendor (h).

The rule just stated, however, respecting the liability of an undisclosed principal may be affected by the usage of trade and the mutual understanding between parties which results therefrom (i). Thus, where a British merchant effects a purchase for a foreign principal, credit is prima facie considered as having been given exclusively to the former (k), although evidence will be admissible to show a different intention (l).

Again, if an agent makes an oral contract in his own name, the principal may sue as well as be sued upon it; for it is a general rule, that whenever an express contract is made, an action is maintainable upon it, either in the name

(f) Per Maule, J., Smyth v. Anderson, 7 C. B. 35; Heald v. Kenworthy, 10 Exch. 739; Smethurst v. Mitchell, 1 E. & E. 622; Campbell v. Hicks, 28 L. J., Ex., 70. See Macfarlane v. Giannacopulo, 3 H. & N. 860; Risborough v. Bruckner, 3 C. B., N. S., 812.

(g) Barber v. Pott, 4 H. & N. 759, 767; per Hill, J., Smethurst v. Mitchell, supra.

(h) See Holland v. Russell, 1 B. & S. 424; S. C., 32 L. J., Q. B., 297.

(i) See, per Bayley, J., Power v. Butcher, 10 B. & C. 339-341; per Lord Ellenborough, C. J., Jenkins v. Power, 6 M. & S. 287.

(k) Thomson v. Davenport, 9 B. & C. 87, 88; Paterson v. Gandasequi, 15 East, 69; Smyth v. Anderson, 7 C. B. 21; Wilson v. Zulueta, 14 Q. B. 405, 414; Poirier v. Morris, 2 E. & B. 89. See Peterson v. Ayre, 13 C. B. 353; Pennell v. Alexander, 3 E. & B. 283.

(l) Mahony v. Kekulé, 14 C. B. 390; per Parke, B., Heald v. Kenworthy, 10 Exch. 739. See Gillet v. O'for, 18 C. B. 905, 915.

of the person with whom it was actually made, or in the name of the person with whom in point of law it was made (m). It is a well-known rule, that where an agent makes a contract in his own name, but for a principal whose name is not disclosed, the principal may come forward and enforce it (n).

Sale of goods by agent.

Where, however, a principal permits his agent to sell goods as apparent principal, and afterwards intervenes, the buyer is entitled to be placed in the same situation at the time of the disclosure of the true principal as if the agent had been the real contracting party, and is entitled to the same defence, whether it be by common law or by statute—by payment or by set-off—as he was entitled to at that time against the agent, the apparent principal (o). And even where a party contracts with a known agent or factor intrusted with goods for their purchase, having notice that the vendor is an agent merely, and pays for the goods in pursuance of the contract, such contract and payment, if made in the ordinary course of business, and without notice that the agent is not authorised to sell, will be binding upon, and good against, the real owner (p).

(m) Cothay v. Fennell, 10 B. & C. 671; Sims v. Bond, 5 B. & Ad. 323. The agent was held entitled to sue in Tassell v. Cooper, 9 C. B. 509; Holt v. Ely, 1 E. & B. 795.

(n) See, for instance, Risbourg v. Bruckner, 3 C. B., N. S., 812.

(o) Judgm., Isberg v. Bowden, 8 Exch. 859; per Willes, J., Dresser v. Norwood, 14 C. B., N. S., 588-9; Ramazotti v. Bowring, 7 C. B., N. S., 851; Tucker v. Tucker, 4 B. & Ad. 750; Carr v. Hinckliff, 4 B. & C. 547; George v. Clagett, 7 T. R. 359; Rabone v. Williams, Id. 360 (a); Wake v. Tinkler, 16 East, 36.

The rule stated in the text is most frequently acted upon in sales by factors, agents, or partners, in which cases either the nominal or real contractor may sue; but it may be equally applied to other cases: Judgm., Sims v. Bond, 5 B. & Ad. 393.

The rule in question is not, however, applicable where the buyer of goods knows that the vendor sells as factor: Fish v. Kempton, 7 C. B. 687, 694; Ferrand v. Bischoffsheim, 4 C. B., N. S., 710.

(p) 6 Geo. 4, c. 94, ss. 2, 4. See also 5 & 6 Vict. c. 39, ss. 1, 3, by which a like protection is extended to bona fide advances upon goods and merchandise in the hands of an agent, made under similar circumstances. See also 20 & 21 Vict. c. 54; Baines v. Swainson, 32 L. J., Q. B., 281.

Liability of agent who contracts without authority.

Where an individual, assuming to act in the capacity of agent for another, acts, in truth, without authority from him, the pretended principal will not, subject to what has been already said upon this subject (q), be bound by such acts, and a remedy, in such form as under the circumstances may be appropriate, must be had against the party assuming to contract (r). For instance, if "A. employs B. to work for C., without warrant from C., A. is liable to pay for it" (s); nor will it make any difference if B., in truth, believed A. to be the agent of C. (t); for, in order to charge C., B. would have to prove a contract with him, express or implied, and with him in the character of principal, either directly or through the intervention of some third person (u). A familiar instance, illustrative of this remark, occurs where an action is brought against a candidate for electioneering expenses, or for goods supplied on his credit, but ordered by a third party, assuming to act for him. Here the fact of agency must be clearly established—that is to say, it must be shown that the alleged agent was employed by the defendant alone, or jointly with others, or that he was employed by some third party, who was himself duly authorised by the defendant for such purpose; and an action would fail if it appeared that the defendant, instead of being a principal, was only an agent, and known to be such, and had, in fact, not contracted on his own account at all (x).

A mere agent, indeed, who gives an order as such, and (q) Ante, pp. 528, 529.

(r) Woodin v. Burford, 2 Cr. & M. 391; Wilson v. Barthrop, 2 M. & W. 863; Fenn v. Harrison, 3 T. R. 757; Polhill v. Walter, 3 B. & Ad. 114; per Lord Abinger, C. B., Acey v. Fernie, 7 M. & W. 154; Collen v. Wright, 7 E. & B. 301; S. C., 8 Id. 647, cited post, p. 541.

(s) Ashton v. Sherman, Holt, 309; cited 2 M. & W. 218.

(t) Thomas v. Edwards, 2 M. & W. 215.

(u) Judgm., 2 M. & W. 216, 217; Turner v. Mayor of Kendal, 13 M. & W. 171; Spurrier v. Allen, 2 C. & K. 210; Redmond v. Smith, 8 Scott, N. R., 250.

(x) See Thomas v. Edwards, 2 M. & W. 215; Higgins v. Hopkins, 3 Exch. 166. Et vide Cooper v. Slade, 6 H. L. Ca. 793.

contracts orally for another, cannot, under ordinary circumstances, be made personally liable upon such contract, by reason of the want of privity in law between himself and the other contracting party (y). And, to a like reason may be referred the rule, that a servant of the Crown, contracting in his official capacity, is not thus rendered individually responsible; the rule, or rather legal presumption, which in this case excludes personal liability, being clearly in accordance with public policy, inasmuch as no prudent person would accept a public situation at the hazard of exposing himself to a multiplicity of suits by parties thinking themselves aggrieved (z). Commissioners also, and trustees appointed for carrying out undertakings sanctioned by Parliament, will not, in general, incur liability on contracts made in connection with the subject-matter of the trust confided to them (a). —“When,” remarks Lord Eldon (b), “persons act under a Parliamentary trust, and state themselves as so acting, they are not to be held personally liable;” though if, in any particular case, evidence be adduced to show that they pledged their personal credit, a different result will follow (c).

Notwithstanding the general rule, however, as to the non-liability ex contractu of a mere agent acting in that character, circumstances do occasionally present themselves under which he may, even thus, incur responsibility. For instance, an action for money had and received lies to recover back money which had been obtained through compulsion, even (y) Ante, p. 316; Depperman v. Hubbersty, 17 Q. B. 766, 771.

(z) Per Dallas, C. J., Gidley v. Lord Palmerston, 3 B. & B. 286, 287; per Ashhurst, J., Macbeath v. Haldimand, 1 T. R. 181, 182; Rice v. Chute, 1 East, 578; Rice v. Everett, Id. 583, n. (a); Myrtle v. Beaver, Id. 135; Atlee v. Backhouse, 3 M. & W. 683; R. v. Lords Commissioners of the Treasury, 4 Ad. & B. 286, 298.

(a) Andrews v. Dally, 4 Bing. 566; Allan v. Waldegrave, 2 Moore, 621; Sprott v. Powell, 3 Bing. 478.

(b) Higgins v. Livingstone, 4 Dow, 355.

(c) Eaton v. Bell, 5 B. & Ald. 841; Parrott v. Eyre, 10 Bing. 283; Horsley v. Bell, Amb. 770.

where it has been received by an agent acting for his principal (d).

In Smout v. Ilbery (e), which has a direct bearing on the subject before us, the facts were somewhat peculiar: there the defendant was a married woman, to whom the plaintiff, a butcher, had been in the habit of supplying meat for the support of herself and her family. Meat had been thus supplied, not only whilst the defendant's husband was residing with her, but after he had left this country on a distant voyage, during which he died, and the question was, whether the defendant was liable for the price of such meat as was furnished to her after her husband's death, but before the news of his decease had come to hand; no evidence of fraud or suppression of facts, peculiarly within the defendant's knowledge, was given at the trial; and the Court held that the question just put was to be answered in the negative, reference being had to the recognised legal doctrines defining the liability of an agent who contracts as such (f). There is no doubt, the Court remarked, that an agent guilty of a (d) Parker v. Bristol and Exeter R. Co., 6 Exch. 702, 707; Steele v. Williams, 8 Exch. 625; Snowdon v. Davis, 1 Taunt. 359; per Lord Abinger, C. B., Atlee v. Backhouse, 3 M. & W. 645.

Many additional cases are specified in Story on Agency, 4th ed., pp. 352 et seq., 379, in which an agent may incur personal liability.

(e) 10 M. & W. 1.

(f) Smout v. Ilbery, supra, shows that an abstract right may exist without any legal means of enforcing it, for under the circumstances there appearing, no liability would attach to the estate of the husband (Blades v. Free, 9 B. & C. 167; explained per Pollock, C. B., 1 H. & C. 253, 255; Campari v. Woodburn, 15 C. B. 400), the agency of the wife having determined on his death. It must be remembered, however, that the situation of a married woman as a contracting party is sui generis. For an individual who contracts with an ordinary agent, contracts with one capable of contracting in his own name; whereas an individual contracting with a married woman knows that she is in general incapable of making any contract by which she is personally bound, and she therefore stands in the same situation as an agent who has expressly stipulated that he shall not, under any circumstances, be held personally liable,—a stipulation which it is of course quite competent to him to make: Judgm., 10 M. & W. 11, 12.

fraudulent misrepresentation of his authority, with an intention to deceive, would be personally responsible. And, as they further observed, there are two other classes of cases, in which an agent, who, without actual authority, makes a contract in the name of his principal, is personally liable, even where no proof of such fraudulent intention can be given; first, where the agent has no authority, and knows it, but, nevertheless, makes the contract as if he had it; here, on the plainest principles of justice he is liable, because he induces the contractee to enter into the contract on what amounts to a misrepresentation of a fact peculiarly within his own knowledge. A second case, in which a mere agent will incur liability, may present itself, where the party contracting as agent bonâ fide believes that due authority is vested in him, whilst, in fact, he has no such authority—as where he acts under a forged warrant of attorney, which he believes to be genuine,—under such circumstances, it seems clear that an action for damage resulting from the mis-statement, would be maintainable against the agent, on the ground of the commission by him of a legal fraud.

It will of course be noticed, that the remarks just made apply to the liability ex delicto of an agent who has in some way misrepresented the existence or extent of his authority; and in cases of this kind, one or other of the following ingredients will be found to be essential to the maintenance of an action against him, viz., that the agent has been guilty of some fraud, has made some statement which he knew to be false (g), or has stated as true what he did not know to be true, omitting, at the same time, to give such information to the other contracting party, as would have enabled him equally with himself to judge as to the suffi-

(g) See Polhill v. Walter, 3 B. & Ad. 114, cited post, Book III.; Callow v. Jenkinson, 6 Exch. 666.

In Udell v. Atherton, cited ante, p. 341, the agent would clearly have been liable.

ciency of the authority under which he (the agent) proposed to act.

2. From Jenkins v. Hutchinson (h), Downman v. Williams (i), Mahony v. Kekulé (k), and Green v. Kopke (l), we may infer, that where a contract in writing has been entered into between parties, the character of either party to it, whether as principal or agent, and consequently his right to sue (m), or liability, upon the contract, will, if possible, have to be determined by reference to its terms, the question being one of intention to be collected therefrom (n).

Contract in writing by agent.

The first-mentioned of the cases above cited further shows, that a party who executes an instrument in the name of another, whose name he puts to the instrument, adding his own name only as agent for that other, cannot be treated as a party to that instrument, and be sued upon it, unless it be shown that he was the real principal (o); and, further, if the instrument be ambiguous it will be construed against the party signing (p).

Two recent cases—Collen v. Wright (q), and Humfrey v. Dale (r)—are important in reference to the liability of an agent who signs a written contract. From Collen v. Wright, we learn that “a person who induces another to contract with him as the agent of a third party by an unqualified (h) 13 Q. B. 744.

(i) 7 Q. B. 103. Acc. Lewis v. Nicholson, 18 Q. B. 503. Compare Parker v. Winslow, 7 E. & B. 942; Lennard v. Robinson, 5 E. & B. 125.

(k) 14 C. B. 390.

(l) 18 C. B. 549, 558.

(m) A principal who permits his agent to describe himself as principal in a written contract may, in some cases, thus estop himself from suing upon it. See Humble v. Hunter, 12 Q. B. 310; Bickerton v. Burrell, 5 M. & S. 883; Rayner v. Grote, 15 M. & W. 359; Schmaltz v. Avery, 16 Q. B.

655; Cox v. Hubbard, 4 C. B. 317.

(n) See also Wilson v. Zulueta, 14 Q. B. 405, 414; Pennell v. Alexander, 3 E. & B. 283.

(o) Judgm., 13 Q. B. 752; Carr v. Jackson, 7 Exch. 382.

(p) Per Crompton, J., Deslandes v. Gregory, 29 L. J., Q. B., 96; S. C., 30 Id. 36.

(q) 7 E. & B. 301; S. C. (in Error), 8 E. & B. 647; Pow v. Davis, 1 B. & S. 220.

(r) 7 E. & B. 266; S. C. (in Error), E. B. & R. 1004.

assertion of his being authorised to act as such agent, is answerable to the person who so contracts for any damages which he may sustain by reason of the assertion of authority being untrue, and that this liability may be enforced by an action ex contractu, inasmuch as a person professing to contract as agent for another, impliedly, if not expressly, undertakes to or promises the person who enters into such contract, upon the faith of the professed agent being duly authorised, that the authority which he professes to have does in point of fact exist" (s). In Dale v. Humfrey, the majority of the Court of Exchequer Chamber, affirming the judgment below, held that evidence of the usage of trade might be admitted to render liable brokers, who, as agents for an undisclosed principal, and in their character of brokers, signed a contract-note for the purchase of oil—acceptance of which was afterwards refused. The contract was here within the 17th section of the Statute of Frauds; and Cockburn, C. J., after observing, that "where, either by any rule of law or by the usage of any trade, the terms of a contract acquire a particular meaning, the contract must be taken to express that meaning as much as though it had been set forth in extenso," proceeded to observe that "this obtains as much for the purpose of satisfying the statute as for that of establishing the contract independently of the statute" (t).

In connection with this part of the subject, I will merely add that where a party signs a contract as principal, he cannot (as we have already seen) discharge himself from liability by showing that he was, in fact, an agent merely for

(s) Judgm., 8 E. & B. 657-8; Simons v. Patchett, 7 E. & B. 568; Pow v. Davis, 1 B. & S. 220.

(t) E. B. & E. 1021. The judgment of Martin, B., diss. (in Error), is also well worthy of perusal. He explains inter alia the mode in which the signature of a broker (Id. 1013), or of an auctioneer (Id. 1015), may, and ordinarily does, satisfy the requirements of the Stat. Frauds, s. 17.

some third party ; though proof of such agency may be given with a view to charging the real principal (u).

If a written contract is duly signed by one on behalf of others as well as himself, Lucas v. Beale (x), shows us that the individual signing must be regarded as an agent merely, and will not, therefore, be entitled to sue upon the contract ; whilst from Clay v. Southern (y), we learn that a party signing a memorandum of agreement in his own name simpliciter, will, in the absence of anything clearly inconsistent with such hypothesis, be regarded as a principal in the transaction. “Primâ facie when a man signs a contract in his own name he is a contracting party ; and there must be something very strong upon the face of the instrument to prevent that liability from attaching to him” (z). Whether a contract be to pay for another, or whether it be on behalf of another to pay, may manifestly be a question of vital importance, in regard to the liability of the individual who has attached to it his signature (a).

3. An agent who is required to execute a deed for his principal, should have express authority under seal for that purpose (b). When thus authorised, he may sign either in the name of his principal, or as agent for and on behalf of him (c). The solemn nature of a deed, however, excludes Contract under seal by agent.

(u) Higgins v. Senior, 8 M. & W. 834, cited ante, p. 503 ; per Martin, B., Holding v. Elliott, 5 H. & N. 121-2 ; per Williams, J., Dale v. Humfrey, E. B. & E. 1020 ; Magee v. Atkinson, 2 M. & W. 440.

The question whether a signature attached to a written instrument is to be taken as a signature to the whole paper, was much considered in Foster v. Mentor Life Ass. Co., 3 E. & B. 48.

(x) 10 C. B. 739.

(y) 7 Exch. 717 ; Higgins v. Senior, 8 M. & W. 834 ; Sowerby v. Butcher, 2 C. & M. 368 ; Spittle v. Lavender,

2 B. & B. 452.

(z) Per Cresswell, J., Cooke v. Wilson, 1 C. B., N. S., 162 ; Parker v. Winlow, 7 E. & B. 942, and cases there cited.

(a) See, per Lord Lyndhurst, C. B., Hall v. Ashhurst, 1 C. & M. 719.

(b) Harrison v. Jackson, 7 T. R. 207, 210 ; Wilks v. Back, 2 East, 142 ; White v. Cuyler, 6 T. R. 176 ; Judgm., Hunter v. Parker, 7 M. & W. 343.

(c) Combes's case, 9 Rep. 76 b ; White v. Cuyler, supra. See Appleton v. Binks, 5 East, 148.

parol evidence to show that one who has executed it as principal was, in fact, but an agent (d). The above rule, which exists at common law, is, however, modified by various statutory provisions, having reference to particular kinds of agency existing in connection with public companies.

From the preceding remarks will be collected the leading modifications imposed by the relation of principal and agent on the capacity to contract. We have seen, that where the relation in question subsists, the principal is, in general, the proper party to sue or be sued upon a contract; that a mere agent is, in many cases, debarred from appearing as plaintiff, and relieved from responsibility as defendant, in respect of a transaction wherein he has personally participated; that, in some rare cases, a party dealing with one who is ostensibly an agent, may find himself wholly without redress for the breach of a contract thus concluded. I will now very briefly inquire as to the manner in which partners may contract, at common law, so as to acquire rights or to incur liabilities as such, and whether under any, and if so, under what, circumstances, the existence of the relation of partner and co-partner may cause an incapacity to contract.

Partnership
— what it is.

The term “partnership” is ordinarily used to signify a contract founded on consent between two or more persons, by which they agree to employ their capital, labour, and skill in trade or business, with a view to a communion in profit and loss between them (e). In connection with any definition, however, which may be offered of the word “partnership,” must be kept in mind the distinction between a partnership inter sese, and a partnership quoad third per-

(d) Shack v. Anthony, 1 M. & S. 573; Berkeley v. Hardy, 5 B. & C. 355; Metcalfe v. Rycroft, 6 M. & S. 75; Hancock v. Hodgson, 4 Bing. 269; Bacon v. Dubarry, 1 Ld. Raym.

246. See Gibson v. Winter, 5 B. & Ad. 96.

(e) Story on Partnerships, p. 2, and authorities there cited.

for persons not being in fact co-partners may by their and mode of dealing incur liability as such to third parties.

The law of partnership is, in truth, a branch of the law of principal and agent. If two persons agree that they will carry on a trade and share the profits of it, each is a principal and each is an agent for the other, and each is bound by the other's contract in carrying on the trade as much as a single principal would be by the act of an agent who was to give the whole of the profits to his employer. Hence it becomes a test of the liability of one for the contract of another, that he is to receive the whole or a part of the profits arising from that contract by virtue of the agreement made at the time of the employment, and hence the well-known adage—that he who takes the profits ought to bear the loss (f)—is rather the consequence than the cause of partnership liability (g).

Partners may indeed stipulate among themselves that some of them only shall enter into particular contracts, or into any contracts, or that, as to certain of their contracts none shall be liable except those by whom they are actually made, but with such private arrangements third persons dealing with the firm without notice have no concern. The public have a right to assume that every partner has authority from his co-partner to bind the whole firm by contracts made according to the ordinary^f usages of trade (h).

The above principle applies not only to persons acting openly and avowedly as partners, but to others who, though not so acting, are by secret and private agreement partners

(f) Judgm., Pott v. Eyton, 3 C. B. 39; per Eyre, C. J., Waugh v. Carver, 2 H. Bla. 246, 247; per Lord Eldon, Ex parte Langdale, 18 Ves. 300; French v. Styring, 2 C. B., N. S., 357, 362; per Wilde, C. J., Barry v. Neaham, 3 C. B. 655; cited 3 B. & S.

872; Heyhoe v. Burge, 9 C. B. 431; Heap v. Dobson, 15 C. B., N. S., 460; Lyon v. Knowles, 3 B. & S. 556.

(g) Per Lord Wensleydale, Cox v. Hickman, 8 H. L. Ca. 312, 313.

(h) Per Lord Cranworth, 8 H. L. Ca. 304, 305.

with those who appear ostensibly to the world as the persons carrying on the business (i).

When a partnership has been constituted between A. and B., either partner becomes at common law, ipso facto, incapacitated from efficiently contracting with his co-partner in respect of any matter directly connected with the partnership; for a man cannot contract with himself (k); he cannot be at once plaintiff and defendant in an action (l); and it is a rule, that between partners, whether they are so generally, or for a particular transaction only, no account can be taken at law (m). One partner, therefore, cannot maintain an action in one of the superior Courts (n) against his co-partner for goods sold (o), work done (p), money had and received (q), on account of the partnership, or money advanced by plaintiff to his co-partners on account of the co-partnership (r). Neither can one partner recover on a bill of exchange drawn by him on and accepted by the firm of which he is a member (s). Nor can one mercantile firm maintain an action ex contractu against another firm, where the same person is a partner in both houses, and the right of action accrued during the period of his being such partner (t).

(i) Per Lord Cranworth, 8 H. L. Ca. 305; Kilshaw v. Jukes, 3 B. & S. 847.

(k) In illustration of this remark, see Faulkner v. Lowe, 2 Exch. 595; but see as to this case, per Williams, J., Aulton v. Atkins, 18 C. B. 253.

(l) Per Best, C. J., 4 Bing. 151.

In Story on Partnership, pp. 321 et seq., 343, the remedies, inter sese, of partners at common law are well discussed, and many authorities bearing upon the subject are collected.

(m) Per Abbott, C. J., Bovill v. Hammond, 6 B. & C. 151. See French v. Styling, 2 C. B., N. S., 357. The action of Account, now almost obsolete, will, however, sometimes lie between partners.

(n) As to the jurisdiction of the County Court in cases of partnership, see 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, s. 65; 13 & 14 Vict. c. 61, s. 1.

(o) Harvey v. Kay, 9 B. & C. 356.

(p) Holmes v. Higgins, 1 B. & C. 74; Wilson v. Viscount Curzon, 15 M. & W. 532; Milburn v. Codd, 7 B. & C. 419; Goddard v. Hodges, 1 Cr. & M. 33.

(q) Bovill v. Hammond, 6 B. & C. 149.

(r) Per Bramwell, B., Sedgwick v. Daniell, 2 H. & N. 323.

(s) Neale v. Turton, 4 Bing. 149; Teague v. Hubbard, 8 B. & C. 345. See Fox v. Frith, 10 M. & W. 131.

(t) Bosanquet v. Wray, 6 Taunt.

Where, however, a ground of defence, founded on the existence of a partnership between plaintiff and defendant, seems prima facie to be available, great care is often requisite in determining whether the apparent partnership does in fact exist (u), in assigning the limits of a particular partnership (x), in distinguishing between a joint contract, or liability ex contractu, and a partnership (y).

There is, moreover, a large class of cases, separated sometimes by a rather fine line from those above specified, in which the existence of the relation of partnership between the litigating parties will be found, on examination, to be immaterial with reference to the matter sub judice. Where, for instance, such matter is in no way connected or mixed up with the partnership affairs (z), or where a final balance has been ascertained and struck between partners, provided the settlement be one which is binding and conclusive upon them, an action lies for such balance at the suit of the party ascertained to be entitled to it (a). So where A. and B. entered into partnership to work a coal mine, and, the mine being worked out, they agreed to divide the partnership stock of materials, &c., each party taking one moiety thereof, according to a valuation to be made, and, after such valuation had been made, B. agreed to take the whole pursuant 597; Mainwaring v. Newman, 2 B. & P. 120. See Waters v. Towers, 8 Exch. 401.

(u) See Caldicott v. Griffiths, 8 Exch. 898; Reg. v. Wortley, 21 L. J., M. C., 44; Brown v. Tapscott, 6 M. & W. 119.

(x) That is, a partnership in respect of one particular venture or transaction. See Lucas v. Beach, 1 M. & Gr. 417.

(y) Batard v. Hawes, 2 E. & B. 287; Earl of Mounicashell v. Barber, 14 C. B. 53; Kemp v. Finden, 12 M. & W. 421; Edger v. Knapp, 5 M. &

Gr. 753; Toussaint v. Martinnant, 2 T. R. 100; Blackett v. Weir, 5 B. & C. 387 (with which compare Sadler v. Nizon, 5 B. & Ad. 936; Osborne v. Harper, 5 East, 225).

(z) Story on Partnership, p. 320; Cross v. Cheshire, 7 Exch. 43; Sedgwick v. Daniell, 2 H. & N. 319.

(a) Wray v. Milestone, 5 M. & W. 217; Foster v. Allanson, 2 T. R. 472 (with which compare Middleditch v. Ellis, 2 Exch. 623); Rackstraw v. Imber, 2 Holt, N. P. C. 368.

See Fromont v. Coupland, 2 Bing. 170; Carr v. Smith, 5 Q. B. 128, 138.

to that estimate, and accordingly entered into possession of it, A. was held to have an immediate right of action against B. for a moiety of the value of the partnership stock (b). It may be well also to add, that sometimes power is given by statute to one member of a partnership to sue a co-partner on behalf of the concern (c).

Observing, then, that the capacity to contract efficiently may, in certain cases, be affected by the existence of a partnership between the contractor and contractee, it will be proper to repeat (d) that any one member of an ordinary trading firm is, in contemplation of our common law, an accredited agent of the firm, so as to bind it by his act done, or assurance made, with reference to and in the ordinary course of business transacted by it (e), in the absence of collusion between himself and the other contracting party (f). One partner, by virtue of that relation when completely formed, is constituted a general agent (g) for the firm, as to all matters within the scope of the partnership dealings, and has communicated to him all authority necessary for carrying on the partnership, and such as is usually exercised by a partner in that business in which he is engaged (h).

(b) Jackson v. Stopherd, 2 Cr. & M. B. 349.

361; Coffee v. Brian, 3 Bing. 54;

Wilson v. Cutting, 10 Bing. 436. See

Lomas v. Bradshaw, 9 C. B. 620;

Brown v. Tapscott, 6 M. & W. 119.

(c) See, as an instance, Reddish v. Pinnock, 10 Exch. 213.

(d) Ante, p. 545.

(e) Per Abbott, C. J., Sandilands v. Marsh, 2 B. & Ald. 678; Marsh v. Keating, 2 Cl. & F. 250; Blair v. Bromley, 5 Hare, 542; S. C., 2 Phill. 354; with which cases compare Bishop v. Countess of Jersey, 2 Drew. 143. See Beale v. Cuddick, 2 H. & N. 326.

(f) Per Bayley, J., Vere v. Ashby, 10 B. & C. 296; Lewis v. Reilly, 1 Q.

(g) Ante, p. 525.

(h) See per Lord Wensleydale, Ernest v. Nicholls, 6 H. L. Ca. 417-418.

In Brown v. Kidger, 3 H. & N. 858, Watson, B., observes, "Generally speaking, one partner has power to borrow money for the purpose of carrying on the partnership business. But it may be that the business is to be carried on with ready money only, and that there is no authority in one partner to pledge the credit of the firm. Everything depends on the nature of the partnership."

Hence, as a general rule, "where a partnership name is pledged, the partnership, of whomsoever it may consist, and whether the partners are named or not, and whether they are known or secret partners, will be bound" (i), each individual member of the firm being answerable in solido for the whole amount of the partnership debts, without reference to the proportion of his interest as between himself and his co-partners (k). Even a nominal partner, i.e., one who lends his name to a firm or holds himself out as a partner without participating in its profits, is generally responsible to third persons as a partner; for he may induce them to give that credit to the firm which otherwise it would not receive, nor perhaps deserve (l). Assuming as true the above elementary propositions, without citing additional authorities in support of them, let us inquire how they may assist towards determining the mode in which a trading partnership may contract (m).

The difference which exists between the kind of agency implied by law from the relation of partnership between individuals, and that which has (in many cases) to be proved in order to fix joint contractors (not being trading partners) with liability, may be illustrated by reference to the responsibility of a member of a club.

Agency of partner of trading firm—its nature.

In the case of a club, a committee is usually chosen out of the entire body of the members, and is invested with certain powers, more or less clearly defined, for carrying out the objects of the institution. The general liability accordingly

(i) Judgm., Wintle v. Crowther, 1 Cr. & J. 318; De Mautort v. Saunders, 1 B. & Ad. 398, 401; Bonfield v. Smith, 12 M. & W. 405; Ex parte Hamper, 17 Ves. 403; Drake v. Beckham, 11 M. & W. 315; S. C., 9 M. & W. 79; 2 H. L. Ca. 579; per Cockburn, C. J., Bottomley v. Nuttall, 5 C. B., N. S., 139-140.

(k) Kent Com., 10th ed., vol. 3, p. 32.

(l) Id., ibid.; Guidon v. Robson, 2 Camp. 302; Gurney v. Evans, 3 H. & N. 122.

(m) An excellent epitome of the law of partnership is given in the 43rd Lect. of Chancellor Kent's Commentaries.

of any individual member of the club for goods ordered, or on contracts entered into, by a fellow-member, will depend upon the question—whether such latter party was or was not an agent duly and sufficiently authorised to pledge the credit of his fellow-members, in such manner as he has assumed to do. Further, the members of the club, or some portion of them, may be rendered jointly liable by showing that they have authorised the contract declared upon either through the medium of the committee, or of some accredited officer of the club, or by their own direct act, without the intervention of any other party, ex. gr., by having attended and voted on the committee or at a general meeting of the club. Usually, indeed, associations of the kind alluded to agree among themselves upon certain written rules and regulations for their guidance, and from such rules the committee or managing body derive their right to pledge the individual credit of the members in certain cases, the right to bind the subscribers being restrained within the limits thus defined, and any contract entered into by the committee not falling within such limits, being invalid as regards those who are not directly parties to it (n).

In the class of cases, then, just adverted to, the liability of the party charged upon a contract will usually depend, as pointed out, upon express proof of agency; and the same remark applies to an action for goods sold and delivered brought against a member of the provisional committee of a railway company; where it will be necessary for the plaintiff, by reference to the law of principal and agent, in such manner as was explained at p. 526, to connect the defendant with the order given for the goods.

(n) Earl of Mountcashell v. Barber, 14 C. B. 53; Todd v. Emly, 8 M. & W. 505; Fleming v. Hector, 2 M. & W. 172; Cockerell v. Aucompte, 2 C. B., N. S., 440, 453; Tyrrell v. Woolley, 2 Scott, N. R., 171; Heraud v. Leaf, 5 C. B. 157; Rennie v. Clarke, 5 Exch. 292.

Cross v. Williams, 7 H. & N. 675, may usefully be consulted in reference to the liability of a member of an association ex contractu.

The liability, on the other hand, of a trading co-partnership in respect of a contract entered into by one of its members, must be determined by somewhat different considerations.

Where a contract is entered into by one member of a firm, expressly in its name or on its behalf, the liability or non-liability of the firm will mainly depend upon this inquiry—Was the particular contract declared upon within the general scope of the partnership dealings?—if so, the firm will be liable upon the contract.

A partner in trade or business may, for example, bind his co-partners by buying, selling, or pledging goods, by paying, receiving, or borrowing money, or by doing other acts incident or appropriate to the particular trade or business, and in accordance with its common course and usage (o). But to allow one partner to bind another by contracts out of the ordinary scope of the partnership dealings, even though they be reasonable acts towards effecting the partnership purposes, would be attended with great danger (p).

In Nicholson v. Ricketts (q), Cockburn, C. J., observes that, in order to bind a member of a partnership by an act done by another member of the partnership in the way of drawing or accepting a bill, there must be express authority so to do, or authority implied by operation of law. “In the ordinary case of commercial partnership there is no need of express authority; because the law at once implies an authority, inasmuch as the drawing a bill for the partnership

(o) Story on Partnership, s. 102, and cases there cited; Story on Agency, s. 124, cited and adopted in Dank of Australasia v. Breillat, 6 Moo. P. C. C. 193.

(p) Judgm., Brettel v. Williams, 4 Exch. 630 (citing Hawtayne v. Bourne, ante, p. 531, n. (k)).

(q) 29 L. J., Q. B., 55, 64. See Stephens v. Reynolds, 5 H. & N. 513, 516-7.

See Ex parte Buckley, 14 M. & W. 469; MacLae v. Sutherland, 3 E. & B. 1; Healey v. Story, 3 Exch. 3; Jenkins v. Morris, 16 M. & W. 877; Mason v. Rumsey, 1 Camp. 384, and cases ante, p. 531. Lindus v. Melrose, 3 H. & N. 177, affirming S. C., 2 Id. 293; Bottomley v. Fisher, 1 H. & C. 211.

(being a trading commercial partnership) is one of the ordinary incidents of such a partnership. Again, if it be not what is called a 'commercial partnership,' in its ordinary sense, but a trading partnership, yet if it is obvious from the very nature of the partnership, or its particular constitution, or the particular purpose to which the bill is to be applied, that the drawing of the bill is incidental; there again by operation of law an implied authority to the one partner to bind the other will arise."

There is, however, no custom or usage that attornies should be parties to negotiable instruments; nor is it necessary, for the purposes of their business, that they should be so (r). Neither will a guarantie given by an attorney be binding on his co-partner in the absence of proof of knowledge or privity on the part of the latter, and there being no evidence to show that the security was given in pursuance of the ordinary practice of the parties (s). So, although it is part of an attorney's business to prepare conveyances, to examine titles, and so forth, he is not, quod attorney, a scrivener (t); nor is he impliedly authorised by his co-partners to receive money indefinitely from a client, with a view to laying it out upon proper security when found (u). It is, however, incidental to the business of an attorney to receive money for the purpose of laying it out upon a particular mortgage; and in this latter case a firm might be liable for the receipt of money by one of its members (x). A partner cannot bind the firm to which he belongs by deed, unless he has express authority by deed for that purpose (y).

(r) Hedley v. Bainbridge, 3 Q. B. 316, 321; Ley v. Pyne, Carth. 453.

(s) Haslcham v. Young, 5 Q. B. 833. See Brettell v. Williams, 4 Exch. 623; Bishop v. Countess of Jersey, 2 Drew. 143.

(t) A scrivener is a person who receives money to lay out upon security, and to hold in his hands until an opportunity offers for laying it out: per Lord Campbell, C. J., 2 E. & B. 66.

(u) Harman v. Johnson, 2 E. & B. 61. See Sims v. Brutton, 5 Exch. 802.

(x) Harman v. Johnson, supra.

(y) Elliot v. Davis, 2 B. & P. 338. Judgm., Bank of England v. Anderson, 3 Bing. N. C. 658; Harrison v. Jackson, 7 T. R. 207; Horsley v.

Nor does it seem that a subsequent ratification of the execution of the deed would suffice to render it effective (2). Power is, however, usually given by statute, charter, or otherwise, to certain specified officers of a public company to execute deeds on its behalf.

Again, where a contract has been made by one member of a partnership with a stranger, difficulty sometimes occurs in determining as to the true character of the contract (a); thus, if an account be opened at a banker's by one of two partners in his own name, that fact, however strong, would not be conclusive to show that the account was opened on his own individual behalf; but the banker might give evidence, per contra, to prove that the account was really with the firm, and that the individual opening the account acted in so doing as their agent (b).

So, if an application for a loan be made generally to a partner in a bank, the borrower thereby entitles the party so applied to, on making the advance, to hold him answerable in either of his (the lender's) capacities, of a partner or of a private individual, according as it may be shown in which character he made the advance (c).

Rush, cited Id., 209; Hall v. Bainbridge, 1 M. & Gr. 42; Steiglitz v. Egginton, Holt N. P. C. 141.

(2) See Hunter v. Parker, 7 M. & W. 322; Ball v. Dunsterville, 4 T. R. 313; Hawkshaw v. Parkins, 2 Swanst. 544; Bowker v. Burdekin, 11 M. & W. 128.

(a) Beckham v. Drake, 11 M. & W. 315, is a leading authority, to show that an action may be maintainable against a firm on a written agreement signed by some only of its members.

(b) Cooke v. Sealey, 2 Exch. 746; Sims v. Bond, 5 B. & Ad. 389, 393; Sims v. Brittain, 4 B. & Ad. 375, and Ireland v. Thompson, 4 C. B. 149 (which are cited and distinguished in Walshe v. Provan, 8 Exch. 843); Driver v. Burton, 17 Q. B. 989.

See Brownrigg v. Rae, 5 Exch. 489; Lucas v. De La Cour, 1 M. & S. 249; Cox v. Hubbard, 4 C. B. 317; Garrett v. Handley, 3 B. & C. 462; S. C., 4 B. & C. 664; with which compare Agacio v. Forbes, 14 Moo. P. C. C. 160; Arden v. Tucker, 4 B. & Ad. 815; Skinner v. Stocks, 4 B. & Ald. 437; Bawden v. Howell, 4 Scott, N. R., 331; Brandon v. Hubbard, 2 B. & B. 11; Boswell v. Smith, 6 Car. & P. 60; Story v. Richardson, 6 Bing., N. C., 123.

(c) See, per Bayley, B., Alexander v. Barker, 2 Cr. & J. 138.

"So, in the ordinary case of one partner ordering goods for a firm, there being a third person a member of the firm who was not known to the seller as such at the time of the transaction, the unknown partner is liable equally with the person who appears in the transaction, when discovered; unless the seller, having notice of the partnership, chooses, instead of relying upon the firm, to accept the liability of the particular individual with whom he is dealing" (d). "If the seller refuses to deal with the firm, but elects to deal exclusively with the individual, he cannot afterwards treat the firm as his debtors, and sue one whom he did not mean to trust" (e).

Where, moreover, it is sought to charge several persons as partners upon a contract, ostensibly entered into by one co-partner only, it may be necessary, in order to fix the partnership with liability, to look to the terms of any agreement, written or oral (f), subsisting between the parties charged, with a view to showing that there was a joint authority given for entering into the contract.

From the brief remarks which have preceded, we may collect that the mode of contracting, as well as the capacity to contract, may be materially affected by the relation of partnership existing as between some or all of the contracting parties; for, by reason of this relationship, important rights may be conferred, or liabilities may be imposed, on parties who are not ostensibly either contractors or contractees. In order fully to carry out this inquiry, a minute examination (wholly incompatible with the plan of this work) of the remedies by and against partners would be requisite. The subjoined remarks may, however, throw some additional light upon the subject before us, or, at all events, assist the student in pursuing it.

Continuance of liability as partner.

The rights and liabilities in regard to third persons of an

(d) Per Cockburn, C. J., Bottomley
v. Nuttall, 5 C. B., N. S., 139-140.

(f) See Heraud v. Leaf, 5 C. B.
157.

(e) Id., ibid.

individual, quâ partner, on a contract, must obviously, in many cases, depend upon the answer to be given to this question—Was the particular contract entered into during the continuance of the partnership? The liability of a partner as such commences at the date of his admission into the firm; so that he will not, in general, be liable on a contract effected prior thereto (g). His liability ceases on the dissolution of the firm, or on his retirement from it, accompanied by due notice thereof (h), or (it seems) by proof of the creditor's knowledge of the fact (i). The retiring partner will still, however, remain liable in respect of previous engagements, unless the creditor who seeks to charge him has ever, expressly or impliedly, agreed to the substitution of the credit of the new firm for that of the old; and the onus of proving such an agreement, or of showing that it must necessarily be inferred from the knowledge and conduct of the creditor, lies on the parties originally liable (k).

If, therefore, a banking firm makes payments professedly on account of a customer without his authority, and those payments are entered to the debit of the customer in the books of the firm, parties who afterwards become partners in that firm are not to be considered as agreeing to impose

(g) See Wilsford v. Wood, 1 Esp. 183; Beale v. Moulds, 10 Q. B. 976; Battley v. Lewis, 1 M. & Gr. 155; Sherriff v. Wilks, 1 East, 48; Wilson v. Lewis, 2 M. & Gr. 197; per Bayley, J., Vere v. Ashby, 10 B. & C. 297.

(h) "A retiring partner omitting to inform his customers of the fact, in the usual mode, that the continuing partners were no longer authorised to act as his agents, is bound by all contracts made by them with third persons on the faith of their being so authorised." Judgm., Freeman v. Cooke, 2 Exch. 663-4.

(i) Hart v. Alexander, 2 M. & W. 484; Newsome v. Coles, 2 Camp. 617;

Parkins v. Carruthers, 3 Esp. 248; Graham v. Hope, Peake N. P. C. 154.

(k) Hart v. Alexander, supra; Dobbin v. Foster, 1 C. & K. 323; Kirwan v. Kirwan, 2 C. & M. 617; Thompson v. Percival, 5 B. & Ad. 925; Lyth v. Ault, 7 Exch. 669 (which shows that the acceptance by a creditor of the sole and separate liability of one of several joint debtors is a good consideration for an agreement to discharge all the other debtors from liability; ante, p. 317); Thomas v. Shillibeer, 1 M. & W. 124; Bedford v. Deakin, 2 B. & Ald. 210.

upon themselves a liability for anything more than that sum which by the books themselves, which are handed over to the new firm, appears to be due to the customer. And, in order to render the new firm liable for the amounts which do not so appear in the books, it will be necessary to show that the old firm have ceased to be liable, and are discharged, by proof of an agreement between the old firm, the new firm, and the customer, that the new firm is to be considered as substituted, as the debtors, in lieu of the old, for the amount sought to be recovered (l).

The liability of a dormant, as of an active, partner will cease on his retirement from the firm, except quoad such persons as, at the time of contracting, knew him to be a partner. To these parties notice of withdrawal should be given, though none others are entitled to it (m).

The above remarks point to the manner in which the capacity to contract—ex. gr., to bind or benefit others, whose names do not expressly appear therein, by a contract—may, in ordinary mercantile transactions, be affected by the relation of partnership; for we have seen that a partner, in many cases, may bind his co-partners, or so contract as to bind himself only, and not his co-partners (n). With reference to this part of the subject, it may be proper to add, that, at law, as well the remedy available to, as the liability (o) enforceable against, a partner in a trading firm passes or attaches on his death to his surviving co-partners; the rule here applicable being, that the remedy survives, but not the right; for jus accrescendi inter mercatores, pro beneficio commercii, locum non habet;—upon the dissolution of a mercantile or manufacturing (p) partnership

(l) Craufurd v. Cocks, 6 Exch. 287, 291.

(m) Per Patteson, J., Heath v. Sansom, 4 B. & Ad. 177; Evans v. Drummond, 4 Esp. 89; Carter v. Whalley, 1 B. & Ad. 11; Farrar v.

Deflinne, 1 C. & K. 580.

(n) Per Maule, J., Holcroft v. Hoggins, 2 C. B. 492.

(o) See, per Lord Holt, Hyat v. Hare, Comb. 382, cited 2 T. R. 479.

(p) Buckley v. Barber, 6 Exch. 164, by death, the property and effects thereof do not belong exclusively to the survivors, but are to be distributed between them and the representatives of the deceased, in the same manner as they would have been upon a voluntary dissolution inter vivos (q).

A corporation aggregate must in general contract by deed and cannot bind itself by parol (r).

Contracts
by corporations.

This is a rule extending to a wide and important class of cases, the principle on which it rests being, that a corporate body has no mode of indicating its consent to an act done, save by the affixing of its common seal to some document(s), which will thus be evidence as well of the act done as of the assent to it of the body corporate (t). In no other way can the concurrence of the entire body corporate in the particular act be authenticated. It could not, for instance, be evidenced by the resolution of a meeting composed of members of the corporation, however numerous attended (u).

As illustrating the rule above stated, the following cases may be mentioned, though, inasmuch as the maxim Exceptio with which compare Crossfield v. Such, 8 Exch. 825. This latter case shows that the right of survivorship holds at common law, save where a case falls within the principle of the exception introduced by the Lex Mercatoria.

(q) Story on Partnership, s. 342; adopted Judgm., 6 Exch. 180.

(r) Many examples, showing the application of this rule, are collected in Grant Corp., pp. 55-60, to which the reader is referred.

A corporation may ratify the act of its agent: Simpson v. Eggington, 10 Exch. 845.

(s) Delivery is not necessary in the case of a corporation: ante, p. 268, n. (c).

(t) Upon this point, Blackstone tells us (1 Com., p. 475), that, after a corporation has been formed and named, it acquires certain "capacities and incapacities, some of which are necessarily and inseparably incident to it;" amongst these is the having a common seal. "For a corporation, being an invisible body, cannot manifest its intention by any personal act or oral discourse; it therefore acts and speaks only by its common seal. For though the particular members may express their private consents to any act by words or signing their names, yet this does not bind the corporation—it is the fixing of the seal, and that only, which unites the several assents of the individuals who compose the community, and makes one joint assent of the whole."

(u) Judgm., Mayor of Ludlow v. Charlton, 6 M. & W. 823.

probat regulam forcibly applies in regard to the class of decisions under notice, cases which are exceptions to, as well as those which support the general rule, should, in regard to its true scope and operation, be alike carefully consulted. In Arnold v. The Mayor of Poole (x), it was held, that an attorney who had been employed by the mayor and town council of Poole to conduct suits on their behalf, but had not been appointed under seal, could not recover his bill of costs against the corporation. In Diggle v. The London and Blackwall R. C. (y), the facts were these:—The plaintiff, who was a railway contractor, entered into an agreement, not under seal, with the defendants, to do certain work upon their railway; having done some of the work in pursuance of the agreement, he was then ordered to discontinue it by the company; and it was held that he could not recover for any portion of the work so done; the simple answer to the action being, that a corporation cannot contract unless by their common seal.

Exceptions to rule.

The rule in question, however, that a corporation can only act or speak by its common seal, though true in theory, was found intolerable in practice. The very act, it has been said, of affixing the seal, of lifting the hand, or opening the mouth, could only be done by some individual member, theoretically quite distinct from the body politic, or by some agent. The management of the corporate property, the daily sustentation of the members, the performance of the very duties for which the corporation was created, required incessantly that acts should be done, sometimes of daily recurrence; sometimes entirely unforeseen, yet admitting of no delay; sometimes of small importance, or relating to property of little value. The same cause also required that contracts to a small amount should often be entered into. In all these cases, to require the affixing of the common seal was impossible; and therefore, from time to time, as the exigencies of the case have required, exceptions have been admitted to the rule (z); the decisions as to which, as remarked by Lord Denman, C. J. (a), furnish the principle on which they have been established, and show that it is "convenience amounting almost to necessity." The exceptions here adverted to may be arranged as under:—

(x) 4 M. & Gr. 360. See Faviell v. Eastern Counties R. C., 2 Exch. 344; Paine v. Strand Union, 8 Q. B. 326; Lamprell v. Billericay Union, 3 Exch.

283, 306; Smart v. West Ham Union, 10 Exch. 867; S. C., 11 Id. 867; and cases cited in the ensuing notes.

(y) 5 Exch. 442.

1. When the acts to be done are such as the corporation, by its very constitution, is appointed to do, or such as are necessarily incidental to its business (b), as in the case of a trading corporation, whose duty may require that it should draw bills of exchange (c); or of a railway company, whose business is to issue tickets to passengers and generally for traffic upon the line (d). The exception in question extends, indeed, as remarked by Wightman, J., in Clarke v. The Guardians of the Cuckfield Union (e), to cases "where the

(z) Judgm., Beverley v. Lincoln Gas Light and Coke Co., 6 Ad. & E. 844; per Parke, B., Cope v. Thames Haven Dock and R. Co., 3 Exch. 844; Grant Corp., p. 60.

(a) Church v. Imperial Gas Light and Coke Co., 6 Ad. & E. 861.

(b) Australian Royal Mail Steam Nav. Co. v. Marzetti, 11 Exch. 228, 234; Henderson v. Australian Royal Mail Steam Nav. Co., 5 E. & B. 409: followed in Reuter v. Electric Telegraph Co., 6 E. & B. 341, 348, where the defendants, an incorporated company, had ratified the contract.

As to the exception to the general rule specified supra, see, per Lord Wensleydale, in Ernest v. Nicholls, 6 H. L. Ca. 401, commented on in London Dock Co. v. Sinnott, 8 E. & B. 347, and in Prince of Wales Ass. Co. v. Harding, E. B. & E. 221.

(c) Per Alderson, B., Diggle v. London and Blackwall R. Co., 5 Exch. 450; Judgm., Church v. Imperial Gas Light and Coke Co., 6 Ad. & E. 861; Dunston v. Imperial Gas Light and Coke Co., 3 B. & Ad. 125.

(d) Cox v. Midland Counties R. Co., 3 Exch. 268.

(e) 21 L. J., Q. B., 349; S. C., 1 Bail C. C. 81, where the learned judge, whose words are above cited, says, "In most of the earlier of the modern cases, the corporations have been plaintiffs; but those cases were decided upon grounds which would be equally applicable had the actions been against them." See London Gas Light and Coke Co. v. Nicholls, 2 Car. & P. 365; Mayor, &c., of Stafford v. Till, 4 Bing. 75; East London Waterworks Co. v. Bailey, Id. 283; Mayor of Ludlow v. Charlton, 6 M. & W. 815; making of a certain description of contracts is necessary and incidental to the purposes for which the corporation was created." "Wherever to hold the rule applicable would occasion very great inconvenience, or tend to defeat the very object for which the corporation was created, the exception has prevailed" (f).

As an example of this exception to the general rule, the case of The Copper Miners' Company v. Fox (g) may be cited; that was an action of assumpsit, by a corporation, on a contract by parol, for the supply of iron rails to the defendant, and, under non assumpsit, the action was held not sustainable, upon proof that the company's charter incorporated them for the purpose of working copper mines and selling copper ore, but contained nothing which authorised the company to deal in iron. "Had the subject-matter of this contract been copper," observed the Court of Queen's Bench, "or if it had been shown in any way to be incidental or ancillary to carrying on the business of copper miners, the contract would have been binding, although not under seal; for, where a trading company is created by charter, while acting within the scope of the charter, it may enter into the commercial contracts usual in such a business in the usual manner. But the iron rails, the subject-matter of this contract, were not shown to have any connection with the business of copper miners." The distinction here taken by the Court seems precisely to illustrate the scope and meaning of the first common law exception to the general rule respecting contracts by bodies corporate above adverted to.

Mayor of Carmarthen v. Lewis, 6 Car. & P. 608; Northampton Gas Light Co. v. Parnell, 15 C. B. 630.

The judgment in Clark v. Cuckfield Union, supra, has not been altogether acquiesced in by the Court of Exchequer; see 10 Exch. 875, 876. It is, however, expressly recognised in Henderson v. Australian Royal Mail Steam Nav. Co., 5 E. & B. 409, where the cases are collected.

(f) Judgm., 6 Ad. & E. 861.

(g) 16 Q. B. 229. See also Paine v. Guardians of the Strand Union, 8 Q. B. 326; Lamprell v. Billericay Union, 3 Exch. 283; London Dock Co. v. Sinnott, 8 E. & B. 347.

2. Another established exception to the general rule applies to acts of frequent recurrence, of immediate urgency, or altogether trivial in their nature, so that the doing them in the usual way, and with the solemn authentication of the corporate seal, would be inconvenient or absurd (h). Hence a corporation which has a head (i) may give a personal command, and, by parol, do sundry small acts. It may, thus, retain a servant (k), or authorise another to make a distress, or the like, these being acts which require to be done for the ordinary convenience of the body corporate, and which the head of the corporation is delegated by its other members to perform.

Both the foregoing exceptions to the general rule, it will be observed, originated in necessity, or in convenience almost amounting to necessity.

3. The third exception to be noticed, which is not perhaps so well established, or, at all events, so well defined as the preceding, seems to require for its support this special ingredient, viz., the adoption of the particular contract in question, and the enjoyment of the benefits resulting from it, by the corporation or by the other contracting party (l).

(h) Per Alderson, B., 5 Exch. 450; Judgm., 6 Ad. & E. 861; per Pollock, C. B. 11 Exch. 234; per Lord Denman, C. J., Hall v. Mayor, &c., of Swansea, 5 Q. B. 546; Judgm., 4 M. & Gr. 895; De Grave v. Mayor, &c., of Monmouth, 4 Car. & P. 111; Denton v. East Anglian R. C., 3 C. & K. 16.

(i) See, per Parke, B., Cope v. Thames Haven Dock and R. C., 3 Exch. 844.

(k) Judgm., Arnold v. Mayor of Poole, 4 M. & Gr. 895, and cases there cited; Smith v. Cartwright, 6 Exch. 927, 939; Cox v. Midland Counties R. C., 3 Exch. 268; Judgm., Gibson v. E. India Co., 5 Bing. N.C. 270, 271.

A covenant may, in some cases, be discharged by the act of the covenantee, without deed; and a corporation may, in like manner, by their acts or the acts of their agent, discharge the covenantee without any writing under seal: Cort v. Ambergate, &c., R. C., 17 Q. B. 127. See Thames Haven Dock and R. C. v. Brymer, 5 Exch. 696; S. C., 2 Exch. 549; Thames Ironworks Co. v. Royal Mail Steam Packet Co., 13 C. B., N. S., 358, 376; Solvency Mutual Guarantee Co. v. Froane, 7 H. & N. 5.

(l) In Diggle v. London and Blackwall R. C., 5 Exch. 451, however, Rolfe, B., refers cases, such as are above adverted to, to the principle of necessity, which "really embraces all the ex-

Thus it has been held, that assumpsit for use and occupation will lie at suit of a corporation where the tenant has held premises under them, and paid rent (m). It has been held, also, that if a contract with a corporation is executed by them, if the persons who are parties to the contract with the corporation have received the benefit of the consideration moving from the corporation, these last-mentioned parties are bound by the contract, and liable to be sued thereon by the corporation (n).

Further, where the guardians of a union verbally directed their officer to have gates made for the union workhouse, and the plaintiff, in pursuance of orders from the officer, furnished the gates, which were erected, the jury having found for the plaintiff, the Court of Queen's Bench refused to disturb the verdict, inasmuch as the work, after it had been done and completed, was adopted by the defendants for purposes connected with the corporation (o).

The judgment in Clarke v. The Cuckfield Union (p) is important, with reference to the class of cases now under notice. There the action was in debt for goods sold and delivered, and for work and labour, the claim being in respect of water-closets put up by the plaintiff at the union workcepted cases,—that is, matters too trivial or of too frequent occurrence, as in the case of trading corporations drawing bills, without which they could not carry on their trade, &c. With these exceptions, the old law remains as it did in the time of Hen. 8, and the earlier times before it." See Reuter v. Electric Telegraph Co., cited p. 559, n. (b).

(m) Mayor of Stafford v. Till, 4 Bing. 75; Mayor of Carmarthen v. Lewis, 6 Car. & P. 608; Dean, &c., of Rochester v. Pierce, 1 Camp. 466; Mayor of London v. Hunt, 3 Lev. 37.

(n) Judgm., Fishmongers' Co. v. Robertson, 5 M. & Gr. 192 (where the principle is extended to executory contracts with a corporation; as to which, see Judgm., Copper Miners' Co. v. Fox, 16 Q. B. 237-8; Reg. v. Mayor of Thetford, 2 Ld. Raym. 848; Barber Surgeons of London v. Pelson, 2 Lev. 252; East London Waterworks Co. v. Bailey, 4 Bing. 287.

(o) Sanders v. St. Neot's Union, 8 Q. B. 810; with which compare Paine v. Strand Union, Id. 326; Lamprell v. Billericay Union, 3 Exch. 283, 307, and cases cited post.

(p) 21 L. J., Q. B., 349; S. C., 1 Bail C. C. 81.

house, by the direction and with the approbation of the defendants, at a regularly constituted meeting of the Board of Guardians. The broad question for judicial decision was this, whether, assuming the articles supplied to have been such as were proper and needful for the workhouse ; assuming also, that the defendants ordered them, at a meeting of the board, to be furnished by the plaintiff, and afterwards approved and kept them, they were exonerated from liability, on the ground that no contract under seal for the supply in question had been entered into ? Wightman, J., after adverting to the general rule applicable to the contracts of a body corporate, and the exceptions to it, held, that the defendants could not thus repel the claim against them. "I am disposed to think," said the learned judge, "that wherever the purposes for which a corporation is created render it necessary that work should be done, or goods supplied, to carry such purposes into effect, as in the case of the guardians of a poor-law union, and orders are given at a board regularly constituted, and having general authority to make contracts for works or goods necessary for the purposes for which the corporation was created, and the work is done, or goods supplied, and accepted by the corporation, and the whole consideration for payment executed ; the corporation cannot keep the goods or the benefit, and refuse to pay, on the ground that though the members of the corporation who ordered the goods or work were competent to make a contract and bind the rest, the formality of a deed or of affixing the seal were wanting, and then say, 'No action lies ; we are not competent to make a parol contract, and we avail ourselves of our own disability.'"

The rule upon the point above adverted to may perhaps thus be stated—that where a corporation has acted as upon an executed contract, it may be presumed against them that everything necessary to make the contract mutually binding, has been done—at all events, a presumption has in various cases been raised as against a corporate body from its acts to this effect—that it has contracted in such a manner as to bind itself (g).

The above-mentioned qualification of the general rule, that “a corporation can only bind itself by contract under seal,” is moreover distinctly insisted upon by Lord Campbell in Lowe v. The London and North Western R. C. (r), where it was applied to render a corporation liable in assumpsit for the use and occupation of land entered upon by permission of the owner, but not held by instrument of demise under seal; and the decision in this case was approved of by the Court of Exchequer in Pauling v. The London and North Western R. C. (s), where the facts were as under: An agent of the company, who were defendants in the action, agreed by parol with the plaintiff to purchase of him a quantity of railway sleepers upon certain terms. The sleepers were received and used by the company, who afterwards objected to pay for them, on the ground that no contract had been made obligatory on them within the 97th section of the Companies Clauses Consolidation Act (8 & 9 Vict. c. 16); the judge having ruled that there was evidence for the jury of a contract with the company, the Court in banc affirmed this ruling, upon the ground, that where an incorporated company has had the benefit of a bargain made by its agent, it will be a reasonable inference for a jury

(g) Doe d. Pennington v. Tanière, 12 Q. B. 998; with which, however, compare Finlay v. Bristol and Exeter R. C., 7 Exch. 409, where it was sought to make the defendants liable on an implied contract for use and occupation of premises for a portion of a year during which they had not occupied; and Parke, B., observed, “No case has gone the length of saying that a corporation may bind itself by a contract not under seal, which does not range within either the small services excepted by the common law, or contracts authorised by parliamentary charter.”

(r) 21 L. J., Q. B., 361; S. C., 18 Q. B. 622. See Giles v. Taff Vale R. C., 2 E. & B. 822; and cases there cited; Goff v. Great Northern R. C., 30 L. J., Q. B., 148.

(s) 8 Exch. 867.

that the bargain in question was duly and effectually entered into (t).

4. The case just cited illustrates the nature of a new class of exceptions, which, in modern times, has sprung up to the general rule, that a corporate body must contract under seal. Corporations are now frequently established by charter, letters patent, or Act of Parliament, for the purpose of carrying on trading speculations, to which the drawing of bills or the making of particular kinds of contracts is essential. In such cases, power is usually conferred on certain of the corporate officers, designated by the crown or legislature, to enter into contracts, such as alluded to, on behalf of all the members of the corporation otherwise than under seal (u): and difficulty can scarcely arise respecting the efficacy of contracts which profess to be thus made, unless it be from the ambiguous wording of the statute, charter, deed of settlement, or other instrument, under which the company in question has been constituted.

When governed by express statutory provisions, the rule applicable is, that a body corporate must contract either under seal or in such manner as is sanctioned thereby (x).

Further, it is obvious, that companies, regulated by statute (y) and deed of settlement, are not to be treated as (t) See also Smith v. Hull Glass Co., 11 C. B. 897, and 8 C. B. 668; cited per Williams, J., Allard v. Bourne, 15 C. B., N. S., 472; Northampton Gas Light Co. v. Parnell, 15 C. B. 630.

(u) The Companies' Act, 1862 (25 & 26 Vict. c. 89) contains no provision similar to those in The Companies' Clauses Act and The Joint Stock Companies' Act, 1856 (dispensing with the necessity of a seal in ordinary cases). It provides, however (s. 47), for the making, accepting, and indorsing of promissory notes and bills of exchange on behalf of a Company registered under the Act. See Supp. to Lindley on Partnership, p. 194.

(x) Homersham v. Wolverhampton Waterworks Co., 6 Exch. 137, distinguished in Smith v. Hull Glass Co., 11 C. B. 928; Frend v. Dennett, 4 C. B., N. S., 576; Prince of Wales Ass. Co. v. Harding, E. B. & E. 183; Kirk v. Bell, 16 Q. B. 290; Nowell v. Mayor, &c., of Worcester, 9 Exch. 457; Cope v. Thames Haven Dock and R. Co., 3 Exch. 841. See Payne v. New South Wales Coal, &c., Co., 10 Exch. 233.

(y) See particularly The Companies' Act, 1862 (25 & 26 Vict. c. 89).

ordinary trading partnerships; such companies are only bound by contracts made by the directors or other officers within the scope of their authority (z); any contract or agreement entered into ultra vires, however beneficial for the shareholders may appear its tendency, will (as a general rule) be wholly void (a).

"There can be no doubt," observes Lord Wensleydale (b), "that a corporation is fully capable of binding itself by any contract under its common seal, in England, and without it in Scotland (c); except where the statutes by which it is created or regulated expressly or by necessary implication prohibit such contract between the parties; prima facie, all its contracts are valid, and it lies on those who impeach any contract to make out that it is avoided. This is the doctrine of ultra vires and is no doubt sound law, though the application of it to the points of each particular case has not always been satisfactory to my mind."

To the above subject, which is one of great and increasing importance to the community, a bare allusion must here suffice.

(z) Smith v. Hull Glass Co., 11 C. B. 926, 927. See Ridley v. Plymouth, &c., Baking Co., and Kingsbridge Flour Mill Co. v. Same, 2 Exch. 711, 718; Hallett v. Dowdall, 18 Q. B. 1; Hambro' v. Hull and London Fire Ins. Co., 3 H. & N. 789; Agar v. Athenæum Life Ass. Soc., 3 C. B., N. S., 725.

(a) In illustration of what is above said, see Bateman v. Mayor, &c., of Ashton-under-Lyne, 3 H. & N. 323, and cases there cited; per Parke, B., South Yorkshire R. C. v. Great Northern R. C., 9 Exch. 84; adopted per Martin, B., Payne v. Mayor of Brecon, 8 H. & N. 578; and per Byles, J., Lewis v. Mayor, &c., of Rochester, 9 C. B., N. S., 426; Mayor,

&c., of Norwich v. Norfolk R. C., 4 E. & B. 397; Bostock v. North Staffordshire R. C., 4 E. & B. 798; Shrewsbury and Birmingham R. C. v. London and North Western R. C., 4 De G., Mac. & G. 115; S. C., 6 H. L. Ca. 113, 136-7; Scottish North Eastern R. C. v. Stewart, 3 Macq. H. L. Ca. 382; East Anglian R. C. v. Eastern Counties R. C., 11 C. B. 775, 811; Simpson v. Westminster Palace Hotel Co., 1 De G., F. & J. 141. .

(b) Scottish North Eastern R. C. v. Stewart, 3 Macq. H. L. Ca. 415; and in Ernest v. Nicholls, 6 H. L. Ca. 419 et seq.

(c) See Paterson Comp. Eng. & Sc. Law, p. 215.

In the cases below cited (d) will be found resolved many questions raised upon the respective liabilities of shareholders, directors, managing committee-men, and others concerned with projected companies or associations (e). The general deduction to be made from these cases, is that, when one is engaged to act with others for the purpose of establishing a particular scheme, neither is a co-partnership to be assumed necessarily to arise thereon, nor a quasi co-partnership, such as shall of itself render any one of the individuals so associated together agent for any other, or for all the others, for the purposes of attaining the common object. It is not merely by agreeing to act with others that a man is rendered liable on contracts made by those associated with him; but if by his consent, conduct, or ratification he authorise any one to act for him, and work is done, and credit given on the faith of his responsibility, he will be liable in respect of contracts which have been thus entered into (f).

(d) Taylor v. Crowland Gas and Coke Co., 10 Exch. 293; Preston v. The Liverpool, Manchester, and Newcastle-upon-Tyne R. C., 17 Beav. 114; Bull v. Chapman, 8 Exch. 444; Reynell v. Lewis, Wyld v. Hopkins, 15 M. & W. 517. See also Landman v. Entwistle, 7 Exch. 631; Wilson v. Viscount Curzon, 15 M. & W. 532; Bailey v. Macaulay, 13 Q. B. 815; Newton v. Belcher, 12 Q. B. 921; Halket v. Merchant Traders', &c., Insurance Co., 13 Q. B. 960; Barnett v. Lambert, 15 M. & W. 498; Williams v. Pigott, 2 Exch. 201; Lindley on Partnership, vol. i., p. 127.

(e) Cross v. Williams, 7 H. & N. 675, may usefully be consulted in connection with the text. See also Martyn v. Gray, 14 C. B., N. S., 824.

(f) Difficulty has sometimes been experienced in fixing on the proper defendants, where an allottee of shares in a company not yet launched sues the managing committee for the recovery of his deposit, on the ground of failure of consideration, or on that of fraudulent misrepresentation.

The following cases may be consulted upon this subject:—Walstab v. Spottiswoode, 15 M. & W. 501; Nockels v. Crosby, 3 B. & C. 814; Garwood v. Ede, 1 Exch. 264; Ward v. Lord Lonsborough, 12 C. B. 252; Clements v. Todd, 1 Exch. 268; Jones v. Harrison, 2 Exch. 52; Wontner v. Shairp, 4 C. B. 404; Watts v. Salter, 10 C. B. 477. These cases seem to show, that if the contract between the allottee and the committee were, that the money should be advanced by the allottee to be expended in preliminary expenses, then the deposit cannot be recovered if it has been so expended, although the

So soon as a company has received registration under The Companies Act, 1862 (25 & 26 Vict. c. 89) (g), it may enter into contracts and perform acts necessary for carrying into effect the purposes of the company, and it may then both sue and be sued by its registered name.

Effect of bankruptcy on the capacity to contract.

Very few remarks touching the effect of bankruptcy upon the capacity of the bankrupt to contract will here be offered, as it is not within my plan to examine minutely the nature of rights of action which do or do not pass to the assignees,—of liabilities which may be enforceable against them or against the bankrupt, whom, for many purposes, they represent.

It can hardly be incorrect to say, that bankruptcy does in some cases affect the capacity of the bankrupt to contract; for instance, it may give an option to his assignees to treat a contract ostensibly entered into with the bankrupt as in fact made with themselves (h); it may render void the express promise or agreement of the bankrupt (i). Ordinarily, however, the result of bankruptcy rather is to relieve the scheme fail. When, however, the action will lie,—either in the absence of such stipulation, or on similar grounds to those stated in Walstab v. Spottiswoode,—then, in seeking a defendant among the committee of management, the plaintiff should choose one who has taken an active part in the concern, and by whom it may be sufficiently shown that the deposit was in fact had and received to the use of the plaintiff. Moore v. Garwood (in Error), 4 Exch. 681; Burnside v. Dayrell, 6 Rail. Cas. 67; Drouet v. Taylor, 16 C. B. 671.

(g) See also Woolff v. City Steamboat Co., 7 C. B. 103; Hull Flax Co. v. Wellesley, 6 H. & N. 38; MacLae v. Sutherland, 3 E. & B. 1. Those companies, however, which require also the authority of Parliament to enable them to carry into execution their projects—such as railway, dock, and similar public works,—can enter into contracts only conditionally upon their obtaining their Acts of Incorporation.

The difference between contracts entered into by a partner of an ordinary copartnership, and those made on behalf of a joint stock company, is well exhibited by Parke, B., giving judgment in Ridley v. Plymouth, Devon, &c., Co., 2 Exch. 711; and see Kingsbridge Mill Co. v. Plymouth Baking Co., 2 Exch. 718.

(h) Post, p. 569.

(i) Post, p. 574.

bankrupt from liabilities, and to divest him of rights and remedies, than to incapacitate him from contracting.

The general effect of the Bankrupt Acts, 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, and 25 & 26 Vict. c. 89, is to vest in the assignees appointed under their provisions the whole estate, real and personal, which the bankrupt had or was entitled to for his own benefit (k), either in possession, remainder, or reversion, at the date of the act of bankruptcy, as also all such property as may come to him before he obtains his certificate (l).

The bankrupt, being thus on the one hand divested of all property in which he was beneficially interested, receives on the other hand protection from liability in respect of contracts entered into by him prior to his bankruptcy and certificate (m).

Such being the general effect of the Bankrupt Acts, let us proceed to consider their operation upon the capacity to contract.

In the first place then, it is clearly established, that an uncertificated bankrupt may contract, subject to the right of his assignees to interfere, claim the benefit of the contract, and sue in their own names for its breach (n). An uncertificated bankrupt, moreover, has (probably through a feeling of compassion for his situation), been held entitled to contract for his own work and labour, and to recover money due in respect thereof (o), as well as for materials found, incident

(k) Contracts made or property held by a bankrupt as trustee, remain unaffected by the bankruptcy: Bodding-ton v. Castelli, 1 E. & B. 879; S. C., Id. 66, and cases there cited; Winch v. Keeley, 1 T. R. 619; per Lord Campbell, C. J., Westoby v. Day, 2 E. & B. 624.

(l) 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, ss. 141, 142; 24 & 25 Vict. c. 134, s. 229; Shelf. Law of Bankruptcy, 3rd ed., 350, 366.

(m) Ante, p. 138.

(n) Herbert v. Sayer, 5 Q. B. 965, followed in Jackson v. Burnham, 8 Exch. 173; Kitchen v. Bartsch, 7 East, 53; Drayton v. Dale, 2 B. & C. 293; Fyson v. Chambers, 9 M. & W. 460; Judgm., Morgan v. Knight, 15 C. B., N. S., 677.

(o) Chippendale v. Tomlinson, cited 7 East, 58, n. (g); Id. 62; Williams v. Chambers, 10 Q. B. 337.

and necessary thereto (p), or money lent if earned thereby (q). The principle, however, of the decisions here adverted to will not, it seems, be at all extended.

In Elliot v. Clayton (r), the plaintiff sued for work and labour as a surgeon and apothecary, for medicines, and on an account stated. The plea to this declaration alleged the bankruptcy of the plaintiff before the debt accrued, and that his assignees claimed the debt from the defendant before action brought. Replication, that the work, &c. "was merely the personal labour of plaintiff," and was performed "for the necessary present maintenance of plaintiff and his family;" that the medicines "were purchased and obtained by plaintiff" "out of the earnings and profits of his personal labour performed after bankruptcy;" that they were "greatly increased in value by the personal labour of plaintiff in preparing and administering the same," and were "a part of, and incidental and necessary to plaintiff's personal labour, and in order that he might perform the same in the manner most advantageous for the necessary present maintenance," &c., "of the plaintiff and his family;" and that the account was stated of such personal labour and such medicines. This replication was traversed by the rejoinder, and issue taken thereupon. Such being the pleadings in this case, it appeared in evidence that the plaintiff was an uncertificated bankrupt; that by an arrangement with a friend who had purchased his stock of medicines, he continued in possession of them on credit, carried on his business as before, and was supplied with fresh medicines on credit from wholesale houses; under these circumstances, the debt sued for was contracted, the plaintiff attending the defendant, giving him the benefit of his skill, and furnishing the medicines which he thought necessary. The (p) Silk v. Osborne, 1 Esp. 140.

(q) Evans v. Brown, 1 Esp. 170.

(r) 16 Q. B. 581; Crofton v. Poole,

1 B. & Ad. 568.

Court held that the replication, of which the substance has been above set out, was not proved (s).

Again, a bankrupt, whilst uncertificated, may also enter into a contract of such a kind that its breach would occasion a personal injury to himself—ex. gr., he may contract to be cured of a wound or to marry—in such a case the assignees could not interfere so as to prevent the bankrupt from suing for damages, although it seems clear that he might be compelled to hand them over for the benefit of the creditors when recovered. Some difficulty was formerly experienced in defining with precision the class of cases in which a person's capacity to contract remains unimpaired by his bankruptcy,—as well as in determining when a right of action ex contractu, vested in the bankrupt before bankruptcy, would not be divested thereby (t). Much light, however, has recently been thrown upon this subject by two cases: Beckham v. Drake (u) and Rogers v. Spence (x); which, having been heard before the highest

(s) See further in connection with the above subject, Stanton v. Collier, 3 E. & B. 274; Wetherell v. Julius, 10 C. B. 267, which were decided with reference to insolvents.

(t) The assignees are, in general, entitled to recover on choses in action which have accrued to them in right of the bankrupt, or for the recovery of damages for any breach of a contract with the bankrupt, committed prior to the bankruptcy: ante, p. 569, n. (l). See Hill v. Smith, 12 M. & W. 618; Alder v. Keighley, 15 M. & W. 117; per Parke, J., Kearsey v. Carstairs, 2 B. & Ad. 724; Porter v. Vorley, 9 Bing. 93, 95; Wright v. Fairfield, 2 B. & Ad. 727; Valpy v. Oakeley, 16 Q. B. 941.

(u) 2 H. L. Ca. 579; S. C., 11 M. & W. 315, 9 Id. 79, 8 Id. 846, where the facts were as follow:—A. entered into an agreement with B. and C. to serve them for seven years at fixed wages,—“the party making default to pay to the other the sum of 500*l.* by way or in nature of specific damages.” A. was dismissed; he became bankrupt; and, after the bankruptcy, brought an action of assumpsit on the agreement, to which the defendants pleaded his bankruptcy. This plea was held to be an answer to the action, on the ground that the right to sue for the breach of the agreement in question passed to his assignees. See Bell v. Carey, 8 C. B. 887, 893.

(x) 12 Cl. & F. 700; S. C., 13 M. & W. 571, 11 Id. 191. It was there held, that trespass for seizing and taking a bankrupt's goods under a false and unfounded claim of a debt being due from him, whereby the bankrupt was annoyed and prejudiced tribunal, are to be regarded as leading authorities in reference to it. In the former of these cases, Erle, J., delivering his opinion to the House of Lords, remarks as follows:—“The right of action does not pass [to a bankrupt’s assignees] where the damages are to be estimated by immediate reference to pain felt by the bankrupt in respect of his body, mind, or character, and without immediate reference to his rights of property. Thus it has been laid down, that the assignees cannot sue for breach of promise of marriage, for criminal conversation, seduction, defamation, battery, injury to the person by negligence, as by not carrying safely, not curing, not saving from imprisonment by process of law” (y); and if, in such case, a consequential damage to the personal estate follows from the injury to the person, that may be so dependent upon and inseparable from the personal injury, which is the primary cause of action, that no right to maintain a separate action in respect of such consequential damage will pass to the bankrupt’s assignees. Under the circumstances supposed, moreover, the primary cause of action, if of a nature properly speaking personal, and the right to maintain it, would die with the bankrupt (z).

In connection with this subject, we must further remember, in his business and believed by his customers to be insolvent, in consequence whereof certain lodgers left his house, could not be maintained by his assignees. In this case, the plea of the plaintiff’s bankruptcy was pleaded “as to the seizing and taking the goods and chattels in the declaration mentioned;” and it was observed (per Lord Abinger, C. B. 11 M. & W. 629), that, although such a plea might have been good if limited to the value of the goods, yet the jury might, as the record stood, give damages beyond the value of the goods in respect of the manner of the seizure, and that the right to sue for such damages would not pass to the assignees. See also Brewer v. Dew, 11 M. & W. 625; Clark v. Calvert, 8 Taunt. 742; Topham v. Dent, 6 Bing. 515.

(y) 2 H. L. Ca. 604; Howard v. Crowther, 8 M. & W. 601; Hancock v. Caffyn, 8 Bing. 358, 366; Benson v. Flower, Sir W. Jones, 215.

(z) Judgm., Drake v. Beckham, 11 M. & W. 319. And see also, with reference to the “mixed case of injury to the person and injury to the property,” per Lord Campbell, Rogers v. Spence, 12 CL. & F. 720-1; Wetherell v. Julius, 10 C. B. 267.

that, "one side of a contract being either consideration or promise, according as one of the parties is either plaintiff or defendant (a), where the question is, whether the assignees of a bankrupt contractee can sue for a breach of a promise broken before the bankruptcy, the nature of the promise is alone to be considered; and when the question is, whether the assignees have a right to adopt an unexecuted contract, and, after the bankruptcy, to complete the consideration for the purpose of enforcing the promise (b), the nature of the consideration is alone to be considered. Thus, in respect of promise, the assignees of a patient, if bankrupt, could not sue a surgeon for a breach of his promise to use due care in treating a wound, because the damages are assessed by reference to bodily annoyance; but the assignees of the same surgeon, if bankrupt, might sue the patient on his promise to pay remuneration for attendance, because the promise relates to property: and the assignees of a bankrupt could not sue on a breach of promise to marry; but the same assignees might," says Erle, J., "for the same reason, sue for a breach of promise to pay a given sum in case of refusing on request to complete a contract of marriage (c). Thus, also, in respect of consideration, the assignees of a painter might not have a right to adopt an incompleated contract to paint a picture for a sum and complete it, because the personal skill of the contractor would probably be of the essence of the contract; but the assignees of the bankrupt purchaser, being ready with the money which was to be the consideration, might adopt the contract to pay (d), and sue the same painter if he refused to complete and deliver the picture according to his promise" (e).

(a) Ante, p. 333.

(b) See Whitmore v. Gilmour, 12 M. & W. 808.

(c) See also, per Maule, J., 12 Cl & F. 622, adopted per Lord Campbell, Id. 645.

(d) Gibson v. Carruthers, 8 M. & W. 321; ante, p. 568.

See, as an instance of such adoption, Twemlow v. Askey, 3 M. & W. 495.

(e) Per Erle, J., 2 H. L. Ca. 604.

The capacity of a bankrupt to bind himself by a contract is further, in certain cases, affected by express statutory provisions; for instance, the Bankruptcy Act, 1861, enacts (sect. 166), "that any contract, covenant, or security made or given by a bankrupt or other person with, to, or in trust for any creditor, for securing the payment of any money, as a consideration or with intent to persuade the creditor to forbear opposing the order for discharge, or to forbear to petition for a re-hearing of or to appeal against the same, shall be void, and any money thereby secured or agreed to be paid shall not be recoverable;" "provided always that no such security, if a negotiable security, shall be void, as against a bonâ fide holder thereof for value, without notice of the consideration for which it was given" (f).

SECT. II.—Contracts with Non-mercantile Persons.

In this section I propose to inquire how far the capacity to contract may be affected by Infancy, Coverture, Mental Imbecility, or otherwise; and under what circumstances an Executor or Administrator may enter into a contract binding as regards himself, or as regards the estate which he has to administer and on behalf of which he may be supposed to act.

Contract with an infant.

An infant, by reason of his tender years and presumed immaturity of judgment, is specially protected by our law; for, although an infant may sue for breach of a contract entered into with him (g)—as for a breach of promise of marriage (h)—yet where it is sought to recover damages against him by action ex contractu, the fact of his infancy at the date of the contract will, in most cases, be pleadable in (f) See, also, sect. 167.

Bac. Abr. "Infancy" (I. 4).

(g) Warwick v. Bruce, 2 M. & S. 205; S. C. (in Error), 6 Taunt. 118;

(h) Holt v. Ward, 2 Str. 937.

answer to such action (i). It must not, however, thence be inferred, that an infant labours under a total incapacity to contract—in other words that his contract is void in toto—it is in general voidable only (k).

In regard to the true nature of the contract of an infant, and the question whether it be voidable or void, some difficulty exists, caused by the different meanings which have, on different occasions, been assigned to the word “void.” If thereby is meant incapable of being enforced, the contract of an infant for goods sold and delivered (not being necessaries (l)), is altogether void, inasmuch as the plea of infancy will be a bar to an action for their price. If, however, by “void” is meant incapable of being ratified (m), very few contracts entered into by an infant will be found to be wholly void. They are so, indeed, according to the weight of authority, when manifestly and necessarily prejudicial to him, but not otherwise (n). Thus it is laid down (o), that “an infant may bind himself to pay for his necessary meat, drink, apparel, necessary physic, and such other necessities, and likewise for his good teaching or instruction, whereby he may profit himself afterwards (p); but if he bind himself in an obligation, or other writing with a penalty for the payment of any of these, that obligation shall not bind him.” So it has been held (q), that an infant cannot bind

(i) This privilege “is given as a shield and not as a sword,” and “it never shall be turned into an offensive weapon of fraud or injustice:” per Lord Mansfield, C. J., 3 Burr. 1802.

(k) Goode v. Harrison, 5 B. & Ald. 147, 159; Corpe v. Overton, 10 Bing. 252; per Gibbs, C. J., 6 Taunt. 120.

(l) As to which, see post, p. 579.

(m) See the judgm., Williams v. Moor, 11 M. & W. 264; Gibbs v. Merrill, 3 Taunt. 318.

(n) “An infant, or one in privity to him, may object to a contract on the ground that it was not for his benefit. But what right has a third party, a stranger, to say that the infant may not make what contract he pleases?” Per Jervis, C. J., Douglas v. Watson, 17 C. B. 691.

(o) Co. Litt. 172 a.; adopted per Tindal, C. J., 10 Bing. 257. See 1 M. & Gr. 551 (b).

(p) See Cooper v. Simmons, 7 H. & N. 707, 719.

(q) Fisher v. Mowbray, 8 East, 330; Baylis v. Dinely, 3 M. & S. 477.

In Latt v. Booth, 3 C. & K. 292, himself in a bond with a penalty conditioned for the payment of interest as well as principal, the objection, as remarked by Lord Ellenborough, C. J., going "not merely to the quantum of damages, but to avoid the whole security; for the judgment must be for the sum due upon the bond, and part of that sum is due for interest, for which an infant cannot give a security."

Further, a cognovit given by an infant, authorising an attorney to appear for him and confess an action brought against him for necessities furnished to him by the plaintiff, with an undertaking not to bring a writ of error, &c., was, in Oliver v. Woodroffe (r), held to be invalid, and was ordered to be taken off the file and cancelled, upon three grounds:—

1. That an infant cannot appoint an attorney; 2. That he cannot state an account so as to bind himself (s); and, 3. That he cannot do any act to prejudice his rights. So, a contract by an infant, binding him to serve during a certain time for wages, but enabling the master to stop the work whenever he chose, and to retain the wages during stoppage, was, in Reg. v. Lord (t), adjudged to be inequitable and wholly void.

Again, in Perkins's Profitable Book (u), it is said to be a common learning, "that all such gifts, grants, or deeds made by an infant, as do not take effect by delivery of his hand, are void. But all gifts, grants, or deeds made by an infant by matter in deed or in writing, which take effect (x) by delivery of his own hand, are voidable by himself and his

Williams, J., intimated an opinion, that an assignment of goods by an infant, set up as a defence to an action of trover brought for their conversion by the defendant (the assignee), was absolutely void.

(r) 4 M. & W. 650.

(s) See Williams v. Moor, 11 M. & W. 256.

(t) 12 Q. B. 757. See Wood v.

Fenwick, 10 M. & W. 195; R. v. Inhab. of Chillesford, 4 B. & C. 94, 101.

(u) Sect. 12.

(x) "The words 'which do take effect' are an essential part of the definition, and exclude letters of attorney, or deeds which delegate a mere power and convey no interest:" 3 Burr. 1804.

heirs and by those who have his estate." The doctrine here laid down was assented to by Lord Mansfield, C. J., in Zouch v. Parsons (y), where a conveyance by an infant mortgagee was held to be voidable only; and a distinction was taken between the deed of a feme covert and that of an infant—the former being void, the latter voidable. The same doctrine was also recognised as sound in Allen v. Allen (z), by Sir E. Sugden, who observes, "It cannot be said that all instruments executed by infants are void" (ex. gr., "a lease executed by an infant with a reservation of rent is only voidable" (a)), though, "if an infant has executed a deed which proves to be injurious to his interests, it is voidable, and he may set it aside when he attains his full age."

The capacity of an infant to contract, and the question—under what circumstances will he, on becoming of full age, be liable on his contract made durante minore ætate?—have been much considered where actions of debt have been brought against infant shareholders in railway companies, to compel the payment of calls due upon their shares. Now, in general, "an infant or minor hath, without consent of any other, capacity to purchase; for it is intended for his benefit, and at his full age he may either agree thereunto and perfect it, or, without any cause to be alleged, waive or disagree to the purchase" (b). So an infant shareholder in a railway company acquires, on being registered, a vested interest of a permanent character in all the profits arising from the land and other effects of the company; he may be deemed a purchaser in possession of such interest, and is placed in a position analogous to that of a purchaser in possession of real estate. Under the Companies Clauses Consolidation Act, an (y) 3 Burr. 1794, 1804; recognised by Lord Eldon, Anon. v. Handcock, 17 Ves. 883.

(z) 2 Dr. & W. 307, 338.

(a) See Judgment, 5 Exch. 126; per Parks, B., 4 Exch. 80; per Buller, J., Maddon v. White, 2 T. R. 161; Platt on Leases, vol. 1, p. 28. And see the authorities cited Judgment, 3 Exch. 575.

(b) Co. Litt. 2 b.

infant, registered as a shareholder in a railway company, is not absolutely bound, nor deprived of the right which the law gives every infant of waiving and disagreeing to the purchase which he has made; if he does so, the estate acquired by the purchase is at an end, and with it the infant's liability to pay calls, though the avoidance may not have taken place till the call was due (c).

Where, however, an estate has become and remains vested in an infant, the burthen in respect of it will remain obligatory until a waiver or disagreement by the infant takes place, which, if made on or within a reasonable time after (d) attaining his full age, will avoid the estate altogether, and revest it in the party from whom the infant purchased; if made within age, will suspend it only, because such disagreement may be again recalled when the infant attains his majority (e). Such are the principles by which to determine the liability of an infant shareholder in a railway company who is sued for calls due in respect of his shares, either whilst still a minor (in which case, however, little difficulty can present itself) or after he has attained his majority.

But although the contract of an infant is in general voidable, he may contract for necessaries; and he may, by compliance with certain statutory provisions, on attaining his full age, ratify or renew his liability upon a voidable contract made by him prior thereto. To each of the points here indicated attention must now be briefly directed.

An infant can contract so as to bind himself in those cases where it is necessary for him to have the things for which he contracts. Things necessary are those without which an

(c) North Western R. C. v. M'Michael, and Birkenhead, &c., R. C. v. Pilcher, 5 Exch. 114, 125; Leeds and Thirsk R. C. v. Fearnley, 4 Exch. 26; Cork and Bandon R. C. v. Cazenove, 10 Q. B. 935.

(d) Dublin and Wicklow R. C. v.

Black, 8 Exch. 181; Holmes v. Blogg, 8 Taunt. 39-40.

(e) North Western R. C. v. M'Michael, and Birkenhead, &c., R. C. v. Pilcher, 5 Exch. 24, 114, 125; Newry and Enniskillen R. C. v. Coombe, 3 Exch. 565.

individual cannot reasonably be supposed to exist. In the first place, food, raiment, lodging, and the like, are clearly necessities. Again, as the proper cultivation of the mind is as expedient as the support of the body, instruction in art or trade, or intellectual, moral, and religious information, may be a necessary also. Again, as man lives in society, the assistance and attendance of others may be a necessary to his well-being. Hence, attendance may be the subject of an infant's contract (f).

The several classes of things which may be necessities being thus established, the subject-matter and extent of the particular contract on which it is sought to charge the infant may vary according to his state and condition in life. His clothes may be fine or coarse, according to his rank ; his education may vary according to the station he is to fill, and the medicines chargeable to him as necessities will depend on the illness with which he is afflicted, and the extent of his probable means when of age (g). So, again, the nature and extent of the attendance will depend on his position in society ; ex. gr., a servant in livery may be allowed to a rich infant, because such attendance is commonly appropriated to persons in his rank of life. Subject, however, to the above remarks, it must always be made out that the things furnished, which form the subject-matter of the given contract, are essential to the existence and reasonable advantage and comfort of the infant contractor. Thus articles of mere luxury are always excluded, though luxurious articles of utility are in some cases allowed. So, contracts for charitable assistance to others, though highly to be praised, cannot be allowed to be binding, because they do not relate to the infant's own personal advantage (h).

(f) Judgm., 13 M. & W. 258.

(g) See Hart v. Prater, 1 Jur. 623.

(h) Judgm., Chapple v. Cooper, 13 M. & W. 258 (where an infant widow was held to be liable on her contract to pay for the funeral of her husband, who died leaving no property); ante, p. 575.

"The true rule," says Parke, B., in a case (i) often cited in reference to the subject before us, "I take to be this: All such articles as are purely ornamental are not necessary, and are to be rejected, because they cannot be requisite for any one: and for such matters, therefore, an infant cannot be made responsible. But, if they are not strictly of this description, then the question arises, whether they were bought for the necessary use of the party, in order to support himself properly in the degree, state, and station of life in which he moved; if they were, for such articles the infant may be responsible." The question for the jury will be this: Were the articles bought for mere ornament? If so, they cannot be necessities for any one. Were they bought for real use? If so, they may be necessities, provided they are suitable to the infant's age, state, and degree. The jury, therefore, must say whether they are such as reasonable persons of the age and station of the infant would require for real use. If so, they will be necessities for which an infant will be liable (k).

Ratification of promise by infant.

In regard to the confirmation of promises made by an infant, the statute 9 Geo. 4, c. 14, s. 5, enacts as follows:—"That no action shall be maintained whereby to charge any person upon any promise made after full age to pay any debt contracted during infancy, or upon any ratification after full age of any promise or simple contract made during infancy, unless such promise or ratification shall be made by some writing, signed by the party to be charged therewith." We see that by the above statute there must be either a promise by the defendant in writing after he has come of age, or a written ratification by him of the prior contract. Hence we may infer, that the meaning of the word "ratification" here

(i) Peters v. Fleming, 6 M. & W. 47; followed in Wharton v. Mackenzie and Cripps v. Hills, 5 Q. B. 606, 611. See Burghart v. Hall, 4 M. & W. 727.

The older cases as to necessities are collected in Harrison's Dig., 3rd ed., vol. 2, pp. 3275 et seq.

(k) Per Alderson, B., Peters v. Fleming, 6 M. & W. 48. As to what are or are not necessities, see further, Harrison v. Fane, 1 M. & Gr. 550; Brooker v. Scott, 11 M. & W. 67; Burnard, app., Haggis, resp., 14 C. B., N. S., 45.

used, is somewhat different from that of "promise." It seems to imply "an admission that the party is liable and bound to pay the debt arising from the contract which he made when an infant" (l). In order, therefore, to bring a case within the statute, there must be either a new promise in writing by the defendant when of age, or an admission in writing by him that he is liable and bound to pay in præ-senti on that contract which he made when a minor (l). Any written instrument, accordingly, signed by the party, which in the case of an adult would have amounted to the adoption of the act of another as agent, will, in the case of an infant who has attained his majority, amount to a ratification (m).

The principle on which the law allows a party who has attained his age of twenty-one years to give validity to contracts entered into during his infancy, is, that he is supposed, when of full age, to have acquired the power of deciding for himself whether the transaction in question is one of a meritorious character, by which in good conscience he ought to be bound. If an infant, having had dealings with an adult, meets and settles accounts with him during his infancy, in the ordinary way, and a balance is struck and vouchers are destroyed, he does that which creates no legal liability on his part. But if, on attaining his age of twenty-one years, he is satisfied of the fairness of the settlement of accounts thus made, there seems to be good reason why he should be permitted to confirm that settlement, and render himself liable for the balance. This liability he may accordingly, in the case supposed, assume; and the same principle applies to a claim in respect of work and labour performed, or goods sold and delivered, &c., during minority (n).

Where, however, a defendant means to rely on the defence

(l) Per Parke, B., Mawson v. Blane, 10 Exch. 210; Harris v. Wall, 1 Exch. 122; Hartley v. Wharton, 11 Ad. & E. 934.

(m) Judgm., Harris v. Wall, 1 Exch. 130.

(n) Judgm., Williams v. Moor, 11 M. & W. 265.

of infancy, he must plead it specially (o); and to this plea the plaintiff may reply, that the goods in question were necessities, or that the defendant ratified and confirmed the contract after attaining his full age (p).

The foregoing remarks, it must be observed, apply exclusively to the capacity of persons within the age of discretion to contract. "The capacity of infants," it has been said (q), "to commit crimes, their punishableness for criminal offences, their liability, civilly, for various wrongs not connected in any sense with contract, as for instance, battery and slander (r), to say nothing of the clear right, in some circumstances, to maintain trover" or trespass (s) "against them, are of universal recognition. But questions, which have not been considered free from difficulty, have arisen, whether, or how far, persons are civilly liable at law for wrongs, or such acts as if they were the acts of adults would be wrongs, done during infancy, when connected, or supposed to be connected with contracts." In any such case, the gist of the action must be narrowly examined, with a view to determining whether it be really founded in contract or in tort. An infant who has induced an adult to contract with him, by representing himself to be of full age, could not be made answerable in case (t); and it is clear, that, if the (o) Reg. Trin. T. 1853 (reg. 8).

See Roberts v. Bethell, 12 C. B. 778.

(p) See Mawson v. Blane, 10 Exch. 206; Harrison v. Cotgreave, 4 C. B. 562; Borthwick v. Carruthers, 1 T. R. 648. The new promise, or ratification, in respect of which it is sought to charge the defendant, must, however, have been made before action brought: Thornton v. Illingworth, 2 B. & C. 824.

An infant may, during infancy, effectually sign an acknowledgment in writing so as to take a debt incurred for necessities out of the operation of the Statute of Limitations: Willins v.

Smith, 4 E. & B. 180.

(q) Per Knight-Bruce, V.-C., Stikeman v. Dawson, 1 De G. & S. 110.

(r) Per Lord Kenyon, C. J., 8 T. R. 337; Hodsman v. Grissel, Noy, 129; Co. Litt. 180 b. n. (4); Johnson v. Pie, 1 Lev. 169; S. C., 1 Keb. 905, 913.

(s) Burnard, app., Haggis, resp., 14 C. B., N. S., 45, 53.

(t) See Price v. Hewett, 8 Exch. 146; Liverpool Adelphi Loan Association v. Fairhurst, 9 Exch. 422; Wright v. Leonard, 11 C. B., N. S., 258; Overton v. Banister, 3 Hare, 503; Goode v. Harrison, 5 B. & Ald. 147.

cause of action against an infant be founded upon contract, it cannot, at the mere option of the plaintiff, by shaping his declaration accordingly, be converted into a tort, for the purpose of charging the infant defendant (u). Nor in an action for goods sold and delivered would a replication on equitable grounds to a plea of infancy be good, which stated that defendant contracted the debt by means of a false and fraudulent representation that he was of full age (x).

An infant, however, although for his own sake protected by an incapacity to bind himself by contracts, except for necessities, may be doli capax, in a civil sense and for civil purposes, in the view of a Court of Equity (y).

The effect of marriage is, for most purposes, to render husband and wife one person in contemplation of law (z), and to merge, during coverture, the existence of the wife in that of the husband. A feme covert, accordingly, having no legal entity, is on that sole ground incapable of binding herself by a contract.

Effect of coverture on the capacity to
contract.

A contract by a married woman is usually altogether void, so that no action for breach of it will lie against her; unless where the marriage has been dissolved or declared null, or where a judicial separation has been pronounced; the recent (u) Jennings v. Rundall, 8 T. R. 338; Johnson v. Pie, 1 Lev. 169; S. C., 1 Keb. 905, 913; Green v. Greenbank, 2 Marsh. 485; Judgm., Manby v. Scott, 1 Lev. 4.

See Mills v. Graham, 1 N. R. 140, 145; Bristow v. Eastman, 1 Esp. 172.

(x) De Roo v. Foster, 12 C. B., N. S., 272; Bartlett v. Wells, 1 B. & S. 836.

(y) Judgm., 1 De G. & S. 109.

(z) 1 Bla. Com. 442; Co. Litt. 112; Marshall v. Rutton, 8 T. R. 546.

There are, however, exceptions to this rule: 1 Bla. Com. 444; 1 Powell, Contr., p. 60; per Maule, J., Wenman v. Ash, 13 C. B. 844-5, where that learned Judge remarks, that, "In the eye of the law, no doubt, man and wife are, for many purposes, one; but that is a strong figurative expression, and cannot be so dealt with as that all the consequences must follow which would result from its being literally true. For many purposes they are essentially distinct and different persons—and, amongst others, for the purpose of having the honour and the feelings of the husband assailed and injured by acts done or communications made to the wife." So the husband may be found guilty of crimes of violence towards the wife, and vice versa.

stat. 20 & 21 Vict. c. 85, s. 26, enacting that in every such case, "the wife shall, whilst so separated, be considered as a feme sole for the purposes of contract, and wrongs, and injuries, and suing and being sued in any civil proceeding."

The marital relation may also be severed and determined by the civil death of the husband (a). It may in certain cases be suspended, by some temporary disability cast upon him (b).

The husband will be liable on the contracts of the wife, when acting as his agent (c), express or implied; the fact of agency being implied under circumstances which will presently be stated. "A contract made by a wife during coverture is indeed a bargain by her on behalf of her husband, and he has a right to sue alone upon it" (d).

Wife cannot contract with husband.

Such is a brief view of the effect of marriage on the wife's capacity to contract (e), consequent on the merger of her existence in that of her husband. From the principle just stated it follows also that, at law, no contract can be made between husband and wife without the intervention of trustees; the feme, moreover, being considered as sub potestate viri, and being deemed incapable of contracting with the baron (f). "A man," therefore, "cannot grant anything to

(a) Belknap's case, Co. Litt. 132 b.; Judgm., Beard v. Webb, 2 B. & P. 105. See Barden v. De Keverberg, 2 M. & W. 61.

(b) Sparrow v. Carruthers, cited 2 W. Bl. 1197; Ex parte Franks, 7 Bing. 762; Carrol v. Blencow, 4 Esp. 27. See Boggett v. Frier, 11 East, 301; ante, p. 132.

(c) See post, pp. 586, 594.

If A. and B. live together as man and wife, although not really so related to each other, A. may, even after the connection has been severed, be liable on B.'s contracts,—whether he is so or not will usually depend upon the proof of agency: Ryan v. Sams, 12 Q. B. 460.

(d) Per Bramwell, B., De Wahl v. Braune, 1 H. & N. 182.

(e) See also Clerk v. Laurie, 1 H. & N. 452; S. C. (reversed in Error), 2 Id. 199; where the decision ultimately turned on the power of the wife to revoke an authority previously given.

(f) 2 Kent Com., 10th ed., p. 112.

To the presumption of law above mentioned is, also, by some writers, referred the general incapacity of a feme covert to bind herself or her husband by her assent to any contract or agreement in pais; she being, in considera-his wife, or enter into covenant with her; for the grant would be to suppose her separate existence, and to covenant with her would be only to covenant with himself" (g): and hence, also, it is generally true, "that all compacts made between husband and wife when single are voided by the intermarriage" (h); and that, if a man marries a woman to whom he is indebted, the debt is extinguished (i).

Let us now look at the subject before us—viz., the wife's incapacity to contract—from rather a different point of view, and inquire whether there may not be other reasons assigned for it in addition to those already stated.

The effect of marriage at common law is to vest in the husband the wife's personalty in possession; to entitle him to the rents and profits of her real estate; and to confer on him the right of reducing into possession, for his own benefit, her chattels real and choses in action (k).

So completely is a feme covert disabled from holding or recovering property during coverture in her own right, that if a woman possesses personal property, marries, and settles it upon herself without the intervention of a trustee, the husband is, in law, the absolute owner of the property (l). So, tion of law, under the coercion and dominion of her husband, and consequently having no moral capacity to assent to a contract either respecting his property or her own: 1 Powell, Contr., p. 59.

(g) 1 Bla. Com. 442. See Mews v. Mews, 15 Beav. 529; Price v. Price, 14 Id. 598; S. C., 1 De G., Mac. & G. 308.

(h) 1 Bla. Com. 442.

(i) Per Coleridge, J., Dolling v. White, 22 L. J., Q. B., 327.

(k) 2 Bla. Com. 433, 435; Robertson v. Norris, 11 Q. B. 916; Co. Litt. 300 a., 351 b.; Com. Dig. "Bar. and Feme" (E); Bac. Abr. "Bar. and Feme" (C); Maddox v. Winne, 3

Salk. 62. See Fitzgerald v. Fitzgerald, 8 C. B. 592, and the authorities there cited; Dodgson v. Bell, 5 Exch. 967; Simmons v. Edwards, 16 M. & W. 838; Waller v. Drakeford, 1 E. & B. 749.

As to the reduction into possession of the wife's property by her husband, see Howard v. Oakes, 3 Exch. 136; Sherrington v. Yates, 12 M. & W. 855; Richbell v. Alexander, 10 C. B., N. S., 324; Hart v. Stephens, 6 Q. B. 937, and cases there cited; Scarpellini v. Atcheson, 7 Q. B. 864; Gaters v. Madeley, 6 M. & W. 423; Topham v. Morecraft, 8 E. & B. 972.

(l) Per Williams, J., 13 C. B. 648.

the property in wearing apparel, bought by the wife for herself whilst living with her husband, out of money settled to her separate use before marriage, and paid to her by the trustees of her settlement, vests by law in the husband, and is liable to be taken in execution for his debts (m). And the savings of the wife, whilst separated by agreement from her husband, out of a weekly sum allowed by him for her support, may, after her death, be recovered in an action for money lent, at his suit, from one to whom, before her death, they had been disposed of by the wife by way of gift (n).

Further, the husband may, in his own name, recover wages accruing to his wife (o), or the profits of a business carried on by her (p); he may sue for her work and labour (q), and for goods sold or money lent by her (r).

The wife, being thus by marriage divested of her property and rendered incapable (except sub modo) of acquiring and retaining any, cannot, in reason, be held liable upon contracts ostensibly entered into with her; and accordingly, at law, a feme covert is incompetent to enter into a contract, save as the agent of her husband; such a contract, if unauthorised by him, is altogether void; it can give no right of action to the wife (s), nor impose a several liability upon her (t). It has,

(m) Carne v. Brice, 7 M. & W. 183.

(n) Messenger v. Clarke, 5 Exch. 388; Bird v. Peagram, 13 C. B. 639; (cited Judgm., Sloper v. Cottrell, 6 E. & B. 505;) Tugman v. Hopkins, 4 M. & Gr. 389.

(o) Per Lord Abinger, C. B., Den- gage v. Gardiner, 4 M. & W. 7.

(p) Saville v. Sweeney, 4 B. & Ad. 514, 522, 524.

The property and earnings of a married woman may, in certain cases, be protected under the stats. 20 & 21 Vict. c. 85 (see s. 21), and 21 & 22 Vict. c. 108 (see s. 6).

(q) Buckley v. Collier, 1 Salk.

114, 3 Id. 63; Bac. Abr. "Bar. and Feme" (D).

(r) Com. Dig. "Bar. and Feme" (W); Holmes v. Wood, 1 Barnard. 75, 249, cited 2 Wils. 424, and 2 M. & S. 396; Bidgood v. Way, 2 W. Bla. 1236; King v. Basingham, 8 Mod. 199, 341.

(s) See, however, infra, n. (y).

(t) Judgm., 9 Exch. 429; Com. Dig. "Bar. & Feme" (Q). See Smilh v. Plomer, 15 East, 607; Sanderson v. Griffiths, 5 B. & C. 909; Dick v. Tol- hausen, 4 H. & N. 695.

In Ivens v. Butler, 7 E. & B. 159, a married woman who had been taken in execution on a judgment obtained in pursuance of this doctrine, even been held, that an action will not lie against husband and wife for a false and fraudulent representation by the wife to the plaintiff that she was sole and unmarried, made at the time of her signing a promissory note as surety to him for a third person, whereby the plaintiff was induced to advance a sum of money to that person. "A feme covert," remarked the Court of Exchequer, delivering judgment in the case here alluded to (u), "is undoubtedly responsible for all torts committed by her during coverture, and the husband must be joined as a defendant. They are liable, therefore, for frauds committed by her on any person, as for any other personal wrongs. But where the fraud is directly connected with the contract with the wife, and is the means of effecting it, and parcel of the same transaction, the wife cannot be responsible and the husband be sued for it together with the wife. If this were allowed, it is obvious that the wife would lose the protection which the law gives her against contracts made by her during coverture;" because every such contract might be considered as involving in itself a fraudulent representation of the wife's capacity to contract (x).

The decision just cited strongly shows under how complete an incapacity to contract a married woman labours (y); that against husband and wife for the debt of the latter dum sola, was ordered to be discharged from custody—there being no evidence to show that she had separate property. See Ex parte Butler, 1 H. & C. 637.

(u) Liverpool Adelphi Loan Ass. Co. v. Fairhurst, 9 Exch. 422, 429. See, also, Cannam v. Farmer, 3 Exch. 698; Davenport v. Nelson, 4 Camp. 26; Glenister v. Lady Thynne, cited 1 Tayl. Ev., 4th ed., p. 727.

(x) See Wright v. Leonard, 11 C. B., N. S., 258; per Crompton, J., Bartlett v. Wells, 1 B. & S. 842.

(y) See, also, Neve v. Hollands, 18 Q. B. 262; Johnson v. Lucas, 1 E. & B. 659, distinguishing Wells v. Nurse, 1 Ad. & E. 65; S. C., 4 B. & Ad. 739.

A feme covert may, however, in some cases, sue or be sued jointly with her husband in respect of a cause of action ex contractu accruing during coverture: Broom's Prac., vol. 1, pp. 274-277, 468.

Coverture must be specially pleaded (Reg. Trin. T. 1853, reg. 8); but a feme covert may sue or be sued as a feme sole, subject to a special plea in she does so was, indeed, one of the points resolved in the celebrated case of Manby v. Scott (z), where it was held, 1. That husbands are bound to supply their wives with necessaries; 2. That the contract of a married woman is merely void, as far as she is concerned, by our law; 3. That, if the wife purchase goods, and the husband by any act, precedent or subsequent, ratifies the contract by his assent, the husband shall be liable upon it; whereas the husband is not liable in respect of a contract made by his wife, without his assent to it, and a party seeking to charge him in respect of such a contract is bound to prove either an express assent on his part, or circumstances from which such assent is to be implied (a); and hence it is generally said, that the wife can only contract as agent for her husband (b).

We have already seen that the wife may bind her husband when acting with his express sanction, as by accepting or indorsing a bill of exchange in his name, or in her own by his direction (c). The circumstances under which a feme covert has an implied authority to bind her husband for necessaries (d) may be classified as under (e):—

bar or in abatement of her coverture. See Dalton v. Midland R. Co., 13 C. B. 474; Woodgate v. Potts, 2 C. & K. 457; Bendix v. Wakeman, 12 M. & W. 97.

(z) 1 Lev. 4.

(a) Per Littledale, J., 3 B. & C. 637.

(b) Judgm., Johnston v. Sumner, 3 H. & N. 265-6; Co. Litt. 112 a.; Com. Dig. "Bar. and Feme" (D. 1); per Blackstone, J., Stevenson v. Hardie, 2 W. Bla. 873; Smout v. Ilbery, 10 M. & W. 1, cited ante, p. 539; Longmeid v. Holliday, 6 Exch. 761.

(c) Lindus v. Bradwell, 5 C. B. 583, cited ante, p. 451; Smith v. Marsack, 6 C. B. 486; Lord v. Hall, 8 C. B. 627; Howard v. Oakes, 3 Exch. 136.

See West v. Wheeler, 2 C. & K.

714; Smallpiece v. Dawes, 7 Car. & P. 40.

(d) As to what are necessaries, see Hunt v. De Blaquiere, 5 Bing. 550; Chapple v. Cooper, 13 M. & W. 252, cited ante, p. 579, n. (h); Grindell v. Godmond, 5 Ad. & E. 755; per Lord Brougham, C., Howard v. Digby, 2 Cl. & F. 679, and cases infra.

(e) For full information respecting this part of the subject, the reader is referred to the Note to Manby v. Scott, 2 Smith L. C., 5th ed., pp. 418 et seq., and to the judgment in Johnston v. Sumner, 3 H. & N. 261.

An epitome of the law as to the husband's liability for necessaries supplied to the wife is given by Lord Holt, C. J., in Etherington v. Parrot, 1 Salk. 118.

1. In the first place, whenever the husband and wife are living together, and the husband provides the wife with necessaries, the husband is not bound by contracts of the wife, even for necessaries, unless there be reasonable evidence to show that the wife has made the contract with his assent (f) ex. gr., if he has seen her habitually wearing expensive articles of dress without expressing disapprobation (g), or if he has adopted and ratified her act (h).

In Montague v. Benedict (i), which is a leading authority upon this part of the subject, the action was for goods sold and delivered. It appeared that the plaintiff was a jeweller, who, in the course of two months, had delivered articles of jewellery to the defendant's wife, amounting in value to 83*l.*; the defendant was a certificated special pleader, living in a ready-furnished house, of which the annual rent was 200*l.*; he kept no man servant; his wife's fortune, upon her marriage, was less than 4000*l.*; she had, at the time of her marriage, jewellery suitable to her condition; and it was proved that she had never in her husband's presence worn any of the articles furnished by the plaintiff. It appeared also that the plaintiff, when he went to the defendant's house to ask for payment of his bill, always inquired for the wife and not for the defendant. It was held, that the goods for which the plaintiff sued were not necessaries, and that, as there was no evidence of any assent of the husband to the contract made by his wife, the action could not be maintained. "If," remarked Bayley, J., "a tradesman is about to trust a married woman for what are not necessaries, and to an extent beyond what her station in life requires, he ought in common prudence, to inquire of the husband if she has his consent for the order she is

(f) Per Bayley, J., 3 B. & C. 635;
Seaton v. Benedict, 5 Bing. 28;
Spreadbury v. Chapman, 8 Car. & P.
 371; Holt v. Brien, 4 B. & Ald. 252.

(g) Per Best, C. J., 5 Bing. 31.
 (h) West v. Wheeler, 2 C. & K.
 714.
 (i) 3 B. & C. 631.

giving; and if he had so inquired in this case, it is not improbable that the husband might have told him not to trust her."

Again, where the husband and wife are living together, in regard to orders given by the wife in those departments of her husband's household which she has under her control, the jury may infer that the wife was the agent of her husband, unless or until the contrary appear (k). So, for articles necessary for the wife, such as clothes, if the order is given by the wife and she is living with her husband, and nothing appear to the contrary, the jury do right by inferring the agency; but if the order is excessive in point of extent, or if, when the husband has a small income, the wife gives extravagant orders, these are circumstances from which the jury would infer that there was no agency (k). The tradesman, then, who supplies goods to a married woman will, if the bill is one of an extravagant nature, such as the husband would never have authorised, run the risk of losing his money, because from the extravagance of the order, coupled with other circumstances, the jury may reject the inference of agency (l). "It is the bounden duty of tradesmen, when they find a wife giving extravagant orders, to give notice to the husband immediately, if they mean to hold him liable" (m).

It has been held that a husband is not liable for money lent to his wife, although it be afterwards expended by her in procuring necessaries for which the husband would have been liable (n).

2. Where husband and wife are living together, and the husband will not supply his wife with necessaries or the (k) Per Lord Abinger, C. B., Freestone v. Butcher, 9 Car. & P. 647, and in Emmett v. Norton, 8 Id. 510; Ruddock v. Marsh, 1 H. & N. 601; Jolly v. Rees, 15 C. B., N. S., 628.

(l) See the remarks of Lord Abinger,

C. B., in Freestone v. Butcher, supra, as qualified by Parke, B., in Lane v. Ironmonger, 13 M. & W. 370.

(m) Freestone v. Butcher, supra.

(n) Knox v. Bushell, 3 C. B., N. S., 334.

means of obtaining them, she is, by our common law, at liberty to pledge her husband's credit for what is strictly requisite for her own support (o).

"Undoubtedly," says Holroyd, J. (in Montague v. Benedict (p), already cited), "the husband is liable for necessities provided for his wife, where he neglects to provide them himself. If, however, there be no necessity for the articles provided, the tradesman will not be entitled to recover their value unless he can show an express or implied assent of the husband to the contract made by the wife. Where a tradesman takes no pains to ascertain whether the necessity exists or not, he supplies the articles at his own peril; and if it turn out that the necessity does not exist, the husband is not responsible for what may be furnished to his wife without his knowledge. Where a tradesman provides articles for a person whom he knows to be a married woman, it is his duty, if he wishes to make the husband responsible, to inquire if she has her husband's authority or not, for where he chooses to trust her, in the expectation that she will pay, he must take the consequence if she does not" (q).

3. Where the husband and wife are living apart by mutual consent, and the husband makes the wife a sufficient allowance for her support, he is not liable to a tradesman for goods supplied to her; and whether the tradesman knew of such allowance or not, has been held to be immaterial (r). In this case, accordingly, the question for the jury will be—Has the husband given the wife sufficient for necessaries suitable to his degree? If so, he will not be

(o) Per Bayley, J., 3 B. & C. 631.

(p) 3 B. & C. 636-7.

(q) See Jolly v. Rees, 15 C. B., N. S., 628; Reneauz v. Teakle, 8 Exch. 680; Atkins v. Curwood, 7 Car. & P. 756; Bentley v. Griffin, 5 Taunt. 356.

(r) Reeve v. Marquis of Conyngh- am, 2 C. & K. 444; Holder v. Cope, Id. 437. See Reg. v. Plummer, 1 C. & K. 600; Edwards v. Towells, 5 M. & Gr. 624; Howard v. Digby, 2 Cl. & F. 679; Dixon v. Hurrell, 8 Car. & P. 717.

liable on the wife's contracts (s), unless proof be given that he has sanctioned or adopted them (t).

Where the husband and wife are living separate, we must remember, however, that (as observed by Abbott, C. J., in Mainwaring v. Leslie (u)) there is no presumption that the wife has authority to bind her husband "even for necessities suitable to her degree in life: it is for the plaintiff to show that, under the circumstances of the separation or from the conduct of her husband, she had such authority." The mischief of allowing the ordering of goods by a married woman living apart from her husband to be prima facie evidence, so as to charge him for them, would be incalculable."

In Johnston v. Sumner (x), also, the Court of Exchequer state their opinion to be that, in the case now under notice, "the burthen of proof is on the person who has trusted the wife; and that when the husband and wife are living apart, the wife's authority is not shown where it is proved she is living apart from her husband by mutual consent, with an agreement as between him and her that she is not to pledge his credit, and with an allowance not shown to be inconsistent with that being the real intention." As well in the case here put as in that presently considered, viz., where the wife leaves her husband without his consent, it would seem that the husband's authority to pledge his credit must be affirmatively shown.

It is clear that the agency of the wife, when living apart from her husband, to bind him for necessities, is determined by her adultery (y).

(s) Per Lord Abinger, C. B., Emmett v. Norton, 8 Car. & P. 511; Hodgkinson v. Fletcher, 4 Camp. 70; Liddlow v. Wilmot, 2 Stark. N. P. C. 86; Wilson v. Smyth, 1 B. & Ad. 801.

(t) Waithman v. Wakefield, 1 Camp.

(u) Moo. & M. 18; Clifford v. L. ton, Id. 101, 102.

(x) 3 H. & N. 267-8; Biffin v. Bignell, 7 H. & N. 877, 879.

(y) Cooper v. Lloyd, 6 C. B., N. S. 519.

MARRIED WOMEN.

4. If the husband has turned the wife out of doors, or has caused her, from reasonable apprehension of cruelty, to leave him (z), or by his indecent conduct has precluded her from living with him, and does not give her adequate means of subsistence according to his degree in life and his fortune, the law in general (a) regards her as his agent to order such things as are reasonable and necessary for herself; but it gives her no liberty to go into any extravagance, or to pledge his credit for anything beyond what would be reasonable and necessary for her subsistence (b). In like manner, "If a man will not receive his wife into his house, he turns her out of doors; and if he does so, he sends with her credit for her reasonable expenses" (c).

5. But although "the law presumes that the husband will furnish necessities for his wife so long as she is a member of his family, and that he undertakes to pay for such necessities;" yet "when the wife voluntarily abandons and relinquishes her family, by this conduct she renders herself incapable of enjoying the before-mentioned privilege, and places herself without the pale of her husband's main-

(z) Brown v. Ackroyd, 5 E. & B 819; Rice v. Shepherd, 12 C. B., N. S., 332; Baker v. Sampson, 14 C. B., N. S., 383.

(a) In Johnston v. Sumner, 3 H. & N. 266, the Court observed, "If the husband turns his wife away it is not unreasonable to say she has an authority of necessity; for she by law has no property, and may not be able to earn her living; but we should hesitate to say that if a labouring man turned his wife away, she being capable of earning and earning as much as he did; or if a man turned his wife away, she having a settlement double his income in amount, the wife in such cases would bind the husband."

(b) Per Lord Abinger, C. B., Emmett

v. Norton, 8 Car. & P. 510, and in Hardie v. Grant, Id. 516; Hunt v. De Blaquiere, 5 Bing. 557, 562; per Bayley, J., Montague v. Benedict, 3 B. & C. 635; per Lord Kenyon, C. J., Hodges v. Hodges, 1 Esp. 441; per Lord Ellenborough, C. J., 2 Stark. N. P. C. 87; Aldis v. Chapman, cited 1 Selw. N. P., 12th ed., 334; Harris v. Morris, 4 Esp. 41; Houlston v. Smyth, 2 Car. & P. 22; and see Bell, Husb. & W., p. 25.

(c) Per Lord Eldon, Rawlins v. Vandyke, 3 Esp. 250. (But as to the main point, regarding the necessity of notice, there decided, see Mizen v. Pick, 3 M. & W. 481; Dixon v. Hurrell, 8 Car. & P. 717); Reed v. Moore, 5 Car. & P. 200.

tenance; and therefore it shall not be presumed that the husband has entered into such an assumpsit in that case" (d). A tradesman, therefore, supplying necessities to the wife whilst living apart from the husband against his will, could not recover from the latter (e), unless proof were given that he had assented to the wife's contract.

6. If the wife be living in open adultery, her husband is not bound by any contract which she may make (f), even for necessities (g), unless there be evidence of authority from him (h), or of condonation on his part, or he forgive her and receive her back again (i).

7. It is expressly enacted by the stat. 20 & 21 Vict. c. 85, s. 26, that where upon a judicial separation "alimony has been decreed or ordered to be paid to the wife and the same shall not be duly paid by the husband, he shall be liable for necessities supplied for her use."

Although in general it is upon the ground of agency merely that questions as to the liability or non-liability of the husband in respect of the contracts for necessities of the wife have been discussed (k), yet it would seem that this matter may, not inaccurately, be regarded from a somewhat different point of view; that the husband, on assuming such character, incurs ipso facto, at common law, certain responsibilities quoad the wife, the nature of which has been partially indicated in the preceding pages. Thus Alderson B., in Read v. Legard (l), says:—By the marriage contract, the husband takes on himself the duty of supplying his wife

(d) Manby v. Scott, 1 Lev. 4 (ad finem).

(e) Hindley v. Marquis of Westmeath, 6 B. & C. 200.

(f) Atkyns v. Pearce, 2 C. B., N. S., 763.

(g) Per Lord Abinger, C. B., Emmett v. Norton, 8 Car. & P. 510; Hardie v. Grant, Id. 512; Govier v. Hancock, 6 T. R. 603; Morris v. Martin, Str.

647; McUnwairing v. Sands, Id. 706.

(h) See, per Cockburn, C. J., Atkyns v. Pearce, supra.

(i) See Norton v. Fazan, 1 B. & P. 226; (10) Cooper v. Lloyd, 6 C. B., N. S., 519. H. †

(k) H. & See Judgm., 3 H. & N. 265-6. (l) 6 Exch. 636.

See also Judgm., Manby v. Scott, 1 Lev. 4.

with necessaries, that is to say, the wife is entitled to be supported according to the estate and condition of her husband. "If she is compelled by his misconduct to procure the necessary articles for herself,—as, for instance, if he drives her from his house, or brings improper persons into it, so that no respectable woman could live there,—according to the decided cases, he gives her authority to pledge his credit for her necessary maintenance elsewhere; which means, that the law gives that authority by force of the relation of husband and wife. So, if a husband omit to furnish his wife with necessaries while living with him, she may procure them elsewhere, otherwise she would perish." And, by parity of reasoning, "if the husband becomes lunatic by the visitation of God, and therefore unable to provide his wife with necessaries, he is in the same situation as a husband omitting to furnish them; and, as by the relation which he originally contracted he undertook to provide her with them himself, he becomes liable to any person who does it for him" (m).

In conformity with the doctrine above laid down, a husband has been held liable for the necessary expenses attendant on the decent interment of his wife, who at the time of her death was living separate from him, although such expenses were incurred, and, in the first instance, defrayed by the plaintiff, a mere volunteer, without any prior communication with the husband. There can be no question, remarked Jervis, C. J., in the case here alluded to, that an undertaker who conducts a funeral may recover from the executor of the deceased (having assets) the reasonable and necessary expenses of such funeral, without any specific contract, the

(m) Per Alderson, B., 6 Exch. 642. "The true principle seems to be, that, when a man marries, he contracts an obligation to support his wife; and, in point of law, he gives her authority to pledge his credit for her support, if circumstances render it necessary, she herself not being in fault:" per Pollock, C. B., Id., ibid.

liability of the executor resulting from the duty imposed upon him by the character which he fills, regard being had to decency and to the comfort of others; and an equal responsibility is for the same reasons cast upon the husband of a deceased wife, such responsibility being directly referable to the character with which he is invested (n).

Contracts of lunatics.

"A lunatic, or non compos mentis," says Blackstone (o), "is one who hath had understanding, but by disease, grief, or other accident hath lost the use of his reason." In pursuing the present inquiry, it becomes important to consider how far, by the defect of reason here pointed at, the contracts of a lunatic are rendered voidable or void.

In the first place, then, I shall speak of executed, and secondly of executory contracts by or with a lunatic. And in connection with the former of these classes, it may clearly be laid down, that a lunatic is liable for the price of necessaries, i.e., of goods or things suited to his state and degree, actually ordered, and enjoyed by and bona fide supplied to him (p).

With regard to the right of a lunatic, or his representatives, to rescind an executed contract entered into by him, not being for necessaries, Molton v. Camroux (q) must be regarded as the leading authority. There a lunatic, having purchased of a life-assurance company certain annuities, and having paid the consideration money and a premium in respect thereof, an action was, after his death, brought for recovery of these monies by his administratrix, under the fol-

(n) Ambrose v. Kerrison, 10 C. B. 776 (recognising Jenkins v. Tucker, 1 H. Bl. 91); Bradshaw v. Beard, 12 C. B., N. S., 344.

(o) 1 Bla. Com., p. 304.

(p) Baxter v. Earl of Portsmouth, 5 B. & C. 170; S. C., 2 Car. & P. 178; Nelson v. Duncombe, 9 Beav. 211. See Read v. Legard, 6 Exch.

636.

(q) 4 Exch. 17, affirming Judgm. in S. C., 2 Exch. 487.

Quære, "whether, in the present state of the law, a conveyance executed by a lunatic is absolutely void in the absence of notice and fraud?"—Per Lord Truro, C., Price v. Berrington, 3 Mac. & G. 498.

lowing state of facts, as found by the special verdict :—At the time of the granting of the annuities and payment of the consideration money aforesaid, the intestate was a lunatic and of unsound mind so as to be incompetent to manage his affairs, but of this the society had not, at that time, any knowledge ; the purchases of the annuities took place in the ordinary course of business ; they were fair and bond fide transactions ; the grantee then appearing to the society to be of sound mind, although he was in fact of unsound mind. All suspicion of fraud or unfairness being thus excluded, the question was, by the special verdict above abstracted, broadly raised—whether the mere fact of unsoundness of mind, not apparent at the time of the contract in question, was sufficient to vacate it, albeit executed by the grantee by payment of the consideration money, and intended bond fide to be executed by the grantor by payment of the annuity. In deciding this question, the Court of Exchequer Chamber made the following remarks (r) :—“ The old doctrine was, that a man could not set up his own lunacy, though such as that he did not know what he was about in contracting (s) ; and the same doctrine was applied to drunkenness (t). It is true that there are some exceptions in the old authorities, and the doctrine is not laid down uniformly with perfect distinctness ; but, in general, it was as above stated. Modern cases have qualified it, and enabled a man or his representatives to show that he was so lunatic or drunk as not to know what he was about when he made a promise or sealed an instrument. This special verdict hardly shows any such state of mind ; but, even if it did, the modern cases show that when that state of mind was unknown to the other contracting party, and no advantage was taken of the lunatic, the defence cannot prevail, especially where the contract is not merely executory, but executed in the whole or in part, and the (r) 4 Exch. 19.

123 b ; Co. Litt. 247 b.

(s) See Beverley's case, 4 Rep.

(t) Post, pp. 599, 600.

parties cannot be restored altogether to their original position." The principle deducible from the above case may be thus stated, that, "when a person, apparently of sound mind, and not known to be otherwise, enters into a contract for the purchase of property which is fair and bonâ fide, and which is executed and completed, and the property, the subject-matter of the contract, has been paid for and fully enjoyed, and cannot be restored so as to put the parties in statu quo, such contract cannot afterwards be set aside, either by the alleged lunatic or those who represent him" (u).

Notwithstanding what has been just said, it seems clear that a man by bare execution of an instrument under seal does not make it his deed, if at the time he was so weak in mind as to be incapable of understanding it when explained to him (x); but a deed executed by a lunatic during a lucid interval will bind him, provided that the party claiming under the deed can prove that it was so executed (y). Imbecility of mind, moreover, is not sufficient to render void a contract, unless an essential privation of the reasoning faculties or an incapacity of understanding and acting with discretion in the ordinary affairs of life thence results.

(u) Judgm., 2 Exch. 503; with which acc. Beavan v. M'Donnell, 9 Exch. 309; S. C., 10 Id. 184.

See also Dane v. Kirkwall, 8 Car. & P. 679; Brown v. Jodrell, 3 Car. & P. 30; Niell v. Morley, 9 Ves. 478; Alcock v. Alcock, 3 Mac. & G. 268; Tarbut v. Bispham, 2 M. & W. 2; Frost v. Beavan, 22 L. J., Chanc., 638.

Where an action is brought to recover money paid under a contract, on the ground of the plaintiff's lunacy, and the issue is, whether, at the time of the particular transaction, the fact of the plaintiff's insanity was known to the defendant, evidence will be admissible of the plaintiff's conduct upon various occasions both before and after the date of the particular transaction, with a view to showing that the plaintiff's malady was of such a kind as would make itself apparent to the defendant at the time when the parties were dealing together: Beavan v. M'Donnell, 10 Exch. 184.

(x) Shelf. Lunatics, 2nd ed., p. 338; per Lord Brougham, C., Howard v. Digby, 2 Cl. & F. 661.

(y) Shelf. Lunatics, 2nd ed., p. 340. "All acts done during a lucid interval are to be considered done by a person perfectly capable of contracting, managing and disposing of his affairs at that period:" per Sir W. Grant, M. B., Hall v. Warren, 9 Ves. 610.

And such incapacity has been said to afford the true test of that degree of unsoundness of mind which will avoid a deed at law. The law cannot undertake to measure the validity of contracts by the greater or less strength of the understanding, and if the party be compos mentis the mere weakness of his mental powers does not incapacitate him. Weakness of understanding may, however, be a material circumstance in establishing an inference of unfair practice or imposition, and it will naturally awaken the attention of a Court of Justice to every unfavourable appearance in the case (z).

The reasoning, which applies to an executed, does not seem altogether applicable to an executory contract by a lunatic (a)—especially where notice of the lunacy is given before breach.

Although, formerly, the intoxication of a contracting party was held to afford no ground for repudiating liability upon a contract (b), made by him whilst in that state, the established modern doctrine seems to be, that a person who has contracted, even by deed (c), whilst so wilfully intoxicated as to be deprived of his reason—as not to know the consequences of his act—may successfully dispute his liability in respect of such transaction (d).

With regard, however, to simple contracts which it is sought to avoid on the ground of intoxication, a distinction has been intimated between express and implied contracts. Where the right of action is founded upon a specific distinct

Into —its on c tract

(z) Kent, Com., 10th ed., vol. 2, p. 609; see per Lord Cranworth, C, 6 H. L. Ca. 45.

(a) Ante, p. 250; per Abbott, C. J., 5 B. & C. 172; Arg., 9 Exch. 311.

(b) Beverley's case, 4 Rep. 125 a.; per Parke, B., 13 M. & W. 626; Co. Litt. 247 a.

(c) Per Sir W. Grant, M. R., Cooke

v. Clayworth, 18 Ves. 15, 16; followed by Sir E. Sugden, in Nagle v. Baylor, 3 Dr. & W. 64, 65; Shaw v. Thackray, 17 Jur. 1045.

(d) Gore v. Gibson, 13 M. & W. 623, is a leading authority, at common law, in regard to the subject discussed supra.

contract, requiring the assent of both parties, and one of them is incapable of assenting, in such a case, it has been said (e), there can be no binding contract; "but in many cases the law does not require an actual agreement between the parties, but implies a contract from the circumstances; in fact, the law itself makes the contract for the parties. Thus, in actions for money had and received to the plaintiff's use, or money paid by him to the defendant's use, the action may lie against the defendant, even though he may have protested against such a contract." And it seems clear, that a tradesman who supplies a drunken man with necessaries, may in like manner recover the price of them, if the party keeps them when he becomes sober; although a count for goods bargained and sold would fail by reason of the defendant's intoxication at the time of contracting (e). It will further be remembered, that actual fraud might plainly be evidenced by the conduct of a person taking an obligation from one intoxicated and then known by the contractee to be so (f).

A state of partial intoxication merely—less in degree than that just indicated—would seem, however, in the absence of fraud and unfair dealing, to afford no defence whatever to an action founded upon contract (g).

Besides the various grounds of incapacity to contract, already mentioned, some others occasionally present themselves, to which, as being of little practical importance, a brief allusion will suffice. The capacity to contract may in legal contemplation be wholly destroyed by duress (h), which may be of one or other of two kinds: duress per minas, i.e.,

Duress.

(e) Per Pollock, C. B., 13 M. & W. 625-6.

(f) Levy v. Baker, Moo. & M. 106, n. (b); per Parke, B., 13 M. & W. 626. See Sentance v. Poole, 3 Car. & P. 1.

(g) See the authorities cited ante, p. 599, n. (c); per Parke, B., 13 M. & W. 624, 626.

(h) For, Nil consensui tam contrarium est quam vis atque metus: D. 50. 17. 116.

coercion imposed by fear of loss of life or limb, or duress of imprisonment, where a man actually loses his liberty (i). With reference to this latter kind of duress Blackstone tells us (k), that "the confinement of the person, in any wise, is an imprisonment. So that the keeping a man against his will in a private house, putting him in the stocks, arresting or forcibly detaining him in the street, is an imprisonment. And the law so much discourages unlawful confinement, that, if a man is under duress of imprisonment or compulsion by an illegal restraint of liberty, and he seals a bond or the like, he may allege this duress and avoid the extorted bond. But if a man be lawfully imprisoned, and, either to procure his discharge or on any other fair account, seals a bond or a deed, this is not by duress of imprisonment, and he is not at liberty to avoid it." There can be no doubt that duress of the person, whether evidenced by threats or by imprisonment, will nullify a contract executed under its pressure (l), and that money paid in pursuance of such contract may be recovered back (m). It may, perhaps, be considered as doubtful whether duress of goods would suffice to avoid a contract (n)—whether, if the signature to an agreement were procured by a threat of detention of a person's goods, or of injury to them, the agreement thus signed could be repudiated by the party so coerced. There are American authorities and dicta (o) in support of an affirmative answer to

(i) 1 Bla. Com. 131; post, Book III.

(k) 1 Bla. Com. 136.

(l) Supra; and see Cumming v. Ince, 11 Q. B. 112.

(m) Duke de Cadaval v. Collins, 4 Ad. & E. 858, and cases cited in the Note to Marriot v. Hampton, 2 Smith L. C., 5th ed., pp. 363 et seq.

(n) But in Glynn v. Thomas, 11 Exch. 878-9, the Court allude to cases as deciding that "where goods are unlawfully detained, or an injurious act is about to be done to them, or if some act which it was the duty of a party to do in respect of them be refused to be done unless money be paid, and the money be paid under protest as the only means of avoiding the immediate injury which would result from the detainer, the injurious act, or the wrongful refusal, the money so paid may be recovered back."

(o) Kent, Com., 10th ed., vol. 2, p. 610.

this question, but in our own Courts the weight of direct authority is somewhat the other way (p).

Incapacity of alien enemy or outlaw to
contract.

The following additional grounds of incapacity to contract should also, perhaps, be specified, presenting themselves, 1, in the case of an alien (g) enemy, who, unless duly authorised by the Crown (r), is, from considerations of expedience and public policy, deemed incapable of entering into a valid contract (s); 2, in the case of an outlaw, who, whilst civilly dead, is under certain circumstances (t) equally incompetent to contract; 3, in the case of an attainted felon (u). In either of the cases here mentioned, however, the disability flowing from the cause indicated seems to be partial only. It is laid down that an alien enemy or an outlaw may be

(p) Skeate v. Beale, 11 Ad. & E. 983, 990 (with which, however, compare Wakefield v. Newbon, 6 Q. B. 276, 280; the authorities there cited seem to show, that "money extorted by duress of the plaintiff's goods, and paid by the plaintiff under protest, may be recovered in an action for money had and received"). See also, per Coleridge, J., Ashmole v. Wainwright, 2 Q. B. 846.

(g) "The general rule is, that an alien (i. e., an alien friend) may acquire personal rights and maintain personal actions in respect of injuries to them. He cannot maintain real actions, because he cannot hold land:" Judgm., Cocks v. Purday, 5 C. B. 884.

(r) See Fenton v. Pearson, 15 East, 418; 7 & 8 Vict. c. 66, s. 6.

(s) Co. Litt. 129 b.; Willison v. Pattison, 7 Taunt. 439; Brandon v. Nesbitt, 6 T. R. 23; Bristow v. Towers, Id. 35; Brandon v. Curling, 4 East, 410; per Lord Ellenborough, C. J., Flindt v. Waters, 15 East, 265-6; Casseres v. Bell, 8 T. R. 166. See a plea that plaintiff has become an alien enemy since the cause of action accrued: Alcinous v. Nygrin, 4 E. & B. 217.

As to the validity of a contract with an alien who before its performance becomes an enemy, see Clementson v. Blessig, 11 Exch. 135, 141, and Note to that case; per Martin, B., De Wahl v. Braune, 1 H. & N. 182; Barrick v. Buba, 2 C. B., N. S., 563, and cases there cited.

(t) The class of cases in which an absolute incapacity to contract may result from outlawry, is pointed out in Co. Litt. 128 b., where it is said that —If the ground or cause of the action be forfeited by the outlawry, then may the outlawry be pleaded in bar of the action, as in an action of debt, detinue, &c. But in real actions, or in personal, where damages be uncertain, as in trespass, and are not forfeited by the outlawry, there outlawry must be pleaded in disability of the person.

(u) Bullock v. Dodda, 2 B. & Ald. 258.

sued in our Courts upon contracts here entered into by him (x).

Whilst speaking of the capacity to contract, some remarks must be directed to the peculiar position occupied by an executor or administrator, who, under certain circumstances, may contract in that character so as to charge or benefit the estate which he administers, entailing thereby no personal liability upon and securing no possibility of advantage to himself—under another state of facts may find that he is individually answerable in respect of a contract made or intended to be made by him in relation solely to the assets of his testator or intestate.

Contracts of executors and administrators.

The question—under what circumstances may a personal representative properly contract in that character? is one of manifest importance; to which, however, justice cannot be done by brief discussion. In regard to it reference must be made to standard Treatises and to decided cases—of these latter, some only of the more recent or important will here be indicated to the student.

An executor, it will be remembered, derives his interest and title as such from the will itself, of which the probate is merely operative as the authenticated evidence. The property of the deceased vests in the executor from the moment of the testator's death, and to that date the probate is said to have relation (y). An executor, therefore, may in that character validly contract immediately after the death of the testator has occurred.

(x) Loukes v. Holbeach, 4 Bing. 419, 421; Ramsay v. M'Donald, 1 W. Bl. 30; Banyater v. Trussel, Cro. Eliz. 516; Com. Dig. "Abatement," (E. 3.); Griffith v. Middleton, Cro. Eliz. 425, ad fin.

(y) Judgm., Pemberton v. Chapman, 7 R. & B. 217-8; Henloe's case, 9 Rep. 38 a; Judgm., Cummins v. Cummins, 3 J. & L. 92-3; Roll. Abr.

"Executors" (A.), (vol. 1, p. 917), cited Judgm., Easton v. Carter, 5 Exch. 14; Wankford v. Wankford, 1 Salk. 302, 303; Webb v. Adkins, 14 C. B. 401, 406.

"Relation means treating a thing as happening at some preceding time:" per Maule, J., Graham v. Furber, 14 C. B. 152.

An administrator, on the other hand, derives title from the letters of administration, such title, however, relating back to the date of the intestate's decease (z). By virtue of this doctrine of relation, an administrator, on becoming duly clothed with that character, will sometimes find that he is in legal contemplation constituted party to a contract antecedently made, and is entitled to sue, or liable to be sued, in autre droit, thereupon. Thus, A., having sent goods to his agent abroad for sale, died intestate, and after A.'s death the defendants purchased the goods from the agent, who sold them for the benefit of the intestate's estate. Subsequently to the sale, the plaintiff took out letters of administration to the intestate, and then sued the defendants for the price of the goods in question; the action thus brought was held to be maintainable, in conformity with the doctrine of relation above stated, and with the rule of law, that, when one assumes to act as agent for another, a subsequent ratification by that other is tantamount to a prior command (a). So, where money belonging to an intestate at the time of his death, or due to him and paid in after his death, has, before grant of administration, been applied by a stranger to the payment of the intestate's debts and funeral expenses, the administrator may recover it from such stranger as money had and received to his use as administrator (b).

Without pausing to inquire what rights of action, vested in the deceased, do or do not pass to his personal representatives (an inquiry which could throw no direct light upon their capacity to contract in autre droit), the general rule, at all events, is here deserving of our notice, that executors (z) See Crossfield v. Such, 8 Exch. 825; Morgan v. Thomas, 1d. 302; per Parke, B., Yorston v. Felther, 14 M. & W. 854; Bodger v. Arch, 10 Exch. 333; Prosser v. Wagner, 1 C. B., N. S., 289; Barnett v. Earl of Guildford, 11 Exch. 19.

(a) Foster v. Bates, 12 M. & W. 226; Tharpe v. Stallwood, 5 M. & Gr. 760; Fyson v. Chambers, 9 M. & W. 460.

(b) Welchman v. Sturgis, 13 Q. B. 552. See Vaughan v. Matthews, 1d. 187.

or administrators may be regarded as contracting in that character, wherever the damages recoverable for breach of the particular contract would be available to increase or would go to diminish (as the case may be) the personal estate of the deceased (c). Where goods are ordered of the deceased in his lifetime, but delivered subsequently to his death (d), the contract to pay for them may be declared upon as having been made with the personal representatives. If a party contract for himself and his executors to build a house, and die before it is completed, the executors must proceed with the work, at the risk of being held responsible, quà executors, for breach of contract (e), and if they thus proceed, the work and labour will be done by them as executors, they may recover for it as executors, and the damages so recovered will be assets in their hands (f). If, however, money be lent to or had and received by an executor or administrator (g), or if work and labour be performed for, or goods be sold and delivered to him (h), the personal repre-

(c) Cowell v. Watts, 6 East, 405; Judgm., Heath v. Chilton, 12 M. & W. 637; Webb v. Cowdell, 14 M. & W. 820; Grissell v. Robinson, 3 Bing. N. C. 10; Webster v. Spencer, 3 B. & Ald. 360.

(d) Marshall v. Broadhurst, 1 Cr. & J. 403, 405, recognised per Parke, B., 2 M. & W. 191; Werner v. Humphreys, 2 M. & Gr. 853.

(e) Quick v. Ludborrow, 3 Bulst. 30, recognised, 1 M. & W. 423; per Lord Abinger, C. B., Corner v. Shew, 3 M. & W. 353, 354; Wentworth v. Cock, 10 Ad. & E. 42; Aspinall v. Wake, 10 Bing. 51.

But it would seem that "all contracts for personal services which can be performed only during the lifetime of the party contracting are subject to the implied condition, that he shall be alive to perform them; and should he die, his executor is not liable to an action for the breach of contract occasioned by his death:" per Pollock, C. B., Hall v. Wright, E. B. & E. 793-4. Et vide Judgm., Taylor v. Caldwell, 32 L. J., Q. B., 164.

(f) Per Cur., Marshall v. Broadhurst, 1 Cr. & J. 405; Edwards v. Grace, 2 M. & W. 190; per Lord Abinger, C. B., Siboni v. Kirkman, 1 M. & W. 422. See Crosthwaite v. Gardner, 18 Q. B. 640.

(g) Ashby v. Ashby, 7 B. & C. 444; Waite v. Gale, 2 D. & L. 925.

See Blakesley v. Smallwood, 8 Q. B. 538; Mardall v. Thellusson, 18 Q. B. 857; Watts v. Rees, 9 Exch. 696; Churchill v. Bertrand, 3 Q. B. 568.

(h) Corner v. Shew, 3 M. & W. 350; Kitchenman v. Skel, 3 Exch. 49. See Prior v. Hambrow, 8 M. & W. 873.

representative will be held to have contracted in his individual character, and will be personally liable. So, if B. (an executor) request A. to forbear suing him in respect of a debt due from the testator, and promise to pay interest thereupon, such promise will evidence a personal contract with B. To make him liable for interest as executor, a contract must be shown by the testator to pay interest so long as the debt should be forborne (i).

A. contracted with the plaintiff that plaintiff should endeavour to sell a picture belonging to A., and that, if he succeeded in doing so, A. should pay him 100*l*. The plaintiff, in pursuance of this agreement, endeavoured to sell the picture, and after A.'s death actually disposed of it, which sale was (as alleged in the declaration) confirmed by the defendant, his administratrix. From this latter party, accordingly, the plaintiff claimed the 100*l*. as due to him, by virtue of the agreement just mentioned. It was held, however, that the defendant would not, by merely confirming the sale, render herself liable on the original contract, the authority conferred by which on the plaintiff was determined by the death of A., although, if on the happening of that event the administratrix had ordered the sale, that would clearly have evidenced a fresh employment by her of the plaintiff, and have rendered her liable to remunerate him for his services in effecting it (k). This case shows us that the true nature of the particular contract, in respect whereof it is sought to charge a personal representative in that character, must, before suing upon it, be carefully and critically examined (l)—that a mere authority is determined by death,

(i) Bignell v. Harpur, 4 Exch. 773, 775; Childs v. Monins, 2 B. & B. 460; infra, n. (l).

(k) Campanari v. Woodburn, 15 C. B. 400.

(l) We have already seen (ante, p. 382) that, in order to charge an executor or administrator upon any special promise to answer damages out of his own estate, the agreement on which such action shall be brought, or some memorandum or note thereof shall be in writing, and signed by the party to be charged, or some other person there-whereas death does not in general operate to revoke a contract (m).

In cases such as have been just specified—where one of the contracting parties is invested with a twofold character, his private and his representative—the effect on his capacity to contract, thence resulting, is not so marked or easily traceable, as in some of the other instances previously adverted to. That such an effect is produced thereby, must, however, be admitted, and is not the less true, because in some cases it may be a pure question of fact—and, therefore, for the jury—in what character did executors or administrators really contract (n)? With reference to that part of the subject immediately before us, I will merely add, that the power of an executor being founded upon the special confidence and actual appointment of the deceased, the executor is therefore allowed to transmit such power to another in whom he has equal confidence. Consequently, the executor of A.'s executor, if the latter has proved the will (o), is to all intents and purposes the executor and representative of A. himself, and may accordingly, in like manner as the executor originally appointed, contract for the benefit of A.'s estate (p). The executor of A.'s administrator, or the administrator of A.'s executor, is not, however, the representative of A.; for an administrator is merely the officer of the ordinary, prescribed to him by Act of Parliament (q), in whom the deceased has reposed no trust at all (r). Hence it is, unto by him lawfully authorised.

Owing to the community of interest subsisting between executors or administrators, they are precluded from contracting with each other in such character: Moffatt v. Van Millengen, 2 B. & P. 124, n. (c); recognised in Fitzgerald v. Boehm, 6 Moore, 332; arg. Rawlinson v. Shaw, 3 T. R. 558.

(m) Bradbury v. Morgan, 1 H. & C. 249, 256-7.

(n) Heath v. Chilton, 12 M. & W. 632; Brassington v. Ault, 2 Bing. 177; Turner v. Hardey, 9 M. & W. 770.

(o) Hayton v. Wolfe, Cro. Jac. 614; Wankford v. Wankford, 1 Salk. 308, 309.

(p) 25 Edw. 3, st. 5, c. 5.

(q) 31 Edw. 3, st. 1, c. 11.

(r) 2 Bla. Com. 506.

that on the death of A.'s administrator, or of A.'s executor, if intestate, or whenever the course of representation from executor to executor is interrupted by any one administration, it is necessary that an administrator de bonis non should be appointed, who will thereupon become, in law, the sole personal representative of A., and will alone be entitled to contract in respect of his personal estate (s).

Résumé of matters treated of in this Chapter.

The remarks made in the preceding pages have been meant as suggestive only in regard to the effects produced on the capacity to contract by various ordinary mercantile relations, or by the incidents attaching to certain persons non-mercantile. A brief résumé of the principal subjects touched upon in the foregoing Chapter may assist perhaps towards rendering distinct the results at which we have arrived, and show the general bearing of what has been now said upon the point which it was intended to elucidate.

In the first place, then, it will have been noticed that the relation of principal and agent rarely so operates in practice as to render wholly nugatory a contract apparently binding on some party. Where this relation exists, the question usually is rather as to the liability of the principal for the act of a professing agent, or as to the liability of the agent himself, that of the principal being admitted, than of any other kind: such question, of course, requiring for its solution a reference to those doctrines of the law of agency which may seem applicable to the given case (t).

Where the relation of partnership exists between individuals, they are, as between themselves, in many cases wholly incapacitated from contracting by reason of the unity and identity of interest (partners being joint tenants) which subsists between them. In regard to third persons, however,

(s) Id.; Elliott v. Kemp, 7 M. & 2 Exch. 633.
W. 306; Venables v. East India Co., (t) Ante, pp. 523—544.

relation of partnership usually introduces questions as to those which present themselves in connection with the law of agency. Such, for instance, as whether in a particular case the firm is bound or the individual partner who contracted, no doubt or difficulty arising as to the capacity to contract (u).

On inquiring into the attributes of a corporation, we are at once struck by the fact, that it can in general contract only under its common seal: exceptions to this rule sometimes occurring—1st, where the subject-matter of a contract is necessary, and incidental to the purposes for which the corporation was created; 2ndly, where it is trivial in its nature; 3rdly, where it has been adopted and acted upon by the corporation; and 4thly, where it falls within the express words of the statute, charter, or letters patent, by virtue of which the body corporate was constituted (x).

It might readily be surmised, that the absolute assignment of property effected by bankruptcy would have some material influence upon the bankrupt's capacity to contract. And, accordingly, an uncertificated bankrupt assuming to contract on his own behalf will often find that, by force of our bankrupt law, he has in fact contracted as an agent merely for his assignees. And, further, in some few cases he may find that his contracts duly authenticated and prima facie valid are avoided in toto by the express words of the Legislature (y).

Amongst disabilities attaching to persons non-mercantile, the effect of infancy on the capacity to contract has first been noticed. I have shown that difficulty may occur in distinguishing between void and voidable contracts—between those which are not and those which are capable of being ratified and confirmed by the infant on attaining his full age—contracts prejudicial to the infant—especially when under seal—being deemed absolutely void; whilst contracts not necessarily or presumably prejudicial to him are susceptible of ratification. We have seen also what is the true meaning of the term “necessaries,” and that our law, out of regard for the infant, allows him to contract effectually for such things (a).

(u) Ante, pp. 544-557.

(y) Ante, pp. 568-574.

(x) Anté, pp. 557-568.

The extent or degree of the disability to contract produced by coverture is greater than that which results from infancy ; the contract of a married woman is in most cases absolutely void, and wholly incapable of being ratified—an express promise even by her after her husband’s death to pay a debt incurred during coverture being without consideration and void. Questions, therefore, in regard to the contracts of married women usually concern the liability of the husband rather than of the wife—they raise discussion as to the fact of the wife’s agency, express or implied, rather than as to the existence of a positive power to contract as principal being vested in her (b).

The effect of mental imbecility upon the contract of one labouring under it has, further, been examined, and a distinction has here been pointed out between executed and executory contracts : the former, if fair and bonâ fide, being in general unimpeachable on the ground of lunacy ; whilst the latter, it seems, could not be enforced against the lunatic. One who is non compos mentis, and known to be so, may, however, contract for things necessary for his subsistence, or suited to the station of life in which he moves (c).

Lastly, we have seen, that, where an individual clothed with a representative character enters into a contract, although doubt may often be felt respecting the character in which he contracted, his capacity to contract will not in general come in question (d).

(a) Ante, pp. 574-583.

(b) Ante, pp. 583-596.

(c) Ante, pp. 596-599.

(d) Ante, pp. 603-608.

CHAPTER VI.

THE MEASURE OF DAMAGES—IN ACTIONS OF CONTRACT (a).

IF a contract be submitted to the notice of a pleader, with a view to commencing an action upon it, he will, in the first instance, inquire whether the contract be of record, special, or simple. If of record, i.e., founded on a judgment or recognisance (b), he will at once conclude that the remedy by action must be in debt. If the contract be special, i.e., founded on a deed or instrument under seal (c), he will conclude that the remedy will be either in debt or covenant, according to circumstances. If the contract be simple, i.e., in writing not under seal, or oral (d), he may infer that the remedy will probably be in debt or assumpsit, and he will at once proceed to examine whether the various requisites to a valid simple contract are present in the case before him. He will observe, whether the terms of the agreement (if such be the ground of action) have been definitively arranged and settled, remembering that, upon one which is inchoate merely and incomplete, no legal remedy can be enforced (e). He will observe whether there has been reciprocity of assent between the contracting parties (f), whether there has been a considera-

(a) In connection with this Chapter should be read the corresponding portion of the next Book, intituled "The Measure of Damages—in Actions of Tort."

An attempt has above been made to exhibit the rules applicable in ordinary cases only for the assessment of damages.

(b) Ante, p. 260.

(c) Ante, p. 267.

(d) Ante, p. 301.

(e) Ante, p. 302.

(f) Ante, p. 304.

tion moving from one to the other (g), and privity (h) between them. Should he find that the promise was not without consideration, he may still have to determine whether the consideration was good and sufficient, or was on any ground invalid (i); whether it was past and executed, and such as could not support the subsequent promise (k); whether it was illegal, as contravening the statute law or any principle of public policy (l); whether it was founded in fraud (m), or was altogether illusory (n). And should he satisfy himself on all these points, ascertain also that the legal capacity to contract is unaffected (o), and conceive that a right of action in truth exists and is enforceable, he may still, on behalf of his client, deem it expedient to inquire what will probably, in the event of success, be the amount of compensation to be awarded by the jury. Will it be substantial or nominal only? Is it, in short, worth while for the complainant (regard being had to all the facts submitted) to incur the anxiety of litigation, to risk the chance of defeat, with the penalty consequent thereupon in the shape of costs, whilst in pursuit of a favourable verdict and the damages which are to crown it? This is a question of much importance, although too little regarded by the practitioner; a partial solution of it will therefore be attempted in the present Chapter.

The term "damages" will here be used to signify a pecuniary compensation for a wrong or injury inflicted by one person on another, recoverable by action (p). The expression

(g) Ante, p. 315.

(h) Ante, p. 316.

(i) Ante, pp. 317 et seq., 365 et seq.

(k) Ante, pp. 324 et seq.

(l) Ante, pp. 354, 355.

(m) Ante, pp. 334 et seq.

(n) Ante, p. 318.

(o) Ante, Chap. 5.

(p) Bac. Abr. "Damages;" Co. Litt. 257 a.; 2 Bla. Com. 438; Sayer on Damages, p. 1. Under the word "wrong," above used, may be included "breach of contract."

"Costs as between party and party are given by the law as an indemnity to the person entitled to them: they are not imposed as a punishment on the party who pays them, nor given as a bonus to the party who receives them. Therefore if the extent of the damni-

"measure of damages," will be used as synonymous with the 'scale' or 'rule' by reference to which damages are in any given case to be assessed ; for although, on an ordinary trial at Nisi Prius, the act of finding the damages is for the jury, there are, nevertheless, certain established and recognised rules, according to which, under particular circumstances, the jury ought to find (q).

In the first place, 'it holds generally true, as already noticed (r), that, in an action for breach of contract, the intention or motive of the party charged cannot be inquired into, and indeed will be irrelevant to the issue raised. In such an action the main questions for determination will be, What was the contract ? Was it broken by the defendant ? If the terms of the contract be ascertained, and its breach be proved, the only other inquiry will be as to the amount of damages to be awarded ; and, in estimating these damages, the motive or intention of the defendant will be immaterial. The good of society requires that contracts mutually assented to should be inviolably observed and strictly executed (s). If a man expressly covenants or on proper consideration promises to do an act which he would not otherwise be bound by law to perform, he, by his own deliberate act, imposes on himself a responsibility from which, it would seem, he cannot be relieved unless by the consent of the contractee, or by act of the legislature (t), or of the crown (u) ; and, if guilty of a breach of his covenant or promise, is at cation can be found out, the extent to which costs ought to be allowed is also ascertained," subject to the operation of certain arbitrary rules of taxation : per Bramwell, B., Harold v. Smith, 5 H. & N. 385.

(q) Per Pollock, C. B., Alder v. Keighley, 15 M. & W. 120.

(r) Ante, p. 344.

(s) Platt on Covenants, pp. 25-6.

(t) "I apprehend that nothing can render void a valid contract except an Act of Parliament : " per Martin, B., 1 H. & N. 182. See Hall v. Wright, E. B. & E. 746 ; Taylor v. Caldwell, 3 B. & S. 826.

(u) For instance, a declaration of war by this country against a foreign power imports a prohibition of commercial intercourse with the subjects of that power : Barrick v. Buba, 2 C. B., N. S., 568, and cases there cited.

law compellable to make compensation in damages to the party injured (x). Our law, it has been remarked (y), makes a broad distinction, in regard to the proper measure of compensation to be awarded to a plaintiff, between actions of contract and actions of tort; and while it permits the jury in the latter case to take into consideration the intention of the offending party, to review all the circumstances of the case, and to apportion the damages accordingly, thus to some extent causing the verdict to operate as a medium for punishment as well as compensation (z), yet, in actions of contract, the motive or animus of the defendant is, in general, entirely disregarded, and the damages should be limited to the pecuniary loss resulting from the breach of contract (a). Such is the rule applicable in most actions of contract, though sometimes,—ex. gr., in assumpsit for breach of promise of marriage (b),—a jury will assume to themselves a very wide latitude and discretion (c)—will assume, in some sort, to punish the defendant, as well as to compensate the plaintiff (d).

It follows, from what has been above said, that, for a bare breach of contract, or of duty, nominal damages at all events (e), will be recoverable (f); and further, that, where (x) Platt on Covenants, pp. 25-6.

(y) By Mr. Sedgwick in his excellent Treatise on the Measure of Damages, 2nd ed., p. 204.

(z) Post, Book III., Chap. 5.

(a) The abstract rules for the assessment of damages do not seem to be affected by the 15 & 16 Vict. c. 76, s. 41, which allows the joinder of different causes of action in the same suit.

(b) See, for instance, Smith v. Woodfine, 1 C. B., N. S., 660.

(c) Sedgw. Dams., 2nd ed., p. 210.

(d) We have already seen that a new trial will be granted on the ground, (1) that the damages are excessive (ante, p. 207, n. (r); or (2) that they are palpably insufficient: Id. n. (s); Wilson v. Hicks, 26 L. J., Ex., 242.

(e) See Hey v. Wyche, 2 G. & D. 569; Browne v. Price, 4 C. B., N. S., 598; Rolin v. Steward, 14 C. B. 595; cited and considered post, Book III., Chap. 5; Nichol v. Bestwick, 28 L. J., Ex., 4.

(f) King v. Norman, 4 C. B. 884; Marzetti v. Williams, 1 B. & Ad. 415, 424 (cited Boorman v. Brown, 3 Q. B. 526; S. C., 11 Cl. & F. 1; and Bell v. Carey, 8 C. B. 893); Cahill v. Dawson, 3 C. B., N. S., 106; Na- an agreement, good in law, stipulates for the payment on a day named of a specific and ascertained sum by one of the parties to it, the prima facie measure of damages will be the precise sum thus stipulated to be paid (g), together with interest when recoverable (h). Where, in other words, an action is brought for the recovery of a fixed pecuniary demand, founded upon contract, and the plaintiff's claim is established, unreduced by any set-off or by proof of a partial failure of consideration, the true measure of damages, as determined by the act of the parties, will be that sum which the defendant has undertaken or contracted to pay. Thus, in Lethbridge v. Mytton (i), the defendant, by settlement made upon his marriage, conveyed estates upon certain trusts, and covenanted with the trustees to pay off incumbrances upon the estates so conveyed to the amount of 19,000*l.* within a year. It was held, that, upon the defendant's default in paying off these incumbrances, the trustees were entitled to recover against him the whole 19,000*l.* in an action of covenant, although no special damage was laid or proved. In this case, however, execution was ordered not to issue until a future day named by the Court; and Lord Tenterden intimated, that the defendant might in the intional Assurance Association v. Best, 2 H. & N. 605; Steer v. Crowley, 14 C. B., N. S., 337.

Where a vendor covenants that he has good right to convey, immediately on the execution of the conveyance, if he has not such right, his covenant is broken, and an action may instantly be commenced by the covenantee, without waiting for a disturbance of his possession; for an eviction does not constitute the breach of the covenant in question, but is consequential damage arising therefrom: Platt on Covenants, p. 311; per Sir J. Mansfield, C. J., King v. Jones, 5 Taunt. 428.

(g) To the class of cases here indicated, the remark of Lord Mansfield, in Robinson v. Bland, 2 Burr. 1077, 1086, applies,—that, where an action is brought for the breach of a contract for the payment of money only, the suit, although nominally for damages, does, from the very nature of the case, become a suit for specific performance.

(h) Post, p. 638. “No matter what the amount of inconvenience sustained by the plaintiff in the case of non-payment of money, the measure of damages is the interest of the money only:” per Willes, J., 17 C. B. 29.

(i) 2 B. & Ad. 772; Loosemore v. Radford, 9 M. & W. 657; Hodgson v. Wood, 33 L. J., Ex., 76.

terim, if he thought fit, make application to a court of equity, where the matter could be better and more satisfactorily arranged than at law.

In any case similar to the preceding, and generally in an action of covenant or assumpsit for the non-payment of a liquidated sum, the measure of damages will clearly be the sum agreed to be paid by the defendant to the plaintiff. If the precise sum due and payable to the plaintiff is not ascertained by the contract, it will be for the jury to say how much has been proved to be due to the plaintiff at the time of bringing the action (k). And, in either of these cases, interest will or will not be recoverable according to the nature of the demand, and the manner in which it arose (l). Inasmuch as the action of debt lies only for a sum certain or capable of being reduced to a certainty, and the damages recoverable in that form of action for detention of the debt are, at common law, merely nominal (m), it follows that the entire amount to be awarded to the plaintiff will, due regard being of course had to the evidence adduced, be purely matter of calculation, either by the jury or before a master, under s. 94 of the C. L. Proc. Act, 1852 (n), or, as usually happens where perplexed and intricate accounts have to be unravelled, before an arbitrator chosen by the parties. Sometimes, moreover, the law itself defines the mode of computing the amount recoverable in an action, as, for instance, where the plaintiff sues his co-contractors for (k) See Walker v. Broadhurst, 8 Exch. 889.

(l) The cases in which interest is recoverable are specified at the end of this Chapter.

(m) Nosotti v. Page, 10 C. B. 643; Lowe v. Steele, 15 M. & W. 380; Gell v. Burgess, 7 C. B. 16. See Joule v. Taylor, 7 Exch. 58.

But now, "in all actions where the plaintiff recovers a sum of money, the amount to which he is entitled may be awarded to him by the judgment generally, without any distinction being therein made as to whether such sum is recovered by way of a debt or damages:" 15 & 16 Vict. c. 76, s. 95.

As to the damages in detinue, see Williams v. Archer, 5 C. B. 318.

(n) See also 17 & 18 Vict. c. 125, ss. 1, 3.

contribution (o), or where the claim is for general average (p).

Hence, it has been said (q), that, "in contract, the measure of damages is generally matter of account, and the damages given may be demonstrated to be right or wrong" the rule most frequently applicable being, that 'the amount which would have been received if the contract had been kept is the measure of damages if it be broken.' To take a simple instance of this:—A. being indebted to B. in the sum of 500*l.* for goods sold, gave B. a bill for 600*l.* drawn by himself (A.) to get discounted, upon these terms:—that B. should retain to his own use the sum of 100*l.* and the discount, and should pay over the balance to A. Here the measure of damages in an action by A.'s assignees against B. was held to be the amount of the bill minus the 100*l.* and discount (r).

The last-mentioned rule flows directly from the fundamental principle on which damages are awarded by our law, viz., that compensation may thus be made to the party who complains of breach of contract; sufficient examples of the practical working of this elementary doctrine will almost immediately present themselves.

Again,—in written contracts, whether special or simple, giving rise respectively to actions of covenant and of assumpsit, it not unfrequently happens that the parties themselves assume to define the precise amount of liability which shall be incurred for breach of contract (s). If so, and if it appears that the amount thus specified is really intended liquidated damages.

Penalty—

(o) Batard v. Hawes, 2 E. & B. 287; Boulter v. Peplow, 9 C. B. 493, 508; ante, pp. 310, 311.

(p) See Hallett v. Wigram, 9 C. B. 580; Atkinson v. Stephens, 7 Exch. 567.

(q) Per De Grey, C. J., Sharpe v. Brice, 2 W. Bla. 942; cited arg., Williams v. Currie, 1 C. B. 845.

(r) Alder v. Keighley, 15 M. & W. 117; cited per Crowder, J., 17 C. B. 28.

(s) As to the damages recoverable in debt—on bond, see 1 Wms. Saund., 6th ed., 58, 58 b; ante, p. 276:—on a replevin bond, see Stansfeld v. Hellawell, 7 Exch. 373.

as liquidated (or ascertained) damages, the jury will be relieved from any inquiry touching the amount of compensation to be awarded to the plaintiff; but will, under the direction of the Judge, find the precise sum agreed upon and stipulated to be paid by the parties.

Where, however, parties agree and sufficiently indicate their intention that a specific sum shall be payable by way of penalty for breach of contract, our Courts will avail themselves of the 8 & 9 Will. 3, c. 11, s. 8, and apply equitable principles in the assessment of damages; not, indeed, allowing them to exceed the sum thus stipulated, but requiring evidence to be given for the purpose of fixing their precise amount, and enabling the jury to award it accordingly (t).

The distinction, sometimes difficult to appreciate, which exists between a penalty and liquidated damages, may be illustrated by the case of Kemble v. Farren (u). That was an action of assumpsit for the breach of an engagement by the defendant to perform as an actor at the plaintiff's theatre during several consecutive seasons. This agreement contained various clauses and stipulations between the parties, inter alia, that the defendant should perform, that the plaintiff should pay him so much on every night that the theatre should be open for theatrical performances during the time in question, and that, if either of the parties should neglect or refuse to fulfil the said agreement or any part thereof, or any stipulation therein contained, such party should pay to the other the sum of 1000*l.*, which sum was declared to be liquidated and ascertained damages, and not a penalty or in the nature thereof. Notwithstanding, (t) See, per Bramwell, B., Betts v. Burch, 4 H. & N. 510; per Erle, J., Reynolds v. Bridge, 6 E. & B. 543-4; per Lord Cranworth, C., Ranger v. Great Western R. Co., 5 H. L. Ca. 94.

(u) 6 Bing. 141 (following Astley v.

Weldon, 2 B. & P. 346); Horner v. Flintoff, 9 M. & W. 678; per Bayley, J., Davies v. Penton, 6 B. & C. 223; Edwards v. Williams, 5 Taunt. 247; Beckham v. Drake, 2 H. L. Ca. 579; 598, 614.

however, this expression of the intention of the parties, the Court of Common Pleas held, that the amount specified was to be regarded as a penalty merely, and not as liquidated damages (x); for they observed that, if an agreement contains clauses, some sounding in uncertain damages and others relating to certain pecuniary payments, as happened in the case sub judice, and the action is brought for the breach of a clause of an uncertain nature, it would be absurd to construe the sum specified in the agreement as liquidated damages: because, if so, a very large sum might become immediately payable in consequence of the non-payment of a very small one, such case being precisely that in which Courts of Equity have always relieved, and against which Courts of Law have, in modern times, endeavoured to relieve, by directing juries to assess the real damages sustained by the breach of contract.

The principle above laid down must, however, be very cautiously applied, and can be safely relied on only where the terms of the agreement in question are similar in kind to those which came before the Court in Kemble v. Farren; for, where the defendant had contracted not to practise as a perfumer within a certain district, and for the observance of this contract bound himself to the plaintiff in the sum of 5000*l.* "as and by way of liquidated damages and not of penalty," the case last cited was held inapplicable (y), on the ground, that, although where a deed contains several stipulations of various degrees of importance, as to some of which the damages might be considered liquidated, whilst for others they might be deemed unliquidated, and

(x) Et vide Reindel v. Schell, 4 C. B., N. S., 97.

(y) Price v. Green, 16 M. & W. 346; S. C., 13 Id. 695; Rawlinson v. Clarke, 14 M. & W. 187; S. C., 15 Id. 292; Atkyns v. Kinnier, 4 Exch. 776; Hurst v. Hurst, Id. 571; cited per Bramwell, B., Leigh v. Lillie, 30 L. J., Ex., 25, 28-9; Galsworthy v. Strutt, 1 Exch. 659; cited Betts v. Burch, 4 H. & N. 511; Leighton v. Wales, 3 M. & W. 545. And see Beckham v. Drake, ante, note (u).

a sum of money is made payable upon a breach of any of them, the Courts have held it to be a penalty only, and not liquidated damages, yet, where the damage is altogether uncertain, and a definite sum of money is, nevertheless, expressly made payable in respect of it by way of liquidated damages, those words must be read in their ordinary sense, and cannot be construed to import a penalty (z).

Where the contracting parties have not by mutual stipulations precisely indicated the amount of damages to be recoverable by either in the event of a breach of contract, such damages will have to be assessed according to the general rules of law:—"that, where a person makes a contract and breaks it, he must pay the whole damage sustained" (a);—"that, where a party sustains a loss by reason of a breach of contract, he is, so far as money can do it, to be placed in the same situation with respect to damages as if the contract had been performed" (b).

The rules just stated admit of simple illustration. Thus, A., having recovered a judgment for 28*l.* 3*s.* 6*d.* against B., agreed with C. to forbear to sue out execution upon the judgment until a future day, in consideration whereof C. undertook that he would on or before that day erect a substantial dwelling-house, and cause a lease of the same to be granted to A., such lease when granted to be in satisfaction of the judgment. In an action by A. against C. for breach of this undertaking, the measure of damages was held to be the value of that (viz., the lease of the house in question) which the defendant had

(z) Per Alderson, B., 13 M. & W. 701-2; and in Atkins v. Kinnier, 4 Exch. 784; per Parke, B., Id. 783; per Coleridge, J., Reynolds v. Bridge, 6 E. & B. 541 (which follows Atkins v. Kinnier, supra); Mercer v. Irving, E. B. & E. 563; Sparrow v. Paris, 7 H. & N. 594; Carnes v. Nesbitt, Id. 770.

(a) Per Alderson, B., Robinson v. Harman, 1 Exch. 855-6.

(b) Per Parke, B., Id. 855.

promised to give, in consideration of the plaintiff's forbearance (c).

The following classes of cases concerning contracts for the sale of goods, for the sale or demise of real property, contracts of hiring and service, &c., may properly be noticed in connection with the rules for the measure of damages last stated.

Contracts for the sale of chattels or personal property may be broken either by the vendor's neglect to deliver the goods contracted for ; or by the vendee refusing to accept them, or to pay their stipulated price ; or by the article delivered proving different from what it was represented to be at the time of sale. To some extent, indeed, it may perhaps be said, such agreements furnish their own measure of damages, inasmuch as Courts of justice, without desiring to fix any arbitrary rate of compensation, will mainly endeavour to carry into effect, so far as they can by awarding pecuniary damages, the contract of the parties ; and to this rule the sole exception seems to be, that, in the case of an unconscionable and oppressive bargain, the jury is sometimes allowed to disregard the precise terms of the agreement actually concluded, and to give fair and equitable damages (d).

Contracts
for sale of goods.

If, however, there be no element of fraud, no attempt at overreaching in the case, the very terms of the given contract will, under circumstances such as are above supposed, in general suggest the proper measure of damages to be applied on its breach. Thus, in an action at suit of the vendee for

(c) Strutt v. Farlar, 16 M. & W. 249 ; and see Alder v. Keighley, cited ante, p. 617 ; Hull v. Smith, 12 M. & W. 618 ; Cort v. Ambergate, &c., R. C., 17 Q. B., 127 ; Petre v. Duncombe, 20 L. J., Q. B., 242.

(d) James v. Morgan, 1 Lev. 111 ; Thornborrow v. Whitacre, 2 Ld. Raym. 1164 ; Sedgwick Dams., 2nd ed., p.

212 ; Bac. Abr. "Damages" (D.) ; Sayer on Damages, p. 46, where it is said, that, "if, in an action of assumption, the plaintiff has declared upon a catching contract, damages may be assessed to the amount of a lesser sum than would have been due in case the contract had not been a catching one."

Action for non-delivery of goods.

non-delivery of goods, stock, or shares (purchased, but not paid for), pursuant to contract, the general rule is, that the measure of damages is the difference between the contract price and the market price of the subject-matter of the contract at the time of the breach (e); so that, if the price of the goods, stock, or shares contracted for has not varied, the purchaser will be entitled to nominal damages only (f) for their non-delivery (g). In order to compel the delivery of specific goods, the plaintiff must avail himself of the provisions of stat. 19 & 20 Vict. c. 97, s. 2.

Further, where the purchaser of goods resells them before the time fixed for their delivery, he will be restricted by the above specified measure of damages, viz., the difference between the contract price and the market price at the date of the breach of contract; and he will not be entitled to recover the amount of the claim, if any, enforceable by his subvendee for breach of contract against himself; because, immediately on receiving notice of the defendant's breach of contract, the plaintiff ought to have supplied himself with

(e) Gainsford v. Carroll, 2 B. & C. 624, cited arg., 14 C. B. 336; Powell v. Jessopp, 18 C. B. 336; Cockerell v. Van Diemen's Land Co., Id. 454; S. C., 1 C. B., N. S., 732; Shaw v. Holland, 15 M. & W. 136; Tempest v. Kilner, 3 C. B. 249, 253; Leigh v. Paterson, 8 Taunt. 540; Startup v. Cortazzi, 2 Cr. M. & R. 165; Boorman v. Nash, 9 B. & C. 145; Stewart v. Cauty, 8 M. & W. 160; Logan v. Le Mesurier, 6 Moo. P. C. C. 116.

(f) Valpy v. Oakeley, 16 Q. B. 941, 950; and see Startup v. Cortazzi, supra.

(g) As to the measure of damages in an action—for the non-completion of a ship pursuant to contract, see Fletcher v. Tayleur, 17 C. B. 21; Wood v. Bell, 5 E. & B. 772—against the charterer of a ship for not loading a cargo, see Smith v. M'Guire, 3 H. & N. 554.

"Where there is an agreement to deliver goods to a vendee on a certain condition, and the condition (without any default on the part of the vendor) never comes to pass, it is plain that he will not be liable for a non-delivery. But where the agreement is absolute, or conditioned on an event which happens, the vendor will be liable for a breach, although he could not help the non-performance; for it is his own heedlessness if he runs the risk of undertaking to perform an impossibility when he might have provided against it by his contract:" Judgm., Hale v. Rawson, 4 C. B., N. S., 95.

the article in question, in order to be able to deliver it to his buyer (h).

In an action at suit of the vendor of merchandise against the vendee for not accepting it, the measure of damages will similarly be determined by reference to the contract price and the market price at the time of refusing to accept the goods. A. contracted for the purchase of wheat, "to be delivered at Birmingham as soon as vessels could be obtained for the carriage thereof;" subsequently, the market having fallen, A. gave notice to the seller that he would not accept the wheat, then being on its transit to Birmingham, if it were delivered. In an action against A. for not accepting the wheat, the proper measure of damages was held to be the difference between the contract price and the market price on the day when the wheat was tendered to A. for acceptance at Birmingham, and was refused (i). —for not accepting goods.

The rules above laid down may be considered as applicable, under ordinary circumstances, for determining the measure of damages in an action for the non-delivery or non-acceptance of goods bargained and sold. It would seem, however, that proof of special facts on behalf of the plaintiff might vary the rule to be applied for the assessment of his damages. "If," says Erle, J., on a recent occasion (k), "goods are not delivered or accepted according to contract, time and trouble as well as expense may be required either in getting other similar goods or finding another purchaser, and the damages ought to indemnify both for such time, trouble, and expense, and for the difference between the market price and the price contracted for" (l). "Most cases of contract," says Lord

(h) Peterson v. Ayre, 13 C. B. 353, 385. See Waters v. Towers, 8 Exch. 401, and Randall v. Raper, E. B. & E. 84; Josling v. Irvine, 6 H. & N. 512.

(i) Phillipotts v. Evans, 5 M. & W. 475.

(k) Beckham v. Drake, 2 H. L. Ca. 607-8.

(l) See, also, Dunlop v. Higgins, 1 H. L. Ca. 381 (where in moving judgment in a case to be decided with reference to the Scotch law, Lord Cottenham, C., seems to have recognised Cottenham, C. (m), "vary from each other, and whatever general rules there may be as to awarding damages, they must be modified by the particular cases to which they come to be applied."

Loan of stock, shares,
&c.

Again,—in an action for breach of a contract to replace stock lent, the measure of damages is held to be the price of the stock on the day when it ought to have been replaced, or its price on the day of the trial, at the plaintiff's option (n). "The true measure of damages" in all these cases "is that which will completely indemnify the plaintiff for the breach of the engagement. If the defendant neglect to replace the stock at the day appointed, and the stock afterwards rise in value, the plaintiff can only be indemnified by giving him the price of it at the time of the trial. And it is no answer to say that the defendant may be prejudiced by the plaintiff's delaying to bring his action; for it is his own fault that he does not perform his engagement at the time: or he may replace it at any time afterwards, so as to avail himself of a rising market" (o). So, in an action for not re-delivering mining shares, lent to the defendant upon a contract to return them on a given day, the true measure of damages will, if they have not been replaced, be the market price of the shares at the time of the trial (p).

In Hochster v. De La Tour (q), it was held that a party to an executory agreement may, before the time for executing it has arrived, break the agreement, either by disabling himself from fulfilling it or by renouncing the contract, and that the above rule as applicable in this country); Waters v. Towers, cited post, p. 636.

(m) 1 H. L. Ca. 403.

(n) Shepherd v. Johnson, 2 East, 210; M'Arthur v. Lord Seaforth, 2 Taunt. 257; Downes v. Back, 1 Stark. N. P. C. 318; Harrison v. Harrison, 1 C. & P. 412.

(o) Per Grose, J., 2 East, 212.

(p) Owen v. Routh, 14 C. B. 327.

(q) 2 E. & B. 678; Danube, &c., R. C. v. Xenos, 13 C. B., N. S., 825; S. C., 11 Id. 152; Bartholomew v. Markwick, 15 C. B., N. S., 711, 716; Hall v. Conder, 2 C. B., N. S., 22, and cases cited ante, p. 111. See, also, Hall v. Wright, E. B. & E. 746; Taylor v. Caldwell, 3 B. & S. 826.

an action will lie for such breach before the time for the fulfilment of the agreement. "The man who wrongfully renounces a contract into which he has deliberately entered, cannot justly complain if he is immediately sued for a compensation in damages by the man whom he has injured; and it seems reasonable to allow an option to the injured party, either to sue immediately or to wait till the time when the act was to be done, still holding it as prospectively binding for the exercise of this option, which may be advantageous to the innocent party and cannot be prejudicial to the wrong-doer." And, "in either case, the jury in assessing the damages, would be justified in looking to all that had happened, or was likely to happen, to increase or mitigate the loss of the plaintiff down to the day of trial" (r). In an action ex contractu, however, the damages cannot be reduced by proof of a breach of contract on the plaintiff's part subsequently to the commencement of the action (s).

No difficulty in regard to the measure of damages can occur where the price of goods sold is sued for. The amount to be recovered will in this case depend simply upon the evidence adduced. And where the breach of contract consists in delivering goods of a quality inferior to that contracted for, the true measure of damages is the difference between the value of goods of the quality contracted for at the time of delivery and the value of the goods then actually delivered, or their value ascertained by reselling them within a reasonable time (t).

Formerly, where an action was brought for the agreed price of a specific chattel sold with a warranty, or of work

Action for price of goods.

Breach of warranty,
&c.

(r) As to the measure of damages for the breach of an executory contract, see Masterton v. Mayor, &c., of Brooklyn, 7 Hill (U.S.) R. 61, recognised in Story v. New York and Harlem R. C., 2 Selden (U. S.) R. 85.

(s) Per Jervis, C. J., Bartlett v. Holmes, 13 C. B. 638. And see, per Maule, J., Lewis v. Clifden, 14 C. B. 255.

(t) Loder v. Kekulé, 3 C. B., N. S., 128.

which was to be performed according to contract, the practice was to allow the plaintiff to recover the stipulated sum, leaving the defendant to a cross action for breach of the warranty or contract; in which action, as well the difference between the price contracted for and the real value of the articles or of the work done, as any consequential damage, might have been recovered. It may be well to observe, however, that the practice in regard to this point is now different. In either of the foregoing cases and in that of goods agreed to be supplied according to contract, it is held competent for the defendant to show how much less the subject-matter of the action is worth by reason of the breach of contract, and to the extent that he obtains, or is capable of obtaining, an abatement of price on that account, he must be considered as having received satisfaction for the breach of the contract declared upon, so as to be precluded from recovering in another action to that extent; but no more (u). That is to say, the ordinary measure of damages in an action for breach of warranty of goods is the difference between the actual value and the value guaranteed (x). To the rule just stated, which thus, in certain cases, obviates the necessity of bringing a cross action for breach of contract, there are, however, some exceptions (y).

Without attempting here to inquire as to the effect of payment, or of a plea of set-off, on the amount of damages to be awarded, in regard to which subjects reference must be made to works of a more technical character than the present, I may add, that, even where the statute of set-off does (u) Judgm., Mondel v. Steel, 8 M. & W. 870-2; Rigge v. Burbidge, 15 M. & W. 598; Parsons v. Sexton, 4 C. B. 899; Dawson v. Collis, 10 C. B. 523; Allen v. Cameron, 1 Cr. & M. 832. Street v. Blay, 2 B. & Ad. 456, is a leading authority upon the above point. See also Newton v. Forster, 12 M. & W.

772.

(x) Dingle v. Hare, 7 C. B., N. S., 145. In such a case the amount of compensation paid to a sub-vendee of the goods might also be recovered: Id.

(y) As to which see the judgment in Mondel v. Steel, 8 M. & W. 871; Dakin v. Oxley, 15 C. B., N. S., 646.

not apply, it is competent to a defendant, with a view to avoiding the "scandal and absurdity" (z) of a circuitry of action, to set up a cross demand by way of defence to an action upon contract, provided he can show by his plea that the sum which he claims to be entitled to recover back is of necessity the identical sum for which the plaintiff is suing, or that he (the defendant) would be entitled to recover from the plaintiff whatever damages might, in the pending action, be awarded (a). It is obvious, however, that a defence such as here alluded to, would go to the whole cause of action, and not merely in reduction of damages.

On referring to the cases latterly cited, it may perhaps be thought, as suggested at p. 617, that the very terms of the particular contract under consideration do, to some extent, indicate the true measure of damages applicable on its breach; it cannot be denied, however, that sometimes the rule by which to adjust the damages is ill-defined, and sometimes much latitude, even in actions strictly founded upon contract, is allowed to the jury in assessing them.

What, for instance, it may be asked, in the case of the breach of a covenant to repair, is the true measure of damages? Is it, in accordance with the opinion of Lord Holt, the amount which would be required to put the premises into repair (b)? Is it the amount of detriment done to the reversion by the premises being out of repair (c)?

(z) Per Lord Denman, C. J., Walmsley v. Cooper, 11 Ad. & E. 216.

(a) Charles v. Altin, 15 C. B. 46, 62; Alston v. Herring, 11 Exch. 822, 831; Schloss v. Heriot, 14 C. B., N. S., 59; Minshull v. Oakes, 2 H. & N. 793. See, also, as to the subject above mentioned, Connop v. Levy, 11 Q. B. 769; Wilders v. Stevens, 15 M. & W. 208; Smith v. Mursack, 6 C. B. 486; Bartlett v. Holmes, cited ante, p. 625, n. (s); Hall v. Conder, 2 C. B., N.

S., 22; Thompson v. Gillespy, 5 B. & B. 209, 223; Dakin v. Oxley, 15 C. B., N. S., 646.

(b) Vivian v. Champion, 2 Ld. Raym. 1125; Yates v. Dunster, 11 Exch. 15, 18; per Watson, B., Davies v. Underwood, 2 H. & N. 574, who observes, that "as a matter of fact, it is never proved in evidence to what extent the reversion is damaged."

(c) Doe d. Worcester Trustees v. Rowlands, 9 Car. & P. 734.

Or, to speak more specifically, is it the loss which the landlord would sustain if he sold his reversion in the market (d) ? Either of these methods of determining the damages would seem, in theory, to be satisfactory.

Contract of hiring and service—wrongful dismissal.

Let us next inquire what, in an action for breach of an agreement of hiring and service by wrongful dismissal of the plaintiff from his employment, would be the proper measure of damages? It would be obtained by considering what is the usual rate of wages for the employment contracted for, and what time would be lost before a similar employment could be obtained. The law considers that employment in any ordinary branch of industry can be obtained by a person competent for the place, that the usual rate of wages for such employment can be proved, and, further, that, when a promise for continuing employment is broken by the master, it is the duty of the servant to use diligence to find another employment (e). If, indeed, the particular employment could not be again obtained without delay, and if the wages stipulated for in the contract broken were higher than usual, the damages should be such as to indemnify for the loss of wages during that delay, and for the loss of the excess of the wages contracted for above the usual rate; but no allowance would be made in the nature of pretium affectionis, nor for any pain caused to the plaintiff

(d) Per Martin, B., Smith v. Peat, 9 Exch. 161, 166. See Logan v. Hall, 4 C. B. 598.

It is usual, in an action of covenant, brought within the term for not repairing, to give only nominal damages, inasmuch as the lessee may afterwards repair during the term; but this is merely a rule of discretion: Platt on Covenants, p. 289.

As to the mode of computing the damages in an action for freight, see per Maule, J., Cockburn v. Alexander, 6 C. B. 814-5,—in an action for breach of charter-party, see Dimech v. Corlett, 12 Moo. P. C. C. 199 (where also are discussed the rules of construction applicable to mercantile contracts); distinguished in Behn v. Burness, 3 B. & S., 751, 760-1.

(e) Per Erle, J., Beckham v. Drake, 2 H. L. Ca. 606, and in Goodman v. Pocock, 15 Q. B. 584; per Crompton, J., Emmens v. Elderton, 13 C. B. 508.

by his dismissal in consequence of his being attached to the place of his employment (f).

In the case of a wrongful dismissal, then, we may conclude that the servant or party dismissed may recover such damages as the jury think the loss of the situation has occasioned. If the plaintiff has obtained, or is likely to obtain, another situation, the damages ought, on that ground, to be proportionately less, or even nominal, regard being had to the real loss sustained (g). Considerable latitude seems, however, in cases of the kind before us, to be permitted to the jury (h).

In an action on an indenture of apprenticeship, the apprentice having wrongfully quitted the master's service, damages can only be recovered up to the time of action brought, not prospective damages up to the time when the term of apprenticeship would end (i).

Of the general rule laid down at p. 617, and heretofore partially illustrated—that 'where a party sustains a loss by reason of a breach of contract, he is, so far as money can do it, to be placed in the same situation with respect to damages as if the contract had been performed,'—some qualifications, of much practical importance, demand our notice.

In the first place, contracts for the sale of real estate are held to be made subject to the condition, that the vendor has a good title; so that, when a person contracts to sell real property, there is an implied understanding, that, if (without fraud on his part) he fails to make out a good title, the only

Contract
for sale
of land.

(f) Per Erle, J., 2 H. L. Ca. 607.

(g) Per Crompton, J., 13 C. B. 508.

As to the proper mode of declaring for a wrongful dismissal, see Emmens v. Elderton, 13 C. B. 509, 532; Goodman v. Pocock, 15 Q. B. 576; Fewings v. Tisdal, 1 Exch. 295; Taylor v. Laird, 1 H. & N. 266; Cutter v.

Powell, 2 Smith L. C., 5th ed., p. 1;

Lilley v. Elwin, 11 Q. B. 742, 755;

—for the wrongful rescission of agent's authority, see Prickett v. Badger, 1 C. B., N. S., 296.

(h) Smith v. Thompson, 8 C. B. 44.

(i) Lewis v. Peachey, 1 H. & C. 518.

damages recoverable, over and above the deposit money paid with interest, will be the expenses which the vendee may be put to in investigating the title (k). Nominal damages only, are, in the case here supposed—i. e., in the absence of fraud or misrepresentation on the part of the vendor—recoverable by the vendee for the loss of his bargain (l).

“It is a custom long established,” remarks Lord Campbell, C. J., in a recent case (m), “supposed to be incorporated in all contracts for the sale of real estate as being universally known, that when the sale goes off for want of title in the vendor the damages shall be limited to the actual expenses. If the sale goes off because the vendor changes his mind, or otherwise by his fault, the custom does not apply and full compensation is given.”

Since, moreover, every one who purchases land, knows or is presumed to know, that difficulties may exist as to the making of a title, which were not anticipated at the time of entering into the contract, should the purchaser think proper to enter into possession and to incur expense in alterations before the title is ascertained, he will do so at his own risk (n).

In Hopkins v. Grazebrook (o), a person who had contracted for the purchase of an estate, but had not himself obtained a conveyance of it, sold it by auction, with a stipulation to make a good title by a day named. This he was unable to do, inasmuch as his vendor refused to convey, and (k) Per Parke, B., Robinson v. Harman, 1 Exch. 855; Flureau v. Thornhill, 2 W. Bla. 1078; Walker v. Moore, 10 B. & C. 416; Hanslip v. Padwick, 5 Exch. 615; Blake v. Phinn, 3 C. B. 976; Poppleton v. Buchanan, 4 C. B., N. S., 20, 55; Simmons v. Heseltine, 5 C. B., N. S., 554.

(l) Pounsett v. Fuller, 17 C. B. 660;

Sikes v. Wild, 1 B. & S. 587; S. C., 32 L. J., Q. B., 375. See Hodges v. Earl of Lichfield, 1 Bing. N. C. 492.

(m) Simons v. Patchett, 7 E. & B. 572.

(n) Judgm., Worthington v. Worthington, 8 C. B. 134.

(o) 6 B. & C. 31; Robinson v. Harman, 1 Exch. 850.

it was held, that the purchaser by auction might, beyond his expenses, recover damages for the loss which he had sustained by not having the contract carried into effect. This case is certainly distinguishable from Flureau v. Thornhill (p), where the defendant was actually owner of the estate which he sold, and offered such a title to it as he had; whereas, in Hopkins v. Grazebrook, the defendant imprudently sold an estate of which he was not owner, and to which he had not the power of conferring even the shadow of a title. It seemed, therefore, but fair that he should be compellable to make good any loss which the purchaser had sustained by reason of not having that for which he had contracted (q). In other words, where a person enters into a contract to sell, knowing that he cannot make a title, he is remitted to his general liability, and the doctrine propounded in Flureau v. Thornhill (r) does not apply (s).

Where a party has been let into possession of land under a contract of purchase which he then refuses to complete, and no conveyance is executed, the vendor cannot recover from him the whole amount of the purchase-money, but only the damages actually sustained by his breach of contract (t). The measure of damages in an action of this nature is the detriment sustained by the plaintiff by reason of the defendant not having performed his contract. The question is, how much worse off is the plaintiff, owing to the diminution in the value of the land or to the loss of the purchase-money, in consequence of the non-performance of the contract? "It is clear he cannot have the land and its value too. A party cannot recover the full value of a chattel, unless under cir-

(p) 2 W. Bla. 1078.

(q) But see Sugd. V. & P., 14th ed., p. 359; Gosbell v. Archer, 2 Ad. & E. 500.

(r) As to which case, see Sugd. V. & P., 14th ed., pp. 358 et seq.

(s) Pounsett v. Fuller, 17 C. B.

660, 677; Sikes v. Wild, 1 B. & S. 587.

(t) Per Parke, B., Laird v. Pim, 7 M. & W. 474, 478. See further as to the liability of a purchaser who fails to complete his purchase, Ockenden v. Henly, E. B. & E. 485.

cumstances which import that the property has passed to the defendant, as in the case of goods sold and delivered, where they have been absolutely parted with and cannot be sold again" (u).

Damage—when too remote.

The next point which may present difficulty in applying the general rule (x) for measuring the damages is, in determining whether or not the damage laid in the declaration is sufficiently connected with the alleged injury to justify its recovery by action. As introductory to this part of the subject, the following remarks of Dr. Story in his Treatise on Agency (y) may advantageously be noticed—indicating a kind of damage which would certainly be too remote. "If," says that learned writer, "an agent who is bound to render an account and to pay over monies to his principal at a particular time, should omit so to do, whereby the principal should be unable to pay his debts or to fulfil his other contracts, and should stop payment and fail in business, or be injured in his general credit thereby, the agent would not be liable for such injury; for it is but a remote or accidental consequence of the negligence. So, if an agent, having funds in his hands, should improperly neglect to ship goods by a particular ship according to the orders of his principal, and the ship should duly arrive, and, if the goods had been on board, the principal might, by future re-shipments and speculations, have made great profits thereon, the agent will not be bound to pay for the loss of such possible profits, for it is a mere contingent damage, or an accidental mischief." And, "the same reasoning would apply to a case where, by the neglect of an agent to remit money, the principal has been prevented from engaging in a profitable speculation in some other business by his want of the funds" (z).

In connection with the foregoing observations, Stanton v.

(u) Ante, p. 631, n. (t).

(x) Ante, pp. 617, 629.

(y) 4th ed., p. 280.

(z) Story on Agency, 4th ed., p. 281.

Collier (a) will be found worthy of perusal. There the plaintiff (who was a printer) declared for the breach of a contract to re-deliver a printing-machine held by the defendant as security for money due to him, and which was to be re-delivered to the plaintiff upon certain terms.—The damage alleged was, that, by reason of the non-delivery of this machine, the plaintiff had lost great gains and profits, which would have resulted to him from its use, that his entire business and trade had been ruined, and that he had thereby become insolvent. Now, although no decision was given by the Court upon the question, whether the damage thus alleged was too remotely connected with the wrong done to be recoverable, it would certainly seem, referring to what Dr. Story says, in part to have been so. On proof of the circumstances here alleged, the plaintiff, it is conceived, would have been entitled to recover for the loss of profits, but not for damage resulting from his insolvency.

The subject of remoteness of damage in an action of contract was much considered by the Court of Exchequer in a recent case (b), where the following rule in regard to it is laid down—that “Where two parties have made a contract which one of them has broken, the damages which the other party ought to receive in respect of such breach of contract should be such as may fairly and reasonably be considered either arising naturally, i.e., according to the usual course of things, from such breach of contract itself, or such as may reasonably be supposed to have been in the contemplation of both parties at the time they made the contract, as the probable result of the breach of it” (c). Where (as the Court in the case just cited proceed to remark) a contract is

(a) 3 E. & B. 274.

(b) Hadley v. Baxendale, 9 Exch. 341; Gee, app., Lancashire and Yorkshire R. C., resp., 6 H. & N. 211.

(c) The rule here stated was applied in Portman v. Middleton, 4 C. B., N.

S., 322, 328-9. See also Randall v. Raper, E. B. & E. 84; Josling v. Irvine, 6 H. & N. 512; Broom v. Hall, 7 C. B., N. S., 503; Duckworth v. Ewart, 2 H. & C. 129.

made with reference to special circumstances, and such special circumstances are communicated by the plaintiff to the defendant, and are thus known to both the contracting parties, the damages which might reasonably be contemplated as likely to result from a breach of such contract, would be the amount of injury which would ordinarily follow from a breach of contract under the special circumstances so known and communicated. But, on the other hand, if the special circumstances were wholly unknown to the party breaking the contract, he, at the most, could only be supposed to have had in his contemplation the amount of injury which would arise generally, and in the great multitude of cases not affected by any special circumstances, from such a breach of contract. For, had the special circumstances been known, the parties might have specially provided for the event of a breach of contract occurring, by special terms as to the damages to be paid in such case, and of this advantage it would be very unjust to deprive them.

In Hadley v. Baxendale, the rule above laid down and explained was applied. That was an action of assumpsit for the breach of a contract, whereby the defendants (who were carriers) had undertaken to convey for the plaintiffs (who were millers and occupiers of a steam mill) a broken shaft, used for working the mill, which was forwarded to the consignee, to serve as a pattern by which a new shaft might be constructed. The breach alleged was, that by the negligence of the defendants, the broken shaft was not delivered in reasonable time to the consignee, in consequence whereof the completing of the new shaft was delayed, and the plaintiffs were prevented from working their steam mill and supplying their customers with flour, and were deprived of the gains and profits which they might have made by so doing. It was proved, at the trial of this case, that the plaintiffs' servant, on delivering the shaft to the defendants' clerk, had stated that 'the mill was stopped, and that the shaft must be sent immediately ;' but it did not appear that any further details, showing the exigency of the case, had been communicated on the one side, or that any promise to use special diligence had been given on the other. The Court of Exchequer held, that the damage here claimed by the plaintiffs was too remote to be recoverable, the loss of profits complained of not being such a consequence of the alleged breach of contract as could have been fairly and reasonably contemplated by both the parties when they made it. How, for instance, could the defendants know that the plaintiffs had not another shaft in their possession, or that their wish was not merely to send back the broken shaft to the engineers who made it? The special circumstances of the case never were communicated to the defendants, a knowledge of which alone could have enabled them to have foreseen or contemplated the damage which ensued (c).

With Hadley v. Baxendale should be compared two previously adjudged cases—Black v. Baxendale (d) and Waters v. Towers (e).

In the former of these cases the plaintiff had sent certain goods by the defendants, who were carriers, to a country town, intending that they should arrive in time for the market there on a certain day, of which intention, however, the defendants had no notice.—In consequence of the non-delivery of the goods by the defendants within reasonable time, expenses were incurred in removing them for sale to another place, and the jury included the amount of such expenses in their verdict. The Court of Exchequer seem to have thought that the jury were wrong in so doing, but, as the amount of their verdict was under 20*l.*, refused in accordance with the recognised rule in such cases, to grant a new trial. "If," said Pollock, C. B., "the carriers had had distinct notice that the goods would be required to be delivered at a particular time, perhaps they would have been liable for those expenses for which without such notice they would not be liable ; but, whether any particular class of expenses is reasonable or not, depends upon the usage of trade and various other circumstances."

(c) Acc. Wilson v. Lancashire and Yorkshire R. C., 9 C. B., N. S., 632; Hales v. London and North Western R. C., 32 L. J., Q. B., 292.

(d) 1 Exch. 410.

(e) 8 Exch. 401; Randall v. Raper, E. B. & E. 84, which shows that a liability to loss may, under circumstances such as above put, entitle the party liable to recover.

The decision in Waters v. Towers (f) shows, that, in an action for the breach of a contract to deliver goods, consequential loss through the plaintiff's inability to perform a sub-contract entered into by him may sometimes be recoverable as special damage.

A review, however, of decided cases seems to show that the rule has not been uniformly observed, or very clearly settled (g), as to the right of a party to claim a loss of profits as a part of the damages for breach of a special contract. Perhaps the best practical test which can be suggested for application is this, that, if the profits are such as would have accrued and grown out of the contract itself, as the direct and immediate results of its fulfilment, then they would form a just and proper item of damages to be recovered against the delinquent party upon a breach of the agreement. The realisation of such profits as are here indicated may, indeed, be considered as forming part and parcel of the contract itself, and must have been in the contemplation of the parties when the agreement was entered into ; but if they are such as would have been realised by the party from other independent and collateral undertakings, although entered into in consequence and on the faith of the principal contract, then they are too uncertain and remote to be taken into consideration as a part of (f) 8 Exch. 401.

(g) Compare the remarks of Alder- son, B., 8 Exch. 403, with the cases cited in the ensuing notes.

the damages occasioned by the breach of the contract in suit (h).

The rule laid down in Hadley v. Baxendale was applied in Theobald v. The Railway Passengers' Assurance Company (i), where the action, in form ex contractu, was brought to recover compensation from the defendants in respect of an injury sustained by the plaintiff, one of their insured, whilst travelling by railway. The true measure of damages in this case was held to be compensation for the personal injury resulting from the accident, not exceeding, however, the sum which the company would have been liable to pay in the case of death, and irrespective of any loss of time or profits consequential on such injury; for "what the insurance company calculate on indemnifying the party against is the expense and pain and loss immediately connected with the accident, and not remote consequences that may follow, according to the business or profession of the passenger."

Also in Collen v. Wright (k), which decided that a person who makes a contract as agent thereby impliedly warrants (h) Fox v. Harding, 7 Cushing (U. S.) R. 522-3; Richardson v. Dunn, 8 C. B., N. S., 655.

As to recovering loss of profits, see also Hanslip v. Padwick, 5 Exch. 615.

It has been held, that, in an action for breach of warranty of a horse, the loss of a bargain for resale of the horse is not recoverable as special damage: Clare v. Maynard, 6 Ad. & E. 519. Nor, in such an action, can the costs of imprudently defending an action, brought against the plaintiff by his sub-vendee for breach of warranty, be recovered: Wrightup v. Chamberlain, 7 Scott, 598 (with which compare Mainwaring v. Brandon, 8 Taunt. 202). "No person," says Lord Denman, C. J., in Short v. Kalloway, 11

Ad. & E. 31, "has a right to inflame his own account against another by incurring additional expense in the unrighteous resistance to an action which he cannot defend." Acc. Broom v. Hall, 7 C. B., N. S., 503.

See also Walker v. Hatton, 10 M. & W. 249; Malden v. Fyson, 11 Q. B. 292; Richardson v. Chasen, 10 Id. 756; Pierce v. Williams, 23 L. J., Exch., 322; Smith v. Howell, 6 Exch. 730; Bramley v. Chesterton, 2 C. B., N. S., 592.

(i) 10 Exch. 45.

(k) 7 E. & B. 301; S. C. (in Error), 8 Id. 647, recognising Randell v. Trimmen, 18 C. B. 786. See Simons v. Patchett, 7 E. & B. 568; Pow v. Daris, 1 B. & S. 220; Richardson v. Dunn, 8 C. B., N. S., 655.

that he has authority in that capacity to contract, it was held that the costs of a Chancery suit instituted by plaintiff in reliance upon the agent's representation of authority might be recovered.

General rule as to remoteness of damage stated

Upon the whole we may conclude, that, under ordinary circumstances, loss recoverable for breach of contract must be such as would naturally, i. e., in a great majority of similar cases, flow from the breach alleged (l) ;—that, if there were special circumstances in the case, which would have made the loss complained of a reasonable and natural consequence of the breach, it must, in general, be shown that such special circumstances were communicated to or known by the defendants (m).

Interest,
when recoverable.

Interest is in certain cases recoverable as damages by statute, in other cases at common law (n). The stat. 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, s. 28, enacts, "That, upon all debts or sums certain, payable at a certain time or otherwise, the jury, on the trial of any issue or on any inquisition of damages, may, if they shall think fit, allow interest to the creditor, at a rate not exceeding the current rate of interest, from the time when such debts or sums certain were payable, if such debts or sums be payable by virtue of some written instrument at a certain time ; or, if payable otherwise, then from the time when demand of payment shall have been made in writing, so as such demand shall give notice to the debtor that interest will be claimed from the date of such demand until (l) Collard v. South Eastern R. Co., 7 H. & N. 79 ; Smeed v. Foord, 1 E. & E. 602.

Where goods are delivered to a carrier to be carried from A. to B., and are lost, their owner is entitled to recover the value of the goods at B. : Rice v. Bazendale, 7 H. & N. 96.

(m) Judgm., Hadley v. Bazendale, 9 Exch. 356. In the argument in this case many decisions are collected in regard to remoteness of damage.

As to the measure of damages in actions of contract see, further, the Law Mag. for May, 1855.

(n) See Mayne Dama., Chap. 4.

the term of payment (o): provided that interest shall be payable in all cases in which it is now payable by law" (p). Sect. 29 further empowers the jury, on the trial of any issue or on any inquisition of damages, if they shall think fit, to give damages, in the nature of interest, over and above the money recoverable, in all actions on policies of assurance made after the passing of the Act.

The former of these sections, it will be remarked, is permissive merely—not imperative—as regards the allowance of interest. Cases not within its operation are to be still regulated by the common law—under which interest is recoverable only in the following cases (q):—

1. By the usage of trade, ex. gr., on bills of exchange (r) or promissory notes, or on an agreement to pay for goods, &c., by bill or note (s), or on a guarantie for the due payment of a bill (t). On a bond (u) also, and on a mortgage, interest is recoverable (x).

(o) See Mowatt v. Lord Londesborough, 3 E. & B. 307, 386; S. C. (in Error), 4 Id. 1.

(p) See Harper v. Williams, 4 Q. B. 219, 234; Attwood v. Taylor, 1 M. & Gr. 279, 332; Edwards v. Great Western R. C., 11 C. B. 588, 650.

(q) See per Lord Ellenborough, C. J., Havilland v. Bowerbank, 1 Camp. 50; Page v. Newman, 9 B. & C. 378, 381; per Lord Mansfield, C. J., Edwards v. Hopkins, 1 Dougl. 376; Calton v. Bragg, 15 East, 223, 226.

(r) See Byles on Bills, 10th ed., Chap. 22; Gibbs v. Fremont, 9 Exch. 25; Hutton v. Ward, 15 Q. B. 26; Florence v. Jennings, 2 C. B., N. S., 454; Florence v. Drayson, 1 C. B., N. S., 584. See Suse v. Pompe, 8 C. B., N. S., 538; stat. 18 & 19 Vict. c. 67, s. 1—under this section interest is recoverable on the bill or note in respect of which the writ was issued.

In Keene v. Keene, 3 C. B., N. S.,

144, 145, Willes, J., observes, with respect to a bill payable with interest at a specified rate, "Until the maturity of the bill the interest is a debt: after its maturity the interest is given as damages, at the discretion of the jury"—citing Gibbs v. Fremont, supra.

(s) Davis v. Smyth, 8 M. & W. 399; Farr v. Ward, 3 Id. 25; Marshall v. Poole, 13 East, 98, 101; Middleton v. Gill, 4 Taunt. 298; Porter v. Palegrave, 2 Camp. 472; Becher v. Jones, Id. 428, n.; Boyce v. Warburton, Id. 480.

(t) Ackermann v. Ehrensperger, 16 M. & W. 99.

(u) Farquhar v. Morris, 7 T. R. 124. See Hogan v. Page, 1 B. & P. 337.

(x) Price v. Great Western R. C., 16 M. & W. 244; Morgan v. Jones, 8 Exch. 620; Wms. Saunds., 6th ed., vol. 1, p. 201, n. (r).

2. Where there has been an express interest (y). "If," says Tindal, C. J. (z), "it be of the party to obtain interest, it is always in insert in the contract an express stipulation to

3. Where, from the course of dealing between contract to pay interest may be implied (a).

In taking leave of the subject of Contracts, some brief concluding observations may not be deemed superfluous. The importance of a knowledge of the higher classes of contracts, and of the qualities which attach to judgments of our Courts of Record or to instruments under seal, will, I apprehend, readily be conceded.—And the necessity of having an acquaintance with the characteristics of simple contracts (to a consideration of which the foregoing pages have principally been devoted) will be at least equally obvious, when we reflect that mercantile engagements, almost without exception, belong to this, the lowest class of contracts—that transactions such as these, ranging from the simplest to the most elaborate and important, depend often upon nothing more than the hastily written and peculiarly worded correspondence of trading firms, separated by either of the great oceans from each other: bearing this in mind, we shall perforce admit, that not merely to the professed lawyer, but to the layman, some considerable familiarity with the elements—with the principles—of our law merchant is essential. In (y) Attwood v. Taylor, 1 M. & Gr. 279; Orme v. Galloway, 9 Exch. 544; Francis v. Wilson, Ry. & Moo. 105; Doman v. Dibden, Id. 381.

(z) Foster v. Weston, 6 Bing. 714.

(a) Nichol v. Thompson, 1 Camp. 52, n., and cases there cited: Petre v. Duncombe, 20 L. J., Q. B., 242; Denton v. Rodie, 3 Camp. 496; Gwynn v. Godby, 4 Taunt. 846.

As to levying interest under writs of execution, see Reg. Prac., H. T. 1853, reg. 76, 77.

As to interest on writs of error, see 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, s. 30; Reg. Pl. Trin. T., 1853, reg. 25. See Levy v. Langridge, 4 M. & W. 337; Hooper v. Lane, 6 H. L. Ca. 444.

As to allowing compound interest, see Fergusson v. Fyffe, 8 Cl. & F. 121.

the ordinary affairs of life, also, in the constantly recurring cycle of daily or familiar events, as well the most momentous & the most trivial compacts known to law, are authenticated neither by seal nor by record. The purchase of necessities in a shop, and the solemn contract of marriage, which is founded on the consent of the contracting parties—evidenced per verba de præsenti,—seem to be, in strictness, alike referable to the class of simple contracts.

In proportion, however, to its importance, is the difficulty of acquiring the knowledge here alluded to. Not only are causes of action ex contractu almost infinitely varied, but the matters of defence pleadable in such actions are equally diversified ;—whilst statutory provisions, relative to the one and to the other are extremely numerous. Hence the learning applicable to contracts can but be acquired gradually—by experience—and practice. In connection with the lowest, as with the best authenticated contract—with that which is oral as with that which is founded on record or on Act of Parliament (b),—points of perplexity and doubt will suggest themselves to the inquirer. The great principles, however, which support this entire subject are, at all events, surely traced and ascertained, and the better they are understood, illustrated by a comparison of decided cases, tested and examined, the more will they be found consistent with common sense—with sound policy—with the dictates of wisdom and of justice.

(b) Ante, pp. 260, 267.

BOOK III.

TORTS.

CHAPTER I.

TORTS GENERALLY—THEIR NATURE AND CLASSIFICATION.

A TORT (a) is described in statutory language (b) as ‘a wrong, independent of contract.’ It involves the idea, if not of some infraction of law, at all events of some infringement or withholding of a legal right—or some violation of a legal duty (c).

An action of tort will lie for a direct injury to the person or property, for the wrongful taking or conversion of goods, for consequential damage: the right of action for a tort being founded 1. on the invasion of some legal right (d); or 2. on the violation of some duty towards the public productive of damage to the plaintiff (e); or 3. on the infraction of some private duty or obligation productive likewise of damage to the complainant (f).

The importance of having a correct perception of the na-

(a) “Tortus”—damnum, injustitia, violentia alicui illata: Ducange Gloss. ad verb. “As right signifieth law, so tort, crooked or wrong, signifieth injury:” 2 Inst. 56.

(b) See the C. L. Proc. Act, 1852.

(c) Co. Litt. 158 b.; 3 Bla. Com. 118.

The word “duty” above used signifies “that which a person owes to another or to the public generally—that which a person is bound by any legal obligation to do or to perform;” see Webster Dict. ad verb. Although the above definition would include within the term “duty,” the obligation to pay a debt or to perform an agreement, it is not usual to employ this term in reference to obligations purely ex contractu.

(d) Post, pp. 643-646.

(e) Post, pp. 646-661.

(f) Post, pp. 661 et seq.

ture of a right of action founded upon tort or 'wrong independent of contract,' will justify a brief examination of each of the three classes of cases above specified.

First, then, as to the class of cases in which complaint is made of the invasion of some legal right—(that is, of some legal right actually in the possession of the complainant, and to the enjoyment whereof he is entitled,)—ex. gr., where wrong is done to the person or reputation—where goods are tortiously converted, or a direct injury is done to property (g). Here, a plaintiff, in order to entitle himself to damages, may be called upon to show two things—the existence of the right alleged (h), and its violation (i).

Rights of action ex delicto.

Class I. action for invasion of right.

Now, the existence of the right alleged will have to be established by reference to legal principles. It sometimes admits of easy proof, as in the case of an action of trespass for taking away goods, where the plaintiff would have a prima facie case sufficient to entitle him to recover, upon merely proving his own possession of the goods, and that they were tortiously taken out of it by the defendant; the reason of this being, the bare possession gives a right as against a wrong-doer, for the invasion whereof an action of trespass will lie (k).

So, we have already seen (l) that trespass will lie for a mere entry upon land in possession of another, although, if an action be brought by a reversioner for damage done to his reversionary interest in land demised, a foundation

(g) As to the various species of actions ex delicto, post, Chaps. 2-4.

(h) In Rogers v. Dutt, 13 Moo. P. C. C. 209, 216, the judgment of the Supreme Court at Calcutta proceeded expressly on the ground that a right had become vested in the plaintiff and had been invaded by the defendant; this judgment, however, was reversed by the Privy Council. The case may usefully be consulted in regard to the ingredients in a right of action ex delicto.

(i) "An action for a wrong involves a correlative right:" per Erle, J., Laing v. Whaley, 3 H. & N. 678; S. C., 2 Id. 476.

(k) Per Ashhurst, J., Smith v. Milles, 1 T. R. 475, 480; post, Chap. 3, sect. 2. See also Imperial Gas Light, &c., Co. v. London Gas Light Co., 10 Exch. 39.

(l) Ante, p. 88; Judgm., Ryan v. Clark, 14 Q. B. 71.

for the claim to damages would have to be laid by showing that the injury complained of was of so durable a kind as necessarily to be productive of damage to his estate (m).

But, further, the existence of a right may have to be proved by an appeal to elementary principles and by deductions ingeniously drawn from them, by a discussion of general doctrines of public policy, or by embarrassing enquiries touching the intention of the Legislature. In support of this remark, I would refer to the great case of Ashby v. White, formerly abstracted (n)—to the equally important judgment in Semayne's case (o), illustrating the fundamental maxim of our law, that 'every man's house is his castle' (p),—to the opinions of the Judges, and the decision of the House of Lords, in Jefferys v. Boosey (q), where the long vexed question as to the existence of copyright at common law was re-agitated, and an opinion in the negative regarding it was expressed (r)—to all those numerous cases (some of which will have to be hereafter noticed) wherein the existence of a right has been found to depend upon the interpretation of the statute law, and the unravelling of its perplexities (s).

In the class of cases now under consideration, it will be noticed, that proof of actual damage has not been specified as requisite to entitle a complainant to recover. Many instances confirmatory of this remark—that an action may lie for the invasion of a right without proof of special damage—were cited in a former chapter (t) ; where, inter alia, refer-

(m) Post, Chap. 3, s. 1.

(n) Ante, p. 85.

(o) 5 Rep. 91.

(p) Leg. Max., 4th ed., p. 417.

(q) 4 H. L. Ca. 815.

(r) See particularly, per Lord Brougham, 4 H. L. Ca. 904 ; per Lord St. Leonards, Id. 77.

(s) See, for instance, Ellwell v. Proprietors of the Birmingham Canal Nav., 3 H. L. Ca. 812.

(t) Ante, Book I., Chap. 3, pp. 84 et seq. See Gambart v. Sumner, 5 H. & N. 5.

In Chamberlaine v. Chester and Birkenhead R. C., 1 Exch. 870, 876-7, ence was made to decisions which establish that the fraudulent use and appropriation of a trade mark is, per se, actionable (u).

A right of action in trover (and the same remark seems applicable to trespass de bonis asportatis and to replevin), falls, it is conceived, within the class of rights of action ex delicto under our notice. True it is, that in trover the recovery of substantial damages is in practice usually sought. An action, however, in this form is in most cases brought "to establish a mere right of property" (x), in other words, to establish the fact that a right has been invaded or withheld.

To the class under notice is also referable the right of action for a libel or for slander where the words spoken are actionable per se; the right of action for words actionable only when productive of special damage offering an exception to we read that "where a statute prohibits the doing of a particular act affecting the public, no person has a right of action against another merely because he has done the prohibited act. It is incumbent on the party complaining to allege and prove that the doing of the act prohibited has caused him some special damage, some peculiar injury beyond that which he may be supposed to sustain in common with the rest of the Queen's subjects by an infringement of the law. But where the act prohibited is obviously prohibited for the protection of a particular party, there it is not necessary to allege special damage." The reason on which this rule is founded seems to be, that inasmuch as the statute recognises the right of the plaintiff, the breach of that recognised right gives him a title to sue without showing special damage, in accordance with the principle stated in the text.

(u) In Marsh v. Billings, 7 Cush.

(U.S.) R. 322, it was held that a coach proprietor running carriages between a railway station and a town has no right falsely to hold himself out as being in the employment or under the patronage of a particular hotel keeper in such town, by affixing to his carriages, &c., the name of the hotel, this being done to the detriment of some other party lawfully entitled to the privilege in question. And it was further held that the representation thus falsely made for the purpose of enticing passengers from the plaintiff's carriages would be a fraud on him, and a violation of his rights, for which an action would lie without proof of actual or specific damage.

See also Newhall v. Ireson, 8 Cush. (U. S.) R. 595; Lawson v. Bank of London, 18 C. B. 92.

The fraudulent user of a trade mark is constituted a misdemeanor by stat. 25 & 26 Vict. c. 88.

(x) Sedgw. Dams., 2nd ed., p. 476.

the class in question (resulting, as it would seem, from an application of the maxim, De minimis non curat lex (z)), in respect of the necessity of proving such special damage in order to sustain the action.

Rights of action ex
delicto.

Class II.
Action for breach of public duty —producing damage.

Secondly. An action ex delicto may be founded on the violation of some public duty (i.e., of some duty towards the public), and consequent damage to the complainant. Now, here three different matters must be proved in order to entitle the plaintiff to a verdict, viz., the existence of the alleged duty—its breach—and damage:—the existence of a public duty may be established either by bringing the facts of the case within the reach and control of some acknowledged doctrine of the common law, or by showing that they are within the words, spirit, or purview of an Act of Parliament.

Let us, under the term “public duty,” include the duty of refraining from doing, as well as that of doing, acts of a particular kind or tendency, and we may then lay down the proposition above stated, thus in a somewhat expanded form—Wherever a duty has to be observed towards the public by an individual, and another is specially injured in consequence of the non-observance or non-discharge of such duty, or through misfeasance or malfeasance in its discharge, an action will lie at suit of the latter party against the former (a): the gist of such action being negligence producing damage (b).

(z) Leg. Max., 4th ed., p. 143; post, Chap. 2.

(a) See 3 Bla. Com. 165.

(b) “There is no absolute or intrinsic negligence; it is always relative to some circumstances of time, place, or person:” per Bramwell, B., Degg v. Midland R. C., 1 H. & N. 781, and in Ruck v. Williams, 3 Id. 318. “Negligence may be either direct or arising from circumstances:” per Watson, B.,

Hipkins v. Birmingham Gas Light Co., 5 H. & N. 87; S. C., 6 Id. 250.

“What constitutes ‘gross negligence’ is always excessively difficult either to define or, by way of anticipation, to illustrate:” per Lord Cranworth, Collyer v. Finch, 5 H. L. Ca. 924.

As to evidence of negligence, see Great Western R. C. of Canada v. Braid, 1 Moo. P. C. C., N. S., 101; Toomey v. London, Brighton, and Public duty

—at common law.

As simple illustrations of the practical working of this proposition, I may refer to the cases below cited, which establish, that—wherever an instrument, dangerous in its existing state, and calculated to inflict damage on those who may come in contact with it, is so placed as to be likely to cause bodily hurt, the person thus placing it is liable, if hurt ensues, to the party injured (c).

Let us pause here for a moment to notice one characteristic of the class of cases now under review. The breach of a public duty causing damage to an individual, in truth, combines two tortious ingredients, which are, according to circumstances, more or less clearly distinguishable from each other—the wrong done to the public, and the wrong done to the individual. That which is, in strictness, correlative to a public duty is a right enforceable at suit of the public. But, then, the general rule of law is well settled, that an individual cannot enforce a public right, or redress a public

South Coast R. C., 3 C. B., N. S., 146; Cornman v. Eastern Counties R. C., 4 H. & N. 781; Roberts v. Great Western R. C., 4 C. B., N. S., 506; Vaughan v. Taff Vale R. C., 5 H. & N. 679, reversing S. C., 3 Id. 743; Fremantle v. London and North Western R. C., 10 C. B., N. S., 89; Blyth v. Birmingham Waterworks Co., 11 Exch. 781; Manchester, &c., R. C., app., Fullarton, resp., 14 C. B., N. S., 54.

"Negligence alone without damage does not create a cause of action:" per Watson, B., Duckworth v. Johnson, 4 H. & N. 659.

(c) Dixon v. Bell, 5 M. & S. 198; Scott v. Shepherd, cited ante, p. 95; Gilbertson v. Richardson, 5 C. B. 502; Bird v. Holbrook, 4 Bing. 628 (with which compare Hott v. Wilkes, 3 B. & Ald. 304; Jordin v. Crump, 8 M. & W. 782; Deane v. Clayton, 7 Taunt.

489; Wootton v. Dawkins, 2 C. B., N. S., 412); Judgm., 6 Exch. 767-8.

In Vaughan v. Taff Vale R. C., 5 H. & N. 685, Cockburn, C. J., observes, "Although it may be true that if a person keeps an animal of known dangerous propensities, or a dangerous instrument, he will be responsible to those who are thereby injured independently of any negligence in the mode of dealing with the animal or using the instrument; yet when the legislature has sanctioned and authorised the use of a particular thing, and it is used for the purpose for which it was authorised, and every precaution has been observed to prevent injury, the sanction of the legislature carries with it this consequence, that if damage results from the use of such thing, independently of negligence, the party using it is not responsible."

injury by suit in his own name (d). Where he suffers wrong or sustains damage in common with other members of the community, no personal right of action thence accrues. The private grievance is merged in that of the public, and the remedy (if any exists) will be by public prosecution, in order that the rights of the public may thus be vindicated. Even where one person sustains damage in common with the public, and, from the circumstances in which he happens to be placed, suffers more frequently or more severely than others, he will not, on that account, have, as of course, a separate right of action. It is only where he suffers some special damage, differing in kind from that which is common to others, that a personal remedy accrues to him (e).

In every case belonging to the class now under consideration will be found as an ingredient some nonfeasance, misfeasance, or malfeasance of a public duty—constituting pro tanto an offence (not necessarily indictable) against the public—also an injury productive of special damage to an individual.

Thus, in Ellis v. The Sheffield Gas Consumers' Co. (f), the action was brought against a registered joint-stock company, who had contracted with an individual for the laying down of their gas pipes in the town of Sheffield, without having obtained any special powers for that purpose. It appeared, that, in the course of making the necessary excavations, a heap of stones had been left in one of the streets, over which the plaintiff, whilst passing in the dark, fell—thus sustaining damage. The declaration charged, that the (d) Ante, p. 96.

(e) See Brainard v. Connecticut River R. Co., 7 Cush. (U. S.) R. 510, 511.

(f) 2 E. & B. 767; Blake v. Thirst, 2 H. & C. 20; Hole v. Sittingbourne and Sheerness R. Co., 6 H. & N. 488; (distinguished in Gray v. Pullen, 32

L. J., Q. B., 169;) Bulter v. Hunter, 7 H. & N. 826. See Reg. v. Longton Gas Co., 29 L. J., M. C., 118; Overton v. Freeman, 11 C. B. 867; Gayford v. Nicholls, 9 Exch. 702; Clothier v. Webster, 12 C. B., N. S., 790.

defendants had committed a nuisance in obstructing, without due powers, the public thoroughfare; and the plaintiff, having obtained a verdict, it was contended, that the action should have been brought against the contractor whose workmen had caused the damage, and not against the company; but, Lord Campbell, C. J., observed, this "is simply the case of persons employing another to do an unlawful act, and a damage to the plaintiff from the doing of such unlawful act (g). We have the injuria et damnum (h), which constitute a ground of action." Again—in Barnes v. Ward (i), the question was—whether or not there is a duty cast upon the owner of a house and premises adjoining a public footway to fence them off in such a manner as to prevent damage to any one lawfully passing along the public way, who might, otherwise, by diverging accidentally from his track, owing to the state in which the premises chanced to be, meet with an accident? The Court held that such a duty or obligation is, under the circumstances named, cast upon the owner of property; and that its non-observance will render him liable for damage caused thereby, the ground of this decision being, that the excavation (which caused the damage complained of) was a public nuisance (k). In each of the foregoing cases we find, as elements in the right of

(g) See, also, per Lord Campbell, C. J., Sadler v. Henlock, 4 E. & B. 577, citing Ellis v. Sheffield Gas Consumers' Co., supra; per Williams, J., Pickard v. Smith, 10 C. B., N. S., 480.

(h) Ante, pp. 74 et seq.

(i) 9 C. B. 392; Judgm., 8 M. & W. 788. With Barnes v. Ward, supra, compare Corby v. Hill, 4 C. B., N. S., 556; Stone v. Jackson, 16 C. B. 199; Chapman v. Rothwell, E. B. & E. 168; Hounsell v. Smyth, 7 C. B., N. S., 731; Bolch v. Smith, 7 H. & N. 736, 744; Groucott v. Williams, 32

L. J., Q. B., 237; per Byles, J., Witherley v. Regent's Canal Co., 12 C. B., N. S., 6; Robbins v. Jones, 15 C. B., N. S., 221; Binks v. South Yorkshire R. Co., 3 B. & S. 244; Fisher v. Prowse, 2 B. & S. 770. See Cornwell v. Metropolitan Commissioners of Sewers, 10 Exch. 771, 774.

(k) Hardcastle v. South Yorkshire Railway and River Dun Co., 4 H. & N. 67, 70; Bucks v. South Yorkshire and River Dun Co., 3 B. & S. 244, 252, 254; per Williams, J., and Keating, J., Hounsell v. Smyth, 7 C. B., N. S., 742, 745.

action, a breach of public duty and a private wrong producing damage (l).

As throwing light upon the subject before us, Brown v. Mallett (m), and the elaborate judgment there delivered by Mr. Justice Maule, demand careful examination. The question raised in that case was as follows:—What is the duty of the person who had the possession and control of a vessel, which, without any fault of his, has, whilst in his possession, sunk, so as to obstruct a public navigable river, with respect to vessels navigating the river after his possession and control have ceased? “There seems no doubt,” observed the Court, “that it is the duty of a person using a public navigable river, with a vessel of which he is possessed and has the control and management (n), to use reasonable skill and care to prevent mischief to other vessels; and that, in case of a collision arising from his negligence, he must sustain, without compensation, the damage occasioned to his own (l) Pickard v. Smith, 10 C. B., N. S., 470, 479.

Land may, however, be dedicated to the public as a highway, subject to inconvenience or risk arising from its existing condition: Fisher v. Prowse, 2 B. & S. 770. See Morant v. Chamberlin, 6 H. & N. 541.

(m) 5 C. B. 599; Submarine Telegraph Co. v. Dickson, 15 C. B., N. S., 759; per Williams, J., 13 C. B., N. S., 784; per Martin, B., Gibbs v. Trustees of Liverpool Docks, 1 H. & N. 451, and in S. C. (reversed in Error), 3 Id. 175-6; recognised in Mersey Dock Board v. Penhallow, 7 H. & N. 329; The King v. Watts, 2 Esp. 675; Parnaby v. Lancaster Canal Co., 11 Ad. & E. 238; Hancock v. York, Newcastle and Berwick R. C., 10 C. B. 348; White v. Crisp, 10 Exch. 312; White v. Phillips, 15 C. B., N. S., 245. See also Curd v. Case, 5 C. B.

622.

As to the liability of commissioners or trustees acting under the statute law for negligence and breach of duty, see Mersey Dock Board v. Penhallow, 7 H. & N. 329; Holliday v. St. Leonards, Shoreditch, 11 C. B., N. S., 192, and cases there cited; Thompson v. North Eastern R. C., 2 B. & S. 106, 119; Walker v. Goe, 4 H. & N. 350; S. C., 3 Id. 395, and cases there cited; Ruck v. Williams, 3 H. & N. 308; cited Judgm., 1 Moo. P. C. C., N. S., 119; Manley v. St. Helen's Can. and R. C., 2 H. & N. 840; Cane v. Chapman, 5 Ad. & E. 647, cited per Jervis, C. J., Bogg v. Pearse, 10 C. B. 541; Southampton, &c., Bridge Co. v. Board of Health of Southampton, 8 E. & B. 801, 807.

(n) See, per Watson, B., Manley v. St. Helen's Can. and R. C., supra.

vessel, and is liable to pay compensation for that sustained by another navigated with due skill and care. And this liability is the same whether his vessel be in motion or stationary, floating or aground, under water or above it; in all these circumstances the vessel may continue to be in his possession, and under his management and control; and, supposing it to be so, and a collision with another vessel to occur from the improper manner in which one of the two is managed, the owner of the vessel properly managed is entitled to recover damages from the owner of that which was improperly managed. This duty of using reasonable skill and care for the safety of other vessels is incident to the possession and control of the vessel. Subject to this obligation, the owner has a right, while his vessel is afloat, to proceed in any direction and to remain at any place; and when it is aground, whether sunk or not, to remain as long as the occasions of his voyage require. Of the existence of these rights and of these duties, so long as the possession and control of the vessel continue in the same person, there seems to be no doubt. Nor does there seem to be any doubt, that, if these were transferred to another person, the rights and the duties would also be transferred to him, and the original owner would cease to be entitled to or bound by them." A person, however, may cease to have the possession and control of a vessel, although they are not transferred to any other person, ex. gr., by some casualty of navigation (as in the case sub judice)—what then are the rights and obligations of the owner? Assuming that the loss of the vessel arose from unavoidable accident—that the owner is wholly blameless in regard to it, and that there are no special circumstances casting upon him a continuing liability, it seems clear that he is not compellable to remove the obstruction to the navigation caused by the sunken vessel, nor even to take measures for diminishing the danger arising from it. Inasmuch, then, as an indictment would not lie, under the circumstances stated, for the danger and impediment to the public, no action would be maintainable for particular damage resulting from the obstruction in question to an individual. The duty of the defendant (if it existed at all) would be of a public nature; and the plaintiff, in order to succeed, would have to show a breach of public duty as well as special damage to himself (o).

In any such case the declaration must contain allegations of matter of fact raising the duty for breach of which coupled with damage the plaintiff sues; any allegation of duty, however, is "useless where the declaration is insufficient, and superfluous when sufficient without it" (p). Various recent cases which have given rise to interesting discussions respecting legal duties are cited infra (q).

Wherever, then, an action is brought for damage caused by breach of a public duty, the damage, and not the breach of duty, is that for which the complainant sues—his object being,—not to vindicate a right on behalf of the public, but—to recover compensation for a wrong done to himself. Between the public and the private wrong, concurring in a cause of action such as now alluded to, the distinction should carefully be traced. The mode of tracing it may be illustrated by Couling v. Coxe (r), where the action was in case against a witness for not obeying a subpœna; and the Court observed, "that, in such an action, brought for a

(o) See Judgm., 5 C. B. 620.

(p) Per Maule, J., 5 C. B. 615, adopted Judgm., Metcalfe v. Hetherington, 11 Exch. 270; S. C., 5 H. & N. 719; as to which case see Judgm., 3 H. & N. 175-6; per Williams, J., Brownlow v. Metropolitan Board of Works, 13 C. B., N. S., 784; per Crompton, J., Mersey Dock Board v. Penhallow, 7 H. & N. 336.

(q) Southcote v. Stanley, 1 H. & N. 247, which "stands entirely upon the relation of host and guest, and was decided upon this principle, that one who chooses to become a guest cannot complain of the insufficiency of the accommodation afforded him:" per Williams, J., Corby v. Hill, 4 C. B., N. S., 565-6; Hill v. Balls, 2 H. & N. 299; Dalton v. Denton, 1 C. B., N. S., 672. Et vide per Pollock, C. B., Abraham v. Reynolds, 5 H. & N. 148.

(r) 6 C. B. 703.

breach of duty—not arising out of a contract between the plaintiff and the defendant (s), but—for disobeying the order of a competent authority,—the existence of actual damage or loss is essential to the action,—as the law will not imply a loss to the plaintiff from mere disobedience to the subpoena (t). In other words, the law will here discriminate between the breach of the public duty and the personal damage, which form the component elements of the complete right of action. In resolving the question, whether or not an action under the circumstances supposed is maintainable, the Court has to direct its attention as well to the private damage as to the contempt or public offence; whereas, on motion for an attachment, it has to consider the latter only. “To found a motion for an attachment against a witness for disobeying a subpoena, it must be shown that he has wilfully abstained from attending in pursuance thereof, or that he has in some way treated the process of the Court with contempt” (u). Should the party subpoenaed succeed in purging himself of the alleged contempt, he will still be liable to an action for any damage which the plaintiff may have sustained in consequence of his non-attendance at Nisi Prius; and in support of such action there will yet remain, as an ingredient, a wrong towards the public in disobeying the process of the Court (u). Not only in the case above put does the right of action admit of satisfactory analysis, but in other cases falling within the class now under notice a similar process may generally, without difficulty, be pursued.

In the examples latterly presented, the right of action has been founded on the breach of a public duty, existing at common law, productive of damage to the plaintiff. A (s) See Yeatman v. Dempsey, 9 C. B., N. S., 881; S. C., 7 Id. 628.

(t) Judgm., 6 C. B. 718-9; Mullett v. Hunt, 1 Cr. & M. 752; Needham v. Fraser, 1 C. B. 815. See Wade v.

Simeon, 2 C. B. 548, 566.

(u) Marshall v. York, Newcastle, and Berwick R. Co., 11 C. B. 398, 403, 404.

Statutory
public duty.

public duty may also be imposed, in part or wholly, by the statute law; when this is so, the precise nature and extent of the statutory duty must of course be determined by reference to the words of the Act creating it, as stated at p. 646, and as illustrated by cases below cited (x).

Lord Holt indeed lays down (y), that "wherever a statute enacts anything, or prohibits anything for the advantage of any person, that person shall have remedy to recover the advantage given him, or to have satisfaction for the injury done him, contrary to law, by the same statute; for it would be a fine thing to make a law by which one has a right, but no remedy but in equity" (z)—which seems equivalent to saying, that, "when a statute gives a right, then, although in express terms it has not given a remedy, the remedy which by law is properly applicable to that right follows as an incident" (a).

The remark of Lord Holt, above cited, may assist in removing any preliminary difficulty which might be felt in regard to certain enactments which impose a duty, but do not specify a remedy or penalty for its breach. The decision of the Court of Queen's Bench in Couch v. Steel (b) is important, as showing that the mere imposition of a penalty for the breach of a statutory duty will not necessarily deprive an individual injured thereby of an action ex delicto for damages. The question there arose with reference to the statute 7 & 8 Vict. c. 112, s. 18, which enacts "that every (x) Hilcoat v. Archbishop of Canterbury, 10 C. B. 327; Robinson v. Gell, 12 C. B. 191; General Steam Nav. Co. v. Morrison, 13 C. B. 581; Morrison v. General Steam Nav. Co., 8 Exch. 733; General Steam Nav. Co. v. Mann, 14 C. B. 127.

(y) Anon., 6 Mod. 27.

(z) "Whenever an Act gives a right, it means to give a legal remedy, and not to put the party to the extraordinary remedy of a Court of equity:" Mitchell v. Knott, 1 Sim. 499.

(a) Per Maule, B., Braithwaite v. Skinner, 5 M. & W. 327. See, also, under the maxim Ubi jus ibi remedium, Leg. Max., 4th ed., p. 191.

(b) 3 E. & B. 402. In connection with the first count of the declaration in this case, see Gibson v. Small, 4 H. L. Ca. 370, 404. Et vide per Martin, B., 7 H. & N. 772.

ship navigating between the United Kingdom and any place out of the same, shall have and keep constantly on board a sufficient supply of medicines and medicaments, suitable to accidents and diseases arising on sea voyages" according to a certain scale issued by the Admiralty. For default in fulfilment of the duty thus created a penalty is, by the section just cited, imposed. The plaintiff, however, sued for special damage to himself thence resulting, and the action so brought was held to be maintainable, by force of the following reasons: the duty created by the above Act, being one of a public nature, the defaulter would, at common law, be subject to an indictment for a breach of it; the remedy by indictment, however, is impliedly taken away by the provision in the Act imposing a penalty; there was, nevertheless, beyond the public wrong, a special and particular damage sustained by the plaintiff, by reason of the breach of duty by the defendant, for which he could have no remedy, unless an action on the case at his suit were maintainable. "If, indeed," says Lord Campbell, C. J., "the performance of a new duty, created by Act of Parliament, is enforced by a penalty recoverable by the party grieved by the non-performance, there is no other remedy than that given by the Act, either for the public or the private wrong; but, by the penalty given in the Act now in question (7 & 8 Vict. c. 112), compensation for private special damage seems not to have been contemplated. The penalty is recoverable in case of a breach of the public duty, though no damage may actually have been sustained by anybody; and no authority has been cited to us, nor are we aware of any, in which it has been held, that, in such a case as the present, the common law right to maintain an action in respect of a special damage, resulting from the breach of a public duty (whether such duty exists at common law or is created by statute), is taken away by reason of a penalty recoverable by a common informer being annexed as a punishment for the non-performance of the public duty" (c), such latter process being applicable, even where no actual damage is sustained by any one.

The judgment in Couch v. Steel, read in connection with the facts there appearing, might of itself almost suffice to illustrate the nature of a statutory public duty; torts, however, being in kind exceedingly diversified, and some familiarity with their leading characteristics being essential, it may be proper to offer some further explanatory remarks upon this subject (d).

To commence, then, with Fawcett v. The York and North Midland R. C. (e)—that was an action on the case against the company just named, the declaration in which charged, ~~that, under certain Acts of Parliament, the defendants were~~ required to keep closed the gates leading from an adjoining highway on to their railway, so as to prevent cattle or horses passing along the road from entering thereupon, save and except at such times as the gates were necessarily open for the purpose of allowing carriages and cattle, &c., to cross the line. The breach alleged was, that the defendants, "disregarding their duty and the statutes in that behalf, did not maintain good and sufficient gates across each end of the said highway at the point where the same was crossed by the railway," and did not keep the gates across the said highway at that point shut and closed, but omitted to do so during long spaces of time, and when the gates were not required to be open for other purposes; such being the gravamen of the charge, the damage alleged was, that certain horses belonging to the plaintiff, and at the time of the happening of the alleged wrongful act lawfully being on the highway in (c) Judgm., 3 E. & B. 413 (distinguishing Stevens v. Jeacocke, 11 Q. B. 731).

See St. Pancras v. Battersbury, 2 C. B., N. S., 477 (citing Shepherd v. Hills, 11 Exch. 55); Kennet and Avon Canal Nav. v. Witherington, 18 Q. B. 531; Boyce v. Higgins, 14 C. B. 1.

(d) See also Cowley v. Mayor, &c., of Sunderland, 6 H. & N. 565.

(e) 16 Q. B. 610.

question, strayed from thence on to the railway, and were there run down and killed by a train of carriages.

Now, it appeared in evidence that the plaintiff's horses had escaped from an adjacent field belonging to him on to the highway, and an issue was accordingly raised on the record, as to whether or not the horses could be said to have been "lawfully" upon the highway in question, before passing through the gate belonging to and under the control of the company. The Court of Queen's Bench, however, in the first place, thought, that, as against the defendants, the horses were lawfully on the highway, and, this point being disposed of, further held, that the railway company were bound and required to keep the gate in question shut at all times, except those specified in their Act; and that, having been guilty of a breach of their duty in this behalf, and having thus occasioned damage to the plaintiff, they were legally compellable to make it good. In this case, accordingly, the gist of the action was the wrongful breach of a statutory public duty cast on the defendants, coupled with consequential damage to the complainant.

With the preceding case should be compared Ricketts v. The East and West India Docks, &c., R. C. (f). That was an action for damage done to sheep of the plaintiff, which, straying from his land on to the defendants' railway, were there killed. The declaration alleged that it was the duty of the defendants to make and erect a sufficient fence in and upon land taken for the use of the railway, &c., so as to prevent cattle from escaping out of the adjoining lands on to the railway; and the breach averred was the non-observance of this duty. Such being the nature of the charge made, the

(f) 12 C. B. 160; Acc. Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire R. C. v. Wallis, 14 C. B. 213 (citing Bird v. Holbrook, ante, p. 647 (c); and Barnes v. Ward, ante, p. 649); Mid- land R. C. v. Daykin, 17 C. B. 126; Roberts v. Great Western R. C., 4 C. B., N. S., 506; Sharrod v. London and N. W. R. C., 4 Exch. 580.

defendants pleaded, inter alia, as follows :—that, at the time of the occurrence complained of, another railway company, (to wit, the Great Northern), were possessed of the lands adjoining to and abutting on the defendants' line—and that the sheep of the plaintiff, being wrongfully and unlawfully upon such lands, had thence escaped and strayed upon the railway, the plaintiff not being the owner or occupier of those lands. To this plea—the plaintiff demurred; and it was therefore open to him to avail himself as well of any statutory liability imposed on the defendants, as of any negligence or misfeasance on their part at common law. Accordingly, in the first instance, reliance was placed, in his behalf, upon the stat. 8 & 9 Vict. c. 20, s. 68, by which railway companies are bound to make and maintain sufficient fences “for separating the land taken for the use of the railway from the adjoining lands not taken,” and “for preventing the cattle of the owners or occupiers thereof from straying thereout,” &c. This section of the Act, however, was held not to apply under the circumstances, inasmuch as the plaintiff was not the owner or occupier of the adjoining land. The plaintiff was consequently obliged to fall back upon his rights at common law, and to contend, amongst other things, that the defendants, carrying on a dangerous trade, were bound to exercise it with more than ordinary caution, so as not to do damage to the public.—To this argument it was answered, however, that negligence was not alleged, and that at common law the company were only bound to keep their fences in repair, as against the proprietors of the adjoining lands, and not as against the plaintiff, whose sheep were wrongfully thereupon (g).

Again—under the stat. 1 & 2 Vict. c. 98., the public duty was imposed upon a railway company of conveying (and therefore of conveying safely) officers of the post-office, in charge of the mails and letter bags transmitted along their line ; through negligence in the performance of this duty damage was caused to the plaintiff, an officer so being conveyed ; the company causing it were held to be liable to him for their misfeasance (h).

(g) See Marfell v. South Wales R. C., 8 C. B., N. S., 525; Bessant v. Great Western R. C., Id. 368.

Lastly, upon this part of the subject may be cited Coe v. Platt (i), as forcibly exemplifying the importance of looking narrowly at the language of a statute imposing a public duty before suing for its breach.—There the decision of the Court principally turned on the meaning of the 21st section of the Factory Act (7 & 8 Vict. c. 15), which requires, amongst other things, that “all parts of the mill-gearing in a factory shall be securely fenced,” and that “the said protection to each part shall not be removed while the parts required to be fenced are in motion by the action of the steam-engine, water-wheel or other mechanical power, for any manufacturing process.” The declaration in the case before us stated that the defendants were the occupiers of a building in which steam power was used to work machinery employed in manufacturing cotton, and in part of which building there was certain mill-gearing, being a shaft which was worked and put in motion by the said steam power, yet the defendants disregarded their duty in this, that the shaft was not securely fenced, contrary to the form of the statute, whereby the plaintiff received great bodily injury, &c. On demurrer, the above declaration was held bad, because it did not show that at the time of the accident the shaft which occasioned it was in motion for a “manufacturing process.” The defect thus exposed in the declaration having been amended by inserting in it an allegation, that a certain part of the mill-gearing by which the accident was occasioned was in motion at the time for a manufacturing process, the plaintiff was again defeated upon the following facts: the injury complained of was received from a vertical shaft in motion, but at a time when by its motion it turned no machinery immediately connected with it, either in the room where the plaintiff was, or in any other room, the shaft in question being itself turned by a horizontal shaft communicating with the motive power. Looking at the evidence adduced the Court held, that the shaft, which caused the damage, could not, when it happened, be said to have been in motion for "any manufacturing process," and did not therefore at that time need to be fenced under the provisions of the Factory Act (k).

(h) Collett v. London and N. W. R. C., 16 Q. B. 984. In connection with which case, see Great Northern R. C. v. Harrison, 10 Exch. 376 ; Lygo v. Newbold, 9 Exch. 302. (i) 6 Exch. 752 ; S. C. (in Error), 7 Id. 460.

We may now, I think, conclude that a statutory duty towards the public may consist either in doing, or in abstaining from doing, some particular act—that "if the law casts any duty upon a person, which he refuses or fails to perform, he is answerable in damages to those whom his refusal or failure injures" (l),—that the non-performance of a legal obligation of this kind will not be actionable without special damage (m),—and further, that "where any law requires one to do any act for the benefit of another, or to forbear the doing of that which may be to the injury of another, though no action be given in express terms by the law for the omission or commission, the general rule of law in all such cases is that the party so injured shall have an action" (n): this last proposition being however subject to an important (k) Coe v. Platt, 7 Exch. 923. See Dowell v. Sheppard, 5 E. & B. 856; Caswell v. Worth, Id. 849; 19 & 20 Vict. c. 38.

(l) Per Lord Brougham, Ferguson v. Earl of Kinnoull, 9 Cl. & F. 289.

(m) As to this proposition, see the reasoning, ante, p. 644, n. (l). See, also, Owen v. Legh, 3 B. & Ald. 470 (distinguished in Cort v. Ambergate, &c., R. C., 1 E. & B. 120, where Coleridge, J., observes,—“If a man sells a book in my library without meddling with it, he does me no harm; but if he takes it away and sells it in market overt, I lose my book,” and shall consequently be entitled to redress as against the wrong-doer); Rodgers v. Parker, 18 C. B. 112; Lucas v. Tarelton, 3 H. & N. 116.

(n) Per Lord Holt, C. J., Ashby v. White (ed. 1837), p. 11.

qualification, viz., "that an action will not lie for the infringement of a right created by statute, where another specific remedy for infringement is provided by the same statute" (o), or, as remarked in Doe d. Bishop of Rochester v. Bridges (p), "where an Act creates an obligation and enforces the performance in a specified manner," it holds generally true "that performance cannot be enforced in any other manner" (q).

Thirdly, a right of action ex delicto may be founded on the infraction of some private compact, or of some private duty or obligation, and consequential damage to the complainant.

Rights of action ex delicto.

Class III.
Action for breach of private duty—producing damage.

Any duty must, in strictness, be deemed 'private,' which is to be observed, not towards the community at large, but in relation to one or more of its members. The class of private duties is consequently extremely large; it comprehends duties flowing from contract express or implied, from bailment, from the relation of master and servant, of host and guest (r), of shopkeeper and customer (s), or of landlord and tenant,—from the occupancy of land, &c.; as throwing some light upon the nature of such duties, the authorities infra may be consulted (t).

(o) Judgm., Stevens v. Jeacocke, 11 Q. B. 741 (citing Underhill v. Elliscombe, M'Cl. & Y. 450); Watkins v. Great Northern R. C., 16 Q. B. 961. See Chapman v. Pickersgill, 2 Wils. 146-7.

(p) 1 B. & Ad. 847, 859.

Further, it seems to be true, that, "Where authority is given by the Legislature to do an act, parties injured by the doing of it have no legal remedy, but should appeal to the Legislature:" Pilgrim v. Southampton and Dorchester R. C., 7 C. B. 226.

(q) Ante, p. 644, n. (t).

(r) Southcote v. Stanley, 1 H. & N. 247; cited per Williams, J., Corby v.

Hill, 4 C. B., N. S., 565.

(s) Chapman v. Rothwell, E. B. & E. 116, which "falls within the class of cases where the liability results from an invitation being held out to third persons to go upon the premises" where the injury complained of happens: per Keating, J., Hounsell v. Smyth, 7 C. B., N. S., 740; Bolch v. Smith, 7 H. & N. 736, 744; Groucott v. Williams, 32 L. J., Q. B., 237.

(t) Wood v. Curling, 15 M. & W. 626; S. C., 16 Id. 628; White v. Phillips, 15 C. B., N. S., 245, 254; Cooke v. Wilson, 1 C. B., N. S., 153; Keates v. Earl of Cadogan, 10 C. B. 591; Gott v. Gandy, 2 E. & B. 845;

Now, in any case referable to this class the plaintiff must, in order to sustain his action, be able to prove some kind of contract or obligation out of which the specific duty, with a breach whereof the defendant is charged, will flow in legal contemplation, or he must adduce evidence of facts establishing such a relation between the defendant and himself, that such specific duty will thence result. Further than this, he must, of course, show a breach of the duty thus raised, and consequential damage to himself.

Statutory private duty.

A private, as well as a public (u) duty, may exist by virtue of the statute or of the common law. Thus, it has been held that case will lie against a railway company for acts of wrongful omission of their statutory duty in regard to the transfer of shares, and for wrongfully declaring the same forfeited and selling them (x). "The declaration," said Lord Campbell, C. J., "shows both injuria and damnum. The defendants have been guilty of a wrongful act of omission in not registering the plaintiff's name in their books, and also of a wrongful act of commission in declaring the shares to be forfeited, and in confirming that forfeiture. It is said that the plaintiff could sustain no injury; but he has been deprived of the ordinary privileges of shareholders, and contingently of any profits that might have arisen upon the shares. Those are clearly injuries, for which he has a right to bring an action."

Private duty at common law.

Again—a private duty may exist at common law (y), for breach whereof, coupled with consequential damage, an action will be sustainable (z).—Upon this part of the subject I shall Alston v. Grant, 3 E. & B. 128; Seymour v. Maddox, 16 Q. B. 326; Wilkinson v. Fairrie, 1 H. & C. 633; Brown v. Boorman, 11 Cl. & F. 1; and cases cited post.

(u) Ante, p. 646.

(x) Catchpole v. The Ambergate, &c., R. C., 1 E. & B. 111.

(y) Duties, such as are now alluded to, oftentimes arise by virtue of established maxims of our common law; for instance, the maxim Sic utere tuo ut alienum non lædas, in connection with the rights of vicinage. See Leg. Max., 4th ed., p. 357.

(z) A declaration will, of course, be bad which fails to show that, either by express contract, or by mercantile usage, here offer a few general remarks, which will be applied seriatim to several large and important classes of cases.

Tort flowing from breach of contract.

In the first place it may be convenient to observe, that although tort differs essentially from contract as the foundation of an action (a), it not unfrequently happens that a particular transaction admits of being regarded from two different points of view, so that when contemplated from one of these it presents all the characteristics of a good cause of action ex contractu; and, when regarded from the other, it offers to the pleader's eye sufficient materials whereupon to found an action ex delicto. Thus carriers warrant the transportation and delivery of goods intrusted to them; attornies, surgeons and engineers undertake to discharge their duty with a reasonable amount of skill, and with integrity; and for any neglect or unskilfulness by individuals belonging to one of these professions, a party who has been injured thereby may maintain an action either in tort for the wrong done or in contract at his election (b). In short, to use the words of Lord Campbell, C. J., in Brown v. Boorman (c), wherever there is a contract, and something to be done in the course of the employment which is the subject of that contract,—if there is a breach of a duty in the course of that employment, the plaintiff may recover either in tort or in contract: that is to say, “where there is an employment, which employment itself creates a duty, an action on the case will lie for a breach of that duty, although it may consist in doing something contrary to an agreement made in the course of such employment by the party upon whom the duty is cast” (d).

or from circumstances, the alleged duty was cast on the defendant: Dutton v. Powles, 2 B. & S. 174, 191.

(a) Difficulty may, however, occasionally be felt in determining, on inspection of a declaration, whether it be in contract or in tort: Legge v. Tucker, 1 H. & N. 500; Taitan v. Great Western R. C., 29 L. J., Q. B., 184;

Morgan v. Ravey, 6 H. & N. 265; Corbett v. Packington, 6 B. & C. 268.

(b) See Bartholomew v. Bushnell, 20 Day (U. S.) R. 279, 280; Pozzi v. Shipton, 8 Ad. & E. 963.

(c) 11 Cl. & F. 44.

(d) Per Jervis, C. J., Courtenay v. Earle, 10 C. B. 88.

"Generally speaking," indeed, says Maule, J. (e), "the law has endeavoured to assimilate actions of tort arising out of contract with actions on contracts:" "so that the breach of a contract may be a wrong, in respect of which the party injured may sue in case, instead of suing upon the contract" (f).

Privity—whether necessary in an action ex
delicto.

Now, where the tort complained of thus flows from a contract express or implied, there is manifestly direct privity between the parties. It must not, however, thence be inferred that privity is in general necessary to support an action ex delicto: many of the cases above cited show that it is not so. As establishing the fundamental distinction here adverted to between actions of contract and of tort, the following cases may be instanced:—A. (a stage coach proprietor) contracts with B. to carry his servant (C.), and in so doing is guilty of negligence, which causes bodily hurt to C., and consequent damage, by reason of loss of service, to his master.—Under these circumstances, A. may be sued in an action ex contractu by B., and in an action ex delicto by C.,—privity not being needed to support such latter action, which is founded upon the principle,—that, where a coach proprietor undertakes to convey a passenger, and does so negligently, he is answerable for the consequences (g). In like manner, if a mason contracts to erect a bridge or other work on a public road, and erects it not in accordance with his contract, and so as to be a nuisance to the highway, a third person, who sustains injury by reason of its defective construction, may recover damages from the contractor, who will not be allowed to protect himself from liability by (e) Howard v. Shepherd, 9 C. B. 319.

(f) Per Cresswell, J., 9 C. B. 321.

An action on the case, however, would not lie for a mere breach of contract: Judgm., Woods v. Finnis, 7 Exch. 372.

As illustrating the remark in the text, see the cases cited ante, p. 86. And compare Coggs v. Bernard, 1 Smith L. C., 5th ed., 171, with Corbett v. Packington, 6 B & C. 268.

(g) Marshall v. York, Newcastle, and Berwick R. C., 11 C. B. 655.

showing an absence of privity between himself and the injured party, or by showing that he (the defendant) is also responsible to another for breach of contract (h). So, if an apothecary administer improper medicines to his patient, or a surgeon unskilfully treat him and thereby injure his health, the apothecary or surgeon will be liable to the patient, even where the father or friend of the patient may have been the contractee; for, though no such contract had been made, the apothecary, if he gave improper medicines to a customer, or the surgeon, if he unskilfully treated a patient, would be liable to an action for misfeasance (i).

The general rule, that 'privity is not requisite to support an action ex delicto,' was expressly recognised and applied by the Court of Queen's Bench in Gerhard v. Bates (k). There, the declaration contained two counts—the one founded in contract, noticed at a former page (l); the other founded in tort, which, after stating the formation of a company for the purpose of smelting and refining the ores of certain Spanish mines, and that twelve thousand shares therein were to be appropriated and offered to the public at 12s. 6d. per share, alleged that the defendant, intending to defraud, deceive, and injure the public, and to cause it to be publicly represented and advertised that the said company was likely to be a safe and profitable undertaking, and also to deceive the public, who might become purchasers of the said twelve thousand shares, and to induce them to become such purchasers, falsely, fraudulently, and deceitfully caused and procured to be publicly advertised and made known, by a certain prospectus, certain false statements, by means of which the defendant wrongfully and fraudulently induced the plaintiff (h) Judgm., 6 Exch. 767. See Reedie v. London and North Western R. Co., 4 Exch. 244, 257. 40; Gladwell v. Steggall, 5 Bing. N. C. 733; Judgm., 6 Exch. 767.

(k) 2 E. & B. 476.

(i) Pippin v. Sheppard, 11 Price,

(l) Ante, p. 322.

to become the purchaser and bearer of a large number of shares in the said undertaking, in consequence whereof he incurred loss. Against the sufficiency of this count, it was strongly urged that no privity was shown to exist between the plaintiff and defendant, and that such privity was necessary, as the action did not arise from any public wrong, or the neglect of any public duty. The Court, however, held, that the action was maintainable, "being founded, irrespectively of contract, upon a false representation, fraudulently made by the defendant to the plaintiff, for the purpose of inducing the plaintiff to act upon it, the plaintiff showing that by so acting upon it he had suffered damage. Under such circumstances, although the parties be entire strangers to each other, the action lies; and it would be strange if a man who has so suffered damage from the wrongful act of another were without remedy" (m).

In the declaration above abstracted, it will be noticed that fraud was distinctly alleged. In Langridge v. Levy (n), (which is a leading case in regard to privity as an ingredient in an action of tort, and demands accordingly investigation), fraud was both alleged and proved. This remark will presently be found material. The facts in Langridge v. Levy were as follow :—The plaintiff's father purchased of the defendant a gun, warranted to have been made by a particular maker, stating at the same time that the gun was required for the use of himself and his sons. The plaintiff, having been injured by the bursting of the gun, sued the defendant for damages in an action on the case. At the trial it was

(m) Judgm., 2 E. & B. 491; Behn v. Kemble, 7 C. B., N. S., 260. See Childers v. Wooler, 2 E. & E. 287.

(n) 2 M. & W. 519; S. C. (in Error), 4 Id. 337.

"The rule deducible from Langridge v. Levy and the cases there referred to, is, that when the action is not upon a contract, in order to constitute a cause of action for false representation, the plaintiff must prove that the defendant was guilty of fraud, and that he has sustained damage the result of that fraud:" per Watson, B., Eastwood v. Bain, 3 H. & N. 742.

proved that the gun had not, in fact, been made by the particular individual named in the warranty; and a general verdict, with heavy damages, was found for the plaintiff. The defendant having moved in arrest of judgment, the Court were called upon to decide as if the following facts had been actually found by the jury (o), viz., that the defendant had knowingly sold the gun in question to the father for the purpose of being used by the plaintiff, and had knowingly made a false warranty that this might be safely done, in order to effect the sale; and, further, that the plaintiff, on the faith of such warranty and believing it to be true, used the gun, and thereby sustained damage. Now here it was contended, on behalf of the defendant, that there was no privity whatever between himself and the plaintiff—that there was no breach shown of any public duty,—nor even a violation of any private right existing between the parties to the action. The Court, however, held that the defendant, having been guilty of deceit, was responsible for its consequences whilst the instrument sold by him was in the possession of an individual to whom his fraudulent statement had been communicated, and for whose use he knew that it was purchased (p). Also a person who gives another dangerous goods to carry is bound to give notice of their dangerous character to the party employed to carry them, and will be liable for damages resulting from his omission to do so (q).

It must not, however, be inferred from the preceding cases that “wherever a duty is imposed on a person by contract or otherwise, and that duty is violated, any one who is injured by the violation of it may have a remedy against the wrong-

(o) See Judgm., 2 M. & W. 531.

(p) “The ground of the decision” in the case abstracted supra “was, that the gun was expressly bought for the son to use:” per Crowder, J., Behn v. Kemble, 7 C. B., N. S., 267.

Et vide per Pollock, C. B., Bedford v. Bagshaw, 4 H. & N. 548-9.

(q) Farrant v. Barnes, 11 C. B., N. S., 553; Brass v. Mailland, 6 R. & B. 470.

doer" (r). Such a principle, if recognised, would impose an indefinite extent of liability and lead to the "most absurd and outrageous consequences" (s). This important limitation of the rule respecting privity is exemplified in and was fully established by the case of Longmeid v. Holliday (t). There, a husband and his wife sued in tort for an injury to the wife, caused, as the declaration alleged, by the fraudulent and deceitful warranty of a lamp sold by the defendant. Now, in this case, the warranty was made to the husband, the jury negatived the existence of fraud, and it was held that the wife could not properly be joined as a co-plaintiff in the action, because the injury to her flowed from the breach of contract, which was with the husband alone. The absence of fraud clearly distinguishes this case from Langridge v. Levy. "There is no doubt," as observed by the Court, "that if the defendant had been guilty of a fraudulent representation that the lamp was fit and proper to be used, knowing that it was not, and intending it to be used by the plaintiff's wife or any particular individual, the wife (joining her husband for conformity), or that individual, would have had an action for the deceit, upon the principle upon which all actions for deceitful representations are founded, and which was strongly illustrated in the case of Langridge

(r) Judgm., 2 M. & W. 530.

(s) Per Lord Abinger, C. B., Winterbottom v. Wright, 10 M. & W. 114.

In Priestley v. Fowler, 3 M. & W. 1, the same experienced Judge remarks that, if no limit were imposed on the right to sue in tort for an injury originating in contract, but without privity between the contractor and the injured party,—a master would be responsible to his servant for the defective construction of the carriage which conveyed them both,—for the negligence, consequently, of his coachmaker, of his harnessmaker, or his coachman. To prevent consequences like these, and the boundless spread of litigation which would thence ensue, we need entertain little doubt that our Courts will always strenuously incline.

In connection with Priestley v. Fowler, supra, see the cases cited post, Chap. 2, bearing on the liability of the master for a bodily hurt sustained by the servant whilst in his employ.

The principles laid down in Priestley v. Fowler do not apply to a contract of towage: Bland v. Ross, 14 Moo. P. C. C. 210.

(t) 6 Exch. 761.

v. Levy (u), viz., that if any one knowingly tells a falsehood, with intent to induce another to do an act which results in his loss, he is liable to that person in an action for deceit. But the fraud being negatived in this case, the action cannot be maintained on that ground by the party who sustained damage." The Court then proceed to remark that there are other cases, no doubt, besides those of fraud, in which a third person, though not a party to the contract in question, may sue for damage sustained if it be broken: those cases occurring, however, where, as in the examples given at p. 664, there has been a wrong done to that person, for which he would have had a right of action, though no such contract had been made.

The proposition, accordingly, already stated, that "privity is not requisite to support an action ex delicto," must, it would seem, be limited in this manner, that "an action will not lie at the suit of C. for the breach by B. of a duty which he owes to A." (x). A. employs B., a solicitor, to do some act for the benefit of C., A. having to pay B., and there being no intercourse of any sort between B. and C.,—if through the gross negligence or ignorance of B. in transacting such business C. loses the benefit intended for him by A., C. cannot maintain an action against B. to recover damages for the loss sustained. If the law were so, a disappointed legatee might sue the solicitor employed by a testator to make a will in favour of a stranger, whom the solicitor never saw or before heard of, if the will were void for not being properly signed and attested (y).

(u) Which case is also commented on and explained in Howard v. Shepherd, 9 C. B. 297; Winterbottom v. Wright, 10 M. & W. 109, 113; Gerhard v. Bates, 2 E. & B. 484, 491; Blake-more v. Bristol and Exeter R. C., 8 E. & B. 1052-3 (where Culeridge, J., delivering judgment, observes, "It has always been considered that Langridge

v. Levy was a case not to be extended in its application"). See Collins v. Cave, 4 H. & N. 225.

(x) Per Willes, J., Barker v. Midland R. C., 18 C. B. 59.

(y) Per Lord Campbell, C., Robertson v. Fleming, 4 Macq. H. L. Ca. 177; per Lord Cranworth, Id. 184-5.

If, on the other hand, in a transaction of borrowing and lending money on security, A., the borrower, employs B., a solicitor, to transact the business, in which both A., the borrower, and C., the lender, have their separate interests, and for which A. alone is to pay B., although C. has no personal intercourse with B.,—if from the instructions expressly given by A. to B., or from the usual course in which such business is conducted, B. knows that he, and no other professional lawyer, is employed in the transaction, and that B. is to act both for A. and for C. in preparing the security,—a jury, from this employment of B., might properly infer an undertaking from B. to C. to conduct the transaction on his part with reasonable skill and diligence. And so, if in the transaction of a loan on security C. was a surety for the borrower, and, according to the transaction as explained by A. to B., C. was to have a counter security from A., to be prepared and completed by B. for C., as the only lawyer to be employed between them, a similar undertaking from B. to C. might be inferred (c). Under such circumstances there would be some evidence of privity between the last-named parties.

Action for breach of duty undertaken ;

Secondly, not only may a right of action ex delicto spring at once out of a contract, it may exist by virtue of the rule laid down by Mr. Smith, in his Note to Coggs v. Bernard (a), in these terms, “the confidence induced by undertaking any service for another, is a sufficient legal consideration to create a duty in the performance of it.”

—though gratuitously.

The rule here stated is one of much importance, and applies so as to fix with liability even an unremunerated bailee or agent, who, having actually entered on the performance of his duties, is guilty of negligence in discharging them. The

(z) Per Lord Campbell, C., 4 Macq. Exeter R. C., 8 E. & B. 1050-1. See White v. Humphery, 11 Q. B. 48 ;

(a) 1 Smith L. C., 5th ed., 187 ; Judgm., MacCarthy v. Young, 6 H. & Judgm., Blakemore v. Bristol and N. 336, and cases cited, post, Chap. 2.

rule in question cannot, however, be extended, so as to render a mere gratuitous agent guilty for non-feasance; as for instance,—in refusing to assume the office which he had voluntarily offered to assume,—the reason being that, under the circumstances now supposed, there would be no consideration at all to support the promise of the agent (b).

Thus,—A. is the owner of a vessel, which B. voluntarily undertakes to get insured; B. neglects to do so, and, the vessel being lost, A. thus sustains damage through the non-performance of his undertaking by B.,—A. will be without redress (c).

To cases falling within the operation of the rule just stated, further reference will be made in connection with the law of bailments (d).

The third class of cases to which attention must specially be drawn, pending this inquiry as to the nature of a right of action ex delicto founded on the breach of a private duty and consequential damage, has been already sufficiently indicated (e). It is characterised by the existence of fraud on the part of the defendant, prejudicing the plaintiff (e).

Right of action founded on fraud, deceit, or misrepresentation, and consequential damage.

Fraud and deceit in the defendant, and damage to the plaintiff, it has been said, “are a sufficient foundation for the action on the case, though no benefit accrue to the defendant. The action will lie whenever there has been the assertion of a falsehood, with a fraudulent design, as to a fact, when a direct and positive injury arises from such assertion” (f). In any case of this kind the plaintiff’s cause of action is that he has been damaged by the defendant’s

(b) Balfe v. West, 13 C. B. 466, and cases there cited. See Simpson v. Lamb, 17 C. B. 608.

(c) So held in Thorne v. Deas, 4 Johns. (U. S.) R. 84; cited arg., 13 C. B. 470.

(d) Post, Chap. 3, sect. 2.

(e) Ante, pp. 344 et seq. See also Wilkin v. Reed, 15 C. B. 192; Milne v. Marwood, Id. 778, which is a rather curious case.

(f) Judgm., White v. Merritt, 3 Seld. (U. S.) R. 356-7; Childers v. Wooler, 2 E. & E. 287, and cases there cited; Denton v. Great Northern R. Co., 5 E. & B. 860. See post, Chap. 4.

fraud (g). Simple fraud (h) or misrepresentation (i) gives no cause of action, and unless the plaintiff can show that he has been injured by it he will not succeed.

Right of action founded on the malicious doing of an act, and consequential damage.

In the fourth and last class of cases here demanding notice, the right of action ex delicto is founded upon the malicious doing of a wrongful act and consequential damage to the plaintiff. As in the ensuing chapter of this work an inquiry respecting the legal signification of the word 'malice' will become necessary, it will suffice for the present to refer to an action for a malicious prosecution, or for a malicious arrest, the nature whereof is hereafter considered (k), and also to the cases below cited (l), as indicating the precise nature of the right of action just alluded to.

Classification of torts adopted in the ensuing Chapters.

Having thus sufficiently investigated the nature of and ingredients in a right of action ex delicto (m), I shall in the ensuing chapters proceed to speak—1st, of Torts to the Person and Reputation; 2ndly, of Torts to Property, whether Real or Personal; 3rdly, of Torts not directly affecting the Person, Reputation, or Property.

(g) If, however, "A. makes a false statement, upon which the plaintiff would not have acted but for a subsequent false statement by B., A. would not be liable to an action. B. would be the causa causans:" per Bramwell, B., Tatton v. Wade, 18 C. B. 382.

(h) Per Parke, B., Price v. Hewett, 8 Bxch. 148.

(i) Eastwood v. Bain, 3 H. & N. 738.

(k) Post, Chap. 2.

(l) Rogers v. Macnamara, 14 C. B. 27, where the defendant, who had employed the plaintiff as conductor of a metropolitan stage carriage, was charged with wrongfully and maliciously damaging and defacing the plaintiff's license. With the above case, however, should be compared Hurrell v. Ellis, 2 C. B. 295, where a declaration for a like wrong, not averring malice, was upheld. See also Haddan v. Lott, 15 C. B. 411; Collins v. Cave, 4 H. & N. 225; S. C., 6 Id. 131.

(m) A right of action for an injury to the wife, child, or servant of the complainant, will fall under the second or third of the above classes of rights of action ex delicto, according as the circumstances of the particular case disclose a breach by the defendant of a public or of a private duty. A right of action ex delicto, available at suit of personal representatives under Lord Campbell's Act or otherwise, with a view to benefiting the estate of the deceased, may be referred to one or other of the above three classes, regard being had to its specific nature.

Besides the convenience of the arrangement just suggested for an elementary treatise, there is, to some extent, authority for its adoption; for instance, Sir Henry Finch (n) tells us, that our law regards the person above his possessions,—life and liberty most,—freehold and inheritance above chattels,—and chattels real above personal.

(n) Discourse of Law, p. 29.

CHAPTER II.

TORTS TO THE PERSON AND REPUTATION.

"THE right of personal security," says Sir W. Blackstone (a), "consists in a person's legal and uninterrupted enjoyment of his life, his limbs, his body, his health, and his reputation," to each of which he may be said to have a natural inherent right which cannot be wantonly destroyed, infringed, or restricted "without a manifest breach of civil liberty" (b),—laying in very many cases the foundation of an action for damages.

Torts to the person—
what.

Torts to the Person, with a consideration of which this chapter may properly commence, include 1. Bodily injuries, whether direct, as assault and battery; or consequential, resulting from negligence or otherwise; 2. Injuries to the health or comfort of an individual; 3. Torts which affect personal liberty.

Action for bodily injury. Intention—whether material.

1. To the constitution of a right of action for a bodily injury, whether direct or consequential, it is material in limine, to observe, that the existence of an evil intention in the mind of the wrong-doer is not essential. "Though a man doth a lawful thing, yet if any damage do thereby befall another, he shall answer it, if he could have avoided it" (c). And again, "trespass may sometimes lie for the consequences of a lawful act" (d), thus, "if a man assault me, and I lift up my staff to defend myself, and in lifting it up [undesignedly] hit another, an action lies by that person; and yet

(a) 1 Bla. Com., p. 129.

422; Gibbon v. Pepper, Salk. 637.

(b) Id., p. 130.

(d) Per Blackstone, J., Scott v.

(c) Lambert v. Bessey, T. Raym.

Shepherd, 2 W. Bla. 894.

I did a lawful thing" (e) in endeavouring to defend myself. The case of Weaver v. Ward (f), moreover, clearly shows that trespass will lie for a mere mischance—for an act done by the defendant casualiter et per infortunium et contra voluntatem suam—the accident not having been inevitable nor occasioned by the plaintiff's negligence.

Perhaps, however, the most convincing proof which can be given that our law will not excuse a person charged ex delicto by reason of the absence from his mind of any wrongful or malicious motive is this, that even a lunatic will be civilly answerable for his torts although wholly incapable of design—a doctrine flowing from the general principle already intimated, that, whenever one person receives an injury or bodily hurt directly from the voluntary act of another, that is a trespass, although there were no design to injure (g).

So, to an action brought for bodily injury, caused by negligence or want of skill, the mere absence of a design to injure will not furnish ground of defence. Although, in determining the amount of damages to be awarded to the complainant in such a case, a jury will doubtless look at all the surrounding circumstances which accompanied the doing of the act complained of, and, inter alia, at the apparent animus of the defendant (h).

Whether an act causing bodily hurt to another were or were not purposely done to effect that end may, indeed, as regards the criminal liability of the actor, be most material. The object which purely civil procedure has in view is, however, rather the compensation of a private wrong sustained, than the punishment of a public offence.

Having premised these general remarks, I will now briefly

(e) Lambert v. Bessey, T. Raym. 423; Underwood v. Hewson, Str. 596; Leame v. Bray, 3 East, 595, 596.

(f) Hobart, 134.

(g) Weaver v. Ward, Hob. 134, Bac. Abr. "Trespass" (G.); Cross v. Andrews, Cro. Eliz. 622.

(h) Post, Chap. 5.

notice the remedies afforded by our law for bodily injuries, direct or consequential.

Assault—and battery.

An assault may be committed without actual battery; an attempt or offer to beat another without touching him, as if one lifts up his cane or his fist in a threatening manner at another, or strikes at but misses him (i),—"a threat of violence exhibiting an intention to assault, and a present ability to carry the threat into execution" (k)—will amount in law to an assault. So, also, à fortiori, does a battery, which includes an assault (l), and is described as the unlawful beating of another—the least touching of another's person, willfully or in anger (m); for "the law cannot draw the line between different degrees of violence, and therefore totally prohibits the first and lowest stage of it—every man's person being sacred, and no other having a right to meddle with it in any the slightest manner" (n). An assault, however, must be an act done against the will of the party assaulted; it would be "a manifest contradiction in terms to say, that the defendant assaulted the plaintiff by his permission" (o).

(i) 3 Bla. Com. 120.

(k) Per Jervis, C. J., Read v. Coker, 13 C. B. 850, 860, where various authorities upon this subject are cited; (of which see particularly Stephens v. Myers, 4 Car. & P. 349); Jones v. Wylie, 1 Car. & K. 257; Blake v. Barnard, 9 Car. & P. 626; Reg. v. St. George, Id. 483; Reg. v. James, 1 Car. & K. 530; Coward v. Baddeley, 4 H. & N. 478.

In Cobbett v. Grey, 4 Exch. 744, Pollock, C. B., observes as follows:—"I own I have considerable doubt whether any mere threat, not in the slightest degree executed, that is, a person saying to another, 'If you do not move, I shall use such and such force,' is an assault. My impression is, that it is not. I do not know at what distance it is necessary for the party to be. No doubt, if you direct a weapon, or if you raise your fist within those limits which give you the means of striking, that may be an assault; but if you simply say, at such a distance as that at which you cannot commit an assault, 'I will commit an assault,' I think that is not an assault." In Allsop v. Allsop, 29 L. J., Ex., 315 (S. C., 5 H. & N. 534), the same learned Judge observes, "If a sword is flourished at such a distance that it would be impossible to hurt any person, it would not be an assault."

(l) Bull. N. P., 7th ed., 15 a.

(m) 3 Bla. Com. 120. As to what may constitute a battery, see also Pursell v. Horn, 8 Ad. & E. 602; Rawlings v. Till, 3 M. & W. 28.

(n) 3 Bla. Com. 120.

(o) Christopherson v. Bare, 11 Q.

An act prima facie amounting even to a battery is, moreover, in some cases, "justifiable or lawful, as where one who hath authority, a parent or master, gives moderate correction to his child, his scholar, or his apprentice (p). So, also, on the principle of self-defence; for if one strikes me first, or even only assaults me, I may strike in my own defence, and if sued for it may plead son assault demesne (q), or that it was the plaintiff's own original assault that occasioned it. So, likewise, in defence of my goods or possession (r); if a man endeavours to deprive me of them, I may justify laying hands upon him to prevent him, and, in case he persists with violence, proceed to beat him away" (s). There is, however, a manifest distinction between endeavouring to turn a man out of a house or close, into which he has previously entered quietly, and resisting a forcible attempt to enter; in the first-mentioned of these cases a request being necessary; whereas, in the latter, it is not (t). Again, the captain of a vessel conveying passengers may justify an assault committed for the preservation and maintenance of due order and discipline on board (u). And in the exercise of an office,

B. 473, 477; Wellock v. Constantine, 2 H. & C. 146. See Kavanagh v. Gudge, 7 M. & Gr. 316; R. v. Read, 2 Car. & K. 957.

(p) See Penn v. Ward, 2 Cr. M. & R. 338; Winterburn v. Brooks, 2 Car. & K. 16.

(q) The plea of son assault demesne states, "That the plaintiff first assaulted the defendant, who thereupon necessarily committed the alleged assault in his own defence:" C. L. Proc. Act, 1852, Sched. (B.), No. 45. See Moriarty v. Brooks, 6 Car. & P. 684.

(r) See Holmes v. Bagge, 1 E. & B. 782; Roberts v. Tayler, 1 C. B. 117; Weaver v. Bush, 8 T. R. 78, 81; Hazling v. Okey, 8 Exch. 531; Gaylard v. Morris, 3 Id. 695.

As to the right of the owner of land to enter forcibly thereupon, and to eject the wrongful occupant, see the cases collected ante, Book I., Chap. 5.

As to the right of the owner of land to eject from it one who has entered under a parol licence, see Wood v. Leadbitter, 13 M. & W. 838; Judgm., Adams v. Andrews, 15 Q. B. 296.

(s) 3 Bla. Com., pp. 120-1; Alderson v. Waistell, 1 Car. & K. 358.

(t) Polkinhorn v. Wright, 8 Q. B. 197, 206; and cases cited ante, Book I., Chap. 5; Tulley v. Reed, 1 Car. & P. 6; Jelly v. Bradley, Car. & M. 270. See Arg., 3 Exch. 696; Griffiths v. Dunnett, 7 M. & Gr. 1002.

(u) Noden v. Johnson, 16 Q. B. 213.

as that of churchwarden or beadle, a man may lay hands upon another to turn him out of church and prevent his disturbing the congregation by indecent behaviour during the performance of divine service (x). If sued for such or the like battery or assault (y), a defendant will be entitled to set forth the whole case, and plead that he laid hands upon the plaintiff gently—molliter manus imposuit (z), for the particular purpose above indicated.

Inasmuch, then, as an act prima facie amounting to a battery may be justifiable, a battery is defined to be the unlawful beating of another—for which, as for an assault, the remedy is by action of trespass; the declaration wherein sets forth that the defendant ‘assaulted, and beat and (if the evidence to be adduced will support such a charge) wounded the plaintiff’ (a).

Other bodily injuries.

Besides an assault or battery, other torts to the person might be specified—remediable in trespass or in case, according as they are direct or consequential—the nature whereof will sufficiently appear from the references infra (b).

(x) Burton v. Henson, 10 M. & W. 105; Worth v. Terrington, 13 M. & W. 781; Williams v. Glenister, 2 B. & C. 699. See Have v. Planner, 1 Saund. 13.

(y) An innkeeper cannot, however, justify an assault under pretence of detaining the plaintiff for a debt due to him: Sunbolf v. Alford, 3 M. & W. 248.

(z) See Oakes v. Wood, 3 M. & W. 150; Gregory v. Hill, 8 T. R. 299; Noden v. Johnson, 16 Q. B. 218.

(a) According to the old form, the words “insultum fecit, verberavit, vulneravit et male tractavit,” were used as significant of the cause of action.

As to pleading payment of money into Court in this action, see Thompson v. Sheppard, 4 E. & B. 53.

(b) As exemplifying or illustrating the nature of actions for direct bodily injuries, see Scott v. Shepherd, ante, p. 95; Weaver v. Ward, ante, p. 675; Leame v. Bray, 3 East, 593, and cases there cited; Chandler v. Broughton, 1 Cr. & M. 29; Gilbertson v. Richardson, 5 C. B. 502—for bodily injuries caused by negligence, see Ellis v. Sheffield Gas Consumers' Co., cited ante, p. 648; Overton v. Freeman, 11 C. B. 867, and form of declaration there given; Goldthorpe v. Hardman, 13 M. & W. 377; Dixon v. Bell, 5 M. & S. 198; Grote v. Chesler and Holyhead R. Co., 2 Exch. 251; Moreton v. Hardern, 4 B. & C. 223.

As to injuries caused by mischievous or ferocious animals belonging to defendant, and as to the necessity of proving the scienter, see Hudson v. Roberts, 6 Exch. C97; Cox v. Bur-

In cases such as are now adverted to, three several states of facts may present themselves raising difficulty: 1st, where the plaintiff has, by his own negligence or misconduct, contributed to cause the injury sustained; 2ndly, where the defendant acted by his agent or servant in the matter charged against him; 3rdly, where the relation of master and servant, or employer and employed, existed, eo instante, as between the plaintiff and defendant. To each of the classes of cases here suggested, some few remarks, which will be found to have a wide application in connection with torts generally, shall be directed.

With regard to the first of the three points just stated as likely to raise difficulty, viz., where the plaintiff has in some way himself contributed to the injury sustained, the rule is, that, "although there may have been negligence on the part of the plaintiff, yet, unless he might, by the exercise of ordinary care, have avoided the consequences of the defendant's negligence, he is entitled to recover; if by ordinary care he might have avoided them, he is the author of his own wrong" (c), and will be held in law—upon the principle volenti non fit injuria—to have disentitled himself to complain (d).

Where plaintiff has contributed to injury.

bidge, 13 C. B., N. S., 430; Card v. Case, 5 C. B. 622; Jackson v. Smithson, 15 M. & W. 563; May v. Burdett, 9 Q. B. 101; Cooke v. Waring, 2 H. & C. 332.

(c) Per Parke, B., Bridge v. Grand Junction R. C., 3 M. & W. 248, and in Davies v. Mann, 10 M. & W. 548; North v. Smith, 10 C. B., N. S., 572, 575; Martin v. Great Northern R. C., 16 C. B. 179, as to which see Cornman v. Eastern Counties R. C., 4 H. & N. 781, 784; Toomey v. London, Brighton, and South Coast R. C., 3 C. B., N. S., 146; Ellis v. London and South-Western R. C., 2 H. & N. 424; Holden

v. Liverpool Gas Co., 3 C. B. 1; Butterfield v. Forrester, 11 East, 60; Marriott v. Stanley, 1 M. & Gr. 568; Williams v. Richards, 3 Car. & K. 81; Schloss v. Heriot, 14 C. B., N. S., 59.

As to the rule observed in the Admiralty Court in cases of collision where both parties are blameable, see Vaux v. Sheffer, 8 Moo. P. C. C. 75; Dowell v. Gen. Steam Nav. Co., 5 E. & B. 206.

(d) The above rule as to contributory negligence is also stated in Judgm., Tuff v. Warman, 5 C. B., N. S., 573; S. C., 2 Id. 740; and applied in Senior v. Ward, 1 E. & E. 385. See, also,

"Every person," however, "who does a wrong is at least responsible for all the mischievous consequences that may reasonably be expected to result under ordinary circumstances from such misconduct" (e); and the question, whether or not the complainant contributed to the mischief that happened, by want of ordinary caution, is necessarily one of degree, to be answered by reference to the facts adduced in evidence (f). If the plaintiff voluntarily incurred danger so great that no sensible man would have incurred it, he will sue in vain for compensation (f). If the plaintiff voluntarily places himself in a position relatively to the defendant, which he has no lawful title to occupy, or if, being cognizant of danger, he voluntarily exposes himself to it, he may, ipso facto, preclude himself from insisting that there has been negligence in the defendant productive of damage to himself (g).

The rule as to contributory negligence is applicable in the case of an infant (h), or where one of tender years is under the care of an adult through whose negligence a bodily hurt is done to the infant—the negligence of the person having charge of the child being looked upon as the negligence of the child itself (i).

It may be well to add, that, for an accident which happened entirely without default on the part of the defendant, Witherley v. Regent's Canal Co., 12 C. B., N. S., 2; Leg. Max., 4th ed., pp. 371-373, where the cases are collected.

(e) Per Pollock, C. B., Rigby v. Hewitt, 5 Exch. 243 (cited per Byles, J., Hoey v. Felton, 11 C. B., N. S., 143); and in Greenland v. Chaplin, Id. 248.

(f) Clayards v. Dethick, 12 Q. B. 439, 446; followed in Thompson v. North Eastern R. C., 2 B. & S. 106, 114, 118, 119.

(g) Lygo v. Newbold, 9 Exch. 302; with which compare Lynch v. Nurdin, 1 Q. B. 29; Singleton v. Eastern Counties R. C., 7 C. B., N. S., 287; Great Northern R. C. v. Harrison, 10 Exch. 376; Bird v. Holbrook, 4 Bing. 628; Caswell v. Worth, 5 E. & B. 849; Dowell v. Sheppard, Id. 856; Assop v. Yates, 2 H. & N. 768, 771; Griffiths v. Gidlow, 3 H. & N. 648.

(h) Abbott v. Macfie, 33 L. J., Ex., 177.

(i) Waite v. North-Eastern R. C., E. B. & E. 719.

or blame imputable to him, he will not be responsible (k) ; the onus, however, of establishing this defence will be cast upon the defendant, where the facts are such as raise a prima facie case against him (l).

Secondly, it was observed by Rolfe, B., on a recent occasion (m), that "the liability of any one, other than the party actually guilty of any wrongful act, proceeds on the maxim, Qui facit per alium facit per se. The party employing has the selection of the party employed, and it is reasonable that he who has made choice of an unskilful or careless person to execute his orders, should be responsible for any injury resulting from the want of skill, or want of care, of the person employed ; but neither the principle of the rule nor the rule itself, can apply to a case where the party sought to be charged does not stand in the character of employer to the party by whose negligent act the injury has been occasioned" (n). Upon this subject (one very comprehensive and important) of the liability of the master for the act of his servant, the two leading decisions are Laugher v. Pointer (o) and Quarman v. Burnett (p).

Liability of master for tortious act of his servant.

In Laugher v. Pointer the facts were as under-mentioned :—The owner of a carriage had hired of a stable-keeper a pair of horses for his carriage for the day, the driver being provided by the owner of the horses : and it was held by (k) Per Dallas, C. J., Wakeman v. Robinson, 1 Bing. 215 ; Hall v. Fearnley, 3 Q. B. 919 ; Gibbon v. Pepper, Salk. 637, 638.

(l) Byrne v. Boadle, 33 L. J., Ex., 13 ; Skinner v. London, Brighton, and South Coast R. Co., 5 Exch. 787, 789 ; Piggot v. Eastern Counties R. Co., 3 C. B. 229 ; Vaughan v. Taff Vale R. Co., 5 H. & N. 679, reversing S. C., 3 Id. 743 ; Fremantle v. London and North-Western R. Co., 10 C. B., N. S., 89 ; per Lord Denman, C. J., Carpue v.

London and Brighton R. Co., 5 Q. B. 747. See Templeman v. Haydon, 12 C. B. 507 ; Perren v. Monmouthshire R. and Can. Co., 11 C. B. 855.

As to evidence of negligence, see the cases cited ante, p. 646, n. (a).

(m) Judgm., 4 Exch. 255.

(n) Et vide the remarks of Lord Cranworth, in Bartonskill Coal Co. v. Reid, 3 Macq. H. L. Ca. 282-4, cited post, p. 700.

(o) 5 B. & C. 547.

(p) 6 M. & W. 499.

Lord Tenterden and Mr. Justice Littledale (whose opinions in this case have since been recognised as law), that the owner of the carriage was not liable for an injury caused by the negligence of the driver. In this case, it must be observed, there was no evidence of any kind of contract or agreement between the owner of the carriage and the coachman who caused the injury, which circumstance is very material with reference to what is there said by the learned judges just named. "According to the rules of law," says Littledale, J., "every man is answerable for injuries occasioned by his own personal negligence; and he is also answerable for acts done by the negligence of those whom the law denominates his servants; because such servants represent the master himself, and their acts stand upon the same footing as his own. And in the present case the question is, whether the coachman, by whose negligence the injury was occasioned, is to be considered a servant of the defendant. For the acts of a man's own domestic servants there is no doubt but the law makes him responsible; and if this accident had been occasioned by a coachman who constituted a part of the defendant's own family, there would be no doubt of the defendant's liability; and the reason is, that he is hired by the master, either personally, or by those who are entrusted by the master with the hiring of servants, and he is therefore selected by the master to do the business required of him." The principle of these remarks is in truth expressed by the maxim Respondeat superior, which applies not only to domestic servants who may have the care of carriages, horses, and other things in the employ of the family, but "extends to other servants whom the master or owner selects and appoints to do any work, or superintend any business, although such servants be not in the immediate employ or under the superintendence of the master."

Thus "if a man is the owner of a ship, he himself appoints the master, and he desires the master to appoint and select the crew ; the crew thus become appointed by the owner, and are his servants, for the management and government of the ship ; and if any damage happens through their default, it is the same as if it happened through the immediate default of the owner himself (q). So, the same principle prevails if the owner of a farm has it in his own hands, and he does not personally interfere in the management, but appoints a bailiff, or hind, who hires other persons under him, all of them being paid out of the funds of the owner, and selected by himself, or by a person specially deputed by him ; if any damage happen through their default the owner is answerable, because their neglect or default is his, as they are appointed by and through him (r). So, in the case of a mine, the owner employs a steward or manager to superintend the working of the mine, and to hire under-workmen, and he pays them on behalf of the owner. These under-workmen then become the immediate servants of the owner, and the owner is answerable for their default in doing any acts on account of their employer" (s). And the same kind of reasoning would manifestly apply in many other cases, as where, in the absence of any special contract

(q) See Martin v. Temperley, 4 Q. B. 298 ; Dunford v. Trattles, 12 M. & W. 529 ; Fenton v. City of Dublin Steam Packet Co., 8 Ad. & E. 835 ; Cuthbertson v. Parsons, 12 C. B. 304 ; Rodrigues v. Melhuish, 10 Exch. 110.

In Schuster v. McKellar, 7 E. & B. 724, Lord Campbell, C. J., delivering judgment, says, that the owner, although the ship be chartered, "is clearly liable for a collision arising from the improper management of the ship, and for what the master does within the scope of his general authority as master which cannot be ascribed to his agency as charterer." Where the lessee of a ferry hired of the defendant for the day a steamer and crew to convey his passengers across, the defendant was held liable for damage caused to a passenger by the negligence of the crew : Dalyell v. Tyrer, 2 B. & E. 899.

As to the liability of owner or master of ship for damage caused by negligence in stowing goods, see Sack v. Ford, 13 C. B., N. S., 90 ; Blaikie v. Stenbridge, 6 Id. 894.

(r) See Holmes v. Onion, 2 C. B., N. S., 790, where the defendant was held responsible for the act of a thatcher hired by him to do thatching work at weekly wages for his profit.

(s) Judgm., 5 B. & C. 554.

or agreement between the parties (t), it is sought to charge a railway, or other incorporated company, for damage caused by the negligence of its officers or servants.

The judgment of the Court of Exchequer in Sharrod v. The London and North Western R. C. (u) (where the plaintiff sued the defendants in trespass for driving a railway engine with great force and violence against his sheep, and so destroying them), may usefully be cited as illustrating the remark last made, and as throwing additional light upon the extent and nature of the liability imposed upon a master for the tortious act of his servant. "The immediate act," there observed the Court, "which caused the damage to the plaintiff's cattle was the impact of a machine, which was under the control of a rational agent, the servant of the defendants; not so much so indeed as a horse or carriage drawn by horses or propelled by mechanical power along an ordinary highway would be, in which cases both the direction and the speed of the machine are under government; but still in such a degree as to make the cases similar." With regard to the point sub judice, viz., the liability of the defendants in trespass for the injury done to the plaintiff's sheep, the Court then proceeded to observe, that the case before them might be decided "as if the damage had been done by an ordinary carriage drawn by horses; and, it being now settled that an action of trespass will lie against a corporation (x), we may consider, for the present purpose, the defendants as one natural person, and the carriage under the care of his servants. Now the law is well established, on the one hand, that, whenever the injury done to the plaintiff results from the immediate force of the defendant himself, whether intentionally or not, the plaintiff may (t) See Machu v. London and South Western R. C., 2 Exch. 415.

(u) 4 Exch. 580.

(x) Maund v. Monmouthshire Can. Co., 4 M. & Gr. 452; Goff v. Great Northern R. C., 30 L. J., Q. B., 148; Eastern Counties R. C. v. Broom, 6 Exch. 314. See Chilton v. London and Croydon R. C., 16 M. & W. 212.

bring an action of trespass ; on the other, that, if the act be that of the servant, and be negligent, not wilful, case is the only remedy against the master (y). The maxim, Qui facit per alium facit per se renders the master liable for all the negligent acts of the servant in the course of his employment (z) ; but that liability does not make the direct act of the servant the direct act of the master. Trespass will not lie against him ; case will, in effect, for employing a careless servant, but not trespass ; unless, as was said by the Court in Morley v. Gaisford (a), the act was done ‘by his command ;’ that is, unless either the particular act which constitutes the trespass is ordered to be done by the principal, or some act which comprises it ; or some act which leads by a physical necessity to the act complained of. The former is the case where one as servant is ordered to enter a close to try a right, or otherwise ; the latter, when such a case occurs as Gregory v. Piper (b), where the rubbish ordered to be removed, from a natural necessity, fell on the plaintiff’s soil ; but when the act is that of the servant in performing his duty to his master, the rule of law we consider to be, that case is the only remedy against the master, and then only is maintainable when that act is negligent or improper ; and this rule applies to all cases where the carriage or cattle of a master is placed in the care and under the management of a servant, a rational agent (c). . . . In all cases where a master gives the direction and control over a carriage, or animal, or (y) The principle laid down in Laugher v. Pointer, and Quarman v. Burnett (ante, p. 681), “has no bearing on an action of trespass, in which a party may be liable as a co-trespasser for the immediate act of another, though that other be not his servant :” per Cresswell, J., M’Laughlin v. Pryor, 4 M. & Gr. 61.

(z) See, however, Dansey v. Richardson, 3 E. & B. 144.

(a) 2 H. Bla. 442.

(b) 9 B. & C. 591 ; there a master ordered his servant to lay down a quantity of rubbish near his neighbour’s wall, but so that it might not touch the same ; the servant used ordinary care in executing this order, but some of the rubbish naturally ran against the wall ; the master was held liable in trespass.

(c) Judgm., 4 Exch. 586.

chattel to another rational agent, the master is only responsible in an action on the case for want of skill or care of the agent" (d).

The foregoing extracts from the judgment in Sharrod v. The London and North Western R. Co. have been given, not so much with a view to illustrating the rather technical distinction between case and trespass, as for the purpose of indicating various and dissimilar states of facts under which respectively a master may be answerable ex delicto for the acts of his servant (e). The general grounds of this liability are indeed sufficiently stated in Laugher v. Pointer (f), and in Quarman v. Burnett (g), where it is said, "upon the principle that qui facit per alium facit per se, the master is responsible for the acts of his servant; and that person is undoubtedly liable, who stood in the relation of master to the wrong-doer,—he who had selected him as his servant from the knowledge of or belief in his skill and care,—and who could remove him for misconduct (h), and whose orders he was bound to receive and obey; and whether such servant has been appointed by the master directly, or intermediately through the intervention of an agent authorised by him to appoint servants for him, can make no difference. But the liability, by virtue of the principle of relation of master (d) Id. ibid.; M'Manus v. Crickett, 1 East, 106; per Parke, B., Gordon v. Rolt, 4 Exch. 365.

(e) See, also, Giles v. Taff Vale R. Co., 2 E. & B. 822. The rule "respondet superior" applies in the case of a body corporate, which may be liable for libel published by order of the corporation: Whitfield v. South Eastern R. Co., E. B. & E. 115; see, also, Lawson v. Bank of London, 18 C. B. 84—or for the intentional misfeasance of their servants, Green v. London General Omnibus Co., 7 C. B., N. S., 290.

A corporation may also sue for libel:

Metropolitan Omnibus Co. v. Hawkins, 4 H. & N. 87.

(f) Ante, p. 681.

(g) 6 M. & W. 499.

(h) The mere fact that a railway company has, by agreement with one who has contracted to make a portion of the line, power to remove his workmen for incompetence, will not suffice to create the relation of master and servant between the company and the workmen. In this case the contractor would be the master: Reedie v. London and North Western R. Co., 4 Exch. 244:

and servant must cease where the relation itself ceases to exist."

Hence, when he who does the wrongful act, either in person or by his servant, exercises an independent employment, his immediate superior will not be liable; as in Milligan v. Wedge (i), where damage was done by a bullock through the careless driving of a boy employed by the drover, who was himself in the employment of the butcher, to whom liability was accordingly held not to attach; or in Rapson v. Cubitt (k), where the injury complained of was done by the negligence of the servant of a gas-fitter employed by the defendant, a builder, who had himself contracted to make certain alterations in a club-house,—and who, it was held, could not be made responsible for the damage thus occasioned; or in Overton v. Freeman (l), where the facts were as follow:—the defendants had been employed by certain paving commissioners to pave a particular district, and contracted with B. to pave one of the streets included in such district. B.'s workmen, whilst paving the street, left a heap of stones at night in so unsafe a position, that the plaintiff fell over it and sustained an injury. There was no evidence to show that the defendants had interfered in or sanctioned the placing of the stones; and it appeared that B. was in reality acting under the direction of the engineer and surveyor of the commissioners. Upon these facts the defendants were held not liable: for "the relation of master and servant," observed Maule, J., "has no existence in a case like this. . . . I think the present case falls within the principle of those authorities which have decided that the sub-contractor, and not the person with whom he contracts, is liable civilly as well as

(i) 12 Ad. & E. 737.

(k) 9 M. & W. 710.

(l) 11 C. B. 867, where many authorities upon the subject above alluded to are collected; of which see particularly Knight v. Fox, 5 Exch.

721; Burgess v. Gray, 1 C. B. 578; Reedie v. London and North Western R. Co., 4 Exch. 244. See also Peachey v. Rowland, 13 C. B. 182; Butler v. Hunter, 7 H. & N. 826.

criminally, for any wrong done by himself or his servants in the execution of the work contracted for" (m).

But although it is established by Laughler v. Pointer, and Quarman v. Burnett, that, if the owner of a carriage hires horses of a stable-keeper, who provides a driver, through whose negligence an injury is done, the driver must in general be considered as the servant of the stable-keeper or job-master,—the conclusion of law will, nevertheless, be different if there be special circumstances in the case showing an assent, either express or implied, to the tortious act complained of by the party hiring the horses (n), or showing that the individual whom it is sought to charge, had control over the servant whose act caused damage, and was in fact dominus pro tempore (n); and the same general principle applies where the carriage and horses are borrowed for the day (o); though a person hiring or borrowing a carriage, and providing horses and servants would be liable (p).

Further, where the injury in question was committed by the defendant's servant wilfully, whilst not employed in the master's service, and whilst not acting within the scope of his authority, a remedy cannot be had against the master—the servant only will be liable (q); as if, for instance, a servant authorised merely to distrain cattle damage feasant, drives cattle from the highway into his master's close, and

(m) See, further, in illustration of the above remarks: Cuthbertson v. Parsons, 12 C. B. 304; Allen v. Hayward, 7 Q. B. 960; Duncan v. Findlater, 6 Cl. & F. 894, 904, followed in Thomson v. Mitchell, 7 Id. 564; and in Holliday v. St. Leonard's, Shore-ditch, 11 C. B., N. S., 192, 204, 205, where the cases are collected; Steel v. South Eastern R. Co., 16 C. B. 550.

(n) M'Laughlin v. Pryor, 4 M. & Gr. 48; S. C., 1 Car. & M. 354.

(o) See Hart v. Crowley, 12 Ad. &

E. 378; Taverner v. Little, 5 Bing. N. C. 678; Stables v. Eley, 1 Car. & P. 614; Wheatley v. Patrick, 2 M. & W. 650.

(p) Croft v. Alison, 4 B. & Ald, 590; Scott v. Scott, 2 Stark. N. P. C. 438.

(q) Lyons v. Martin, 8 Ad. & E. 512; Coleman v. Riches, 16 C. B. 104; M'Manus v. Crickett, 1 East, 106; Leame v. Bray, 3 East, 593; Middleton v. Fowler, 1 Salk. 282; Lamb v. Palk, 9 Car. & P. 629.

there distrains them (r) ; or if he wantonly, and in order to effect some purpose of his own, strikes the plaintiff's horses, and thereby causes an accident (s). Should, indeed, the servant be guilty of negligence, productive of an injury to the plaintiff, whilst on his master's business (t), as when driving his master's carriage, although he may at the time be going out of the direct road for some purpose of his own, the master may be answerable (u). "No doubt," observes Jervis, C. J., in a recent case (x), "a master may be liable for injury done by his servant's negligence, where the servant, being about his master's business, makes a small deviation, or even where he so exceeds his duty as to justify his master in at once discharging him," but "at all events, if the master is liable where the servant has deviated, it must be where the deviation occurs in a journey on which the servant has originally started on his master's business ; in other words, he must be in the employ of his master at the time of committing the grievance." No liability attaches to the master if the servant, without his leave or knowledge, takes his carriage, and with it commits an injury, because in this case the master has not entrusted the servant with the carriage, or commissioned him to perform any service (y).

It seems, moreover, true, as a general proposition, that, where one employs another to do an act which may be done

(r) Lyons v. Martin, 8 Ad. & E. 512.

(s) Croft v. Alison, 4 B. & Ald. 590, 592 ; Lamb v. Palk, 9 Car. & P. 629 ; Gregory v. Piper, 9 B. & C. 591 ; Huzzey v. Field, 2 Cr. M. & R. 432 ; per Erle, J., Freeman v. Rosher, 18 Q. B. 785 ; cited, per Bramwell, B., Collett v. Foster, 2 H. & N. 361 ; and cases cited supra, n. (q).

(t) As to the proper signification of these words, see Limpus v. General Omnibus Co., 1 H. & C. 526 ; Seymour

v. Greenwood, 7 H. & N. 355 ; S. C., 6 Id. 359.

(u) Joel v. Morison, 6 Car. & P. 501 ; Sleath v. Wilson, 9 Car. & P. 607.

(x) Mitchell v. Craswell, 13 C. B. 237, 245, with which compare Patten v. Rea, 2 C. B. , N. S., 606.

(y) Mitchell v. Craswell, supra ; Sleath v. Wilson, 9 Car. & P. 607 ; Lamb v. Palk, Id. 629 ; Goodman v. Kennell, 3 Car. & P. 167 ; Joel v. Morison, 6 Car. & P. 501.

in a lawful manner, and the latter, in doing it, unnecessarily commits a public nuisance, whereby injury results to a third person, the employer will not be responsible for such injury (z). If, however, A. employs B., a contractor, to do an unlawful act,—ex. gr., to erect a nuisance to the public highway—which B. does by his work-people and servants, A. will be answerable in an action of tort for damage thence resulting to a third party (α). The two preceding propositions are clearly in accordance with the dictates of common sense, as well as sustainable by the authorities cited in support of them.

Liability attaching to owner of realty.

It should here, perhaps be noticed, that cases are to be found in the books which seem to show that wider liability attaches to the owner of real than to the owner of personal property in respect of an injury resulting from its negligent management (b). It may, however, be considered as settled, that no such distinction as here adverted to does in truth exist; unless perhaps in cases where the act complained of amounts in law to a nuisance, and where the owner of the premises whereon the nuisance is erected is himself in occupation of them (c), or has in some manner participated in or expressly sanctioned the erection of the nuisance (d). Where a nuisance caused by non-repair exists upon premises let from year to year, the reversioner will be liable for damage

(z) Peachey v. Rowland, 13 C. B. 182; with which compare Sadler v. Henlock, 4 E. & B. 570; Gray v. Pullen, 32 L. J., Q. B., 169; Mills v. Holton, 2 H. & N. 14.

(a) Ellis v. Sheffield Gas Consumers' Co., 2 E. & B. 767; Blake v. Thirst, 2 H. & C. 20; Hole v. Sittingbourne and Sheerness R. Co., 6 H. & N. 488.

(b) See Bush v. Steinman, 1 B. & P. 404; Judgm., 4 C. B. 800, 801; per Littledale, J., 5 B. & C. 559, 560; Judgm., 6 M. & W. 510; Leslie v. Pounds, 4 Taunt. 649.

Randleson v. Murray, 8 Ad. & E. 109, and Burgess v. Gray, 1 C. B. 578, may be supported without any reference to the distinction above alluded to.

(c) See Bishop v. Trustees of Bedford Charity, 29 L. J., Q. B., 53; S. C., 28 Id. 215; 1 E. & E. 697; Robbins v. Jones, 15 C. B., N. S., 221; Preston v. Norfolk R. Co., 2 H. & N. 735.

(d) Todd v. Flight, 9 C. B., N. S., 377.

caused by such nuisance, if, since its creation, and before damage resulted from it, he could have determined the tenancy and did not do so (e).

If a landlord lets premises not in themselves a nuisance, but which may or may not be used by the tenant so as to become a nuisance, and it is entirely at the option of the tenant so to use them or not, and the landlord receives the same benefit whether they are so used or not, the landlord cannot be made responsible for the acts of the tenant, and a fortiori he would not be liable if he had taken an obligation from the tenant not to use them so as to create a nuisance, even without reserving a right to enter and abate a nuisance if created (f).

In Reedie v. The London and North Western R. Co. (g), the Court observes, with reference to the point above mooted, as follows :—"It is not necessary to decide whether, in any case, the owner of real property, such as land or houses, may be responsible for nuisances occasioned by the mode in which his property is used by others not standing in the relation of servants to him, or part of his family. It may be that in some cases he is so responsible. But then his liability must be founded on the principle that he has not taken due care to prevent the doing of acts which it was his duty to prevent, whether done by his servants or others. If, for instance, a person occupying a house or a field should permit another to carry on there a noxious trade, so as to be a nuisance to his neighbours, it may be that he would be responsible, though the acts complained of were neither his acts nor the acts of his servants. He would have violated the rule of law, sic utere tuo, ut alienum non lædas" (h). If however A, the (e) Gandy v. Jubber, 33 L. J., Q. 7 H. & N. 826.

B., 151.

(f) Judgm., Rich v. Basterfield, 4 Judgm., Rich v. Basterfield, 4 C. B. 804-5. 802. See Gott v. Gandy, 2 E. & B. 845; Alston v. Grant, 3 E. & B. 128.

(g) 4 Exch. 241; Buller v. Hunter, owner of land, contracts with B. to do work or to erect buildings upon it, and B.'s workmen do an injury to the owner of the adjoining land by carrying away materials belonging to him, A. will not, unless he interfered in the tortious transaction, be responsible for it (i).

Thus far has been discussed the liability of a master for the tortious act of his servant—of the employer for the tortious act of the employed—where there is evidence adducible of an authority to do the act in question, either express or implied from the relation which exists between the actual wrong-doer and the party charged. I propose, in the next place, to inquire as to the effect of ratifying or adopting a wrongful act, as regards the liability of him who thus ratifies or adopts it.

Effect of ratification
of a tort.

Now, as on the one hand it is true, that, "if a servant commit a trespass by the command or encouragement of his master, the master shall be guilty of it, though the servant is not thereby excused, for he is only to obey his master in matters that are honest and lawful" (k); so, also, "he that receiveth a trespasser, and agreeth to a trespass after it be done, is no trespasser, unless the trespass was done to his use or for his benefit; and then his agreement subsequent amounteth to a commandment" (l). The main question in regard to liability by ratification will, accordingly, be this—was the tortious act, alleged to have been ratified, originally intended to be done to the use or for the benefit of the party who is said to have subsequently ratified it? If so, the party ratifying the antecedent act will be liable in respect of it; ex. gr., a corporation may thus become liable for an assault committed by their servant (m).

(i) Gayford v. Nicholls, 9 Exch. & S. 258.

702.

(k) 1 Bla. Com. 430; Sands v. Child, 3 Lev. 352; Jones v. Hart, 1 Ld. Raym. 738; Britton v. Cole, 1 Salk. 408; Stephens v. Elwall, 4 M.

(l) 4 Inst. 317; Wilson v. Barker, 4 B. & Ad. 614; Eggington v. Mayor of Lichfield, 5 E. & B. 160.

(m) Eastern Counties R. C. v. Broom, 6 Exch. 314. See Roe v.

The doctrine of "ratihabitio" is, however, unquestionably of more difficult application in reference to torts than in reference to contracts (n). If A., professing to act by my authority does that which prima facie amounts to a trespass, and I afterwards assent to and adopt his act, there he is treated as having from the beginning acted by my authority, and I become a trespasser, unless I can justify the particular act which is to be deemed as having been done with my previous sanction (o). In this case the party ratifying becomes, as it were, a trespasser by estoppel—at all events—he is precluded from denying that he gave antecedent authority for that act which he afterwards admits himself to have authorised (o).

An apt instance of the effect of ratifying a tort presents itself in Hull v. Pickersgill (p). There the plaintiff, an uncertificated bankrupt, sued the defendants in trespass for breaking open his house, and seizing goods belonging to him acquired since the bankruptcy. Now in this case it appeared that the defendants had become creditors of the plaintiff whilst uncertificated; that at the time of the seizure they did not even know who were the assignees under the bankruptcy; but that, after the action had been commenced, and before plea pleaded, they (the defendants) obtained a surrender from the assignees of their interest in the effects seized. It was held, that this surrender had a retrospective operation, so as to protect the defendants by clothing them with the rights and title of the assignees. "The rule of law," said Dallas, C. J. (q), "is, that he, for whom a trespass is committed, is no trespasser unless he agrees to the trespass; but if he afterwards agrees to it, his subsequent assent Birkenhead, Lancashire, and Cheshire Junction R. C., 7 Exch. 36, 40; cited 6 H. & N. 364, 365.

(n) Ante, p. 308.

(o) See Judgm., Bird v. Brown, 4

Exch. 799.

(p) 1 B. & B. 282. See Heslop v. Baker, 8 Exch. 411.

(q) 1 B. & B. 286.

has relation back, and is equivalent to a command, according to the well-established maxim, Omnis ratihabitio retrotrahitur et mandato priori æquiparatur." It may be proper to direct attention specifically to one point which was urged on behalf of the plaintiff in Hull v. Pickersgill, viz.—that the defendants had not assumed to act at the time of making their seizure for the benefit of the assignees. To this, however, it was answered, that every presumption was to be made against a plaintiff circumstanced as above described; and further, that the subsequent application to the assignees for their assent to what had been done, "was a recognition by the defendants as well of the assignees' interest in the property, as that these interests had been remembered in the seizure."

In Wilson v. Tumman (r), the rule now under notice is fully and elaborately stated, in these words:—"That an act done for another by a person not assuming to act for himself but for such other person, though without any precedent authority whatever, becomes the act of the principal, if subsequently ratified by him, is the known and well-established rule of law. In that case the principal is bound by the act, whether it be for his detriment or his advantage, and whether it be founded on a tort or a contract, to the same extent as by—and with all the consequences which follow from—the same act done by his previous authority." But this is not so where the actual wrong-doer at the time of committing the tort in question assumed to act for himself only, and not as agent for or as servant of another; so that if a bailiff take a heriot, claiming property in it himself, the subsequent agreement of the lord would not amount to a ratification of his authority as bailiff at the time; but if he took it at the time as bailiff of the lord, the subsequent ratification by the lord would make him bailiff at the time (s).

(r) 6 M. & Gr. 236, 242-3; per B. 334; Wright v. Crookes, 1 Scott, Bramwell, B., Withers v. Parker, 4 N. R., 685. See Moon v. Towers, 8 H. & N. 534; S. C., 5 Id. 725; per C. B., N. S., 611.
Coltman, J., Walker v. Hunter, 2 C.

The distinction here insisted upon is practically important. If, for instance, a judgment creditor issues execution against his debtor, and directs the sheriff acting under the writ to seize goods belonging to some third party, such previous direction would undoubtedly make the execution creditor a trespasser; because all who procure a trespass to be done are trespassers themselves, and the sheriff would be supposed not to have taken the goods merely under the authority of the writ, but as the servant of the execution creditor. If, on the other hand, we suppose that the sheriff, acting under a valid writ by the command of the Court, and as the servant of the Court, seizes the wrong person's goods, a subsequent declaration by the plaintiff in the original action, ratifying and approving the taking, would not suffice to alter its original character, and make it a wrongful taking by the execution creditor (t).

Lewis v. Read (u), is well worthy of notice in connection with this subject, viz., as to the effect of ratifying a tort. There a landlord authorised bailiffs to distrain for rent due to him from his tenant of a farm, expressly directing them not to take anything except on the demised premises. The bailiffs, however, distrained cattle belonging to another person (supposing them to be the tenant's), beyond the boundary of the farm. The cattle were sold, and the landlord received the proceeds. Upon these facts the Court of Exchequer held, that the landlord was not liable in trover for the value of the cattle, unless it were found by the jury that he had ratified the acts of the bailiffs with knowledge of the irregularity; or unless it were found that he chose, without inquiry, to take the risk upon himself, and to adopt the whole of their acts. Hence, we may infer that a principal will not be liable

(s) Judgm., 6 M. & Gr. 243.

(t) Judgm., 6 M. & Gr. 244; Wool- len v. Wright, 1 H. & C. 554.

(u) 13 M. & W. 684.

in trespass for the act of his agent, unless he either authorised it beforehand, or subsequently assented to it with knowledge of what had been improperly done (x).

Further: the case of Buron v. Denman (y), tried at bar before the Court of Exchequer, is important, as showing the effect of the ratification of an act, primâ facie tortious, done by an agent; and although it was there held, that the party who had ultimately ratified the trespass could not be made responsible for it, yet the general effect, operation, and applicability of the doctrine of ratihabitio were judicially admitted and recognised. In the case just cited, the facts were these:—the action, which was in trespass, was brought by a slave-dealer, resident on the coast of Africa, and there carrying on his trade, against a commander in the British navy on that station, whose duty it was to enforce the provisions of a certain treaty between our own and the Spanish Government, for the suppression of the Slave-trade. The gist of the action was, that the defendant had committed a trespass in destroying the property, and carrying off the slaves of the plaintiff; and in answer to this charge the defendant put on the record a series of pleas, by some of which he justified the alleged torts as having been done by command of the Crown,—a defence which, if established, would be good on grounds of general policy, which protects the servants of the public from liability in respect of any acts done by them in the regular course of discharging their official duties (z). The principal question to be decided in Buron v. Denman, accordingly, was, whether the conduct of the defendant in carrying away the slaves, and committing the other alleged trespasses, could be justified as an act of (x) Freeman v. Rosher, 13 Q. B. 780; Haseler v. Lemoyne, 5 C. B., N. S., 530; Collett v. Foster, 2 H. & N. 356, 361.

(y) 2 Exch. 167. Acc. Judgm., Secretary of State of India v. Sahaba, 13

Moo. P. C. C. 86.

(z) See Johnstone v. Sutton, 1 T. R. 510; per Buller, J., Macbeath v. Haldimand, 1 T. R. 182; and cases cited Broom's Pract., vol. 1, pp. 585 et seq.

state, done by authority of the Crown? It was not, indeed, contended that there was any previous authority for the acts complained of. The justification of the defendant depended upon an alleged subsequent ratification of his acts. Now, in this case, there was ample evidence to show that the Government had expressed their approval, and intimated their adoption of the acts of the defendant, and it consequently only remained to consider, whether the rule of law applicable amongst private individuals, in regard to the effect of ratification, applied also to the Crown. The Court held that it did so apply; and that the defendant was accordingly justified in what he had done, whilst acting in the public service.

As, on the one hand, liability may be incurred by the adoption of a tortious act antecedently done, so, on the other hand, may benefit in some cases be derived from the ratification of an act prima facie and ostensibly wrongful; thus,—where an act, which if unauthorised would amount to a trespass, has been done in the name and on the behalf of another, though without previous authority from him, his subsequent ratification may enable the party on whose behalf the act was done to take advantage of it, and to treat it as having been done by his direction. But this doctrine must be taken with the qualification, that the act of ratification take place at a time and under circumstances when the ratifying party might himself have lawfully done the act which he ratifies (a).

The conclusions arrived at in the preceding pages, with

(a) Judgm., Bird v. Brown, 4 Exch. 798-9 (where some cases are cited illustrating the above doctrine); cited Judgm., Simpson v. Eglington, 10 Exch. 849, where the Court remark, that in Bird v. Brown grave doubts are suggested as to the effect of the retrospective ratification of a tort by one meaning to act as agent for him who ratifies it, and as to the question whether the effect of such ratification will be to render the act punishable if done at the time without authority.

reference to the doctrine of ratification, may thus briefly be presented :—

1. If A. commit a trespass, whether to the person or to property, professing at the time to act on behalf of B., though without authority from him, and B. afterwards knowingly ratify the trespass, B. may thus be rendered liable for it.

2. If A. does a tortious act, either on behalf of himself or as agent for B., and C., with whom A. has had no previous communication in regard to it, afterwards ratifies or adopts the act, C. will not, by so ratifying or adopting it, incur liability ex delicto in respect of it.

3. One who adopts and ratifies an act done in his name or on his behalf, though without previous authority from him, may, sometimes (b), thereby enable himself to take advantage of the act done, provided he could himself lawfully have done it at the time when in fact it was performed.

Liability of master to servant for injury sustained by latter in his service.

Thirdly, the principle, upon which a master is in general liable to answer for accidents resulting from the negligence or unskilfulness of his servant, clearly does not apply to protect the servant guilty of such negligence or want of skill against the claim of a third party who has been injured thereby (c). Nor, if the servant by his own unskilfulness sustain injury, can he claim damages from his master, upon an allegation that his own negligence was in point of law the negligence of his master (d). Where, moreover, several servants possessed of competent or reasonable care and skill are employed by the same master, and injury results to one of them from the negligence of another fellow-servant, the master is not in general responsible. "Put the case," observes the Court of Exchequer (e), after laying down the

(b) See cases cited, Judgm., 4 Exch. 799-800.

(c) Ante, p. 692.

(d) Judgm., 5 Exch. 350.

(e) Judgm., Hutchinson v. York, Newcastle, and Berwick R. Co., 5 Exch. 351; Acc. Wigmore v. Jay, Id. 354; Skipp v. Eastern Counties R. Co., 9 foregoing propositions, "of a master employing A. and B., two of his servants, to drive his cattle to market. It is admitted, that, if by the unskilfulness of A. a stranger is injured, the master is responsible. Not so if A. by his unskilfulness hurts himself; he cannot treat that as the want of skill of his master. Suppose, then, that, by the unskilfulness of A., B., the other servant, is injured, while they are jointly engaged in the same service, there we think B. has no claim against the master. They have both engaged in a common service, the duties of which impose a certain risk on each of them; and, in case of negligence on the part of the other, the party injured knows that the negligence is that of his fellow-servant, and not of his master. He knew, when he engaged in the service, that he was exposed to the risk of injury, not only from his own want of skill or care, but also from the want of it on the part of his fellow-servant; and he must be supposed to have contracted on the terms that, as between himself and his master, he would run this risk" (f).

The rule above stated, holds in regard to a mere volunteer who assists the servants of another whilst engaged in their ordinary employment (g).

But although a master is not in general responsible to one servant for an injury occasioned to him by the negligence of a fellow-servant while they are acting in one common service, yet this rule must be received with the qualification that the master does not personally interfere in causing the hurt com-

Exch. 228; Priestley v. Fowler, 3 M. & W. 1; Vose v. Lancashire and Yorkshire R. Co., 2 H. & N. 728, 738 (where, however, the rule did not apply); Dynen v. Leach, 26 L. J., Ex., 221; Griffiths v. Gidlow, 3 H. & N. 648; Wiggett v. Fox, 11 Exch. 832.

(f) See Skipp v. Eastern Counties R. Co., 9 Exch. 223; Priestley v. Fow- ler, 3 M. & W. 1; Winterbottom v. Wright, 10 M. & W. 109, cited per Coleridge, J., 2 E. & B. 253.

(g) Degg v. Midland R. Co., 1 H. & N. 773 (affirmed in Potter v. Faulkner, 1 B. & S. 800), with which compare Abraham v. Reynolds, 5 H. & N. 143, 150.

plained of (h), and shall have taken due care not to expose his servant to unreasonable risks (i), ex. gr., by employing defective machinery (k). The servant, for instance, when he engages to run the risks of his service, including those arising from the negligence of fellow-servants, has a right to understand that the master has taken reasonable care to protect him from such risks by associating him only with persons of ordinary skill and care (l).

Neither would a master be exempt from responsibility to his servant for an injury occasioned to him by the act of another servant, where the servant injured was not, at the time of the injury, acting in the service of his master. In such a case, the servant injured is substantially a stranger, and entitled to all the privileges which he would have had if he had not been a servant (m). The rule is similar where the complainant sustains a hurt through the negligence of defendant's servants when not under the same control as himself, or engaged with him in effecting some common object (n).

In The Bartonshill Coal Company v. Reid (o), which came before the House of Lords on appeal from the Court of Session in Scotland, the question for decision was whether, if in the working of a mine one of the servants employed is killed or injured by the negligence of another servant

(h) Roberts v. Smith, 2 H. & N. 213; Ormond v. Holland, E. B. & E. 102; Williams v. Clough, 2 H. & N. 258; Griffiths v. Gidlow, 3 H. & N. 648; Dynen v. Leach, 26 L. J., Ex., 221.

(i) See Marshall v. Stewart, H. L., March 13th, 1855.

(k) Weems v. Mathieson, 4 Macq. H. L. Ca. 215; Searle v. Lindsay, 11 C. B., N. S., 429; Clarke v. Holmes, 7 H. & N. 937; S. C., 6 Id. 349, and cases there cited. See Riley v. Baxendale, 6 H. & N. 445; Cowley v.

Mayor, &c. of Sunderland, 6 H. & N. 565; Mellors v. Shaw, 1 B. & S. 437, citing Ashworth v. Stanwix, 30 L. J., Q. B., 183.

(l) Judgm., 5 Exch. 353; Tarrant v. Webb, 18 C. B. 797; Ormond v. Holland, supra.

(m) Judgm., 5 Exch. 352.

(n) Abraham v. Reynolds, 5 H. & N. 143; per Lord Chelmsford, C., 3 Macq. H. L. Ca. 307.

(o) 3 Macq. H. L. Ca. 266; Weems v. Mathieson, 4 Id. 215, 226.

employed in some common work, that other servant having been a competent workman and properly employed to discharge the duties intrusted to him, the common employers of both are responsible to the servant who is injured, or to his representatives, for the loss occasioned by the negligence of the other?

In answering the above question in the negative, Lord Cranworth offers some remarks which will here be apposite, and which seem to exhaust the subject touched upon in the preceding pages (p), viz., the doctrine of our law respecting the liability of a master to a stranger or to his own servant for bodily hurt sustained through negligence:—"Where," he says, "an injury is occasioned to any one by the negligence of another, if the person injured seeks to charge with its consequences any person other than him who actually caused the damage, it lies on the person injured to show that the circumstances were such as to make some other person responsible. In general, it is sufficient for this purpose to show that the person whose neglect caused the injury was at the time when it was occasioned acting not on his own account but in the course of his employment as a servant in the business of a master, and that the damage resulted from the servant so employed not having conducted his master's business with due care. In such a case, the maxim 'respondeat superior' (q) prevails, and the master is responsible."

"Thus, if a servant driving his master's carriage along the highway, carelessly runs over a bystander, or if a gamekeeper employed to kill game, carelessly fires at a hare so as to shoot a person passing on the ground, or if a workman employed by a builder in building a house, negligently throws a stone or brick from a scaffold and so hurts a passer-by: in all these cases (and instances might be multiplied indefinitely) the

(p) Et vide per Lord Chelmsford, C.,
Bartons Hill Coal Co. v. McGuire, 8

Macq. H. L. Ca. 306 et seq.

(q) Leg. Max., 4th ed., p. 810.

person injured has a right to treat the wrongful or careless act as the act of the master: Qui facit per alium facit per se (r). If the master himself had driven his carriage improperly, or fired carelessly, or negligently thrown the stone or brick, he would have been directly responsible, and the law does not permit him to escape liability because the act complained of was not done with his own hand. He is considered as bound to guarantee third persons against all hurt arising from the carelessness of himself or of those acting under his orders in the course of his business. Third persons cannot, or at all events may not, know whether the particular injury complained of was the act of the master or the act of his servant. A person sustaining injury in any of the modes I have suggested, has a right to say, I was no party to your carriage being driven along the road, to your shooting near the public highway, or to your being engaged in building a house. If you chose to do, or cause to be done, any of these acts, it is to you, and not to your servants, I must look for redress, if mischief happens to me as their consequence. A large portion of the ordinary acts of life are attended with some risk to third persons, and no one has a right to involve others in risks without their consent. This consideration is alone sufficient to justify the wisdom of the rule which makes the person by whom or by whose orders these risks are incurred responsible to third persons for any ill consequences resulting from want of due skill or caution."

"But," continues Lord Cranworth, in the case above cited, "do the same principles apply to the case of a workman injured by the want of care of a fellow-workman engaged together in the same work? I think not. When the workman contracts to do work of any particular sort, he knows, or ought to know, to what risk he is exposing himself; he knows, if such be the nature of the risk, that want of care on the part of a fellow-workman may be injurious or fatal to him, and that against such want of care his employer cannot by possibility protect him. If such want of care should occur, and evil is the result, he cannot say that he does not know whether the master or the servant was to blame. He knows that the blame was wholly that of the servant. He cannot say the master need not have engaged in the work at all, for he was party to its being undertaken.

“Principle, therefore, seems to me opposed to the doctrine, that the responsibility of a master for the ill consequences of his servant’s carelessness is applicable to the demand made by a fellow-workman in respect of evil resulting from the carelessness of a fellow-workman when engaged in a common work” (s).

Where, however, servants are engaged—not in one common work but—in different departments of duty, the master will be liable in respect of damage done to one servant by another through carelessness or negligence in the same manner as if the servant injured stood under such relation to him (t).

Prior to the stat. 9 & 10 Vict. c. 93, intituled “An Act for compensating the families of persons killed by accidents,” an action was not maintainable against one who by his negligence occasioned the death of another, for in such a case the rule of law applied—actio personalis moritur cum Action for compensation, where death has been caused by negligence.

(s) 3 Macq. H. L. Ca. 282-4. (The learned lord whose words are above cited then proceeds to comment seriatim on the following cases:—Priestley v. Fowler, 3 M. & W. 1; Hutchinson v. York, Newcastle, and Berwick R. C., 5 Exch. 349; Wigmore v. Jay, Id. 354; Skipp v. Eastern Counties R. C., 9 Exch. 223; Couch v. Steel, 3 E. & B. 402;—also on the Scotch appeal cases—Paterson v. Wallace, 1 Macq.

H. L. Ca. 748; Bryden v. Stewart, 2 Id. 30). Searle v. Lindsay, 11 C. B., N. S., 429; Waller v. South Eastern R. C., 2 H. & C. 102, and cases there cited.

(t) Per Lord Chelmsford, C., Bartonshill Coal Co. v. McGuire, 3 Macq. Sc. App. Ca. 306. Holmes v. Clarke, 7 H. & N. 937; S. C., 6 Id. 349; per Martin, B., Waller v. South Eastern R. C., 2 H. & C. 111.

personā (u). By sect. 1, however, of that statute, it is enacted, "that whensoever the death of a person shall be caused by wrongful act, neglect, or default, and the act, neglect, or default is such as would (if death had not ensued) have entitled the party injured to maintain an action and recover damages in respect thereof (x), then and in every such case the person who would have been liable if death had not ensued, shall be liable to an action for damages notwithstanding the death of the person injured, and although the death shall have been caused under such circumstances as amount in law to felony" (y). By sect. 2 of the statute above mentioned, it is further enacted, that "every such action shall be for the benefit of the wife, husband, parent (z), and child (a) of the person whose death shall have been so caused, and shall be brought by and in the name of the executor or administrator of the person deceased; and in every such action the jury may give such damages as they may think proportioned to the injury resulting from such death to the parties respectively for whom and for whose benefit such action shall be brought; and the amount so recovered, after deducting the costs not recovered from the defendant, shall be divided amongst the before-mentioned parties in such shares as the jury by their verdict shall find and direct." Sect. 3 of the same statute (u) Leg. Max., 4th ed., p. 869.

See, also, per Parke, B., Armsworth v. South Eastern R. C., 11 Jur. 758.

(z) The words supra have reference not to the nature of the loss or injury sustained, but to the circumstances under which the bodily injury arose and the nature of the wrongful act, neglect, or default complained of: Judgm., Pym v. Great Northern R. C., 2 B. & S. 767; S. C. (in Error), 32 L. J., Q. B., 377.

(y) As to the suspension of the right of action in this case at common law, ante, p. 100.

(z) By sect. 5, the word "parent" shall include father and mother, and grandfather and grandmother, and step-father and stepmother.

(a) By sect. 5, the word "child" shall include son and daughter, and grandson and granddaughter, and step-son and stepdaughter.

An illegitimate child is not within the above section: Dickinson v. North Eastern R. C. 33 L. J., Ex., 96.

furth^r enacts, "that not more than one action shall lie for and in respect of the same subject-matter of complaint; and that every such action shall be commenced within twelve calendar months after the death of such deceased person;" and in every action brought under the Act, it is required (sect. 4) that the plaintiff on the record shall, together with the declaration, "deliver to the defendant or his attorney, a full particular of the person or persons for whom and on whose behalf such action shall be brought, and of the nature of the claim in respect of which damages shall be sought to be recovered."

The rules of law applicable in actions brought by personal representatives under the above statute are identical with those applicable in actions of tort brought for bodily injuries at suit of the injured parties themselves (b). The onus of showing negligence lies upon the plaintiffs (c). If the deceased by his own negligence or carelessness materially contributed to the accident (d), his representatives will not be entitled to recover (e). Should it be contended that the actual wrong-doer stood in the relation of servant to the defendant, with a view to casting liability upon the latter, and should it appear that in fact such relation did not exist between them, but that some link in the chain which had been relied upon as connecting them together was in truth wanting, the action brought for compensation will not be sustainable (f).

(b) Tucker v. Chaplin, 2 C. & K. 730; Barnes v. Ward, 9 C. B. 392; Binks v. South Yorkshire R. C., 3 B. & S. 244; Robbins v. Jones, 15 C. B., N. S., 221; Dakin v. Brown, 8 C. B., 92; Birkett v. Whitehaven Junction R. C., 4 H. & N. 730; Manley v. St. Helen's Can. and R. C., 2 H. & N. 340; Cotton v. Wood, 8 C. B., N. S., 568; and cases cited ante, pp. 679 et seq.

(e) Hammack v. White, 11 C. B., N. S., 588.

(d) Witherley v. Regent's Canal Co., 12 C. B., N. S., 2; Thorogood v. Brian, 8 C. B. 115; Cattlin v. Hill, Id. 123. See Holden v. Liverpool Gas Co., 3 C. B. 1; Flower v. Adam, 2 Taunt. 314; and cases ante, pp. 679 et seq.

(e) Judgm., Pym v. Great Northern R. C., 2 B. & S. 767.

(f) Reedie v. London and North Western R. C., and Hobbit v. The Same, 4 Exch. 244.

Further, if it be shown that the injury which caused death was occasioned by the negligence of the deceased's fellow-servant in the course of their common employ, such latter person being possessed of competent care and skill (g), a like result will follow.

In an action founded upon the statute before us (the operation whereof, it will be noticed, is confined to cases in which death has been caused by negligence), the measure of damages is not the loss or suffering of the deceased, but the pecuniary loss, actual or prospective (h), resulting to his family from his death; nor can the jury, in assessing the amount of compensation to be awarded to the persons on whose behalf the claim to it is put forward, take into consideration the mental anguish sustained by them (i).

Torts to the health and comfort of individuals.

2. Following the arrangement specified at p. 674, I propose, in the next place, to speak of torts to the health and comfort of individuals, which are clearly to be included under the general head of Torts to the Person. Injuries affecting the health of an individual, civilly cognisable by Courts of law, may be committed in various ways, ex. gr.—Where, “by any unwholesome practices of another, a man sustains any apparent damage in his vigour or constitution. As by selling him bad provisions or wine; by the exercise of (g) Hutchinson v. York, Newcastle, and Berwick R. C., 5 Exch. 343; Wigmore v. Jay, Id. 354.

(h) Franklin v. South Eastern R. C., 3 H. & N. 211, 214 (where the Court say that “the damages should be calculated in reference to a reasonable expectation of pecuniary benefit, as of right or otherwise, from the continuance of the life):” followed in Dalton v. South Eastern R. C., 4 C. B., N. S., 296, 305; Pym v. Great Northern R. C., 2 B. & S. 759; Duckworth v. Johnson, 4 H. & N. 653.

(i) Blake v. Midland R. C., 18 Q.

B. 93. And see an article on the measure of damages in cases such as are above adverted to: Jur., vol. 18, p. 1 (citing Groves v. London and Brighton R. C., cor. Jervis, C. J., Dec. 15, 1852). The 1st sect. of the Act (9 & 10 Vict. c. 93) recites that “it is oftentimes right and expedient that the wrong-doer in such case should be answerable in damages”—not always. That means if damages have been sustained; if not, the action is not maintainable: per Pollock, C. B., Duckworth v. Johnson, 4 H. & N. 655.

a noisome trade which infects the air in his neighbourhood ; or by the neglect or unskilful management of his physician, surgeon, or apothecary. For it hath been solemnly resolved, that mala praxis is a great misdemeanor and offence at common law, whether it be for curiosity and experiment or by neglect ; because it breaks the trust which the party had placed in his physician and tends to the patient's destruction " (k).

Treating very briefly of the various torts to the health and comfort of individuals in the order indicated in the above passage, I may first observe that, in Burnby v. Bollett (l), a question raised as to the civil liabilities of a butcher who sells meat unfit for human food was learnedly discussed ; and the conclusion there come to was, that victuallers, butchers, and other common dealers in provisions, are not merely in the same situation as dealers in other commodities, and liable under the same circumstances as they are, so that if an order be sent to them to be executed, they are presumed to undertake to supply a good and merchantable article ; but they are also liable to punishment for selling corrupt victuals by virtue of an ancient statute (certainly if they do so knowingly, and probably if they do not), and are therefore responsible civilly to those customers to whom they sell such victuals, for any special or particular injury by the breach of the law which they thereby commit (m). They would not, however, be liable on an implied warranty (n).

Sale of un-wholesome food.

In the next place, as regards nuisances calculated injuri-

Nuisances affecting health.

(k) 3 Bla. Com. 122, citing Dr. Groenvelt's case, 1 Ld. Raym. 214.

Mr. Chitty also says (Gen. Pract., vol. 1, p. 42), "The health of an individual may be injured by a public or private nuisance, as by breaking quarantine, by sale of unwholesome food, by want of due care in medical practitioners, or by sudden alarms affecting the nervous system."

(l) 16 M. & W. 644. See, also, Couch v. Steel, 3 E. & B. 402.

(m) Judgm., 16 M. & W. 654 ; 4th Inst. 261 ; Chitt. Gen. Pract., vol. 1, pp. 42-43.

(n) Emmerton v. Mathews, 7 H. & N. 586.

ously to affect the health or comfort of individuals,—the distinction between a public and a private nuisance must here carefully be kept in view,—the mode of procedure for the abatement of the former being different from that available to an individual in respect of the latter.

Public
nuisance.

To constitute a public nuisance, the thing complained of must be “such as in its nature or its consequences is a nuisance—an injury or a damage to all persons who come within the sphere of its operation, though it may be so in a greater degree to some than it is to others” (o). For example: if, during the operation of a manufactory, volumes of noxious smoke or of poisonous effluvia are emitted; to persons who are at all within the reach of these operations, a nuisance, in the popular sense of the term, is committed; although to those who are nearer to the manufactory in question the nuisance and inconvenience caused by it may be greater than it is to those who are more remote from it. So, the stopping of the King’s highway is a nuisance to all who may have occasion to travel upon that highway; it may be a much greater nuisance to a person who has to travel along it every day than it is to an individual who has to travel along it only once a year; but it is more or less a nuisance to every one who has occasion to use it—it is a ‘public’ nuisance (p).

Private
nuisance.

If, however, the thing complained of is such that it is a nuisance to those who are more immediately within the sphere of its operation, but is no nuisance or inconvenience whatever, or is even advantageous or pleasurable to those who are more removed from it, there the matter in question does not properly come within the meaning of the term

(o) Per Kindersley, V.-C., Soltau v. De Held, 2 Sim. N. S. 142.

(p) Judgm., 2 Sim. N. S. 143.

In regard to the question—what is a public nuisance? see also Att.-Gen. v. Sheffield Gas Consumers’ Co., 3 De G., M. & G. 304; Imperial Gas Light and Coke Co. v. Broadbent, 7 H. L. Ca. 600; Crowder v. Tinkler, 19 Ves. 617; Thorne v. Taw Vale R. Co., 13 Beav. 10, 21; Bostock v. North Staffordshire R. Co., 5 De G. & S. 534; Reg. v. Train, 2 B. & S. 640.

'public' nuisance (q). Thus, a peal of bells may be an intolerable nuisance to one who lives very close to them, whilst to a person who resides at a distance from them the sound thereby produced may be pleasurable (q).

It does not, then, follow, because a thing complained of is a nuisance to several individuals, that it is therefore a public nuisance, ex. gr.—if a man by building up a wall darkens the ancient windows of several different dwelling-houses, he is not in thus acting necessarily guilty of a public nuisance (r).

Now, in the case of a public nuisance the remedy at law is by indictment, the remedy in equity is by information at the suit of the Attorney-General. In the case of a private nuisance, the remedy at law is by action; the remedy in equity is by bill (s). Where, indeed, that which is a public nuisance is also a private nuisance to an individual by inflicting on him some special or particular damage, the individual thus specially aggrieved may have his private remedy at law by action or in equity by bill (t).

Remedy in either of the above cases.

From the foregoing remarks will be inferred the extreme importance of determining the true nature of an alleged nuisance prior to advising respecting the mode of procedure which should be adopted in regard to it.

It would of course be useless to attempt to enumerate the various kinds of nuisances prejudicial to health, which are actionable by virtue of the principles above laid down. Upon this subject Aldred's case (u) may advantageously be consulted: it illustrates the rule of the Roman law there cited, prohibetur ne quis faciat in suo quod nocere possit alieno (v). Without, then, dwelling at any length upon this part of the (q) Soltau v. De Held, 2 Sim. N. S. 133, 143.

(r) Id. 144.

(s) Judgm., 2 Sim. N. S., 145; 3 Bla. Com. 219; Mitf. Pl., 5th ed., p. 168.

(t) Judgm., 2 Sim. N. S. 145, citing Iveson v. Moore, Comb. 53, and other cases; 3 Bla. Com. 220; ante, p. 96.

(u) 9 Rep. 57 b.

(v) See Jones v. Powell, Palm. 506.

subject, it will possibly obviate difficulty to observe that a private nuisance may be to the person or to the property (x) of another; it may be of a mixed kind (y), being in part productive of personal discomfort or annoyance to the plaintiff, in part causing a depreciation in the value of property occupied by him. As regards the amount of personal inconvenience, the infliction whereof by another may be deemed to justify the interference of a court of equity, or may sustain an action at law (z), the true test would seem to be that suggested by Knight-Bruce, V.-C., in Walter v. Selfe (a), in these words—Ought the inconvenience in question to be considered in fact as more than fanciful, or as one of mere delicacy or fastidiousness (b); “as an inconvenience materially interfering with the ordinary comfort physically of human existence, not merely according to elegant or dainty modes and habits of living, but according to plain, sober, and simple notions among the English people?”

Action for negligent treatment of patient.

The action for negligent treatment of a patient, alluded to by Blackstone in the passage formerly cited (c), is sustainable upon this principle, that every person who enters into a learned profession undertakes to bring to the exercise of it a reasonable degree of care and skill. He does not, indeed, if he be a surgeon, undertake that he will perform a cure, nor does he undertake to use the highest possible degree of skill; but he undertakes to bring a fair, reasonable, and competent degree of skill to the treatment of his patient; and it will be for the jury, in any given case involving a charge of negligence, to say whether the injury complained of really (x) Post, Chap. 3, sect. 1.

(y) See White v. Cohen, 1 Drew. 312; Flight v. Thomas, 10 Ad. & E. 590; Bliss v. Hall, 4 Bing. N. C. 183.

(z) As to the writ of injunction to restrain the repetition or continuance of a nuisance at common law, see ante, Book I., Chap. 5.

(a) 4 De G. & S. 315, adopted in Soltau v. De Held, 2 Sim. N. S. 159.

(b) Lex non favet delicatorem votis, 9 Rep. 58 a.

(c) Ante, p. 707.

was occasioned by the want of such skill in the defendant (d).

3. Torts affecting personal liberty are False Imprisonment and Malicious Arrest. Torts to personal liberty.

To constitute the injury of false imprisonment (e) there are two requisites, the detention of the person, and the unlawfulness of such detention. I had formerly (f) occasion to observe, that "the confinement of the person in any wise is an imprisonment," which may even be evidenced by the forcibly detaining of another in the public street (g). False imprisonment consists in such confinement or detention without sufficient authority (h). As if A. is arrested on a criminal charge under a warrant against B. (i); or if a warrant for the apprehension of any one on such a charge directed to the constable of X., a parish in the county of Y., be delivered for execution to a county constable of Y., and be executed by him (k). In either of these cases, the arrest effected under the warrant will be illegal, as unauthorised by it; and the party taking out the warrant, and delivering it to the constable will be liable in trespass at suit of the individual arrested. So, the wrongful removal of a prisoner from one part of a prison to another, and his detention in the part to which he is so (d) Per Tindal, C. J., Lamphier v. Phipos, 8 Car. & P. 475, 479. See Slater v. Baker, 2 Wils. 359; Pippin v. Sheppard, 11 Price, 400; Seare v. Prentice, 8 East, 348; Hancke v. Hooper, 7 Car. & P. 81.

As to the remedy for negligence of an attorney, &c., see post, Chap. 4.

(e) The statutory form of declaration in an action for assault and false imprisonment, adapted to an ordinary state of facts, charges, "that the defendant assaulted and beat the plaintiff, gave him into custody to a policeman, and caused him to be imprisoned in a police office:" C. L. Proc. Act, 1852, Sched. B., No. 26.

(f) Ante, p. 691.

(g) As to the question—What may suffice to constitute an "imprisonment"? see further, Warner, app., Riddiford, resp., 4 C. B., N. S., 180, 204-5; Bird v. Jones, 7 Q. B. 742; Wright v. Wilson, 1 Ld. Raym. 739; Arrowsmüth v. Le Mesurier, 2 B. & P. N. R. 211; Cant v. Parsons, 6 Car. & P. 504; Wood v. Lane, Id. 774.

(h) 3 Bla. Com. 127. See Mostyn v. Fabrigas, Cowp. 161; Worth v. Terrington, 13 M. & W. 781.

(i) Hoye v. Bush, 1 M. & Gr. 775.

(k) Freegard v. Barnes, 7 Lxh. 827.

False imprisonment.

removed, will lay the foundation of an action of trespass and false imprisonment, in which even the Home Secretary may be liable, if it appear that the complainant was removed under a general order issued by such Secretary for the classification of the prisoners, which he had no legal authority to make (l).

An arrest and imprisonment may, however, be justified in certain cases by reference to acknowledged principles of law, or as having been effected under the sanction of judicial process (m).

For instance, it is laid down that a private person is justified in arresting any of the Queen's subjects if there be a breach of the peace actually continuing, or if he has reasonable ground to believe that a breach of the peace which has been committed will be renewed (n). It is also clear that any bystander may and ought to interfere to part those who make an affray, and to stay those who are going to join in it; further—he may arrest the affrayers and detain them until their heat be over, and then deliver them to a constable (o): the principle of these decisions being, that, “for the sake of the preservation of the peace, any individual who sees it broken may restrain the liberty of him whom he sees breaking it, so long as his conduct shows that the public peace is likely to be endangered by his acts” (p).

So, if a person comes into a house, or is in it, and makes a noise and disturbs the peace of the family, although no assault has been committed, the master of the house may turn him out, or call a policeman to do so (q). And if a (l) Cobbett v. Grey, 4 Exch. 729.

(m) It is said that “there are two classes of rightful arrest; the one where the arrest is enjoined as a duty, the other where it is permitted as justifiable”: Arg., R. v. Howarth, Moo. C. C. 213. See also Hawk. Pl. C., 8th ed., vol. 2, p. 114; Newton v. Boodle, 3 C. B. 795.

(n) Price v. Seeley, 10 Cl. & F. 28; Grant v. Moser, 5 M. & Gr. 123; Baynes v. Brewster, 2 Q. B. 375. See Wooding v. Oxley, 9 Car. & P. 1.

(o) Timothy v. Simpson, 1 Cr. M. & R. 757.

(p) Judgm., 1 Cr. M. & R. 762.

(q) Per Lord Campbell, C. J., Shaw v. Chairitie, 3 Car. & K. 21, 25; man stations himself opposite to another's house, making a disturbance, exciting others to disturbance and riot, and obstructing the public way, these are facts which may well amount to such a breach of the peace as justifies an arrest (r).

It seems clearly established, however, that a private individual who has seen an affray committed, is not justified in giving in charge to a constable who has not, after the affray has entirely ceased, after the offenders have quitted the place where it was committed, and when there is no danger of its renewal (s). Though a private person may set in motion a constable who has seen a breach of the peace committed, without incurring liability (t). Inasmuch, moreover, as the power of a constable, at common law, to take into his custody, upon the information of a private person, under such circumstances, must be correlative with that of the latter to give in charge, it follows that the constable will not be justified in taking a party designated as the offender into custody upon such information (u).

A private individual, also, being present at the time when a felony is committed, may legally and ought to arrest or aid in arresting the offender (x). He may even break into a private house in order to prevent the commission of a felony (y). Or, a felony having been committed, he may Rose v. Wilson, 8 Moore, 362; Green v. Bartram, 4 Car. & P. 308; Reece v. Taylor, 4 N. & M. 469. Per Patteson, J., Wheeler v. Whiting, 9 Car. & P. 262; Clifford v. Brandon, 2 Camp. 358.

(r) Webster v. Watts, 11 Q. B. 311, 324; Cohen v. Huskisson, 2 M. & W. 477.

(s) Baynes v. Brewster, 2 Q. B. 375; Judgm., Timothy v. Simpson, 1 Cr. M. & R. 761.

(t) Derecourt v. Corbishley, 5 E. & B. 188.

(u) Judgm., 1 Cr. M. & R. 761.

(x) Chit. Gen. Prac., vol. 1, p. 418.

In Burn's J. P., 29th ed., tit. "Arrest," the cases are enumerated in which a private person, a constable, or a justice of the peace, may legally arrest. See also Steer Parish L., 2nd ed., pp. 363 et seq.

(y) Handcock v. Baker, 2 B. & P. 260.

give in charge the guilty party to a policeman (z). Mere suspicion that a particular person has committed a misdemeanor will not, however, justify the giving him into custody without a warrant (a).

Again: an arrest and imprisonment may be justified on this ground, that a felony having been committed there was reasonable and probable cause to suspect and accuse the plaintiff of it, and therefore to arrest and imprison him with a view to charging him with the offence (b). In any such case it is laid down that, to justify depriving a person of his liberty, the party so doing must allege such a ground of suspicion as the Court can see to be reasonable (c). It would not, however, be correct to say that all the evidence must be set out in the plea; it is enough to show facts sufficient to ground a suspicion of the guilt of the party charged in the mind of a reasonable man (d). It will then be for the jury to say whether the facts pleaded are proved, and for the judge to determine whether or not they amount to reasonable and probable cause—not for suspecting, but—for imprisoning the plaintiff (e).

A plea justifying the breaking and entering a house and arresting the plaintiff without warrant on suspicion of felony, ought distinctly to show not only that there was reason to believe that the suspected person was there, but also that

(z) Atkinson v. Warne, 1 Cr. M. & R. 827. See Perkins v. Vaughan, 4 M. & Gr. 988.

(a) Fox v. Gaunt, 3 B. & Ad. 798, 800.

(b) Ledwith v. Catchpole, Cald 291. See Guppy v. Brittlebank, 5 Price, 525; Allen v. Wright, 8 Car. & P. 522; Williams v. Crosswell, 2 Car. & K. 422; and cases, infra.

(c) Broughton v. Jackson, 18 Q. B. 378.

(d) Id., Mure v. Kaye, 4 Taunt. 34.

(e) West v. Barendale, 9 C. B. 141,

152; Hailes v. Marks, 7 H. & N 56.

“If treason or felony be done, and one hath just cause of suspicion, this is a good cause and warrant in law for him to arrest any man, but he must show in certainty the cause of his suspicion; and whether the suspicion be just or lawful shall be determined by the justices in an action of false imprisonment brought by the party grieved, or upon a habeas corpus, &c.”: 2 Inst. 52.

the defendant entered for the purpose of apprehending him (f).

Although, however, it is clear that a private individual cannot arrest upon bare suspicion, a constable may do so (g). There is this distinction between the two parties just named : in order to justify the former in causing the imprisonment of a person, he must not only make out a reasonable ground of suspicion, but he must prove that a felony has actually been committed ; whereas a constable, having reasonable ground to suspect that a felony has been committed, is authorised to detain the party suspected until inquiry can be made by the proper authorities (g).

Not only under circumstances such as have been above set forth may a private person justify in an action for false imprisonment, but he may sometimes do so by virtue of particular statutes, as for instance under the 14 & 15 Vict. c. 19 (intituled "An Act for the better Prevention of Offences"), whereof section 10 enacts, that "it shall be lawful for any person whatsoever to apprehend any person who shall be found committing any offence against the provisions of this Act, and to convey him or deliver him to some constable or other peace officer, in order to his being conveyed as soon as conveniently may be before a justice of the peace, to be dealt with according to law." And section 11 further provides, that it shall be lawful for any person whatsoever to apprehend any person who shall be found committing any indictable offence in the night, and to give him in charge to a constable in order to his being taken before a magistrate (h).

Again, under the Act relating to larceny and other similar (f) Smith v. Shirley, 3 C. B. 142.

(g) Beckwith v. Philby, 6 B. & C. 638-9 ; Hobbs v. Brancomb, 3 Camp. 420 ; Handcock v. Baker, 2 B. & P. 260 ; Hall v. Booth, 3 N. & M. 316 ; Mathews v. Biddulph, 4 Scott, N. R.,

54 ; Davis v. Russell, 5 Bing. 354, 363 ; Samuel v. Payne, Dougl. 359.

(h) See Mr. Greaves's remarks upon the above section in his edition of Lord Campbell's Acts, p. 46 ; R. v. Hunt, Moo. C. C. 93.

offences (24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 103), it is enacted, that "any person found committing any offence punishable either upon indictment or upon summary conviction" by virtue of the Act except as therein excepted, "may be immediately apprehended without a warrant by any person," and forthwith taken before some neighbouring justice of the peace to be dealt with according to law (i).

So, under the Act relating to Malicious Injuries to Property (24 & 25 Vict. c. 97), s. 6, it is enacted, "that any person found committing any offence against this Act, whether the same be punishable upon indictment or upon summary conviction, may be immediately apprehended without a warrant by any peace officer (k), or the owner of the property injured or his servant or any person authorised by him, and forthwith taken before some neighbouring justice of the peace, to be dealt with according to law."

One practical remark is, in connection with this part of the subject, deserving of attention. Inasmuch as a private individual who directs a police officer to take a person into custody may by so doing render himself liable to an action for false imprisonment (l), and as, in such an action, if the verdict be adverse to the defendant, heavy damages are usually given (m), it is safer in any doubtful case for a private person, especially when time will allow, rather than thus acting for himself, to apply to a magistrate for a warrant; because, whenever an arrest takes place under such instrument, the party arrested cannot sue in trespass the party

(i) See also s. 104. Et vide 24 & 25 Vict. c. 99, s. 31.

(k) See also s. 57. Et vide 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 66.

(l) Hopkins v. Crowe, 7 Car. & P. 373. See Gosden v. Elphick, 4 Exch. 445, 447; Grinham v. Willey, 4 H. & N. 496; Stammers v. Yearsley, 10 Bing. 35.

(m) Per Parke, B., Warwick v.

Foulkes, 12 M. & W. 509, where that learned Judge observes, that "if people choose to settle private disputes by giving others into custody, they must take the consequences." But "a person ought not to be held responsible in trespass unless he directly and immediately causes the imprisonment;" per Pollock, C. B., 4 H. & N. 499.

who makes the charge, nor can he sustain an action on the case against him, although it should turn out that no offence whatever had been committed, unless he can prove that the party who obtained the warrant acted maliciously and without probable cause (n).

An inquiry will presently be instituted in regard to the true meaning and significance of the words "malice" and "malicious" in connection more particularly with torts.

The irresponsibility of a constable or police officer in respect of an act done by him officially affecting the liberty of the subject is, as might be supposed, greater than that accorded to a private individual. "A constable," says Blackstone (o), "hath great original and inherent power with regard to arrests. He may, without warrant, arrest any one for a breach of the peace committed in his view (p), and carry him before a justice of the peace. And in case of felony actually committed, or a dangerous wounding whereby felony is likely to ensue, he may upon probable suspicion, or upon a reasonable charge made by a third person (q), arrest the felon, and for that purpose is authorised (as upon a justice's warrant) to break open doors, and even to kill the felon if he cannot otherwise be taken."

Constable—
liability of—in action for false imprisonment.

Where a particular statute,—ex. gr., the Metropolitan Police Act (2 & 3 Vict. c. 47, ss. 54, 63)—authorises a constable to take into custody without a warrant any one offending against its provisions within view of such constable, it will be requisite for the officer's justification to show that he has acted in strict conformity with the language of the Act (r). Neither at common law nor under the City of London Police Act (2 & 3 Vict. c. 94) has a city (n) Chit. Gen. Pr., vol. 1, p. 620; Stonehouse v. Elliott, 6 T. R. 315.

(o) 4 Com., p. 292; Levy v. Edwards, 1 Car. & P. 40.

(p) See Griffin v. Coleman, 4 H. & N. 265; Derecourt v. Corbishley, 5 E.

& B. 188; Reg. v. Light, Dears. & B. 332.

(q) See Hogg v. Ward, 3 H. & N. 417.

(r) Simmons v. Millingen, 2 C. B. 524; Justice v. Gosling, 12 C. B. 39.

police constable power to take a person into custody without warrant, merely on suspicion that he has committed a misdemeanor (s).

The warrant of a Court of competent authority will in very many cases protect the ministerial officer employed in executing its process, when sued in an action for false imprisonment (t). Upon this subject the well-established and leading rule for our guidance is, that where a Court has jurisdiction of the cause before it, and in disposing of it proceeds inverso ordine, or erroneously, then the party who sues (u), or the officer or minister of the Court who executes its precept or process, will not be liable to an action (x). Where, however, the Court has not jurisdiction of the cause before it, then the whole proceeding is coram non judice, and the parties above specified may be liable to an action for false imprisonment under the process of the Court (y), for these parties are to be presumed to know the law, and therefore to be cognizant of the want of jurisdiction aforesaid. Protection is, however, by stat. 24 Geo. 2, c. 44, ss. 6, 8, extended to constables acting under magisterial warrants issued without jurisdiction, and in some other cases (z).

(s) Bowditch v. Balchin, 5 Exch. 378.

(t) See Galliard, app., Laxton, resp., 2 B. & S. 363, 373.

(u) A fortiori, will a plaintiff, acting under a regular warrant of a competent Court, be protected thereby? See, as a useful illustration of this remark, Davies v. Fletcher, 2 E. & B. 271.

(x) The Marshalsea case, 10 Rep. 68 b, 76 a. See Lery v. Moylan, 10 C. B. 189; Thomas v. Hudson, 14 M. & W. 353, 377; S. C., 16 Id. 885; Andrews v. Marria, 1 Q. B. 3, with which compare Dews v. Riley, 11 C. B. 434; Baylis v. Strickland, 1 M. & Gr. 591; Cobbett v. Hudson, 13 Q. B. 497; Prentice v. Harrison, 4 Q. B. 852, cited and explained per Alderson, B., Brown v. Jones, 15 M. & W. 192; Herring v. Hudson, 3 Exch. 107.

Entick v. Carrington, 19 How. St. Tr. 1030; S. C., 2 Wils. 275; is the leading case in regard to the power to arrest and seize papers under a warrant issued by a secretary of state. See also Leach v. Money, 19 How. St. Tr. 1002; S. C., 3 Burr. 1692, 1743; R. v. Wilkes, 2 Wils. 151; Wilkes v. Wood, 19 How. St. Tr. 1154, 1167; Sayre v. Earl of Rochford, 20 Id. 1286.

(y) The Marshalsea case, supra; Judgm., Morrell v. Martin, 3 M. & Gr. 593; Carratt v. Morley, 1 Q. B. 18; Tinniswood v. Pattison, 3 C. B. 243.

(z) See Broom's Pract., vol. 1, pp.

As exemplifying the former of the two rules just stated, the case of Howard v. Gosset (a) (in which the prior authorities, having reference to justification under warrants, are collected) may be consulted. It was there held, by the Court of Exchequer Chamber, reversing the judgment of the Queen's Bench, that the warrant of the Speaker of the House of Commons, having issued in a matter over which the House had jurisdiction, was to be construed on the same principle as a mandate or writ issuing out of a superior Court acting according to the course of common law, and that it afforded a valid defence to an action for assault and false imprisonment brought against the Sergeant-at-arms who acted in obedience to such warrant.

As exemplifying the latter of the two propositions above stated, may be consulted Watson v. Bodell (b), where it was held, that the messenger of a district Court of Bankruptcy, acting under an order which the Commissioner of that Court had no jurisdiction to make, was liable in trespass.

From The Marshalsea case (c), we learn also that a party who merely originates a suit by stating his case to a Court of justice is not guilty of trespass and false imprisonment, though the proceedings leading to the arrest of the complainant should be erroneous or without jurisdiction (d). And a like remark applies where an individual prefers a complaint to a magistrate and procures a warrant to be granted upon which the accused is taken into custody, the magistrate having in fact no jurisdiction (e). A plaintiff, 607-611; Pedley v. Davis, 10 C. B., N. S., 492, 513.

(a) 10 Q. B. 359, 411.

(b) 14 M. & W. 57; Van Sandau v. Turner, 6 Q. B. 773; Ex parte Van Sandau, 1 Phill. 445, 605.

(c) Ante, p. 718, n. (x).

(d) Carratt v. Morley, 1 Q. B. 18, 28, with which compare Coomer v. Latham, 16 M. & W. 713; Walley v.

M'Connell, 13 Q. B. 903. See also Ewart v. Jones, 14 M. & W. 774; Jarmain v. Hooper, 6 M. & Gr. 827; distinguished in Childers v. Wooler, 2 E. & E. 314, 315; Abley v. Dale, 11 C. B. 378; Yearsley v. Heane, 14 M. & W. 322; Phillips v. Naylor, 3 H. & N. 14, 25; S. C., 4 Id. 565; Williams v. Smith, 14 C. B., N. S., 596.

(e) Brown v. Chapman, 6 C. B.

however, who without the Judge's order issues a ca. sa. on a judgment for less than £20, is liable in trespass (f). An attorney, also, who deliberately directs the execution of a bad warrant, may by so doing render himself responsible in trespass (g). It is true, remark the Court of Common Pleas (h), that if he does no more than set a Court of competent jurisdiction in motion, on behalf of his client, he is no trespasser, notwithstanding that such Court should on his motion do an act of trespass by its officers, and that he would therefore, if sued in trespass under the circumstances supposed, be entitled to a verdict on the plea of not guilty. But where by a special plea he admits and undertakes to justify his concurrence in the act complained of, he can only make out his justification by showing a legal authority under which he acted (i).

The above remarks indicate the degree of liability in trespass which attaches to the plaintiff in an action, or to his attorney, for the imprisonment of the adverse party under judicial process erroneous in some wise, or defective through lack of jurisdiction. Where malice is charged as an ingredient in the alleged tort, the form of the action will be case for a malicious arrest or for a malicious prosecution; to each of which in due order I propose hereafter to advert.

Justice of the peace—liability of, in action for false imprisonment.

Touching the liability of a justice of the peace in an action for false imprisonment some brief remarks merely can here be offered. Justices of the peace, says Sir M. Hale (k), have a double power in relation to the arrest of felons; original, or 365, 376. See Lock v. Ashton, 12 Q. B. 871; Harris v. Dignum, 29 L. J., Ex., 2; Walker v. Olding, 1 H. & C. 621.

(f) Brooks v. Hodgkinson, 4 H. & N. 712; Collett v. Foster, 2 Id. 356, following Barker v. Braham, 2 W. Bla. 866.

(g) Green v. Elgie, 5 Q. B. 99;

Eggington v. Mayor of Lichfield, 5 R. & B. 100.

(h) Kinning v. Buchanan, 8 C. B. 271, 291; Bryant v. Clutton, 1 M. & W. 408; Williams v. Smith, 14 C. B., N. S., 596.

(i) See cases in preceding note.

(k) Pl. Cr., vol. 2, p. 86.

upon complaint of another person. "If," observes the same eminent lawyer (l), "a justice of the peace see a felony or other breach of the peace committed in his presence, he may in his own person apprehend the felon. And so he may by word command any person to apprehend him, and such command is a good warrant without writing; but if the felony or other breach of the peace be done in his absence, then he must issue his warrant in writing under his seal to apprehend the malefactor."

Conformably to the principle stated at a former page of this work (m), in connection with the civil liability of judicial officers, it may be laid down, that where a justice of the peace acts judicially upon the complaint of another person, he will clearly not be liable for a mere error of judgment (n); and by a recent statute (o) he is expressly protected from liability in respect of "any act done by him in the execution of his duty as such justice," unless where proof is given that the act in question "was done maliciously and without reasonable and probable cause" (p).

Again—where the justice has acted in a matter within his jurisdiction, it is clear that a subsisting conviction good upon the face of it will be a sufficient protection to him when sued under section 1 of the Act above adverted to; for, according to a well-known rule, such conviction, so long as it remains (l) Id. ibid. See also Burn's J. P., 29th ed., vol. 1, p. 272; Brookshaw v. Hopkins, Lofft, 240; S. C., Id. 235.

(m) Ante, pp. 103 et seq.

(n) Linford v. Fitzroy, 13 Q. B. 240; Judgm., Garnett v. Ferrand, 6 B. & C. 625-6; Penney v. Slade, 7 Scott, 285; Kendillon v. Maltby, Car. & M. 492.

(o) 11 & 12 Vict. c. 44, s. 1, as to which see Barton v. Bricknell, 13 Q. B. 393; Bott v. Ackroyd, 28 L. J., M. C., 297; Sommerville v. Mirehouse, 1 B. & S. 652. The 4th section of this Act further enacts, "that in all cases where a discretionary power shall be given to a justice of the peace by any Act or Acts of Parliament, no action shall be brought against such justice for or by reason of the manner in which he shall have exercised his discretion in the execution of any such power." See R. v. Young, 1 Burr. 556; Bassett v. Godschall, 3 Wils. 121.

(p) As to evidence of want of "reasonable and probable cause," see Burley v. Bethune, 5 Taunt. 580.

in force, is conclusive evidence of the facts stated in it ; and this evidence cannot be impugned or rebutted by proof of corrupt motives or of malice (q). "It is," says Lord Tenterden, C. J. (r), "a general rule and principle of law, that, where justices of the peace have an authority given to them by an Act of Parliament, and they appear to have acted within the jurisdiction so given, and to have done all that they are required by the Act to do in order to originate their jurisdiction, a conviction drawn up in due form, and remaining in force, is a protection in any action brought against them for the act so done."

As regards the liability of a justice of the peace in another important class of cases, viz., where he acts without jurisdiction or exceeds it, we must resort for information to the 2nd section of the 11 & 12 Vict. c. 44, which enacts, that "for any act done by a justice of the peace in a matter of which by law he has not jurisdiction, or in which he shall have exceeded his jurisdiction, any person injured thereby, or by any act done under any conviction or order made or warrant issued by such justice in any such matter, may maintain an action against such justice in the same form and in the same case as he might have done before the passing of this Act (s), without making any allegation in his declaration, that the act complained of was done maliciously or without reasonable or probable cause (t) ; provided, nevertheless, that no such action shall be brought for anything done under such conviction or order, until after such conviction shall have

(q) See, per Dallas, C. J., Brittain v. Kinnaird, 1 B. & B. 437 ; Kirby v. Simpson, 10 Exch. 358, 365 ; Fawcett v. Fowles, 7 B. & C. 394 ; Basten v. Carew, 3 B. & C. 649 ; Baylis v. Strickland, 1 Scott, N. R., 540 ; Ashcroft v. Bourne, 3 B. & Ad. 684 ; Strickland v. Ward, 7 T. R. 653 (a) ; Aldridge v. Haines, 2 B. & Ad. 395 ; Kendall v. Wilkinson, 4 E. & B. 680.

See the cases collected, 3 Burn's J. P., 29th ed., p. 1027.

(r) 3 B. & C. 652-3. See Lindsay v. Leigh, 11 Q. B. 455.

(s) See Leary v. Patrick, 15 Q. B. 266, 272 ; Crepps v. Durden, Cowp. 640.

(t) Pease v. Chaytor, 1 B. & S. 658.

been quashed, either upon appeal or upon application to her Majesty's Court of Queen's Bench." The section before us further goes on to provide, that no such action shall "be brought for anything done under any such warrant, which shall have been issued by such justice to procure the appearance of such party, and which shall have been followed by a conviction or order in the same matter, until after such conviction or order shall have been so quashed as aforesaid; or if such last-mentioned warrant shall not have been followed by any such conviction or order, or if it be a warrant upon an information for an alleged indictable offence, nevertheless if a summons were issued previously to such warrant, and such summons were served upon such person, either personally or by leaving the same for him with some person at his last or most usual place of abode, and he did not appear according to the exigency of such summons, in such case no such action shall be maintained against such justice for anything done under such warrant" (u).

The effect of the foregoing section may be shortly stated to be, that no action shall be brought for anything done under a conviction or order, where the magistrate has no jurisdiction or has exceeded it, until such conviction or order shall have been quashed; nor for anything done under a warrant to compel an appearance, followed by a conviction or order, until the same shall have been quashed; nor for anything done under such warrant, not followed by a conviction or order, or under a warrant for an alleged indictable offence, if a summons had been previously served and not obeyed.

The main distinction to be noted in regard to the form of the remedy available against a magistrate who acts without jurisdiction, and that available against a magistrate who acts erroneously within his jurisdiction, is thus pointed out by Mr. Justice Erle (x): "If the act of the magistrate is done

(u) As to the latter part of the above section, see Bessell v. Wilson, 1 E. &

B. 489.

(x) Taylor v. Neasfield, 3 E. & B.

without jurisdiction it is a trespass ; if within the jurisdiction, the action rests upon the corruptness of motive, and to establish this the act must be shown to be malicious."

Besides the above provisions for the protection of justices contained in the recent statute, others scarcely less important but of too technical a character to allow of their being here examined, are included in it,—of these may be specified section 8, which prescribes the period of limitation in an action against a justice of the peace for anything done by him in the execution of his office ; and section 9, which requires a month's notice of the intended action to be given to the justice (y).

It will readily be inferred from what has been said in the preceding pages, that, in actions for false imprisonment, nice and difficult questions in regard to the jurisdiction of Courts—the validity of their judgments and convictions—the legality of process—the powers properly exercisable by those who enforce it—frequently arise ; touching such matters information must be sought for from works specifically devoted to their investigation. With reference to the action before us, I shall here therefore offer but one additional remark, that where two or more persons have so conducted themselves as to be liable to be jointly sued for trespass and false imprisonment, the damages must be assessed against all jointly (z), each of the defendants being responsible for the damage sustained by their common act (u). "Where two persons," it 724. See also as to the form of action against a justice of the peace, Newbould v. Coltman, 6 Exch. 189 ; Pedley v. Davis, 10 C. B., N. S., 492, 511 ; Haylock v. Sparke, 1 E. & B. 471 ; Gelen v. Hall, 2 H. & N. 379, and cases there cited.

(y) See Kirby v. Simpson, 10 Exch. 358, and cases there cited ; Taylor v. Neasfield, 3 E. & B. 724 ; ante, p. 114.

As to the damages recoverable in an action for false imprisonment against a magistrate, see Mason v. Barker, 1 Car. & K. 100—against a coroner, see Foxall v. Barnett, 2 E. & B. 928.

(z) Eliot v. Allen, 1 C. B. 18.

(a) Per Rolfe, B., Clark v. Newsam, 1 Exch. 140. See per Willes, J., 17 C. B. 71.

has been said (b), “ have a joint purpose, and thereby make themselves joint trespassers, and the one beats violently, and the other a little, the real injury is the aggregate of the injury received from both. So, if motive be taken into consideration, the motive of A. may be most aggravated, and the motive of B. most mitigated, then the damages must be regulated accordingly.”

Before proceeding to consider that peculiar species of tort to personal liberty, evidenced by a Malicious Arrest, it seems desirable briefly to inquire as to the meaning of the terms “ malice ” and “ malicious,” when used with reference to civil proceedings.

We have already seen (c), that, in some classes of cases, giving rise to actions ex delicto, the intention which actuated the wrong-doer is wholly beside the question, whether or not an action will, under the given circumstances, lie. In others, again, the animus, motive, or intention of the party charged constitutes an essential element in—if not the very gist and substance of—the charge. Falling within this latter class are divers actions for malicious injuries, in connection wherewith the meaning of the epithet just used demands investigation.

“ Malice,” says Lord Campbell, C. J. (d), “ in the legal acceptation of the word, is not confined to personal spite against individuals, but consists in a conscious violation of the law to the prejudice of another.” Malice is of two kinds—malice in law, and malice in fact. Malice in law is where a wrongful act is done intentionally, without just cause or excuse (e). If, for instance, I give a perfect stranger a blow likely to produce death, I do it of malice, because I do it

“ Malice,”— meaning of this word in civil proceedings.

(b) Per Alderson, B., 1 Exch. 140. See Gregory v. Cotterell, 5 E. & B. 571.

(c) Ante, p. 674.

(d) 9 Cl. & F. 321; per Sir W. Follett, arg., Mitchell v. Jenkins, 5 B.

& Ad. 590; 1 Wms. Saund. 242 b. n. (e).

(e) Judgm., Bromage v. Prosser, 4 B. & C. 255; Arg., Sherwin v. Swindall, 12 M. & W. 787.

intentionally, and without just cause or excuse (f). And if I traduce a man, whether I know him or not, and whether I intend to do him an injury or not, the law considers it as done of malice, because it is wrongful and intentional (g); it equally works an injury, whether I meant to produce an injury or not; and if I had no legal excuse for the slander, why should there not be a remedy against me for the injury which it produces (h)? Such being legal "malice," it follows that some acts are in law always malicious (i), without any proof being given of personal ill-will or ill-feeling.

"Malice in fact" is said to be of two kinds, viz., personal malice against the individual, and that sort of general disregard of the right consideration due to all mankind which, indeed, may not be previously directed against any one, but is nevertheless productive of injury to the complainant (k). This seems very nearly equivalent to saying that "malice in fact" may be proved to have existed in one or other of two ways—either by direct evidence, as of expressions used, of declarations made, or of conduct generally—evincing enmity towards a particular individual; or again, it may be shown by proof of some act from which a jury would be held justified in inferring a malicious motive; and the act relied upon as evidence of malice may possibly be one not aimed at the particular individual who has suffered by it (l).

The remedy for a malicious injury is by action on the case, to support which there must, in general (m), be both injury, in the strict sense of the word (that is, a wrong done), and (f) See, further, as to the distinction between express and implied malice in criminal cases, post, Book IV., Chap. 2.

(g) Judgm., 4 B. & C. 255.

(h) Ibid.

(i) See, per Parke, B., 12 M. & W. 791.

(k) See, per Pollock, C. B., 12 M. & W. 787-8; per Lord Ellenborough,

C. J., Townsend v. Wathen, 9 East, 280-1.

(l) In the sense here assigned to it, malice in fact would seem not very much to differ from malice in law.

(m) As to the ingredients in the right of action for libel and for slander, post, pp. 734, 748.

loss resulting from that injury ; the injury or wrong done must, as pointed out at a former page (n), be the act of the defendant, and the loss must be a direct and natural, not a remote and indirect, consequence of the defendant's act (o). Unless, indeed, there be a loss thus directly and proximately connected with the act, the mere intention, or even the endeavour, to produce it will not found an action (p). A man's motives will not make wrongful an act which in itself is not wrongful (q). An act which does not amount to a legal injury cannot be actionable because it is done with a bad intent (r).

Hence, although, in many cases, the existence of a malicious intention is an essential ingredient in order to constitute the wrongfulness or injurious nature of an act, yet it will supply neither the want of the act itself, nor of its hurtful consequences ; however complete the injuria, and whether with malice or without, if the act be, after all, sine damno, no action on the case will lie (s) ; the distinction between civil and criminal proceedings in this respect being very noticeable. For instance, if a contract has been made between A and B. that the latter should go supercargo for the former on a voyage to China, and C., however maliciously, persuades B. to break his contract, but in vain, it could not successfully be contended, that an action would lie against C., his malice having been ineffectual, and no loss having resulted from it to A. (t). Keeping these elementary principles in mind, let us proceed to inquire as to the action for a Malicious Arrest—for a Malicious Prosecution—for Defamation.

To put in force the process of the law maliciously, and

Action for malicious arrest.

(n) Ante, p. 143.

(o) Ante, pp. 93 et seq.

(p) Per Coleridge, J., 2 E. & B.
246-7.

(q) Per Jervis, C. J., Heald v.

Carey, 11 C. B. 993.

(r) Judgm., Stevenson v. Newnham,
13 C. B. 297.

(s) See (ex. gr.) post, p. 740.

(t) Per Coleridge, J., 2 E. & B. 247.

without any reasonable or probable cause, is wrongful ; and if thereby another is prejudiced in property or person, there is that conjunction of injury and loss which will lay the foundation of an action on the case (u). A malicious arrest may be on mesne or on final process (x), but, in order to maintain an action for this wrongful act (y), the plaintiff must show absence of probable cause or reason for the arrest (z)—malice in instituting the former action (a)—the fact of the arrest by the defendant (b), and that the former suit or proceeding has been determined in the plaintiff's favour ; for till then it cannot appear whether the proceeding in question was groundless or not (c).

Arrest on mesne process.

The ground on which an action for a malicious arrest, made in pursuance of the stat. 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, rests, is, that the party obtaining the capias has imposed on the Judge, who allowed it to issue, by some false statement—some suggestio falsi or suppressio veri—and has thereby satisfied him not only of the existence of a debt to the requisite amount, but also that there is reasonable ground

(u) Per Lord Campbell, C. J., Churchill v. Siggers, 3 E. & B. 937. See De Medina v. Grove, 10 Q. B. 152, 172 ; Leyland v. Tancred, 16 Q. B. 669 ; S. C., Id. 664.

(x) As to what constitutes an arrest under a Ca. Sa., see Sandon v. Jervis, E. B. & E. 935.

(y) As to which see generally Chit. Jr. Pl. 2nd ed., p. 581 ; Selw. N. P., 12th ed., vol. 2, pp. 1075 et seq.

(z) See Huntley v. Simpson, 2 H. & N. 600 ; Phillips v. Naylor, 4 H. & N. 565 ; S. C., 3 Id. 14.

(a) As to what is evidence of malice in this action, see Whalley v. Pepper, 7 Car. & P. 506 ; Crozer v. Pilling, 4 B. & C. 26 ; Nicholson v. Coghill, Id. 21 ; Sinclair v. Eldred, 4 Taunt. 7 ; Austin v. Debnam, 3 B. & C. 139 ; Tebbutt v. Holt, 1 Car. & K. 280, 289 ; Phillips v. Naylor, supra.

(b) An action may also lie for maliciously prolonging the detention of a prisoner who has become entitled to his discharge : Moore v. Guardner, 16 M. & W. 595 ; Magnay v. Burt (in Error), 5 Q. B. 381 ; Whalley v. Pepper, 7 Car. & P. 506 ; Hounsfield v. Drury, 11 Ad. & E. 98 ; Scheibel v. Fairbain, 1 B. & P. 388 ; Lewis v. Morris, 4 Tyr. 907.

(c) See Watkins v. Lee, 5 M. & W. 270 ; Wilkinson v. Howell, Moo. & M. 495 ; Heywood v. Collinge, 9 Ad. & E. 268 ; per Lord Tenterden, C. J., Webb v. Hill, Moo. & M. 253 ; Fisher v. Bristow, 1 Dougl. 215 ; Pierce v. Street, 3 B. & Ad. 397.

for supposing that the debtor is about to quit the country. In an action for a malicious arrest under this statute, it is essential that the plaintiff should allege falsehood or fraud in obtaining the original order (d), should show that the defendant has in some way misrepresented the facts, or imposed upon the Judge in his representation of them (e). There is no doubt indeed, that, if a person truly states certain facts to a Judge, and the Judge thereupon does an act which is erroneous, and which the law will not justify, the party who made the statement is not liable, because in that case the grievance complained of arises not from the false statement of the party, but from a mistake of the Judge; but this is not so where the statement which put the Court in motion is maliciously false (f). As arrest on mesne process is now comparatively rare, so the action for a malicious arrest on mesne process is at the present day of much less frequent occurrence than formerly.

Process of execution on a judgment seeking to obtain satisfaction for the sum recovered is of course prima facie lawful; and the judgment creditor cannot even be rendered liable to an action, the debtor merely alleging and proving that the judgment had been partly satisfied, and that execution was sued out for a larger sum than remained due upon the judgment. Without malice and the want of reasonable or probable cause, the only remedy for a judgment debtor thus aggrieved is to apply to the Court or a Judge that he may be discharged and that satisfaction may be entered up on payment of the balance justly due under the judgment. Where, however, the person of the debtor or his goods have been taken in execution for a larger sum than remained due on the judgment—this having been done by final process.

Arrest on

(d) Judgm., Daniels v. Fielding, 16 M. & W. 206-7, followed in Bryant v. Bobbett (Exch.), 11 Jur. 1021; Ross v. Norman, 5 Exch. 359; Roret v.

Lewis, 5 D. & L. 371.

(e) Gibbons v. Alison, 3 C. B. 181.

(f) Per Lord Campbell, C. J., Farlie v. Danks, 4 E. & B. 499.

the creditor maliciously and without reasonable or probable cause,—i. e., the creditor well knowing that the sum for which execution has been sued out is excessive, and his motive being to oppress and injure the debtor—an action on the case will lie for this malicious injury (g); for, here are present damnum et injuria, giving a claim to redress and compensation.

No action, however, lies against a sheriff or his officer for arresting one who is privileged from arrest, on the ground that he is attending as a witness under summons from the Court of Bankruptcy, even though the arrest was made maliciously (h).

Torts to the reputation.
Action for malicious prosecution.

In treating of Torts to the Reputation, the action for a Malicious Prosecution may first conveniently be noticed. This action, though analogous to the action for a malicious arrest, differs altogether from that for false imprisonment (i).

The essential ground of the action for a malicious prosecution is, that a legal prosecution was instituted or carried on maliciously and without reasonable or probable cause, whence damage has ensued to the plaintiff (k). This alle-

(g) Churchill v. Siggers, 3 E. & B. 929, 937; Jenings v. Florence, 2 C. B., N. S., 467, 470; Gilding v. Eyre, 10 C. B., N. S., 592, 603. See Dimmack, v. Bowley, 2 C. B., N. S., 542.

(h) Magnay v. Burt (in Error), 5 Q. B. 381; S. C., 1 Dav. & M. 652.

(i) There is no similitude or analogy between an action of trespass or false imprisonment and an action for a malicious prosecution: the former lies for the defendant's having done that which upon the stating of it is manifestly illegal; the latter kind of action is for a prosecution which, upon the stating of it, is manifestly legal: Johnstone v. Sutton, 1 T. R. 544 (with which compare Mostyn v. Fabrigas, Cowp. 174).

See, also, Guest v. Warren, 9 Exch. 379.

As to who may be liable in this action, see Clements v. Ohrlly, 2 Car. & K. 686; Osterman v. Bateman, Id. 728; Stevens v. Midland Counties R. C., 10 Exch. 352.

The action was held maintainable where the prosecution had been instituted by order of a County Court Judge; Fitzjohn v. Mackinder, 9 C. B., N. S., 505; S. C., 8 Id. 78.

(k) See Selw. N. P., 12th ed., vol. 2, p. 1071; Weston v. Beeman, 27 L. J., Ex., 57.

"The meaning of a malicious prosecution is that a party from malicious motives, and without reasonable or gation of the want of probable cause, as remarked in Johnstone v. Sutton (l), "must be substantively and expressly proved, and cannot be implied. From the want of probable cause, malice may be, and most commonly is implied; the knowledge of the defendant is also implied. From the most express malice, the want of probable cause cannot be implied. A man from a malicious motive may take up a prosecution for real guilt, or he may, from circumstances which he really believes, proceed upon apparent guilt; and in neither case is he liable to this kind of action" (m). "It is true," says Tindal, C. J. (n), "that in order to support such an action, there must be a concurrence of malice in the defendant, and want of probable cause. Malice alone is not sufficient, because a person actuated by the plainest malice may nevertheless have a justifiable reason for prosecution. On the other hand, the substantiating the accusation is not essential to exonerate the accuser from liability to an action, for he may have had good reason to make the charge, and yet be compelled to abandon the prosecution by the death or absence of witnesses, or the difficulty of producing adequate legal proof. The law, therefore, only renders him responsible where malice is combined with want of probable cause. What shall amount to such a combination of malice and want of probable cause, is so much a matter of fact in each probable cause, sets the law in motion against another:" per Williams, J., Barber v. Lester, 7 C. B., N. S., 186. That was substantially an action upon the case in the nature of conspiracy.

(l) 1 T. R. 544-5; Michell v. Williams, 11 M. & W. 205, 211; Musgrove v. Newell, 1 M. & W. 582; 1 Wms. Saund. 230 b.

(m) "I have always understood," says Parke, J., in Mitchell v. Jenkins, 5 B. & Ad. 594, "since the case of Johnstone v. Sutton" (1 T. R. 510), "that no point of law was more clearly settled, than that, in every action for a malicious prosecution or arrest, the plaintiff must prove what is averred in the declaration, viz., that the prosecution or arrest was malicious, and without reasonable or probable cause; if there be reasonable or probable cause, no malice, however distinctly proved, will make the defendant liable; but, when there is no reasonable or probable cause, it is for the jury to infer malice from the facts proved."

(n) Willans v. Taylor, 6 Bing. 186.

individual case, as to render it impossible to lay down any general rule on the subject; but there ought to be enough to satisfy a reasonable man, that the accuser had no ground for proceeding, but his desire to injure the accused." Moreover, in connection with the action for a malicious prosecution or arrest, the term "malice" is to be understood in a sense already assigned to it at p. 725, as signifying not necessarily spite or hatred towards an individual, but malus animus, and denoting that the defendant was actuated by improper and indirect motives (o).

In an action for a malicious prosecution, it is a question for the jury, whether the facts brought forward in evidence be true or not,—but the question, what is reasonable or probable cause? is matter of law to be determined by the Judge (p). Hence, the reasonableness and probability of the ground for prosecution may depend, not merely upon the proof of certain facts, but upon the inquiry whether other facts which furnished an answer to the prosecution were known to the defendant at the time it was instituted (q). It may depend upon the inquiry, whether the facts stated to the defendant at the time, and which formed the ground of the prosecution, were believed by him or not (r), or upon this question, whether, from the conduct of the defendant himself, the jury will infer that he was conscious he had no reasonable or probable cause. In any such case, however, the knowledge, the belief, and the conduct of the defendant are for the consideration of the jury, to whom nothing is left

(o) Per Parke, J., Mitchell v. Jenkins, 5 B. & Ad. 595; 1 Wms. Saund. 230 b.

(p) See Michell v. Williams, 11 M. & W. 205; per Bramwell, B., Hailes v. Marks, 7 H. & N. 63; citing Panton v. Williams, 2 Q. B. 169; Watson v. Whitmore, 14 L. J., Exch., 41; Hinton v. Heather, 14 M. & W. 131; Wyatt v. White, 5 H. & N. 371; Fraser v. Hill, 1 Macq. H. L. Ca. 392, 398; and cases infra.

(q) Judgm., Panton v. Williams, 2 Q. B. 194.

(r) See Haddrick v. Heslop, 12 Q. B. 267; Turner v. Ambler, 10 Id. 252; Hinton v. Heather, 14 M. & W. 131.

but the truth of the facts proved and the justness of the inferences to be drawn from them ; the law being laid down by the Judge, that, according as the facts are found by the jury to be proved or not proved, and the inferences warranted or not, there was reasonable and probable ground for the prosecution, or the reverse (s). In this action it is incumbent on the plaintiff to show that the proceeding was determined in his favour (t).

Without dwelling longer upon the action for a malicious prosecution, it may be proper to observe, that suits for injuries very analogous thereto are occasionally brought, wherein also malice will be found to be an ingredient: thus in Chapman v. Pickersgill (u),—the action was in case for falsely and maliciously suing out a commission of bankruptcy against the plaintiff, which was afterwards superseded,—this action was held to be maintainable, Lord C. J. Pratt observing, “ Here is falsehood and malice in the defendant, and great wrong and damage done to the plaintiff thereby. Now, wherever there is an injury done to a man’s property by a false and malicious prosecution, it is most reasonable he should have an action to repair himself. But it is said, this action was never brought before ; I wish never to hear this objection again. This action is for a tort ; torts are infinitely various, not limited or Action for maliciously suing out commission of bankruptcy.

(s) Judgm., Panton v. Williams, 2 Q. B. 194 (as to which see, per Cole-ridge, J., Douglas v. Corbett, 6 E. & B. 514); Heslop v. Chapman, 23 L. J., Q. B., 49; Blachford v. Dod, 2 B. & Ad. 179; Broad v. Ham, 5 Bing. N. C. 722; Delegal v. Highley, 3 Bing. N. C. 950; James v. Phelps, 11 Ad. & E. 488.

As to the action for a malicious conspiracy to indict, see Selw. N. P., 12th ed., vol. 2, p. 1071—for maliciously conspiring to bring an action against the plaintiff, see Cotterell v. Jones, 11 C. B. 713; Castrique v. Behrens, 30 L.

J., Q. B., 163, 168—to cause him to be suspected of a breach of the excise laws, see Barber v. Lesiter, 7 C. B., N. S., 186.

(t) 2 Selw. N. P., 12th ed., p. 1072; Barber v. Lesiter, 7 C. B., N. S., 186; Judgm., 30 L. J., Q. B., 168.

Secus in an action for maliciously procuring the plaintiff to be held to bail by a magistrate, Steward v. Gro-mett, 7 C. B., N. S., 191.

(u) 2 Wils. 145. See Whitworth v. Hall, 2 B. & Ad. 695; Cotton v. James, 1 B. & Ad. 123.

confined, for there is nothing in nature but may be an instrument of mischief." In connection with the preceding case, Farley v. Danks (x), recently decided in the Court of Queen's Bench, should be consulted. It was there shown, that the defendant had petitioned for an adjudication of bankruptcy against the plaintiff, that he had maliciously made depositions which were false in fact, and had thus induced the commissioner to adjudicate the bankruptcy; but then it appeared that, even if the depositions had been true, the adjudication could not have been supported in law. It was contended, that the act of the Court, having been erroneous, could not be regarded as a consequence of the defendant's statement. But, as observed by Crompton, J., "there is not the less wrong in causing the act to be done, because the act would be illegal at any rate. In a popular sense a person who puts the law in motion causes the thing to be done," which is done under process of the law (y). To support an action under the circumstances specified, "all that is necessary is, that the defendant should falsely and maliciously cause the act; and he does that when he swears falsely, and the act would not be done without his so swearing" (z).

Libel

Of torts to the reputation of an individual, libel and slander in the next place specially demand our attention. A libel may be defined to be a malicious defamation expressed in print, writing or by signs, tending to injure the reputation of another, and exposing him to public hatred, contempt, or ridicule (a). It is not, however, the mere writing of libellous

(x) 4 E. & B. 493. See Violett v. Sympson, 8 E. & B. 344.

(y) With Farley v. Danks, supra, compare Fitzjohn v. Mackinder, 9 C. B., N. S., 505; S. C., 8 Id. 78. Et vide per Erle, C. J., Steward v. Grommett, 7 C. B., N. S., 204.

(z) See further, in illustration of actions for injuries analogous to those above adverted to, De Medina v. Grove, 10 Q. B. 152, 172; Craig v. Hassel, 4 Q. B. 481; Westaway v. Frost, 17 L. J., Q. B., 698; Sutherland v. Murray, cited 1 T. R. 538.

(a) Selw. N. P., 12th ed., vol. 2, p. 1049; Digby v. Thompson, 4 B. & Ad. 821; per Bayley, J., Macgregor v. Thwaites, 3 B. & C. 33; Du Bost v. Beresford, 2 Camp. 511; Anon., 11 Mod. 99; per Parke, B., Parmiter v.

matter which is actionable, there must be a publication of the libel in order to entitle the party aggrieved by it to a civil remedy. The libellous matter must moreover be falsely and maliciously published. And according to the statutory precedent of a declaration for libel (b), the plaintiff charges "that the defendant falsely and maliciously printed and published of the plaintiff in a newspaper, called —, the words following, that is to say [he is a regular prover under bankruptcies] the defendant meaning thereby that [the plaintiff had proved and was in the habit of proving fictitious debts against the estates of bankrupts, with the knowledge that such debts were fictitious]."

On examining the various ingredients in the right of action for libel in the order indicated by the above Form, the following remarks suggest themselves :—

The alleged libellous matter must be false ; its truth may be specially pleaded in answer to the action (c). Further, the matter complained of must be shown to have been maliciously published. This remark, however, must be understood in a somewhat qualified sense ; for, "where the natural ten-Coupland, 6 M. & W. 108 ; Cook v. Ward, 6 Bing. 409 ; The Case of Libels, 5 Rep. 125 a.

In regard to the question, What is a libel ? the following cases may also be consulted : Hoare v. Silverlock, 12 Q. B. 624 ; Hearne v. Stowell, 12 Ad. & E. 719 ; Capel v. Jones, 4 C. B. 259 ; Wakley v. Cooke, 4 Exch. 511 ; Ingram v. Lawson, 6 Bing. N. C. 212 ; Wakley v. Healey, 7 C. B. 591.

A corporation may be guilty of a libel : ante, p. 686, n. (e).

(b) See C. L. Com., 1st Rep., pp. 28-9 ; C. L. Proc. Act, 1852, Sched. B., No. 33.

(c) Per Holt, C. J., Anon., 11 Mod. 99 ; per Parke, J., Cockayne v. Hodgkinson, 5 Car. & P. 548. See Rumsey v. Webb, Car. & M. 104 ; Weaver v.

Lloyd, 2 B. & C. 678 ; Chalmers v. Shackell, 6 Car. & P. 475 ; Reynolds v. Harris, 28 L. J., C. P., 26 ; Helsham v. Blackwood, 11 C. B. 111 ; O'Brien v. Bryant, 16 M. & W. 168 ; O'Brien v. Clement, Id. 159 ; Tighe v. Cooper, 7 E. & B. 639 ; Prior v. Wilson, 1 C. B., N. S., 95 ; Honess v. Stubbs, 7 C. B., N. S., 575.

"The truth is an answer to the action, not because it negatives the charge of malice, &c., but because it shows that the plaintiff is not entitled to recover damages. For the law will not permit a man to recover damages in respect of an injury to a character which he either does not or ought not to possess : " per Lilledale, J., M'Pherson v. Daniels, 10 B. & C. 272.

dency and import of the language used in any publication is to defame and injure another, the law will then presume that the publisher acted maliciously" (d). If the tendency of the publication were injurious to the plaintiff, then the law will presume that the defendant by publishing it intended to produce that injury which it was calculated to effect (e). "Defamation pure and simple affords presumptive evidence of malice" (f).

In an action for libel either party may indeed, with a view to the damages, give evidence to prove or disprove the existence of a malicious motive in the mind of the publisher of the defamatory matter; for the spirit and intention of the party publishing a libel are fit to be considered by a jury in estimating the injury done to the plaintiff (g). But in such an action, though evidence of malice may be given to increase the damages, it never is considered as essential, "nor," remarks Bayley, J., (h) "is there any instance of a verdict for a defendant on the ground of want of malice. Numberless occasions must have occurred (particularly in cases where a defendant only repeated what he had before heard, but without naming the author), upon which, if that were a tenable ground, verdicts would have been sought for and obtained; and the absence of any such instance is a proof of what has been the general and universal opinion upon the point." By a modern statute (6 & 7 Vict. c. 96, s. 2), it is, however, enacted (i), that in an action for a libel contained in any public newspaper, or other periodical publication, it shall be competent to the defendant to plead that such libel was inserted therein "without actual malice, and without gross negligence; and that, before the commencement of the action:

(d) Arg., 9 B. & C. 644.

719-720.

(e) Per Littledale, J., Haire v. Wilson, 9 B. & C. 645.

(h) Judgm., Bromage v. Prosser, 4 B. & C. 257.

(f) Per Erle, C. J., Whiteley v. Adams, 15 C. B., N. S., 414.

(i) See Chadwick v. Herapath, 3 Q. B. 885; 8 & 9 Vict. c. 75; O'Brien v. Clement, 15 M. & W. 435.

(g) Pearson v. Lemaitre, 5 M. & Gr.

or at the earliest opportunity afterwards, he inserted in such newspaper, or other periodical publication, a full apology for the said libel, or, if the newspaper or periodical publication in which the said libel appeared should be ordinarily published at intervals exceeding one week, had offered to publish the said apology in any newspaper or periodical publication to be selected by the plaintiff in such action ;” and by the same statute it is further provided, that, upon filing such plea as aforesaid, the defendant shall be at liberty to pay into Court a sum of money by way of amends for the injury sustained by the publication of the libel complained of (j). And under section 1 of this statute, the defendant may in any action for defamation, after notice in writing of his intention so to do duly given to the plaintiff at the time of filing or delivering the plea, give in evidence in mitigation of damages that he made, or offered an apology to the plaintiff for such defamation before the commencement of the action, or as soon afterwards as he had an opportunity of doing so, in case the action shall have been commenced before there was an opportunity of making or offering such apology.

In general, then, our law considers the publication of a statement, which is false in fact and injurious to the character of another, as malicious, unless it be privileged. If made under circumstances entitling it to be so considered, the occasion itself prevents the inference of malice which the law would draw in the case of an unauthorised communication, and affords a qualified defence in the absence of actual malice (k). To present this doctrine under a somewhat different form, our law will permit the inference of malice raised by the publication of libellous matter to be rebutted by proof of circumstances showing that the statement complained of was privileged; but this defence may itself be rebutted or altogether neutralised by proof of actual express malice (l). "The rule," says Lord Campbell, C. J. (m), "is that if the occasion be such as repels the presumption of malice, the communication is privileged, and the plaintiff must then, if he can, give evidence of malice. If he gives no such evidence, it is the office of the judge to say that there is no question for the jury, and to direct a nonsuit or a verdict for the defendant."

(j) See Lafone v. Smith, 3 H. & N. 735 ; 15 & 16 Vict. c. 76, s. 70.

(k) Toogood v. Spyring, 1 Cr. M. & R. 193 ; Darby v. Ouseley, 1 H. & N.

1 ; Cooke v. Wildes, 5 E. & B. 328, following Tuson v. Evans, 12 Ad. & E. 733 ; Hemmings v. Gasson, E. B. & E. 346 ; and cases post.

In illustration of the preceding remarks, I may observe, that a character bonâ fide given to a servant of any description is esteemed a privileged communication, because it is for the advantage of the public, and of honest servants generally, that characters should be freely given; in giving a character, accordingly, bona fides is to be presumed. Even though the statement complained of as defamatory should be untrue in fact, the master will be held justified by the occasion in making that statement, unless it can be shown to have proceeded from a malicious mind; as, for example, if the statement were proved to have been false to the knowledge of the party making it, or if the master wantonly and capriciously volunteered to make a statement injurious to the servant (n).

Again, a master has clearly a right to charge his servant

(l) Ante, p. 737, note (k).

(m) Taylor v. Hawkins, 16 Q. B. 321; Somerville v. Hawkins, 10 C. B. 583; Harris v. Thompson, 13 C. B. 333. See Kelly v. Partington, 4 B. & Ad. 700; Weatherston v. Hawkins, 1 T. R. 110; Wright v. Woodyate, 2 Cr. M. & R. 573.

(n) Fountain v. Boodle, 3 Q. B. 11, 12; per Williams, J., 13 C. B. 352; per Wightman, J., Gardner v. Slade, 13 Q. B. 801; Rogers v. Clifton, 3 B. & P. 587; Child v. Affleck, 9 B. &

C. 403, 406 (citing, per Lord Mansfield, C. J., Edmonson v. Stevenson, Bull. N. P. 8); per Lord Ellenborough, C. J., 1 B. & Ald. 239-240.

When the master volunteers to give the character, stronger evidence will be needed to show that he acted bonâ fide than in the case where he has given the character after being required so to do: per Littledale, J., Pattison v. Jones, 8 B. & C. 586; Cozhead v. Richards, 2 C. B. 597, 601, 610; Bennett v. Deacon, 2 C. B. 628.

bond fide for any supposed misconduct in his service, and to give him admonition and blame; and the simple circumstance of the master exercising this right in the presence of another will not of necessity take away from him the protection of the law. Should it, however, appear in evidence that an opportunity had been sought for making such charge before third persons when it might have been made in private, this fact alone would be strong in proof of a malicious intention, and might deprive the master, if sued for defamation by his servant, of that immunity which the law allows to a statement such as supposed when made with honesty of purpose (o).

The existence of malice, indeed, may be satisfactorily established in a vast variety of ways. Thus, proof of a long practice of libelling the plaintiff would be evidence to show that the defendant was actuated by malice in the particular publication complained of, and that it did not take place through carelessness or inadvertence; and the more nearly the evidence approaches to proof of a systematic practice of libelling, the more convincing will it be. The circumstance, that the other libels are more or less frequent—more or less remote from the date of the publication of that in question—will affect merely the weight, not the admissibility, of the evidence (p).

In cases such as have latterly been specified, malice might properly be inferred by a jury to have actuated the party

(o) Somerville v. Hawkins, 10 C. B. 583; Taylor v. Hawkins, 16 Q. B. 308; Toogood v. Spyring, 1 Cr. M. & R. 181; Padmore v. Lawrence, 11 Ad. & E. 380. See Manby v. Witt, Eastmead v. Witt, 18 C. B. 545.

(p) Per Parke, B., delivering the opinion of the judges in Barrett v. Long, 3 H. L. Ca. 414.

See also, as to proof of malice, Brine v. Bazalgette, 3 Exch. 692; Gilpin v.

Fowler, 9 Exch. 615; Simpson v. Robinson, 12 Q. B. 511; Cooke v. Wilde, 5 E. & B. 328; Camfield v. Bird, 3 Car. & K. 56.

“Matters occurring after action may be given in evidence to enhance the damages as showing the malice of the original publication, just as a repetition of the same or a similar libel may be:” per Pollock, C. B., Darby v. Ouseley, 1 H. & N. 9, 13.

publishing the alleged libel. Where, however, the circumstances under which a particular communication is made are consistent with either the presence or the absence of malice, it will be incumbent on the plaintiff to prove malice, in order that he may successfully sue for libel; and where the circumstances do not present any justifiable occasion for writing and publishing the defamatory matter, the communication is said not to be privileged (q).

Communication where privileged.

The question, however, still demands our attention, under what circumstances will a communication prima facie libellous be deemed in law to have been privileged? It will be so, when made bonâ fide by the party charged, in the performance of some social or moral duty; or in the conduct of his own affairs, and with a fair and reasonable hope of protecting his own interest in a matter where it is concerned (r); or where there is a corresponding interest in the party receiving the communication (s); and also in some special cases which will hereafter separately be noticed (t).

The case of Coxhead v. Richards (u) deserves careful perusal with reference to this subject. There the facts were as under: C. the mate of a ship sent to B., the defendant, a letter charging A., the captain of the vessel, with gross mis-(q) Per Maule, J., Wenman v. Ash, 13 C. B. 846, and cases cited ante, p. 737.

(r) Judgm., Toogood v. Spyrring, 1 Cr. M. & R. 193; Judgm., Somerville v. Hawkins, 10 C. B. 589; per Maule, J., 13 C. B. 846; per Parke, J., Cockayne v. Hodgkisson, 5 Car. & P. 548; Harrison v. Bush, 5 E. & B. 344; Cooke v. Wildes, Id. 329; Kershaw v. Bailey, 1 Exch. 743; Hopwood v. Thorn, 8 C. B. 293; Harris v. Thompson, 13 C. B. 333. Acc. per Willes, J., Huntley v. Ward, 6 C. B., N. S., 517, who says that "where the matter is written in the assertion of some legal or moral duty, or in self-defence, and the thing is done honestly and without sinister motive, and in the bonâ fide belief in the truth of the statement at the time of making it," the law declares it privileged.

(s) Per Erle, C. J., Whiteley v. Adams, 15 C. B., N. S., 414 (which accords with Harrison v. Bush, 5 E. & B. 344, and Toogood v. Spyrring, 1 Cr. M. & R. 181). See Fryer v. Kinnersley, 15 C. B., N. S., 422; Croft v. Stevens, 7 H. & N. 570.

(t) Post, pp. 743-5.

(u) 2 C. B. 569. See Beatson v. Skene, 5 H. & N. 838.

conduct whilst acting in that capacity ; the defendant showed this letter to the shipowner, who thereupon dismissed A. An action for libel having been brought by A. against B., and the jury having found that the material facts alleged in the libel were false, the question arose, whether, upon the plea of Not Guilty, the defendant was entitled to a verdict on the ground that the communication charging the plaintiff with misconduct was privileged. Upon this point the Court of Common Pleas was equally divided ; the late Chief Justice Tindal, and Erle, J., holding, that the communication referred to was privileged ; Coltman, J., and Cresswell, J., holding that it was not. In this conflict of opinion, however, we may, perhaps, safely conclude—1st, that, if the defendant had had any personal interest in the subject-matter to which the letter addressed to him related, as if he had been a part owner of or an underwriter on the ship, or had had any property on board her, the communication sub judice would have fallen within the rule as to privileged publications. 2ndly, that, if the danger disclosed by the letter either to the ship or the cargo or the ship's company had been so immediate as that the disclosure made to the shipowner was necessary for the purpose of averting such danger, then, upon the ground of social duty, by which every man is bound to his neighbour, the defendant would have been not only justified in making the disclosure complained of, but would have been bound to make it (x).

Assuming that the propositions thus laid down are incontrovertible, a difference of opinion may well exist as regards the mode of applying them to the facts in Coxhead v. Richards of this kind—Was any duty there cast on the defendant not to keep to himself the knowledge imparted to him touching the character and conduct of the plaintiff?—was it incumbent on the defendant to disclose the information received by him to the owner of the vessel? In support of an affirmative answer to these queries, it may be said, that the evil likely to arise from protecting information bond fide given to prevent damage from misconduct would seem likely to be much less than that which would result from putting a stop to such information by rendering the giver of it liable in damages, unless he has legal proof of the truth. In support of a negative answer to the questions above proposed, it may be urged, that it is a duty to refrain from slandering another; and that a violation of such duty ought not to be sanctioned in the case of voluntary communications, except under circumstances of great urgency and gravity (y).

(x) Per Tindal, C. J., 2 C. B., 596 ; Amann v. Damm, 8 C. B., N. S., 597.

Such being the principal arguments pro and con, adducible where a claim of privilege is founded on the alleged existence of a duty, reference may be made to Blackham v. Pugh (z), as showing under what circumstances the claim in question may be substantiated on the ground that the communication complained of was made by a person in the conduct of his own affairs, and in some matter where his interest was concerned. The facts in Blackham v. Pugh were extremely simple. The defendant had supplied goods to the plaintiff on certain credit, before the expiration whereof the plaintiff, meaning to retire from business, employed an auctioneer to sell his stock in trade, and absented himself under circumstances calculated to induce the belief that an act of bankruptcy had been committed. The defendant thereupon gave notice to the auctioneer not to pay over to the plaintiff the proceeds of the sale, he "having committed an act of bankruptcy." This communication was by the majority of the Court of Common Pleas held to have been privileged, as having been made by the defendant in the conduct of his own affairs, and in a matter which concerned his own interest (a).

(y) Per Coltman, J., 2 C. B. 601.

(z) 2 C. B. 611.

(a) As to the question, Under what circumstances will a communication be

Besides cases falling within the rules above considered, disparaging communications made under other and dissimilar circumstances are, on grounds of policy or expediency, held by our law to be privileged. Thus, by stat. 3 & 4 Vict. c. 9, proceedings civil or criminal against persons for the publication of papers printed by order of either House of Parliament are to be stayed upon delivery of a certificate such as is in the Act mentioned, properly verified by affidavit, setting forth that they were published by the order and under the authority of Parliament.

Again, every individual has a right to comment on those acts of public men which concern him as a subject of the realm, if he do not make his commentary a cloak for malice and slander. There is, indeed, a material distinction between publications relating to public and to private persons as regards the question whether they be libellous. That criticism may reasonably be applied to a public man in a public capacity which might not be applied to a private individual. But any imputation of wicked and corrupt motives is unquestionably libellous, whether applied to a public man or to a private individual (b). Fair and candid criticism, however severe, of a literary work is likewise privileged, provided there be not mixed up with it personal abuse of the author, or matter unconnected with his work defamatory of him (c).

Further, within the class of privileged communications may, as a general rule, be included the publication of a full, fair, and unvarnished account (d) of what passes in a privileged, on the ground of duty or of interest? see further, Gilpin v. Fowler, 9 Exch. 615; Wenman v. Ash, 13 C. B. 836; Harris v. Thompson, Id. 333; Blagg v. Sturt, 10 Q. B. 899; and cases infra.

(b) Per Parke, B., Parmiter v. Coupland, 6 M. & W. 108; Onslow v.

Horne, 3 Wils. 177. See Gathercole v. Miall, 15 M. & W. 319, 328.

(c) Carr v. Hood, 1 Camp. 354, n.; Tabart v. Tipper, Id. 350; Green v. Chapman, 4 Bing. N. C. 92; Paris v. Levy, 9 C. B., N. S., 342; Campbell v. Spottiswoode, 3 B. & S. 769.

(d) Stiles v. Nokes, 7 East, 493;

Court of justice, not being ex parte or mixed up with injurious comments (e). To this rule there are, indeed, exceptions, ex. gr., matters may appear in a Court of justice having so immoral a tendency, or being so injurious to the character of an individual, that their publication could not be tolerated (f). "The only case," says Littledale, J. (g), "in which an editor of a newspaper can justify a libel on the ground that it contains an account of a trial, is where he really gives a true and accurate report of it; and even in that case it will be for the Court to consider whether it was lawful to publish it." A judicial officer as formerly stated is privileged (h). A counsel, moreover, entrusted with the interests of others, and speaking from their information, for the sake of public convenience, is privileged in commenting fairly and bond fide on the circumstances of the case confided to him, and in making observations on the parties concerned and their instruments or agents in bringing it into Court (i). But, though such may be the duty of counsel, and though it may be incumbent on him to state facts injurious to the characters of individuals, if he speak conscientiously, according to his instructions, it does not follow that others will be privileged in printing and publishing what he says; for, as to them, the

Duncan v. Thwaites, 3 B. & C. 556; see M'Gregor v. Thwaites, Id. 24

(e) Saunders v. Mills, 6 Bing. 213; Delegal v. Highley, 3 Bing. N. C. 950, 960. Acc., Lewis v. Levy, E. B. & E. 537.

(f) Hoare v. Silverlock, 9 C. B. 20; Flint v. Pike, 4 B. & C. 473, 478-480. In R. v. Carlile, 3 B. & Ald. 161, 171, Best, J., states the rule above laid down, with this qualification, that "what is contained in the publication must be neither defamatory of an individual, tending to excite disaffection, nor calculated to offend the morals of the people." See R. v. Creevey, 1 M.

& S. 273, n. Judgm., E. B. & E., 553.

(g) Flint v. Pike, 4 B. & C. 484. See further as to the subject treated supra, Holt, N. P. C. 627, n.

(h) Ante, p. 103. Thomas v. Churton, 2 B. & S. 475.

(i) Hodgson v. Scarlett, 1 B. & Ald. 232, 240; S. C., Holt, N. P. C. 621; and see the note, Id. 626; Needham v. Dowling, 15 L. J., C. P., 9; Brooke v. Montague, Cro. Jac. 90; Fairman v. Ives, 1 B. & Ald. 645; Doyle v. O'Doherty, Car. & M. 418; Mackay v. Ford, 5 H. & N. 792.

reason of the privilege, which is the advancement of public justice, does not apply. They may consequently be required to prove the truth of the imputations complained of (k), or, at all events, to show that the publication contains a full and accurate account of the proceedings which it professes to report (l). In like manner, a member of either House of Parliament is privileged in there making reflections on individuals; but this privilege does not extend to him or to any other person in publishing the defamatory speech (m). Nor is the publication of matter defamatory of an individual privileged because the libel is contained in a fair report in a newspaper of what passed at a public meeting (n).

An action will not lie against a person who in the course of a cause makes an affidavit containing matter, scandalous, false, and malicious concerning the complainant (o). Nor will an action lie for defamatory words spoken in the course of litigation which are relevant to that litigation (p).

Publication of a libel must be proved in order that an action for it may be sustainable. A libel may be 'published' in various ways, ex. gr., by reading it aloud (q), by selling it or distributing it gratis, by sending it by post or otherwise to any third person. A paper containing libellous matter

(k) Per Bayley, J., Lewis v. Walter, 4 B. & Ald. 613.

(l) Delegal v. Highley, 3 Bing. N. C. 950.

(m) R. v. Lord Abingdon, 1 Esp. 226; R. v. Creevey, 1 M. & S. 273; n.; Holt, N. P. C. 628. But quære, whether a publication by a member of the House of Commons of a report of his speech bonâ fide addressed to his constituents would not be privileged?—per Lord Campbell, C. J., 7 E. & B. 233.

(n) Davison v. Duncan, 7 E. & B. 229; Popham v. Pickburn, 7 H. & N. 891.

(o) Henderson v. Broomhead, 4 H.

& N. 569, recognising Revis v. Smith, 18 C. B. 126.

(p) Per Erle, J., 4 H. & N. 577; per Jervis, C. J., and Willes, J., 18 C. B. 141, 143.

(q) Per Abbott, C. J., 4 B. & Ald. 160.

What is sufficient evidence of publication? Fryer v. Gathercole, 4 Exch. 262; Cook v. Ward, 6 Bing. 409.

The mode of proving the publication of any libel contained in a newspaper is specially provided for by the stat. 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 76, ss. 6, 8. See Duke of Brunswick v. Harmer, 19 L. J., Q. B. 20.

may, moreover, be published without any actual manifestation of its contents, in like manner as an individual publishes an award without reading it to the parties who have submitted to his arbitration, or a will without declaring its contents to those to whom he makes the publication. In the case of a libel, 'publication,' it has been said (r), is "nothing more than doing the last act for the accomplishment of the mischief intended by it." The moment a man delivers a libel from his hands, and ceases to have control over it, there is an end of his locus pœnitentiæ; the injuria is complete, and the libeller may be called upon to answer for his act (s).

The making of a libel known, then, to any individual other than the party libelled, amounts indisputably in law to a publishing of the libel (t). Even the addressing to the wife a letter containing libellous matter reflecting on her husband, is a publication (u). And in an action for libel, it is no justification that the libellous matter was previously published by a third person, and that the defendant, at the time of his publication of it, disclosed the name of that person, and believed all the statements contained in the libel to be true (x).

Assuming that on the trial of an action for libel proof has been duly given of the alleged libel, and of its publication, what, it may be asked, are the respective functions of the (r) Per Best, J., R. v. Burdett, 4 B. & Ald. 126; per Abbott, C. J., Id. 160. But see, per Bayley, J., Id. 153.

(s) Per Holroyd, J., 4 B. & Ald. 143, who observes, that "in 5 Rep. 128 a, it is laid down that a scandalous libel may be published traditione, when the libel or any copy of it is delivered over to scandalise the party. So that the mere delivering over or parting with the libel with that intent, is deemed a 'publishing.' It is an uttering of the libel, and that I take to be the sense in which the word 'publishing' is used in law. Though, in common parlance, that word may be confined in its meaning to making the contents known to the public, yet its meaning is not so limited in law." See Griffiths v. Lewis, 7 Q. B. 61.

(t) See preceding note.

(u) Wenman v. Ash, 13 C. B. 536.

(x) Tidman v. Ainslie, 10 Exch. 63, and cases there cited.

judge and jury in regard to the matter before them? The question "whether libel or no libel is for the jury, unless a question of privileged communication arises" (y). It has, however, long been the practice for the judge in such cases first to give a legal definition of the tort charged against the defendant, and then to leave it to the jury to say whether the facts necessary to constitute that offence are proved to their satisfaction. It is the judge's duty also to determine whether or not an alleged libel is capable of the meaning ascribed to it by an innuendo, though where he is satisfied of that it must be left to the jury to say whether the publication in question has the meaning so ascribed to it (z), or was levelled at the plaintiff (a).

We have already seen (b) that a publication without justification or lawful excuse, which is calculated to injure the reputation of another, by exposing him to hatred, contempt, or ridicule, is a libel. Whether the particular publication which is the subject of inquiry is of that character, and would be likely to produce that effect, is a question upon which a jury is to exercise their judgment, and to pronounce their opinion as a question of fact. The judge, as a matter of advice to them, in deciding that question, may, indeed, give his own opinion as to the nature of the publication complained of, but is not bound to do so as a matter of law (c).

(y) Per Williams, J., Paris v. Lery, 9 C. B., N. S., 352.

(z) Sturt v. Blagg, 10 Q. B. 906, 908; S. C., Id. 899; Barrett v. Long, 3 H. L. Ca. 395; Babonneau v. Farrell, 15 C. B. 360.

(a) Merywether v. Turner, 7 C. B. 251. See Le Fanu v. Malcolmson, 1 H. L. Ca. 637; Griffiths v. Lewis, 7 Q. B. 61.

(b) Ante, p. 734.

(c) Per Parke, B., and Alderson, B., Parmiter v. Coupland, 6 M. & W.

108, 109. See further as to the functions of Judge and jury in actions of libel, Fisher v. Clement, 10 B. & C. 472; Empson v. Fairford, W. W. & D. 10; Reeves v. Templar, 2 Jur. 187; Hughes v. Reeves, 4 M. & W. 204; Scales v. Cheese, 10 M. & W. 488.

Words uttered must be construed in the sense which hearers of common and reasonable understanding would ascribe to them, even though particular individuals, better informed on the matter alluded to, might form a different

The declaration in an action for libel must, of course, sufficiently show upon the face of it, that a libel has been published by the defendant, otherwise the plaintiff may be nonsuited, or the judgment will, after verdict, be arrested (d). A miscarriage, however, in framing the declaration for libel (e) is much less to be apprehended now than it formerly was, owing to its shape having been materially simplified by the C. L. Proc. Act, 1852, the 61st section whereof renders unnecessary the introduction into it of prefatory averments setting forth the precedent facts connected with the expressions complained of as defamatory, and in reference to which such expressions are alleged to have been used (f).

The section above cited enacts, that a plaintiff suing for libel "shall be at liberty to aver that the words or matter complained of were used in a defamatory sense, specifying such defamatory sense, without any prefatory averment to show how such words or matter were used in that sense, and such averment shall be put in issue by the denial of the alleged libel or slander; and where the words or matter set forth, with or without the alleged meaning, show a cause of action, the declaration shall be sufficient."

Slander.

The declaration in an action for slander is in this form (g):—It alleges "That the defendant falsely and maliciously spoke and published of the plaintiff the words following, that is to say ['he is a thief']." The special damage, if any, should then be stated with such reasonable particularity as to give notice to the defendant of the peculiar injury complained judgment on the subject: Hankinson v. Bilby, 16 M. & W. 442, 445. See Daines v. Hartley, 3 Exch. 200.

(d) Hearne v. Stowell, 12 Ad. & E. 719, 731-2. See Solomon v. Lawson, 8 Q. B. 823.

(e) The remark supra applies also to a declaration for slander.

(f)^{*} See the subject above alluded to fully explained, C. L. Com., 1st Rep., pp. 28-9; Hemmings v. Gasson, H. B. & E. 346.

(g) C. L. Proc. Act, 1852 Sched. B., No. 32.

of; for instance, 'whereby the plaintiff lost his situation as gamekeeper, in the employ of A.'

The remarks heretofore made with respect to libel will be found generally applicable in regard to oral defamation. There is, however, this great distinction between the two actions, that from a libel damage is always implied by law, whereas some kinds of slander only are actionable without proof of special damage. In order to sustain an action for slander without proof of special damage, evidence must be given of some imputation on the plaintiff of a crime punishable by law, or of the having some contagious disorder which may exclude from society, or the words complained of must be shown to have been spoken of the plaintiff with reference to his trade, office, or profession, and to have been calculated to injure him therein (h). What are such words, and what are not, it may often be difficult to determine (i). To say of a tradesman, "if he does not come and make terms with me, I will make a bankrupt of him and ruin him," must necessarily be highly prejudicial to him in his business: such words are in their nature defamatory, because, when used by the defendant, they necessarily imply that he has the power to carry his threat into execution (k). On the other hand, no action will lie, without averment and proof of actual (h) See, per Bayley, J., M'Gregor v. Thwaites, 3 B. & C. 33; Note to J'Anson v. Stuart, 2 Smith L. C., 5th ed., p. 63.

(i) As to defamatory words falling under the 1st or 2nd of the three classes above specified, see Huckle v. Reynolds, 7 C. B., N. S., 114; Heming v. Power, 10 M. & W. 564; Edsall v. Russell, 4 M. & Gr. 1090; Curtis v. Curtis, 10 Bing. 447; Slowman v. Dutton, Id. 402; Tozer v. Mashford, 6 Exch. 539; Wadsworth v. Beniley, 23 L. J., Q. B., 8; Helsham v. Blackwood, 11 C. B. 111; Bloodworth v. Gray, 7 M. & Gr.

334. As to defamatory words falling within the 3rd of these classes, see Southee v. Denny, 1 Exch. 196, and cases infra.

Quære, whether the word "black-leg" is actionable without special damage: Barnett v. Allen, 3 H. & N. 376. See Homer v. Taunton, 5 H. & N. 661.

(k) Brown v. Smith, 13 C. B. 596. See Rolin v. Steward, 14 C. B. 603; Bellamy v. Burch, 16 M. & W. 590; Griffiths v. Lewis, 7 Q. B. 61; Robinson v. Marchant, 7 Q. B. 918.

damage, for verbally imputing incontinence to a clergyman, unless he is beneficed or holds some clerical office or employment of temporal profit (l). Though any disparaging words spoken of another without legal justification are actionable, if productive of special damage (m) flowing naturally from the slander (n). And words, written or oral, which falsely depreciate the value of chattel property may also be made the subject of an action, provided special damage ensue from them (o). The distinction between a libel or slander on a person in the way of his trade, which is actionable, as we have already seen, without proof of special damage, and words injuriously reflecting on the quality of his wares and merchandize, is sometimes rather fine (p).

Slander of title.

There is one rather peculiar kind of slander—viz., slander of title to land or other realty—which, in concluding the present Chapter, may conveniently be noticed. Slander of title signifies a statement of something tending to cut down the extent of title to some estate vested in the plaintiff; and this is actionable only when it is false and malicious, i.e., done with intent to injure the plaintiff. Suppose, for instance, that one having an infirm title to property is about to sell it, or to make it the subject of a settlement, and that another, moved by spite and malice, discloses what he believes to be a defect in the title, which information afterwards turns out to be (l) Gallwey v. Marshall, 9 Exch. 294 (citing Hopwood v. Thorn, 8 C. B. 293, and other cases); see Pemberton v. Colls, 10 Q. B. 461.

(m) See Wilby v. Elston, 8 C. B. 142; Dixon v. Smith, 5 H. & N. 450; Evans v. Harries, 1 H. & N. 251; Bateman v. Lyall, 7 C. B., N. S., 638; James v. Brook, 16 L. J., Q. B., 17.

(n) Allsop v. Allsop, 5 H. & N. 534; approved in Lynch v. Knight, 9 H. L. Ca. 577, 592; per Martin, B., Dixon v. Smith, supra; Tunnicliffe v. Moss, 3 Car. & K. 83; ante, p. 93.

In Parkins v. Scott, 1 H. & C. 153. Held that slanderous words not actionable per se would not become so by reason of damage resulting from an unauthorised repetition of such words by a third person: Dixon v. Smith, supra.

(o) See Cooke on Defamation, p. 20. As to the action for scandalum magnatum, Id. pp. 25-27.

(p) Evans v. Harlow, 5 Q. B. 624; Ingram v. Lawson, 6 Bing. N. C. 212.

untrue ; suppose, further, that damage thence results to the proposed vendor ; in such case an action will lie at suit of this latter party, the statement being false and malicious, and injurious to him ; but under the circumstances just supposed, both the falsehood of the statement made and express malice on the part of the defendant must be shown, or there will be no case for the jury (q).

(q) Pater v. Baker, 3 C. B. 831 ; libel special damage has no existence as Brook v. Rawl, 4 Exch. 521. See a ground of action. This is an intermediate case—it is not slander of title ; Rogers v. Macnamara, 14 C. B. 27 ; but may there not be a case of libel of and cases cited, 2 Selw. N. P., 12th title ?” See, also, Carr v. Duckett, 5 ed., p. 1258 ; Bignell v. Buzzard, 3 H. & N. 783 ; Young v. Macrae, 3 B. & S. 264, 269. Channell, B, remarks, “In slander the plaintiff may rely on proof of special damage. In

CHAPTER III.

TORTS TO PROPERTY.

HAVING in the preceding Chapter treated of Torts to the Person and Reputation, I now propose to take a brief and elementary view of the ordinary civil Wrongs which may be done to Property, Real or Personal. In carrying out this plan, I shall have, more particularly, to examine the nature of the remedy allowed by law for the recovery of land—for enforcing compensation in damages for an injury direct or consequential done to it—for recovering chattel property tortiously withheld from its owner—for compelling pecuniary satisfaction for its forcible abstraction, or in respect of an injury caused to it. Before inquiring as to the subjects here specified, it may be well to remind the reader that the several rules and principles of law, which will now for awhile engage our attention, concern—and have been fashioned to protect—that absolute right, which, as Blackstone (a) tells us, is inherent in every Englishman—the right of property; consisting “in the free use, enjoyment, and disposal of all his acquisitions, without any control or diminution, save only by the laws of the land.” Whatever may be the origin of private property, the modifications to which it is subjected and the method of conserving it in the present owner or of transferring it from man to man, are entirely derived from social exigencies (b), and are scrupulously regulated by our law, which is extremely watchful in ascertaining and protecting the rights in question.

(a) 1 Com. p. 138.

(b) Id. ibid.

From Magna Charta downwards, not merely the land and freehold of the subject, but his goods and chattels, have in innumerable instances been jealously guarded by enactment ; and, although there are cases in which pro salute populi the rights of property are violated or infringed, such invasion of them is never, without due caution and inquiry, tolerated or sanctioned ; and, even when this is permitted, full compensation is invariably granted to or made enforceable at suit of the individual aggrieved ; the principle of our law being to give to him, either out of the public purse or from some private source, an indemnification and equivalent for the injury sustained.

Save, however, in extreme or urgent cases, such as have been just adverted to, the words of Sir E. Coke (c), in his commentary on our celebrated statute, still hold true,—that every subject, for injury done to him in goods, in lands, in person, by any other subject (be he ecclesiastical or temporal), “may take his remedy by the course of the law, and have justice and right for the injury done to him—freely without sale—fully without any denial—and speedily without delay.”

SECT. I.—Torts to Real Property.

Of ordinary injuries or torts to real property, that which Ejectment. may here with propriety first be noticed, is constituted by the wrongful detention or withholding of land (d) from its lawful owner, by possession and occupancy adverse to his rights. For this injury the remedy is by ejectment, which is the specific form of action prescribed by our law for recovering the possession of land, and lies at suit of the claimant against the wrongful occupier of it.

Ejectment is brought rather with a view to recovering the will it lie ? are fully treated in Selw.

(c) 2 Inst. 55.

(d) The questions, — by whom may an ejectment be brought ? and for what possession of land than in assertion of a title to it which shall be altogether indefeasible. If A. claims land of which B. is in possession, B. is in law to be considered as owner of the land until the contrary be proved. So that A. will necessarily have to recover possession, if at all, by the strength of his own, and not by the weakness of B.'s title (e). Should A. succeed in doing so, and should it happen that B. or any other person afterwards becomes clothed with a better title than A., a second action may be brought, and A. may be ejected from the land. Hence Lord Mansfield takes occasion (f) to observe, that "in truth and substance a judgment in ejectment is a recovery of the possession (not of the seisin or freehold) without prejudice to the right, as it may afterwards appear even between the parties." He, then, who recovers in ejectment can only be possessed according to the right which he has. If he has a freehold interest in the land, he is in as a freeholder. If he has a chattel interest, he is in as a termor. If he has no title at all, he is in as a trespasser, and will be liable to account to the true owner for the profits of the land (f). There is, indeed, a cogent reason why a judgment in ejectment cannot, even as between the same parties, be deemed conclusive evidence, for a person may have a title to the possession of land at one time and not at another.

N. P., 12th ed., tit. “Ejectment,” ss. 2 and 3.

The remarks of Lord Mansfield, in Taylor v. Horde, with reference to the effect and legal operation of the judgment in ejectment, seems still generally applicable, inasmuch as the 207th section of the C. L. Proc. Act, 1852, expressly declares that the effect of a judgment in ejectment under that Act "shall be the same as that of a judgment in the action of ejectment heretofore used." It is observable too that, as under the improved mode of procedure in ejectment there are no pleadings in that action (g), a judgment in ejectment, even where founded upon the same title and between the same parties, cannot be pleaded by way of estoppel to a second action (h): but still it seems clear on the authorities that such a judgment would, as between the same parties, be evidence, though not conclusive, on behalf of the party who obtained a verdict on the first trial (i).

(e) Per Lee, C. J., Martin v. Strachan, 5 T. B. 110 n.

(f) Taylor d Atkyns v. Horde, 1 Burr. 114.

Ejectment, then, depends mainly upon title, and this is ordinarily expressed by saying that it is "the action by which a person having a right of entry into land recovers its possession" (k). This remark, indeed, holds true, whether the relation of landlord and tenant exists or not between the litigating parties. Where this relation does not exist, the plaintiff in ejectment must show in himself a good and sufficient legal title to the land claimed. So that, if the occupant can answer the case set up on the part of the claimant by showing the real title to be in another, that will suffice for his defence (l). Reasonable presumption, however, will be admitted in favour of a title—for instance, if the plaintiff claims as heir at law of A., it will be sufficient for him to prove that A. was in possession; and that the plaintiff is his heir; for it shall be intended primâ facie that A. was seised in fee until the contrary appear (m).

Where the relation of landlord and tenant exists between the claimant of land and the party in possession it will not (g) C. L. Proc. Act, 1852, s. 178, which "puts an end to declarations in ejectment. In sweeping away the declaration and notice, there cannot be a doubt that it also sweeps away all pleadings:" per Maule, J., 16 C. B. 336.

(h) "Where a man has an opportunity of pleading the estoppel and does not plead it, he is bound; but not where he cannot plead it as in ejectment:" per Maule, J., 15 C. B. 439.

(i) Per Lord Abinger, C. B., and Parke, B., Doe d. Strobe v. Seaton, 2 Cr. M. & R. 728. See Aslin v. Parkin, 2 Burr. 665; Doe v. Wellsman, 2 Exch. 368; Doe v. Huddart, 2 Cr. M. & R. 316; per Jervis, C. J., Wilkinson v. Kirby, 15 C. B. 439, 443; Doe d. Brayne v. Bather, 12 Q. B. 941; Litchfield v. Reudy, 5 Exch. 939.

(k) C. L. Com., 1st Rep., p. 54.

(l) Adams Ejectm., 4th ed., p. 28.

(m) Id. p. 240.

be necessary for the landlord claiming the land to prove his title to it, by virtue of the well-known rule, that a tenant shall not be allowed to dispute his landlord's title, i.e., shall not be permitted to dispute the original right of him by whom he has himself been admitted into possession. If B. claiming under A. lets land to C. for a year and dies, and A. afterwards brings ejectment against C., C. may in some cases be estopped from disputing A.'s title paramount to the land (n). A tenant, however, may show that his landlord's title has ceased and determined subsequently to his own entry into the land and attornment to the plaintiff. And, in a word, as between landlord and tenant the right to maintain ejectment will depend upon this question, whether the landlord or the tenant was at the particular date specified in the declaration entitled to the possession of the land for which the action was brought—a question which will usually have to be determined by reference to the terms of the demise, or to the covenants and conditions (if any) contained in the lease between the parties.

A landlord, then, suing his tenant in ejectment will in general merely be required to prove the circumstances under which the defendant or the party under whom he holds was admitted into possession, and, further, to show that his right to the possession has ceased (o). Where the party in occupation of land holds under a lease, his right to the possession may determine by mere efflux of time, or by any act on his part working a forfeiture of the lease (p)—any act, for instance, by which he disaffirms or impugns the title of his (n) Barwick v. Thompson, 7 T. R. 488.

(o) Adams on Ejectment, 4th ed., p. 232. Where indeed the privity is not between the immediate parties to the action, the claimant will also have to prove his derivative title from the party by whom the defendant was originally admitted into possession: Id. ibid.

(p) As to forfeiture and waiver of forfeiture, see Croft v. Lumley, 5 E. & B. 648; S. C., 6 H. L. Ca. 672; per Crowder, J., Dendy v. Nicholl, 4 C. B., N. S., 379; Price v. Worwood, 4 H. & N. 512.

lessor ; for to affect to hold under a lease and at the same time to deny the interest or estate out of which the lease was granted, would be manifestly inconsistent and in direct violation of that elementary rule which forbids a man to "blow hot and cold" with reference to the same transaction—to insist at different times on the truth of each of two conflicting allegations, according to the promptings of his private interest (q).

But besides forfeiture by disaffirmance of the landlord's title, the term may become forfeited in pursuance of the express wording of the lease, that is, of some express covenant or condition inserted therein (r). "The general principle," says Ashhurst, J., in Roe v. Galliers (s), "is clear, that the landlord having the jus disponendi may annex whatever conditions he pleases to his grant, provided they be not illegal or unreasonable ;" he may, therefore, provide that he shall have a right of re-entry upon the demised premises on non-payment of rent, or on non-performance of the covenants contained in the lease, and some such proviso is accordingly inserted in every lease, whether it be of a dwelling-house or other building, of a farm or of land generally.

Further, a lease for years may be determined by cancellation of the instrument of demise, by surrender of the term, or by its becoming merged in the fee, or by notice to quit given in conformity with the provisions of the lease (t). Whilst a tenancy from year to year, also, may be determined by either party giving to the other of them a due notice to quit (u). And, lastly, in some cases a tenancy may be determined by the death of either of the contracting parties (v).

It will be convenient here to observe, that the C. L. Proc.

(q) Leg. Max., 4th ed., p. 169.

(r) See 23 & 24 Vict. c. 126, ss. 1, 2.

(s) 2 T. R. 187.

(t) As to which, generally, see Selw. P., 12th ed., vol. 2, pp. 707 et seq.

(u) Id. ibid. As to the mode of determining a tenancy at will, see Doe d. Davies v. Thomas, 6 Exch. 854, 858.

(v) Woodf. L. & T., 8th ed., p. 313.

Act, 1852, contains various important provisions having reference to the proceedings in ejectment by a landlord against his tenant for non-payment of rent (s. 210), or for holding over after expiration of the term, or determination of the tenancy by notice to quit (s. 213) (x).

The practice in ejectment is now regulated by various sections (ss. 168—221) of the Act just cited. Under its provisions the action commences, not as formerly by service of the declaration (y), but by a writ—directed to the persons in possession of the premises sought to be recovered by name, and generally to “all persons intitled to defend the possession” of the property claimed,—which is, moreover, required to be described with reasonable certainty in the writ.

The writ of ejectment (z) commands the parties to whom it is directed, or such of them as deny the alleged title of the claimant, within a certain period, viz., sixteen days, after service of the writ to appear in Court, to defend either for the whole or for part of the premises in question; the writ further notifies to the defendant (if there be only one), that in default of putting in an appearance judgment may be signed, and he turned out of possession. The writ in ejectment must, like an ordinary writ of summons, be indorsed with the address of the attorney issuing it, or (if it were issued by the plaintiff in person) of the plaintiff. It remains in force for three calendar months, and must be served “in the same manner as an ejectment has heretofore been served, or in such manner as the Court or a judge shall order” (a).

In the case of what is called a ‘vacant possession,’ i.e., where the premises sought to be recovered are wholly de(x) In regard to proceedings in ejectment by landlord against tenant, see also sect. 217 of the Act above specified.

(y) A concise statement of the mode in which an ejectment was formerly conducted, is given by the Common Law Commissioners at pp. 54-56 of their First Report.

(z) See the form of this writ, C. L. Proc. Act, 1852, Sched. B., No. 13.

(a) See 2 Selw. N. P., 12th ed., p. 723.

serted and void, a peculiar mode of service of the writ of ejectment is prescribed by s. 170 of the C. L. Proc. Act, 1852, viz., "by posting a copy thereof upon the door of the dwelling-house or other conspicuous part of the property" in question. Even where there is no tenant actually upon the premises a distinction must be taken between cases, where the tenant has actually abandoned the possession, and cases where, although he has discontinued to occupy the premises, he still retains the virtual possession of them (b), as by leaving property upon them or otherwise. In the former only of the two cases just specified must the claimant proceed as upon a vacant possession, whilst in the latter he will be required to effect service of the writ in such manner as he may be able (c).

In general, service of the writ in ejectment must be upon the person in possession of the premises—should he, however, hold as tenant merely for some third party, reference will have to be made to the 209th section of the C. L. Proc. Act, 1852, which directs that "every tenant to whom any writ in ejectment shall be delivered, or to whose knowledge it shall come, shall forthwith give notice thereof to his landlord, or his bailiff or receiver, under penalty of forfeiting the value of three years' improved or rack-rent of the premises demised or holden in the possession of such tenant to the person of whom he holds, to be recovered by action in any Court of common law having jurisdiction for the amount." When notice has been thus given to his landlord by the tenant in possession, the former will, under the 172nd section of the Act, by leave of the Court or a judge, be allowed to appear and defend, on filing an affidavit, showing that he is in possession of the land in question, either by himself or his tenant (d), and by section 173, he will, on entering

(b) Woodf. L. & T., 8th ed., p. 836.

(c) Doe d. Lord Darlington v. Cock, B. & C. 259.

(d) Under the section here specified it is enough if a prima facie case be shown by affidavit, stating that the apan appearance, be required to state expressly that, "he appears as landlord," in which case he will be at liberty to set up "any defence which a landlord appearing in an action of ejectment has heretofore been allowed to set up, and no other" (e).

If, after appearance entered in an action of ejectment, the claimant, without going to trial, suffer the time allowed for so doing by the practice of the Court in ordinary cases after issue joined to elapse, the defendant in ejectment may give twenty days' notice to the claimant to proceed to trial at the sittings or assizes next after the expiration of the notice, and if the claimant neglects to proceed to trial in pursuance thereof, and the time for going to trial shall not be extended by the Court or a Judge, the defendant may sign judgment and recover the costs of his defence (s. 202).

Again, assuming that the tenant in possession does not allow judgment to go against him by default, but appears to the action within the time appointed (s. 171), this peculiarity presents itself, that there are no written pleadings in ejectment, the 178th section of the recent statute (f) expressly providing that, "in case an appearance shall be entered, an issue may at once be made up without any pleadings (g); particulars of the claim and defence, if any, being annexed to the record by the claimant (h). The trial upon the issue raised between the parties will then take place in the same manner as in other actions (s. 180); and the question to be plicant is in possession by himself or his tenant. Croft v. Lumley, 4 E. & B. 608; S. C., 6 H. L. Ca. 672; Bulter v. Meredith, 11 Exch. 85.

By sect. 176 of the Act, the Court or a Judge has power "to strike out or confine appearances and defences set up by persons not in possession by themselves or their tenants."

(e) The nature of the defence which a landlord could, prior to the C. L. Proc.

Act, 1852, set up in an action of ejectment, is shortly stated in Wise's Ed. of the Act, pp. 184-5.

(f) See also Adams Ejectm., 4th ed., pp. 227, 231.

(g) But by "consent of the parties, and by leave of a Judge, a special case may be stated, according to the practice heretofore used" (s. 179).

(h) Sect. 180.

tried and decided between the claimant of the land and the defendant will be "whether the statement in the writ of the title of the claimant is true or false, and, if true," and there be several claimants, "then which of the claimants is entitled, and whether to the whole or part, and if to part, then to which part of the property in question" (s. 180).

As there is no plea (save to the jurisdiction) in ejectment, it follows that an equitable defence under the C. L. Proc. Act, 1854, s. 83, is not pleadable in such action (i).

Without attempting to go minutely through even the more important of those sections of the first C. L. Proc. Act which regulate the practice in ejectment, I may remark, that they seem to offer every necessary facility to any one in possession of land actually or constructively to come in to defend his possession, and to contest the title to be put forward at the trial by the plaintiff. This he may do either altogether, or as regards a part only of the premises mentioned in the writ (s. 174), and the issue will be restricted accordingly.

If at the trial the defendant appears, and the claimant does not appear, the claimant will be nonsuited—if the claimant appears, and the defendant does not appear, the claimant will be entitled to recover without any proof of his title (s. 183). Further, if the title of the claimant shall appear to have existed as alleged in the writ, and at the time of service thereof, but it shall also appear to have expired before the time of trial, the claimant will notwithstanding be entitled to a verdict according to the fact that he was so entitled at the time of bringing the action and serving the writ, and to a judgment for his costs of suit (s. 181). If the jury find for the claimant, judgment may then be signed (s. 185), and execution may issue for recovery of possession of the property, or such part thereof as the jury shall find the claimant entitled to, and for costs of the suit (k). It is, moreover, important to remark, that where ejectment is brought by a landlord against his tenant after a forfeiture or otherwise, the claimant will at the trial be permitted (after it has been shown that the defendant was served with notice of trial, and after proof by the plaintiff of his right to recover possession of the whole, or of any part of the demised premises) to go into evidence of the mesne profits received down to the time of the verdict, and may recover damages in respect thereof (s. 214) (l). In cases not arising between landlord and tenant, however, after judgment has been obtained in ejectment for the premises which formed the subject of the action, a separate action of trespass for mesne profits is necessary in order to recover damages from the occupant in respect of so much as may have been received by him during the period of his wrongful occupancy (m). I may add, that in such action, from Aslin v. Parkin (n) down to Doe v. Wright (o), it has been held that a judgment by default in an action of ejectment, followed by a writ of possession, even though not pleaded, is evidence of the title and possession of the plaintiff as against the tenant in possession, from the day of the demise laid, or from the date of the title stated in the declaration; and on the authority of the last-mentioned case, it is now well settled, that if properly pleaded it is an estoppel (p). It should, perhaps, fur-

(k) On the other hand, if the verdict be for the defendant, judgment may be signed and execution issue for costs against the claimant (s. 186).

In ejectment the Court has power to order the plaintiff's costs to be paid by the party really conducting the defence, albeit a stranger to the record, and claiming no interest in the property: Hutchinson v. Greenwood, 4 E. & B. 324.

(l) See Smith v. Tet, 9 Exch. 307.

(m) As to the action for mesne profits, see Woodf. L. & T., 8th ed., pp. 756, 826, 857.

(n) 2 Burr. 665.

(o) 10 Ad. & R. 703.

(p) Per Jervis, C. J., Wilkinson v. Kirby, 15 C. B. 443; and see Matthew v. Osborne, 13 C. B. 919; per Parke, B., Doe d. Hellyer v. King, 6 Exch. 794; and in Litchfield v. Ready, 5 Exch. 945.

ther be noticed, that, with a view to preventing vexatious litigation (q), sect. 93 of the C. L. Proc. Act, 1854, provides that the claimant in a second ejectment, brought for the same premises against the same defendant, may by the Court or a Judge be ordered to give security for costs, with a stay of proceedings until such security shall have been given.

Trespass to realty, which, in the next place, demands our attention, differs materially from ejectment in two respects : 1st, Ejectment is founded upon title, whereas trespass is founded upon possession (r) ; 2ndly, In ejectment, the specific possession of land may be recovered by virtue of the writ of Hab. fac. poss. (s), and through the medium of the sheriff ; whereas in trespass an award of damages only can be obtained, by the intervention of a jury, as compensation for the injury inflicted on the plaintiff by the tortious act of the defendant (t).

Trespass to realty consists in a wrongful and unwarrantable entry upon the soil or land (u) of another which the law entitles a trespass by ‘breaking his close ;’ these words being derived from the form of the writ of trespass anciently in force commanding the defendant to show cause quare clausum querentis fregit (x). The true meaning and significance of this word “clausum” is thus clearly explained by Blackstone (y) : “Every man’s land,” he says, “is in the (q) See Doe d. Brayne v. Bather, 12 Q. B. 941 ; Morgan v. Nicholls, 3 H. & N. 215.

(r) Per Lord Kenyon, C. J., Graham v. Peat, 1 East, 243, 246 ; Davis v. Danks, 3 Exch. 435, 437 ; Lee v. Stevenson, E. B. & E. 512.

(s) The form of which is given in Reg. Pr. Hil. T., 1853, Sched. Nos. 23, 24.

(t) Selw. N. P., 12th ed., vol. 2, pp. 758, 1325.

(u) As to the legal signification of the word “land,” see Leg. Max., 4th ed., pp. 382, 385 ; post, p. 781.

(x) The statutory form of declaration in trespass to land is, “that the defendant broke and entered certain land of the plaintiff, called ” — “and [depastured the same with cattle] :” C. L. Proc. Act, 1854, Sched. B., No. 25.

(y) 3 Com. pp. 209, 210.

eye of the law enclosed and set apart from his neighbour's, and that, either by a visible and material fence, as one field is divided from another by a hedge, or by an ideal invisible boundary existing only in the contemplation of law, as when one man's land adjoins to another's in the same field." Any entry upon, or breach of, a man's close if unauthorised by him, and unjustified by law (z), carries necessarily along with it some damage or other (a). So that proof of the alleged trespass will, without any proof of damage sustained, entitle the plaintiff to a verdict; and the reason of this has been well explained (b) as follows: For the vindication of every right there is a remedy: when, therefore, there has been a violation of a right, the person injured is entitled to an action, and, consequently, to at least nominal damages. Such damages being given in order to vindicate the right which has been invaded, and such further or special damages being awarded as may be proper to remunerate and compensate the plaintiff for any specific damage which he has sustained. It is on this principle that a person may support an action of trespass for an unauthorised entry on his land, although he show no actual specific damage to have thereby accrued to him; nay, even though the defendant show that the act in question was positively beneficial to the plaintiff (c).

The action of trespass, qu. cl. fr. is founded upon actual possession by the plaintiff, i. e., possession by himself, or by his servant (d) or agent, of the locus in quo. Should he be out of possession, as, if he has demised it to another, trespass for an entry upon such land will clearly not lie at his suit, (z) Liford's case, 11 Rep. 52 a; Randall v. Stevens, 23 L. J., Q. B., 68; Keyse v. Powell, 2 E. & B. 132. See Holmes v. Newlands, 11 Ad. & E. 44; Knapp v. London, Chatham and Dover R. C., 2 H. & C. 212.

(a) Per Lord Camden, Entick v.

Carrington, 19 How. St. Tr. 1066; ante, pp. 88, 643.

(b) Sedgw. Dams., 2nd ed., p. 133.

(c) Id. ibid.

(d) See Mayhew v. Suttle, 4 E. & B. 347.

the tenant in possession being here the party aggrieved, and being therefore entitled to complain by action at law.

Possession, then, is necessary to the maintenance of trespass, qu. cl. fr., and the party in possession will make out a primâ facie case sufficient to entitle him to a verdict by proof of such possession in himself, and of entry by the defendant. This is, of course, equivalent to saying that entry upon the land of another is primâ facie tortious so as to cast upon the defendant the necessity of showing title in himself or some third person, and proving authority from that person to enter upon the land in question (e).

The doctrine just stated, though manifestly founded in common sense and convenience, may sometimes lead to rather singular results. As soon as a person entitled to the possession of land peaceably enters upon it in the assertion of that title, the law immediately vests the actual possession in him who has so entered. "If," says Maule, J. (f), "there are two persons in a field, each asserting that the field is his, and each doing some act in the assertion of the right of possession, and if the question is, which of those two is in actual possession? I answer, the person who has the title is in actual possession, and the other person is a trespasser (g). They differ in no other respects." It cannot, indeed, be said that in the case here supposed there is a joint possession, or a possession by the two as tenants in common. It cannot be

(e) Per Wightman, J., Jones v. Chapman, 2 Exch. 816 (where the effect of the plea of "not possessed" is explained; as to which see also, per Jervis, C. J., Wilkinson v. Kirby, 15 C. B. 443; Sloccombe v. Lyall, 6 Exch. 119; Judgm., Hayling v. Okey, 8 Exch. 545.

(f) Jones v. Chapman, 2 Exch. 821; cited per Parke, B., 5 Exch. 947.

(g) Hence a person wrongfully holding possession of land cannot treat the rightful owner who enters on the land as a trespasser, for the party entitled to the land acquires by entry the lawful possession of it, so that he may maintain trespass against any person who, being in possession at the time of his entry, wrongfully continues upon the land: per Bayley, J., Butcher v. Butcher, 7 B. & C. 402 (citing Townton v. Costar, 7 T. R. 431); Hey v. Moorhouse, 6 Bing. N. C. 52.

denied that one is in possession and the other a trespasser ; which is the trespasser must be determined by the fact of title. And although both are apparently in actual possession, yet the question which of them really is so will depend upon this rule—that the law makes the possession under such circumstances follow the title (h). The example thus put by Mr. Justice Maule seems specially well adapted to illustrate the elementary rule before adverted to, viz., that the possession of land will suffice to sustain an action of trespass, qu. cl. fr., against one who tortiously enters upon it (i).

In further illustration of the rule just stated, let us suppose that land is held by A. under B. who is tenant for life, that B. dies, and that A. subsequently to his death being out of actual possession does no act indicating an intention to continue his possession of the premises—As if A. is tenant of a field, which becoming flooded during the winter is not subsequently thereto and after the death of the tenant for life (A's landlord) reoccupied by him—In such a case the tenancy would, in fact, have been determined by the death of the tenant for life, and therefore an action of trespass would not be maintainable at suit of A. (k). Nor will trespass lie against the occupier of land at suit of a mortgagee who has never been in actual possession, or been seised the land, and has not obtained a judgment in ejectment its recovery (l). And before entry neither can a freeholder (m) nor the customary heir of a copyhold tenement (n) maintain trespass for an unlawful entry upon his land.

(h) 2 Exch. 821.

(i) See also, per Holroyd, J., Harper v. Charlesworth, 4 B. & C. 592 ; Judgm., Ryan v. Clark, 14 Q. B. 71 ; Dyson v. Collick, 5 B. & Ald. 600 ; and cases cited Broom's Prac., vol. 1, p. 537 (b).

(k) Brown v. Nolley, 3 Exch. 219 ; Smith v. Miller, 1 T. B. 475.

(l) Turner v. Cameron's Coalbrook Steam Coal Co., 5 Exch. 932 ; Litchfield v. Ready, Id. 939 ; Wheeler v. Montefiore, 2 Q. B. 133 (explained in the judgment, Doe d. Parsley v. Day, 2 Q. B. 155).

(m) 3 Bla. Com. 210, citing 2 Roll. Abr. 553.

(n) Barnett v. Earl of Guildford, manner which has been first suggested, and the jury negative actual damage, the defendant will be entitled to a verdict (u). The following hypothetical state of facts may serve to illustrate this part of the subject: A. is tenant in possession of an estate under a lease—through this estate runs a public road, which is stopped up by B. (the defendant)—in consequence whereof A. sustains some special and peculiar damage, which will entitle him to an action against B. In this case, however, C., the landlord, who is out of possession, is in nowise damnified by his tenant's being prevented from enjoying his estate in so ample a manner as he might otherwise have done, and he (the landlord) will not be entitled to redress, in the absence of proof of damage to his reversion. That such damage might under the circumstances here supposed really ensue, or be reasonably presumable, is extremely probable; for if an obstruction of a public road appeared from its construction to be of a permanent nature, or professed, either by notice affixed, or in any other way, to deny the public right, thus leading to an opinion that no road was there, the value of the estate might be lowered in public estimation, and pecuniary loss might follow, for which an action would lie (x).

In Simpson v. Savage (y), where cases upon this subject are collected and reviewed, the Court lay down this proposition, that since, in order to give a reversioner a right of action for consequential damage, "there must be some injury done to the inheritance, the necessity is involved of the injury being of a permanent character," not necessarily in the sense of lasting many years, but of its enuring as an injury to the reversion (z). A declaration by a reversioner stated that the (u) Dobson v. Blackmore, 9 Q. B. 991; Jackson v. Pecked, 1 M. & S. 234.

(x) Judgm., 9 Q. B. 1004.

(y) 1 C. B., N. S., 347; Mumford v. Oxford, Worcester, and Wolver- hampton R. C., 1 H. & N. 34; Bell v. Midland R. C., 10 C. B., N. S., 287.

As to the measure of damages in case for injury to the reversion, see Battis-hill v. Reed, 18 C. B. 696.

(z) Metropolitan Ass. v. Petch, 5 plaintiff was entitled to a right of way for his tenants over a certain close of the defendant, and charged that the defendant wrongfully shut and kept fastened a certain gate standing across it, and so obstructed the way in question, and that by means of the premises the plaintiff was injured in his reversionary estate; a verdict having been found for the plaintiff, a motion was made on behalf of the defendant to arrest the judgment on this ground, that the obstruction complained of was not shown to be an injury of a permanent nature so as to affect the reversion; but the Court of Common Pleas, holding that it might be injurious to it, discharged the rule (a).

Without entering further upon the subject here mooted, we may conclude that where there is a direct injury to land, and also a consequential damage caused to it, that may form the subject-matter either of case or of trespass; but where there is only a direct injury to the soil and freehold, there is no other remedy available than trespass (b). In connection with torts to the realty, it should also be noticed, that, "a man is answerable for not only his own trespass, but that of his cattle also: for if, by his negligent keeping, they stray upon the land of another (and much more if he permits or drives them on), and they there tread down his neighbour's herbage, and spoil his corn or his trees, this is a trespass for which the owner must answer in damages; and the law gives the party injured a double remedy in this case, by permitting him to distrain the cattle thus 'damage-feasant,' or doing damage, till the owner shall make him satisfaction, or else by leaving him to the common remedy in foro contentioso by action," wherein, "if any unwarrantable act of the defendant or his

C. B., N. B., 504, following Kidgill v. Moor, infra.

(a) Kidgill v. Moor, 9 C. B. 364. See also Wiltshier v. Cottrell, 1 E. & B. 674; Baxter v. Taylor, 4 B. & Ad. 72; Tucker v. Newman, 11 Ad. & E.

40; Young v. Spencer, 10 B. & C. 145; per Best, C. J., Strother v. Barr, 5 Bing. 153; Alston v. Scales, 9 Bing. 3; Hosking v. Phillips, 3 Exch. 168.

(b) Weeton v. Woodcock, 5 M. & W. 587, 594.

beasts, in coming upon the land, be proved, it is an act of trespass for which the plaintiff must recover some damages ; such, however, as the jury shall think proper to assess" (c).

"In trespasses of a permanent nature," further remarks Blackstone (d), "where the injury is continually renewed,"—as by spoiling or consuming the herbage with the defendant's cattle, or by continuing illegally in his dwelling-house after a forcible entry into it (e)—"the declaration may allege the injury to have been committed by continuation from one given day to another," "and the plaintiff shall not be compelled to bring separate actions for every day's separate offence (f). But where the trespass is by one or several acts, each of which terminates in itself, and being once done cannot be done again, it cannot be laid with a continuando ; yet if there be repeated acts of trespass committed (as cutting down a certain number of trees), they may be laid to be done not continually, but at divers days and times within a given period" (g).

In some cases, indeed, a forcible entry on another's land or house is justifiable and shall not be accounted trespass (h), as if a man comes thither to demand or pay money there payable, or to execute in a legal manner the process of the law (i). Thus a landlord may justify entering to distrain for rent ; a person may in some cases enter upon his neighbour's land to (c) 3 Bla. Com., pp. 211-2.

See a form of declaration in trespass applicable under circumstances such as here supposed, ante, p. 763, n. (x).

(d) 3 Com., p. 212.

(e) Percival v. Stamp, 9 Exch. 167, 174, where Parke, B., says, "It is common learning, that every continuation of a trespass is a fresh trespass. If the defendant continue for more than one day, that may be given in evidence under the ordinary form of declaration, laying the trespasses with a continuando."

(f) See 1 Chitt. Pl., 7th ed., p. 408.

(g) 3 Bla. Com., p. 212. See Bonyer v. Cook, 4 C. B. 236 ; Holmes v. Wilson, 10 Ad. & E. 503 ; Battishill v. Reed, 18 C. B. 696, 713, and cases there cited.

(h) See Burridge v. Nicholls, 6 H. & N. 383.

(i) See Hewitt v. Macquire, 7 Exch. 80 ; Ash v. Dawnay, 8 Exch. 237, 243 ; Keane v. Reynolds, 2 E. & B. 748.

abate a nuisance (k). A commoner may enter to attend his cattle commoning on another's land; a reversioner, to see if any waste be committed on the estate; and, under circumstances of extreme necessity (l), or where the law presumes a right of way, an intrusion on another's land may be justified. Moreover, a man may justify entering into an inn or public-house without the leave of the owner first specially asked; because, when one professes the keeping of such inn or public-house, he thereby gives a general licence to any person to enter his doors (m), such licence being of course subject to statutory restrictions, and likewise to this proviso, that there is suitable accommodation at the innkeeper's disposal, and that the guest applies peaceably for admission, and is ready and able to pay reasonable compensation for what he has (n).

(k) Ante, Book I., Chap. 5.

(l) Leg. Max., 4th ed., p. 3. See Pinnington v. Galland, 9 Exch. 1, and cases there cited; White v. Bass, 7 H. & N. 722, 732; Pearson v. Spencer, 3 B. & S. 761; S. C., Id. 571; Pyer v. Carter, 1 H. & N. 916, 922; Ewart v. Cochrane, 4 Macq. Sc. App. Ca. 117, 122; Hall v. Lund, 1 H. & C. 676; Dodd v. Burchell, 2 H. & C. 113; Buckby v. Cotes, 5 Taunt. 311; Proctor v. Hodgson, 10 Exch. 824.

See also the remarks appended to the maxim, Cuiusque aliquis quid concedit concedere videtur et id sine quo res ipsa esse non potuit: Leg. Max., 4th ed., p. 463.

Pyer v. Carter, supra, is questioned in Suffield v. Brown, 33 L. J., Ch. 249.

(m) 3 Bla. Com., p. 212.

"Leave and licence" may of course be pleaded in an action of trespass qu. cl. fr. See Hewitt v. Isham, 7 Exch. 77; Doe d. Hudson v. Leeds and Bradford R. Co., 16 Q. B. 706; cited per Channell, B., Knapp v. London, Chatham, and Dover R. Co., 2 H. & C. 222.

(n) Story on Bailm., 5th ed., p. 497; R. v. Ivens, 7 Car. & P. 213; Thompson v. Lacy, 3 B. & Ald. 283, 285; Hawthorn v. Hammond, 1 Car. & K. 404; per Coleridge, J., Dansey v. Richardson, 3 E. & B. 159.

An innkeeper is not, however, bound to provide for his guest the precise room which the latter may select; all that the law requires of him is to find for his guests reasonable and proper accommodation: Fell v. Knight, 8 M. & W. 269, 276.

As to the obligation of an innkeeper to receive goods, see the remarks per Cur. in Broadwood v. Granara, 10 Exch. 417, and cases there cited.

As to the innkeeper's right of lien, see Snead v. Watkins, 1 C. B., N. S., 267.

As to the liability of an innkeeper for loss of goods belonging to a guest, post, Sect. 2.

A man may also justify in an action of trespass on account of the freehold and right of entry being in himself, a defence which brings the title to the estate in question. This, remarks Blackstone (o), is therefore one of the ways devised since the disuse of real actions for trying the property in estates; though it is not (for reasons already stated (p)), so usual as that by ejectment.

There are one or two rather peculiar principles of our law which, in connection with injuries to real property, invite our notice. "Where," says Blackstone (q), "a man misdemeans himself, or makes an ill use of the authority with which the law intrusts him, he shall be accounted a trespasser ab initio; as if one comes into a tavern and will not go out in a reasonable time, but tarries there all night contrary to the inclinations of the owner, this wrongful act shall affect and have relation back even to his first entry, and make the whole a trespass. But a bare nonfeasance, as not paying for the wine he calls for, will not make him a trespasser, for this is only a breach of contract for which the taverner shall have an action of debt or assumpsit against him." Such are the remarks of Blackstone upon the point in question, the law in regard to it being fully stated in The Six Carpenters' case (r), which has justly been designated (s) as "one of the most celebrated in Lord Coke's Reports." The doctrine referred to is in practice most frequently, though not exclusively, applied in connection with trespasses to land, as where he who enters an inn or tavern commits a trespass there, as by carrying anything away; or if the lord who distrains for rent, or the owner for damage feasant, works or kills the distress; or if he who has a right of entry to take one heriot, enters and Trespass ab initio.

(o) 3 Com. p. 214.

(p) Ante, p. 763.

(q) 3 Com. p. 213.

(r) 8 Rep. 146 a. See Leg. Max., 4th ed., pp. 833 et seq.; West v. Nibbs, 4 C. B. 172, 187; Ash v. Dawnay, 8

Exch. 237; Percival v. Stamp, 9 Exch. 167; Burdett v. Colman, 14 East, 164; Ambergate, &c. R. C. v. Midland R. C., 2 E. & B. 793.

(s) 1 Smith L. C., 5th ed., p. 132.

takes two (t) ; or if a lessor who enters on demised premises to see if waste be done breaks the house, or stays there all night ; or where a commoner cuts down a tree growing on the commonable land. In these and the like cases the law holds that the wrong-doer entered with intention to do the wrongful act of which he subsequently was guilty ; and because the act which demonstrates the intention is a trespass, the individual doing it shall be accounted a trespasser ab initio (u). A man cannot, however, be made a trespasser by relation where the act complained of was lawful at the time when done (x).

Ratification
of trespass

Another important principle occasionally applicable in trespass qu. cl. fr., the nature and limitations whereof have already been illustrated and defined, is that of ratification by a principal of a wrongful act done in his name or on his behalf by a third person. The judgment in Buron v. Denman, noticed at a former page (y), should specially be examined in connection with the subject treated of in the present section.

Amongst torts to realty, besides such as are evidenced by a mere wrongful entry upon land, are to be included injuries done and nuisances caused, whether by negligence or design, to the lands or buildings of another.

For instance, injury may be done to realty by tortiously interfering with the right to support of land or the right to support of buildings, rights however which stand upon different footings as regards the mode of acquiring them—"the former being prima facie a right of property analogous to the flow of a natural river or of air (z) ; though there may be

(t) Price v. Woodhouse, 1 Exch. 559.

(u) The Six Carpenters' case, 8 Rep. 146 b ; Bramwell v. Attack, 3 B. & S. 520.

(x) See Tharpe v. Stallwood, 5 M. & Gr. 760, in connection with which see Foster v. Bates, 12 M. & W. 226 ; Welchman v. Sturgis, 13 Q. B. 552 ; per Parke, B., Yorston v. Fether, 14 M. & W. 854.

(y) Ante, p. 102.

(z) Rowbotham v. Wilson, 8 H. L. Ca. 348 ; S. C., 8 E. & B. 123 ; 6 Id. 593, and cases there cited.

cases in which it would be sustained as matter of grant (a); whilst the latter must be founded upon prescription, or grant express or implied" (b).

As exhibiting the nature of and remedy for a nuisance at common law, the following remarks (c) are offered:—

A private 'nuisance' has been defined to be "anything done to the hurt or annoyance of the lands, tenements, or hereditaments of another" (d). "If," says Blackstone (e), "one erects a smelting house for lead so near the land of another that the vapour and smoke kills his corn and grass and damages his cattle therein, this is held to be a nuisance; and by consequence it follows, that if one does any other act, in itself lawful, which yet, being done in that place, necessarily tends to the damage of another's property, it is a nuisance; for it is incumbent on him to find some other place to do that act where it will be less offensive." Under such circumstances, the question for the jury will be, whether the act complained of caused annoyance in a substantial degree to the plaintiff (f). But if my neighbour ought to scour a ditch or cleanse and keep in repair a drain and neglects to do so, whereby my land is overflowed and my goods are damaged, this is an actionable nuisance (g).

Nuisance to realty, &c.

Many other analogous torts to property, falling within the class now before us, and resulting from non-observance of the maxim, Sic utere tuo ut alienum non laedas (h), will, with-

(a) Caledonian R. Co. v. Sprot, 2 Macq. H. L. Ca. 449; Elliot v. North Eastern R. Co., 10 H. L. Ca. 333. See Stourbridge Can. Co. v. Earl of Dudley, 30 L. J., Q. B., 108.

3 Bla. Com., Chap. 13.

(d) 3 Bla. Com., p. 216.

(e) 3 Com., p. 217.

(f) Cavey v. Ledbetter, 13 C. B., N. S., 470, following Bamford v. Turnley, 3 B. & S. 62, 66.

(b) Backhouse v. Bonomi, 9 H. L. Ca. 503; S. C., E. B. & E. 622, 654-5, where the cases are collected; Bibby v. Carter, 4 H. & N. 153; Haines v. Roberts, 7 E. & B. 625; S. C., 6 Id. 643; Rogers v. Taylor, 2 H. & N. 828; S. C., 1 Id. 706.

See Wanstead Local Board of Health, app., Hill, resp., 13 C. B., N. S., 479; Stockport Waterworks Co. v. Potter, 7 H. & N. 160.

(g) 3 Bla. Com., p. 218; Alston v. Grant, 3 E. & B. 128.

(c) Which are in part extracted from

(h) Leg. Max., 4th ed., p. 357,

Obstructing ancient lights.

out doubt, readily suggest themselves to the reader. Thus, if a man builds a house so close to mine that his roof overhangs my premises, and throws the water off his roof upon them, this is a nuisance for which an action on the case will lie (i), even without proof that water has thus fallen or been discharged upon my land (j). Likewise, to erect a house or other building so near to mine that it obstructs my ancient lights and windows, is a nuisance of a similar nature (k). In this latter case, indeed, it was formerly held, that a party could not maintain an action for such an obstruction unless he had gained a right in the lights by prescription; and in conformity with this rule it was usual to state in the declaration that the house was an ancient house, wherein were ancient windows through which the light had entered, and had been used to enter from time immemorial (l). But afterwards it was held, that, upon evidence of an adverse enjoyment of lights for twenty years (or upwards) unexplained, a jury might be directed to presume a right by grant or otherwise, even though no lights had existed there before the commencement of the twenty years. Though, if the period of enjoyment fell short of twenty years, then formerly other circumstances than the mere length of time must have been brought in aid in order to raise a presumption of the plaintiff's right (m): and now, by the 6th section of the Prescription Act (2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 71), it is enacted, that, in the several cases mentioned therein and provided for thereby, "no presumption shall be allowed or made in favour or support of any where many cases are cited illustrating the nature of a nuisance to real property. See also Chauntler v. Robinson, 4 Exch. 163; Richards v. Rose, 9 Exch. 218; and cases cited ante, p. 83, n. (m); Lawrence v. Great Northern R. Co., 16 Q. B. 643; Clothier v. Webster, 12 C. B., N. S., 790, 796.

(i) Penruddock's case, 5 Rep. 100.

(j) Fay v. Prentice, 1 C. B. 828; Baten's case, 9 Rep. 53 b. See Pickering v. Rudd, 1 Stark. N. P. C. 56; per Lord Campbell, C. J., 8 E. & B. 897.

(k) 3 Bla. Com., p. 216.

(l) Selw. N. P., 12th ed., vol. 2, p. 1134.

(m) Ibid.

claim, upon proof of the exercise or enjoyment of the right or matter claimed, for any less period of time or number of years" than is mentioned in the statute as applicable to the particular case.

It becomes, then, necessary in this place to state shortly the leading provisions of the Act above alluded to, which has a most important bearing upon the law concerning nuisances, the obstruction of ancient lights, the diversion of running water, and so forth.

First, then, in reference to the subject already touched upon;—by s. 3 of the Prescription Act it is enacted, that "when the access and use of light to and for any dwelling-house, workshop, or other building shall have been actually enjoyed therewith for the full period of twenty years without interruption (n), the right thereto shall be deemed absolute and indefeasible, any local usage or custom to the contrary notwithstanding, unless it shall appear that the same was enjoyed by some consent or agreement expressly made or given for that purpose by deed or writing." What, under this section, is to be understood by user "without interruption" will presently appear; but I may at once observe, that the effect of the clause before us is to convert into a right such an enjoyment only of the access of light over contiguous land as has been had for the whole period of twenty years in the character of an easement, distinct from the enjoyment of the land itself (o);—the species of 'negative' easement (as it has been termed), to which a right may be acquired under the section just cited, being put on the same footing in this respect as those 'positive' easements provided for (as will immediately be seen) by other sections of the Act, all of which, after long enjoyment as easements, are invested with the quality of rights (p). "The (n) See Plasterers' Co. v. Parish Clerks' Co., 6 Exch. 631; post, pp. 760-1.

(o) Judgm., Harbidge v. Warwick, 3 Exch. 556-7.

(p) Ibid.

section," says Coleridge, J. (q), "seems to me to simplify and almost new found the mode of acquiring the right to access of light. It founds it on actual enjoyment for the full period of twenty years without interruption, unless that enjoyment is shown to have been by consent or agreement expressly made by deed or writing—thus putting the right on a simple foundation and with the simplest exception."

If the party entitled to the use of ancient windows alters and enlarges them, it seems that he does not thereby entirely lose the right which he had before enjoyed of having light and air through such portions of the actually existing windows as formed portions of the ancient windows before the alteration;—that he, however, acquires nothing by the act of alteration in addition to his former right, and if by the alterations made he has exceeded the limits of that right, and has put himself into such a position that the excess cannot be obstructed by the owner of the adjoining land in the exercise of his lawful rights on his own land, without at the same time obstructing the former right of the owner of the dominant tenement, this latter party must be deemed responsible for the existence of such a state of things, and must be considered to have lost the former right which he had; at all events until he shall, by restoring his windows to their original state, throw upon the owner of the servient tenement the necessity of so arranging his buildings as not to interfere with the right originally possessed (r).

Prescriptive right to easement—how acquired.

The 2nd section of the Prescription Act is very material with reference to many rights and easements differing in kind from that just adverted to: it enacts, that "no claim which may be lawfully made at the common law by custom, (g) Truscott v. Merchant Taylors' Co., 11 Exch. 863; adopted Judgm., Frewen v. Philipps, 11 C. B., N. S., 454.

(r) Renshaw v. Bean, 18 Q. B. 112, 129, 130, recognised by the majority of the Court of Excheq., Ch. in Jones v. Tapling, 12 C. B., N. S., 826; S. C., 11 Id. 283. See Binckes v. Pash, 11 C. B., N. S., 324; Hutchinson v. Copestake, 9 C. B., N. S., 863; S. C., 8 Id. 102.

prescription, or grant, to any way or other easement, or to any watercourse, or the use of any water to be enjoyed or derived upon, over, or from any land or water" of any person, when such way or other matter "shall have been actually enjoyed by any person claiming a right thereto without interruption for the full period of twenty years, shall be defeated or destroyed by showing only that such way or other matter was first enjoyed at any time prior to such period of twenty years; but nevertheless such claim may be defeated in any other way by which the same is now liable to be defeated; and where such way or other matter as herein last before mentioned shall have been so enjoyed as aforesaid for the full period of forty years, the right thereto shall be deemed absolute and indefeasible, unless it shall appear that the same was enjoyed by some consent or agreement expressly given or made for that purpose by deed or writing" (s).

Under the foregoing section, it has been held that a right claimed by user can only be co-extensive with the user (t); that twenty years user will not avail to establish a right to the thing used, unless the owner of the servient tenement is capable of giving a right such as claimed by express grant (u); that a 'contentious' enjoyment during the full statutory period of twenty years will not suffice to confer a right (x); that the user must be exercised as of right against all persons (y). In regard to the point last specified, and in ex-

(s) See also sect. 8 of the Prescription Act; Palk v. Skinner, 18 Q. B. 568.

(t) Davies v. Williams, 16 Q. B. 546. See Flight v. Thomas, 10 Ad. & E. 590.

An immemorial right of way is not necessarily lost by mere non-user for twenty years: Ward v. Ward, 7 Exch. 838; cited per Willes, J., 12 C. B., N. S., 470; R. v. Chorley, 12 Q. B.

515. As to abandoning the right to the use of light, see Stokoe v. Singers, 8 E. & B. 31.

(u) Rochdale Can. Co. v. Raddiffe, 18 Q. B. 287; Webb v. Bird, 10 C. B., N. S., 268.

(x) Eaton v. Swansea Waterworks Co., 17 Q. B. 267.

(y) Winship v. Hudspeth, 10 Exch. 5; Warburton v. Parke, 2 H. & N. 64 (decided under sect. 1 of the Pre-planation of the restrictive statutory words (printed in italics), which provide that the claim put forward "may be defeated in any other way by which the same is now liable to be defeated," the following remarks fell on a recent occasion (2) from Mr. Baron Martin: "Before the statute," observes that learned judge, "a person who claimed a way by prescription alleged a user as of right from the time of legal memory, and consequently, if it could be established that there was unity of possession at any time, that defeated the presumed right. Therefore, whenever there was reason to apprehend that the prescriptive right of way might have been extinguished by unity of possession, it was usual to claim it as a way by non-existing grant; and some judges left it to the jury to find a grant, while others treated the question as one of law, and directed the jury to presume a grant;" then came the stat. 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 71, (s. 2), containing the words in question; "therefore, by analogy to the prior law, it is evident that the claim may be defeated by showing a unity of possession within twenty years. The subsequent part of the section shows beyond all doubt what was the meaning of the legislature; for it says, that, where the way shall have been so enjoyed for the full period of forty years, 'the right thereto shall be deemed absolute and indefeasible,' thus drawing a distinction between an enjoyment for twenty years and forty years" (a).

Further, it is important to observe, that, by s. 4 of the Prescription Act, "each of the respective periods of years" hereinbefore mentioned "shall be deemed and taken to be the period next before some suit or action wherein the claim or matter to which such period may relate shall have been scription Act); Tickle v. Brown, 4 Ad. & E. 369. See sect. 5 of the Prescription Act; Holford v. Hankinson, 5 Q. B. 584.

(2) Winship v. Hudspeth, supra.

(a) See also Onley v. Gardiner, 4 M. & W. 496; Thomas v. Thomas, 2 Cr. M. & R. 34; per Bayley, B., Canham v. Fisk, 2 Tyr. 155; White v. Bass, 7 H. & N. 722.

or shall be brought into question" (b); and "no act or other matter shall be deemed to be an interruption within the meaning of this statute unless the same shall have been or shall be submitted to or acquiesced in for one year after the party interrupted shall have had or shall have notice thereof, and of the person making or authorising the same to be made." The effect of this section, coupled with those clauses of the Act already adverted to, is—that the period of the duration of enjoyment of that to which a right is asserted under the statute shall be for the whole period of twenty, thirty, or forty years, respectively specified therein, up to the commencement of the suit. And although the acts of user need not necessarily continue down to the very moment of action brought, yet some act of that kind must at all events be shown to have been exercised within a year before the commencement of the suit (c).

I will, in the next place, say somewhat as to that particular species of nuisance which consists in the wrongful diversion or abstraction of water from a stream or watercourse; and as introductory to this part of the subject a few elementary remarks are needed.

The word 'land' says Sir E. Coke (d), in legal contemplation "comprehendeth any ground, soil, or earth whatsoever, as meadows, pastures, woods, moors, waters, marshes, furzes, and heath;" upon which passage Blackstone observes (e) as follows:—"It is observable that water is here mentioned as a species of land, which may seem a kind of solecism, but such is the language of the law; and therefore I cannot bring an action to recover possession of a pool or other piece

Land—how distinguished from water in legal contemplation.

(b) See Bennison v. Cartwright, 33 L. J., Q. B., 137; Cooper v. Hubbuck, 12 C. B., N. S., 456.

(c) Lowe v. Carpenter, 6 Exch. 825, and Flight v. Thomas, 11 Ad. & E. 688; S. C., 8 Cl. & F. 231 (as to which, see the remarks per Cur. Eaton v. Swansea Waterworks Co., 17 Q. B.

272), are important decisions with reference to what is above shortly stated.

(d) Co. Litt. 4 a., cited, per Martin, B., Allaway v. Wagstaff, 4 H. & N. 313.

(e) 2 Com., p. 18.

of water by the name of 'water' only, either by calculating its capacity, as for so many cubical yards, or by superficial measure, for twenty acres of water, or by general description, as for a pond, a watercourse, or a rivulet; but I must bring my action for the land that lies at the bottom, and must call it twenty acres of land covered with water. For water is a moveable wandering thing, and must of necessity continue common by the law of nature. So that I can only have a temporary, transient, usufructuary property therein: wherefore, if a body of water runs out of my pond into another man's, I have no right to reclaim it. But the land which that water covers is permanent, fixed, and immoveable, and therefore in this I may have a certain substantial property of which the law will take notice."

Such being the distinction between 'land' and 'water' in legal contemplation, let us, somewhat more minutely, inquire respecting the nature of the right to the use and enjoyment of running water possessed by a riparian proprietor.

Right to flowing water.

Flowing water, it has been observed, as well as light and air, is in one sense publici juris. It is a boon from providence to all, differing from the other elements, however, in its mode of enjoyment. Light and air are diffused in all directions, flowing water in some. When property was established, each one had the right to enjoy the light and air diffused over and the water flowing through the portion of soil belonging to him; the property in the water itself was not in the proprietor of the land through which it passed, but only the use of it, as it passed along, for the enjoyment of his property, and as incidental to it (f); aqua currit et debet currere is the language of the law; and the rule is, that, "primâ facie, the proprietor of each bank of a stream is the proprietor of half the land covered by the stream, but there is no property in the water. Every proprietor has an equal right to use the water which flows in the stream, and consequently no proprietor can have the right to use the water to the prejudice of any other proprietor (g). Without the consent of the other proprietors who may be affected by his operations, no proprietor can either diminish the quantity of water which would otherwise descend to the proprietors below, nor throw the water back upon the proprietors above" (h). Subject to such restrictions, however, each riparian owner is entitled to the usufruct of the stream for all reasonable purposes (i)—ex. gr. to drink, to water his cattle, or to turn his mill—and each such owner has a remedy for the infringement of his right.

(f) Judgm., 3 Exch. 775; Judgm., 6 Exch. 869.

"By the general law applicable to running streams," observes Lord Kingsdown (h), "every riparian proprietor has a right to what may be called the ordinary use of the water flowing past his land; for instance, to the reasonable use of the water for his domestic purposes, and for his cattle, and this without regard to the effect which such use may have in case of a deficiency upon proprietors lower down the stream. But, further, he has a right to the use of it for any purpose, or what may be deemed the extraordinary use of it, provided that he does not thereby interfere with the rights of other proprietors either above or below him. Subject to this condition he may dam up the stream for the purpose of a mill, or divert the water for the purpose of irrigation. But he has no right to interrupt the regular flow of the stream, if he

(g) Acc. the general principle of law deducible from Embrey v. Owen, 6 Exch. 353, viz., that "every proprietor of lands on the banks of a natural stream has a right to use the water, provided he so uses it as not to work any material injury to the rights of other proprietors above or below on the stream:" Judgm., Sampson v. Hoddinott, 1 C. B., N. S., 611-2; S. C., 3 Id. 596. See Lord v. Commis- sioners of Sydney, 12 Moo. P. C. C. 473.

(h) Per Sir J. Leach, V.-C., Wright v. Howard, 1 S. & S. 203, adopted per Cur. Mason v. Hill, 3 B. & Ad. 312; S. C., 5 Id. 1; and in Acton v. Blundell, 12 M. & W. 348-9.

(i) Sampson v. Hoddinott, 1 C. B., N. S., 590; S. C., 3 Id. 596.

(k) Judgm., Miner v. Gilmour, 12 Moo. P. C. C. 156.

thereby interferes with the lawful use of the water by other proprietors, and inflicts upon them a sensible injury."

If a stream be diverted by altering its course (l), or cutting down its banks, or if the water be abstracted from it for unauthorised purposes, the owner will have his right of action on the case against the wrong-doer (m). And an action will lie for fouling water to the use of which plaintiff is entitled (n).

Right to artificial watercourse.

The right of an individual to an artificial watercourse, as against the party creating it, will depend, however, upon the character of the watercourse and the circumstances under which it was created (o). For the diversion of such a watercourse no action will lie, where from the nature of the case, the enjoyment of it obviously depended upon temporary circumstances, and was not of a permanent character, and where the interruption was by the party who stood in the situation of the grantor. The flow of water for twenty years, accordingly, from the eaves of a house, would not give a right to the neighbour to insist that the house should not be pulled down or altered so as to diminish the quantity of water flowing from the roof. Nor would the flow of water during twenty years from a drain made (l) See Northam v. Hurley, 1 E. & B. 665, and Whitehead v. Parks, 2 H. & N. 870, 879, which show that where "upon a question of water rights there is an agreement by deed, such deed will regulate the rights of the parties:" Embrey v. Owen, 6 Exch. 353, 372.

The statutory form of declaration for diverting water from a mill, alleges "that the plaintiff was possessed of a mill, and by reason thereof was entitled to the flow of a stream for working the same; and the defendant, by cutting the bank of the said stream, diverted the water thereof away from the said mill:" C. L. Proc. Act, 1852, Sched. (B.), No. 30.

(m) Judgm., 7 Exch. 301 Dudden v. Clutton Union, 1 H. & N. 627; Judgm., Wood v. Waud, 3 Exch. 780, 781; Embrey v. Owen, 6 Exch. 353; Rockdale Can. Co. v. King, 14 Q. B. 122; Medway Navigation Co. v. Earl of Romney, 9 C. B., N. S., 575. See Murgatroyd v. Robinson, 7 E. & B. 391.

(n) See Laing v. Whaley, 3 H. & N. 675, 901; S. C., 2 Id. 476; Hodgkinson v. Ennor, 32 L. J., Q. B., 231.

(o) See Sutcliffe v. Booth, 32 L. J., Q. B., 136.

for the purposes of agricultural improvements give a right to the neighbour, so as to preclude the proprietor from altering the level of his drains for the greater improvement of his land. In such a case, the state of circumstances shows that one party never intended to give, nor the other to enjoy, the use of the stream as a matter of right (p).

The rules regulating the right to subterranean water are not identical with those applicable to the enjoyment of streams and waters above ground. When water is on the surface, the right of the owner of the adjoining land to the usufruct of that water is not a doubtful matter of fact, it is public and notorious; and such a right ought, as a matter of course, to be respected by every one. In like manner, if the course of a subterranean stream were well known—as where a stream sinks underground, pursues for a short space a subterraneous course, and then emerges again—it seems clear that the owner of the soil under which the stream flowed could maintain an action for the diversion of it, if it took place under such circumstances as would have enabled him to recover if the stream had been wholly above ground (q). Where, however, the existence and state of underground water are unknown, and perchance unascertainable, as where a well is sunk, and afterwards there is a difficulty in knowing certainly how much, if any, of the water when the ground was in its natural state belonged to the owner in right of his property in the soil, and how much belonged to that of his neighbour who in digging a mine or another well, which drains the water from that previously sunk (r), may subterranean water.

Right to

(p) Wood v. Waud, 3 Exch. 776-778; Greatrex v. Hayward, 8 Exch. 291; Arkwright v. Gell, 5 M. & W. 203, recognised but distinguished in Beeston v. Weate, 5 E. & B. 986, 995, where there was evidence that an casement had been acquired. See Magor v. Chadwick, 11 Ad. & E. 571.

(q) Vide per Pollock, C. B., Dudden v. Clutton Union, 1 H. & N. 630.

(r) Acton v. Blundell, 12 M. & W. 324, cited ante, pp. 78, 81.

possibly be only taking back his own, a rule of law different from that above enunciated may properly be applied (s).

In Chasemore v. Richards (t), which must henceforth be deemed a leading case regarding the right to subterranean water, the facts (u) were as under :—The plaintiff was the owner of an ancient mill on the river W., and for more than sixty years before the commencement of the action he and all the preceding occupiers of the mill had used and enjoyed, as of right, the flow of the river for the purpose of working their mill. The river W. was and always had been supplied above the plaintiff's mill in part by the water produced by the rainfall on a district of many thousand acres in extent, comprising the town of C. and its vicinity. The water of the rainfall had been used to sink into the ground to various depths, and then to flow and percolate through the strata to the river W., part rising to the surface and part finding its way underground in courses which constantly varied. The defendant represented the members of the Local Board of Health of C., who, for the purpose of supplying the town of C. with water and for other sanitary purposes, sank a well in their own land in the town of C. and about a quarter of a mile from the river W., and pumped up large quantities of water from their well for the supply of the town of C., and “by means of the well and the pumping, the Local Board of Health did divert, abstract, and intercept underground water, but underground water only, that otherwise would have

(s) See this subject amply discussed in the Judgm., 12 M. & W. 349-352; Judgm., 7 Exch. 300.

(t) 7 H. L. Ca. 349; S. C., 2 H. & N. 163; 11 Exch. 602 (where Dickinson v. Grand Junction Can. Co., 7 Exch. 282, is much commented on); Broadbent v. Ramsbotham, 11 Exch. 602; Rawstron v. Taylor, Id. 369. In Chasemore v. Richards, supra, Acton v. Blundell, 12 M. & W. 324, is recognised, and the authorities generally are reviewed. In Reg. v. Metropolitan Board of Works, 3 B. & S. 710, the right to intercept the water from underground springs was much considered.

See also Hodgkinson v. Ennor, 32 L. J., Q. B., 231.

(u) Which have been briefly stated, ante, p. 79.

flowed and found its way into the river W., and so to the plaintiff's mill ; and the quantity so diverted, abstracted, and intercepted was sufficient to be of sensible value towards the working of the plaintiff's mill." The question was—whether the plaintiff could maintain an action against the defendant for such diversion, abstraction, and interception of the underground water ?

The judges, in giving their opinion upon this question, observed as follows:—"In such a case as the present, is any right derived from the use of the water of the river W. for upwards of twenty years for working the plaintiff's mill? Any such right against another founded upon length of enjoyment is supposed to have originated in some grant which is presumed from the owner of what is sometimes called the servient tenement. But what grant can be presumed in the case of percolating waters, depending upon the quantity of rain falling or the natural moisture of the soil, and in the absence of any visible means of knowing to what extent, if at all, the enjoyment of the plaintiff's mill would be affected by any water percolating in and out of the defendant's or any other land? The presumption of a grant only arises where the person against whom it is to be raised might have prevented the exercise of the subject of the presumed grant ; but how could he prevent or stop the percolation of water ? The Court of Exchequer, indeed, in the case of Dickinson v. The Grand Junction Canal Company (x) expressly repudiates the notion that such a right as that in question can be founded on a presumed grant, but declares that with respect to running water it is jure naturæ. If so, à fortiori, the right, if it exists at all, in the case of subterranean percolating water, is jure naturæ, and not by presumed grant, and the circumstance of the mill being ancient would in that case make no difference."

(x) 7 Exch. 282.

“The question then is, whether the plaintiff has such a right as he claims jure naturæ to prevent the defendant sinking a well in his own ground at a distance from the mill, and so absorbing the water percolating in and into his own ground beneath the surface, if such absorption has the effect of diminishing the quantity of water which would otherwise find its way into the river W., and by such diminution affects the working of the plaintiff’s mill. It is impossible to reconcile such a right with the natural and ordinary right of landowners, or to fix any reasonable limits to the exercise of such a right. * * * Such a right as that claimed by the plaintiff is so indefinite and unlimited that, unsupported as it is by any weight of authority, we do not think that it can be well founded, or that the present action is maintainable.” The opinion thus expressed by the learned judges was acquiesced in by the House of Lords, who affirmed the judgment in the defendant’s favour of the Court below. It is, however, observable that one very learned lord inclined to impose, on the proposition deducible from the reasoning in the above case and some of the authorities there cited, a not unimportant qualification. “Every man,” remarks Lord Wensleydale (y), “has a right to the natural advantages of his soil—the plaintiff to the benefit of the flow of water in the river and its natural supplies—the defendant to the enjoyment of his land and to the underground waters on it, and he may, in order to obtain that water, sink a well. But according to the rule of reason and law, sic utere tuo ut alienum non ladas, it seems right to hold that he ought to exercise his right in a reasonable manner, with as little injury to his neighbour’s rights as may be.”

From what has been said in the foregoing pages, touching the more important—when practically regarded—of ordinary torts (z) to realty, will be inferred the solicitude of our law so to regulate the rights of property, that, whilst its free use and enjoyment by each individual are not unduly interfered with, the privileges legally vested in every other member of the community may be respected.

SECT. II.—Torts to Personal Property.

Chattels personal are, strictly speaking, "things moveable: which may be annexed to or attendant on the person of the owner, and carried about with him" from one place to another (a). Such are animals of various kinds, household furniture, money, jewels, corn, articles of clothing, and everything which can properly be transferred from place to place (b).

Chattels personal—
what.

Now, in discussing, so far as space will permit, the ordinary torts to personalty, it will be convenient to treat, 1st, Of torts to property in the possession of the owner; 2ndly, Of torts to property out of the owner's possession, and especially (as included in this subdivision of the subject) of torts to chattel property under bailment to another, when committed,—1. By the bailee himself. 2. By a stranger.

Torts to personalty—how classified.

First, then, a tort to personalty in the possession of the owner may be constituted by the wrongful deprivation of that possession (c); or by an abuse of, or a damage done to,

Torts to personalty in possession.

(z) Further information as to which, together with references to additional cases, may be met with in Selw. N. P., 12th ed., vol. 2, under the titles "Nuisance," "Trespass."

574.

(a) 2 Bla. Com., p. 387; 3 Id., p. 144. Whether or not things fall within the class of "fixtures annexed to the freehold" or "chattels," is a question often requiring determination in actions of Trover or Detinue. See, for instance, Walmsley v. Milne, 7 C. B., N. S., 115; Roffey v. Henderson, 17 Q. B.

(b) 2 Bla. Com., p. 387; 3 Id., p. 144; 2 Kent Com., 10th ed., p. 436, where the distinction between chattels real and chattels personal is fully considered.

(c) The law has provided four forms of action applicable to such a state of things, viz., trespass, replevin, detinue, and trover, the nature of each of which is considered per Martin, B., Burroughes v. Bayne, 5 H. & N. 301.

the chattel whilst in his possession (d). A wrongful deprivation of possession may be by a taking illegal in its inception; or by an illegal detention of that whereof the original possession was legally acquired (d),—torts, however, of this latter kind will evidently fall under the second of the two leading classes of wrongs to personalty above indicated.

It may readily be conceded, that, where a rightful possession of goods and chattels has once been gained, either by a just occupancy or by a legal transfer, whoever, whether by force or fraud, dispossesses the holder of them is guilty of a tort, remediable according to circumstances in trespass, trover, or case, the respective characteristics whereof have been already briefly pointed out (e)—"for" as remarked by Blackstone (f), "there must be an end of all social commerce between man and man, unless private possessions be secured from unjust invasions; and if an acquisition of goods by either force or fraud were allowed to be a sufficient title, all property would soon be confined to the most strong or the most cunning; and the weak and simple-minded part of mankind (which is by far the most numerous division) could never be secure of their possessions."

But—further—it is also a true proposition, that one who is in possession of a chattel wrongfully, as regards some particular individual, provided he be rightfully possessed of it quoad the defendant, may sue this latter party for a tort done to the specific chattel. The decision in Armory v. Delamirie (g), clearly established that "bare possession constitutes a sufficient title to enable the party enjoying it to

(d) 3 Bla. Com., p. 145.

(e) Ante, pp. 124-126.

(f) 3 Com., p. 145.

(g) 1 Smith L. C., 5th ed., p. 302.

(See, per Pollock, C. B., commenting upon the above case, White v. Mullett, 6 Exch. 714.) Bridges v. Hawkesworth, 21 L. J., Q. B., 75 (which forcibly illustrates the principle above stated in the text); Buckley v. Gross, 3 B. & S. 566.

obtain legal remedy against a mere wrong-doer" (h). It was there held, that one who had found a jewel might maintain trover for it against a jeweller, whose opinion had been asked respecting it, and who, having got possession of it, tortiously retained it, and applied it to his own use. The Court in this case further resolved, that the finder of the jewel, though he did not by such finding acquire an absolute property or ownership in it, yet had such a property therein as would entitle him to keep it against all but the rightful owner. When, therefore, it is said that the action of trover "only lies where the plaintiff has the right to possession, as well as a legal property in the subject of the suit" (i), we must remember that there are two kinds of property—absolute and special—absolute property is where one having the possession of chattels, has also the exclusive right to enjoy them—which right can only be defeated by some act of his own; special property is where he who has the possession holds them subject to the claims of other persons (k). But besides the right of property in the goods sued for, there must be a right to their possession in order to support trover. Thus in Gordon v. Harper (l), chattels which had been let as furniture with a house, having been wrongfully taken in execution by the sheriff, it was held, that, although the tenant might doubtless have sued the sheriff in trover (h) Acc., Northam v. Bowden, 11 Exch. 70.

In Jeffries v. Great Western R. Co., 5 E. & B. 805, Lord Campbell, C. J., observes—"I am of opinion that the law is that a person possessed of goods as his property has a good title as against every stranger, and that one who takes them from him, having no title in himself, is a wrong-doer, and cannot defend himself by showing that there was title in some third person; for against a wrong-doer possession is a title."

(i) Per Tindal, C. J., Owen v. Knight, 4 Bing. N. C. 57; Felthouse v. Bindley, 11 C. B., N. S., 869; Walker v. Clyde, 10 C. B., N. S., 381. See Smith v. Mundy, 29 L. J., Q. B., 172, which is a curious case.

(k) Per Lawrence, J., Webb v. Fox, 7 T. R. 398.

(l) 7 T. R. 9; and see the cases cited post, in connection with the law of bailment.

for the value of the things taken, yet the landlord could not do so, inasmuch as he had parted with the right of possession during the continuance of the term (m). Where, however, the two rights (already specified) of property and of possession concur, trover is the remedy usually resorted to for the particular injury of withholding goods from the custody of their rightful owner (n), and (as it is technically termed) 'converting' them to the use of the wrong-doer (o). The meaning of this term 'convert' or 'conversion,' as just used, will presently be considered. But one apt example may previously be adduced in support of the proposition just stated, viz., that trover lies where the rights of property and of possession are concurrently vested in the plaintiff, and as showing the nature of the questions, often nice and difficult, which arise in reference to its practical application (p).

In Scattergood v. Sylvester (q), the facts were these, the plaintiff's cow had been stolen, and subsequently sold in market overt to the defendant, who purchased it bond fide; the plaintiff, having discovered the thief, prosecuted and convicted him, and then brought trover against the defendant for the cow which he had refused to deliver up. Now, it is evident, that, if in this case the plaintiff had been compelled to rely solely on the common law in support of his title to the cow, he would have been defeated in his action, because at common law the property had been permanently changed by the sale in market overt. The repealed statute 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29, contains, however, a provision (s. 57) to this effect, that if any person guilty of stealing any property should be indicted for such offence by or on behalf of the (m) The landlord, however, might sue for damage to his reversionary interest: Tancred v. Allgood, 4 H. & N. 438.

(n) The class of cases in which detinue may be available as a remedy for the detention of goods is sufficiently pointed out, ante, pp. 121, 122.

(o) See Judgm., Rodgers v. Parker, 18 C. B. 124.

(p) See Manders v. Williams, 4 Exch. 339.

(q) 15 Q. B. 506, with which compare Lee v. Bayes, 18 C. B. 599.

owner, and convicted thereof—in such case the property should be restored to the owner or his representative; and although by the same section of the Act the Court might in a summary way order its restitution (r), yet it was held that this mode of procedure was but cumulative, leaving the remedy by action available, and that the effect of the statutory provision just noticed was to restore the right even where the property was not actually restored. The thing stolen, said Coleridge, J. (s), “is to be restored on conviction; it is to be given up to the owner as having the right—that is—the right of property and the right of possession.”

If we glance at the form of declaration in trover given in the first C. L. Proc. Act (t), we shall see that the gist of the charge is, that the defendant “converted to his own use, or wrongfully deprived the plaintiff of the use and possession of the plaintiff’s goods;” it may be desirable, therefore, to inquire, what is the meaning of the word ‘converted,’ here used? It has on various occasions by judges and learned writers been explained (u). A “conversion” is, where one finding or having the goods of another in his possession applies them to his own use without the consent of the owner (x), and such application to the finder’s use is, in many cases, evidenced by a demand of the goods and a refusal to give them up (y). “A person,” says Lord Ellenborough (z), “is guilty of a conversion who intermeddles with (r) See Reg. v. Pierce, Bell C. C. 235.

(s) 15 Q. B. 512; Valpy v. Gibson, 4 C. B. 837; Bloxam v. Sanders, 4 B. & C. 941.

(t) Sched. (B), No. 28. See Buckland v. Johnson, 15 C. B. 145.

(u) The use of the word “conversion” is animadverted on per Bramwell, B., Evans v. Wright, 2 H. & N. 532, and the meaning of the term explained in Burroughes v. Bayne, 5 H. & N. 310-311, by the same learned Judge.

(x) Toml. L. Dict., ad verb. “Conversion.”

(y) 10 Rep. 56 b, 57 a.

(z) Stephens v. Elwall, 4 M. & S. 261; as to which case see, per Pollock, C. B., Symonds v. Atkinson, 1 H. & N. 149.

my property and disposes of it." "When a man takes possession of the chattel of another without justifiable cause, and sells it without justifiable cause, there can be no doubt that he is guilty of an act of conversion" (a). Trover, says Maule, J. (b), "only lies where some dominion is asserted by the defendant over the chattel which is the subject of the action. One who takes possession of goods unlawfully, which are in consequence lost to the owner, is to a certain extent guilty of a conversion. But where . . . there is no unlawful taking of possession or assertion of dominion over the goods, although the goods may be destroyed, there is no conversion," unless the defendant is a participator in the act which causes their destruction (b). "In order to constitute a conversion," observes Parke, B. (c), "there must be an intention of the defendant to take to himself the property in the goods, or to deprive the plaintiff of it. If the entire article is destroyed, as, for instance, by burning it, that would be a taking of the property from the plaintiff and depriving him of it, although the defendant might not be considered as appropriating it to his own use." A conversion, then, may be evidenced by a wrongful taking of the goods of him who has a right to the immediate possession of them—or by the fact that the defendant has destroyed the goods in question, or has participated in their destruction—it may be evidenced by the fact that the defendant has wrongfully and unlawfully asserted title to or assumed dominion over the chattel which is the subject of the suit (d), or has ratified such an assumption of dominion over it by one professing to

(a) Judgm., Hilbery v. Hatton, 33 L. J., Ex., 192.

(b) Held v. Carey, 11 C. B. 993.

(c) Simmons v. Lillystone, 8 Exch. 442, and see the cases cited supra; Jones v. Davies, 6 Exch. 663.

(d) See Chinery v. Viall, 5 H. & N. 288; Johnson v. Stear, 15 C. B., N. S., 330; Towne v. Lewis, 7 C. B. 608;

Powell v. Hoyland, 6 Exch. 67; Wiles v. Woodward, 5 Exch. 557; Glover v. London and N. W. R. Co., 5 Exch. 66; Howard v. Shepherd, 9 C. B. 297; Great Western R. Co. v. Crouch, 3 H. & N. 183; S. Co., 2 Id. 491; Aldridge v. Johnson, 7 E. & B. 885; Tear v. Freebody, 4 C. B., N. S., 228.

act as his agent (e). "Conversion" means "detaining goods so as to deprive the person entitled to the possession of them of his dominion over them" (f); and in cases like the above no formal demand of the goods and refusal to deliver them need in strictness be shown in order to support an action for their recovery. A demand and refusal (g) are, however, necessary "in all cases where the defendant became in the first instance lawfully possessed of the goods, and the plaintiff is not prepared to prove some distinct actual conversion" (h) of them. And yet authorities may be adduced to show that a party is not necessarily guilty of a conversion, because he does not at once restore the chattel which is the subject of dispute, as, for instance, where it is not at the moment of demand made in his possession, or under his immediate control (i). A re-delivery of the chattel, however, is in trover no answer to the action, nor does it compensate for the previous conversion, ex. gr., if one man take away another's horse, though he afterwards return it, the owner of the horse has a right of action as against him who wrongfully took it away, and the re-delivery goes only in mitigation of damages (k); but the judgment in trover changes the property in the chattel converted (l).

From what has been thus far said, it may be inferred that the action of trover is peculiarly adapted for trying the title to goods. It is, indeed, commonly brought with this express object by or against the assignees of bankrupts—by or against (e) Hilbery v. Hatton, 33 L. J., Ex., 190.

(f) Per Martin, B., Burroughes v. Bayne, 5 H. & N. 302; and in Pillot v. Wilkinson, 2 H. & C. 82.

(g) See Weeks v. Goode, 6 C. B., N. S., 367.

(h) 1 Chitt. Pl., 7th ed., p. 176; 2 Wms. Saund. 47 e.; Judgm., Stevenson v. Newnham, 13 C. B. 303. See Valpy v. Sanders, 5 C. B. 886; At- wood v. Ernest, 13 C. B. 881; Giles v. Taff Vale R. Co., 2 E. & B. 822; Lee v. Bayes, 18 C. B. 599.

(i) Per Wilde, C. J., 7 C. B. 611; Canot v. Hughes, 2 Scott, 663; per Pollock, C. B., 5 H. & N. 300.

(k) Per Pollock, C. B., Griffiths v. Owen, 13 M. & W. 63.

(l) Buckland v. Johnson, 15 C. B. 145, 157.

personal representatives,—or by a judgment creditor against a sheriff—who, perchance, has wrongfully sold goods under an execution posterior in point of time to that issued by the plaintiff. The remedy in question is appropriate, also, in many other cases where conflicting claims to chattel property call for adjustment.

Quite irrespective of mere technicalities, there is a broad distinction to notice between the action just considered and that which lies for a wrongful and forcible taking of goods and chattels, or for a direct injury done to them. In trover, the conversion, not the taking, is the gist of the action. Trespass de bonis asportatis, however, lies for the wrongful taking of chattels (m). In Put v. Rawsterne (n), it is said, that “trover and trespass are actions sometimes of a different nature,” for trover will sometimes lie where trespass will not lie—“as if a man hath my goods by my delivery to keep for me, and I afterwards demand them and he refuses to deliver them, I may have an action of trover but not trespass,” “because here was no tortious taking; and sometimes the case may be such that either the one or the other will lie; as where there is a tortious taking away of goods and detaining them, the party may have either trover or trespass.” In West v. Nibbs (o) (already cited (p)), trover was held to lie, although trespass would not do so, by virtue of the rule that a mere nonfeasance cannot constitute a trespass. On the other hand, cases might readily be put, in which either trespass or trover would be a proper remedy (q).

As against a mere wrong-doer, indeed, who sells goods which he has forcibly taken, and receives the proceeds, the party from whose possession they were taken may waive the tort altogether, and maintain an action for money had and received, without proving any title to the goods beyond mere

(m) See Smalley v. Kerfoot, Stra.
1094.

(n) Sir T. Raym. 472; Judgm., Newham v. Stevens, 10 C. B. 722.

(o) 4 C. B. 172.

(p) Ante, p. 125, n. (b).

(q) See cases, infra.

possession (r). "If," it has been said (s), "a man's goods are taken by an act of trespass, and are subsequently sold by the trespasser and turned into money, he may maintain trespass for the forcible injury: or, waiving the force, he may maintain trover for the wrong; or, waiving the tort altogether, he may sue for money had and received" (t).

To entitle a man, however, to bring trespass de bonis asportatis, he must, at the time when the act was done which constitutes the trespass, either have the actual possession in him of the thing which is the object of the trespass, or else he must have a constructive possession in respect of the right being actually vested in him (u); the nature of what is called a "constructive" possession may be illustrated by reference to the case of an executor whose right to the goods of the testator accrues immediately on his death, and such right draws after it a constructive possession—so that an executor may maintain trespass for goods of the testator taken between the death and grant of probate (x). The same rule, also, applies in the case of an administrator who may sue in trespass for goods taken between the death and the grant of letters of administration,—by virtue of which relation, as appears by a recent decision (y), the administrator is enabled to recover against such persons as have interfered with the estate, and thereby to prevent it from being prejudiced and despoiled.

In regard to the latter of the two kinds of injuries (speci-

(r) Oughton v. Seppings, 1 B. & Ad. 241; Neate v. Harding, 6 Exch. 349; Powell v. Rees, 7 Ad. & E. 426. See Buckland v. Johnson, 15 C. B. 145, 166, 167.

(s) Judgm., Rodgers v. Maw, 15 M. & W. 448; Judgm., Clark v. Gilbert, 2 Bing. N. C. 357.

(t) See Lythgoe v. Vernon, 5 H. & N. 180.

(u) Per Ashhurst, J., Smith v.

Milles, 1 T. R. 480; Brierly v. Kendall, 17 Q. B. 937; Bradley v. Copley, 1 C. B. 685. See also, in support of what is above said, Watson v. Macquire, 5 C. B. 836, 844; White v. Morris, 11 C. B. 1015.

(x) Tharpe v. Stallwood, 5 M. & Gr. 761; Foster v. Bates, 12 M. & W. 233.

(y) Morgan v. Thomas, 8 Exch. 302.

fied at p. 789), which may be offered to things personal whilst in the possession of the owner, consisting in an abuse of or damage done to them, ex. gr., by hunting a man's deer, shooting his dogs, poisoning his cattle, or in anywise taking from the value of any of his chattels, or making them in a worse condition than before, it will suffice to say that the remedies given by our law to redress such injuries are, 1, by action of trespass, where the act is in itself immediately injurious to another's property; and, 2, "by special action on the case, where the act is in itself indifferent and the injury only consequential" (z). Under either form of action damages will be recoverable in proportion to the injury which the complainant proves by apt evidence that his property has sustained (a).

Torts to personalty out of the owner's possession.

Torts to personalty, whilst de facto out of the owner's possession, may occur under many dissimilar circumstances, as where the chattel wrongfully seized or injured is in the custody of the law (b), or under bailment to another. In reference to the latter state of facts, a few remarks may properly be offered.

Bailment—
its nature.

A bailment is "a delivery of a thing in trust for some special object or purpose, and upon a contract,—express or implied,—to conform to the object or purpose of the trust" (c). Two ingredients are indeed essential to and must be presented (under some form or other) in every satisfactory definition of a bailment—a delivery and a trust—this latter term being used to signify the confidence which one man reposes in another (d).

Now, it will be at once obvious, that the nature of a bail-

(z) See Tancred v. Allgood, 4 H. & N. 438.

(a) 3 Bla. Com., pp. 153-4.

(b) Turner v. Ford, 15 M. & W. 212; Wilbraham v. Snow, 2 Wms. Saund. 47 a.; cited Jeffries v. Great Western R. Co., 5 E. & B. 805.

(c) Story Bailm., 5th ed., p. 4. The definition given by the above learned writer seems preferable to that in 2 Bla. Com., p. 451.

(d) See Toml. L. Dist. ad verb. "Trust."

ment may admit of illustration in an infinite variety of ways—thus,—if cloth be delivered to a tailor to make a suit of clothes, he takes it upon an implied contract, viz., to make the clothes in a workmanlike manner, and to deliver them to his customer when made. He is therefore a bailee (e). And so is a pawnbroker who receives plate or jewels as a pledge or security for the repayment of money lent thereon—the contract or trust being in this case to keep the thing pledged with ordinary care and diligence, and to restore it upon redemption, i.e., upon repayment of the money advanced upon it by the pawnor. So, if a man takes in cattle to graze and depasture on his land—he is a bailee—(this particular kind of bailment being technically termed an agistment)—and the bailee takes the cattle in this case on an implied contract or undertaking that he will look after them with ordinary diligence,—which means,—with that degree of diligence which men in general exert in respect to their own concerns (f).

[In any of the foregoing instances of bailments it will be found that there is a delivery of the subject-matter of the bailment and a trust, i.e., a confidence reposed by the bailor and a corresponding undertaking by the bailee.

The classification of bailments usually adopted (g) is into three great heads (h), whereof the first comprises bailments in which the trust is exclusively for the benefit of the bailor—it includes, therefore, mandates and deposits, terms doubtless used more frequently by the civil than by the common law writers, but still not alien to our system of jurisprudence. A ‘deposit’ is commonly defined to be a naked bailment of goods to be kept for the bailor gratuitously, and returned when Bailments.

Class I.
Trust for exclusive benefit of bailor.

(e) 2 Bla. Com. p. 451.

(f) 2 Bla. Com., p. 452; Story Bailm., 5th ed., pp. 15-19.

(g) Story Bailm., 5th ed., s. 3.

(h) For the following brief sketch of the leading classes of bailments, I am mainly indebted to the late Dr. Story's admirable treatise upon that subject. This general acknowledgment will obviate the necessity of repeated reference to the work in question.

he shall require them, and a 'mandate' is likewise a gratuitous bailment of goods to be carried and conveyed from one place to another, or made with a view to some act being performed about them. Now, in the case of a mandate or deposit (between which there is no distinction to be noted material for the present inquiry), the bailment is made for the benefit of the bailor, and the law applicable to these cases is, that the bailee is bound merely to use a slight degree of diligence respecting the thing bailed, and is liable for gross negligence only—the reason being that the bailee is to receive nothing for his services.

The celebrated case of Coggs v. Bernard (i), falls within the general class of bailments now under consideration. There the plaintiff declared, that, whereas the defendant undertook and promised safely and securely to take up certain hogsheads of brandy out of a cellar where they were deposited and to lay them down in another place, he so negligently and carelessly put them down again, that, by his negligence, one of the casks was staved and a quantity of brandy spilt. After verdict, an objection was taken to this declaration on the ground that it contained no averment that the defendant was a common carrier (in which case, as we shall presently see, peculiar responsibilities would have been cast on him), or that he was to have received anything for his services; and the simple question consequently was, whether a man not being a common carrier, who undertakes gratuitously to carry goods or to perform some act in connection with them, is liable for any and what degree of negligence in the performance of his undertaking: the decision come to in this case established the law relating to contracts of mandate as it has been above stated; and, in the course of his judgment, Lord Holt took occasion minutely to consider the various classes and subdivisions of bailments, together with the legal principles applicable to them.

(i) Ld. Raym. 909. See Houlder v. Souilly, 8 C. B., N. S., 254, cited post.

Instances of the kind of bailment to which I have been now referring do not very often present themselves in our modern law reports; they do, however, sometimes occur, as in Boorman v. Jenkins (j), and Rooth v. Wilson (k), in the former of which, Taunton, J., after remarking upon the difficulty of determining what is gross negligence, for which alone a mandatary or depositary is liable, observes that there may be cases where this question will be matter of law more than of fact, and others again where it will be matter of fact more than of law (l). So, in regard to the question—what is to be deemed reasonable care, the absence of which will indicate gross negligence?—Dr. Story (m) observes, that, being a bailee without reward, a depositary is bound to slight diligence only, “but in every case good faith requires that he should take reasonable care of the deposit, and what is reasonable care must materially depend upon the nature, value, and quality of the thing [bailed], the circumstances under which it is deposited, and sometimes upon the character and confidence and particular dealings of the parties” (n).

Further, it is necessary to observe, in connection with the particular class of bailments under consideration, that even a gratuitous bailee who accepts his trust for the benefit of the bailor will, if possessed of skill with reference to the specific subject-matter of the bailment, be bound to use it—for instance,—a person conversant with horses might be answerable for damage happening to a horse whilst under his gratuitous care or management, for which an individual not so skilled might be in no degree responsible (o).

(j) 2 Ad. & E. 256.

(k) 1 B. & Ald. 59, 61, ubi vide per Lord Ellenborough, C. J.; see also Mytton v. Cock, 2 Str. 1099; Dartnall v. Howard, 4 B. & C. 345; White v. Humphrey, 11 Q. B. 43.

(l) See Melville v. Doidge, 6 C. B. 450.

(m) Bailm., 5th ed., p. 63.

(n) See Mills v. Holton, 2 H. & N. 14.

(o) Wilson v. Brett, 11 M. & W. 113.

With respect to bailments purely gratuitous, one question may with good reason be asked—can a contract to accept such a bailment and to discharge its resulting duties be enforced—would not an action for the purpose of enforcing it or obtaining damages for its nonperformance fail by reason of the maxim—Ex nudo pacto non oritur actio? The answer is, that such an action would fail, and that the party who has entered into a gratuitous contract of the kind supposed may relieve himself from liability before performance by a simple refusal to discharge the trust. If, however, he accept the bailment, he will thereby render himself liable for negligence (of the degree before specified) during its continuance. This liability results directly from the rule cited at a former page (p), that “the confidence induced by undertaking any service for another is a sufficient legal consideration to create a duty in its performance;” and it is, accordingly, generally true with respect to gratuitous contracts, that for nonfeasance, even when a party suffers a damage thereby, no action lies, but for misfeasance an action will lie (q).

Bailments.
Class II.
Trust for exclusive benefit of bailee.

Next in order of the three leading classes of bailments, already adverted to, is that in which the trust is exclusively for the benefit of the bailee, and in which the thing bailed is usually to be restored in specie. A bailment of this kind was denominated in the civil law commodatum, in ours it is called a loan, and the degree of diligence here required from the bailee is very much, if not precisely, that required from a gratuitous bailee possessing skill, who, as above stated, is bound to exercise the skill which he possesses; the reason being, that a gratuitous bailee for use must be taken, in point of law, to have represented himself to the bailor as a person of competent skill—a much greater degree of diligence will therefore be expected from him than from one who is a

(p) P. 670; see Shillibeer v. Glyn, 185 et seq.; Balfe v. West, 13 C. B. 2 M. & W. 143. 466, cited ante, p. 671; Else v. Gatward, 5 T. R. 143, 149, 150.
(q) Story Bailm., 5th ed., pp. 13, mere gratuitous bailee for the benefit of the bailor. The law applicable to the class of bailees now in question, is explained in Wilson v. Brett (r) already cited, illustrated to some extent by Lord Camoys v. Scurr (s), and commented on by Lord Campbell, C. J., in Dansey v. Richardson (t), and by Lord Holt in Coggs v. Bernard, where the latter eminent judge takes occasion to observe, that the party to whom a loan of chattels is made gratuitously "is bound to the strictest care and diligence to keep the goods [lent] so as to restore them back again to the lender;" for the bailee, having a benefit by the use of them, will be answerable if guilty of the least neglect, as if a man should lend another a horse to go westward, or for a month, and the bailee go northward, or keep the horse above a month—if any accident happen to the horse in the northern journey, or after the expiration of the month, the bailee will be chargeable,—because he has made use of the horse contrary to the trust under which he was lent; and it may be, if he had been used no otherwise than as had been intended, the accident would not have happened (u).

One ordinary instance of the above kind of bailment occurs in the case of a gratuitous or simple loan of money. And in connection either with the present or the preceding class of bailments (for the facts as reported do not enable us positively to say to which it may belong), should be mentioned—Nicholls v. Bastard (x), which shows, that, if chattel property be taken wrongfully out of the possession of a gratuitous bailee, he may sue for it in trover in his own name, or the bailor may sue—the former having a special, and the latter an absolute property in the chattel (y).

(r) 11 M. & W. 113, 115.

(s) 9 Car. & P. 383.

(t) 3 E. & B. 167.

(u) Blakemore v. Bristol and Exeter R. C., 8 E. & B. 1035, 1050, shows that the duties of the borrower and lender of a chattel are in some degree correlative: Judgm., MacCarthy v. Young, 6 H. & N. 336. See Judgm., Taylor v. Caldwell, 3 B. & S. 838-9.

(x) 2 Cr. M. & R. 659.

(y) Ante, p. 791.

Bailments.
Class III.
Trust for benefit of both parties.

To the third class of bailments, in which the trust is for the benefit of both parties, is referable the law relative to vadium, the pledging or pawning of a chattel, and that relating to locatio-conductio, a bailment for reward or compensation, which may not improperly be regarded as divisible into as many sub-classes as there are different modes of employing care or labour upon goods (z), the more important of these subdivisions being (a) : 1. The hiring of a thing for use (locatio rei). 2. The hiring of work and labour (locatio operis faciendi). 3. The hiring of care and services to be performed or bestowed on the thing delivered (locatio custodia). 4. The hiring of the carriage of goods from one place to another (locatio operis mercium vehendarum). The class of bailments before us is, then, obviously far more comprehensive and practically important than either of the two kinds previously mentioned (b), embracing, inter alia, bailments to pawnbrokers, innkeepers, and carriers; as to each of which successively some few observations are sub-joined.

It may, however, in this place be well to premise that the general rule applicable where the bailment is reciprocally beneficial to both parties to it is, that ordinary diligence on the part of the bailee is required, so that (to put the converse of the rule) he will be responsible for ordinary neglect. The degree of care or diligence required in this third class of bailments is therefore intermediate between that required from a bailee in the first and in the second class.

A pledge or pawn may be defined to be "a bailment of goods to a creditor, as security for some debt or engagement" (c); and with respect to it, the rule deducible from

Pawnee—
liability of.

(z) 1 Smith L. C., 5th ed., p. 191.

(a) Story Bailm., 5th ed., p. 11.

(b) Ante, pp. 799, 802.

(c) Story Bailm., 5th ed., p. 10; per Lord Holt, C. J., Ld. Raym.

"To constitute a valid pledge, there must be a delivery of the article either actual or constructive to the pawnee:"
per Erle, C. J., Martin v. Reid, 11 C. B., N. S., 734.

the judgment of Lord Holt in Coggs v. Bernard is, that "the pawnee is bound to use ordinary diligence in the care and safeguard of the pawn" (d), so that, if the thing pawned be lost notwithstanding the exercise of such diligence, the pawnee may still resort to the pawnor for the amount of the debt secured by the pawn (e). "If," says Lord Holt, "the pawn be such as it will be the worse for using, the pawnee cannot use it, as clothes, &c.; but if it be such as will be never the worse, as if jewels for the purpose were pawned to a lady, she might use them, but then she must do it at her peril; for whereas if she keeps them locked up in her cabinet, if her cabinet should be broken open and the jewels taken from thence, she would be excused; if she wears them abroad, and is there robbed of them, she will be answerable; and the reason is, because the pawn is in the nature of a deposit, and as such is not liable to be used" (f). But if the pawn be of such a nature as the pawnee is at any charge about the thing pawned, to maintain it, as a horse, cow, &c., then the pawnee may use the horse in a reasonable manner, or milk the cow, &c., in recompense for the meat" (g).

The pawnee, however, is bound to give up to its lawful owner the thing pawned, upon a tender of the amount due to himself; and consequently if the chattel in question be lost after such tender has been made, the pawnee will be responsible as having made himself a wrong-doer by his detention of the pawn, and if a man keeps goods by wrong, he will be answerable for them at all events (h). Subject to the qualified property in the goods pawned thus transferred to the pawnee, the pawnor retains his property in them;

(d) 1 Smith L. C., 5th ed., p. 194.

(e) As to the liability of a pawn-broker for damage done to goods pawned by an accidental fire, see Syred v. Carruthers, E. B. & E. 469.

(f) Citing Owen, 123.

(g) See also Story Bailm., 5th ed., pp. 337, 338.

(h) Per Lord Holt, C. J., Coggs v. Bernard, 2 Ld. Raym. 917.

and, as incident to such property, he has a right to sell the chattel pledged (i) ; and when this right has been exercised, the purchaser has the same interest in the chattel which the pawnor had (k), so that in an action of trover brought for it by the pawnor against the pawnee, on repayment of the amount for which the thing was pledged, the jus tertii might, in general, be successfully set up (l).

The business of pawnbrokers is regulated by the statute law (m), which, inter alia, provides, that if the pledge be not redeemed at the expiration of a year and a day, the pawnbroker may then expose it to sale as soon as he can consistently with the provisions of the Act; but if, at any time before the sale has actually taken place, the owner of the chattel pawned tender the principal and interest due, together with the expenses (if any) incurred, he is entitled to a return of the chattel; for the power of sale is allowed the pawnbroker merely to secure to him the money which he has advanced, together with the high rate of interest which the law allows to him in his character of pawnbroker (n). Should the forfeited pledge, however, be sold, in accordance with the power of sale given by the Act, the question presents itself,—is the pawnbroker to be regarded as warranting the title of the chattel sold? In Morley v. Attenborough (o), the Court of Exchequer, after an examination of the earlier cases, came to the conclusion that there is no implied war-

(i) As to the right of the pawnee to sell the pledge, see Pigot v. Cubley, 15 C. B., N. S., 701.

(k) Franklin v. Neate, 13 M. & W. 481, 486. See Reeves v. Capper, 5 Bing., N. C., 136; Flory v. Denny, 7 Exch. 581.

(l) Chepsman v. Exall, 6 Exch. 341; Thorne v. Tilbury, 3 H. & N. 534.

(m) 39 & 40 Geo. 3, c. 99; 9 & 10 Vict. c. 98; 19 & 20 Vict. c. 27; 22 & 23 Vict. c. 14; 23 Vict. c. 21. See Attenborough v. London, 8 Exch. 661; Fergusson v. Norman, 5 Bing. N. C. 76; Syred v. Carruthers, supra, n. (e); Shackell v. West, 2 E. & E. 326; Fraser v. Hill, 1 Macq. H. L. Ca. 392.

(n) Per Abbott, C. J., Walter v. Smith, 5 B. & Ald. 439, 441.

(o) 3 Exch. 500. Acc. Judgm., Hall v. Conder, 2 C. B., N. S., 40; Smith v. Neale, Id. 67, 80, 89; Judgm., Emmerton v. Mathews, 7 H. & N. 593.

ranty of title on the sale of an ascertained chattel ; and that, if there be no fraud, a vendor is not liable for a bad title, unless there is an express warranty, or an equivalent to it, by declarations or conduct. Usage of trade, they remarked, if proved as a matter of fact, would, of course, be sufficient to raise an inference of such an engagement ; and, without proof of such usage, the very nature of the trade may be enough to lead to the conclusion that the person carrying it on must be understood to engage that the purchaser shall enjoy that which he buys as against all persons (p). Applying these remarks to the case of a pawnbroker selling a forfeited pledge eo nomine, we infer that he must be considered as selling merely the right to the pledge which he himself had (q), as undertaking merely that the subject of sale is a pledge, and is irredeemable, and that he (the vendor) is not cognisant of any defect of title to it. Under the circumstances here supposed, accordingly, a pawnbroker selling a forfeited pledge would not be liable to refund the purchase-money if the vendee should afterwards be compelled

(p) In Sims v. Marryat, 17 Q. B. 291, Lord Campbell, C. J., after citing and approving of the judgment delivered by Parke, B., in Morley v. Attenborough, supra, proceeds thus :—“It may be that the learned Baron is correct in saying, that, on a sale of personal property, the maxim caveat emptor does by the law of England apply ; but, if so, there are many exceptions stated in the judgment which will well nigh eat up the rule. Executory contracts are said to be excepted, so are sales in retail shops, or where there is an usage of trade : so that there may be difficulty in finding cases to which the rule would practically apply.” See further, as to the point above adverted to, Westropp v. Solomon, 8 C. B. 345, and cases there cited.

(q) See Chapman v. Speller, 14 Q. B. 621.

In Morley v. Attenborough, 3 Exch. 514, the Court, however, further observe as follows :—“It may be, that though there is no implied warranty of title, so that the vendor would not be liable for a breach of it to unliquidated damages, yet the purchaser may recover back the purchase-money as on a consideration that failed, if it could be shown that it was the understanding of both parties that the bargain should be put an end to, if the purchaser should not have a good title. But if there is no implied warranty of title, some circumstances must be shown to enable the plaintiff to recover for money had and received.” See Gompertz v. Bartlett, 2 E. & B. 849.

to restore the chattel to some third party, as being the right-ful owner of it.

Innkeeper—
liability of.

The liability at common law of an innkeeper for the loss of a guest's property whilst sojourning at his inn rests, not on mere reason, but on custom, growing out of a state of society no longer existing (r). By legal implication, the property of the guest is deemed to be in the actual care and custody of the innkeeper, who is, with some rare exceptions, held responsible for its safety (s), and has a right to make such charges as may compensate for the responsibility thus imposed on him (t). Upon this subject Calye's case (u) is the leading authority, whence we deduce that, in order to charge a person with the responsibilities of an innkeeper, it must be shown that he is the keeper of a common 'inn' (x); i. e., of a house where the traveller is furnished with everything which he has occasion for whilst upon his way (y).

Assuming the above condition to be satisfied, an innkeeper's liability seems closely to resemble—though it is not altogether so great as—that which attaches to a common carrier by our customary law. "An innkeeper," says Bayley, J. (z), "is primâ facie liable for any loss not occasioned by the act of God or the king's enemies, although he may be exonerated where the guest chooses to have his goods under his own care;" the latter part of this remark being well illustrated by the case of Burgess v. Clements (a). The rule as to an innkeeper's liability seems, indeed, substan-

(r) Per Coleridge, J., 3 E. & B. 159.

(s) Per Wightman, J., 3 E. & B. 155.

See Day v. Bather, 2 H. & C. 14.

(t) Per Erle, C. J., Holder v. Soulby, 8 C. B., N. S., 264; Calye's case, 8 Rep., 32 a., 1st Resol.

(u) 8 Rep. 32; Bennett v. Mellor, 5 T. R. 273.

(x) "Inn," hospitium, diversorium.

(y) Per Bayley, J., Thompson v. Lacy, 3 B. & Ald. 286.

(z) Richmond v. Smith, 8 B. & C.

9. See, however, the remarks on this dictum, which is somewhat too broadly expressed, Story Bailm., 5th ed., p. 499.

Kent v. Shuckard, 2 B. & Ad. 803, shows that there is no distinction between money and goods as regards the innkeeper's liability.

(a) 4 M. & S. 306; cited 6 E. & B. 895.

tially to be that indicated by the words of the writ in Calye's case, which alleges that "by the custom of the realm innkeepers are obliged to keep the goods and chattels of their guests who are within their inns (b) without subtraction or loss day and night, so that no damage in any manner shall thereby come to their guests from the negligence of the innkeeper or his servants." The presumption of negligence from the mere fact of loss will, accordingly, be against the innkeeper; but it will be open to him to repel this presumption, by showing that the loss is attributable to the personal negligence of the guest (c), or to the act of God, or to vis major (d), or that the goods when the loss occurred were in the custody and under the control, not of himself but of his guest (e). In Cashill v. Wright (f), the Court of Queen's Bench thus state the law "resulting from all the authorities" respecting the common law liability of an innkeeper:—"The goods [of the guest] remain under the charge of the innkeeper and the protection of the inn, so as to make the innkeeper liable as for breach of duty unless the negligence of the guest occasions the loss in such a way as that the loss would not have happened if the guest had used the ordinary care (g) that a prudent man may be reasonably expected to have taken under the circumstances."

An innkeeper is responsible for the loss of goods, only when they were received by him in that character; if not so received, his liability will have to be determined by reference to the law of bailments generally (h).

(b) See Jones v. Tyler, 1 Ad. & E. 522.

(c) Armistead v. Wilde, 17 Q. B. 261.

(d) See Walker v. The British Guarantee Ass., 18 Q. B. 277; Story Bailm., 5th ed., pp. 29-32.

(e) Judgm., Morgan v. Ravey, 6 H. & N. 277.

(f) 6 E. & B. 891, 900.

(g) The legal meaning of "gross negligence" is "greater negligence than the absence of such ordinary care:" Judgm., 6 E. & B. 899.

(h) Story Bailm., 5th ed., p. 513.

As to the lien of an innkeeper, see Allen v. Smith, 12 C. B., N. S., 638; Broadwood v. Granara, 10 Exch. 417, and cases there cited; Smith v. Dearlove, 6 C. B. 182,—of a livery-stable

The liability of an innkeeper at common law, being such as above stated, has been materially diminished by the stat. 26 & 27 Vict. c. 41, which enacts, section 1, that "no innkeeper shall be liable to make good to any guest of such innkeeper any loss of or injury to goods or property brought to his inn, not being a horse or other live animal, or any gear appertaining thereto, or any carriage, to a greater amount than the sum of 30*l.*, except in the following cases—that is to say—1. Where such goods or property shall have been stolen, lost, or injured through the wilful act, default or neglect of such innkeeper, or any servant in his employ. 2. Where such goods or property shall have been deposited expressly for safe custody with such innkeeper," provided that in the case of such deposit the innkeeper may, if he think fit, require as a condition of his liability, that such goods or property shall be deposited in a box or other receptacle fastened and sealed by the person depositing the same. Section 2 of the same statute further enacts, however, that "if any innkeeper shall refuse to receive for safe custody, as before mentioned, any goods or property of his guest, or if such guest shall, through any default of such innkeeper, be unable to deposit such goods or property as aforesaid," such innkeeper shall not be entitled to the benefit of the Act in respect thereof (l).

Boarding-house keeper—liability of.

The liability of a boarding-house keeper in respect of the property of a guest who is lodging with him has not in any decided case been very certainly defined; it seems clearly, however, to be less than that of an innkeeper. But a boarding-house keeper is, at all events, bound to exhibit ordinary care towards the guest and his goods—to take as much care of the keeper, see Parsons v. Gingell, 4 C. B. 545,—of a trainer of racehorses, see Forth v. Simpson, 13 Q. B. 680.

(l) The word "inn" used in the above-mentioned statute "shall mean any hotel, inn, tavern, public-house, or other place of refreshment the keeper of which is now by law responsible for the goods and property of his guests," and the word "innkeeper" shall mean the "keeper of any such place."

goods of the guest as an ordinarily prudent housekeeper would take of his own (m). How far the keeper of a boarding-house may be answerable for the negligence of his servant, and what may be the precise extent and limits of the maxim Respondet superior, in case of a loss of property resulting to the guest from such negligence, the authorities do not enable us to determine (n).

A lodging-house keeper is not responsible for a loss of his lodger's goods which has arisen, not from his misfeasance, but only from an absence of proper care (o).

Lodging-house keeper—liability of.

A bailee of goods, with a view to their being conveyed by him from place to place, may, it is conceived, fall into one or other of the four following characters: 1. He may be a gratuitous bailee, in which case, as already shown (p), he will be liable merely for gross negligence, and bound only to exercise slight diligence in reference to the goods entrusted to him. 2. He may be a bailee for hire,—though not charged upon any custom of the realm—and bound accordingly to a greater degree of diligence (q). 3. He may be a common carrier; or, 4. He may belong to some particular class of carriers, whose liabilities are regulated by the statute law. To land carriers falling within either of the two last-mentioned of the foregoing classes will the following observations be restricted. In perusing them, the reader will remember that several of the modern decisions, which by force of section 7 (r) of the 17 & 18 Vict. c. 31 (the Railway and Canal Traffic Act) are no longer applicable to companies brought within the scope

Land carrier—liability of.

(m) Dansey v. Richardson, 3 E. & B. 144; explained, per Erle, C. J., Holder v. Soulby, 8 C. B., N. S., 266.

(n) Dansey v. Richardson, supra, where the Court of Queen's Bench was equally divided in opinion as to the above question.

(o) Holder v. Soulby, 8 C. B., N. S., 254.

(p) Ante, p. 800.

(q) See Ross v. Hill, 2 C. B. 877, where the action was brought for loss of luggage against a cab-driver, not charged as a common carrier: Willoughby v. Horridge, 12 C. B. 742. A cab-proprietor will be liable on the contract of his licensed driver: Powles v. Rider, 6 E. & B. 207.

(r) Post, p. 818.

of its provisions, are still binding as authorities in other cases, and must not therefore be wholly lost sight of. It cannot, however, be denied that the decisions alluded to (s), inasmuch as Railway and Canal Companies have to a great extent monopolised the inland carrying trade of the country, are now invested with comparatively little value or importance.

A land carrier exercising his calling according to the custom of the realm, that is, publicly undertaking to carry for hire the goods of such as choose to employ him (t), is by the common law looked upon as an insurer, so that in the event of the goods entrusted to him being lost or damaged, to use the words of Sir W. Jones (u), "nothing will excuse him

(s) Those decisions more particularly which have reference to the validity of notices issued in regard to the conveyance of cattle by railway companies.

(t) The question,—Who is a common carrier? is considered in Story Bailm., 5th ed., p. 521.

The master and owner of a general ship is prima facie a common carrier; his responsibility, however, may be enlarged or qualified by the terms of the bill of lading: Laveroni v. Drury, 8 Exch. 166, 173; and cases cited post, p. 814, n. (e).

(u) Bailm., p. 104. See Phillips v. Clark, 2 C. B., N. S., 156.

"To give due security to property," says Best, C. J., in Riley v. Horne, 5 Bing. 220, "the law has added to that responsibility of a carrier which immediately rises out of his contract to carry for a reward, namely, that of taking all reasonable care of it, the responsibility of an insurer. From his liability as an insurer, the carrier is only to be relieved by two things, both so well known to all the country when they happen, that no person would be so rash as to attempt to prove that they had happened when they had not, namely, the act of God and the king's enemies."

Again, in Coggs v. Bernard, 2 Ld. Raym. 918, Lord Holt, C. J., observes, that the law charges a common carrier "to carry goods against all events but acts of God and of the enemies of the king. For, though the force be never so great, as if an irresistible multitude of people should rob him, nevertheless he is chargeable; and this is a politic establishment, contrived by the policy of the law for the safety of all persons, the necessity of whose affairs obliges them to trust these sorts of persons, that they may be safe in their ways of dealing; for else these carriers might have an opportunity of undoing all persons that had any dealings with them, by combining with thieves, &c., and yet doing it in such a clandestine manner as would not be possible to be discovered: and this is the reason the law is founded upon in that point." See, also, as to the liability of a common carrier, Bourne v. Gatliffe, 11 Cl. & F. 45; S. C., 7 M. & Gr. 850; 3 Id. 643.

except the act of God or of the king's enemies ;" the "act of God" being understood to signify inevitable, overwhelming (x) accident, and by the "king's enemies" being meant public enemies with whom the nation is at open war (y).

The operation of the above general rule (which was subject to some few and unimportant exceptions merely), being found prejudicial to carriers, was in practice greatly restricted by issuing notices limiting the carrier's liability, and acceded to as between himself and his customers. The precise modus operandi thus adopted for the protection of the carrier was as follows :—a notice was issued by the carrier, stating that "he would not be accountable for any property above a certain value, unless insured and paid for at certain extra rates at the time of delivery." To this notice, if proved to have come to the knowledge of the customer (z), his assent was implied—so that the carrier was protected accordingly, except, indeed, in the case of wilful misfeasance or gross negligence, which was held not to be within the scope or purview of the notice or within the intention of the parties (a).

In Riley v. Horne (b), the effect of notices such as above alluded to was much considered, and the liability attaching to a carrier, as the law stood prior to the stat. 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 68, was briefly defined per Cur. ; it is there said, "that a carrier is an insurer of the goods which he carries ; that he is obliged for a reasonable reward to carry any goods

(x) Oakley v. Portsmouth and Ryde Steam Packet Co., 11 Exch. 618, 623. See Briddon v. Great Northern R. Co., 28 L. J., Ex., 51.

(y) Story Bailm., 5th ed., ss. 511, 526. See Morewood v. Pollok, 1 E. & B. 743.

(z) See Rowley v. Horne, 3 Bing. 2 ; Judgm., Riley v. Horne, 5 Bing. 223 ; Clark v. Gray, 4 Esp. 177-8.

(a) See cases cited supra, n. (z). A loss of goods by the felony of the carrier's servant would not necessarily have resulted from gross negligence so as to exclude the carrier from the protection afforded by his notice. See Butt v. Great Western R. Co., 11 C. B. 140, explained in Metcalfe v. London, Brighton, &c., R. Co., 4 C. B., N. S., 309, 310, and in Great Western R. Co., app., Rimell, resp., 18 C. B. 585 ; Finucane v. Small, 1 Esp. 315.

(b) 5 Bing. 217, 224 ; Izett v. Mountain, 4 East, 371 ; cited per Willes, J., Mac Andrew v. Electric Telegraph Co., 17 C. B. 17.

to the place to which he professes to carry goods that are offered him (c) if his carriage will hold them," [and he is informed of their quality and value (d)]; and further, that "if he does not ask for this information, or if, when he asks and is not answered, he takes the goods, he is answerable for their amount whatever that may be; that he may limit his responsibility as an insurer by notice, but that a notice will not protect him against the consequences of a loss by gross negligence" (e).

Such being, in brief, the liability of a carrier for loss of or damage done to goods entrusted to him at common law, the operation of the Carriers' Act (11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 68) upon his liability has been this:—As regards certain articles enumerated in the 1st section of the Act, including (amongst other things) gold or silver coin, jewellery, trinkets (f), bills, bank notes, securities for the payment of money (g), pictures, plate, china, silks, furs, or lace, being articles possibly of much value although of little bulk, it is provided that the

(c) "At common law a carrier is not bound to carry for every person tendering goods of any description, but his obligation is to carry according to his public profession. . . . A person may profess to carry a particular description of goods only; for instance, cattle or dry goods, in which case he could not be compelled to carry any other kind of goods: or he may limit his obligation to carrying from one place to another, as from Manchester to London; and then he would not be bound to carry to or from the intermediate places. Still, until he retracts, every individual (provided he tenders the money at the time, and there is room in the conveyance) has a right to call upon him to receive and carry goods according to his public profession." Per Parke, B., Johnson v. Midland R. Co., 4 Exch. 372, 373, cited 7 Exch.

712; and followed in Re Oxlade and North Eastern R. Co., 15 C. B., N. S., 693, 694; per Blackburn, J., Hales v. London and North Western R. Co., 32 L. J., Q. B., 294; Crouch v. London and North Western R. Co., 14 C. B. 255; per Crompton, J., 5 E. & B. 868; Judgm., Garton v. Bristol and Exeter R. Co., 1 B. & S. 162.

(d) A carrier is not in all cases entitled to know the nature of goods tendered to him for carriage, see per Jervis, C. J., and Maule, J., 14 C. B. 291, 294-5.

(e) See Phillips v. Clark, 2 C. B., N. S., 156; Phillips v. Edwards, 3 H. & N. 813.

(f) See Bernstein v. Baxendale, 6 C. B., N. S., 251.

(g) See Stoessiger v. South Eastern R. Co., 3 E. & B. 549.

carrier shall not be liable for the loss of or any injury to any parcel containing such articles—when exceeding in value 10l.—unless the value and nature of the article shall have been declared, at the time of its delivery, by the person sending or delivering the parcel, and an increased charge for carriage, or an engagement to pay the same, be accepted by the party receiving it (h). By sect. 2 the carrier will be entitled to demand (i), for the carriage of any parcel containing any of the articles specified in the 1st section of the Act, an increased rate of charge to be notified by some notice (k) affixed in legible characters in some public and conspicuous part of the office or receiving house (l) of the carrier, in which case the party forwarding goods will be bound by the notice without any further proof being given of its having come to his knowledge. By sect. 3 the carrier must also (if required so to do) give a receipt to the sender for the amount paid for carriage of any article the value of which has been declared as above mentioned; and “if such receipt shall not be given when required, or such notice as aforesaid shall not have been affixed,” the carrier will be disentitled to any benefit or advantage under the Act, but will be responsible as at common law and liable to refund to his customer the increased rate of charge paid by him.

Again, the 4th section of the Act invalidates all notices issued for the purpose of limiting the carrier’s liability in respect of articles not enumerated in its 1st section. By (h) By sect. 7, where any parcel has been delivered to the carrier, its value and contents declared, and an increased rate paid for carriage, the customer may, in the event of the parcel being lost or damaged, recover the increased charge so paid, in addition to the value of the parcel. See, further, as to the measure of damages in an action for loss of or damage done to goods confided to a common carrier, sect. 9.

(i) It is incumbent on the carrier to demand—not on the customer to tender—the increased charge: Great Northern R. Co., app., Behrens, resp., 7 H. & N. 950; S. Co., 6 Id. 366.

(k) See Owen v. Burnett, 4 Tyr. 134 a.

(l) See sect. 5 of the above Act; Syms v. Chaplin, 5 Ad. & E. 634.

sect. 6, nothing in the Act shall "extend or be construed to annul or in anywise affect any special contract" which may be entered into between a common carrier and another party for the conveyance of merchandise and goods, and which may in express terms limit the carrier's liability. Sect. 8 further provides, that nothing in the Act contained "shall be deemed to protect any mail contractor, stage-coach proprietor, or other common carrier for hire from liability to answer for loss or injury to any goods or articles whatsoever, arising from the felonious acts of any coachman, guard, book-keeper, porter, or other servant in his or their employ, nor to protect any such coachman, guard, book-keeper, or other servant from liability for any loss or injury occasioned by his or their own personal neglect or misconduct."

Now, the first general remark to be made with reference to the Carriers' Act is, that, neither by it nor by the special contract between parties (if there be one), are common carriers brought into the position of ordinary bailees for hire. They still continue common carriers, and liable to all the duties attaching to them in that character, except so far as they are qualified by the statute, where the statute applies,—or by the special contract, where the special contract applies (m). And it has been repeatedly held that railway companies invested by statute with permissive powers to act as carriers, become, if they avail themselves thereof, subject to the liabilities imposed on common carriers by our customary law (n). Bearing this in mind, we shall find, that, under the statute, all persons sending goods of a particular description and value by a carrier, when they deliver them at his office, are bound to give him information of their nature and value (o). If the sender of the (m) Per Maule, J., Butt v. Great Western R. C., 11 C. B. 152.

(n) See, for example, Palmer v. Grand Junction R. C., 4 M. & W. 749, 766; Pickford v. Grand Junction R.

C., 10 M. & W. 399, 422; followed in Baxendale v. Great Western R. C., 14 C. B., N. S., 1, 44.

(o) Hart v. Baxendale, 6 Exch. 769; Judgm., Great Northern R. C., goods omits to give this information, he will be disentitled to sue the carrier for loss (p) of the goods, even where occasioned by gross negligence (q), provided there be no wilful neglect, no misfeasance, nor abandonment of the character of carrier (r); though to such a defence under the statute plaintiff may reply that the loss arose through the felonious act of the carrier's servant; for, in this latter case, the statute would not afford protection (s).

Another condition, however, must be fulfilled, in order that the carrier may be entitled to demand an extra charge for carrying the goods specified in the 1st section of the Carriers' Act: he must comply with the requirements of the 2nd section of the Act, in putting up the notice in his office; he must also give a receipt, if required, for the amount paid for carriage.

Such being the effect of a notice restricting the carrier's liability whether at common law or under the provisions of the Carriers' Act, it becomes necessary to examine the effect and operation of the stat. 17 & 18 Vict. c. 31, which applies, however, exclusively to Railway and Canal Companies, and app., Behrens, resp., 7 H. & N. 953; Smith v. London, Brighton, and South Coast R. C., 7 C. B. 782.

(p) The 1st section of the Act applies to protect the carrier, where the chattel is either abstracted, lost, or injured whilst in his personal care, but not in cases where the owner of the article suffers or sustains damage from the refusal of the carrier to take goods: Pinciani v. London and South Western R. C., 18 C. B. 226;—or from the neglect of the carrier to deliver in due time: Hearn v. London and South Western R. C., 10 Exch. 793.

(q) Great Western R. C., app., Rimell, resp., 18 C. B. 575; Metcalf v. London, Brighton, &c., R. C., 4 C. B., N. S., 307.

(r) See Hinton v. Dibbin, 2 Q. B.

646; Wyld v. Pickford, 8 M. & W. 443, as explained by Jervis, C. J., in Butt v. Great Western R. C., 11 C. B. 150; Smith v. London and Brighton R. C., 7 C. B. 782. The meaning of the term "gross negligence" is examined minutely in Judgm., Austin v. Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire R. C., 10 C. B. 474-5; ante, p. 809, n. (g).

(s) Sect. 8, as explained per Platt, B., Machu v. London and South Western R. C., 2 Exch. 432 (who observes, that "its effect is to take out of the operation of the statute all losses occasioned by felony on the part of persons who, in case of loss, might be treated as servants of the carrier"): Metcalf v. London, Brighton, &c., R. C., 4 C. B., N. S., 307, 311.

moreover expressly provides, that nothing therein contained shall alter or affect the rights, privileges, or liabilities of any such company under the 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 68, with respect to articles of the descriptions mentioned in that Act. The Railway and Canal Traffic Act has reference then to articles not brought within the provisions of the prior statute—especially to cattle and other animals, which form an important item in the carrying trade of our great companies. The 7th section of the Act alluded to enacts, that every company to which it applies (t) “shall be liable for the loss of, or for any injury done to any horses, cattle, or other animals (u), or to any articles, goods, or things in the receiving, forwarding, or delivering thereof, occasioned by the neglect or default of such company or its servants, notwithstanding any notice, condition, or declaration made and given by such company contrary thereto, or in anywise limiting such liability; every such notice, condition, or declaration being hereby declared to be null and void: provided always that nothing herein contained shall be construed to prevent the said companies from making such conditions with respect to the receiving, forwarding, and delivering of any of the said animals, articles, goods, or things as shall be adjudged by the Court or judge before whom any question relating thereto shall be tried, to be just and reasonable. Provided always, that no greater damages shall be recovered for the loss of or for any injury done to any of such animals, beyond the sums” specified in the Act (x), “unless the person sending or delivering the same to such company shall, at the time of such delivery, have declared them to be respectively of higher value” than that mentioned in the Act, “in which case it shall be lawful for such company to demand and (t) See sect. 1 (the interpretation clause). R. C., 2 B. & S. 122, 152.

(u) A dog is within these words: (x) That is to say—for any neat cattle, per head 15*l.*; for any sheep or pigs, per head 2*l.*

Harrison v. London, Brighton, &c., receive, by way of compensation for the increased risk and care thereby occasioned, a reasonable percentage upon the excess of the value so declared above the respective sums so limited as aforesaid, and which shall be paid in addition to the ordinary rate of charge : and such percentage or increased rate of charge shall be notified in the manner prescribed in the statute 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 68, and shall be binding upon such company in the manner therein mentioned (y) : provided also, that the proof of the value of such animals, articles, goods, and things, and the amount of the injury done thereto, shall in all cases lie upon the person claiming compensation for such loss or injury."

The true construction of the earlier portion of the clause above set out, may, according to Lord Westbury, C. (z), be expressed in few words. "I take it," says his Lordship, "to be equivalent to a simple enactment, that no general notice given by a railway company shall be valid in law for the purpose of limiting the common law liability of the company as carriers. Such common law liability may be limited by such conditions as the Court or Judge shall determine to be just and reasonable, but with this proviso, that any such condition so limiting the liability of the company shall be embodied in a special contract in writing between the company and the owner or person delivering the goods to the company, and which contract in writing shall be signed by such owner or person."

A condition which, if embodied in a contract between a

(y) Ante, p. 815.

(z) Peck v. North Staffordshire R. C., 32 L. J., Q. B., 241, 269; per Williams, J., 4 H. & N. 349; M'Manus v. Lancashire and Yorkshire R. C., 4 H. & N. 327, reversing S. C., 2 Id. 693 (commented on in Beal v. South Devon R. C., 5 H. & N. 875); M'Cance v. London and North Western R. C., 7 H. & N. 477; Harrison

v. London and Brighton R. C., 2 B. & S. 152, reversing S. C., Id. 122; Gregory v. West Midland R. C., 33 L. J., Ex., 155, 158; Simons v. Great Western R. C., 18 C. B. 805; followed in Garton v. Bristol and Exeter R. C., 1 B. & S. 162; London and North Western R. C. v. Dunham, Id. 826; Lewis v. Great Western R. C., 5 H. & N. 867.

railway company and the owner of goods delivered to be carried by that company, would exempt the company from responsibility for damage done to the goods however caused—including, therefore, gross negligence, and even fraud or dishonesty on the part of the servants of the company—would be neither just nor reasonable (a).

Prior to the Railway and Canal Traffic Act above in part set out, a special contract for the conveyance of goods or cattle between a railway company and their customer (which, as already shown, was unaffected by the Carriers' Act (b)), was usually evidenced by some memorandum appended to the receipt given at the company's receiving house for goods, &c., brought thither for conveyance by train, the carriage of which was paid there; and to the validity of such a contract the signature of the consignor (or his agent) was held not to be indispensable or essential, provided that his assent to the restrictive conditions put forth by the company could from the facts adduced in evidence fairly and reasonably be inferred (c). Consequent on the decisions of our Courts touching the special contracts referred to, a wide immunity from liability was enjoyed by railway companies acting as carriers of cattle or goods, to curtail which within more reasonable limits the 17 & 18 Vict. c. 31, s. 7, (which, it must be remembered, applies to such goods and articles merely as are not within the provisions of the Carriers' Act,) provides that "no special contract" between a railway or canal company and any other parties "respecting the receiving, forwarding, or delivering of any animals, articles, goods, or things," as in the statute mentioned, "shall be binding upon or affect any such party unless the same be signed by him or by the per-

(a) Peck v. North Staffordshire R. C., 32 L. J., Q. B., 241 (where the cases are collected); Aldridge v. Great Western R. C., 15 C. B., N. S., 582.

(b) Sect. 6, cited ante, p. 816.

(c) See, per Coleridge, J., Great

Northern R. C. v. Morville, 21 L. J., Q. B., 319; York, Newcastle, and Berwick R. C. v. Criesp, 14 C. B. 527, and cases there cited; Walker v. York and North Midland R. C., 2 E. & B. 750, 762.

son delivering such animals, articles, goods, or things respectively for carriage" (d).

Assuming that the requirements of the Carriers' Act have been duly observed, and that there was no fraud, inducing the consignor to sign the contract (e), The Great Northern Railway Company v. Morville (f) shows clearly in what manner a special contract may, in any case falling within its provisions, be made available to limit the liability of a railway company as common carriers. There the plaintiff brought his action against the company for damage done to a horse belonging to him whilst being conveyed upon their line; and the question turned entirely upon the effect of a memorandum or ticket signed by the plaintiff on payment of the charge for carriage, which on the face of it, in express terms, stated that it was "issued subject to the owner's undertaking to bear all the risk of injury by conveyance and other contingencies;" and further stated that the company would not be responsible for any alleged defects in their carriages, &c., "nor for any damages, however caused, to horses, &c., travelling upon their railway." The plaintiff's horse having sustained injury by reason of a concussion whilst travelling on the defendant's line, the question was, whether the railway company were liable or not; and the Court held that they were not—because the 6th section of the Carriers' Act leaves it free to any carrier to make a special agreement with a person sending goods by his conveyance; and under the circumstances a special agreement,—the terms of which were sufficiently large to relieve and absolve the company from responsibility for the damage done,—was proved to have been entered into. The additional cases below cited will

(d) As to what will constitute a special contract under the above section, see Peek v. North Staffordshire R. Co., 32 L. J., Q. B., 241; S. C., E. B. & E. 858, 986; Aldridge v. Great West- ern R. Co., 15 C. B., N. S., 582.

(e) Simons v. Great Western R. Co., 2 C. B., N. S., 620.

(f) 21 L. J., Q. B., 319.

suffice to show how effectually the liability attaching to a railway company as common carriers may, by means of a special contract, be restricted (g).

Prior to the stat. 17 & 18 Vict. c. 31, it was held, that a special contract would relieve from liability a railway company undertaking to deliver goods to a consignee beyond the limits of its own line, but declaring that it would not be responsible for any loss of or damage done to such goods beyond certain limits specifically indicated; and that where a railway company receives a parcel for carriage to a point beyond that to which their own means of conveyance extend, the question whether they are liable or not for its loss in transitu to that point from their own terminus, will depend upon the nature of the contract for conveyance actually entered into—was it a contract to carry the parcel, or to cause it to be carried to its final destination, or was it a contract to carry as far as their own line may extend, and then to transfer the goods to another carrier (h)? It is clear, that, where such a company undertakes to convey the customer's goods for an entire journey or transit, the company will be liable for a loss of the goods occasioned during the transit by the neglect of any person other than themselves who may at the time of the loss, in point of fact, be carry-

(g) White v. Great Western R. C., 2 C. B., N. S., 7; Pardington v. South Wales R. C., 1 H. & N. 392; Shaw v. York and North Midland R. C., 13 Q. B. 347; Austin v. Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire R. C., 16 Q. B. 600, and 10 C. B., 454; Carr v. Lancashire and Yorkshire R. C., 7 Exch. 707; Crouch v. London and North Western R. C., 7 Exch. 705; Chippendale v. Lancashire and Yorkshire R. C., 21 L. J., Q. B., 22; Slim v. Great Northern R. C., 14 C. B. 647; Hughes v. Great Western R. C., 14 C. B. 637; Walker v. York and

North Midland R. C., 2 E. & B. 750; York, Newcastle, and Berwick R. C. v. Crisp, 14 C. B. 527.

The doctrine as to "contributory negligence" (ante, p. 679) may sometimes apply to relieve a carrier from liability. See Wise v. Great Western R. C., 1 H. & N. 63; Hutchinson v. Guion, 5 C. B., N. S., 149; Brass v. Mailland, 6 E. & B. 470; followed in Farrant v. Barnes, 11 C. B., N. S., 553, 562.

(h) Fowles v. Great Western R. C., 7 Exch. 699.

ing them (i). The points thus decided hold in regard to cases falling within the provisions of the 2nd and 7th sections of the Railway and Canal Traffic Act.

Questions, further, of more or less difficulty, may sometimes arise as to whether the goods alleged to have been lost or injured were at the time of the loss or injury sustained in the custody of the company as carriers (k); whether the goods were delivered by the consignor in accordance with or in violation of the known course of business of the company (l); whether the goods were accepted or dealt with on behalf of the company by its servant or agent duly constituted and acting within the scope of his powers (m); but it may safely be laid down as a proposition holding generally true, that when once a railway company "have held themselves out to be common carriers, there is engrafted upon their acceptance of the goods to be carried a common law liability to carry to all places to which they profess to carry (n), even if one of those places should be beyond the confines of the realm" (o). So likewise "they must equally take upon themselves the other part of the common law liability of carriers, viz., an obligation to accept all goods which are reasonably offered to them for conveyance to and from the places to which they profess to carry, whether one of those places be without the realm or not" (o). There is, however, no obligation on a railway company, whether at

(i) Bristol and Exeter R. C. v. Collins, 7 H. L. Ca. 194; Mytton v. Midland R. C., 4 H. & N. 615, following Muschamp v. Manchester and Preston R. C., 8 M. & W. 421; Coxon v. Great Western R. C., 5 H. & N. 274; Scothorn v. South Staffordshire R. C., 8 Exch. 341.

(k) See Giles v. Taff Vale R. C., 2 E. & B. 822.

(l) Slim v. Great Northern R. C., 14 C. B. 647.

(m) See Giles v. Taff Vale R. C., supra; Roe v. Birkenhead, &c., R. C., 7 Exch. 36; cited 6 H. & N. 364, 365.

(n) Per Crompton, J., Denton v. Great Northern R. C., 5 E. & B. 868. There is no common law duty imposed on a carrier to charge equal rates of carriage to all his customers;—his charge must, however, be reasonable: Bazendale v. Eastern Counties R. C., 4 C. B., N. S., 63.

(o) Crouch v. London and North Western R. C., 14 C. B. 255, 290.

common law or under the Railway and Canal Traffic Act to carry goods otherwise than according to their profession (p).

Again, where a passenger travelling by railway takes with him an amount of luggage (q) not exceeding that which he is allowed to take under the bye-laws (r) of the company without being subjected to the payment of any extra charge, the sum paid by way of fare must be considered as paid on account of the luggage as well as for his own conveyance; so that the company will not, in respect of the luggage, stand on the footing of mandataries or gratuitous bailees for the benefit of the bailor, and be bound therefore to use only a slight degree of diligence, but they will be liable for loss of the luggage in their capacity of carriers, and such liability will have to be determined at common law (s); or by reference to the provisions of the Carriers' Act; or by looking at the terms of any special contract bearing upon the point in question, which may have been entered into (t); and lastly, if need be, at the bye-laws of the company, and the rules and regulations made under the powers conferred upon them (u). In the case most likely perhaps to occur, i. e., where the passenger has delivered his luggage to one of the servants of the company with a view to its being labelled and placed in the luggage van for the purpose of conveyance, the company will,

(p) Re Oxlade and North Eastern R. C., 15 C. B., N. S., 680.

(q) Which term "comprises clothing, and such articles as a traveller usually carries with him for his personal convenience:" per Parke, B., Great Northern R. C. v. Shepherd, 8 Exch. 38, which case also shows that the company will not, in the absence of notice, be responsible for the loss of merchandise packed in the luggage. Acc. Cahill v. London and North Western R. C., 13 C. B., N. S., 818; S. C., 10 Id. 154; Belfast and Ballymena, &c., R. C. v. Keys, 9 H. L. Ca. 556.

(r) See Great Northern R. C. v.

Shepherd, 8 Exch. 30.

(s) Story Bailm., 5th ed., p. 525.

(t) Van Toll v. South Eastern R. C., 12 C. B., N. S., 75; Stallard v. Great Western R. C., 2 B. & S., 419, 425; Stewart v. London & N. W. R. C. 33 L. J., Ex., 199, 201.

(u) See Munster v. South Eastern R. C., 4 C. B., N. S., 676; Williams v. Great Western R. C., 10 Exch. 15 (where a bye-law unduly restricting the liability of the defendants was held bad): Great Western R. C. v. Goodman, 12 C. B. 318; Wilton v. Atlantic Royal Mail Steam Co., 10 C. B., N. S., 453, 469.

in the event of a subsequent loss of the luggage, clearly at common law be responsible for it (x). And the action, being here founded on the breach of duty—not on contract (y)—will lie at suit of a servant whose fare was paid by his master, with whom he was travelling when the loss occurred (z).

Lastly, it may be noticed, that land-carriers usually undertake, expressly or impliedly, to deliver goods (a), and cannot be said to have fulfilled their contract to carry without delivery (b). “The duty of common carriers,” remarks Wilde, C. J. (c), “by the common law is perfectly well understood; it is a warranty safely and securely to carry; whether they be guilty of negligence or not is immaterial; the warranty is broken by the non-conveyance or non-delivery of the goods intrusted to them.” Where, moreover, the company are in the habit of delivering the passengers’ luggage at the end of the journey in a particular manner, with a view to their (the passengers’) convenience—as by employing porters to carry it across the platform to the vehicles by which it is to be taken away—the company’s liability as carriers will continue until the porters have so discharged their duty (d), in the absence of proof of any agreement by the plaintiff to accept a delivery of his luggage short of the ordinary delivery, and in the absence also of proof that the porter was deputed or specially employed by the plaintiff to convey the luggage to the carriage (e).¹

(x) Great Western R. C. v. Goodman, supra.

(y) Tattan v. Great Western R. C., 29 L. J., Q. B., 184.

(z) Marshall v. York, Newcastle, and Berwick R. C., 11 C. B. 655.

(a) As to the carrier’s duty in regard to the goods if payment of the carriage be refused, see Great Western R. C. v. Crouch, 3 H. & N. 183; S. C., 2 Id. 491; Hudson v. Bazendale, 2 H. & N. 575.

(b) Per Cresswell, J., 7 C. B. 859.

(c) 7 C. B. 858.

As to the liability of the purchaser and consignee to accept goods deteriorated in transitu, see Bull v. Robison, 10 Exch. 342.

(d) Richards v. London, Brighton, and South Coast R. C., 7 C. B. 839.

(e) Butcher v. London and South Western R. C., 16 C. B. 13, where the following facts appeared in evidence:—The plaintiff, a passenger by railway, brought with him into the carriage a carpet bag, containing money, and kept

In any such case, however, some evidence of the non-performance of the defendants' contract must be given by the plaintiff (f).

Torts by third persons to chattels under bailment.

Such being a brief view of the liabilities of carriers of goods by our law, and more especially of railway companies when acting in that capacity (g), it yet remains to notice that particular subdivision of torts to personalty which comprises cases wherein a tortious act is done by a third party to goods whilst under bailment and out of the possession of their owner. Now, in very many cases, an action may be maintainable in respect of such wrongful act, either by the general owner of the goods in question or by the special owner intrusted therewith (h). Thus, a carrier may maintain trover against a stranger who takes the goods out of his possession (i); and so may a factor (k), a warehouse-it in his own possession until the arrival of the train at the London terminus. On alighting from the carriage with the bag in his hand, the plaintiff permitted a porter of the company to take it from him, for the purpose of securing for him a cab; the porter having found a cab within the company's station, placed the carpet bag on the foot-board thereof, and then returned to the platform to get some other luggage belonging to the plaintiff, when the cab disappeared, and the carpet bag and its contents were lost; the company upon these facts were held liable.

(f) Midland R. C. v. Bromley, 17 C. B. 372, following Gilbart v. Dale, 5 Ad. & E. 543.

(g) Although it would be irrelevant to the plan and subject-matter of the present section to inquire respecting the liabilities attaching to railway companies as passenger carriers, the reader may properly be referred for a view of the law upon this subject to Story Bailm., 5th ed., pp. 608-623; Great Northern R. C. v. Hawcroft, 21 L. J., Q. B., 178; Hutchinson v. York, Newcastle and Berwick R. C., 6 Rail. Cas. 580; Benett v. Peninsular and Oriental Steam Boat Co., 6 C. B. 775; Perren v. Monmouthshire R. and C. C., 11 C. B. 855; Great Northern R. C. v. Harrison, 10 Exch. 376; and cases cited supra, in notes.

In Denton v. Great Northern R. C., 5 E. & B. 868, Crompton, J., observes, "A public carrier of goods must carry according to his public profession; I think, however, that there has been no decision that carriers of passengers are under the same obligation."

(h) Per Lord Loughborough, C. J., 1 H. Bl. 85; per Lawrence, J., 8 T. R. 334; per Grose, J., 7 T. R. 12; 2 Wms. Saund. 47 e.

(i) Per Lord Ellenborough, C. J., Martini v. Coles, 1 M. & S. 147; Arnold v. Jefferson, 1 Ld. Raym. 275, 276; 1 Roll. Abr. 4 (1.), pl. 1.

(k) Williams v. Millington, 1 H. Bl. 85.

keeper (l), or an auctioneer (m); and a trustee (n), pawnee (o), licensee (p), or gratuitous bailee (q), may respectively sue for a tort to the chattel held in trust or on bailment; and, in any such case as above specified, the owner of the goods might, it is conceived, under ordinary circumstances, also sue.

It is, moreover, as remarked by Parke, B. (r), "an ancient rule of law, that, if goods are taken from the bailee, either the bailor or bailee may maintain trespass and recover damages for the taking." So, a mere gratuitous permission to a third person to use a chattel, does not, in legal contemplation, take it out of the possession of the owner; and accordingly either the owner may maintain trespass for an injury done to it whilst so used (s), or the gratuitous bailee may sue (t). And where there is an injury to the reversion, as in the case of a horse let on hire, and killed by defendant's violent driving, although trespass lies at suit of the party in possession, the owner may have an action on the case for the injury to his reversion (u). To entitle the reversioner to sue for an injury to a chattel, such injury must, however, have been permanent in its nature (x).

Trover, however, being founded on the right, as well to the possession of, as to the property in, goods (y), will not in (l) Per Lord Ellenborough, C. J., 1 M. & S. 147.

(m) Williams v. Millington, 1 H. Bl. 81, 84; Robinson v. Rutter, 24 L. J., Q. B., 250.

(n) 2 Wms. Saund. 47 b, n.

(o) Com. Dig. "Trespass," (B. 4).

(p) Northam v. Bowden, 11 Exch. 70.

(q) Rooth v. Wilson, 1 B. & Ald. 59; Nicholls v. Bastard, 2 Cr. M. & R. 659; cited arg., Howorth v. Tolle-mache, 5 Scott, N. R., 332.

(r) Reg. v. Vincent, 21 L. J., M. C., 109, 111 (S. C., 2 Den. C. C. 464), citing 2 Roll. Abr. "Trespass," 551;

Davis v. Danks, 3 Exch. 435.

The right of a depositary to sue in trespass or trover is fully considered in Story Bailm., 5th ed., pp. 105, 124.

(s) Lotan v. Cross, 2 Camp. 464.

(t) Rooth v. Wilson, 1 B. & Ald. 59.

(u) Hall v. Pickard, 3 Camp. 187; Ferguson v. Cristall, 5 Bing. 305. See Harrison v. Parker, 6 East, 154; Lade v. Shepherd, 2 Str. 1004.

(x) Mears v. London and South Western R. C., 11 C. B., N. S., 850.

(y) Ante, p. 791. See Northam v. Bowden, 11 Exch. 70.

Trover will not lie for fixtures whilst attached to the freehold: ante, p. 126.

general lie, at suit of the owner, for chattels which have been let to hire or demised for an unexpired term (z); although there are cases showing, that, where goods are bailed and the bailment is determined by the tortious act of the bailee—as by selling the goods—the property therein reverts at once to the bailor, so that he will be entitled to recover the goods or their value in trover, even from a bond fide purchaser (a), otherwise than in market overt.

It does not seem necessary here any further to advert to torts committed to chattel property out of the actual possession of its owner; and on the assumption that enough has been said in the present section to indicate a classification, characterised by simplicity and practical utility, of Wrongs to Personalty, I will proceed, in the ensuing chapter, to inquire as to another leading class of Torts, differing somewhat materially from either of those classes which have hitherto been noticed.

(z) Gordon v. Harper, 7 T. R. 9; Bloxam v. Sanders, 4 B. & C. 941; Milgate v. Kebble, 3 Scott, N. R., 358; cited and distinguished Chinery v. Viall, 5 H. & N. 294; Pain v. Whitaker, 1 R. & M. 99. See Farrant v.

Thompson, 5 B. & Ald. 826, 828.

(a) Bryant v. Wardell, 2 Exch. 479, 482, following Cooper v. Willomatt, 1 C. B. 672; Fenn v. Bittleston, 7 Exch. 152; Judgm., Chinery v. Viall, 5 H. & N. 293.

CHAPTER IV.

TORTS—NOT DIRECTLY AFFECTING THE PERSON OR PROPERTY.

THUS far in the present Book I have spoken merely of Torts to the Person and to Property:—under the former title being included bodily injuries, whether direct or consequential, injuries to the health or comfort of an individual, wrongs which affect personal liberty; under the latter of the two heads just specified being comprised torts to realty,—whether in possession or reversion,—and to chattels. There is yet a third class of torts demanding notice, within which arrange themselves such wrongs as do not directly affect either the person or the property of the party injured. True it is, that, in some sense, almost any wrongful act which could be named may be said to operate injuriously either on the person or on the property of him aggrieved; but, nevertheless, an intelligible line may be drawn between cases wherein it so operates directly, and those in which it so operates indirectly. For instance, if A. is induced to take B. into his service, in consequence of a false character respecting him fraudulently communicated by C., and B. afterwards is guilty of the crime of embezzling his master's property, it cannot be said that A. is directly—though he certainly is indirectly—damaged by the fraud of C.; such a case would obviously bring itself within that third and last class of torts, as to which I now propose very briefly to inquire. It consists of two kinds or species of wrongs, which are clearly distinguishable from each other,—wrongs done to the absolute and wrongs done to the relative rights of individuals. The instance just given would serve to exemplify

Torts to absolute or relative rights.

the former of these two subdivisions of the subject. The principle of the particular case specified falls indeed within the general proposition mentioned at a former page (a), that if A. fraudulently makes a representation which is false, and which he knows to be false, to B., meaning that B. shall act upon it; and B., believing it to be true, does act upon it and thereby sustains damage, A. will be liable at suit of B., in an action on the case (b); for, although fraud without damage or damage without fraud may give no cause of action, yet "where these two do concur," "there an action lieth" (c). "A mere lie," indeed, "thrown out at random without any intention of hurting anybody, but which some person was foolish enough to act upon," will not support an action of deceit, "for the quo animo is a great part of the gist of the action" (d).

Estoppel in pais.

In connection with torts involving misrepresentation and fraud, the doctrine of estoppel in pais is very frequently brought into operation (e). The rule applicable in such cases has been thus laid down (f),—"that where one, by his words

(a) Ante, pp. 665 et seq.; 671.

(b) See Milne v. Marwood, 15 C. B. 778; Judgm., 16 Q. B. 679; Behn v. Kemble, 7 C. B., N. S., 260; Clarke v. Dickson, 6 C. B., N. S., 453; Scott v. Dickson, 29 L. J., Ex., 62 n.

As showing that the scienter must be alleged and proved to support an action ex delicto for misrepresentation, see particularly Childers v. Wooler, 2 E. & E. 287, and cases there cited; Cronshaw v. Chapman, 7 H. & N. 911.

(c) Per Croke, J., 3 Bul. 95; cited per Buller, J., Pasley v. Freeman, 3 T. R. 56; Cullen v. Thomson's Trustees, 4 Macq. H. L. Ca. 424, 439; Imperial Gas Light, &c., Co. v. London Gas Light Co., 10 Exch. 39.

"Fraud gives a cause of action if it leads to any sort of damage. It avoids contracts only where it is the ground of contract, and where, unless it had been employed, the contract would never have been made:" per Lord Wensleydale, 30 L. J., Chanc., 61.

(d) Per Ashhurst, J., 3 T. R. 63.

(e) "There is a distinction between estoppel by matter of record or deed and by matter in pais; in the latter case it arises on the evidence itself, and need not be pleaded; in the other it must be pleaded, if there be an opportunity:" per Wightman, J., Ashpitel v. Bryan, 3 B. & S. 489.

(f) Judgm., Pickard v. Sears, 6 Ad. & E. 474, cited Judgm., Nickells v. Atherstone, 10 Q. B. 949; per Erle, C. J., White, app., Greenish, resp., 11 C. B., N. S., 229. In Gregg v. Wells, 10 Ad. & E. 97-8, Lord Denman, C. J., lays down the rule in these words—"that a party who negligently or culpably or conduct, wilfully causes another to believe the existence of a certain state of things, and induces him to act on that belief so as to alter his own previous position, the former is concluded from averring against the latter a different state of things as existing at the same time." By the term "wilfully," above used, "we must understand, if not that the party represents that to be true which he knows to be untrue, at least that he means his representation to be acted upon, and that it is acted upon accordingly; and if, whatever a man's real intention may be, he so conducts himself that a reasonable man would take the representation to be true, and believe that it was meant that he should act upon it, and did act upon it as true, the party making the representation would be equally precluded from contesting its truth; and conduct, by negligence or omission, where there is a duty cast upon a person by usage of trade or otherwise to disclose the truth, may often have the same effect" (g).

stands by and allows another to contract on the faith and understanding of a fact which he can contradict, cannot afterwards dispute that fact in an action against the person whom he has himself assisted in deceiving." The rule as there laid down is too broadly stated: per Lord Cranworth, C., Jorden v. Money, 5 H. L. Ca. 214.

See Davies v. Marshall, 10 C. B., N. S., 697; Ashpitel v. Bryan, 3 B. & S. 474; Cave v. Mills, 7 H. & N. 913.

(g) Judgm., Freeman v. Cooke, 2 Exch. 663 (which is a leading case with reference to the doctrine of estoppel in pais); Jorden v. Money, 5 H. L. Ca. 213, 255; per Lord Chelmsford, C., Clarke v. Hart, 6 H. L. Ca. 655-6; per Crompton, J., Howard v. Hudson, 2 E. & B. 13. "The word wilfully in the rule as laid down in Pickard v.

Sears (6 Ad. & E. 469) means nothing more than voluntarily:" per Pollock, C. B., Cornish v. Abington, 4 H. & N. 555, which recognises the doctrine in Freeman v. Cooke, supra. See further as to the above doctrine, Cannam v. Farmer, 3 Exch. 698; Liverpool Adelphi Loan Ass. v. Fairhurst, 9 Exch. 422; cited Wright v. Leonard, 11 C. B., N. S., 258; Waller v. Drakeford, 1 E. & B. 749; per Cockburn, C. J., Ferrand v. Bischoffsheim, 4 C. B., N. S., 117; per Maule, J., Blyth v. Dennett, 13 C. B. 181; Trickett v. Tomlinson, 13 C. B., N. S., 663; Morgan v. Couchman, 14 C. B. 100; Price v. Groom, 2 Exch. 542; Foster v. Mentor Life Ass. Co., 3 E. & B. 48, 64, 66, 75, 79; Bowes v. Foster, 2 H. & N. 779; Tyerman v. Smith, 6 E. & B. 719; Harrup, app., Bayley, resp., Id. 218; Andrews v. Elliott, 5 E. & B.

The doctrine, thus enunciated (h), should cautiously be restricted within its legitimate limits as above defined; for what is termed an estoppel by act or representation, has the effect of concluding the party who did the act or made the representation (i), and of shutting out the truth: it is therefore "odious," and must be strictly made out (k). In Swan v. The North British Australasian Company (l) the applicability of the doctrine of estoppel was under the following circumstances much discussed:—

The plaintiff, the registered owner of 1000 shares in a Joint Stock Company in which the shares could only be transferred by deed executed by both transferor and transferee, employed a broker to sell for him some shares in another company which also were transferrable by deed only. The broker represented to the plaintiff that it was necessary for him to execute ten blank forms of transfer. The plaintiff accordingly signed, sealed, and delivered to the broker ten forms of transfer in blank to be filled up by him for the transfer of the shares in the other company. The broker used eight only of the blank forms for that purpose, and having stolen the certificates from a box deposited at a bank for safe custody, he feloniously filled up the two remaining forms as transfers, respectively of 500 of plaintiff's 1000 shares in the first-mentioned company, and having forged the attestations he delivered the transfers together with the certificates to bona fide purchasers for value, and on their being presented to the company they removed the plaintiff's name from the register of shareholders and placed thereon 502; per Williams, J., Simpson v. Acc. Death Ins. Co., 2 C. B., N. S., 289.

See Prince of Wales Ass. Co. v. Harding, E. B. & E. 183; Levy v. Hale, 29 L. J., C. P., 127.

(h) See, per Jervis, C. J., Lewis v. Olifton, 14 C. B., 254; and in Lee v. Bayes, 18 C. B. 608.

(i) Secus as to a stranger, see Richards v. Johnston, 4 H. & N. 660, 664, citing per Bayley, J., Heane v. Rogers, 9 B. & C. 586.

(k) Per Lord Campbell, C. J., Howard v. Hudson, 2 E. & B. 10.

(l) 2 H. & C. 175; S. C., 7 H. & N. 603; Ex parte Swan, 7 C. B., N. S., 400.

the names of the purchasers. It was held that the transfers were void, and that the plaintiff was not estopped by his negligence from insisting that the property in the shares did not pass under them. "To bring a case," remarked Cockburn, C. J., "within the principle established by the decisions in Pickard v. Sears and Freeman v. Cooke, it is, in my opinion, essentially necessary that the representation or conduct complained of, whether active or passive in its character, should have been intended to bring about the result whereby loss has arisen to the other party or his position has been altered. Here, nothing can have been further from the intention of the plaintiff than that the deed signed by him should be used for the purpose of transferring these shares or that the name of another person should be substituted for his on the register." Further with reference to the argument founded on estoppel by reason of the plaintiff's negligence the Lord Chief Justice observed that, "negligence alone, although it may have afforded an opportunity for the perpetration of a forgery by means of which another party has been damnified, is not of itself a ground of estoppel. The rule relating to negotiable instruments stands on peculiar grounds. The law relating to these instruments is part of the law merchant, which, in order that the negotiability of such instruments which is of the very essence of their commercial utility shall not be impaired, establishes that if a man once puts his name to such an instrument he shall be liable to a bond fide owner without notice in respect of what may be added to give effect or negotiability to the instrument notwithstanding this may be done in the absence of authority or even for the purposes of fraud" (m).

To the class of torts to the absolute rights of individuals—though not directly affecting the person or property—are referable a vast variety of cases, whereof many, especially such as involve fraud or malice, have been already sufficiently discussed (n). It is indeed generally true, that as injuries are multiplied, so must new remedies be devised to meet them, —as torts of a kind previously unknown spring into existence, so must the flexible power of law exert itself to compensate the injured party—to mulct and punish the wrong-doer. The leading rule here applicable being, that where a case is new in its principle, there it is necessary to have recourse to legislative interposition in order to remedy the grievance; but where the case is only new in the instance, and the sole question is upon the application of a principle recognised in the law to such new case, it will be just as competent to Courts of Justice to apply the principle to any case which may arise two centuries hence as it was two centuries ago. If it were not, we ought to blot out of our law books one fourth part of the cases that are to be found in them (o).

(m) Et vide, ante, pp. 461, 462.

Torts belonging to the class here more particularly under our notice being thus multifarious, to the instances already given of them I will merely add, that negligence, when productive of damage, is clearly actionable; and where an attorney has been proved guilty of crassa negligentia (p) in the management of business confided to him, he will at all events be liable to nominal damages at suit of his client, the action being here founded upon a breach of contract or neglect of a duty which the law imposes (q).

(n) Ante, pp. 667, 672, 725, et seq.

(o) Per Buller, J., 3 T. B. 63.

(p) Purves v. Landell, 12 Cl. & F. 91; Cox v. Leech, 1 C. B., N. S., 617; Long v. Orsi, 18 C. B. 610; Chapman v. Van Toll, Van Toll v. Chapman, 8 E. & B. 396; Parker v. Rolls, 14 C. B. 691; Lewis v. Collard, Id. 208; Hunter v. Caldwell, 10 Q. B. 69; per Taunton, J., Doorman v. Jenkins, 2 Ad. & E. 256; Watts v. Porter, 3 E. & B. 743; Cooper v. Stephenson, 22 L. J., Q. B., 292;

Hawkins v. Harwood, 4 Exch. 503; per Tindal, C. J., Godefroy v. Dalton, 6 Bing. 467-8. See North Western R. C. v. Sharp, 10 Exch. 451; Broom's Prac., vol. 1, pp. 106-111.

As to the liability of a valuer of ecclesiastical property for ignorance and want of skill, see Jenkins v. Betham, 15 C. B. 168.

(q) Per Tindal, C. J., Godefroy v. Jay, 7 Bing. 419; see Fray v. Voules, 1 E. & E. 839; Chown v. Parrott, 14 C. B., N. S., 79.

In connection with this part of the subject we must further bear in mind, that a master may be civilly responsible as well for the fraud as for the negligence of his servant whilst acting in the course of his employment (r), albeit he is not thus liable for the tortious act of his agent in any matter beyond the scope of his agency, unless he has expressly authorised the act in question to be done or has subsequently adopted it for his own use and benefit (s).

Dismissing with these brief remarks the important and comprehensive class of wrongs done to absolute rights, let us, in the next place, consider what is meant by torts affecting the relative rights of individuals. Relative rights are such “as are incident to persons considered as members of society, and connected to each other by various ties and relations” (t). Torts to such rights include, therefore, injuries done to persons under the four following relations:—of husband and wife; of parent and child; of guardian and ward (u); of master and servant.

Torts to relative rights.

For the abduction of the wife, or for an assault committed upon her per quod consortium amisit, the husband is allowed a civil remedy by our law (x). Of a declaration for the former of these two causes of action, which is not of very common occurrence, a precedent offers itself in Norris v. Seed (y), where the plaintiff sued in trespass for assaulting, ill-treating, and carrying away his wife, whereby he was deprived of her company and assistance. “The gist of the action,” observed Parke, B., in this case, “being the loss of the comfort and

Husband and wife.

(r) Ante, pp. 681 et seq. See Steel v. South Eastern R. C., 16 C. B. 550; Ranger v. Great Western R. C., 5 H. L. Ca. 72; Udell v. Atherton, cited ante, p. 341.

(s) Coleman v. Riches, 16 C. B. 104; Story on Agency, 4th ed., p. 622.

(t) 3 Bla. Com., p. 138.

(u) For full information respecting the relation of guardian and ward, the reader is referred to Mr. Warren's Abridgm. of Blackstone, Chap. 33; Kent, Com., 10th ed., vol. 2, pp. 244 et seq.

(x) An action for criminal conversation is no longer maintainable, 20 & 21 Vict., c. 85, s. 59.

(y) 3 Exch. 782; Young v. Pridd, Cro. Car. 89.

society, an assault which did not end in the loss to the plaintiff of the comfort and society of his wife would not support an action. It is only such an assault and conduct on the part of the defendant as deprives the plaintiff of the power of associating with his wife as would support the action," i.e., as would support an action brought at suit of the husband to recover for the special damage sustained by him. If, indeed, the wife be assaulted, maliciously prosecuted, illegally imprisoned, or otherwise personally injured (z) by a third party, our law in general (a) gives an appropriate remedy to recover damages in the names of the husband and wife jointly; whereas, if the beating be so great, or the injury sustained by the wife be such that the husband can allege and prove that thereby consortium amisit, he will be entitled to a separate remedy against the wrong-doer in his own name (b). And now the 40th section (c) of the C. L. Proc. Act, 1852, provides, that, in any action brought by a man and his wife for an injury done to the wife, in respect of which she is necessarily joined as co-plaintiff, it shall be lawful for the husband to add thereto claims in his own right.

Parent and child.

The foundation of the action at suit of a parent for seduction of his child has been uniformly placed, from the earliest times, not upon the seduction itself, which is the wrongful act of the defendant, but upon the loss of service of the daughter, in which service the parent is supposed to have a legal right or interest. It has therefore always been held, that some loss of service must be alleged in the declaration and proved at the trial, in order that the plaintiff may be legally entitled to redress (d). It cannot be denied that this (z) See Smith v. Hixon, 2 Str. 997; Scysson, Cro. Jac. 538.

Dalby v. Dorthall, Cro. Car. 558. (c) Cited ante, p. 141.

(a) See Longmeid v. Holliday, 6 Exch. 761, cited ante, p. 668. (d) Grinnell v. Wells, 7 M. & Gr. 1033, 1041, and cases there cited; state of the law occasionally operates most harshly; for where it appears in evidence that the plaintiff's daughter was, at the time of the occurrence complained of, in the service of another, without any animus revertendi, although that other were the seducer himself, the action will not be maintainable (e). Aware of the hardship and lack of justice thus entailed, and with a view to averting it, when that may be done consistently with acknowledged legal principles, our Courts grasp willingly at any, the slightest, proofs of loss of service which may be adduced to support a declaration framed for the injury alluded to, and to establish the existence of the relation of master and servant as between the parent and child, upon which the maintenance of the action for seduction, in truth, depends (f). Assuming, however, that this foundation for the action is laid, the plaintiff is permitted in it to recover damages ultra the mere loss of service for the injury inflicted on him (g).

(b) 3 Bla. Com. 140; Hyde v. Eager v. Grimwood, 1 Exch. 61.

Precisely on the same footing with the right of action for seduction stands that brought by a parent for a personal injury to his child (h)—or by a master for the battery of his servant

Master and servant

(e) Thompson v. Ross, 5 H. & N. 16; Manley v. Field, 29 L. J., C. P., 29; Blaymire v. Haley, 6 M. & W. 55; Davies v. Williams, 10 Q. B. 725; Rist v. Faux, 32 L. J., Q. B., 386; Harris v. Butler, 2 M. & W. 539; per Parke, B., Id., 542 (explaining Speight v. Olivier, 2 Stark. N. P. C. 493); Dean v. Peel, 5 East, 45.

(f) Griffiths v. Teetgen, 15 C. B. 344, following Speight v. Olivier, supra; Bennett v. Allcott, 2 T. R. 166; Torrence v. Gibbins, 5 Q. B. 297; Holloway v. Abell, 7 Car. & P. 528; Rist v. Faux, supra.

The action for seduction—either in trespass or case—lies without proof of special damage. See Woodward v. Walton, 2 N. B. 476; Ditcham v.

Bond, 2 M. & S. 436; Chamberlain v. Hazlewood, 5 M. & W. 515, 516-7.

(g) Per Lord Ellenborough, C. J., Irwin v. Dearman, 11 East, 24; per Lord Abinger, C. B., Howard v. Crowther, 8 M. & W. 603.

(h) Per Tindal, C. J., 7 M. & Gr. 1041 (citing Russell v. Corne, 2 Ld. Raym. 1031, and Gray v. Jefferies, Cro. Eliz. 55); Hall v. Hollander, 4 B. & C. 633; Dixon v. Bell, 5 M. & S. 198. See Newton v. Holford, 6 Q. B. 921.

As to trespass for the abduction of a child, see 3 Bla. Com., p. 141; Barham v. Dennis, Cro. Eliz. 769 (cited 4 B. & C. 662); Arg., 5 M. & W. 516; Gilbert v. Schwenck, 14 M. & W. 488; Lumley v. Gye, 2 E. & B. 250, 257.

—per quod servitium amisit. “It is the invasion of the legal right of the master to the services of his servant that gives him the right of action for beating his servant” (i). And “if,” as we further read in Robert Marys’s case (k), “my servant is beat, the master shall not have an action for this battery unless the battery is so great, that, by reason thereof, he loses the service of his servant, but the servant himself, for every small battery, shall have an action; and the reason of the difference is, that the master has not any damage by the personal beating of his servant,” but by reason only of its consequences, viz., the loss of service; “for be the battery greater or less, if the master doth not lose the service of his servant, he shall not have an action” (l).

Another species of injury incident to the relation between master and servant may here properly be noticed. It consists in the wrongfully and maliciously or with notice interrupting this relation, by procuring the servant to depart from the master’s service or by harbouring and keeping him as servant after he has quitted it, and during the time stipulated for as the period of service, whereby the master is injured. Whoever thus entices away the servant of another commits a wrongful act, for which he is responsible at law (m). Nor does the principle here stated seem to be limited in its applicability to the case of menial servants, to which the Statute of Labourers (25 Edw. 3, st. 1) relates. It has been held to extend to the case of persons who have contracted for personal service for a time, and who, during such period, have been wrongfully procured and incited to abandon such

(i) Ante, p. 837, n. (h).

(k) 9 Rep. 113 a, cited Judgm., 3 C. B. 91-2; Martinez v. Gerber, 3 M. & Gr. 88.

(l) As to the measure of damages in the action by a master founded on loss of service, see, per Lord Tenterden, C. J., Hall v. Hollander, 4 B. & C. 663; Hodsoll v. Stallebrass, 11 Ad. & E. 301.

(m) Per Crompton, J., Lumley v. Gye, 2 E. & B. 224; per Lord Kenny, C. J., Nichol v. Martyn, 2 Esp. 734; per Cockburn, C. J., 6 C. B., N. S., 385.

service, to the loss of the persons whom they have contracted to serve (n). For this injury, the remedy is by a special action on the case against the wrong-doer, though the master may also have an action against the servant for non-performance of his agreement (o).

(n) Per Wightman, J., 2 E. & B. 240. But no action lies for enticing away an apprentice, unless serving under a valid contract of apprenticeship: Cox v. Muncey, 6 C. B., N. S., 375.

(o) 3 Bla. Com., p. 142.

As to the measure of damages in an action for enticing away the servant of another, see Gunter v. Astor, 4 Moore, 12.

CHAPTER V.

THE MEASURE OF DAMAGES—IN ACTIONS OF TORT.

THE damages recoverable in an action ex delicto are in general regarded by our law as purely compensatory, although a wider latitude is necessarily allowed to the jury assessing them than in actions of contract (a).

The principle above stated may thus be illustrated:—In trespass, for cutting into the plaintiff's close, and carrying away his soil, the plaintiff is entitled, by way of compensation, to what the land was worth to him (b). So, in trespass for taking goods, the measure of damages is the value of the goods (c). In trover, the damages are ordinarily to be measured by the value of the thing converted (d); and where the plaintiffs sued in trover for a bill of exchange for 1600*l.*, deposited by them with the defendant, and it appeared that the defendant had been guilty of a conversion of the bill, and had afterwards raised 800*l.* by discounting it, the plaintiffs were held entitled to a verdict for 1600*l.*; for the defendant "converted the whole bill, and the plaintiffs are entitled to recover

(a) "In the case of wrongs not founded on contract the damages are entirely a question for the jury, who may consider the injury to the feelings, and many other matters which have no place in questions of contract. In actions for breaches of contract the damages must be such as are capable of being appreciated or estimated:" Judgm., Hamlin v. Great Northern R. C., 1 H. & N. 410. See Denton v. Great Northern R. C., 5 E. & B. 860.

(b) Jones v. Gooday, 8 M. & W. 146. See Thompson v. Pettitt, 10 Q. B. 101.

(c) Per Bramwell, B., Keen v. Priest, 4 H. & N. 242.

(d) Per Patteson, J., Finch v. Blount, 7 Car. & P. 478, and in Cook v. Hartle, 8 Id. 568; Watson v. McLean, E. B. & E. 75; Reid v. Fairbanks, 13 C. B. 692. See Moon v. Raphael, 2 Bing. N. C. 310.

the value of the whole at the time of the conversion" (e). The rule, indeed, just stated as ordinarily applicable in trover is not absolute: for instance, when a defendant, after having been guilty of an act of conversion, delivers the goods back to the plaintiff, the actual damage sustained, and not the value, is the measure of damages. So, where a man has temporary possession of a chattel, the ownership being in another, the bailee can recover only the real damage sustained by him in being deprived of the possession (f). Again,—the value of a chattel sued for in trover may, in some cases, be properly estimated and determined by applying the legal maxim, Omnia præsumuntur contra spoliatorem (g). In case against the sheriff for taking an insufficient replevin bond, the reasonable measure of damages is the amount of rent distrained for, together with the expenses of the distress (h). In an action against the sheriff for an escape, the damages should be assessed by reference to "the value of the custody of the debtor at the moment of the escape," although, if the plaintiff has done anything to aggravate the loss occasioned by the sheriff's neglect, or has prevented him from retaking the debtor, the amount recoverable would be materially affected by such conduct (i). So, in an action against an attorney for negligence, damages should be awarded commensurate with the loss sustained (k). And in a class of cases already noticed, for a mere breach of duty, nominal damages will be recoverable (l).

(e) Alsager v. Close, 10 M. & W. 576, 584.

(f) Judgm., Chinery v. Viall, 5 H. & N. 295; cited and distinguished in Attack v. Bramwell, 3 B. & S. 527-9; Johnson v. Stear, 15 C. B., N. S., 330.

(g) Armory v. Delamirie, 1 Str. 505; Leg. Max., 4th ed, p. 903.

(h) Edmonds v. Challis, 7 C. B. 413.

(i) Arden v. Goodacre, 11 C. B. 371, 375; per Byles, J., diss., Hemming v. Hale, 7 C. B., N. S., 501.

(k) Watts v. Porter, 3 E. & B. 743, 751; Workman v. Great Northern R. Co., 32 L. J., Q. B., 279.

(l) See Fray v. Voules, 1 E. & E. 839; Marzetti v. Williams, 1 B. & Ad. 415; Cahill v. Dawson, 3 C. B. N. S., 106, 120.

It is, indeed, easy to suggest a state of facts giving rise to an action ex delicto, which would at once present the true measure of damages to be awarded to the complainant, and in which no ground for aggravated damages beyond such measure would exist. Thus, in case by a reversioner for injury to his reversionary freehold interest in land, by pulling down a house erected upon it, the measure of damages would be ascertained by considering to what extent the land was lessened in value by the wrongful act of the defendant (m). In an action by a tenant against his landlord for selling goods under a lawful distress, but without having them properly appraised, the measure of damages would be the real value of the goods sold, minus the rent due (n). And, generally, where an injury is done to land or goods, the compensation to be awarded should be proportioned to the amount of the plaintiff's interest therein (o).

But although, as remarked by Lord Denman, C. J. (p), "it is important to uphold the principle, that a plaintiff is entitled to recover, by way of damages, all that at the commencement of the suit he has lost through the wrongful act for which the defendant is sued," the rule here stated will often fail to guide us, with satisfactory certainty, to a determination of the measure of damages in tort. If, for example, in an action for a trespass to land and injury done by treading down the grass and herbage, the jury, in estimating damages, were to be restricted to exactly the amount of the injury

(m) Hosking v. Phillips, 3 Exch. 168; per Jervis, C. J., Battleskill v. Reed, 18 C. B. 713.

(n) Knight v. Egerton, 7 Exch. 407.

As to the damages recoverable for an illegal or irregular distress, see Keen v. Priest, 4 H. & N. 236, and cases there cited; Attack v. Bramwell, 3 B. & S. 520; Bennett v. Bayes, 5 H. & N. 391.

(o) See Twyman v. Knowles, 13 C.

B. 222; Brierley v. Kendall, 17 Q. B. 937; followed in Toms v. Wilson, 32 L. J., Q. B., 382; Turner v. Hardcastle, 11 C. B., N. S., 683; Harvey v. Pocock, 11 M. & W. 740; Prichard v. Long, 9 M. & W. 666; Badley v. Vigurs, 4 E. & B. 71; Pell v. Shearman, 10 Exch. 766; and cases cited Sedgw. Dams., 2nd ed., p. 139.

(p) Rundle v. Little, 6 Q. B. 178.

sustained by the plaintiff, it would, in effect, be placing a wrong-doer, in many cases, upon precisely the same footing as one who enters with the owner's permission ; for the lowest terms upon which the last-named party could have expected to have obtained such permission would have been, that he should make compensation for the full amount of damage that might be done to the grass ; in other words, it would be putting an unlicensed trespasser upon the same footing as one who entered with leave and license (q). So, in an action against the sheriff for wrongfully seizing the plaintiff's goods it was remarked by Alderson, B. (r), that juries have not much compassion for trespassers, and are not bound to " weigh in golden scales " how much injury a party has sustained by a trespass. And on one occasion (s), where the action was in trespass for entering the plaintiff's house, breaking his locks, and seizing his papers, &c., Pratt, C. J., thus forcibly delivered himself : " Damages," he remarked (t), " are designed not only as a satisfaction to the injured person, but likewise as a punishment to the guilty, to deter from any such proceeding for the future, and as a proof of the detestation of the jury to the action itself." At all events, without adopting literally the above expressions, there can be no doubt that, in actions for seduction (u), or malicious injuries, juries have been allowed to give exemplary, or what are sometimes called "vindictive" damages, and to take all the circumstances into their consideration (x),—a remark

(q) Per Maule, J., Williams v. Currie, 1 C. B. 847, and cases there cited.

(r) Lockley v. Pye, 8 M. & W. 135. See Gillard v. Brittan, 8 M. & W. 575 ; Warwick v. Foulkes, 12 M. & W. 507.

(s) Wilkes v. Wood, 19 How. St. Tr. 1153.

(t) Id. 1167.

(u) Tullidge v. Wade, 3 Wils. 18 ; ante, p. 836.

(x) Per Pollock, C. B., Doe v. Filiter, 13 M. & W. 51 ; Emblen v. Myers, 6 H. & N. 54 ; per Lord Tenterden, C. J., Sears v. Lyons, 2 Stark. N. P. C. 282 ; per Lord Ellenborough, C. J., Bracegirdle v. Orford, 2 M. & S. 77 ; Beardmore v. Carrington, 2 Wils. 244.

As to vindictive damages against a carrier for refusing to take plaintiff's goods, or to carry them at the ordinary which seems applicable also to any case in which the process of a Court of justice has been abused, and a gross outrage has been committed under the forms of law (y). So, if the defendant persists in continuing a nuisance erected upon land in which plaintiff has a reversionary interest, the jury may give such damages as may compel him to abate the nuisance (z). Inasmuch, moreover, as it is the peculiar province of the jury to assess the damages, the Court will not grant a new trial on the ground that the amount awarded is insufficient (a) or excessive (b), unless they are satisfied that the jury either were actuated by some improper motive or proceeded upon a wrong principle in making their assessment, or unless the amount awarded is grossly disproportioned to the injury sustained (c); for the well-known maxim is, Ad quæstionem facti non respondent iudices.

Whether damages be regarded as "a compensation and satisfaction for some injury sustained" (d), or as in their nature penal, so that they may, in certain cases, be given to punish or to deter, and not merely to compensate (e), the inquiry, how far a jury in assessing damages for a tort may properly take into account the motive and intention which actuated the wrong-doer, is one of much interest and importance. Now, it will at once strike us, that there are very many tortious acts which suffice to entitle an aggrieved party

Intention or motive of wrong-doer
—whether material in estimating damages.

rate, see Crouch v. Great Northern R. C., 11 Exch. 742, 751.

(y) Gregory v. Slowman, 1 E. & B. 360, 370; Duke of Brunswick v. Slowman, 8 C. B. 317.

(z) Battishill v. Reed, 18 C. B. 696, where the cases are collected.

(a) Howard v. Barnard, 11 C. B. 653; Apps v. Day, 14 C. B. 112; Armytage v. Haley, 4 Q. B. 917; cited and distinguished in Nichol v. Bestwick, 28 L. J., Ex., 4.

(b) Ante, p. 207; Chambers v. Caulfield, 6 East, 244. See Rollin v.

Steward, 14 C. B. 595; Beardmore v. Carrington, supra, n. (x).

(c) See Williams v. Currie, 1 C. B. 841; Chilton v. London and Croydon R. C. (Exch.), East. T., 1848, reported for another point, 16 M. & W. 212. And see the cases cited ante, p. 843 in notes.

(d) 2 Bla. Com., p. 438; ante, pp 840-842.

(e) Supra, n. (x); per Lord Camden, C. J., 2 Wils. 206, 207, 248; per Heath, J., 5 Taunt. 444.

to damages, without any reference at all being had to the motive or intent which may have prompted them ; whilst other cases will as readily suggest themselves, in which the animus, motive, or intention of the party charged constitutes an essential element in, if it be not the very gist and substance of, the charge alleged against him. It is clear, that, if a trespass be done to my land, or if my goods are illegally withheld from me, or if I sustain bodily hurt by reason of the negligence and want of due caution of another, I may maintain against him an action of trespass, trover, or on the case, to support which no evidence will be needed of any malicious motive or wrongful intention on the part of the defendant. In trespass qu. cl. fr., the defendant pleaded that he had land adjoining plaintiff's close, and upon it a hedge of thorns ; that he cut the thorns, and that they ipso invito fell upon the plaintiff's land, whereupon the defendant removed them thence as soon as possible. Upon demurrer to this plea, judgment was given for the plaintiff (f) ; for, in a civil action of this nature, " the intent is immaterial if the act done be injurious to another " (g).

We have already seen that an infant (h) or a lunatic (i) is civilly liable for his tortious act.

But, although an action ex delicto may sometimes, in strictness, be maintainable for an injury done unintentionally during the prosecution of a lawful act (k), yet, in determining the amount of damages to be awarded to a complainant, a jury will, in general, doubtless look at all the circumstances accompanying the particular act complained of, and amongst them at the apparent animus of the defendant. It seems, indeed, just and right that they should do so, inasmuch as (f) Lambert v. Bessey, Sir T. Judgm., Rogers v. Dutt. 13 Moo. P. C. Raym. 422 ; ante, p. 674. C. 236.

(g) Per Lord Kenyon, C. J., Haycraft v. Creasy, 2 East, 104. See Simmons v. Lillystone, 8 Exch. 431 ; Stead v. Anderson, 4 C. B. 806 ;

(h) Ante, p. 582.

(i) Ante, p. 675.

(k) Ante, p. 674-5.

the amount of injury for which compensation is to be given will, in some cases, be most materially affected by the motive which prompted to its commission, or by the intention with which it was done. In an action of trespass, for instance, an insulting gesture accompanying an act which, though not attended with violence, amounts in law to an assault, may greatly augment the mental anxiety and injury caused thereby; and the offensive demeanor of a defendant, or the rank and social position of a plaintiff, may properly be taken into account in fixing the damages which, in such a case, should attend the verdict (l).

Again, wherever the gist of an action ex delicto is mala fides, fraud, or deceit, it is manifest that the motive or intention of the party charged with want of good faith or with deceit is a matter peculiarly and specially for investigation before a jury. Whether particular facts do or do not in any given case furnish evidence of fraud in law, may indeed depend upon the wording of an Act of Parliament (m), or may have to be determined by applying one or other of those rules laid down in former pages (n) of this work, whereby our law sometimes judges of and ascertains the intention. Cases of the kind alluded to, however, alike serve to illustrate and sustain the proposition, that, in an action ex delicto, our law does not seldom regard as most material the intent and animus of the defendant.

Lastly, in connection with this inquiry, it will not be controverted, that, in very many rights of action founded upon tort, not involving malice or deceit, the intention wherewith (l) See Merest v. Harvey, 5 Taunt. 440; Price v. Severn, 7 Bing. 316, 319; per Bosanquet, J., James v. Campbell, 5 Car. & P. 372; per Byles, J., Bell v. Midland R. Co., 10 C. B., N. S., 308.

(m) See, per Lord Denman, C. J., Rough v. Great Western R. Co., 1 Q.

B. 60-61; per Park, J., Rawson v. Haigh, 2 Bing. 104; Thoyts v. Hobbs, 7 Exch. 810. See Hutton v. Cruttwell, 1 E. & B. 15; Young v. Ward, 8 Exch. 221 (and cases there cited); Lee v. Hart, 11 Exch. 880; Bell v. Simpson, 2 H. & N. 410.

(n) Ante, pp. 336, 725, 736.

an act was done and which gives to such act a colour and a meaning, is, like any other fact, to be determined by the jury. Let us suppose, for instance, that an action of trover or detinue is brought for a bill of exchange, and the defence is, that the bill was handed over to the defendant as a gift, the intention with which it was transferred to him would necessarily become at the trial the main, if not the sole, subject of inquiry; for a bill of exchange being a chattel, the gift would become complete "by delivery, coupled with the intention to give" (o). "To pass the property in a chattel," says Alderson, B. (p), "there must be both a gift and a delivery;" so that, where A. had possession of certain silver plate belonging to B., and B. said to A., "I will give you all the plate that is mine," but no actual delivery of the plate ever took place, the words used were held to admit of their literal signification merely, and to be indicative of a bare intention to give at some future time (q). So, again, wherever the animus revertendi or the animus cancellandi has to be inquired into, we have additional instances illustrative of what has just been said. Whenever, indeed, the intention with which an act was done becomes material, the jury will have to decide upon it; subject, of course, to the effect of such legal presumptions as may, under the circumstances of the case, apply. On a recent occasion (r), Williams, J., is reported to have said, that "no question of the intention of parties can be a question of law."

Damages are either general or special. 'General' damages are such as the law implies or presumes to have accrued from the wrong complained of (s). 'Special'

Damages—general or special.

(o) Per Parke, B., Milnes v. Dawson, 5 Exch. 948.

(p) 4 Exch. 479; ante, pp. 399, 432.

(q) Shower v. Pilch, 4 Exch. 478.

(r) Blyth v. Dennett, 22 L. J., C. P., 79, 80; S. C., 13 C. B. 178.

Subject to what has been above said as to the possible effect of certain legal presumptions, &c., the remark cited in the text would, it is apprehended, hold generally true.

(s) Ante, pp. 84 et seq.; Cotterill v. Hobby, 4 B. & C. 465.

damages are such as really took place, and are not implied by law; they are either superadded to general damages arising from an act injurious in itself, or are such as arise from an act indifferent and not actionable in itself, but injurious only in its consequences (t). "It does not appear necessary to state the formal description of damages in the declaration, because presumptions of law are not in general to be pleaded or averred as facts" (t); and substantial damages may in some cases,—as in an action against a banker for not duly honouring a cheque or an acceptance of his customer (u), or for slander of a person in the way of his trade (x),—be recovered, although special damage be neither alleged nor proved.

When, however, the law does not, as of course, imply that the plaintiff sustained damage by the act complained of, it is essential to the validity of the declaration that the resulting damage should be shown with particularity (y). And when the damages sustained have not necessarily accrued from the act complained of, and consequently are not implied by law, then, in order to prevent the surprise on the defendant which might otherwise ensue on the trial, the plaintiff must in general state the particular damage which he has suffered, or he will not be permitted to give evidence of it (z).

Consequential damage recoverable, provided it be not too remote.

In an action of tort, then, damages consequential on the tortious act complained of may (provided they be not too remotely connected with it) be recovered (a). If, for in(t) 1 Chitt. Pl., 7th ed., p. 410.

(u) Rolin v. Steward, 14 C. B. 595.
See per Lord Denman, C. J., Rogers v. Spence, 13 M. & W. 581.

(x) Per Williams, J., 14 C. B. 607; ante, p. 749.

(y) 1 Chitt. Pl., 7th ed., p. 411.
See, for instance, the form of declaration in Martin v. Great Northern R. C., 16 C. B. 179.

(z) 1 Chitt. Pl., 7th ed., p. 411.

See Richardson v. Chasen, 10 Q. B. 756; Thompson v. Wood, 4 Q. B. 493.

(a) As exemplifying the above proposition, see Foxhall v. Barnett, 2 E. & B. 928; per Tindal, C. J., Corbett v. Brown, 5 Car. & P. 363; Ewbank v. Nutting, 7 C. B. 797; Bodley v. Reynolds, 8 Q. B. 779; Moon v. Ra- stance, a sheriff wrongfully seizes goods which are afterwards taken from him by another wrong-doer, the owner of the goods may recover against the sheriff, as special damage, the amount necessarily paid to the second wrong-doer, in order to get back the goods (b). The decision in this case, indeed, may clearly be supported, without in any way referring to the legal doctrine as to remoteness of damage, inasmuch as the price paid by the plaintiff to recover possession of his goods from the third party might very fairly be taken by the jury as affording a true criterion of their value (c).

As regards the question, what damage is too remote to be recoverable in an action of tort? I must, to avoid repetition, content myself with referring to the remarks made and cases cited at a former page (d), and to the substance of what has been previously said (e) touching remoteness of damage in actions ex contractu. Although the general rule as to this subject is clear,—that the damage laid in the declaration must be such as naturally flowed from the tortious act or conduct complained of (f),—yet, inasmuch as each case, phael, 2 Bing. N. C. 310; Rowlands v. Samuel, 11 Q. B. 39; Tindall v. Bell, 11 M. & W. 228.

(b) Keene v. Dilke, 4 Exch. 388. See Barrow v. Arnaud, 8 Q. B. 595.

An action will not lie against the sheriff for a false return to a writ of venditioni exponas, if the plaintiff has sustained no damage: Levy v. Hale, 29 L. J., C. P., 127.

(c) See, further, as to the criterion whereby to measure damages, Sanquer v. London and South Western R. C., 16 C. B. 163.

As to damages in trover or trespass for taking goods, see Reid v. Fairbanks, 13 C. B. 692; Martin v. Porter, 5 M. & W. 351; Wood v. Morewood, 3 Q. B. 440, n. See, also, Morgan v. Powell, Id. 278; Hutchman v. Walton, 4 M. & W. 409, 416; Wild v. Holt, 9 M. & W. 672; Thompson v. Pettit, 10 Q. B. 101; Buckland v. Johnson, 15 C. B. 145, cited ante, p. 795, n. (l).

(d) Ante, p. 93.

(e) Ante, pp. 632-637.

(f) See, as exemplifying this proposition, Barber v. Lester, 7 C. B., N. S., 175, and cases cited ante, pp. 729 et seq.; Collins v. Cuve, 4 H. & N. 225; Hoey v. Felton, 11 C. B., N. S., 142; Dixon v. Fawcus, 30 L. J., Q. B., 137; Haddan v. Lott, 15 C. B. 411; Walker v. Goe, 4 H. & N. 350; S. C., 3 Id. 395, and cases there cited; Alston v. Herring, 11 Exch. 822; Hutchinson v. Guion, 5 C. B., N. S., 155; Thompson v. Hopxer, E. B. & E. 1038; Lumley v. Gye, cited ante, p. 94; Flower v. Adam, 2 Taunt.

raising a question as to remoteness of damage ex delicto, must necessarily be decided upon its own facts or by analogy to some special precedent, the rule in question may more easily be exemplified than in specific terms be qualified or restricted (f). Not only, however, would it be incompatible with the plan of this treatise to examine thus minutely the doctrine as to remoteness, and to analyse the cases illustrating it, but it would be superfluous so to do,—the task having already been adequately performed by another and an abler hand (g).

Having now classified rights of action ex delicto, and specified the ingredients therein, it may be well to inquire in what respects a tort differs from a contract and from a crime. A moment's reflection will suggest some important points of difference between a right of action upon contract and one upon tort. A contract is founded upon consent—it requires privity, more or less immediate, between the contracting parties; in reference to it no inquiry is, in general, needed as to the motive or intention of the contractor when proved to have committed a breach of contract; the measure of damages ex contractu is, under ordinary circumstances, more or less nearly determined by the stipulations of the parties. To constitute a right of action ex delicto, on the other hand, no privity is needed, nor of course do the parties consent ad idem, for a tort is inflicted without or against the consent of 314; Powell v. Salisbury, 2 Y. & J. 391.

In Lock v. Ashton, 12 Q. B. 871, one portion of the damages claimed was held not recoverable, inasmuch as it could not in law have flowed directly from the plaintiff's act. See Fitzjohn v. Mackinder, 9 C. B., N. S., 505; S. C., 8 Id. 78; and cases there cited; the party who sustains it. In tort, moreover, the measure of damages is, in general, by no means strictly limited, nor is it capable of being indicated with precision; a wide discretion is there allowed to the jury in determining the proper amount of compensation to be awarded, whilst, in so doing, many elements are rightly deemed material which could not properly affect the verdict in an action purely of contract. Besides the important differences thus briefly pointed out, a comparison of the introductory chapters herein contained, having reference to contracts and to torts, will show, that rights of action, founded respectively thereupon, present to our view, when analysed, wholly dissimilar ingredients, and must therefore, apart from mere technical distinctions, be separately treated and considered.

Blagrove v. Bristol Waterworks Co., 1 H. & N. 369.

(f) Ante, p. 849, n. (f).

(g) Mr. Sedgwick's learned treatise on the Measure of Damages, 2nd ed., is here alluded to, of which see particularly Chaps. 3-5, 18-22. See also Mr. Mayne's Treatise on Damages, pp. 14 et seq.

But how, it may be asked, does a tort differ from a crime? To answer this question fully would, of course, necessitate the anticipation of what yet remains to be said in this volume. I would, however, observe, that a tort mainly (h) differs from a crime in this respect,—that the former is a violation of a private right, whereas the latter is a wrong done to the public.

What doubtless tends to introduce confusion and perplexity into the mind of one called upon to draw the distinctions now adverted to is, that sometimes out of the same facts may originate a right to sue in contract or in tort, or even a right to prefer a criminal indictment. Thus, a forcible entry upon land (i), or an assault, is clearly indictable,—it will as clearly give to the injured party a remedy in trespass. A libeller may, in many cases, be proceeded against either by indictment or by action; the object of the first-mentioned remedy being to punish the offence committed against the public, for every libel has a tendency to cause a breach of the peace on the part of the person libelled,—the remedy by action being with a view to compensating in damages for the injury sustained (k). Cases might, moreover, easily be put, showing that a transaction may involve a criminal, also a tortious element, and, lastly, a breach of contract; so that if the criminal element be disregarded, a valid right of action ex delicto is disclosed; and if the tortious ingredient be also rejected, a remedy ex contractu will remain to the complainant. Let us, for instance, suppose that a person fraudulently obtains goods under circumstances which would render him liable to be indicted for a misdemeanor by our law,—that he afterwards sells the goods and receives the proceeds of their sale,—here the individual who wrongfully possessed himself of the goods would be liable to an indictment for fraud or false pretences,—to trover at suit of the rightful owner for the conversion—or, lastly, to an action for money had and received, notice of the criminal or tortious ingredients in the particular transaction being waived.

(h) See Mr. Warren's Abridgment of Blackstone, p. 577.

(i) As to which, see 4 Bla. Com., p. 148; post, Chap. 2.

Without attempting just now to enter further into the inquiry before us respecting the distinction between a tort, a contract, and a crime, the following brief view of the subject may be suggested: The wisdom of ages, says Mr. J. Burroughs, has in England established and perfected a system of law called the common law; this law is adapted to the general regulation of the conduct of the subjects of the Crown as members of society; its principles, if accurately attended to, will be found all to point to that end (l):—our law, accordingly, sometimes allows the same state of facts to be regarded from totally different points of view (m); and yet, on each occasion of viewing and considering it, presents a remedy adapted to the requirements of society or of an individual, allowing the person aggrieved, within certain limits, and subject to certain restrictions, to select that particular mode of procedure which he prefers.

(k) 3 Bla. Com., p. 125.

(l) Deane v. Clayton, 7 Taunt. 496.

(m) See also ante, p. 603.

In every action ex delicto it will be found that some specific wrong or injury has been done, for which it is the object of the plaintiff to enforce compensation or to seek redress ; and “ since ” (to use the words of Sir W. Blackstone (n)) “ all wrong may be considered as merely a privation of right, the plain natural remedy for every species of wrong is the being put in possession of that right whereof the party injured is deprived ; ” this, under some circumstances, being effected by the re-delivery or restoration of the thing sued for to its legal owner,—in others, by making the sufferer a pecuniary satisfaction in damages for the injury sustained. As well, however, in the wrongful abstraction of property, as in a tortious act done to it or to its owner, ingredients may enter cognisable solely by our criminal law ; and hence it is that these Commentaries, which commenced with an examination of Legal Rights, and of the component elements of our common law, and have since been successively directed to the Law of Contracts and of Torts, will properly terminate with an inquiry as to offences against society punishable as Crimes.

(n) 3 Com., p. 116.

BOOK IV.

CRIMINAL LAW.

IN this Book I propose, in the first place, to take an introductory view of some of the elementary principles of our criminal law; and afterwards, without attempting minutely to examine each of the offences falling properly under its cognisance, I will endeavour rather so to classify and arrange them, that the study of this department of jurisprudence, when pursued in detail by reference to other treatises, may be facilitated, and a foundation laid for its complete and enduring mastery.

CHAPTER I.

CRIMINAL LAW GENERALLY—ITS ELEMENTARY PRINCIPLES.

Importance of a knowledge of our criminal law.

Ignorance of law no excuse for infringing it.

THE extreme importance of a knowledge of our criminal law will be admitted by him who reflects, however cursorily, on the well-known maxim—Ignorantia juris quod quisque scire tenetur neminem excusat,—a mistake in point of law, which every person of discretion not only may but is bound and presumed to know, affords, in criminal cases, no sort of defence (a); so that when an offender is arraigned at the bar of justice, a plea that he has mistaken the law,—however

(a) 4 Bla. Com., p. 27; Hale P. C., per Pollock, C. B., Cooper v. Simmons, chap. 6; per Bearcroft, arg., R. v. Dean 7 H. & N. 717.
of St. Asaph, 21 How. St. Tr. 942; much, if proved, it might operate in mitigation of punishment,—is one which the Court will not be at liberty to entertain (b). “The law,” as remarked by high authority, “is administered upon the principle, that every one must be taken conclusively to know it, without proof that he does know it” (c).

But, further, our criminal law, whether common or dependent upon statute, is imperative with reference to the conduct of individuals; so that, as will immediately be seen (d), if a statute forbids or commands a thing to be done, all acts or omissions contrary to the prohibition or command of the statute, are offences at common law, and ordinarily indictable as such. In support of what has been just said, and as illustrating the rule, that, whenever the law positively forbids a thing to be done, it becomes thereupon ipso facto illegal to do it (e), may be mentioned Reg. v. Woodrow (f), where it was held, under a penal statute (5 & 6 Vict. c. 93, s. 3), that a dealer in tobacco, having in his possession adulterated tobacco, although ignorant of its adulteration, is liable to the penalties imposed by that Act. It may be conceded, indeed, that laws for the protection of the revenue are, in some respects, peculiar; yet the case cited seems clearly to illustrate the proposition above stated (g).

The law speaks imperatively

The law, being thus imperative, cannot be called in question, nor be made to bend in accordance with the opinion or the will of those subjected to it. “There can be nothing

(b) Ex parte Barronet, Dears. 51; R. v. Esop, 7 Car. & P. 456; R. v. Bailey, Russ. & Ry. 4. See Reg. v. Crawshaw, Bell C. C., 303, 316.

(c) Per Tindal, C. J., delivering the opinion of the majority of the judges in M'Naghten's case, 10 Cl. & F. 210.

(d) Post, pp. 858, 862.

(e) Per Ashhurst, J., 4 T. R. 457.

(f) 15 M. & W. 404, and cases there cited.

(g) In support of which, see, also, Lee v. Simpson, 3 C. B. 871; recognised Judgm., Reade v. Conquest, 11 C. B., N. S., 492; Re Humphreys, 14 Q. B. 388; R. v. Jones, 2 B. & Ad. 611.

more dangerous," it has been observed (h), "than to allow the obligation to obey a law to depend upon the opinion entertained by individuals of its propriety,—that opinion being so liable to be influenced by interest, prejudice, and passion."

And, again, it has been said (i), that "where any act is by law defined to be illegal and criminal, every one is punishable who voluntarily does the prohibited act without some legal justification or excuse, furnished by the occasion and circumstances, and without regard to his real motive and intention. To hold that a man should be absolved from penal responsibility merely because his motives were benevolent, would be to set private opinion above the law." Our criminal law is, then, to be made to bear alike and equally on all, and must be applied, in the great majority of cases, without paying heed to any excuse founded upon ignorance of its precepts or disapproval of its provisions. All subjects and foreigners (k) within the realm are alike bound to obey the law, for the law speaks to all uno ore (l).

Our law, whether written or unwritten, being thus stringent in its requirements, let us consider the consequences which follow on an infringement of its ordinances.

Meaning of word
'crime.'

The word 'crime' is popularly understood as conveying the idea of something done in violation of law (m), and therefore, it may be presumed, exposing the 'criminal' in some sort to punishment. The technical meaning of the words just used is sometimes, however, by no means manifest.

In the Attorney-General v. Radloff (n), a discussion arose as to the significance of the term "criminal proceeding."

(h) Per Lord Campbell, 9 Cl. & F. Adm. R. 226.

324.

(l) 2 Inst. 184.

(i) Cr. L. Com., 6th Rep., p. 52.

(m) See Webst. Dict. or Johns. Dict.

(k) Ex parte Barronet, Dears. 51; ad voc.

R. v. Esop, 7 Car. & P. 456. See,

(n) 10 Exch. 84.

however, per Sir W. Scott, 1 Rob.

There an information had been filed for the recovery of penalties for smuggling, under a recent statute (8 & 9 Vict. c. 87), and the question was, whether, regard being had to the 14 & 15 Vict., c. 99, ss. 2 & 3, the defendant was a competent witness at the trial of the information on his own behalf. The statute just cited renders admissible the evidence of the parties to an action, but specially exempts from its operation "any person who in any criminal proceeding is charged with the commission of any indictable offence, or any offence punishable on summary conviction." The act of smuggling being summarily punishable, the question mainly agitated was this—Is the proceeding by information for smuggling a "criminal proceeding," so that a defendant charged with it is brought within the exceptive clause of the statute just adverted to, and is therefore inadmissible as a witness? Upon this point the Court of Exchequer was equally divided in opinion—on the one hand it was said, that smuggling is in itself an innocent act, although the requirements of the revenue necessitate the infliction of a penalty on one who violates the prohibitory enactments passed for its protection—that cannot alter the intrinsic nature of the act itself, or impress on it a criminal character. Upon this view of the meaning of the word "crime" or "criminal," the defendant would have been competent as a witness. On the other hand it was urged, that an information for a breach of the revenue laws is a "criminal proceeding,"—a proceeding instituted by the Crown for the punishment of crime—and that a very grave offence is committed against the public in preventing that from being paid which is needed for the public service, and thus cheating the State. Of the two opinions thus presented, the latter appears to be the more convincing and the more sound. And the Court of Queen's Bench would seem to have tacitly adopted it in a more recent case (o), likewise decided upon the statute 14 & 15 Vict., c. 99. There a person was charged at petty sessions with illegally snaring game, the information being laid under a statute (1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 32) which makes the offence in question punishable by fine, and, in default of payment, by imprisonment. The question raised was, whether the proceeding for this offence was a criminal proceeding within the statute of Victoria, so that the defendant was not admissible as a witness in his own favour, or compellable to give evidence upon it. This question was answered by the Court of Queen's Bench in the affirmative. There is one thing said Erle, J. (p), strongly indicative that this is a crime, for, upon conviction, the offender may be ordered to pay a fine, and, in default of payment, may be imprisoned with hard labour; that punishment is one appropriate to a proceeding for a 'crime,' not to any civil proceeding; and Crompton, J., suggested that one test for deciding the question raised was this—to see "whether the fine is a debt or a punishment;" observing, that under the Act it seemed to be meant as a punishment.

Further, in regard to the legal meaning of the word "crime," the following case may be suggested:—"Public policy has, for the protection of the Bank of England against forgery, rendered it criminal to make paper bearing the same water-mark as Bank of England notes (q). The making of such paper is in itself an indifferent act, but, inasmuch as it may afford facilities for forgery, the Legislature has on that account prohibited the act" (r); that is to say, an act in itself indifferent may have impressed upon it a criminal character by force and virtue of the Statute Law. If this be so, it is evident that any correct technical definition of the word "crime" ought to include and be appropriate in a case

(p) See 27 L. J., M. C., 170; E. B. 14.
& E. 99. See, also, Reg. v. Berry,
Bell, C. C. 46.

(r) Per Pollock, C. B., Atkyns v. Kinnier, 4 Exch. 782.

(q) See, now, 24 & 25 Vict. c. 98, s.

like that just put, where nothing malum in se is involved in the act done. It is indisputable, on the one hand, that the quality of an act may be flagitious, and yet the act itself may be dispunishable (s); and, on the other hand, that an individual, impelled to an act by the purest motives, may, nevertheless, in doing it, violate the law, and render himself amenable to its censures (t).

Under the denomination of crimes are, by our law, comprised offences of a public nature, i.e., such acts or attempts as tend to the prejudice of the community (u). "There can be no doubt," says Serjt. Hawkins (x), "but that all capital crimes whatsoever, and also all kinds of inferior crimes of a public nature, as misprisions (y), and all other contempts, all disturbances of the peace, all oppressions, and all other misdeemeanors (z) whatsoever of a public evil example against the common law, may be indicted,—but no injuries of a private nature, unless they some way concern the king." "Also," he adds, "it seems to be a good general ground, that, wherever a statute prohibits a matter of public grievance to the liberties and security of a subject, or commands a matter of public convenience, as the repairing of the common streets of a town, an offender against such statute is punishable not only at the suit of the party aggrieved, but also by way of indictment for his contempt of the statute (a), unless such method of proceeding do manifestly appear to be excluded by it."

A crime is an offence of a public nature.

(s) "Human laws are made, not to punish sin, but to prevent crime and mischief:" per Pollock, C. B., Att.-Gen. v. Sillem, 2 H. & C. 526.

(t) See, for instance, Reg. v. Sharpe, Dears. & B. 160. Et vide, Reg. v. Feist, Dears. & B. 590.

(u) See, per Lawrence, J., 2 East, 21.

(x) Haw. Pl. Cr., Book 2, Chap. 25, s. 4.

(y) 'Misprision' "properly signifieth neglect or contempt," but in law is applied more particularly "when one knoweth of any treason or felony, and concealeth it:" 2 Inst. 36. "The word 'misprision' in its larger sense is used to signify every considerable misdemeanor which has not a certain name given to it in the law:" 1 Russ. Cr., 3rd ed., p. 45.

(z) The distinction between a felony and a misdemeanor is pointed out post, pp. 881 et seq.

(a) Reg. v. Buchanan, 8 Q. B. 883.

The case of Rea v. Wheatley (b) is useful for reference, where difficulty occurs in distinguishing between indictable offences and wrongs remediable by action, and as exhibiting clearly the test in such cases applicable. There the defendant was indicted for knowingly, fraudulently, and with intention to deceive the prosecutor, selling him beer short of the just measure. After a verdict of guilty, the defendant's counsel moved in arrest of judgment, on the ground that the fact charged against the defendant was, in truth, nothing more than a mere breach of a civil contract, not an indictable offence ; and of this opinion was the Court,—Lord Mansfield, C. J., observing, that the alleged offence was, in truth, only “an inconvenience and injury to a private person,” against which he might have guarded by due caution. “The selling an unsound horse as and for a sound one is not indictable, the buyer should be more upon his guard :” the offence that is indictable must be such an one as concerns the public.

But though difficulty sometimes presents itself in determining whether or not a particular act is indictable, it has been already sufficiently shown (c), that an indictment will only lie for some wrong common to all the subjects of the Crown,—common, in this sense, that it affects them all, not of necessity equally, but in some degree. The distinction of public wrongs from private,—of crimes from civil injuries,—seems principally to consist in this, that private wrongs “are an infringement or privation of the civil rights which belong to individuals, considered merely as individuals,” whilst public wrongs or crimes “are a breach and violation of the public rights and duties due to the whole community, considered as a community, in its social aggregate capacity” (d). Treason, murder, and robbery, are properly ranked amongst

(b) 2 Burr. 1125 ; R. v. Dunnage, Id. 1130 ; and cases cited post, Chap. 3, s. 2, as illustrating the nature of fraud indictable at common law or by statute.

(c) Ante, pp. 96-100 ; R. v. Richards, 8 T. R. 634.

(d) 4 Bla. Com., p. 5.

crimes, since, besides the injury involved in them to individuals, they strike at the very being of society, which cannot possibly subsist where acts of this sort are suffered to escape with impunity (e). Many inferior offences, also, of a public nature are indictable. And it is material to observe, that a crime will be deemed of a public nature, not merely where it causes some hurt, damage, or inconvenience to the public, but also where it is "of a public evil example" (f). Thus, it is an indictable offence for a parent who has the means of supporting her child (g) to neglect to provide sufficient food or necessaries for it (h), whilst of very tender years and unable to take care of itself (i). It is at common law indictable knowingly to take a glandered horse into a market, fair, or other place of public resort, to the danger of the liege subjects of the Crown (k), the doing so being now, moreover, a statutory offence by virtue of various enactments from time to time continued (l). It is by the common law of England a nuisance and an indictable offence, to manufacture, or to keep in large quantities, gunpowder, or any other explosive and inflammable material in a town or closely inhabited place (m). And any outrage upon public decency (n), as well as against the public peace, will be indictable.

Bearing in mind what has been just said, we may conclude that, in general, a 'crime' consists in some act or combination of acts involving a violation of some right or an attempt to violate some right, aggravated by the use of force and violence tending to a breach of the peace, or by the existence in the

(e) Id. ibid.

(f) Ante, p. 859.

(g) Reg. v. Chandler, Dears. 453.

(h) See Reg. v. Shepherd, 1 L. & C. C. 147.

(i) R. v. Friend, Russ. & Ry. 20. See 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 27.

(k) Reg. v. Henson, Dears. 24.

(l) See 16 & 17 Vict. c. 62; 19 & 20 Vict. c. 101; 21 & 22 Vict. c. 62;

Hill v. Balls, 2 H. & N. 299.

(m) Reg. v. Lister, Dears. & B. 209. See 23 & 24 Vict. c. 139.

(n) R. v. Sedley, 17 How. St. Tr. 155, note; Reg. v. Holmes, Dears. 207; Reg. v. Webb, 1 Den. C. C. 338; S. C., 2 Car. & K. 933; Reg. v. Watson, 2 Car. & K. 936, n. (g). See Reg. v. Elliot, 1 L. & C. C. C. 103; Reg. v. Thallman, Id. 326.

Intention—
meaning of this word.

mind of the criminal of a fraudulent or malicious intention (o). The meaning of this word 'intention,' in connection with criminal law, is most material. 'Intention' is, by non-professional writers, defined to be the design, purpose, or fixed direction of the mind to some particular object (p). It is clearly distinguishable from motive, or that which incites and stimulates to action. The motive which actuated a wrong-doer may doubtless serve as a clue to the intention,—the latter, however, not the former, it is which gives in law the character and quality to an act. "The intention to do the act," moreover, "exists for all criminal purposes where it is wilfully done, although the act itself was merely intended as a means of obtaining some ulterior object" (q).

To illustrate what has been above said, a man who takes a horse from the owner's stable without his consent may intend to despoil him of it, and fraudulently to appropriate it for his own benefit ; in this case he is guilty of theft : he may intend to use it for some temporary occasion of his own, and then to return it to the owner ; in this case he commits a trespass only. He may take the horse as a distress for rent due from its owner, in which case he is justified by the law. In each of these cases the act done is substantially the same ; the intention of the person doing it mainly determines whether it shall be the subject of civil or of criminal cognisance, or whether it be altogether innocent (r).

Sometimes, no doubt, as before observed, the statute law expressly declares, that such and such acts shall be criminal, and shall expose to punishment the individual convicted of doing them. In such cases any inquiry as to the intent which

(o) See Cr. L. Com., 4th Rep., p. 13. What is above said is not offered as a definition of the word 'crime,'—if so, it might be open to objection—but rather as explanatory of its meaning.

(p) Webst. Dict. ad verb. "Intention."

(q) Cr. L. Com., 4th Rep., p. 15.

(r) Cr. L. Com., 4th Rep., pp. 13-14.

actuated the party charged would, unless with a view to a mitigation of punishment, be immaterial (s).

Sometimes a particular act is declared by the legislature to be prima facie criminal, so as to cast upon the party convicted of having done it the onus of proving that his intent was innocent. In much the larger class of cases the intent of the actor is material, and, to ensure conviction, must satisfactorily be proved on the part of the prosecution (t).

In illustration of these remarks may be cited the stat. 24 & 25 Vict., c. 96, s. 58, which, inter alia, enacts, that if any person shall be found by night having in his possession, without lawful excuse (the proof of which shall be on him), any implement of housebreaking, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor. Under this part of the Act, a conviction may, of course, be obtained without proof of any guilty intention in the mind of the accused (u). Another portion of the section in question declares to be a misdemeanor the being found by night in any dwelling-house with intent to commit a felony therein. To convict under this clause, some facts must be shown whence the intent of the party charged may be inferred. It was, indeed, laid down by Lord Mansfield, as generally true (x), that, where an act in itself indifferent, if done with a particular intent, becomes criminal, there the intent must be proved and found by the jury; but where the act is in itself unlawful, the proof of justification or excuse lies on the defendant, and, in failure thereof, the law implies a criminal intent.

(s) See (ex. gr.) Hudson, app., M' Rae, resp., 33 L. J., M. C., 65.

The effect of intent on the quality of an act was much discussed in Att.-Gen. v. Sillem, 2 H. & C. 431.

(t) "Generally speaking, where an offence cannot be committed unless the mind goes along with the act, the act alone is not sufficient to render the party liable:" per Pollock, C. B., 5

H. & N. 84. See Reg. v. Sleep, 1 L. & C. C. C. 44, and cases there cited; Reg. v. Ingham, Bell, C. C. 181; Bowman v. Blyth, 7 E. & B. 26, 43. Et vide per King, C. J., R. v. Woodburne, 16 How. St. Tr. 79.

(u) See Reg. v. Bailey, Dears. 244, with which compare Reg. v. Oldham, 2 Den. C. C. 472.

(x) R. v. Woodfall, 5 Burr. 2667.

A guilty mind, however, is, in general, essential to the legal conception of crime (y). In what, then, it may be asked, does it consist? It would seem to include, 1st, every case of intentional or voluntary wrong, where the mind is actively in fault; 2ndly, cases where the mind is, as it were, passively to blame, as, where hurt or damage results from want of exercising sufficient caution (z). With reference to each of these classes of cases, a few remarks may, in this place, properly be offered.

Malice—
what.

As regards the former class of cases, where the mind is actively in fault, we may infer, from what was said at a former page (a), that there are two kinds of ‘malice,’ by either of which an offender may be actuated: malice in fact, where he acted from “a motive of actual ill-will and a design to injure;” and malice in law, which consists in “the wilful doing of a prohibited or injurious act without lawful excuse” (b). The legal import of the term in question differs, indeed, somewhat from its acceptance in common conversation. It is not, as in ordinary speech, an expression merely denoting the existence of hatred or ill-will to an individual, but may mean any wicked or mischievous intention of the mind (c). Thus, on a prosecution for murder, which is alleged in the indictment to have been committed ‘of malice aforethought,’ it is not essential to show that the prisoner had any enmity to the deceased, nor would proof of the absence of ill-will furnish the accused with any defence, provided that the charge against him in other respects were established (d).

It can scarcely be necessary to add, that where the mind is (y) See (ex. gr.) Reg. v. Thomas, 1 L. & C. C. C. 313.

(z) Cr. L. Com., 7th Rep., p. 22.

(a) Ante, p. 725.

(b) Cr. L. Com., 6th Rep., p. 52;

per Littledale, J., M'Pherson v. Daniels, 10 B. & C. 272.

(c) See, per Best, J., R. v. Harvey, 2 B. & C. 268; R. v. Hunt, Moo. C. C. 93; R. v. Cooke, 8 Car & P. 582; R. v. Farrington, Russ. & Ry. 207.

(d) Post, Chap. 2.

actively in fault, it will make no difference in the criminal quality of the act done, whether the offender do it directly with his own hand, or indirectly by some other means (e). If poison be administered through the medium of an innocent agent, the prime mover is criminally responsible (f). And if a man employ a conscious or unconscious agent to commit an offence in this country, he may be amenable to the laws of England although he was at the time living out of the jurisdiction of our Courts (g).

In the latter of the two classes of cases above alluded to (h), viz., where the mind is passively to blame, criminality would seem to consist in the wilfully incurring the risk of causing loss or suffering to others. If the doer of an act know or believe that an evil consequence will result therefrom, he is just as culpable as if he had acted with the most direct intention to injure. If a person take upon himself to administer drugs, being ignorant of their probable effects, and thus cause the death of another, he will be guilty of culpable, i.e., criminal negligence (i).

A wrong intent, then, or something tantamount thereto, being ordinarily an essential element in crime,—how, it may be asked, is this intention to be proved? A jury is justified in inferring the intent from overt acts, because a very man, as well in criminal, as in civil (k), procedure, must be taken to have intended that which is the necessary or natural consequence of his act. It is an universal principle, that, “when a man is charged with doing an act of which the probable consequence may be highly injurious, the intention is an inference of law resulting from the doing the act” (l).

Where mind is passively in fault.

Intention—how prov-able.

(e) Per Jervis, C. J., Reg. v. Wilson, Deared. & B. 128; Reg. v. Butcher, Bell, C. C. 6.

(f) Cr. L. Com., 7th Rep., p. 30; Reg. v. Michael, 2 Moo. C. C. 120.

(g) Per Lord Campbell, C. J., Reg. v. Garrett, Deared. 241.

(h) Ante, p. 864.

(i) Cr. L. Com., 7th Rep., p. 26.

(k) Per Cresswell, J., 12 C. B. 98; per Jervis, C. J., Id. 103, cited arg. 8 Exch. 229.

(l) Per Lord Ellenborough, C. J., E. v. Dixon, 3 M. & S. 15; R. v.

Thus, where the defendant was indicted for a nuisance, and it was on his behalf contended, that, to render him liable, it must be his object to create a nuisance, or else that that must be the necessary and inevitable result of his act, Littledale, J., answered, "If it be the probable consequence of his act, he is answerable as if it were his actual object. If the experience of mankind must lead any one to expect the result, he will be answerable for it" (m).

The rule just stated, which is of much importance in criminal cases, is well illustrated by Mr. Starkie (n), who remarks, that, in estimating the real intention of an accused person, all the surrounding facts and circumstances of the case must be carefully examined, ex. gr., on a trial for murder, the nature of the instrument used, and the part of the body of the deceased on which the wound was inflicted, must especially be taken into consideration in determining the precise nature and quality of the offence; and this must be done in accordance with what that learned writer describes as "the plain and fundamental rule, that a man's motives and intentions are to be inferred from the means which he uses, and the acts which he does." In Rex v. Farrington (o), the prisoner was indicted, under a statute since repealed (p), for setting fire to a mill with intent to injure the occupier thereof; and, after a verdict of guilty, sentence was respited, a doubt being entertained whether it was not requisite to give in evidence some fact,—other than the mere act of setting fire to the mill,—from which an intent to injure some one might be inferred; the conviction, however, in this case, was, on reference to the Judges, held Philp, 1 Moo. C. C. 263, 274; Reg. v. Hill, 8 Car. & P. 274; R. v. Sheppard, Russ. & Ry. 169; R. v. Mazagora, Id. 291; per Lord Campbell, 9 Cl. & F. 321.

(m) R. v. Moore, 3 B. & Ad. 184,

188; per Littledale, J., Reg. v. Lovett, 9 Car. & P. 466.

(n) Evid., 3rd ed., vol. 2, p. 692.

(o) Russ. & Ry. 207.

(p) See, now, 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 8.

to have been right, because "a party who does an act wilfully, necessarily," in legal contemplation, "intends that which must be the consequence of the act" (q).

Mere intention, nevertheless, however criminal, cannot render the person entertaining it amenable to law (r); some outward overt act coupled with a wilful disposition or culpable negligence is essential to fill out the legal conception of a crime. Hence it is necessary to distinguish between a bare intention and an attempt (s), in which an act is super-added to the intention. An attempt merely to commit a felony is in many cases a misdemeanor (t), and an attempt to commit a misdemeanor may itself amount to a misdemeanor (u). "So long," says Lord Mansfield, in Rex v. Scofield (x), "as an act rests in bare intention, it is not punishable by our laws: but immediately when an act is done, the law judges, not only of the act done, but of the intent with which it is done; and if it is coupled with an unlawful and malicious intent, though the act itself would otherwise have been innocent, the intent being criminal, the act becomes criminal and punishable."

Mere intention not cognisable by law.

An attempt may be so.

In Rex v. Higgins (y), accordingly, the act of soliciting and inciting a servant to steal his master's goods was held to be a misdemeanor, though it was not alleged nor did it appear that the principal had ever been convicted of the felony. On behalf of the accused, it was here argued, that "the general principle (q) Et vide per Bayley, J., R. v. Harvey, 2 B. & C. 261; per Holroyd, J., Id. 267; per Lord Ellenborough, C. J., Newton v. Chantler, 7 East, 143.

(r) "The imagination of the mind to do wrong, without an act done, is not punishable in our law:" Arg., Hales v. Petit, Plowd. 259 a.

(s) See Holloway v. Reg., 17 Q. B. 317. An "attempt" is an 'abortive or frustrated effort.'

(t) See Reg. v. Cheeseman, 1 L. & C.

C. C. 140; Reg. v. Ferguson, Dearl. 427; Reg. v. Marsh, 1 Den. C. C. 505.

An attempt to commit suicide is a misdemeanor at common law: Reg. v. Burgess, 1 L. & C. C. C. 258.

(u) On an indictment for a felony or misdemeanor, the jury may convict of an attempt to commit the same: post, p. 884.

(x) Cald. 397, 403.

(y) 2 East, 5; R. v. Vaughan, 4 Burr. 2494.

of our penal code is to punish the act and not the intent" (z). To this, however, Lord Kenyon, C. J., replied, "But is there not an act done, when it is charged that the defendant solicited another to commit a felony? The solicitation is an act." In unison also with the principle before us it has recently been held, that the mere possession of obscene and indecent prints is not indictable, because "the law will not take notice of an intent without an act," and possession is not an act; but the procuring of such prints with intent to publish them is indictable, being an act done, sc. the first step towards the committing the misdemeanor of publishing obscene prints (a). To define what is and what is not such an act done in furtherance of a criminal intent as will constitute an offence, would be difficult or impossible, but it may safely be affirmed that "an attempt at committing a misdemeanor is not an indictable attempt unless it is an act directly approximating to the commission of an offence" (b).

But though "it is a principle of natural justice and of our law, that actus non facit reum nisi mens sit rea (c),—the intent and the act must both concur to constitute the crime" (d),—we may conclude that, where no evil effect whatever is produced, criminal endeavours, evidenced by manifest overt acts, are and ought justly to be punishable. And, this being so, little difficulty need be felt in regard to another important class of cases, viz., where some mistake is made in carrying out the criminal design, so that it causes results not intended nor anticipated by the actor. Suppose, for instance, that a mistake is made in respect of the person at whom the crime is levelled—as where the offender shoots

(z) 2 East, 9.

(a) Dugdale v. Reg., 1 E. & B. 435, 439; 20 & 21 Vict. c. 88. See R. v. Heath, Russ. & Ry. 184; R. v. Fuller, Id. 308.

(b) Per Parke, B., Reg. v. Roberts, Dears. 539, 551, following Reg. v.

Eagleton, Id. 376, 515, 525, 538, cited post, Chap. 3, s. 2.

(c) Upon this maxim Mr. Erskine delighted to expatiate: see 21 How. St. Tr. 594, 921, 27 Id. 660d.

(d) Per Lord Kenyon, C. J., Fowler v. Pudget, 7 T. B. 514.

at A, supposing he is shooting at B. It is clear that the difference of persons can make none in the quality or magnitude of the offence or in the amount of punishment due to it. The crime here consists in the wilful doing of a prohibited act—the act of shooting at A. was wilful, although the offender mistook him for another (e). A like remark also is applicable, where, through accident or the mistake of a party not privy to the criminal design, the mischief falls either on a person not intended, or on the party intended, but in a manner different from that intended (f). In cases such as the foregoing, the act done is prima facie criminal, and the mind of the party doing it or planning it is criminal, and, consequently, justice requires that the amount of punishment, assignable for such act, should be unaffected by the accident which affected the result.

From the general principle already sufficiently illustrated—that our criminal law looks mainly to the intention which actuated the accused,—important consequences flow. The very statement of this proposition implies a presumption that the individual, whom it is sought to bring within the operation of the law, has mental capacity, is a free agent, and possesses the power of electing to abstain from what is forbidden rather than suffer the consequences of offending; our criminal law declines therefore to punish where a party, from want of understanding or mental disease, is either unconscious of what he does or ignorant of the nature and moral quality of his act. Hence the exemption from criminal responsibility of lunatics and children of very tender years.

Capacity to commit crime.

Neither does that law ordinarily inflict its penalties where a party is, against his will, compelled to do a wrongful act, inasmuch as the dread of future penalties cannot be expected to prevail against the certainty of present suffering. Hence

(e) Cr. L. Com., 7th Rep., p. 26; see Reg. v. Smith, Dears. 559; Reg.
v. Fretwell, 33 L. J., M. C., 128.

(f) Cr. L. Com., 7th Rep., p. 27; per Park, J., R. v. Conner, 7 Car. &
P. 438.

the doctrine that duress will in some cases excuse an act criminal per se, as when committed by a feme covert sub potestate viri. Further, the principle upon which our criminal law acts is inapplicable where hurt or damage results from innocent mistake or inevitable accident, which could not have been foreseen or avoided, for here no blame of any kind is justly attributable to the author of the injury done or calamity occasioned. Of the particular class of cases now adverted to, homicide by misadventure (g) presents a familiar instance. Again, where an individual in the performance of his official duties, as the sheriff or the gaoler, is required to inflict punishment, he may be deemed to stand excused as not being a free agent, but rather a passive instrument to carry out the law, and blameless by virtue of the maxim Quod necessitas cogit, excusat (h).

In any of the cases just specified, a criminal intention, in the full sense of that term, is wanting, and therefore the act done is deficient in that particular quality or ingredient which is necessary to constitute a crime. The aim and object, moreover, of civil punishment is to deter (i), and it obviously will not be effectual to deter those who, being similarly circumstanced with the accused individual, either cannot, through lack of understanding, appreciate its meaning and nature, or, being coerced by some overruling influence, are insensible to its terrors.

Neither, by parity of reasoning, will punishment in any of the cases supposed deter the criminal himself from again offending. Lunatics, infants, and femes coverts are, then, in many cases held irresponsible and dispunishable for acts, primâ facie criminal, done by them. Restricting my remarks in regard to the capacity to commit crime almost wholly to the (g) As to which, post, Chap. 3, s. 1.

(h) Post, Chap. 3, s. 1.

(i) The end of punishment is to prevent the criminal from doing further injury to society, and to prevent others from committing the like offence : Beccar. Cr., Chap. 12.

three classes of persons here indicated, I will first inquire to what extent and under what circumstances mental derangement or insanity may excuse from the ordinary consequences of crime. Now Mr. Erskine, in his argument in Hadfield's case (k), thus forcibly states the elementary principles which are here to guide us :—"It is agreed," he says, "by all jurists, and is established by the law of this and every other country, that it is the reason of man which makes him accountable for his actions, and that the deprivation of reason acquits him of crime." Neither in civil (l), nor in criminal cases, however, will our law, provided a man be compos mentis, measure the degree of his capacity. A weak man, albeit much below the ordinary standard of human intellect, is bound by his contracts, may exercise dominion over his property, and is responsible for his crimes. From such responsibility he alone is emancipated who is, in the language of our law, non compos mentis (m). The main inquiry before us, accordingly, is this :—what may, in connection with criminal law, be the meaning and significance of the phrase just used ? what is that kind or species of insanity which exempts from punishment on the ground that its existence is inconsistent with the criminal intent ? Clearly it is not every degree of insanity which suffices for this purpose. Many men of general ability are upon some one topic insane, provided their opinions be tested by those entertained by the world at large. One labouring under the grossest delusions may for many purposes be treated and held accountable, as if sane, ex gr., he may, possibly, be admitted to give evidence on a criminal trial in a Court of law ; and where such an objection is taken to the compe-

Non compos mentis—when held irresponsible.

(k) 27 How. St. Tr. 1309, 1310.

(l) Ante, pp. 598, 599.

(m) See, per Erskine, arg. in Hadfield's case, above cited ; per Lord Cranworth, C., 6 H. L. Ca. 45 ; Reg. v. Burton, 3 Fost. & F. 772 ; Reg. v. Vyse, Id. 247 ; per Maule, J., Reg. v.

Higginson, 1 Car. & K. 130 ; per Pollock, C. B., Clift v. Schwabe, 3 C. B. 478 ; Borradale v. Hunter, 5 M. & Gr. 639. And see Dormay v. Borradale, 5 C. B. 380 ; S. C., 16 L. J., Chanc., 337.

tency of a witness, it is for the judge to say whether the insane person has the sense of religion in his mind, and whether he understands the nature and sanction of an oath ; and then the jury will have to decide on the credibility of, and weight due to, his evidence (n). It is clear, then, that a man may be non compos mentis quoad hoc, and yet not non compos mentis altogether (o).

In M'Naghten's case (p), the accused was charged with murder, and, the fact of wilful homicide being established, the defence of insanity was set up, supported by evidence that the accused was affected by morbid delusions which carried him beyond the power of his own control as regarded acts connected therewith, and left him no moral perception of right and wrong. It was further shown to be the nature of the disease under which the prisoner suffered, gradually to acquire intensity, and then suddenly to develope itself with great violence ; the prisoner was acquitted on the ground of insanity. In consequence of this verdict, which led to some discussion in the House of Lords, certain questions were by that House proposed to the judges, from the answers to which, given by the majority of the bench (q), must be deduced the degree of criminal responsibility attaching to one affected with mental disease ; it becomes necessary, therefore, in this place to set out the substance of the questions, on the occasion alluded to, thus formally proposed, and of the answers advisedly returned thereto.

The first question submitted to the judges in M'Naghten's case was as follows :—"What is the law respecting alleged crimes, committed by persons afflicted with insane delusion in respect of one or more particular subjects or persons, as for instance, where, at the time of the commission of the alleged crime, the accused knew he was acting contrary to (n) Reg. v. Hill, 2 Den. C. C. 254.

(p) 10 Cl. & F. 200. See Reg. v.

(o) See, per Alderson, B., 2 Den. C. C. 260.

Townley, 3 Post. & F. 839.

(q) Maule, J., diss.

law, but did the act complained of with a view, under the influence of insane delusion, of redressing or revenging some supposed grievance or injury, or of producing some supposed public benefit?" To this question, the answer given was, that a person labouring under such partial delusion only, and not being in other respects insane, although he did the act complained of with a view, under the influence of insane delusion, of redressing or avenging some supposed grievance or injury, or of producing some public benefit, is nevertheless punishable according to the nature of the crime committed, "if he knew at the time of committing such crime that he was acting contrary to law," i.e., to the law of the land (r).

We further collect from M'Naghten's case, that, when a person alleged to be afflicted with insane delusions respecting one or more particular subjects or persons is charged with the commission of a crime, and insanity is set up as a defence, the jury should be instructed, that every man is presumed to be sane, and to possess a sufficient degree of reason to be responsible for his crimes, until the contrary be proved to their satisfaction (s); and that, to establish a defence on the ground of insanity, it must be clearly shown that at the time of the committing of the act charged in the indictment the party accused was "labouring under such a defect of reason, from disease of the mind, as not to know the nature and quality of the act he was doing; or, if he did know it, that he did not know he was doing what was wrong." If the accused was conscious that the act in question was one which he ought not to do, and if that act was at the same time contrary to the law of the land, he is punishable. The usual course, accordingly, is to leave the question to the jury, whether the party accused had a sufficient degree of reason to know that he was doing an act which was wrong; the question thus submitted being accompanied with such observations and explanations as the circumstances of each particular case may require (t).

(r) 10 Cl. & F. 209.

(s) See also, per Rolfe, B., Reg. v. Stokes, 3 Car. & K. 188.

Another question of much interest also sometimes presents itself on a criminal trial :—If a person under an insane delusion as to existing facts commits an offence in consequence thereof, is he thereby excused ? The answer to this question is, that if the accused labours under a partial delusion only, and is not in other respects insane, he must be considered in the same situation as to responsibility as if the facts with respect to which the delusion exists were real. For example, if, under the influence of his delusion, he supposes another man to be in the act of attempting to take away his life, and he kills that man, as he supposes, in self-defence, he would be exempt from punishment. If his delusion was that the deceased had inflicted a serious injury on his character and fortune, and he killed him in revenge for such supposed injury, he would be liable to punishment (u).

To the evidence of scientific men conversant with the disease of insanity, who have examined and conversed with the accused person,—who can, besides testifying to his words and actions, explain the nature of the delusions under which he may be labouring, and the ordinary effect of such delusions upon the mental functions,—much weight will naturally be attached by a jury, when engaged in the arduous task of investigating the question, whether one accused of crime was sane or insane at the time of its commission. Where, moreover, on the trial of such an issue, the facts of the case are admitted or not disputed, and the question becomes substantially one of science only, it may be convenient to ask a medical witness, who has been present during the trial, his opinion as to the state of the prisoner's mind at the time of the commission of the alleged crime, and as to his perception of the difference between right and wrong ; but, as we learn (t) 10 Cl. & F. 210, 211. See Reg. Townsend's St. Tr. vol. 1, p. 110.

v. Oxford, 9 Car. & P. 525 ; S. C., (u) 10 Cl. & F. 211.

from M'Naghten's case (x), it is not a matter of right to put such a question.

Amongst medical practitioners, however, and those experts who have appeared as witnesses to give evidence touching insane and morbid delusions at criminal trials, a very wide difference of opinion exists on various important points relating to the responsibility of persons mentally affected, and mainly as to these fundamental questions: Are there states and conditions of mind in which responsibility is modified only,—not annulled? May the insane be, in certain cases, fit objects for punishment? Nay, further, may not punishment be so applied to some criminals of unsound mind that the reason of its application may be appreciated by them and beneficial results thence ensue? It is the opinion of some scientific men, that much may be said in favour of a scale of punishments for the insane, graduated—so far as the results of experience and observation may permit—to their different degrees of responsibility and criminality. The inquiry hinted at, however, could scarcely with propriety be conducted in these Commentaries, which profess to deal with the law as it is, not as, in the opinion of jurists, it ought to be. I will merely add, therefore, that when a person, upon his trial for an alleged crime, seeks to excuse himself upon a plea of insanity, it will be for him to make out clearly that he was insane at the time of committing the offence charged against him. The onus of so doing rests on him, and the jury must be satisfied that, at the time in question, he actually was insane. If the matter be left in doubt, it will be their duty to convict him, for, as already stated (y) “every man must be presumed to be responsible for his acts till the contrary is clearly shown” (z).

It is now provided by statute (a), that if upon the trial of (x) 10 Cl. & F. 211, 212.

(y) Ante, p. 873.

(z) Per Rolfe, B., 3 Car. & K. 188.

(a) 39 & 40 Geo. 3, c. 94, s. 1; 3
& 4 Viet. c. 54, s. 3.

any person, whether for treason, felony, or misdemeanor, evidence is adduced of his insanity at the time of committing the act charged against him, and the jury acquit him, they must be required to find specially whether he was insane at the time in question, and to state whether he is acquitted on the ground of insanity ; and, if so, the judge presiding at the trial may order the prisoner to be kept in custody until the Queen's pleasure be known respecting him. It sometimes happens that, upon arraignment on a criminal charge, the accused appears manifestly to be insane : when this is so, the question as to his sanity will have to be tried by a jury returned instantanter for that purpose, and, if found to be insane, the detention of the prisoner will be ordered (b).

Responsibility of one who commits crime whilst intoxicated.

An inquiry, somewhat analogous to the preceding, here invites attention : What degree of liability attaches to one who, whilst intoxicated, commits a crime ? “ If,” says Parke, B., “ a man voluntarily makes himself drunk, that is no excuse for any crime which he may commit whilst in that state ; he must take the consequence of his own act, for many crimes would otherwise go unpunished ” (c). But drunkenness may, it seems, be taken into consideration in cases of homicide, where what the law deems sufficient provocation has been given ; because the question in such cases is, whether the criminal act is to be attributed to malice or to the passion of anger excited by the previous provocation (d), and that passion is more easily excitable in a person when in a state of intoxication than when he is sober (e) ; though, if there were really a previous determination to resent a slight affront in a barbarous manner, the (b) 39 & 40 Geo. 3, c. 94, s. 2. See R. v. Pritchard, 7 Car. & P. 303 ; Reg. v. Goode, 7 Ad. & E. 536.

(c) R. v. Thomas, 7 Car. & P. 820 ; 4 Bla. Com., p. 26, citing Co. Litt. 247.

(d) Bishop Crim. Law, 2nd ed., s.

302.

(e) R. v. Thomas, supra ; R. v. Meakin, 7 Car. & P. 297 ; Cr. L. Com., 7th Rep., p. 20. But see R. v. Carroll, 7 Car. & P. 145, where Park, J., dissents from R. v. Grindley, cited 1 Russ. Cr., 2nd ed., p. 8.

state of drunkenness in which the prisoner was would furnish no excuse (f).

Again, in Reg. v. Cruse (g), Patteson, J., observes: "Although drunkenness is no excuse for any crime whatever, yet it is often of very great importance in cases where it is a question of intention (h). A person may be so drunk as to be utterly unable to form any intention at all, and yet he may be guilty of very great violence." So, where the question is, whether the accused attempted to commit suicide (i), or whether words accompanying an act were uttered with a deliberate purpose or were merely idle expressions, the drunkenness of the accused person may properly and ought to be considered (k). And it is evident that, where the question is whether an act was wilful or accidental, all the circumstances of the case must be taken fully into account. If, for instance, the question is whether a house was set on fire designedly or by accident, evidence of the inebriated state of the person charged with the arson will be admissible to induce the jury to come to the more favourable conclusion.

Habitual drunkenness, although not in itself affording excuse for crime, may induce insanity, which will render the individual affected by it wholly irresponsible for his acts (l).

Incapacity to commit crime may result from immaturity of years (m), the rule of our law being, that under seven years of age an infant cannot be guilty of felony, for then a felonious intention is almost an impossibility in nature (n); also,

Criminal responsibility of infant.

(f) Per Parke, B., 7 Car. & P. 820.

(g) 8 Car. & P. 541, 546.

(h) So "intoxication is no defence against a crime, but it is a clear defence against that sort of conduct which is to raise an inference of a crime:" Arg., R. v. Crossfield, 26 How. St. Tr. 122.

(i) Reg. v. Moore, 3 Car. & K. 319.

(k) Per Parke, B., 7 Car. & P. 820.

(l) See U. S. v. McGue, 1 Curtis (U. S.) R. 1.

(m) Ante, p. 869.

(n) 4 Bla. Com., p. 23; Marsh v. Loatler, 14 C. B., N. S., 535.

that although an infant under fourteen years of age shall be prima facie adjudged to be doli incapax, yet if it appears to the Court and jury that he was doli capax and could discern between good and evil, he may be convicted (n), even capitally, because in such case the rule would apply—malitia supplet ætatem. Accordingly, in York's case (o), a boy ten years old was held to have been rightly convicted of murder, many minute facts having been adduced in evidence on the part of the prosecution which were “tokens of a mischievous discretion” in him. In that case, indeed, the prisoner, after several reprieves, received finally a conditional pardon. But in another case (p), a boy between eight and nine years of age, having been found guilty of setting fire to certain buildings, and it appearing that he had been actuated by malice, cunning, and revenge, is said to have been hanged. In Rex v. Wild (q) also, the prisoner, a boy under the age of fourteen years, was convicted of murder and sentenced to death, although his life was subsequently spared. And in Rex v. Owen (r), where the accused, a child ten years of age, was indicted for stealing coal, Littledale, J., thus stated the law touching the criminal liability of infants: “Whenever a person committing a felony is under fourteen years of age, the presumption of law is that he or she has not sufficient capacity to know that it is wrong, and such person ought not to be convicted, unless there be evidence to satisfy the jury that the party, at the time of the offence, had a guilty knowledge that he or she was doing wrong.”

A male infant under the age of fourteen years is by a presumption of law, which cannot be rebutted (s), deemed incapable of committing a rape; for although in some cases, as (n) Ante, p. 877 n. (n).

(o) Foster, 70.

(p) R. v. Dean, 1 Hale P. C. (ed. 1800), p. 25, n. (u); and see the cases cited Id., pp. 26, 27; 4 Bla. Com., pp. 23, 24.

(q) 1 Moo. C. C. 452.

(r) 4 Car. & P. 236.

(s) Reg. v. Jordan, 9 Car. & P. 118; Reg. v. Brimlow, Id. 366; Reg. v. Phillips, 8 Car. & P. 736; R. v. Elderskav, 3 Car. & P. 396.

just observed, malitia supplet ætatem, yet in this particular species of felony the law supposes an imbecility of body as well as of mind (t).

“As to misdemeanors and offences that are not capital,” says Sir M. Hale (u), “in some cases an infant is privileged by his non-age, and herein the privilege is all one, whether he be above the age of fourteen years or under, if he be under one-and-twenty years; but yet with these differences, if an infant under the age of twenty-one years be indicted of any misdemeanor, as a riot or battery (x), he shall not be privileged barely by reason that he is under twenty-one years, but if he be convicted thereof by due trial, he shall be fined and imprisoned: and the reason is, because upon his trial the Court ex officio ought to consider and examine the circumstances of the fact, whether he was doli capax and had discretion to do the act wherewith he is charged; and the same law is of a feme covert. But if the offence charged by the indictment be a mere non-feasance (unless it be of such a thing as he is bound to by reason of tenure or the like, as to repair a bridge (y), &c.), there, in some cases, he shall be privileged by his non-age, if under twenty-one, though above fourteen years, because laches in such a case shall not be imputed to him.”

Although duress will sometimes afford ground of defence on a criminal trial (z), yet as regards persons in private relations, the constraint of a superior is not, save in the case of a feme covert acting sub potestate viri, allowed as an excuse for criminal misconduct; neither a son nor a servant being Criminal responsibility of feme covert.

(t) 4 Bla. Com., p. 212; R. v. Groombridge, 7 Car. & P. 582.

See, further, in connection with the above subject, Reg. v. Allen, 1 Den. C. C. 364; 1 Hale P. C., p. 670; 3 Inst. 59.

(u) P. C., vol. 1, p. 19; 4 Bla. Com., p. 22.

(x) Or assault, Reg. v. Read, 1 Den. C. C. 377.

(y) See R. v. Sutton, 3 Ad. & E. 597; Macpherson Inf., n. 451.

(z) Ante, p. 869; per Lord Denman, C. J., Reg. v. Tyler, 8 Car. & P. 620.

excused for the commission of any crime by the command or coercion of the parent or master. In some cases, however, the command or authority of the husband, either express or implied, will privilege the wife from punishment (a). If, for instance, a woman commit theft, burglary, or some other offences against the laws of society, by the coercion of her husband or even in his company, which the law construes a coercion, she is, in general, held excused by our law as having acted under compulsion, and not of her own will (b). But immunity is not granted to the wife when guilty of treason, murder, or manslaughter in the presence of or under the actual coercion of her husband (c), and husband and wife may be jointly convicted of an assault (d) in which the wife was actively concerned (e). And even where the offence charged is less heinous in degree, special circumstances—as if the husband was a cripple and bedridden—may be given in evidence to repel the presumption of coercion (f). Lastly, where the wife commits a felony or other crime in the absence of her husband, although by his command, she may be convicted as a principal (g).

Offences—
how classified.

Having thus briefly exhibited the more important elementary principles which pervade our criminal law, and having discussed the capacity of an individual to commit crime, somewhat yet remains to be said touching the classification of offences recognised amongst us.

It might possibly be imagined by one not conversant with

(a) 4 Bla. Com., p. 28.

(b) 4 Bla. Com., p. 29; 1 Hale P. C., pp. 45, 516; 1 Hawk. P. C., c. 1, s. 9. See Reg. v. Brooks, Dears. 184, cited post; R. v. Price, 8 Car. & P. 19; Reg. v. Matthews, 1 Den. C. C. 596.

(c) 1 Hale P. C., p. 44; Reg. v. Manning, 2 Car. & K. 903, n.; Arg., 4 How. St. Tr. 1169.

(d) Reg. v. Cruse, 8 Car. & P. 541; Reg. v. Ingram, 1 Salk. 384; Reg. v. Bird, 2 Den. C. C. 94.

(e) Reg. v. Smith, Dears. & B. 553.

(f) Per Vaughan, J., Reg. v. Cruse, 8 Car. & P. 553-4; R. v. Hughes, 1 Russ. Cr., 3rd ed., p. 18.

(g) 1 Hale P. C., p. 45 R. v. Morris, Russ. & Ry. 270.

criminal law, that some precise definition could readily be given, or some test be applied, whereby the more serious, i. e., indictable, offences might be at once marked out and distinguished alike from minor infringements of the law and from actionable wrongs. It might perhaps be inferred—regard being had to the admitted importance of disseminating amongst the public a correct knowledge of criminal laws—that the means of acquiring without much difficulty such a knowledge would be placed within the reach of all. But these reasonable expectations would certainly not under our existing system of criminal jurisprudence be realised. Not merely between specific offences, but between the leading classes and divisions thereof, the boundaries and limits are in our law but too often purely technical and artificial. For this various reasons may be assigned, deducible from the history of our common law—from the mode in which rules and definitions applicable in civil proceedings have been assumed as bases of legislation in regard to public wrongs—from legislative neglect on the one hand and judicial exertions to supply deficiencies on the other (h).

Crimes have, from a very early period, been distributed by the law of England into three classes or divisions, viz., Treasons, Felonies, and Misdemeanors.

The prominent feature in the crime of High Treason is, as will presently appear, the violation of the allegiance due from a subject to the sovereign as the supreme magistrate of the state. Between felonies and misdemeanors the distinction at the present day is in great measure arbitrary and very unsatisfactory, a felony being distinguishable from a misdemeanor rather by the consequences which follow on a conviction for the offence than by any particular element or ingredient appearing in it (i).

(h) See Cr. L. Com., 4th Rep., p. 14.

(i) An indictment for felony must allege that the act charged as an offence was done "feloniously:" Reg. v. Gray, 33 L. J., M. C., 78.

'Felony' is, in our criminal law, intermediate between treason (which is a higher kind of felony) and misdemeanor : and it is distinguishable from both (k). The crime of felony is of remote origin, and was founded upon feudal principles. Its incidents were not formerly, as they now are, of a merely arbitrary nature peremptorily annexed to certain criminal acts. It sprung from the feudal relations. Thus, the main incident of felony in former times was the forfeiture of the tenant's land to the lord of the fee, and this was a necessary consequence of the dissolution, by the misconduct or 'felony' of the tenant, of that mutual compact between the two parties which formed the essence of the feudal tenure. For a long time, and even after felony had ceased to signify merely a failure of the tenant's duty with reference to laws of feudal allegiance, the term was used as descriptive of a crime which subjected the offender to capital punishment, and which, if he evaded punishment by flight, deprived him of his property and of all civil rights (l). And, at the present day, a conviction for felony, ipso facto, induces a forfeiture of the property—real or personal or both—of the offender (m). A felony also involves a trespass (n).

The term 'misdemeanor' applies to all crimes of an inferior degree which do not fall within either of the preceding divisions. A misdemeanor is, in truth, according to its ordinary acceptation, any offence lower in the scale of crime than felony (o), and, as above stated, separated from it by a (k) See cases cited in n. (o), infra.

(l) Cr. L. Com., 4th Rep., p. 11.

(m) Cr. L. Com., 4th Rep., p. 12 ; 4 Bla. Com., p. 94 ; per Treby, C. J., R. v. Earl of Warwick, 13 How. St. Tr. 1016. And see, particularly, Mr. Warren's Abridgm. Bla. Com., pp. 649, 650.

(n) Chitt. Cr. L., vol. 1, p. 240 ; post, per Lawrence, J., Leame v. Bray, 3 East, 597.

(o) 4 Bla. Com., p. 5. A misdemeanor may, accordingly, under certain circumstances, merge in a felony : see, per Abbott, C. J., R. v. Carlile, 3 B. & Ald. 164 ; Reg. v. Button, 11 Q. B. 929 ; 1 Russ. Cr., 3rd ed., p. 50. But see Reg. v. Neale, 1 Den. C. C. 36 ; Reg. v. Case, Id. 580 ; 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 12.

In R. v. McKinley, 33 How. St. Tr. 532, we read that—By the common line entirely arbitrary. Though we must remember that the question whether a particular act is a felony or a misdemeanor at common law will, in case of difficulty, be determinable by the judges, whose duty it is to declare as well as to administer the law. Thus, in Reg. v. Sharman (p), a point having arisen before the Court of Criminal Appeal, whether the uttering a forged testimonial to character, knowing it to be forged, is a misdemeanor at common law,—the intent found by the jury being to deceive, and thereby to obtain a situation of emolument, the Court were of opinion that “it is an indictable offence at common law to utter a forged document, the forging of which is an offence at common law” (q). Wherever, indeed, the Court is called upon to decide whether a violation of our common law has upon the evidence adduced been committed, it must, in deciding this question affirmatively, likewise declare whether the offence constituted by the acts proved be in truth a felony or a misdemeanor (r).

In connection with the subject here touched upon, may conveniently be noticed a recent statutory provision (14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 12) which enacts that “if, upon the trial of any person for any misdemeanor, it shall appear that the facts given in evidence amount in law to a felony, such person shall not by reason thereof be entitled to be acquitted of such misdemeanor, and no person tried for such misdemeanor shall be liable to be afterwards prosecuted for law of England the inferior merges in the higher denomination of crime. Trespass is drowned in a felony, and on the same principle felony is drowned in treason.

There may be accessories to a felony, though not to a misdemeanor: 4 Bla. Com. 36.

By stat. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 94, s. 8, whosoever shall aid, abet, counsel or procure the commission of any misdemeanor, shall be liable to be tried, indicted, and punished as a principal offender.

(p) Dears. 285. See Reg. v. Moak, Dears. & B. 550; Reg. v. Smith, Id. 566.

(q) See, also, the cases cited ante, p. 861. Wright v. Reg., 14 Q. B. 148; Reg. v. King, 7 Q. B. 782; Williams v. Reg., 7 Q. B. 250.

(r) See notes (p) and (q), supra.

felony on the same facts, unless the Court before which such trial may be had shall think fit in its discretion to discharge the jury from giving any verdict upon such trial, and to direct such person to be indicted for felony, in which case such person may be dealt with in all respects as if he had not been put upon his trial for such misdemeanor."

Another clause (sect. 9) of the last-cited statute, which applies generally in trials for felonies or misdemeanors, also, in this introductory chapter, deserves attention. We have already seen (s), that an attempt to commit a crime may be cognisable by our law ; and by the section in question, which recites that "offenders often escape conviction by reason that such persons ought to have been charged with attempting to commit offences, and not with the actual commission thereof," it is enacted, "that if, on the trial of any person charged with any felony or misdemeanor, it shall appear to the jury, upon the evidence, that the defendant did not complete the offence charged, but that he was guilty only of an attempt to commit the same, such person shall not by reason thereof be entitled to be acquitted ; but, the jury shall be at liberty to return, as their verdict, that the defendant is not guilty of the felony or misdemeanor charged, but is guilty of an attempt to commit the same (t) ; and thereupon such person shall be liable to be punished in the same manner as if he had been convicted upon an indictment for attempting to commit the particular felony or misdemeanor charged in the said indictment ; and no person so tried as herein lastly mentioned shall be liable to be afterwards prosecuted for an attempt to commit the felony or misdemeanor for which he was so tried."

Besides the three great classes of indictable offences, viz., treasons, felonies, and misdemeanors, above alluded to, there are many statutory offences subject to the summary jurisdiction of justices of the peace, and, in general, punishable much less severely than those which are of a serious character and dangerous to the community (u). The right to examine into and punish certain specific offences in a summary manner, out of their sessions, and without the intervention of a jury, is conferred on justices of the peace by the statute law, no new offence being thus cognisable unless it is expressly made so by Act of Parliament (x). Wherever, consequently, a question arises as to the existence or limits of the justice's jurisdiction, recourse must be had to the wording of the particular statute under which its exercise is claimed. The leading rules laid down upon this subject being, that a power expressly given to a justice to do a particular act cannot be enlarged by mere inference; and that the procedure adopted by him must be strictly conformable to the provisions and requirements of the statute whence its efficacy is derived (y). An authority, therefore, given by statute to two justices cannot be exercised by one only (z); and, where a complaint made to justices is required to be in writing, such formality must strictly be observed (a). Such being the elementary rules to be kept in mind respecting the jurisdiction of a justice of the peace, I may add, that a valid conviction by him should embrace two things: first, the adjudication of the fact which constitutes the civil offence; and, secondly, the award of the punishment which the magistrate is empowered to pronounce upon it; and if either of (u) Cr. L. Com., 7th Rep., p. 12.

(s) Ante, p. 867.

(t) See Reg. v. M'Pherson, Dears. & B. 197 ; Reg. v. Roebuck, Id. 24.

By the recent statute, 18 & 19 Vict. c. 126, a summary power of conviction, in some cases, of simple larceny is, subject to certain restrictions, conferred on justices of the peace. See also the stats. 26 & 27 Vict. c. 103, s. 1; 10 & 11 Vict. c. 82, and 13 & 14 Vict.

c. 37.

(x) Paley on Convictions, 3rd ed., p. 15; Cr. L. Com., 7th Rep., p. 12.

(y) Paley on Convictions, 3rd ed., pp. 15, 16.

(z) Id., p. 23.

(a) Paley on Convictions, 3rd ed., p. 32.

these essentials be wanting altogether, or be imperfect, the conviction will be bad (b).

In regard to offences summarily punishable by justices of the peace, it certainly does not fall within the plan of this work, even briefly, or otherwise than incidentally, to inquire; I shall rather restrict myself to an examination of such of the more serious offences as seem especially to merit or demand attention from the student. For the due prosecution of this design, crimes may conveniently be divided into two classes, comprising, first, crimes against the Sovereign, the State, and the Community; secondly, crimes levelled directly at the Person, the Reputation, or the Property of an individual. Under the former of these classes I shall speak more particularly of High Treason, Conspiracy, and Nuisance: under the latter of Homicide, Assault, Libel, Larceny, and some kindred offences, which are with difficulty distinguishable from it, or which, together with circumstances of aggravation, usually involve it. The concluding Chapter of this Book will give a succinct view of the Proceedings at a Criminal Trial.

(b) Per Lord Abinger, C. B., Griffith v. Harries, 2 M. & W. 341; Chaddock v. Wilbraham, 5 C. B. 645.

CHAPTER II.

OFFENCES AGAINST THE SOVEREIGN, THE STATE, AND THE COMMUNITY.

THE design of this Chapter is to exhibit very briefly the characteristics of the more prominent and practically important of offences which may be regarded as levelled and specially directed against the Sovereign, the State, or the Community. The reader has already been sufficiently reminded that in strictness every criminal act, being done in violation of public law, involves an injury against society; the classification of crimes therefore here adopted (a), whilst it may conduce to simplicity of treatment and of arrangement, cannot, it is conceived, mislead.

High treason (b) being an offence committed in breach of the duty of allegiance, I may, before speaking of it, properly consider from whom and to whom allegiance is due.

High treason.

The duty of allegiance—natural or local—is founded in the relation which subsists betwixt him who owes it and the Crown, and in the privileges derived by the former from that relation. Of ‘natural’ allegiance, says Sir M. Foster (c), the whole doctrine is comprehended in the maxim Nemo potest exuere patriam, whence it follows that a natural born subject owes allegiance at all times and in all places to the Crown, as head of that society whereof he has through life been a member. ‘Local’ allegiance is founded in the Allegiance—natural or local.

(a) In the present and next ensuing Chapters.

(b) A lucid sketch of the law of treason is contained in the 6th Report of the Cr. L. Com., pp. 2-17, of which I have in these pages, as occasion offered, freely availed myself.

(c) Disc. High Tr., p. 184.

protection which a foreigner enjoys for his person, his family, and effects during his residence here. The tie in question is severed therefore, ipso facto, on the determination of such residence.

An alien, whose sovereign is in amity with the Crown of England, residing here and receiving the protection of our law, owes during the time of his residence a local allegiance to the Crown. And if, during such time, he commit an offence which in the case of a natural born subject would amount to treason, he may be dealt with as a traitor. For his person and personal estate are as much under the protection of the law as those of a natural born subject, and if he be injured in either he has a remedy at law for such injury (d). An alien also, whose sovereign is at enmity with us, living here under the Queen's protection, if guilty of an act amounting to treason, may likewise be proceeded against as a traitor, inasmuch as from him is due a temporary local allegiance founded on that share of protection which he receives (e).

Allegiance—to whom due.

Protection and allegiance are, then, reciprocal obligations, and the allegiance due to the Crown must clearly be paid to him who is in the full and actual exercise of the regal power, and to none other—a king de facto, being in the full and sole possession of the crown, is a king within the Statute of Treasons presently adverted to; and, the throne being full, any other person out of possession but claiming title is no king within the Act, be his pretensions what they may (f).

Statute of Treasons,
&c.

Such being, in brief, the nature of that tie which binds the subject to his sovereign, let us consider the ingredients constituting the crime of treason; for a specification whereof recourse must be had to the Statute-book. Now the Statute of Treasons (25 Edw. 3, st. 5, c. 2), which was declaratory

(d) Fost. Disc. High Tr., p. 185;
Calvin's case, 7 Rep. 5 b.

(e) Fost. Disc. High Tr., p. 185.

(f) Fost. Disc. High Tr., p. 188;
4 Bla. Com., p. 77; Hall. Const. Hist., 8th ed., vol. 1, pp. 9, 10.

of the common law, enumerates the following species of treason, that is to say, "when a man doth compass or imagine (g) the death of our lord the king, or of our lady his queen, or of their eldest son and heir; or if a man do violate the king's companion, or the king's eldest daughter unmarried, or the wife of the king's eldest son and heir; or if a man do levy war against our lord the king in his realm, or be adherent to the king's enemies in his realm, giving to them aid and comfort in the realm or elsewhere: and thereof be proveably attainted of open deed" (h). Further, it is material to notice that the statute 7 & 8 Will. 3, c. 3 (intituled an "Act for regulating of Trials in cases of Treason and Misprision of Treason"), enacts (sect. 2) that no person shall be convicted of high treason or misprision of treason (i), "but by and upon the oaths and testimony of two lawful witnesses, either both of them to the same overt act, or one of them to one and the other of them to another overt act of the same treason," unless the party indicted and arraigned shall confess the same; this statute, however, does not extend to "cases of high treason in compassing or imagining the death of the king, and of misprision of such treason, where the overt act or overt acts of such treason which shall be alleged in the indictment for such offence shall be assassination or killing of the king, or any direct attempt against his life, or any direct attempt against his person whereby his life may be endangered or his person may suffer bodily harm;" but the individual indicted for any such offence as just specified shall be tried "in every respect and upon the like evidence" as if he stood charged with murder (k).

(g) See 7 How. St. Tr. 961, n.

(h) By the above statute some other acts are also declared to be treasonable, which have ceased to be so.

(i) 'Misprision of treason' consists "in the bare knowledge and concealment of treason, without any degree of assent thereto;" 4 Bla. Com., p. 120.

(k) 39 & 40 Geo. 3, c. 94, extended by 5 & 6 Vict. c. 51, s. 1.

Again, by the 36 Geo. 3, c. 7, s. 1 (l), (so far as it remains unrepealed by the stat. 11 Vict. c. 12, s. 1), any person is declared to be guilty of treason who shall, "within the realm or without, compass, imagine, invent, devise, or intend death or destruction, or any bodily harm tending to death or destruction, maim or wounding, imprisonment or restraint" of the heirs and successors of King George III., and "such compassings, imaginations, inventions, devices or intentions, or any of them," shall "express, utter, or declare, by publishing any printing or writing, or by any overt act or deed, being legally convicted thereof upon the oaths of two lawful and credible witnesses."

Such are the statutory provisions now in force relating to treason, besides some others of much practical importance, to the details whereof allusion cannot, however, here be made, which concern the mode of procedure to be adopted in reference to this offence, or when an accused party is about to be put upon his trial for it (m). Confining my remarks, then, almost wholly to the first and most heinous of the several kinds of treason mentioned in the statute of Edward III., viz., where a man "doth compass (n) or imagine" the death of the sovereign, it is worthy of notice that an apparent exception here presents itself to the doctrine laid down by Lord Mansfield in Rex v. Scofield, cited at a former page (o)—that the bare intent of an individual is not punishable by our law. But although in treason the substantive offence or corpus delicti is constituted by the mere secret intention of compassing the king's death, an overt act, though not essential to the abstract crime, is still essential to the offender's conviction, as he must, in the language of the (l) Made perpetual by 57 Geo. 3, c. 6.

(m) See particularly the stats. 7 Ann. c. 21, s. 11; 7 & 8 Will. 3, c. 3; 20 Geo. 2, c. 30; 36 Geo. 3, c. 7, s. 5.

(n) The word 'compassing' or 'imagining' signifies "the purpose or design of the mind or will, and not, as in common speech, the carrying such design to effect:" 4 Bla. Com., p. 78.

(o) Ante, p. 867.

Statute of Treasons, "be thereof proveably attainted of open deed." The statute in question, as observed by the Criminal Law Commissioners (p), has thus wisely provided that in this particular kind of treason, which manifestly tends to the most extensive public evil, the intention shall constitute the crime, but has at the same time, with equal wisdom and with a proper care for the safety of the accused, provided that the intention shall be manifested by some act tending towards the accomplishment of the criminal object ; and this act must (save in cases falling within the operation of the stats. 39 & 40 Geo. 3, c. 93, and 5 & 6 Vict. c. 51, s. 1) be proved by two credible witnesses.

Such is the meaning of the maxim Voluntas reputatur pro facto in connection with the crime of treason ; an indictment for which offence, when belonging to that particular species now under notice, must charge that the defendant did "traitorously compass and imagine" the death of the sovereign, and then go on to allege overt acts as the means employed by the defendant for executing his traitorous purposes ; for the compassing the death is considered as the treason, the overt acts as the means made use of to effectuate the intentions and imaginations of the heart (q), which, it has been further said (r), our law esteems "in the same degree of guilt as if carried into actual execution from the moment measures appear to have been taken to render them effectual." Hence, if conspirators meet together, and consult how to kill the king, though they do not then fall upon any scheme for that purpose, this is an overt act of compassing his death, and "so are all means made use of, be it advice, persuasion, or command, to incite or encourage others to commit the fact or to join in the attempt." And any person who but assents to any overtures for that purpose will be involved in the same guilt (r). On like grounds, to pro-overt act—

what.

(p) Cr. L. Com., 6th Rep., p. 4. (q) Post. Disc. High. Tr., p. 194.

(r) Id. p. 195.

vide weapons or ammunition for the purpose of killing or deposing the sovereign, is held to be a palpable overt act of treason in imagining his death (s). And "to conspire to imprison the king by force, and move towards it by assembling company, is an overt act of compassing the king's death, for all force used to the person of the king in its consequence may tend to his death, and is a strong presumption of something worse intended than the present force, by such as have so far thrown off their bounden duty to their sovereign" (t). It seems also established, though doubts formerly existed upon the subject, that an offence within one branch of the statute of Edward III. may constitute an overt act of a different species of treason (u); and it is clear that an act in itself innocent may constitute an overt act of treason if it be done towards or in the course of executing a preconcerted treasonable scheme; thus, in Lord Preston's case (x), it was held, that the embarking on board a vessel in London, for the purpose of prosecuting a treasonable project abroad, was a sufficient overt act of treason.

Bare words, indeed, not relative to any act or design, would not suffice to constitute an overt act of treason, they are at the worst no more than indications of the malignity of the heart. Words, however, may safely be relied upon to explain the meaning of an act. Hence, where C., being beyond sea, said, "I will kill the king of England if I can come at him," and the indictment, after setting forth the above words, charged that C. came into England for the purpose indicated by them, it was held that C. might on proof of the above facts rightly be convicted of treason; for the traitorous intention evinced by the words uttered converted an action

(s) 4 Bla. Com., p. 79; R. v. Hardy, 1 East P. C., p. 60; 24 How. St. Tr. 199.

(t) 4 Bla. Com., p. 79. See, however, in connection with the passage above cited, the remarks of Mr. Hallam, Const. Hist., 8th ed., vol. 3, p. 153.

(u) Cr. L. Com., 6th Rep., p. 5.

(x) 12 How. St. Tr. 727.

innocent in itself into an overt act of treason (y). The deliberate act of writing treasonable words is moreover to be regarded in a different light from a mere uttering of them, and may constitute an overt act, for scribere est agere; but even in this case the bare words are not the treason (z). And the preponderance of authority is in favour of the rule, that writings not published cannot constitute an overt act of treason (a).

In regard to the doctrine of constructive treason, it has been well observed by the Criminal Law Commissioners (b) that those clauses of the Statute of Treasons which declare it to be treason to compass and imagine the death of the sovereign, to levy war against him, or to adhere to his enemies, have been, at various periods of our history, fruitful sources of accusations, founded upon a technical and figurative construction of the words used in the Act totally different from their plain and obvious signification, and inconsistent with the original design and application of the law. Thus a riotous assembly meeting and attempting by force to redress a public grievance, to compel the repeal of a law, to pull down all inclosures, or to burn all meeting-houses, has been held to be treason, as a levying of war against the king, though there were no direct intention or design whatever against the state or the person of the sovereign (b). This construction is said to be founded upon the (y) Fost. Disc. High Tr., pp 200, 202.

(z) 4 Bla. Com., p. 80.

(a) Cr. L. Com., 6th Rep., p. 6.

Upon Algernon Sidney's case, 9 How. St. Tr. 818, Sir M. Foster (Disc. High Tr., p. 198) thus remarks: "In Mr. Sidney's case, it was said scribere est agere. This is undoubtedly true under proper limitations, but it was not applicable to his case. Writing, being a deliberate act and capable of satisfactory proof, certainly may, under some circumstances, with publication, be an overt act of treason; and I freely admit that, had the papers found in Mr. Sidney's closet been plainly relative to the other treasonable practices charged in the indictment, they might have been read in evidence against him, though not published." See also 4 Bla. Com., pp. 80, 81.

(b) 5th Rep., p. 91; 1 East P. C., p. 66; Dammaree's case, 15 How St.

doctrine, that, by reason of the universality of the design, such acts and conduct amount to what in ancient times was called an "accroachment of royal power" (c), and constitute what Serjt. Hawkins describes (d) as an insolent invasion of the king's prerogative, "by attempting to do that by private authority which he by public justice ought to do."

In connection with what is here said, and whilst treating of offences against the sovereign, it may be proper to add, that by the 3rd section of the stat. 11 & 12 Vict. c. 12, any person is declared guilty of felony who shall, "within the United Kingdom or without, compass, imagine, invent, devise, or intend, to deprive or depose our most gracious lady the Queen, her heirs or successors, from the style, honour, or royal name of the imperial crown of the United Kingdom, or of any other of her Majesty's dominions;" or to levy war against her Majesty within any part of the United Kingdom, in order by force or constraint to compel her to change her counsels, or in order to put any force or constraint upon, or in order to intimidate or overawe either House of Parliament, or to move or stir any foreigner or stranger with force to invade the United Kingdom; "and such compassings, imaginations, inventions, devices, or intentions, or any of them, shall express, utter, or declare, by publishing any printing or writing, or by open and advised speaking, or by any overt act or deed." And by sect. 7 of the same Act an indictment for felony, framed under its provisions, will be valid, although the facts proved on the trial of the accused party shall amount in law to treason (e).

Tr. 522; Reg. v. Purchase, Id. 651; R. v. Lord George Gordon, 21 How. St. Tr. 485; Reg. v. Frost, 9 Car. & P. 129; S. C., 1 Towns. Mod. St. Tr., p. 1; Reg. v. O'Brien, Id. p. 469; O'Brien v. Reg., 2 H. L. Ca. 465.

(c) See Hall. Const. Hist., 8th ed., vol. 3, p. 150.

(d) Hawk. P. C., Book 1, Chap. 17, s. 25. In treason, except where directed against the person of the sovereign, the period of limitation is three years: 7 & 8 Will. 3, c. 3, ss. 5, 6.

(e) The period of limitation, in any such case as here provided for, is prescribed by the 4th sect. of the Act.

The 5 & 6 Vict. c. 51, s. 2, renders it a high misdemeanor to strike at the sovereign or to discharge firearms near to her person with intent to alarm her Majesty.

Respecting offences against the State inferior in degree to treason, but having a tendency to occasion political hurt or detriment, a few general remarks must here suffice. Such offences may consist of specific acts inconsistent with the public safety,—as the seducing or endeavouring to seduce the subjects of the realm from their allegiance, or raising bodies of armed troops without lawful authority. Within this class may also be included all endeavours or attempts to perpetrate treason not actually amounting thereto; all endeavours to promote public disorder or disturbance, as by seditious meetings, libels, or conspiracies for the purpose of creating or inflaming discontent or exciting men to resort to violent and unconstitutional means for the redress of supposed grievances; various misprisions—which may be negative, as in the case of a bare concealment of treason, or positive, as contempts against the king's courts or his prerogative (f); also offences against religion—by blasphemous publications or otherwise.

Offences against the State—endangering the public safety.

The crime of Conspiracy included in the above list of offences against the State is complete, where two or more than two agree to do an illegal thing, that is, either to effect something in itself unlawful—ex. gr., as being in violation of an Act of Parliament (g)—or to effect by unlawful means something which in itself may be indifferent or even law-

Conspiracy.

(f) Cr. L. Com., 6th Rep, pp. 17, 19; Reg. v. O'Connor, 5 Q. B. 16; O'Connell v. Reg., 11 Cl. & F. 155.

Under the class of offences against the State may properly be included the publishing of a libel on a foreign potentate, particularly when it has a tendency to interrupt the pacific relations existing between the two countries: R. v. Peltier, 28 How. St. Tr. 529.

(g) See Reg. v. Rowlands, 2 Den. C. C. 364.

ful (h). “It has,” remarked Tindal, C. J. (i), “always been held to be the law that the gist of the offence of conspiracy is the bare engagement and association to break the law, whether any act be done in pursuance thereof by the conspirators or not.” Hence, in accordance with what has been just said, the agreeing of divers persons together to raise discontent and disaffection among the liege subjects of the Queen,—to stir up jealousies, hatred, and ill-will between different classes of her Majesty’s subjects,—would clearly be indictable (h). So, the agreeing and conspiring together to cheat or defraud the government (l) or a private individual (m), or to obtain money by false pretences (m), or to extort money or goods, or falsely to accuse of any crime (n), or to obstruct, prevent, pervert, or defeat the course of public justice (o), constitutes an indictable misdemeanor. And a conspiracy to raise by false rumours the price of the public securities to the detriment of the king’s subjects (p), or by falsehood to raise fictitiously the market value of shares in a railway or joint-stock company, that the Queen’s subjects may be deceived and injured, and that at their expense a (h) Per Tindal, C. J., O’Connell v. Reg., 11 Cl. & F. 233; R. v. Seward, 1 Ad. & E. 706; per Erle, J., Reg. v. Carlisle, Dears. 341; Reg. v. Mears, 2 Den. C. C. 79.

(i) 11 Cl. & F. 233; Judgm., Reg. v. Kenrick, 5 Q. B. 61. See Reg. v. Button, 11 Q. B. 929.

(k) Per Tindal, C. J., 11 Cl. & F. 234; and see the indictment in O’Connell’s case, as reported by Armstrong and Trevor, p. 9.

(l) Reg. v. Thompson, 16 Q. B. 832; Reg. v. Blake, 6 Q. B. 126.

(m) Reg. v. Kenrick, 5 Q. B. 49; Reg. v. Gompertz, 9 Q. B. 824; Reg. v. Carlisle, Dears. 337; Sydserv v. Reg., 11 Q. B. 245. See Reg. v. Peck, 9 Ad. & E. 686; Reg. v. King, 7 Q.

B. 782; Reg. v. Hudson, Bell C. C. 263.

(n) 4 Bla. Com., p. 136

(o) 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 29 (which is in part repealed by the 24 & 25 Vict. c. 95); post, pp. 897, 898.

As to the action for conspiracy, see Gregory v. Duke of Brunswick, 1 Car. & K. 24; Dickson v. Visc. Combermere, 3 Fost. & F. 527; ante, p. 731, n. (k).

(p) R. v. De Berenger, 3 M. & S. 67; R. v. Lord Cochrane, Id. 10, n., as to which case, see the remarks of Lord Brougham, 2 H. L. Ca. 531-2; see, also, Towns. Mod. St. Tr., vol. 2, p. 10, where the above case is reported at length.

profit may be made by the conspirators (q), would amount in law to a misdemeanor. So a conspiracy to murder any person, "whether he be a subject of her Majesty or not, and whether he be within the Queen's dominions or not," is constituted a misdemeanor by stat. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 4 (r). And a conspiracy to raise wages is a misdemeanor at common law (s).

Under the general head of crimes against the State may further be included offences against the Executive Power, consisting (t)—1. In the unlawful refusal to take and execute any public office : 2. In unlawful omissions by officers or others to execute or discharge any official or other public duty, or in the negligent and imperfect execution or discharge of any such office or duty : 3. In disobedience of an Act of Parliament or of any lawful order or command emanating from a competent official authority,—an indictment will therefore lie for a refusal to comply with an order of justices for the payment of money (u), or of a Court of Quarter Sessions for the payment of costs (x) : 4. In unlawfully resisting and obstructing the administration of the executive power : or in unlawful practices tending to obstruct, weaken, or corrupt its due administration—ex. gr., by the selling of offices or bribery,—which is defined to be the receiving or offering of any undue reward by or to any person whatsoever, whose ordinary profession or business relates to the administration of public justice, in order to influence his behaviour in office, and incline him to do anything against the known rules of honesty and integrity (y). The definition here given, however, in limiting the offence of

Offences
against the Executive Power.

(q) Per Lord Campbell, Burnes v. Pennell, 2 H. L. Ca. 525.

(r) See Reg. v. Bernard, 1 Fost. & F. 240.

(s) R. v. Hanson, 31 St. Tr. 1 ; Arch. Cr. Pl., 15th ed., p. 815.

(t) Cr. L. Com., 5th Rep., p. 16.

(u) Reg. v. Ferrall, 2 Den. C. C. 51 ;

Reg. v. Brisby, 1 Den. C. C. 416 ;

Reg. v. Bidwell, Id. 222 ; Reg. v. Dale, Dears. 37.

(x) Reg. v. Mortlock, 7 Q. B. 459 ;

Reg. v. Stamper, 1 Q. B. 119.

(y) Hawk. P. C., Book I., Chap. 67, s. 2 ; Russ. Cr., 3rd ed., vol. 1, p. 154 ; 3 Inst. 147.

bribery to the offer or acceptance of rewards to or by officers connected with the administration of justice, is clearly too narrow (z).

Lastly, under the head of offences against the executive power must be included abuses of official authority by exercising it partially, corruptly or oppressively, for instance by extortion (a), committed colore officii, or by embezzlement or other fraudulent application of public funds (b), or by the betraying matter of confidence, or by the taking of bribes, or by the illegal sale of an office or appointment (c).

Offences
against the administration of Justice ;

Offences against the Administration of Public Justice are divisible into offences committed by officers of justice, judicial or ministerial, who neglect their duty or abuse the authority with which they are invested, and those committed by private persons.

—by judicial officers ;

A judge who maliciously obstructs the course of justice is guilty of a misdemeanor (d), and it is a familiar principle that every Court of justice is bound to take care that its process shall not be abused for purposes of injustice (e), nor its authority be deliberately perverted to bad and wicked ends (f),—as by the compounding of a charge of felony, or, in certain cases, of misdemeanor (g).

—by private persons.

Offences by private persons against the administration of justice may consist in resistance to the execution of such official duties as are strictly essential or ancillary thereto, and

(z) See R. v. Vaughan, 4 Burr. 2494 ; R. v. Beale, cited 1 East, 183.

(a) Douglas v. Reg., 13 Q. B. 74 ; S. C., Id. 42 ; Re Douglas, 3 Q. B. 825.

(b) R. v. Bembridge, 22 How. St. Tr. 1, 155-157.

(c) Reg. v. Charretie, 13 Q. B. 447.

(d) Per Lord Campbell, C. J., Reg. v. Marshall, 4 E. & B. 480. See Ex parte Ramshay, 18 Q. B. 173.

(e) In Reg. v. Richmond, Bell C. C. 142, the indictment was framed under the stat. 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, s. 57.

(f) Per Coleridge, J., Reg. v. Alleyne, Dears. 510 ; S. C., 4 E. & B. 186 ; 5 E. & B. 399.

(g) See Reg. v. Alleyne, Dears. 505 ; Keir v. Leeman, 9 Q. B. 371, 395 ; S. C., 6 Q. B. 308 ; Goodall v. Lowndes, 6 Q. B. 464 ; and cases cited ante, p. 283, n. (l) ; Reg. v. Pascoe, 1 Den. C. C. 456. See 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, ss. 101, 102.

particularly, in resistance to ministers of justice acting in the discharge of their proper functions ; in escapes from lawful custody ; and in aiding others to escape (h), or in rescuing them therefrom ; or in hindering a witness from appearing to give evidence in a Court of justice (i) ; or in perjury, which by the common law (k), may be defined to be the assertion of a falsehood upon oath in a judicial proceeding respecting some fact material thereto (l) or to the point to be decided in such proceeding (m) ; the characteristic of this offence being not the violation of the religious obligation of an oath, but the injury done to the administration of public justice by false testimony. For “ the law takes no notice of any perjury but such as is committed in some Court of justice having power to administer an oath, or before some magistrate or proper officer invested with a similar authority, in some proceeding relative to a civil suit or a criminal prosecution ” (n) ; it esteems all other oaths unnecessary at least, and therefore will not punish the breach of them (o).

An offence against the Public Peace may be constituted by an actual or by a constructive breach of the peace, sc., by some act—as the sending of a challenge or a threatening letter—having a tendency to make others break the peace.

Offences
against the Public
Peace

Of actual breaches of the peace, the more important are riots, routs, unlawful assemblies, and forcible entries upon land, and in regard to these our legislature has at various times deemed it expedient to enact specific ordinances.

Riots, &c.

(h) Holloway v. Reg., 17 Q. B. 317.

(i) Reg. v. Stowell, 5 Q. B. 44.

(k) False swearing is also in various cases punishable by the statute law : see Arch. Cr. Pl., 15th ed., pp. 703 et seq.

(l) See, per Maule, J., Reg. v. Phillpotts, 2 Den. C. C. 306.

(m) Cr. L. Com., 5th Rep., p. 23.

See Lavey v. Reg., 2 Den. C. C. 504 (S. C., 17 Q. B. 496) ; Reg. v. Phillpotts, Id. 302 ; Reg. v. Cooke, Id. 462 ; Reg. v. Millard, Dears. 166 ; Reg. v. Stone, Id. 251 ; King v. Reg., 14 Q. B. 31 ; Reg. v. Chapman, 1 Den. C. C. 432 ; Reg. v. Simmons, Bell, C. C. 168 ; Reg. v. Westley, Id. 193.

(n) 4 Bla. Com., p. 137.

(o) Id. ibid.

“Riots, routs, and unlawful assemblies,” remarks Blackstone (p), “must have three persons at least to constitute them. An unlawful assembly is when three or more do assemble themselves together to do an unlawful act, as to pull down inclosures, to destroy a warren or the game therein; and part without doing it or making any motion towards it. A rout is where three or more meet to do an unlawful act upon a common quarrel, as forcibly breaking down fences upon a right claimed of common or of way; and make some advances towards it. A riot is where three or more actually do an unlawful act of violence, either with or without a common cause or quarrel: as if they beat a man; or hunt and kill game in another’s park, chase, warren, or liberty; or do any other unlawful act with force and violence; or even do a lawful act, as removing a nuisance, in a violent and tumultuous manner.” Now it is material to observe that by our common law the injury or grievance complained of and intended to be remedied by those who are parties to a riot, rout, or unlawful assembly, must be private, or at all events must concern a limited class only. In reference to this point, indeed, it is noticeable that the Statute of Treasons (q) declares that if “any man ride openly or secretly, with men of arms, against any other to slay or to rob him, and to take and keep him till he make fine for his deliverance, it is not the mind of the king nor his counsel that in such case it shall be judged treason; but it shall be judged felony or trespass according to the laws of the land of olden time used, and according as the case requireth.” Upon which Sir M. Foster remarks (r) that the cases of assembling to kill, rob, or imprison are put by way of example only, and will not exclude others which may be brought within the

(p) 4 Com., p. 146; Hawk. P. C., Book I., Chap. 65.

(q) Ante, p. 888.

(r) Disc. High. Tr., p. 209.

same rule, that is, all cases which are of the like private nature (s).

With a view to preventing tumults and riotous assemblies, and for the more speedy and effectual punishment of rioters, the statute 1 Geo. 1, st. 2, c. 5 (usually called the Riot Act), by reason of the proved inefficacy of various prior enactments, was passed; its general effect (t) is to provide "that if any twelve persons are unlawfully assembled to the disturbance of the peace, and any one justice of the peace, sheriff, under-sheriff, or mayor of a town, shall think proper to command them by proclamation (u) to disperse, if they contemn his orders and continue together for one hour afterwards, such contempt shall be felony." And, further, if the reading of the proclamation be by force opposed, or the reader be in any manner wilfully hindered from the reading of it, such opposers and hinderers, and all persons to whom such proclamation ought to have been made, and knowing of such hindrance and not dispersing, are likewise declared to be guilty of felony (x). Riot Act.

Likewise by the 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 11 (y), it is enacted that if any persons riotously (z) and tumultuously assembled together to the disturbance of the public peace, shall unlawfully and with force demolish, or pull down or destroy, or begin (a) to demolish, pull down, or destroy any church or chapel, or any house or building used in farming land or in

(s) Cr. L. Com., 5th Rep., pp. 90, 91.

(t) See 4 Bla. Com., p. 143; R. v. James, 5 Car. & P. 153.

(u) Of which a form is given in the Act (sect. 2). See R. v. Child, 4 Car. & P. 442.

(x) 7 Will. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 91, s. 1.

The duty of a magistrate in regard to the quelling of a riot is explained at length by Littledale, J., in R. v. Pin- ney, 5 Car. & P. 254; and see R. v. Kennett, Id. 282, n.

(y) See Reg. v. Howell, 9 Car. & P. 437; Reg. v. Harris, Car. & M. 661; Reg. v. Simpson, Id. 669.

(z) See Reg. v. Langford, Car. & M. 602.

(a) See Reg. v. Howell, 9 Car. & P. 437; Reg. v. Adams, Car. & M. 299; R. v. Thomas, 4 Car. & P. 237; R. v. Price, 5 Car. & P. 510.

carrying on any trade or manufacture, or any machinery, &c., they shall be guilty of felony.

Forcible entry.

Another offence against the public peace consists in a forcible entry or detainer, i.e., where possession is taken or kept of either house or land, with such number of persons and show of force as is calculated to prevent resistance and to deter the rightful owner from repelling the wrong-doers, and resuming his own possession (b). In ancient times, remarks Lord Denman, C. J. (c), violent acts were frequently committed in taking possession of property, sometimes by those who were really the owners of the property, sometimes by those who were not. To meet this mischief various statutes (d) were passed, giving "a great and indeed violent power to the magistrates;" for it is thereby provided, that, upon any forcible entry or forcible detainer after peaceable entry into any lands, one or more justices of the peace, taking sufficient power of the county, may go to the place at which the offence was committed, and there "record the force upon his own view as in case of riots, and upon such conviction may commit the offender to gaol till he makes fine and ransom to the king" (e). The justice moreover is empowered by the statutes in question to summon a jury to try the forcible entry or detainer complained of; and, if the same be found by that jury, restitution of possession may be made, without inquiry into the merits of the title being instituted (e). The same object may likewise be effected by indictment preferred at the assizes—where, on the finding of the bill by the grand jury, it is discretionary with the judge of assize, on ground shown by affidavit, to grant a (b) Per Lord Tenterden, C. J., Milner v. Maclean, 2 Car. & P. 18; and in R. v. Smyth, 5 Car. & P. 204.

(c) R. v. Harland, 8 Ad. & E. 828.

(d) 15 Ric. 2, c. 2; 8 Hen. 6, c. 9;

31 Eliz. c. 11; 21 Jac. 1, c. 15.

(e) 4 Bla. Com., p. 148; Arch. Just. P., 4th ed., vol. 1, pp. 464-474; R. v. Wilson, 3 Ad. & E. 817; R. v. Oakley, 4 B. & Ad. 307.

warrant of restitution (g). The proceeding under the statutes of forcible entry is thus peculiar, and has been said to furnish "the only instance known to the law of England in which a party may be turned out of possession by ex parte steps taken" (h). It may be well to add, that a forcible entry is also indictable at common law; although a mere trespass to land, remediable by civil action, is not so (i).

Amongst offences against the public peace may further properly be included assault and battery, which will, however, be more conveniently noticed in the ensuing chapter (k); and next in order must be mentioned offences against the Public Revenue and Trade—as smuggling and fraudulent bankruptcy (l)—and offences against the Public Morals (m), Health, and Police, comprising, inter alia, bigamy (n), infringements of the game laws, and nuisance, respecting which latter only will some few remarks be here offered.

Offences against public trade:

or against public morals and police.

A common nuisance, observes Blackstone (o), is an offence Nuisance "against the public order and oeconomic regimen of the state, being either the doing of a thing to the annoyance of all the king's subjects, or the neglecting to do a thing which the common good requires;" the true nature of a common or public nuisance, and the test whereby to distinguish it from a private nuisance, having been already pointed out (p), I need here only remind the student that common nuisances are such inconvenient or troublesome offences as annoy or (g) R. v. Harland, 8 Ad. & E. 826.

(h) Per Lord Denman, C. J., 8 Ad. & E. 829.

(i) Per Lord Kenyon, C. J., R. v. Wilson, 8 T. R. 360; R. v. Blake, 3 Burr. 1731.

(k) Sect. 1.

(l) See the stat. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 134, s. 221.

(m) See R. v. Curll, 17 How. St. Tr., 153; R. v. Sedley, Id. 155, n.; R. v. Williams, 26 Id. 653; R. v. Wilkes, 4 Burr. 2527, 2574. See Reg. v. Elliot, 1 L. & C. C. C. 103; ante, p. 861.

(n) See the stat. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 57.

(o) 4 Com., p. 166.

(p) Ante, pp. 96, 708, 775.

endanger (q) the community in general, and not merely some particular person or persons, and therefore, with a view to avoid multiplicity of suits, are indictable only and not actionable. Of this nature are annoyances in highways and public rivers, by rendering the same inconvenient or dangerous to pass, either positively by actual obstruction, or negatively by want of reparation (r). For which public nuisance the person so obstructing, or the individual bound to repair, or the parish at large in which the obstruction has occurred, or want of reparation has been tolerated, may, according to circumstances, be indicted (s). The proper and ordinary (t) remedy, then, for obstruction of a public highway, whether by land or water, being by indictment (u), difficult questions not unfrequently arise in determining whether the road or river obstructed is public, and whether the obstruction proved is such as may amount to a nuisance at common law. In reference to the former of these points, the cases below cited may be consulted (x). With reference to the latter it must be remembered, that, although even a small offence cannot legally be committed (y), yet the consequences of an obstruction of a public thoroughfare or navigable river may be "so slight, uncertain, and rare" as not to entail on the offending party criminal responsibility (z); the question, however, whether a particular erection is or is not com-

(q) See Reg. v. Lester, Dears. & B. 209.

(r) 4 Bla. Com., p. 167; Reg. v. Train, 2 B. & S. 640.

(s) See Gibbons' Law of Nuisances, &c., 2nd ed., pp. 326 et seq.; Reg. v. Inhabitants of Hornsea, Dears. 291.

(t) There are many nuisances for which, under particular statutes, as Highway or Building Acts, proceedings may be taken before justices of the peace: Gibbons' Law of Nuisances, &c.,

2nd ed., p. 408.

(u) Judgm., Mayor of Colchester v. Brooke, 7 Q. B. 377.

(x) R. v. Richards, 8 T. R. 634; Reg. v. Betts, 16 Q. B. 1022; Reg. v. Petrie, 4 E. & B. 737.

(y) Per Lord Campbell, C. J., Reg. v. Russell, 3 E. & B. 952.

(z) R. v. Tindall, 6 Ad. & E. 143; per Crompton, J., 3 E. & B. 953. See Reg. v. Charlesworth, 16 Q. B. 1012; R. v. Ward, 4 Ad. & E. 384.

munus nocumentum (a), being in any given case for the jury (b).

Besides nuisances of the kind above specified, we have already seen that the carrying on of an offensive trade or manufacture is, when detrimental to the public, punishable by criminal prosecution. The creation or continuance of such a nuisance may, further, subject the individual who has created or continues it to the stringent provisions of the Public Health and Nuisances Removal Acts (c).

(a) See Reg. v. Vann, 2 Den. C. C. 325. & 14 Vict. c. 52; 15 & 16 Vict. c. 85; 16 & 17 Vict. c. 128; 17 & 18 Vict. c.

(b) Reg. v. Betts, 16 Q. B. 1022, 95; 18 & 19 Vict. cc. 115, 116, 121; 1038. 23 & 24 Vict. c. 77; 26 & 27 Vict. c.

(c) The Acts above alluded to are 117. And see Reg. v. Harden, 2 E. & numerous: see 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, B. 188. and c. 123; 12 & 13 Vict. c. 111; 13

CHAPTER III.

OFFENCES AGAINST INDIVIDUALS.

THE present Chapter will be devoted to a brief inquiry respecting certain criminal acts directed against the Person, Reputation, and Property of an individual—of which will more particularly be considered the various species of Homicide—Assault—Libel; Larceny, whether simple or aggravated, and some kindred offences.

SECT. I.—Offences against the Person and Reputation.

Homicide—degrees of.

The law of England recognises (independently of the crime of suicide) two degrees of culpable homicide, murder and manslaughter: it recognises also two degrees of homicide—excusable and justifiable—which do not expose to punishment.

Murder.

‘Murder’ is constituted by the killing of any person under the king’s peace with malice aforethought express or implied (a). ‘Manslaughter’ may properly be defined to be “the felonious killing of another without malice express or implied” (b), so that this offence differs from murder not in “substance of the fact” (c), but in degree (d); and whereas the indictment for murder charges that the prisoner did, on a day named, “feloniously, wilfully, and of his malice afore-

Manslaughter.

(a) 1 Russ. Cr., 3rd ed., p. 482; 4 Bla. Com., p. 195; 3 Inst. 47; 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 6.

See Reg. v. Mawgridge, Kelynge, 128; S. C., 17 How. St. Tr. 57; R. v. Lord Byron, 19 How. St. Tr. 1177; R. v. Earl Ferrers, Id. 885.

(b) See 1 Hale P. C., p. 449.

(c) 1 Hale P. C., p. 466.

(d) In the crime of murder, “the killing is the substance and the malice prepense the manner of it:” Mackalley’s case, 9 Rep. 87 b.

thought, kill and murder" the deceased, the indictment for manslaughter charges merely that he did "feloniously kill and slay" the deceased (e).

The peculiar characteristic of murder, then, as distinguished from manslaughter, is the ingredient in it of malice, either express or implied; the nature of express malice may be illustrated by the case where one person kills another with a deliberate mind and formed design—such design being evidenced by external circumstances discovering the inward intention (f)—as, for instance, in the case of duelling, which, if it end fatally, is punishable as murder (g). Implied malice is malice inferred or presumed by law from any deliberately cruel act committed by one person against another (h). Thus, if a man kills another suddenly without any, or indeed without some considerable, provocation, the law implies malice, because "no person, unless of an abandoned heart, would be guilty of such an act upon a slight or no apparent cause" (i); and if A. lays poison for B., which is taken by C., against whom A. had no malicious intent whatever, the individual last named will clearly be guilty of murder (i). So if a man throw himself into a river under such circumstances as render the act not voluntary on his part, as if violence be used to the body or threats which operate on the mind, he is guilty of murder who drove deceased to the act which caused his death, i. e., provided the apprehension were of immediate violence and apparently well founded (k). So, if two persons mutually agree to commit suicide together, and the means employed to produce death take effect upon Malice express or implied.

(e) 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 6.

(f) 1 Hale P. C., p. 451.

(g) Reg. v. Barronet, Dears. 51; Reg. v. Cuddy, 1 Car. & K. 210; 4 Bla. Com. p. 199. See Helsham v. Blackwood, 11 C. B. 111.

(h) See, also, as to the legal meaning of the word "malice," per Raymond, C. J., R. v. Oneby, 17 How. St. Tr.

4-5, and in R. v. Huggins, Id. 374-5; per Lord Ellenborough, C. J., R. v. Pictou, 30 Id. 488; per Macdonald, C. B., R. v. Wall, 28 How. St. Tr. 145.

(i) 4 Bla. Com., p. 200.

(k) Per Erskine, J., Reg. v. Pitts, Car. & M. 284; R. v. Evans, cited 1 Russ. Cr., 3rd ed., p. 489.

one only, the survivor will, in point of law, be guilty of murder (l). And if an individual do any act with regard to a human being, helpless and unable to provide for itself, which must necessarily lead to its death, the crime amounts to murder. But if the circumstances were not such that the parties must have been aware that the result would be death, the offence would be reduced to manslaughter, provided the death was occasioned by an unlawful act, but not such as to imply a malicious mind. For instance, if a person leaves a child at a man's door where it is likely to be found almost immediately and taken care of, it would be too much to say that if the child's death were thence to ensue, the act done would amount to murder. If, on the other hand, it were left in an unfrequented place, on a barren heath, for instance, what inference could be drawn but that the party left it there in order that it might die (m)?

Malice, then, in general, may be said to denote "a wicked, perverse, and incorrigible disposition" (n), and to emanate from "a heart regardless of social duty and fatally bent upon mischief" (o); the term 'malice aforethought' being however sometimes applied to a state of circumstances involving only malice in a legal sense, and where malice according to the ordinary signification of the word does not exist (p).

Now it is a very important rule of our law that all homicide is presumed to be malicious, until the contrary is shown (q), so that any homicide will, in legal contemplation, (l) Reg. v. Alison, 8 Car. & P. 418; R. v. Dyson, Russ. & Ry. 523. See R. v. Russell, 1 Moo. C. C. 356.

(m) Per Coltman, J., Reg. v. Walters, Car. & M. 164; Reg. v. Waters, 2 Car. & K. 864; Reg. v. Chandler, Dears. 453. See Reg. v. Gray, Dears. & B. 303, where the indictment was on the repealed stat. 7 Will. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 85, s. 2.

(n) Post. Disc. Hom., p. 257; Ma- son's case, Id. 132; Reg. v. Tivey, 1 Den. C. C. 63; Reg. v. Cluderay, 1 Den. C. C. 514.

(o) Post. Disc. Hom., p. 257.

(p) Cr. L. Com., 4th Rep., p. 22; per Lord Denman, C. J., Reg. v. Tyler, 8 Car. & P. 620.

(q) 4 Bla. Com., p. 201; Post. Disc. Hom., p. 255; 1 Russ. Cr., 3rd ed., p. 483.

amount to murder, unless where justified by the command or permission of the law—excused on the ground of accident or because done in self-preservation,—or alleviated into manslaughter by concomitant circumstances (r). And where the question arises whether a homicide was committed wilfully and maliciously or under circumstances justifying, excusing, or alleviating it, the solution of the question,—are the facts alleged by way of justification, excuse, or alleviation, true? is the proper and only province of the jury. But whether, the truth of the facts being assumed, such homicide be justified, excused, or alleviated, must be submitted to the judgment of the Court; in cases of doubt and difficulty, the jury having a right to state facts and circumstances in a special verdict, and, where the law is clear, being directed by the judge in regard to it—matters of fact being still left to their determination (s).

Precisely in accordance with the terms in which the above important legal presumption respecting homicide has been stated, is the summing up of Tindal, C. J., in Reg. v. Greenacre (t), in the course whereof he remarks, that, “where it appears that one person’s death has been occasioned by the hand of another, it behoves that other to show from evidence, or by inference from the circumstances of the case, that the offence is of a mitigated character and does not amount to the crime of murder.” And in Reg. v. Kelly (u), Rolfe, B., observes that “prima facie, when any man takes away the life of another, the law presumes that he did it of malice aforethought, unless there be evidence to show the contrary,” i. e., to reduce the killing to manslaughter, or to one or other of the inferior species of homicide (x).

Various states of facts might readily be suggested which would suffice thus to mitigate the character of homicide. It

(r) 4 Bla. Com. p. 201.

(s) Post. Disc. Hom., pp. 255, 256.

(t) 8 Car. & P. 35, 42.

(u) 2 Car. & K. 814.

(x) Per Park, J., Reg. v. Fisher, 8 Car. & P. 185.

will, in the first instance, be advisable however to observe, that the essential distinctions between culpable homicide and such as is justifiable or excusable, as also between the two degrees of culpable homicide, will be found necessarily to depend upon the following considerations, viz., the mind and intention of the party in doing the act which caused death—the particular occasion of the act and circumstances attending it—collateral grounds of legal policy (y).

Homicide
on provocation.

A case frequently occurring in practice, which raises difficulty in distinguishing between the legal degrees of guilt attaching to homicide, is where, some degree of provocation having been offered, the question is whether the homicide shall be accounted murder, or shall be regarded as extenuated by provocation given and as amounting to manslaughter only. The law, indeed, whilst making allowance for the infirmity of man's temper, ordains that a ferocious excess of violence, far beyond what the particular provocation called for, and which therefore cannot be attributed to mere heat and passion so momentarily excited, shall not be held justifiable, but shall be accounted murder ; it does not, however, attempt to define generally in what circumstances such excess shall be deemed to consist, or to lay down any precise test by which the existence of 'malice aforethought,' which we have seen to be an essential ingredient in the crime of murder, may, in any conceivable case, be affirmed or negatived. If, upon a slight blow given, the party struck returned a moderate blow not likely to prove fatal, and death ensued, these facts would clearly not justify a conviction for murder. If, in a similar case, the offended party were for a great length of time to continue his blows and not to desist until he had ascertained that life was extinguished, it might thence be easily inferred that the death resulted not from any sudden heat and passion caused by the original provocation, but that the excess was attributable only to a deliberate intention to kill (z). Nevertheless, between the two extreme cases here put, intermediate cases may arise in which the determination of perplexing questions of fact may, subject to judicial comments and advice, be cast upon the jury.

In every case of homicide upon provocation, observes Sir M. Foster (a), how great soever it be, if there is sufficient time for passion to subside and for reason to interpose, such homicide will be murder; whereas, if the fatal blow be struck in heat of blood, and without circumstances importing malice, the homicide will be manslaughter. No mere provocation, however, can reduce homicide in degree below manslaughter. So that, although if a man were to kill another suddenly without provocation, the act would amount to murder, yet, if the provocation were great and the retaliation immediate, the killing would be manslaughter only (b). If a person receives a blow and immediately avenges it with any instrument which he may happen to have in his hand, then the offence will be only manslaughter, provided the stroke is to be attributed to anger arising from the previous provocation. But in dealing thus leniently with an offender, our law requires two things: 1st, that there should be sufficient provocation; and 2ndly, that the fatal stroke should be clearly traceable to the influence of passion arising from it. If a person denotes, by the manner in which he avenges a previous blow, that he is not excited by a sudden transport of passion, but is acting under the influence of that wicked disposition which the law terms 'malice' in the definition of wilful murder, then the offence would not be manslaughter but murder (c). A. uses provoking language or behaviour

(z) The substance of the above remarks is taken from the Cr. L. Com., 4th Rep., p. 25.

(a) Disc. Hom., pp. 295, 296; R.

v. Thomas, 7 Car. & P. 817.

(b) Arch. Cr. Pl., 15th ed., p. 544.

(c) Per Parke, B., R. v. Thomas, 7 Car. & P. 817; R. v. Hayward, 6 Id.

towards B., and B. strikes him, whereupon a combat ensues, in which A. is killed; B. is guilty of manslaughter, for the affray was sudden, the parties fought upon equal terms, and in such combats, upon sudden quarrels, it matters not who gave the first blow (d). But if B. had drawn his sword and made a pass at A., whose sword was undrawn, and thereupon A. had drawn, and a combat had ensued in which A. had been killed, this would have been murder: for B., by making his pass whilst his adversary's sword was undrawn, evinced malice; and A.'s endeavour to defend himself, which he had a right to do, will not excuse B. (d). No provocation by words or gestures only will indeed suffice to reduce the crime of murder to that of manslaughter (e); nor, as already stated, will every provocation by blows avail to do so, particularly when the prisoner appears to have resented them by using a weapon calculated to cause death (f). If, however, there be a provocation by blows which would not of itself render the killing manslaughter, but which is accompanied by insulting words and gestures calculated to produce a degree of exasperation equal to that which would be caused by a violent blow, the law would probably regard such special circumstances as reducing the crime of premeditated homicide to that of manslaughter (g).

Struggles in anger.

Again—all struggles in anger, whether by fighting, wrestling, or otherwise, are unlawful (h); so, that if death result to one of the parties engaged in such contest, the individual 157; R. v. Lynch, 5 Id. 324; Reg. v. Kirkham, 8 Id. 115.

(d) Fost. Disc. Hom., p. 295; Reg. v. Mawgridge, Kel. 128. See R. v. Lord Byron, 19 How. St. Tr. 1177.

(e) Fost. Disc. Hom., p. 290.

(f) Reg. v. Eagle, 2 Fost. & F. 827, where Erle, C. J., observes, "the law implies malice where one has killed another by the use of a deadly weapon, unless the circumstances rebut the inference and reduce the offence to manslaughter. The circumstances of the case do rebut the inference of malice if they show that the blow was given in the heat of passion arising on a sudden provocation, and before the passion had time to cool."

(g) Per Pollock, C. B., Reg. v. Sherwood, 1 Car. & K. 556.

(h) Reg. v. Canniff, 9 Car. & P. 359.

causing it will be guilty certainly of manslaughter, and perhaps even of murder. "When," observes Bayley, J. (i), "persons fight on fair terms, and merely with fists, where life is not likely to be at hazard, and the blows passing between them are not likely to occasion death, if death ensues, it is manslaughter; and if persons meet originally on fair terms, and, after an interval, blows having been given, a party draws, in the heat of blood, a deadly instrument, and inflicts a deadly injury, it is manslaughter only. But if a party enters a contest, dangerously armed, and fights under an unfair advantage, though mutual blows pass, it is not manslaughter but murder" (h).

There is one peculiar rule of our law, with regard to homicide, which requires to be noticed, whereby a felonious purpose, though it be wholly unconnected with any design to occasion death, is made, in conjunction with an accidental killing, to constitute the crime of wilful murder. Thus, if an individual, shooting at a fowl with an intention to steal it, which intention must be collected from the attendant circumstances, by pure accident kill a person not even known by him to be near, the felonious intent in shooting at the fowl, when coupled with the fact of a man being so killed, renders the individual committing this act legally guilty of the crime of murder (l): though, if the shooting were done wantonly and without any felonious intention, the act done would barely amount to manslaughter (m).

Homicide coupled with a felonious intention.

Even where the act upon which death ensues is lawful or Homicide caused by

(i) R. v. Whiteley, 1 Lew. C. C. 175-6.

Persons present at and sanctioning a prize-fight which ends fatally are indictable for manslaughter: R. v. Murphy, 6 Car. & P. 103; R. v. Hargrave, 5 Id. 170; R. v. Perkins, 4 Id. 537.

(k) See per Ward, C. B., R. v. Kidd, 14 How. St. Tr. 145.

(l) Fost. Disc. Hom., pp. 258, 259; per King, C. J., R. v. Crispe, 16 How. St. Tr. 80; Cr. L. Com., 1st Rep., pp. 40-1; Russ Cr, 3rd ed., vol. 1, p. 540; Reg. v. Horsey, 3 Fost. & F. 287; Reg. v. Franz, 2 Id. 580.

(m) Fost. Disc. Hom., p. 259; per King, C. J., ubi supra.

undue correction.

innocent, it must be done in a proper manner and with due caution to prevent mischief in order that the individual thus causing the death of another may be held excused. Thus parents, masters, and others having authority in foro domestico, may give reasonable correction to those under their care, and if death thence result, without their fault, it will be regarded as accidental. But if the chastisement inflicted exceed the bounds of due moderation, either in degree or in respect of the instrument used, the homicide thus committed will be murder (n) or manslaughter, according to the circumstances of the case. If a schoolmaster correct his scholar with a cudgel or other thing not likely to kill, though improper for the purpose of correction, he will, if death ensue, be amenable to a charge of manslaughter—if with a dangerous weapon likely to kill or maim, due regard being had to the age and strength of either party, he may be answerable for murder (o); for the using of a weapon from which death is likely to ensue imports a mischievous disposition, and the law accordingly implies that a degree of malice attended the act, which, if death result from it, will be murder (p).

Homicide through negligence.

Further, it is obvious that a person “may be culpable, either in the doing of an act rashly without knowing its nature or probable consequences, or in the careless and incautious manner of doing it. In the former predicament are all cases where a person unacquainted with the effect of a powerful medicine or drug administers it to another; or where a person rashly and improvidently presents a gun at another and draws the trigger, not supposing it to be loaded, when it is in truth loaded, and death results” (q). And, as a general rule deducible from decided cases, it may be laid (n) R. v. Wall, 28 St. Tr. 51.

F. 202.

(o) Fost. Disc. Hom., p. 262; per Holt, C. J., R. v. Keite, 1 Ld. Raym. 144. See Reg. v. Hopley, 2 Fost. &

(p) Per Nares, J., R. v. Wiggs, 1 Leach C. C. 378, n.

(q) Cr. L. Com., 7th Rep., p. 26.

own that where death is caused by negligence without malice, the person guilty of such negligence will be indictable for manslaughter (r). If, indeed, a workman employed in the repair of a building, throws stones or rubbish from the house-top, and thereby kills an individual passing underneath, this act will, in the eye of the law, amount to murder, manslaughter, or excusable homicide, according to the degree of precaution taken, and the necessity for taking it. If the act were done, without any kind of warning, in a public street, at a time when persons were usually passing, this might be esteemed murder—if at a time when persons were not likely to be passing, it would be manslaughter: if done in a retired spot where no persons were in the habit of passing, it would be homicide by misadventure (s). So, if a person, riding through a street slowly, and using reasonable caution to prevent mischief, rides over and kills a child which heedlessly crossing the road, the result is purely accidental; but if he had used such speed as under the circumstances was not unlikely to occasion accident, the want of caution might render him amenable to a charge of manslaughter; and were he to ride into the midst of a crowd at so furious a rate as that loss of life was likely thence to ensue and did ensue, he might, by his wilful endangering of life, be guilty of the crime of murder (t).

With reference also to negligent treatment by medical practitioners, it has been observed (u), that if a medical or any other man cause the death of another intentionally, that, of course, will be murder; but where a person, not intending to kill a man, by his gross negligence, unskilfulness,

Homicide caused by negligence of medical practitioner:

(r) Reg. v. Swindall, 2 Car. & K. 10; Reg. v. Lowe, 3 Car. & K. 123.

(s) See Arch. Cr. Pl., 15th ed., p. 8, and the authorities there cited.

(t) Cr. L. Com., 7th Rep., p. 26.

(u) Per Maule, J., Reg. v. Whitehead, 3 Car. & K. 202, 204. See R.

v. Long, 4 Car. & P. 423; R. v. Webb, 1 M. & Rob. 405; R. v. Spilling, 2 M. & Rob. 107; R. v. Van Butchell, 3 Car. & P. 629; Reg. v. Crick, 1 Fost. & F. 519; Reg. v. Crook, Id. 521.

and ignorance, causes death, he is guilty of culpable homicide. If, therefore, an operation, which results in the death of the patient, be performed by one whether duly qualified or not to act as a surgeon, the questions for the jury will be, first, whether the deceased died from the effects of the operation performed on him by the accused; secondly, whether the treatment pursued by the prisoner towards the deceased was marked by negligence, unskilfulness, and ignorance.

The general doctrine applicable in cases such as now under our notice seems well established, that "what constitutes murder, being by design and of malice prepense, constitutes manslaughter when arising from culpable negligence" (x) of the accused; such negligence being personal, not merely that of his servants (y).

—of trustees of road, &c.

But although the neglect of a personal duty, when death ensues as the consequence of such neglect, renders the guilty party liable to an indictment for manslaughter, this proposition holds true only where the neglect is personal, and the death was the immediate result of that personal neglect (z). Trustees appointed to repair roads, under a local Act, are not chargeable with manslaughter, if a person using one of such roads is accidentally killed, in consequence of the road being out of repair, through neglect of the trustees to contract for its due reparation (a). "In all the cases," remarks Erle, J. (b), "in which a party has been indicted for manslaughter, in causing death by his omission to perform a particular duty, I think the neglect of duty was immediately connected with the death, as in the case of careless driving on a railway, or of not supplying an infant with food. The present case does not fall within this class."

Homicide in resisting

Let us now turn, for a moment, to the consideration of

- | | |
|---|---|
| (x) Per Lord Campbell, C. J., Reg. | 310. |
| v. Hughes , Dears. & B. 250. | (z) Reg. v. Bennett , Bell C. C. 1. |
| (y) Reg. v. Bennett , Bell C. C. 1; | (a) Reg. v. Pocock , 17 Q. B. 34. |
| R. v. Huggins , 17 How. St. Tr. 298, | (b) Id. 39. | another class of cases, viz., where homicide occurs in the course of resistance offered to the enforcement of public justice. Policy, or rather necessity, obviously requires that every minister of justice should be protected, not only in executing any express sentence of the law, but also in doing every act which the law obliges him to do in the administration and advancement of justice. This principle, which is essential to the existence of the law as an imperative rule of conduct (c), extends also to the protection of all who either lawfully assist ministers of justice in executing their duties, or who, being mere private persons, legally execute such powers as the law casts upon them, for the advancement of justice and the prevention of wrong (d). Hence, where persons having authority to arrest or imprison, and using the proper means for that purpose, are resisted in so doing, and the party making resistance is killed in the struggle, this homicide is justifiable. On the other hand, if the party having authority to arrest or imprison, using the proper means, happens to be killed, all who take a part in such resistance will be guilty of murder (e).

officer of justice.

Where a defendant in a civil suit, being apprehensive of an arrest, flies from the officer of justice, who, in pursuing, kills him, this homicide may amount to murder or manslaughter, according to circumstances; for if the officer in the heat of pursuit, and merely in order to overtake the defendant, should strike him with a stick, or other weapon not likely to kill, and death should thence result, this will, at most, be manslaughter, and may amount only to accidental homicide; whereas, if a deadly weapon had been used, it would have been murder (f). The remark just made seems, indeed, to hold equally true whether the flight took place through fear of arrest in a purely civil proceeding, or on a

(c) Ante, p. 855.

(d) See Cr. L. Com., 4th Rep., p. 21.

(e) Fost. Disc. Hom., p. 270; Mac- kalley's case, 9 Rep. 61 b. See Reg.

v. Davis, 1 L. & C. C. C. 64.

(f) Fost. Disc. Hom., p. 271.

warrant for a breach of the peace, or any other misdemeanor. Where, however, a felony having been committed, the felon flies from justice, it is the duty of every individual present to use his best endeavour to prevent his escape; and if in the pursuit the party flying is killed, when he cannot be otherwise overtaken, this will be deemed justifiable homicide; for the pursuit was not barely warrantable but required by the law; it being, moreover, the duty of an offender quietly to yield himself up to public justice (g).

It may readily be inferred, from what has been above said, that, on a charge of homicide in resisting an arrest, the guilt of the offender may depend entirely upon nice and difficult questions belonging to the civil branch of the law, such as the technical regularity of civil process, or the precise duty of a minister of justice in its execution (h). In any case of the kind alluded to, three points will be found to deserve especial notice, viz., the legality of the deceased's authority (i), the legality of the manner in which he executed it (j), and the defendant's knowledge of that authority. If an officer of justice be killed in attempting to execute a writ or warrant invalid on the face of it (k), or against a wrong person, or out of the district in which alone it could legally be executed, or if a private person interfere and act in a case where he has no authority by law to do so (l), or if the defendant had no knowledge of the officer's character or business (m), or of the intention with which a private person interferes, and the officer or private person be resisted and (g) Id. ibid.; 1 Hale P. C., p. 481.

See Reg. v. Dadson, 2 Den. C. C. 35.

(h) See Galliard, app., Laxton, resp.,
2 B. & S. 363, 370.

(i) R. v. Thompson, 1 Mood. C. C.
80; R. v. Ford, Russ. & Ry. 329; R.
v. Curran, 3 Car. & P. 397.

(j) R. v. Cook, Cro. Car. 537.

(k) See R. v. Hood, 1 Mood. C. C.
281.

(l) Reg. v. Phelps, Car. & M. 180;
R. v. Curran, 1 Mood. C. C. 132; R.
v. Curran, 3 Car. & P. 397. See Reg.
v. Price, 8 Car. & P. 282; Derecourt
v. Corbishley, 5 E. & B. 188; ante, pp.
712 et seq.

(m) See R. v. Woolmer, 1 Mood. C.
C. 334; R. v. Howarth, Id. 207; Fost. Disc. Hom., p. 298.

killed, the killing will be manslaughter only (n). Though if malice prepense be evidenced—as if a man is taken into custody by a police officer without authority and out of revenge for the act shoots the officer—that is murder (o).

In Reg. v. Serva (p), a question somewhat analogous to Reg. v. Serva. the above was learnedly discussed, viz., as to the legality of the capture by a British man-of-war of a vessel alleged to be a slaver, and the lawfulness or otherwise of homicide committed by her crew in attempting to regain possession of her after capture from the officer and men placed in charge of her by the Queen's ship. The accused, however, in this case were eventually acquitted, on the ground of a want of jurisdiction in our Courts to try the offence charged (q).

Homicide, then, may be of various kinds and degrees; it may be justifiable, as where a sheriff executes a criminal in strict conformity with his sentence; or where, as above-mentioned, an inferior officer of justice kills a person who forcibly and illegally resists capture, or who attempts the rescue of a prisoner (r); or where the death of an individual attempting to commit some atrocious crime is caused by the individual whose person or property is threatened by his violence; where, indeed, a felony is attempted on the person, as robbery or murder, the party assaulted may repel force by force (s). A woman, in defence of her chastity, may lawfully kill an assailant; and if an attempt be made to commit arson, or burglary, the owner of the dwelling-house, or any member of his family, or even a lodger, may, in preventing where justifiable.

Homicide—

(n) Arch. Cr. Pl., 15th ed., p. 551; in the ensuing pages. (pp. 552-556) of which standard Treatise, that particular branch of the Law of Homicide above adverted to is fully considered.

(o) Per Cockburn, C. J., Reg. v. Sattler, Dears. & B. 541.

(p) 1 Den. C. C. 104.

(q) See Reg. v. Lopez, Dears. & B. 525; Reg. v. Sattler, Id. 539, and cases there cited; Reg. v. Cunningham, Bell C. C. 72; Reg. v. Lesley, Id. 220.

(r) Ante, p. 917.

(s) See Reg. v. Huntley, 3 Car. & K. 142.

the mischief contemplated, lawfully kill the assailant (t). A mere trespasser, however, on the land of another, although actuated by a felonious intention, could not legally be shot at (u). And if A., finding a trespasser upon his land, beats and thus chances to kill him, he is guilty of manslaughter; or, if there be added to the above state of facts circumstances evidencing malice, of murder (x).

The authorities below cited will suffice to show, that, in some special cases involving circumstances of peculiar aggravation, homicide may, in the absence of malice, be reduced in degree from murder to manslaughter (y).

Homicide—where excusable.

Homicide may, also, be excusable; as where it occurs by misadventure, i.e., where “a man doing a lawful act without any intention of hurt, unfortunately kills another” (z); as if he were shooting at a mark in a place adapted for that pastime, and under circumstances which rendered it permissible.

So, homicide may by ignorantia facti be rendered excusable; as where a man, intending to kill a thief or house-breaker being in his house, by mistake kills one of his own family (a). And if a man receiving a drug from an apothecary or chemist, without any reason to suppose it to be other than a salutary medicine, were to administer it, being in truth deadly poison, his utter ignorance of the fact would excuse him (b).

Again: there are cases in which a man may be excused, who, to protect himself, in the course of a sudden broil or quarrel, kills his assailant; homicide when excusable under such circumstances being, however, with difficulty distinguish-

(t) Fost. Disc. Hom., p. 274; R. v. Hunt, 1 Mood. C. C. 93; R. v. Levett, cited Cro. Car. 538.

(u) R. v. Scully, 1 Car. & P. 319; Reg. v. Dadson, 2 Den. C. C. 35. See R. v. Meade, 1 Lew. C. C. 185.

(x) Fost. Disc. Hom., p. 291.

(y) Fost. Disc. Hom., p. 296; R. v. Manning, T. Raym. 212; Reg. v. Fisher, 8 Car. & P. 182; Reg. v. Kelly, 2 Car. & K. 814.

(z) 4 Bla. Com., p. 182.

(a) 4 Bla. Com., p. 27.

(b) Cr. L. Com., 7th Rep., p. 26.

able from manslaughter. He who in the case of a homicide by his hand, happening in the course of a mutual conflict wherein he was engaged, would excuse himself upon the ground of self-defence, "must show that, before a mortal stroke given, he had declined any further combat, and retreated as far as he could with safety, and also that he killed his adversary through mere necessity, and to avoid immediate death." Should the accused party fail in these particulars, he will incur the penalties of felonious homicide (c). A., of malice prepense, discharges a pistol at B., and then runs away. B. pursues him; whereupon A. turns back, and in his own defence kills B. This is murder (d). C. being assaulted by D. returns the blow, and a fight ensues; C., before a mortal wound given, declines any further conflict, and retreats as far as he can with safety, and then in his own defence kills D. This homicide is excusable, as being done in self-defence (e).

The stat. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 7, provides that "no punishment or forfeiture shall be incurred by any person who shall kill another by misfortune, or in his own defence, or in any other manner without felony."

Lastly: in connection with the offence of felonious homicide, and more particularly in regard to the jurisdiction of the Court and to the functions of the jury on a trial for homicide, the following observations suggest themselves:—

1. With respect to the jurisdiction of the Court, it is, by the 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 10, enacted, that where any person (f) being feloniously stricken, poisoned, or otherwise hurt upon the sea, or at any place out of England, shall die of such stroke, poisoning, or hurt in England, or being feloniously stricken, poisoned, or otherwise hurt at any place in

Jurisdiction
where homicide occurs abroad.

(c) Fost. Disc. Hom., p. 277.

(d) Keel. 129.

(e) Fost. Disc. Hom., p. 277; Reg. v. Nailor, cited Id., p. 278.

(f) See Reg. v. Lewis, Dears. & B. 182; Reg. v. Azzopardi, 1 Car. & K.

203.

England, shall die thereof, upon the sea or abroad, the offence thus committed, whether amounting to murder or manslaughter, shall be triable in England.

Proof of the corpus delicti.

2. It is a precautionary rule, recognised on trials for felonious homicide, that proof be required of the finding of the body of deceased ; for, Tutius semper est errare in acquiescendo quàm in puniendo—ex parte misericordiæ quàm ex parte justitiæ (g). This rule, however, is not altogether inflexible, as where the direct evidence brought before the jury is sufficiently strong to satisfy them that murder has really been committed (h).

Death must have occurred within a year and a day.

3. It is also a rule that no person shall be adjudged by any act whatever to have killed another, if that other does not die within a year and a day after the stroke received or cause of death administered (i), i.e., within a year exclusive of the day on which the mortal blow was given, or the cause of death, if poison were used, was administered (k).

On indictment for murder, jury may convict of manslaughter.

4. Upon an indictment for murder, the accused party may be acquitted of the murder and yet found guilty of manslaughter (l), the homicide being the main fact in issue, and the existence of malice prepense in the mind of the accused being a circumstance in aggravation only (m). On such an indictment the jury cannot, however, convict of an assault (n).

Accessory before the fact—how punishable.

5. Further : It is a principle in law, that “ he who procureth a felony to be done is a felon. If present, he is a

(g) 2 Hale P. C., p. 290.

(h) R. v. Hindmarsh, 2 Leach C. C. 569. See Reg. v. Hopkins, 8 Car. & P. 591.

(i) 1 Russ. Cr., 3rd ed., p. 505 ; 1 Hawk. P. C., Book I., Chap. 31, s. 9.

(k) Cr. L. Com., 7th Rep., p. 27 ; Hawk. P. C., ubi sup.

(l) A plea of autrefois acquit on an indictment for murder is good in answer to a charge of manslaughter and e converso : 2 Hale P. C. 246 ; Foster Disc. Hom., p. 329 ; cited per Erle, J., Reg. v. Gaylor, Dears. & B. 288, 293.

(m) Co. Litt. 282, a. ; 1 Hale P. C., p. 449 ; 2 Id., p. 302. See per V. Williams, J., Reg. v. Bird, 2 Den. C. C. 116 ; and per Jervis, C. J., Reg. v. Reid, Id. 92, cited post.

(n) 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 10.

principal; if absent, an accessory before the fact" (o). And by stat. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 94, s. 1 (p), it is enacted, that whosoever shall become an accessory before the fact to any felony, may be indicted, tried, convicted, and punished, in all respects as if he were a principal felon (q).

Next in order to the offence of homicide, felonious or otherwise, may properly be noticed assaults against the person, which are usually classified under two heads, aggravated and common assaults. Belonging to the former class of assaults are some—ex. gr., an assault with intent to rob—which will come under observation in the ensuing section; but in this place I may remind the reader that amongst aggravated assaults which are by express enactment constituted felonies, are included the wounding any person, or the causing to any person, by any means whatsoever, any grievous bodily harm, with intent to commit murder (r); the shooting at or attempting to shoot at any person, with a like intent, whether any bodily injury be effected or not (s); the unlawfully and maliciously, by any means whatsoever, wounding or causing any grievous bodily harm to any person; the shooting or attempting to shoot at any person, with intent

Assault.

Aggravated assault.

(o) Post. Cr. L., p. 125. Such an accessory was the Earl of Somerset to the murder of Sir Thomas Overbury: 2 How. St. Tr. 965.

(p) See Reg. v. Hughes, Bell C. C. 242; Reg. v. Gaylor, Dears. & B. 288; Reg. v. Fretwell, 1 L. & C. C. C. 161.

(q) As to the trial and conviction of accessories after the fact, see 24 & 25 Vict. c. 94, s. 3.

As to accessories to manslaughter, see per Erle, J., Reg. v. Gaylor, Dears. & B. 291; Greaves' Cr. L. Acts, pp. 23, 24.

To a misdemeanor, there are no accessories: see Reg. v. Clayton, 1 Car.

& K. 128; Reg. v. Greenwood, 2 Den. C. C. 453.

(r) 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 11.

See Reg. v. Cruse, 8 Car. & P. 541; Reg. v. Jones, 9 Id. 258 (which illustrates the rule stated ante, p. 865, that 'every one must be taken to intend the necessary consequences of his own act'); Reg. v. Gray, Dears. & B. 303.

(s) 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 14. See Reg. v. Williams, 1 Den. C. C. 39.

Sect. 15 further enacts, that "whosoever shall by any means other than those specified in any of the preceding sections" of the Act "attempt to commit murder shall be guilty of felony."

to maim, disfigure, or disable any person, or to do some other grievous bodily harm to any person, or with intent to resist or prevent the lawful apprehension or detainer of any person (t). And if upon the trial of an indictment for any felony, except murder or manslaughter, which alleges that the defendant did wound any person, the jury shall be satisfied that the defendant is guilty of the cutting, stabbing, or wounding, but are not satisfied that the defendant is guilty of the felony charged in such indictment, the jury may acquit of the felony, and convict of the unlawfully cutting, stabbing, or wounding (u), which, under the 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 20, is a misdemeanor.

Again—whosoever shall assault any person with intent to commit felony; or shall assault, resist, or wilfully obstruct any peace officer, in the due execution of his duty, or any person acting in aid of such officer; or shall assault any person with intent to resist or prevent the lawful apprehension or detainer of himself or of any other person for any offence, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor (x). And generally if the accused be charged with an assault with intent to commit felony, and the evidence offered establish the assault, but fail in showing the intent, the defendant may, nevertheless, be convicted of a common assault (y).

With a view also to the better protection of persons under the care and control of others, as apprentices or servants, the stat. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 26, provides a special punishment where the master or mistress of any such person shall (t) 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 18. See also s. 21, which applies to attempts to choke, suffocate, or strangle, &c.

See Reg. v. Calvert, 3 Car. & K. 201; Reg. v. Griffiths, 8 Car. & P. 248.

(u) 14 & 15 Vict. c. 19, s. 5.

(x) 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 38.

(y) Arch. Cr. Pl., 15th ed., p. 590.

It is material to observe, that the 7 Will. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 85, s. 11, which on the trial of any person for felony, where the crime charged includes an assault, empowered the jury to acquit of the felony and find a verdict of guilty of an assault only, was repealed by the 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 10.

unlawfully and maliciously do or cause to be done any bodily harm to any such person, so that the life of such person shall be endangered, or the health of such person shall have been or shall be likely to be permanently injured.

Thus much for aggravated assaults. Let us then, in the next place, consider the liability attaching to one who makes an assault or battery on another, unattended by any of the aggravating circumstances above specified. At a former page (2) has been stated the signification of either of the words just used in connection with purely civil proceedings: and, referring the reader to what has been there said upon the matter in question, it will here suffice merely to add that, according to our writers upon criminal law, an "assault" is an attempt or offer, with force and violence, to do a corporal hurt to another,—as by striking at him either with or without a weapon, or presenting a gun at him if within range, or by pointing any other dangerous weapon at him whilst standing within reach of it, or by holding up one's fist at a man, or by any such like act done in an angry threatening manner, under circumstances denoting an intention, coupled with a present ability, of carrying the threat into execution (a); or by encouraging a dog to bite a man (b); or by unlawful imprisonment (c); though words only cannot constitute an assault (d). A "battery" includes any injury, however slight, actually done to the person of another in an angry, revengeful, rude, or insolent manner—even touching the person of another against his consent might constitute a battery (e).

Assault and battery.

(2) Ante, p. 676.

(a) Hawk. P. C., Book I., Chap. 62, s. 1; 1 East, P. C., p. 406; Osborn v. Veitch, 1 Fost. & F. 317.

(b) Russ. Cr., 3rd ed., vol. 1, p. 751.

(c) Id., p. 753.

(d) Hawk. P. C., Book I., Chap. 62, s. 1.

(e) Id., s. 2; Coward v. Baddeley, 4 H. & N. 478, 481.

The indictment for an assault and battery charges that the defendant "in and upon one A. B. unlawfully did make an assault, and him, the said A. B., did then beat, wound, and ill-treat, &c."

Inasmuch as every battery includes

In what an assault may consist will sufficiently appear from the above general remarks, coupled with what was said upon this subject at a former page (f). It may be well, however, further to observe, that although an assault cannot in law be committed on one who actually consents thereto (g), yet where non-resistance to an act is obtained by fraud, such act may constitute an assault (h). There is an appreciable difference between consent and submission or non-resistance induced by malpractice (i), or resulting from weakness of intellect (k); for although every consent involves a submission, it by no means follows that a mere submission involves consent (l). It seems clear, too, that the fact of consent will in general be immaterial where an actual battery, and breach of the peace, has been committed (m).

Without attempting to specify the various matters available by way of defence to an indictment for an assault, of which indeed the more important have been already sufficiently inan assault, if, on an indictment for an assault and battery, the assault is ill laid, the defendant may be convicted of the battery: Hawk. P. C., Book 1, Chap. 62, s. 1.

(f) Ante, p. 676, where the cases are collected.

See also R. v. Nichol, Russ. & Ry. 130; R. v. Rosinski, 1 Moo. C. C. 19.

(g) Reg. v. Read, 1 Den. C. C. 377; Reg. v. Martin, 2 Moo. C. C. 123.

(h) Reg. v. Case, 1 Den. C. C. 580; Reg. v. Saunders, 8 Car. & P. 265; Reg. v. Williams, Id. 286. See Reg. v. Clarke, Dears. 397 (following R. v. Jackson, Russ. & Ry. 487); Reg. v. Hanson, 2 Car. & K. 912; Reg. v. Stanton, 1 Car. & K. 415.

(i) See Reg. v. Case, supra.

(k) Reg. v. Fletcher, Bell, C. C. 63, and cases there cited.

(l) Per Coleridge, J., Reg. v. Day,

9 Car. & P. 724. See Reg. v. Camplin, 1 Den. C. C. 89.

(m) In 1 Den. C. C. 380, n., occur the following remarks, apposite to the above point, by the learned Reporter:—"An assault seems to be any sort of personal ill-usage, short of a battery, done to another against his consent. Therefore such act done with consent is no breach of the peace or crime. A battery is simply a beating, or some act which the law deems equivalent. It is not only a trespass, but a breach of the peace, and, though done with consent, is prima facie illegal. Therefore, the consent of each party in a prize fight does not legalise the battery, though it negates the mere assault. In such a case the rule would seem to apply, that 'license to beat me is void, because it is against the peace.'" See Matthew v. Ollerton, Comb. 218.

licated (n), I would add, that an actionable injury amounting to an assault, or even to a battery, is not necessarily indictable, ex. gr., if it be purely accidental (o) ; and it is laid down as a general rule, that the same facts which would make a killing homicide by misadventure will afford a good defence upon an indictment for a battery (p). Although, moreover, a conviction on a criminal charge does not per se constitute any defence to a civil action founded on the transaction out of which such charge originated, yet the Court of Queen's Bench has declined to pass sentence for an assault, whilst an action was pending for the same trespass (q). And it should be borne in mind, that by the stat. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100. s. 42 (r), justices of the peace are invested with a summary jurisdiction to hear and determine any charge of common assault and battery, and on conviction to punish the offender by imprisonment or by fine and, in default of payment thereof, by imprisonment. If, however, the justices, upon the hearing of any such charge upon the merits, where the complaint was preferred by or on the behalf of the party aggrieved shall deem the offence not to be proved, or shall find the assault or battery to have been justified, or so trifling as not to merit any punishment, and shall accordingly dismiss the complaint, they shall forthwith make out a certificate of the fact of such dismissal, and shall deliver such certificate to the party against whom the complaint was preferred (s), and such certificate, or payment of the fine, or endurance of the imprisonment awarded, will operate as a bar to any subsequent proceeding, civil or criminal, in respect of the same cause (t). But justices of (n) Ante, p. 677. And see, per Lord Abinger, C. B., Reg. v. Meredith, 8 Car. & P. 590, who says, that, "to support a charge of assault, you must show an assault which could not be justified if an action were brought for it, and leave and license pleaded."

(o) R. v. Gill, Str. 190. See Underwood v. Hewson, Str. 596 ; Dicken- son v. Watson, T. Jones, 205.

(p) Arch. Cr. Pl., 15th ed., p. 568.

(q) R. v. Mahon, 4 Ad. & E. 575.

See Ex parte Anon., Id. 576 (a).

(r) See also s. 43.

(s) 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 44.

(t) 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 45 ; Reg. v. Elrington, 1 B. & S. 688.

the peace have no summary jurisdiction in the case of an assault or battery accompanied by an attempt to commit felony, or where from any other circumstance the assault in question appears to be a fit subject for prosecution by indictment, or where the title to land is brought in question, or in some other cases (u).

Libel.

The offence of libel against an individual (to which species of libel the following remarks will be restricted) observes a learned writer upon that department of our criminal law (x), consists in the act of publishing the defamatory matter set forth on the record in the sense attributed to it by the innuendos, with the intention alleged in the indictment—viz., to injure, vilify, and prejudice the prosecutor, and to deprive him of his good name, &c., and to bring him into public contempt (y)—maliciously, without any legal justification or excuse.

Now, on examining the constituent ingredients in this offence as above set forth, we shall observe that the fact of publishing the illegal matter, and of its being published in the particular sense assigned to it (z), the existence or non-existence of the circumstances relied upon as affording a legal justification or excuse for the alleged libel, and, generally, the question whether the act of publication charged was done maliciously or wrongfully (a), are properly for the (u) 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 46.

(x) Starkie on Slander and Libel, 2nd ed., vol. 2, p. 327.

The definition of a libel is given ante, p. 734.

(y) See the form of an indictment for libel, Arch. Cr. Pl., 15th ed., p. 745.

(z) The jury should "read the paper stated to be a libel as men of common understanding, and say whether, in their minds, it conveys the idea imputed:" per Buller, J., R. v. Watson,

2 T. R. 206.

(a) In R. v. Shipley, 4 Dougl. 177, Ashhurst, J., observes, that "every man (who is of sufficient understanding to be responsible for his actions) is supposed to be cognisant of the law, as it is the rule by which every subject of the kingdom is to be governed; and, therefore, it is his business to know it (ante, p. 854). If, therefore, a man publishes that which the law says is treasonable, seditious, or rebellious, the decision of the jury. Whereas, it will be for the Court to determine whether the facts proposed to be proved would, when proved, suffice in law to constitute a publication (b) and to support the innuendos; it will be for the Court to say whether the matter charged as libellous is so in law—and whether the facts accompanying the publication amount to a legal justification or excuse for it (c).

Before the passing of Mr. Fox's celebrated Libel Act in the year 1792, it was judicially laid down, that, although it was the province of the jury thus to determine the fact of publication, and whether or not the libel meant that which it was alleged in the indictment to mean, it was exclusively the province of the Court to say whether such meaning were criminal or not; and that, if the jury should disregard the opinion of the judge in respect to this point, they would violate their oaths and duty (d); the practice, accordingly, on a criminal trial for libel, at the time alluded to, was this:—where no facts or circumstances appeared raising any justification or excuse for the alleged libel in point of law, and where consequently there was no real question of intention to be left to the jury, the Court directed them to find a verdict of guilty if they were satisfied as to the fact of publication, and the truth of the innuendos set forth in the indictment; although, if the alleged libel were in point of law no libel, the defendant might have arrested the judgment by reason of the defect, which would in that case be apparent alleging in the indictment or information that the party did it with a libellous or seditious intent, is a mere matter of legal inference from the fact of publication, and not the object of proof either on the one side or the other."

"But, where the fact of publication is ambiguous (as where it may be a doubt whether the party pulled the paper out of his pocket by accident or on purpose, or whether he gave one paper instead of another, or any such supposable case), there the maxim holds, that Actus non facit reum nisi mens sit rea." See R. v. Watson, 2 B. & C. 257.

(b) Ante, p. 745.

(c) Stark. on Slander and Libel, 2nd ed., vol. 2, pp. 327-331. See Gregory v. Reg., 12 Q. B. 957.

(d) See Hall. Const. Hist. Eng., 8th ed., vol. 3, p. 169.

on the record (e). Strong opinions being entertained, however, adverse to this mode of procedure by many, apprehensive that the liberties of the subject might be thus threatened, the statute above referred to (32 Geo. 3, c. 60) was passed (f), enacting by its first section,—which was declaratory of the law and designed to put prosecutions for libel on the same footing as other criminal cases (g),—that on every trial of an indictment (h) for a libel, the defendant having pleaded not guilty, the jury sworn to try the issue thus raised may give a general verdict of guilty or not guilty upon the whole matter put in issue upon such indictment, and shall not be required or directed by the presiding judge to find the defendant guilty merely on proof of the publication by him of the paper charged to be a libel, and of the sense ascribed to the same in such indictment. The 2nd section of the Act, however, provides that on every such trial the judge shall, according to his discretion, give his opinion and directions to the jury on the matter in issue, between the Crown and the defendant, in like manner as in other criminal cases, the jury (under sect. 3), being also entitled in their discretion to return a special verdict, and the defendant, after an adverse verdict, being entitled (sect. 4) to move in arrest of judgment as he might have done before the Act.

The effect of the statute above abstracted seems to have been simply to restore in criminal trials for libel the ordinary course and practice of the common law (i). Long, indeed, before Mr. Fox's Libel Act, and from its date down to the passing of the recent very salutary enactment, 6 & 7 Vict.

(e) Stark. on Slander and Libel, 2nd ed., vol. 2, p. 334. See, per Lord Mansfield, C. J., R. v. Woodfall, 5 Burr. 2666; R. v. Wüthers, 3 T. R. 428; R. v. Dean of St. Asaph, Id., n. (a); R. v. Shipley, 4 Dougl. 73; 21 How. St. Tr. 847.

(f) See 22 How. St. Tr. 294.

(g) Per Parke, B., Parmiter v. Coupland, 6 M. & W. 108.

(h) The statute applies also to the trial of an information for libel.

(i) Stark. on Slander and Libel, 2nd ed., vol. 2, p. 332.

c. 96, the truth of the charges contained in a libel afforded no ground of defence to an indictment or criminal information for publishing it (k). "The truth of such charges could not" then "be given in evidence under a plea of not guilty, and no special justification on the ground of truth could be pleaded. It was even said, that 'the greater the truth the greater the libel.' The legislature," however, "thinking that such a maxim misapplied brought discredit on the administration of justice, and that under certain guards and modifications the truth of the charges might advantageously be inquired into, and might be permitted to constitute a complete defence," passed the statute last referred to (l); by the 6th section whereof the defendant may now, in answer to an indictment for libel, allege the truth of the matters charged therein in the manner required in pleading a justification to an action for defamation, and may further allege that it was for the public benefit that the said matters charged should be published, and the particular fact or facts by reason whereof it was so. If a plea of the kind just specified be pleaded, the defendant will be entitled to give evidence of the truth of the matters charged as libellous, by way of defence to the indictment; and "the truth of the matters charged may" then "be inquired into but shall not amount to a defence, unless it was for the public benefit that the said matters charged should be published." Issue being taken on this plea, and the defendant being convicted, it is competent to the Court in pronouncing sentence to consider whether the guilt of the defendant is aggravated or mitigated by the plea pleaded, and by the evidence given to prove or disprove the same.

It is clear, that, if to a plea of justification the prosecutor replies that the defendant wrongfully published the libel charged in the indictment without the cause alleged, and issue is joined upon this replication, the prosecutor will be entitled to a verdict, unless the defendant establishes the truth of all the material allegations in the plea, the only function allotted to the jury in the case supposed being to say whether the whole plea is proved or not. If they find that it is proved, the defendant is acquitted. If they think that it is not, they are to declare that the defendant wrongfully published the libel without the cause alleged, and he is convicted. The jury are then functi officio (m), and nothing will remain save for the Court to pass sentence on the defendant. In doing so, however, the just measure of punishment to be awarded may materially depend upon the bona fides or otherwise of the unsuccessful plea of justification, and on the nature and weight of the evidence given under it (m).

(k) See Hall. Const. Hist. Eng., 8th ed., vol. 3, p. 169, n.

(l) Judgm., Reg. v. Newman, 1 E. & B. 573; S. C., Dears. 85.

A comparison of the 4th and 5th sections of Lord Campbell's Libel Act will further show that the punishment assigned by the legislature to the publisher of a defamatory libel varies according as he did or did not know it to be false. And under section 7 of the same statute, when evidence has been given establishing a presumptive case of publication against the defendant by the act of any other person by his authority, it is competent to him to prove that the publication in question was made without his authority, consent, or knowledge, and that the said publication did not arise from want of due care or caution on his part. Also, by section 8, the defendant, if acquitted on a prosecution, at suit of a private prosecutor, for a defamatory libel, will be entitled to recover from him his costs, whereas if the defendant fails upon a special plea of justification, he will have to pay the costs sustained by the prosecutor by reason of such plea.

Besides the procedure by indictment for a libel on an individual, a criminal information (n) will in some cases be granted by the Court of Queen's Bench, ex. gr., where the libel conveys imputations of a serious nature, and is declared by affidavit to be false (o). The applicant for such criminal information, however, whether it be granted or refused, is understood to waive his right of afterwards bringing an action for the libel in question, unless the Court, on hearing the whole matter, shall otherwise direct (p).

(m) Judgm., Reg. v. Newman, 1 E. & B. 573-4 ; S. C., Dears. 85.

Further, it remains to add that not merely will the actual publisher of a libel be amenable to our criminal law; so will he be who shall threaten to publish any libel upon any other person, or shall directly or indirectly threaten to print or publish, or propose to abstain from printing or publishing, or offer to prevent the printing or publishing of any matter or thing touching any other person "with intent to extort any money, or security for money, or any valuable thing from such or any other person, or with intent to induce any person to confer or procure for any person any appointment or office of profit or trust" (q).

Such is the state of our criminal law at the present day in regard to offences against the reputation of individuals, amended as it has been with a threefold view—for the better protection of private character—for more effectually securing the liberty of the press—and for the prevention of abuses in exercising such liberty (r).

(n) As to which, see ante, Bk. I., Chap. 5.

(o) See Reg. v. Newman, 1 E. & B. 268; S. C., Dears. 85; Ex parte Duke of Marlborough, 5 Q. B. 955; Reg. v. Gregory, 8 Ad. & E. 907; Ex parte Chapman, 4 Ad. & E. 773. As showing under what circumstances words spoken are indictable, see per Holt, C. J., Reg. v. Langley, 6 Mod. 124, and in R. v. Bear, 2 Salk. 417.

(p) Cole on Crim. Inform., p. 19.

(q) 6 & 7 Vict. c. 96, s. 3.

(r) See the preamble to 6 & 7 Vict. c. 96.

SECT. II.—Offences against Property.

Simple larceny.

The brief inquiry respecting some of the ordinary Offences against Property, and the attempt to distinguish between them, which will here be made, may conveniently commence with an analysis of the crime of Simple Larceny—i.e., larceny at common law, or, as Blackstone (s) describes it, “plain theft, unaccompanied with any other atrocious circumstance.”

Simple larceny may be defined to be ‘the wrongful taking and carrying away of the personal property of another, with a felonious intent to convert it to the taker’s own use, without the consent of the owner’ (t). This offence is specially characterised by one ingredient, viz., “a wrongful removal (taking and carrying away) of the property of another, whether it be effected without consent or by consent obtained by intimidation or fraud, so as the owner consent not in the latter case to part with his entire right of property, but with the temporary possession only” (u). And, accordingly, the indictment for larceny charges that the accused did “feloniously steal, take, and carry away” goods and chattels, therein specified, of C. D. (x).

Of what things larceny cannot be committed at common law. Things at-

It may be advisable at once to notice that of certain things larceny cannot by our common law be committed. For,—1. Our common law holds exempt from being the subject of larceny whatever is attached to or savours of the realty (y).

(s) 4 Com. p. 229.

(t) See the opinion of the judges in Hammon’s case, 2 Leach, C. C., 1089; Judgm., Reg. v. Thurborn, 1 Den. C. C. 388. It is not correct to add to the above definition, that ‘the taking was lucri causâ,’ see Reg. v. Jones, 2 Car. & K. 236; Reg. v. Privett, 1 Den. C. C. 193 (in connection with which see 26 & 27 Vict. c. 103, s. 1); R. v.

Cabbage, Russ. & Ry. 292.

(u) Cr. L. Com., 4th Rep., p. 50.

(x) Sir M. Hale’s caution as to proof of the corpus delicti in cases of murder (ante, p. 922) does not apply in regard to larceny: Reg. v. Burton, Dears. 282. See Reg. v. Samways, Dears. 371.

(y) See Reg. v. Jones, Dears. & B. 555; Reg. v. Rice, Bell C. C. 87,

For this rule various subtle reasons have been assigned ; but whether it originated in the notion that the severed portion of the realty, though removable and actually removed, was, in legal construction, still adhering to the freehold, and therefore incapable of removal ; or that the wrong-doer acquired some sort of property in the severed chattel ; or that it never was a chattel in the possession of the owner of the realty (z) ; the reason is alike unsatisfactory to modern intelligence. However, the taking of chattels real, or anything savouring of the land, as a box of title-deeds, or charters that concern it, is at common law no larceny (a). Nor can larceny be committed at common law of standing corn (b), nor of fruit from a tree which is growing, "because, from its adherence to the freehold, it is not larceny to steal the tree itself" (c).

tached to or savouring of the realty.

2. It is a rule of our common law, which has necessitated the interference of the legislature (d), that larceny cannot be committed of a chose in action, as a bond, bill of exchange, &c. (e), which is but evidence of a right, and stealing the evidence of a man's right does not interfere with the right itself (f). This rule does not, however, extend to "documents of title importing property in possession of the party" (g).

Choses in action.

In conformity with the peculiar doctrine above stated, an indictment will not lie for stealing a stamped agreement, though, if unstamped, a distinction must be noticed between where the indictment was under the repealed stat. 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29 (s. 44).

(z) Cr. L. Com., 1st Rep., p. 15.

(a) 1 Hale P. C., pp. 509, 510 ; per Alderson, B., Reg. v. Watts, Dears. 334. See 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 28.

(b) 1 Hale P. C., p. 510.

(c) R. v. Martin, 1 Leach C. C. 171. See 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, ss. 32 et seq.

(d) See, for instance, the 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 27.

(e) 8 Rep. 33 b ; R. v. Mead, 4 Car. & P. 535 ; Reg. v. Powell, 2 Den. C. C. 403.

(f) Per Lord Campbell, C. J., Reg. v. Watts, Dears. 332 ; per Alderson, B., Id. 334.

(g) Reg. v. Morrison, Bell C. C. 158, 165-7, and cases there cited.

an instrument which without a stamp is wholly void, and one which may at any moment be rendered available by having a stamp impressed upon it. In the former case, the paper upon which the agreement was written might be the subject of larceny (h); in the latter case it could not be so, for it would be evidence of a chose in action (i), and a higher character having been given to it, its character as a piece of paper would be thereby absorbed (k).

Animals
feræ naturæ.

3. A corpse is not the subject of property (l). And of animals feræ naturæ, unreclaimed and unconfined, nay even of some domesticated animals, ex. gr., dogs, which are in their nature unfit for human food (m), larceny cannot, unless by virtue of some express provision of the statute law (n), be committed.

In modification of the above-mentioned doctrines of our common law, various enactments have from time to time been passed, containing important provisions with regard to the felonious removal of various things annexed to the freehold; with regard to instruments coming within the class of choses in action; with regard also to various animals, of which larceny could not, without the interposition of the legislature, have been committed (o).

Let us now consider seriatim the various ingredients in, and points of practical importance connected with, the crime of larceny.

(h) See per Beardsley, J., The People v. Loomis, 4 Denio (U. S.) R. 381; Reg. v. Morris, 9 Car. & P. 349; Reg. v. Perry, 1 Den. C. C. 69; R. v. Mead, 4 Car. & P. 535; R. v. Walker, 1 Mood. C. C. 155.

(i) Reg. v. Watts, Dears. 326, 332.

(k) Per Coleridge, J., Dears. 334; Judgm., Reg. v. Morrison, Bell C. C. 164, citing R. v. Westbeer, Str. 1135; see Reg. v. Godfrey, Dears. & B. 426, 429.

(l) 4 Bla. Com., p. 236.

(m) Reg. v. Robinson, Bell C. C. 34; R. v. Spearing, Russ. & Ry. 250; R. v. Brooks, 4 Car. & P. 131; Reg. v. Cheafor, 2 Den. C. C. 361; Reg. v. Howell, Id. 363 n.; Hannam v. Mockett, 2 B. & C. 934, 944.

(n) See, for instance, in the case of dog-stealing, the 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 18. Et vide, s. 21.

(o) The statutes here alluded to are collected in Arch. Cr. Pl., 15th ed., pp. 297, 312, 314.

To constitute this offence, the chattel feloniously taken must have been the property, absolute or special (p), of its alleged owner. And cases do sometimes occur in which a doubt may exist as to the party in whom the ownership of or property in a chattel was, at the time of its assumed wrongful conversion, really vested. In Reg. v. Smith (q), the following facts appeared in evidence: the prisoner, professing to be about to pay the prosecutor some money due to him, produced a receipt stamp, which the latter filled up for the amount mentioned by the prisoner, who then, without paying the money due, went away with the receipt, intending to defraud the prosecutor; upon these facts it was held, that the prisoner could not be found guilty of stealing the receipt stamp from the prosecutor, because it had never been in his possession independently of the prisoner, nor was it ever intended that the receipt should be the property of the prosecutor.

Property
in chattel stolen—how laid.

I may next observe that, at common law, in order to constitute a 'taking' within the meaning assignable to that word in the definition of simple larceny, the chattel alleged to have been taken must have been in the possession, actual or constructive, of him in whom the property is laid.

Possession actual or constructive.

Reed's case (r) shows very clearly what is meant by a 'constructive' possession sufficient to support an indictment for larceny. There, the prisoner (Reed) had been sent by his master, with a cart belonging to the latter, to fetch coals from the wharf of a company with whom he dealt for that article.

(p) See, for instance, Reg. v. Rowe, Bell C. C. 93. If property be stolen out of the possession of a bailee, it may be described in the indictment as the property either of the bailor or of the bailee: 2 Hale P. C., p. 181. See Reg. v. Vincent, 2 Den. C. C. 464; Reg. v. Green, Dears. & B. 113.

(q) 2 Den. C. C. 449 (with which compare Reg. v. Rodway, 9 Car. & P. 784). See also Reg. v. Johnson, 2 Den. C. C. 310; Reg. v. Frampton, 2 Car. & K. 47.

(r) Dears. 168, 257; Reg. v. Kay, Dears. & B. 231.

On his way home with the coals the prisoner, without authority for so doing, disposed of a quantity of them to a third person, and the question was whether he could be convicted of larceny for so doing. It was held that he might be thus convicted. There can be no doubt, remarked Lord Campbell, C. J., that, to support an indictment for larceny in such a case, the goods alleged to have been stolen must have been in the actual or constructive possession of the master ; and "if the master had not otherwise the possession of them than by the bare receipt of his servant upon the delivery of another for the master's use, although as against third persons this is in law a receipt of the goods by the master, yet in respect of the servant himself this will not support a charge of larceny, because, as to him, there was no tortious taking in the first instance, and consequently no trespass (s). Therefore, if there had been here a quantity of coals delivered to the prisoner for the prosecutor, and the prisoner, having remained in the personal possession of them . . . without anything having been done to determine his original exclusive possession, had converted them animo furandi (t), he would have been guilty of embezzlement (u), and not of larceny. But if the servant has done anything which determines his original exclusive possession of the goods, so that the master thereby comes constructively into possession, and the servant afterwards converts them animo furandi, he is guilty of larceny, and not merely of a breach of trust at common law or of embezzlement under the statute" (x). The reason being that in this latter case there is a tortious and felonious 'taking' within the meaning of that word as used in the definition of larceny. The constructive possession of the coals by the prosecutor, in the case above cited,

(s) As to applying the test here adverted to, see post, p. 939. A bailee may, now, be convicted of larceny, post, p. 941.

(t) As to which, see post, p. 941.

(u) Post, p. 958.

(x) See Reg. v. Wright, Dears. & B. 431 ; Reg. v. Green, Dears. 323.

had commenced at the moment when they were placed in his cart, so that there was a subsequent taking of the coals by the prisoner — whose intention was beyond all question felonious.

Referable also to the principle just stated is the rule laid down by Sir M. Hale (y), that a wife cannot commit felony of the goods of the husband, because husband and wife are one person in law (z); a rule, however, which is subject to this qualification, that if a wife commit adultery and then deliver the goods of her husband to the adulterer, she is held to have thus determined her quality of wife, and is no longer looked upon as having any property in the goods, so that the adulterer, who is her accomplice in taking the husband's goods, may be convicted of larceny (a). So if the wife and a stranger taking the husband's property go away together for the purpose of having adulterous intercourse, and afterwards effect their guilty purpose, the adulterer may be convicted of larceny (b). But if a stranger merely assist the wife in taking her husband's goods he could not be convicted of such crime (c).

Again, at common law, there would not be a 'taking' sufficient to constitute larceny where the property alleged to have been stolen came into the hands of the prisoner rightfully in the first instance, and without an animus furandi, although it were afterwards wrongfully appropriated by him (d). For the rule was—furtum non est ubi initium habet detentionis per dominum rei (e). If A. lend B. a

Where property alleged to have been stolen came rightfully into possession of accused.

(y) 1 P. C. p. 513. See Reg. v. Brooks, Dears. 184.

(z) 3rd Inst. 110.

(a) Reg. v. Featherstone, Dears. 369; with which compare Reg. v. Fitch, Dears. & B. 187; Reg. v. Thompson, 1 Den. C. C. 549.

(b) Reg. v. Berry, Bell C. C. 95.

(c) Reg. v. Avery, Bell C. C. 150.

(d) Reg. v. Thistle, 1 Den. C. C.

502, 504. See also Reg. v. Gardner, 1 L. & C. C. 243 (where the facts adduced in evidence on a charge of larceny failed to show a felonious taking); with which compare Reg. v. Poynton, Id. 247.

(e) 3rd Inst. 107. As illustrating the rule above cited, see Reg. v. Thomas, 9 Car. & P. 741; Reg. v. Goodbody, 8 Car. & P. 665; Reg. v. Evans, horse for a particular journey, and B., having received the horse bond fide, afterwards rode away with it, he would not at common law be guilty of larceny (f); though, if the owner of a horse delivered him to a servant or agent with orders that the latter should take the horse to a distant place and there leave him, the possession would be deemed constructively to remain in the owner, and the agent would be guilty of theft in selling the horse, whilst in charge of it, contrary to his orders (g). And where the chattel in question was originally received by the accused animo furandi (h), or where a constructive possession of the goods confided to the prisoner's custody remained, at the time of the conversion, in their owner (i), the rule above stated did not apply.

If, however, goods were sold upon credit and delivered, no subsequent dealing with them by the vendee could amount to larceny (k); and if A. delivered to B. a watch to be regulated or repaired (l), or a horse to be agisted (m), and B. sold it, this was not larceny, because the watch in the one case, and the horse in the other, was delivered voluntarily, and not taken animo furandi (n).

It was further laid down that "all felony includes trespass," and that, if the party accused of stealing "be guilty of no trespass in taking the goods, he cannot be guilty of felony in Car. & M. 632; R. v. Jackson, 1 Mood. C. C. 119; Reg. v. Adams, 1 Den. C. C. 38.

(f) 1 Hale P. C., p. 504; Hawk. P. C., Bk. I., Chap. 19, s. 2; R. v. Banks, Russ. & Ry. 441; R. v. Pear, 1 Leach C. C. 212.

(g) Cr. L. Com., 4th Rep., pp. 54-5; 3rd Inst. 107, 108.

(h) R. v. Stock, 1 Mood. C. C. 87.

(i) Reg. v. Harvey, 9 Car. & P. 353; Reg. v. Johnson, Dears. 310.

As to R. v. M'Namee, 1 Mood. C. C. 368, see Reg. v. Hey, 1 Den. C. C.

606.

(k) See Reg. v. Cohen, 2 Den. C. C. 249 (where the goods were parted with on the express understanding that they were to be paid for at the time, and were taken by the prisoner animo furandi); R. v. Campbell, 1 Mood. C. C. 179.

(l) Reg. v. Thistle, 1 Den. C. C. 502; R. v. Levy, 4 Car. & P. 241.

(m) R. v. Smith, 1 Mood. C. C. 473.

(n) See also Reg. v. Pratt, Dears. 360.

carrying them away" (o); and that "to support an indictment for larceny the prosecutor must have such possession as would entitle him to bring trespass" (p). Hence, if goods were bailed and the bailee converted or disposed of them animo furandi, this act would not have been, at common law, punishable as larceny—because, being lawfully in possession of the chattel, the taking it would not have constituted either a trespass or a felony, though the case would have been different if the bailee had "broken bulk," i.e., broken open a bale of goods entrusted to him, because by so doing the nature of the chattel would have become changed—the bailment would have been determined, and the property and possessory title would have reverted to the bailor (q).

Bailment.

Now, however, it is enacted by the stat. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 3, that "whosoever being a bailee of any chattel, money or valuable security, shall fraudulently take or convert the same to his own use, or the use of any person other than the owner thereof, although he shall not break bulk or otherwise determine the bailment, shall be guilty of larceny, and may be convicted thereof upon an indictment for larceny." This enactment leaves the offence of larceny as it was at common law, save only as affected by its express words (r).

In practice, a difficulty is sometimes experienced in determining whether goods alleged to have been stolen were not in fact obtained in pursuance of a contract between the prisoner and the prosecutor,—here care is necessary in scrutinising the Goods obtained in pursuance of contract.

(o) Hawk. P. C., Book I., Chap. 19, s. 1. See Reg. v. Wynn, 1 Den. C. C. 365, 367.

(p) Per Parke, B., Reg. v. Stear, 1 Den. C. C. 355; Reg. v. Smith, 2 Den. C. C. 449.

(q) Year Book, 13 Edw. 4, fol. 9 b; Judgm., Fenn v. Bittleston, 7 Exch. 159, 160; Cr. L. Com., 4th Rep., pp. 54, 55; Reg. v. Cornish, Dears. 425;

Reg. v. Poyser, 2 Den. C. C. 233; R. v. Howell, 8 Car. & P. 325; Reg. v. Jenkins, 9 Id. 38; Reg. v. Stear, 1 Den. C. C. 349.

(r) See Reg. v. Trebilcock, Dears. & B. 453, 456; Reg. v. Loose, Bell C. C. 259; Reg. v. Robson, 1 L. & C. C. C. 93; Reg. v. Bunkall, 33 L. J., M. C., 75.

facts adduced in evidence, and in ascertaining whether the alleged or colorable contract were not a mere pretence, trick, and fraud upon the prosecutor, part of a scheme for feloniously getting possession of his property, so as to render the intention which actuated the prisoner in doing so felonious (s).

The taking must have been animo furandi.

Further, in order to constitute larceny at common law, the 'taking' must have been animo furandi, and with intent to deprive the owner wholly of his property in the thing taken; and it will of course be for the jury in any particular case to determine whether the facts adduced in evidence really prove such an intent. Thus, in Reg. v. Holloway (t) the prisoner, a workman, employed in a tan-yard to dress leather, was indicted for stealing certain skins of that material, which it appeared from the finding of the jury that he took, "not with intent to sell or dispose of," but with a view to charging for them as if they had been dressed by himself, and so obtaining payment for them from his master,—upon this finding of the jury the Court held that the prisoner could not be convicted of larceny, because there had been no intent on his part to deprive the owner wholly of his property in the leather. "If," says Alderson, B., in the above case, "a servant takes a horse out of his master's stable and turns it out into the road, with intent to get a reward the next day by bringing it back to his master, would that be larceny?" a question which might safely be answered in the negative, upon the simple ground that the facts here supposed would not evidence a felonious

(s) Reg. v. Bramley, 1 L. & C. C. C. 21; Reg. v. Thompson, Id. 225; Reg. v. Morgan, Dears. 395; R. v. Patch, 1 Leach C. C. 238; R. v. Moore, Id. 314; Reg. v. Wilson, 8 Car. & P. 111; Reg. v. Robins, Id. 418; Reg. v. Brown, Id. 616; Semple's case, 2 Leach C. C. 420.

(t) 1 Den. C. C. 370, followed in Reg. v. Poole, Dears. & B. 345, and distinguished in Reg. v. Trebilcock, Id. 453; 3rd Inst. 107. See R. v. Phillips, cited 2 East P. C., pp. 662, 663; R. v. Holloway, 5 Car. & P. 524; Reg. v. Privett, 1 Den. C. C. 193 (citing R. v. Morfitt, Russ. & Ry. 307; R. v. Cabbage, Id. 292); Reg. v. Gruncell, 9 Car. & P. 365; Reg. v. Handley, Car. & M. 547; Reg. v. Richards, 1 Car. & K. 532.

intent, i.e., an intent to deprive the owner wholly of his property in the thing taken (u). A person may, however, be guilty of larceny who takes the property of another and afterwards sells it to him again—provided the thief took it with the intention that it never should revert to the owner as his own property except by sale; if, for instance, A. takes a horse from B., wrongfully disguises it, and then sells it back to him again, this would be larceny. In cases of this sort (x), which are distinguishable from Reg. v. Holloway above cited, there is a clear intention to deprive the owner of his property in the thing taken, evidenced by a positive assertion of title at the time of resale.

A felonious intent could not, however, be inferred from a taking of property in mere thoughtlessness—by way of joke—or with a mischievous design other than that of depriving the owner of it. And where an assertion of property and ownership is meant by the taking, all semblance of a criminal intent manifestly disappears.

Where goods of a third person, having been lost, are appropriated by the finder to his own use, such appropriation under certain circumstances will, whereas in others it will not—amount to larceny. It will be larceny if the finder takes the goods with the intention of wholly applying them to his own use—at the same time “reasonably believing that the owner can be found;” this is the rule laid down in Reg. v. Thornborn (y), where the Court observe, that, although in applying it questions of some nicety may arise, yet it will generally be ascertained whether the accused had reasonable belief that the owner could not be found, by evidence of his previous acquaintance with the ownership of the particular chattel—the Appropriation of lost goods by finder.

(u) See Reg. v. York, 1 Den. C. C. 35; 1 Hale P. C., p. 599.

(x) See Reg. v. Hall, 1 Den. C. C. 381; Reg. v. Manning, Dears. 21.

(y) 1 Den. C. C. 387, 394, 396. Acc. Reg. v. Moore, 1 L. & C. C. C. 1;

Reg. v. Christopher, Bell C. C. 27; Reg. v. Dixon, Dears. 580, and cases cited post, pp. 945 et seq. See also Reg. v. Peters, 1 Car. & K. 245, 247; Reg. v. Mole, Id. 417.

place where it is found, or the nature of the marks upon it,—in some cases the existence of such a belief in the mind of the finder would be at once obvious—in others it would appear only after an examination into the particular circumstances. Thus—if a horse is found feeding on an open common or on the side of a public road, or a watch is found apparently hidden (z) in a hay-stack—the taking of either description of property would be larceny, because the taker could have no right to presume that the owner did not know where to find it.

If, on the other hand, a man finds goods which have been actually lost, or which may reasonably be supposed by him to have been lost, and appropriates them with intent to take the entire dominion over them, really believing, when he takes them, that the owner cannot be found, this is not larceny (a); nor would it be, if the taking occurred in such a place and under such circumstances as that the owner might be reasonably presumed by the taker to have abandoned his property in the particular chattel, or at least not to know where to find it. In order to appreciate correctly the true grounds upon which the distinction just pointed out depends, we must look, not so much to abstract legal principles, as to motives of expediency, in which so much of our criminal law has doubtless originated; and we shall then see that cases of abstraction of lost property being of rare occurrence, when compared with violations of property in the possession of an owner, there was in the former case no need of so severe a penalty as in the latter; and the civil remedy, viz., by action of trover, for recovering possession of the chattel misappropriated, was therefore deemed sufficient (b). It is moreover a rule of our criminal law, formerly cited (c), that actus non

(z) I. e., under such circumstances as may fairly lead to the inference that it was hidden.

(a) Judgm., 1 Den. C. C. 396.

(b) Judgm., 1 Den. C. C. 393.

(c) Ante, p. 868.

facit reum nisi mens sit rea (d) ; whence it follows that the guilt or innocence of an accused person must depend on the circumstances of the particular case as they appear to him,—so that the crime of larceny cannot be committed unless the goods alleged to have been feloniously taken appear to have an owner, and further, as may be seen by looking at the definition of larceny already given (e), unless the taker must have known or believed that the taking was invito domino,—which could not be if the property were believed to have been abandoned.

The law thus laid down in Thurborn's case, as applicable where goods apparently lost, or at all events without any visible owner are appropriated by the finder to his own use, was recognised by the Court of Criminal Appeal in Reg. v. Preston (f) ; which shows, that if a man were to pick up in the street a bank note marked with the owner's name, so that he could easily be discovered, with the innocent intention of finding out the owner and restoring him the note, but were afterwards to change his mind and to convert the note to his own use, this would not amount to larceny.

In Reg. v. West (g) the accused was charged with stealing a purse and its contents under these circumstances : The prosecutor, after making a purchase at the prisoner's stall at market in a country town, accidentally left his purse upon it ; the prisoner thereupon appropriated it to her own use, and, on the prosecutor demanding it from her, denied all knowledge of it. The jury found that the prisoner took up the purse knowing that it was not her own, and intending at that moment to appropriate it. They also found that the prisoner did not then know who was its rightful owner. The prisoner having been convicted, the Court held the conviction right, observing, that if there had been evidence that the purse and (d) Judgm., 1 Den. C. C. 389 ; 3rd Inst. 107.

(f) 2 Den. C. C. 353.

(g) Dears. 402.

(e) Ante, p. 934.

its contents were lost property according to the strict meaning of that term, and the jury had so found, they ought further to have been asked whether the prisoner had reasonable means of finding the owner, or reasonably believed that the owner could not be found. . . . There is a clear distinction, they further remarked, between property lost and property merely mislaid, or put down and left by mistake under circumstances which would enable the owner to know the place where he had left it, and to which he would naturally return for it.

As showing what would amount to larceny under circumstances somewhat analogous to those latterly considered, may be specified the following cases:—where a hackney coachman abstracts the contents of a parcel which has been accidentally left in his coach by a passenger whose address he could easily ascertain;—or where a tailor finds and applies to his own use a pocket-book left in a coat sent to him to repair by a customer;—or where the purchaser of an article of furniture, as a desk, at a sale by auction, discovers valuables in it and appropriates them to his own use—provided in this case that the purchaser either had express notice that he was not to have any title to the contents of the desk if there happened to be anything in it, or provided, without such express notice, that he had no ground to believe that he had bought the contents, and had reason to think, as he most likely would have, that the owner could be discovered (h).

Doctrine of
relation.

But although it be true, that, where the taking of a chattel is in its inception lawful, a subsequent conversion of the thing taken, however tortious or wrongful it be in a moral

(h) Judgm., Merry v. Green, 7 M. & W. 623, and cases there cited; Judgm., Reg. v. Thurborn, 1 Den. C. 394-5. The civil rights of the finder of lost property, as against any one save the true owner, will appear from Bridges v. Hawkesworth, 21 L. J., Q. B., 75; Merry v. Green, supra; Armory v. Delamirie, cited ante, p. 790; Buckley v. Gross, 3 B. & S. 566.

point of view, does not constitute the offence of larceny (i), yet, if the taking be in itself wrongful and unlawful, albeit without any felonious intent, a subsequent conversion of it with such intent may suffice to constitute the offence in question. Thus, in Reg. v. Riley (k), the prisoner was indicted for stealing a lamb under the following circumstances: it appeared that, having in the first instance put twenty-nine black-faced lambs, belonging to himself, into a field which contained ten white-faced lambs of the prosecutor, he afterwards took away his own lambs and offered them for sale as amounting in number to twenty-nine; the proposed purchaser, however, on counting the lambs, pointed out to the prisoner that there were in fact thirty in the flock, which included one white-faced lamb belonging to the prosecutor. The prisoner nevertheless sold them all to the other party on his own individual account. Now, on the trial of this case, the jury found that at the time of leaving the field the prisoner did not know that the prosecutor's lamb was in the flock, but that he had a felonious intention when he sold it. The question accordingly was, could the prisoner, upon the above facts and finding, be convicted of larceny? and the Court of Criminal Appeal held that he might be so, because the original taking was wrongful,—for, assuming that the prisoner was ignorant of the fact of the lamb being in his flock when he drove it from the field, the so driving it away and keeping it was a tortious act for which trespass (l) would have lain, and this act of continuing trespass became felonious when the prisoner, knowing that the lamb in question was not his own, sold it (m). Cases thus distinctly

(i) Judgm., Reg. v. Thurborn, 1 Den. C. C. 397; Reg. v. Preston, 2 Id. 353. See Reg. v. Davies, Dears. 640, following R. v. Macklow, 1 Mood. C. C. 100.

(k) Dears. 149.

(l) Ante, p. 795.

(m) Although it is not proposed to advert to points of a purely technical character connected with the indictment for larceny, it may be observed that, by the stat. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 5, "it shall be lawful to insert several counts in the same indictment against illustrating the practical operation of the doctrine of relation in felony, do not very frequently present themselves in our Reports.

The asportation—
what.

It has now been shown, that, to sustain an indictment for larceny, proof must be given that the specific chattel alleged to have been stolen was taken out of the possession, actual or constructive of its owner—invito domino and animo furandi—and that the intention in taking it was wholly to deprive the owner of his property therein. Another ingredient, not as yet specifically noticed in the crime of larceny, is the ‘carrying away’ or ‘asportation’ of the said chattel; for, to constitute this offence, there must not only be a taking but a carrying away. A bare removal, however, from the place in which he found the goods, though the thief does not quite make off with them, is a sufficient asportation: as if a man be leading another’s horse out of a close and be apprehended in the fact (n); or if a servant, animo furandi, take his master’s hay from his stable and put it into his master’s waggon (o); or if a thief, intending to steal plate, takes it out of a chest in which it was, and lays it down upon the floor, but is surprised before he can make his escape with it (p); or, if gas be fraudulently the same person for any number of distinct acts of stealing, not exceeding three, which may have been committed by him against the same person, within the space of six months, from the first to the last of such acts, and to proceed thereon for all or any of them.” And, by s. 6 of the same Act, “if, upon the trial of any indictment for larceny, it shall appear that the property, alleged in such indictment to have been stolen at one time, was taken at different times, the prosecutor shall not, by reason thereof, be required to elect upon which taking he will proceed, unless it shall appear that there were more than three takings, or that more than the space of six months elapsed between the first and the last of such takings; and, in either of such last-mentioned cases, the prosecutor shall be required to elect to proceed for such number of takings, not exceeding three, as appear to have taken place within the period of six months, from the first to the last of such takings.” See Reg. v. Heywood, 33 L. J. M. C. 133.

(n) 4 Bla. Com., p. 231; 3 Inst. 108, 109.

(o) Reg. v. Gruncell, 9 Car. & P. 365.

(p) R. v. Simson, Kel. 31; R. v. Walsh, 1 Mood. C. C. 14; Reg. v. Samways, Dears. 371.

severed and abstracted from the main against the will and without the knowledge of the company who supply it (g). In any of these cases there is a sufficient 'asportation' (r), within the meaning of that term as used in the definition of simple larceny.

Lastly, in connection with the taking and asportation, as constituent ingredients in larceny, it may be well to add, that, if a man, by means of an innocent agent, does an act which amounts in law to this crime, the employer, and not the innocent agent, is the person accountable for that act (s). And further, should it appear, on the trial of one accused of larceny, that the asportation was not completed, the jury may, if the facts proved justify such a finding, convict of the attempt to steal (t); for which, moreover, as being a misdemeanor at common law, an indictment might clearly be preferred (u).

Larceny effected by means of innocent agent.

Attempt to steal.

The offence of receiving goods, moneys, &c., knowing them to have been stolen (x), is sometimes scarcely distinguishable from that of stealing; as, for instance, where the thief and receiver are together when the felony is committed, and the thing taken is transferred by the former to the latter. It has been held, indeed, on the one hand, that a person who, whilst waiting outside a house, receives goods which a confederate is stealing in the house, is a principal (y); and, on Receiving stolen goods, &c.

(g) Reg. v. White, Dears. 203.

(r) As to which, see further, 2 East P. C., 556; R. v. Pearson, 4 Car. & P. 572; R. v. Walsh, cited Id., 576, n. (d).

(s) Per Erle, J., Reg. v. Bleasdale, 2 Car. & K. 768.

(t) Ante, p. 884.

(u) See Reg. v. Ferguson, Dears. 427; Reg. v. Cheeseman, 1 L. & C. C. 140.

(x) By the 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 91, "whosoever shall receive any chattel, money, valuable security, or other property whatsoever, the stealing, taking, extorting, obtaining, embezzling, or otherwise disposing whereof shall amount to a felony either at common law or by virtue" of the above Act, "knowing the same to have been feloniously stolen, taken, extorted, obtained, embezzled, or disposed of shall be guilty of felony, and may be indicted and convicted, either as an accessory after the fact, or for a substantive felony."

(y) R. v. Owen, 1 Mood. C. C. 96. "If one burglar stands outside a win-the other hand, that if the goods be removed some little distance from the house before they are delivered into the prisoner's hands, he will be indictable as a receiver only (2). However, the stat. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 92, enacts, that, "in any indictment containing a charge of feloniously stealing any property, it shall be lawful to add a count or several counts for feloniously receiving the same, or any part or parts thereof, knowing the same to have been stolen," and *vice versa*d. Also by s. 94 of this statute, it is enacted, that "if upon the trial of any two or more persons indicted for jointly receiving any property, it shall be proved that one or more of such persons separately received any part or parts of such property, it shall be lawful for the jury to convict upon such indictment such of the said persons as shall be proved to have received any part or parts of such property" (a).

To constitute the offence of receiving stolen goods, it must be shown in evidence that the goods were stolen (b), and that they were received by the prisoner with knowledge that they had been stolen (c). If goods are stolen and then returned by the owner to the thief with directions to sell them to the prisoner, who had been previously suspected of receiving stolen goods, and the thief does so sell them and hands over the proceeds to the prisoner, the latter could not be convicted as a receiver; because the goods which had been stolen had subsequently passed into the possession and were under the control of the real owner, and, being so in dow while another plunders the house and hands out the goods to him, he surely could not be indicted as a receiver:" per Alderson, B., Reg. v. Perkins, 2 Den. C. C. 461. See Reg. v. Hilton, Bell, C. C. 20.

(2) R. v. King, Russ. & Ry. 332. As to the evidence which may suffice to support an indictment for receiving stolen goods, see Reg. v. Hobson, Dears. 400; R. v. King, Russ. & Ry. 332; R. v. Walkley, 4 Car. & P. 132; 2 East P. C., pp. 767-8.

(a) See Reg. v. Dring, Dears. & B. 329; Reg. v. Woodward, 1 L. & C. C. 122, 127.

(b) See Reg. v. Frampton, Dears. & B. 585.

(c) See the stat. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 91.

his possession and under his control, were transferred by his authority to the prisoner (d).

Again—"the receipt of stolen goods knowingly," as remarked by Lord Denman, C. J. (e), "does not of necessity comprise any series of acts; on the contrary, that offence is not committed at all unless the receipt and the knowledge are simultaneous." The receiving, however, must be proved—i.e., the possession—actual or constructive—must be shown to have passed or been transferred to the prisoner; and therefore, where stolen fowls were forwarded by coach in a hamper without any address, but with instructions that it would be called for, and it was accordingly called for by the wife of one of the prisoners, who, however, on applying for it, was apprehended before it had been delivered to her, it was held that the wife could not be convicted of receiving the stolen property, because she could not be said, by merely claiming the fowls which never were actually or potentially in her possession, to have in fact or law received them (f). In order to sustain an indictment for receiving stolen goods, it is not, indeed, necessary to show manual possession of them by the prisoner, provided they be within his control (g), or constructively in his possession. The question, what is such a possession as will suffice to support a conviction for this offence, was much discussed in Reg. v. Wiley (h), where a difference of opinion existed amongst the judges in regard to it. Although, moreover, 'receiving' implies "a taking into possession, actual or constructive" (i), there may be much difficulty in accurately discriminating between the receipt of goods and the mere intention to receive them. "In all these cases boundary lines," remarks Alderson, B. (k), "are matters of great nicety, and seem to unthinking (overruling R. v. Lyons, Car. & M.

(d) Reg. v. Dolan, Dears. 436,
217).

(e) Reg. v. Button, 11 Q. B. 943-4.

(f) Reg. v. Hill, 1 Den. C. C. 453.

(g) Reg. v. Smith, Dears. 494.

(h) 2 Den. C. C. 37.

(i) Per Parke, B., Id. 49.

(k) Id. ibid.

persons to involve absurd and frivolous distinctions; but those who are practically acquainted with the administration of the law have daily experience of their necessity, and know that without them acts and principles essentially different from each other in nature and operation would be confounded together."

In Reg. v. Brooks (l), the prisoner, a married woman, was indicted for receiving stolen goods; it appeared in evidence that the goods in question had been stolen by the prisoner's husband from his employer, and were afterwards taken home and given to his wife by him: it was held that the prisoner could not properly be convicted of the offence charged (l); for there was not under such circumstances a 'receiving' of the goods—husband and wife being for many purposes regarded as one person in law (m).

Obtaining goods or money by false pretences.

The statutory offence of obtaining goods, &c., by false pretences now depends upon the 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 88, which enacts, "that whosoever shall by any false pretence obtain from any other person (n) any chattel (o), money, or valuable security (p) with intent to defraud shall be guilty of a misdemeanor," and punishable as the Act directs (q). Between the crime just specified and that of larceny, the most intelligible distinction seems to be this:—In larceny the owner of the thing stolen has no intention to part with his property therein to the person taking it; in the former case the

(l) Dears. 184. See Reg. v. M'Athey, 1 L. & C. C. C. 250; Reg. v. Ward-roper, Bell C. C. 249; Reg. v. Matthews, 1 Den. C. C. 596; Reg. v. Dring, Dears. & B. 329.

(m) Ante, p. 583.

(n) The ownership of the property alleged to have been fraudulently obtained need not be stated in the indictment. See the proviso in this section.

(o) A chattel, ex. gr. a dog, which is not the subject of larceny is not within these words: Reg. v. Robinson, 1 Bell

C. C. 34.

(p) See Reg. v. Greenhalgh, Dears. 267; 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 18; Reg. v. Leonard, 1 Den. C. C. 304.

(q) Ss. 89 & 90 of the statute supra apply to the cases respectively where any money or thing is by any false pretence caused to be paid or delivered to any person other than the person making the false pretence—and where a person is by any false pretence induced to execute a valuable security.

owner has such an intention, but the money or chattel is obtained from him by fraud (r). "If," says Parke, B. (s), "a person, through the fraudulent representations of another, delivers to him a chattel, intending to pass the property in it, the latter cannot be indicted for larceny, but only for obtaining the chattel under false pretences."

Where, then, a man represents as an existing fact that which is not an existing fact, and so gets the money or chattels of another, that is a false pretence (t), it being for the jury to say "whether or not the pretence used were the means of obtaining the property" (u). An instance of a false pretence within the statute presents itself where a person goes to a shop and says 'that he is sent by some particular customer for such and such goods,' which upon the faith of what he says are handed to him; or where the secretary of a benefit society obtains money from one of its members by representing that a certain amount, exceeding that actually due, is owing by him to the society (x); or where money is obtained by means of a begging letter setting forth false statements as to the name and circumstances of the accused (y); or where A., the accused, falsely represents that he is connected with B., a person of known opulence, and on the faith of such representation obtains for himself property (z); or where C. by fraudulently pretending that a genuine £1 Irish bank-note is a £5 note, obtains from D. the full value of a £5 note in change (a). So, the fraudulently offering in payment a spurious note, not within the (r) Per Talfourd, J., White v. Garden, 10 C. B. 927; Reg. v. Barnes, 2 Den. C. C. 59.

(s) Powell v. Hoyland, 6 Exch. 70; R. v. Adams, Russ. & Ry. 225.

(t) Reg. v. Woolley, 1 Den. C. C. 559; Reg. v. Welman, Dears. 138; Reg. v. Archer, Id. 449; Reg. v. Thompson, 1 L. & C. C. C. 233; Reg. v. Lee, Id. 309; Reg. v. Kerrigan, 33

L. J., M. C., 71.

(u) 2 Russ. Cr., 3rd ed., p. 289, n. (g).

(x) Reg. v. Woolley, 1 Den. C. C. 559.

(y) Reg. v. Jones, 1 Den. C. C. 551.

(z) Reg. v. Archer, Dears. 449.

(a) Reg. v. Jessop, Dears. & B. 442. See, also, Reg. v. Evans, Bell C. G. 187.

OFFENCES

operation of the statute law as to forgery, under the pretence that it is a Bank of England note, would be a false pretence within the statute (b). It is not, indeed, necessary that the false pretence should be in words, it may be evidenced by the conduct and acts of the accused party, ex. gr., by the fact of the prisoner going to a shop in Oxford or Cambridge dressed in the academical costume, and ordering goods, although not being a member of the University; for this would be evidence whence a jury might infer a pretence that he was such a member (c).

To support an indictment for false pretences there must, however, be a knowingly false statement of a supposed by-gone or existing fact made with intent to defraud, and an obtaining of the money by means of that representation (d). A mere representation as to some future fact would not be within the statute, because in this latter case the party addressed has an opportunity of exercising his judgment on the probability of its happening (e). Neither does a mere falsehood told by way of excuse (f), although goods be obtained thereby—nor would a false promise or a false statement by the party charged, that he will do or means to do a particular act, suffice to constitute a false pretence (g), unless conjoined with a false pretence as to an existing fact (h). Nor could a mere fraudulent overcharge in respect

(b) Reg. v. Coulson, 1 Den. C. C. 592; R. v. Parker, 2 Mood. C. C. 1.

(c) R. v. Barnard, 7 Car. & P. 784; R. v. Story, Russ. & Ry. 81.

(d) Per Jervis, C. J., Reg. v. Welman, Dears. 198; Reg. v. Hewgill, Id. 315.

(e) Per Lord Campbell, C. J., Reg. v. Woolley, 1 Den. C. C. 563-4, where the following question is put by the counsel for the prisoner:—"If A. tells B. that he owes him 5*l.*, and B, though really owing him nothing, pays him 5*l.*, is that a false pretence?" To which Lord Campbell answers,—“If a tradesman, knowing that a customer owes him nothing whatever, says that he owes him 5*l.* and gets the money. I think he comes within the statute.” See also R. v. Villeneuve, 2 East, P. C. 830; R. v. Goodall, Russ. & R. 461; Reg. v. Burnside, Bell C. C. 282; Reg. v. Henshaw, 33 L. J. M. C. 132.

(f) R. v. Wakeling, R. & Ry. 504.

(g) Reg. v. Johnson, 2 Mood. C. C. 254.

(h) Reg. v. Jennison, 1 L. & C. C. C. 157.

of work done, or a misrepresentation of the state of accounts as between partner and co-partner (i), be made the subject-matter of an indictment (k). Though where the prisoner had committed a fraud on the sale of a cheese, by pretending that a sample which he had given the prosecutor to taste was part of the cheese actually offered for sale, whereas in truth it was taken from a cheese of a very superior quality, and thus obtained money from the prosecutor—proof of this fraud was held sufficient to support an indictment for obtaining money by false pretences: although it was argued, that, if so, an indictment “would lie in every case of a fraudulent sale by sample which did not correspond with the bulk” (l).

The distinction, doubtless, is somewhat nice between a fraud actionable and one indictable at common law; and, again, between the latter kind of fraud and the statutory misdemeanor. The brief remarks which follow, and a perusal of the cases cited in notis, may help to elucidate this subject.

In Reg. v. Closs (m), Cockburn, C. J., observes, as the

(i) Reg. v. Evans, 1 L. & C. C. C. 252.

(k) Reg. v. Oates, Dears. 459.

(l) Reg. v. Abbott, 1 Den. C. C. 273; (with which acc. Reg. v. Goss, Bell C. C. 208); recognised in Reg. v. Burgon, Dears. & B. 11, 24; Reg. v. Roebuck, Id. 24, 40; Reg. v. Gardner, Id. 40, 45; Reg. v. Sherwood, Id. 261; Reg. v. Bryan, Id. 265; Reg. v. Kenrick, 5 Q. B. 49; Reg. v. Eagleton, Dears. 376, 515; R. v. Wheatley, 2 Burr. 1128, cited ante, p. 860. The above cases are important, in reference to the distinction, not always clearly discernible, between the offence of cheating at common law, and the statutory misdemeanor commented on in the text.

(m) Dears. & B. 460, 466-7, with which compare Power v. Barham, 4

Ad. & E. 473; there the question arising on the sale of a picture was whether the statement in the bill of parcels of the name of a particular artist in connection with the picture was meant to imply a warranty of genuineness or conveyed only a description of the specific thing sold, or was an expression of opinion as to its authenticity. This question was submitted to a jury for solution, and as they found that a warranty was intended by the insertion of an artist's name in the bill, the plaintiff had a verdict. Here it is observable that fraud was not alleged, nor was there apparent any criminal ingredient in the right of action—which was purely ex contractu.

See Josling v. Kingsford, 13 C. B., result of the authorities, that "if a person in the course of his trade, openly and publicly carried on, were to put a false mark or token upon an article so as to pass it off as a genuine one when, in fact, it was only a spurious one, and the article was sold, and money obtained, by means of that false mark or token, that would be a cheat at common law;" as, for instance, "if a man sold a gun with the mark of a particular manufacturer upon it, so as to make it appear like the genuine production of the manufacturer, that would be a false mark or token, and the party would be guilty of a cheat, and therefore liable to punishment if the indictment were fairly framed so as to meet the case" (n).

So in distinguishing between a mere breach of warranty (o), or a false representation, ex. gr., as to the profits of a business (p), and the statutory misdemeanor of obtaining or attempting to obtain money by false pretences (q), difficulty may arise. Reg. v. Bryan (r) should, in connection with this part of the subject, be consulted. It shows that if goods of a certain kind be sold under a misrepresentation knowingly made as to their value,—though not of a definite fact,—the statutable offence of obtaining money by false pretences will not have been committed. "The legislature," observes Lord Campbell, C. J., "could not have intended to make it an indictable offence for a seller to exaggerate the quality of the goods he is selling, any more than to make criminal the act of a purchaser who strives during the bargain to depreciate their quality, and so induces the seller to part with the goods at a lower price." And Coleridge, J., N. S., 447; Hopkins v. Hitchcock, 14 B. 145.

Id. 65.

(n) With the case here put by Cockburn, C. J., compare Langridge v. Levy, 2 M. & W. 519; S. C., 4 Id. 337. Et vide Reg. v. Smith, Dears. & B. 566.

(o) See Reg. v. Keighley, Dears. &

(p) See Reg. v. Watson, Dears. & B. 348.

(q) See particularly Reg. v. Eagleton, Dears. 376, 515.

(r) Dears. & B. 265 (where the cases are collected); per Erle, C. J., Reg. v. Ragg, Bell C. C. 218.

expresses himself similarly. "It is," he says, "a safe rule, that where the false representation applies merely to the quality, and is in the nature of exaggeration on the one hand, or depreciation on the other, which may take place between parties even in tolerably honest transactions, the statute does not apply." Reg. v. Bryan is explained in Ragg's case (s), where the Court say—that if the purchaser intends to buy a particular substance, and the seller passes off to him a counterfeit,—and money is thus obtained,—that is a false pretence within the statute. And such may also be constituted by a fraudulent representation as to the quantity of goods sold (t).

Even assuming that a false pretence can be proved, it must further be shown that thereby (u) the prisoner obtained from the prosecutor the chattel or money laid in the indictment with intent to defraud, although it is not necessary to allege or prove that the intent was to defraud any particular person (v); if articles of food were obtained under a contract for board and lodging, into which the prosecutor was induced by a false pretence to enter, an indictment for obtaining such specific articles by false pretences would not, on the ground of remoteness, be sustainable (x). An indictment for obtaining money by false pretences need not state that the false pretence was made with the intention of obtaining the money, if it be proved that in fact the party charged did intend to obtain it, made the false pretence, and did thereby obtain it (y). And since Garrett's case (z) showed that the repealed statute, 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29, s. 53, contemplated the case of money being obtained for the benefit, or at all

(s) Bell C. C. 214. See Reg. v. Mills, Id. 205; Reg. v. Fry, Id. 449; Reg. v. Butcher, Bell C. C. 6.

(t) Reg. v. Sherwood, Dears. & B. 251; Reg. v. Ragg, Bell C. C. 214; Reg. v. Lee, 33 L. J. M. C. 129.

(u) Reg. v. Roebuck, Dears. & B. 24; Reg. v. Keighley, Id. 145; Reg.

(v) 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 88.

(x) Reg. v. Gardner, Dears. & B. 40.

(y) Hamilton v. Reg., 9 Q. B. 271.

(z) Dears. 232, 241, 242.

events to gain some object, of the party making the false pretence—the law has, in this particular, been amended by section 89 of the 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96.

Inasmuch as a failure of justice frequently arose from the subtle distinction existing between larceny and fraud, for remedy thereof, it is provided (b) that if, upon the trial of any person indicted for the misdemeanor of obtaining goods or money by false pretences, “it shall be proved that he obtained the property in question in any such manner as to amount in law to larceny, he shall not by reason thereof be entitled to be acquitted of such misdemeanor;” and “no person tried for such misdemeanor shall be liable to be afterwards prosecuted for larceny upon the same facts.” I need merely add, in reference to the offence which has been latterly under consideration, that although the attempting to obtain goods or money by false pretences is a misdemeanor at common law (c), yet, as remarked in a recent case (d), the bare intention so to do is not criminal; some act is required to make it so, nor would all acts towards committing the misdemeanor in question be indictable; “acts remotely leading towards the commission of the offence are not to be considered as attempts to commit it, but acts immediately connected with it are.”

Embezzlement.

Let us, in the next place, consider the offence of embezzlement (e) depending upon the statute 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 68, which enacts, that, “whosoever being a clerk or (b) 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 88.

(c) See Reg. v. Garrett, Dears. 232; Reg. v. Marsh, 1 Den. C. C. 505.

(d) Reg. v. Eagleton, Dears. 376, 515; ante, p. 867.

(e) To “embezzle” signifies “to appropriate fraudulently to one’s own use what has been entrusted to one’s care, custody, or management;” Webst. Dict. ad verb.—“Embezzlement” is “the act of appropriating to oneself that which is received in trust for another”: Johns. Dict. ad verb. See Reg. v. Wortley, 2 Den. C. C. 333.

As illustrating the difference between a mere breach of trust and embezzlement, see Reg. v. Gibbs, Dears. 445. Fraudulent breaches of trust are now in many cases punishable as misdemeanors under the stat. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, ss. 75 et seq.

servant, or being employed for the purpose or in the capacity of a clerk or servant, shall fraudulently embezzle any chattel, money, or valuable security which shall be delivered to or received or taken into possession by him for, or in the name, or on the account of his master or employer," shall be deemed to have feloniously stolen the same from his master or employer, although such chattel, money, or security was not received into the possession of such master or employer, otherwise than by the actual possession of his clerk, servant, or other person so employed (f). Now there is sometimes no little practical difficulty in distinguishing the offence of embezzlement thus constituted from that defined by the 67th section of the Act just mentioned, which assigns a particular punishment to the stealing by a clerk or servant, or by one employed for the purpose or in the capacity of a clerk or servant, of any chattel, money, or valuable security, "belonging to, or in the possession or power of his master or employer" (g). The distinction between the two offences of larceny by a servant and embezzlement (h), pointed out by a learned writer on our criminal law (i), is this: "if the servant received the property and converted it to his own use before it came to the possession of the master, the offence is embezzlement;" whereas "if the property had come to the possession of the master, and the servant afterwards converted it to his own use, it is larceny." Thus, if a butler, having the care and custody of his master's plate, should receive plate from the silversmith for his master at his master's house, and afterwards fraudulently convert it to Larceny by clerk or servant.

(f) As to the offence of embezzlement, see Reg. v. Guelders, Bell C. C. 284; Reg. v. Tongue, Id. 289; Reg. v. Proud, 1 L. & C. C. 97.

(g) See Reg. v. Jennings, Dears. & B. 447.

(h) In Reg. v. Wright, Dears. & B. 442, Watson, B., observes, "In point of moral turpitude, embezzlement and larceny by a servant are the same, and I think it would be well if the legal distinction were abolished."

(i) See Mr. Greaves's edition of Lord Campbell's Acts, p. 17; per Gurney, B., R. v. Grove, 1 Mood. C. C. 449; Reg. v. Hawkins, 1 Den. C. C. 584; Reg. v. Welch, Id. 199; Reg. v. Betts, Bell C. C. 90.

his own use before it had in any way, other than by his act of receiving it, come into the possession of the master, the butler would be guilty of larceny (k). But if a servant, whose duty it is to receive property and pass it on to another servant, converts that property to his own use, he is guilty of embezzlement, because the property when so converted is in transitu merely towards the master, and not in his actual or constructive possession (l).

In Gill's case (m) the facts were these:—the accused was the prosecutor's servant, and, being suspected of dishonesty, was detected in this manner:—His master (the prosecutor), who was a licensed victualler, gave to a third person some marked money with which to purchase spirits at his house, where the prisoner was employed as barman, his duty consequently being to receive money tendered in payment for any article sold to a customer by him, and to deposit it in the till; some of the money thus marked not having been placed in the till, but being found in the prisoner's possession, he was prosecuted and found guilty of embezzlement, and was held to have been properly convicted of that crime—the money appropriated by him having previously been out of the possession, either actual or constructive, of the prosecutor, and being in transitu only towards him when fraudulently converted to his own use by the prisoner. Had the marked money in this case actually reached and been received into the prosecutor's possession, the prisoner, in conformity with what has been above said, would have been properly indictable for larceny as a servant (n).

The distinction above pointed out between embezzlement and larceny by a servant need not further be adverted to, being now of little practical importance, inasmuch as by the (k) See Reg. v. Watts, 2 Den. C. C. 14.

(l) Judgm., Reg. v. Watts, 2 Den. C. C. 30; Reg. v. Masters, 1 Den. C. C. 332.

(m) Dears. 289 (following R. v. Hedges, 2 Leach C. C. 1033); Reg. v. Wright, Dears. & B. 431, 441. See Reg. v. Goodenough, Dears. 210.

(n) Ante, p. 959.

72nd section of the statute 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, a person indicted for one of these offences will not be entitled to an acquittal, should the evidence at the trial establish that he was guilty of the other; ex. gr., if when indicted for larceny it shall be shown that he was in fact guilty of embezzlement. But the jury may find him not guilty of the offence charged in the indictment, and guilty of that offence which he is proved to have committed. It is, however, worthy of notice, that, notwithstanding the above useful statutory provision, the ends of justice may yet be frustrated by reason of the judge or jury taking a wrong view of the bearing and tendency of the facts adduced in evidence, and convicting the prisoner of that offence—whether embezzlement or larceny—which in point of law he had not committed; for instance, a prisoner indicted for stealing cannot be convicted of that offence, if there is only evidence of embezzlement (o).

Intimately connected with the offence of simple larceny are some other crimes of a more serious character, in which the felonious taking of chattels is accompanied with some degree of force or violence to the person or to property, as to which a few brief observations will be offered.

“Larceny from the person,” says Blackstone (p), “is either by privately stealing; or by open and violent assault, which is usually called robbery,”—the difference between the two offences here specified being thus clearly set forth:—for ‘robbery,’ even in its least aggravated form, is “an open and violent larceny from the person,” or the felonious and forcible taking, from the person or in the presence of another, of goods or money against his will by violence or by putting him in fear (q), whereas a conviction for stealing from the

Larceny
from the person.

Robbery.

(o) Reg. v. Gorbutt, Dears. & B. 166; Reg. v. Betts, Bell C. C. 90.

(p) 4 Com., p. 242. See 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, ss. 40 et seq.

(q) 4 Bla. Com., p. 242; Judgm., De Rothschild v. Royal Mail Steam Packet Co., 7 Exch. 742; Fost. Cr. L. pp. 128, 129; R. v. Mason, Russ. & Ry. 419; Reg. v. Walls, 2 Car. & K. 214; R. v. Gnosil, 1 Car. & P. 304; R. v. Moore, 1 Leach C. C. 325.

In some statutes the word ‘robbery’ person will be sustained by evidence of a clandestine taking and removal of property from the person by ever so small a space (r).

In order to sustain an indictment for robbery, the prosecutor must prove either that he was actually in bodily fear (s) from the defendant's actions at the time of the robbery, or he must prove circumstances accompanying the robbery, such as in common experience are likely to induce a man to part with his property for the safety of his person; for although the putting in bodily fear is said to be a necessary ingredient in the constitution of this offence, yet the law in odium spoliatoris will presume fear where there appears to be a just ground for it (t).

It may be well to add, that an individual may be convicted upon an indictment for stealing from the person, although the evidence adduced would have sufficed to sustain a charge of robbery (u). And it should further be noticed, that an indictment will lie by the statute law for an assault with intent to rob, which is thereby expressly made a felony (x).

Stealing in dwelling-house—
house.

The offences involving or akin to larceny—which as presenting some analogies to each other may properly be grouped is used in a sense much more comprehensive than that above assigned to it, so as to include a taking without force. Judgm., 7 Exch. 742.

(r) Reg. v. Simpson, Dears. 421 (where Jervis, C. J., doubts R. v. Thompson, 1 Ry. & Mood. 78); R. v. Lapiet, 1 Leach C. C. 60; R. v. Farrell, Id. 362.

(s) See Reg. v. Walton, 1 L. & C. C. C. 288.

(t) Fost. Cr. L. 128, 129.

(u) R. v. Pearce, Russ. & Ry. 174; R. v. Robinson, Id. 321.

(x) 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 42.

Also on an indictment for robbery, the prisoner may be convicted of an assault with intent to rob: 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 41. See Reg. v. Reid, 2 Den. C. C. 88; Reg. v. Mitchell, 2 Den. C. C. 468; S. C., Dears. 19, n.

The general rule is, that on an indictment for any offence of a compound nature, there may be a conviction of any one of the criminal elements of which such offence is composed, provided the two offences be equal in degree, i. e. be both felonies or both misdemeanors: per V. Williams, J., Reg. v. Bird, 2 Den. C. C. 116. See Reg. v. Jennings, Dears. & B. 447.

and classified together in the mind—are these :—Stealing in a dwelling-house, house-breaking, and burglary. The offences just specified being in various important particulars regulated by the statute law, it becomes necessary to premise my remarks respecting them by a brief enumeration of the provisions which concern them.

It has been enacted that whoever —shall steal in any dwelling-house any chattel, money, or valuable security to the value in the whole of 5*l.* or more (y) ;

—or, shall steal any chattel, money, or valuable security in any dwelling-house, and shall by any menace or threat put any one being therein in bodily fear (z) ;

—or, shall break and enter any dwelling-house, and commit any felony therein, or being in any dwelling-house shall commit any felony therein and break out of it (a) ;

—or, shall break and enter any dwelling-house, or any building within the curtilage, with intent to commit any felony therein (b) ;

—or, shall enter any dwelling-house in the night with intent to commit felony therein (c) ;

—or, shall break and enter any building, and commit any felony therein, such building being within the curtilage of a dwelling-house, and occupied therewith, but not being part thereof, or being in any such building shall commit any felony therein and break out of it (d) ;

—shall be guilty of felony and punishable accordingly.

In regard to the meaning of the word ‘ dwelling-house ’ above used, which has on various occasions been discussed (e), it is now provided and enacted (f), that “ no building, although within the same curtilage (g) with any (y) 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 60.

(z) Id. s. 61.

(a) Id. s. 56.

(b) Id. s. 57.

(c) Id. s. 54.

(d) Id. s. 55.

(e) Post, p. 966.

(f) 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 53.

(g) “Curtilage,” i. e., a court-yard, inclosure, or piece of land near and belonging to a dwelling house: Toml. Law Dict.; Webst. Dict., ad verb.

dwelling-house and occupied therewith, shall be deemed to be part of such dwelling-house" for any of the purposes of the Larceny Act (24 & 25 Vict. c. 96), "unless there shall be a communication between such building and dwelling-house, either immediate or by means of a covered and inclosed passage leading from the one to the other."

Stealing in a dwelling-
house.

The offence of stealing in a dwelling-house may be of various degrees, according as the value of the chattel stolen is or is not below 5*l.* in amount (g)—in the former of which cases it is punishable as simple larceny—or as the stealing is accompanied or not by any menace or threat putting any person being in such dwelling-house in bodily fear (h); either of these two latter offences is, however, justly regarded by our law as a crime of less enormity than that of breaking into a dwelling-house and stealing therein, and, à fortiori, than that of breaking into a dwelling-house by night with intent to commit felony. In order to insure a conviction for the offence of stealing in a dwelling-house to the value of 5*l.*, it is of course necessary to establish in evidence—1. the larceny; 2. that the value of the thing taken reached the statutory limit; 3. that the larceny was committed within the dwelling-house of the prosecutor or some other person (i), and that the chattel stolen was, in technical phraseology, "under the protection of the dwelling-house" (k).

Housebreaking.

The remarks which immediately follow respecting burglary will, so far as they concern the meaning of the word 'dwelling-house,' and of the terms 'breaking' and 'entering,' be found applicable to the offence of house-breaking; it will suffice therefore here to notice, that the breaking of a house in the day-time must be accompanied with some actual (g) 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 60.

(h) 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 61; R. v. Etherington, 2 Leach C. C. 671; R. v. Jackson, 1 Leach C. C. 269.

(i) See Reg. v. Bowden, 2 Mood. C. C. 285.

(k) As explanatory of the meaning of the phrase here used, see R. v. Carroll, 1 Mood. C. C. 89; per Ashhurst, J., R. v. Owen, 2 Leach C. C. 574; R. v. Taylor, Russ. & Ry. 418; R. v. Hamilton, 8 Car. & P. 49.

larceny (l) in order to constitute the offence technically known as house-breaking (m). The breaking and entering a dwelling-house in the day-time with intent to steal therein, is, however, indictable as a misdemeanor at common law (n).

Burglary at common law is the breaking and entering of the dwelling-house of another in the night-time with intent to commit a felony therein (o); and by the stat. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 51, "whosoever shall enter the dwelling-house of another with intent to commit any felony therein, or being in such dwelling-house shall commit any felony therein, and shall in either case break out of the said dwelling-house in the night, shall be deemed guilty of burglary" (p); the night-time in connection with this offence being considered as commencing at nine o'clock in the evening and as terminating at six in the morning (q).

In further explanation of this subject—the offence of burglary consists in the invasion of a man's dwelling-house,—
1. effected by force or fraud; 2. in the night-time; and
3. accompanied with the actual commission of a felony or

(l) See R. v. Amier, 6 Car. & P. 344; R. v. Jordan, 7 Car. & P. 432.

(m) A conviction under the stat. 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 9, of breaking and entering the prosecutor's house and attempting to steal certain of his goods therein could not be sustained if it appeared that the goods had been previously removed: Reg. v. M'Pherson, Dears. & B. 197.

(n) Reg. v. Lawes, 1 Car. & K. 62.

(o) A 'burglar,' according to Lord Coke, 3 Inst. 63, is he who "in the night breaketh and entereth into a mansion-house of another, of intent to kill some reasonable creature, or to commit some other felony within the same; whether his felonious intent be executed or not." A burglar is, by the common law, a felon. Id. ibid.

In burglary "as well those who actually enter the house as those who are close at hand on the outside of it, waiting to watch or to carry off the property," are guilty: per Alderson, B., R. v. Passey, 7 Car. & P. 283; per Hyde, C. J., R. v. Turner, 6 How. St. Tr. 612; see R. v. Jordan, 7 Car. & P. 423; ante, p. 949, n. (y).

(p) Also by s. 58 of the statute supra, "whosoever shall be found by night in any dwelling-house or other building whatsoever, with intent to commit any felony therein," shall be guilty of a misdemeanor. See Reg. v. Jarrold, 1 L. & C. C. C. 301.

(q) 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 1.

made with intent to commit a felony therein (r). First, then, subject to the statutory limitation of the word already noticed (s), “every house for the dwelling and habitation of man” is taken to be a ‘dwelling-house’ “wherein burglary may be committed” (t)—ex. gr., a set of chambers in an inn of court (u), or of apartments in a lodging-house having a separate outer door (x);—“burglary cannot,” however, “be committed in a tent or booth erected in a market or fair, although the owner may lodge therein, for the law regards thus highly nothing but permanent edifices” (y).

A house in which the owner resides during the day, takes his meals, and carries on his business, but does not sleep, is not a dwelling-house within the definition of the crime of burglary (z); there may, however, be a constructive occupation by the servant or family of the owner, although the distinctions in regard to this subject are somewhat fine (a).

Again—there must be both a ‘breaking’ and an ‘entering’ of the dwelling-house in order to constitute the crime of burglary. And here, accordingly, may be noticed the distinction between a breaking sufficient to sustain an action of trespass, and one which will suffice to support an indictment for burglary—every entry into the house of another by a trespasser is a breaking in law, whereas every unlawful entry by night (b) into a dwelling-house is not at common law a (r) Cr. L. Com., 5th Rep., p. 4.

(s) Ante, pp. 963-4.

(t) 3 Inst. 64.

(u) 1 Hale P. C., p. 556.

(x) See Monks v. Dykes, 4 M. & W. 567; R. v. Eggington, 2 B. & P. 508; 3 Inst. 65.

(y) 4 Bla. Com. p. 226.

See, further, as to what is or is not to be regarded as part of the dwelling-house, R. v. Paine, 7 Car. & P. 135; Reg. v. Higgs, 2 Car. & K. 322; R. v.

Turner, 6 Car. & P. 407; R. v. Burrows, 1 Mood. C. C. 274; R. v. Somerville, 2 Lew. C. C. 113; R. v. Smith, 1 M. & Rob. 256.

(z) R. v. Martin, Russ. & Ry. 108; R. v. Flannagan, Id. 187; and cases cited 2 East P. C., pp. 491-499.

(a) 2 East P. C., p. 503; R. v. Wilford, Russ. & Ry. 517; R. v. Davies, 2 Leach C. C. 876; R. v. Rees, 7 Car. & P. 568.

(b) If the breaking of the house were breaking of the house sufficient to constitute the crime in question, inasmuch as the gist of this offence is—and the indictment for it charges—that the accused “feloniously and burglariously did break and enter” the dwelling-house of A. B. with intent to steal therein (c), or as the case may be. Hence if the door of a dwelling-house be open, and a thief enter the house with intent to steal, this is not burglary, because there is no actual breaking. So, “if the window of a house be open, and a thief with a hook or other engine draweth out some of the goods of the owner, this is no burglary;” but if the thief breaks the glass of the window, and with a hook in like manner extracts some of the goods of the owner, this is burglary, for there was an actual breaking of the house (d). So “it is deemed an ‘entry’ when the thief breaketh the house and his body or any part thereof, as his foot or arm, is within any part of the house, or when he putteth a gun into a window which he hath broken, or into a hole of the house which he hath made, of intent to murder or kill;” but “if he doth barely break the house without any such entry at all, that is no burglary” (e), to constitute which, as above observed, there must be both a breaking and an entry.

There may, however, be a constructive breaking of a dwelling-house effected by stratagem, fraud, or through the in the day-time and the entering in the night, or the breaking in the night and entering in the day, this would not at common law be burglary: 1 Hale P. C., p. 551; but if the breaking be one night, with a burglarious intent, and the entering be on a subsequent night, this would suffice to constitute the crime of burglary: Id. ibid; R. v. Smith, Russ. & Ry. 417; R. v. Jordan, 7 Car. & P. 432.

(c) 3 Inst. 64; Hawk. P. C., Book 2, c. 33, s. 40.

(d) 3 Inst. 64. In regard to the question, what may suffice to constitute an actual breaking? see R. v. Hyams, 7 Car. & P. 441; R. v. Haines, Russ. & Ry. 451; R. v. Hall, Id. 355; R. v. Russell, 1 Mood. C. C. 377; R. v. Smith, Id. 178; R. v. Robinson, Id. 327; R. v. Jordan, 7 Car. & P. 432, 436.

(e) 3 Inst. 64; 2 East P. C., p. 490. As showing what may constitute an ‘entry,’ see R. v. Davis, Russ. & Ry. 499; R. v. Bailey, Id. 341; Reg. v. Simpson, 3 Car. & K. 207, n. (a).

medium of intimidation, sufficient to sustain an indictment for burglary; for, on an act done in fraudem legis, an unfavourable construction will be put (f)—thus, to knock at the door of a house in the night-time, and, upon its being opened, to rush in with a felonious intent; or to gain admittance to a house in the night-time under pretence of taking lodgings therein, and then to fall upon the landlord and rob him; or to procure a constable to gain admittance in order to search for thieves, and then to bind the constable and rob the house,—all these entries have been adjudged burglarious, though there was no actual breaking; for “the law will not suffer itself to be trifled with by such evasions, especially under the cloak of legal process” (g).

2ndly. We have already seen, that, to support an indictment for burglary, the breaking and entering or the breaking out of the dwelling-house in question, must have taken place during the night-time, as defined by the statute law. And 3rdly. In order to constitute the crime of burglary, the intent to commit some felony within the dwelling-house, whether such felonious intent were executed or not, must be proved, or the actual commission of a felony in such dwelling-house must be proved together with a breaking out thereof in the night-time (h). If it appear that the breaking and entering was to commit a mere trespass, we have seen that this will not amount to burglary, the injured party being left to his civil remedy (i). Where, however, such a breach and entry of a house as has been above described is effected by night with intent to commit a robbery, a murder, a rape, or any other felony, this is burglary, whether the substantive offence contemplated be actually achieved or not. Nor does it make any difference whether such offence were felony

(f) See 3 Inst. 64.

R. v. Cornwell, Id. n.

(g) 4 Bla. Com., pp. 226-7; 3 Inst. 64; 2 East P. C., p. 485; 1 Hale P. C., p. 553; Arg., 19 How. St. Tr. 782;

(h) Ante, p. 965.

(i) See Arg., Reg. v. Powell, 2 Den. C. C. 405.

at common law or created so by statute, since that statute which makes an offence felony gives it incidentally all the properties of a felony at common law (k). The intent in breaking and entering may indeed be presumed from the actual commission of the specific felony charged (l), but it must be averred in the indictment and proved as laid (m). If, therefore, the indictment charged that the breaking and entering was with intent to steal goods and chattels, it would not be sufficient to show that the accused broke into the house with intent to steal mortgage-deeds—for mortgage-deeds, being subsisting securities for the payment of money, are clearly choses in action, and as such are not properly described in the indictment as goods and chattels (n). So, by the common law the stealing of chattels personal alone amounts to the offence of larceny; and if an indictment for that offence were to allege that goods and chattels were stolen, proof that chattels real were stolen would not support the indictment (o).

It remains but to add, that, on an indictment for burglary which comprehends within itself an indictment for house-breaking and usually for larceny in the house, if the jury are Conviction on indictment for burglary.

(k) 4 Bla. Com., pp. 227, 228; R. v. Locost, Kel. 30; 1 Hale P. C. pp. 549, 559; Hawk. P. C., Book 1, Chap. 38, s. 1; 2 East P. C., 484, 519, citing R. v. Vandercomb, 2 Leach C. C. 708; 3 Inst. 63.

(l) 1 Hale P. C., p. 559; R. v. Furnival, Russ. & Ry. 445.

In Ross v. Hunter, 4 T. R. 38, Buller, J., alluding to an indictment for burglary, says, "Suppose the goods were not actually taken and carried away, observe what would be sufficient to be proved; the fact of breaking and entering the house; and whose house it was; and that it was in the night; because all these circumstances are specifically alleged in the indictment, and they are all affirmatives; then the intent with which these facts were done is equally material; but if the prosecutor prove all the former circumstances, it is a question for the jury to determine whether he (the prisoner) did not enter with the view of stealing the goods, unless the party accused can show to their satisfaction that his intent was innocent."

(m) See R. v. Dingley, cited 2 Leach C. C. 841; 1 Hale P. C., p. 561; Reg. v. Clarke, 1 Car. & K. 421.

(n) Reg. v. Powell, 2 Den. C. C. 403.

(o) Per Alderson, B., 2 Den. C. C. 409. See 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 28.

satisfied that there was a breaking in the night-time with intent to steal, they may convict the accused of burglary; if they should think that the breaking was not in the night-time, but that there was a breaking and goods stolen of any value, they may convict of house-breaking under the stat. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 56: or, if they should think that the evidence of the breaking is not sufficient, they may convict the prisoner of stealing in a dwelling-house to the value of 5*l.* (p); the rule upon this subject being, that, "in order to convict of a felony which was not the felony primarily charged, it is necessary that the minor felony should be substantially stated in the indictment" (q).

(p) Per Gaselee, J., R. v. Compton,
3 Car. & P. 418; R. v. Butterworth,
Russ. & Ry. 520.

(q) Per Jervis, C. J., Reg. v. Reid,
2 Den. C. C. 92.

CHAPTER IV.

THE PROCEEDINGS AT A CRIMINAL TRIAL (a).

BEFORE attempting a brief view of the proceedings at a Criminal Trial, whether it take place at the Assizes, at the Central Criminal Court, or before Judges acting by virtue of a special commission from the Crown, it may be well to remind the reader that there are cases—not a few—in which express power is given to inferior tribunals or to particular functionaries, as Recorders and others, to deal with certain kinds of offences according to their discretion, regulated and limited more or less stringently by the statute law. From amongst functionaries clothed with such discretionary powers, Justices of the Peace may, in connection with the subject of this Chapter, claim especial notice.

The power of a Justice of the Peace as a criminal Judge is derived in part from his commission proceeding from the Crown, and in part from particular Acts of Parliament. Under the commission of the peace (b) the justice derives a twofold power, first when out of sessions, and secondly when sitting in sessions, either general or petty. When out of Justices of the peace—general view of their jurisdiction.

(a) The aim of this Chapter is rather to direct the attention of the student to certain points of practical importance connected with criminal procedure than to exhibit a complete view of it. In regard to the functions of the grand jury, the arraignment and trial, the right of challenge, judgment, the effect of a pardon, and the various kinds of punishment inflicted under the sanction of our law, the reader is referred for full information to Chapters 65-68 inclusive of Mr. Warren's excellent Abridgment of Blackstone's Commentaries.

(b) Of which the form may be seen in Burn's J. P., 29th ed., vol. 3, p. 988; and in Dickinson's Quarter Sessions, 5th ed., p. 65.

As to the powers of Stipendiary Magistrates, see 21 & 22 Vict. c. 73.

sessions the commission empowers him singly to conserve the peace, to suppress riots and affrays, to take security for keeping the peace, and to apprehend and commit felons and other criminals. The commission of the peace also empowers any two or more justices to hear and determine all felonies and other offences, which, as Blackstone remarks (c), is the ground of their jurisdiction at sessions—a jurisdiction which has, however, been most materially restricted by the 1st section of stat. 5 & 6 Vict. c. 38—intituled “An Act to define the Jurisdiction of Justices in General and Quarter Sessions of the Peace,”—which enacts, that, after the passing of that Act, neither the justices of the peace acting in and for any county, riding, division, or liberty, nor the recorder of any borough, shall at any session of the peace, or at any adjournment thereof, try any person for any treason, murder, or capital felony, or for any felony which, when committed by a person not previously convicted of felony, is punishable by transportation beyond the seas for life; or for any of the following offences:—1. Misprision of treason; 2. Offences against the Queen’s title, prerogative, person, or government, or against either House of Parliament; 3. Offences subject to the penalties of præmunire (d); 4. Blasphemy and offences against religion; 5. Administering or taking unlawful oaths; 6. Perjury and subornation of perjury; 7. Making or suborning any other person to make a false oath, affirmation, or declaration punishable as perjury or as a misdemeanor; 8. Forgery; 9. Unlawfully and maliciously setting fire to crops of corn, grain, or pulse, or to any part of a wood, coppice, or plantation of trees, or to any heath, gorse, furze, or fern; 10. Bigamy and offences against the laws relating to marriage; 11. Abduction of women and girls; 12. Endeavouring to conceal the birth of a child; 13. Offences against any provision of the laws relating to bankrupts and munire, see 4 Bla. Com., Chap. 8.

(c) 1 Com., p. 354.

(d) In regard to the offence of præ- insolvents; 14. Composing, printing, or publishing blasphemous, seditious, or defamatory libels; 15. Bribery; 16. Unlawful combinations and conspiracies, except conspiracies or combinations to commit any offence which such justices or recorder respectively have or has jurisdiction to try when committed by one person (e); 17. Stealing or fraudulently taking or injuring or destroying records or documents belonging to any Court of law or equity, or relating to any proceeding therein; 18. Stealing or fraudulently destroying or concealing wills or testamentary papers, or any document or written instrument being or containing evidence of the title to any real estate, or any interest in lands, tenements, or hereditaments.

Further, it seems clear that county magistrates have by their commission jurisdiction in all indictable offences to receive the information of any individual respecting them—to grant a summons or warrant thereon to bring the accused party before them—to examine the witnesses on oath—to hear what the accused has to say in his defence—to take down the examinations in writing—and then either to discharge the accused, to admit him to bail, or to commit him for trial (f):—the mode of enforcing the attendance of the party accused or suspected of crime before the justice, or of apprehending one against whom an indictment has actually been found—of compelling the attendance of witnesses before the magistrate—of conducting their examination—of taking down the depositions—of receiving the statement, if any, of the accused (g)—of transmitting the depositions and statement to the Court in which the trial is to be had,—being minutely regulated by the 11 & 12 Vict. c. 42, intitled “An Act to facilitate the performance of the duties of (e) See Latham v. Reg., 4 N. Rep. 239.

See Reg. v. Watts, 1 L. & C. C. C. 339.

(f) Arch. J. P., 4th ed., vol. 2, p. 28; 1 Bla. Com., pp. 349, 353-4.

(g) See Reg. v. Stripp, Dears. 648.

Justices of the Peace out of Sessions within England and Wales with respect to Persons charged with Indictable Offences," the provisions of which statute should of course be carefully studied in reference to the due discharge of magisterial duties by those who are invested with them.

In many of the cases falling within their summary jurisdiction, justices of the peace and stipendiary magistrates have a discretionary power either to exercise their jurisdiction or to refer the case to the sessions or assizes by committing the accused—as, for instance, under the Juvenile Offenders' Act (10 & 11 Vict. c. 82 (h)), or under the Act "for diminishing Expense and Delay in the Administration of Criminal Justice in certain cases" (18 & 19 Vict. c. 126), or under the 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, for consolidating and amending the Statute Law relating to Malicious Injuries to Property. And under the stat. 20 & 21 Vict. c. 43, intituled "An Act to improve the Administration of the Law so far as respects summary proceedings before Justices of the Peace," after the hearing and determination by one or more Justices of any information or complaint which he or they may have power to determine in a summary way, either party dissatisfied with the determination may apply for a case, setting forth the facts and grounds thereof, for the opinion thereon of one of the Superior Courts of Law to be named by the party applying (i).

From what has been above said we may infer that the jurisdiction exercised by justices of the peace (k) is in some cases substituted, to all intents and purposes, for—whilst in others it is ancillary to—that of a superior tribunal. In (h) See also the 17 & 18 Vict. c. 86, amended by 18 & 19 Vict. c. 87; 13 & 14 Vict. c. 87.

(i) See Newman, app., Baker, resp., 8 C. B., N. S., 200; Pavys, app., Douglas, resp., 4 H. & N. 180; Buckmaster, app., Reynolds, resp., 13 C. B., N. S., 62. See also 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, ss. 107, 108, 110; 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 68.

(k) As to the jurisdiction of Borough Justices, see Arch. J. P., 4th ed., vol. 2, p. 31.

point of fact, indeed, almost every criminal offender who appears for trial at the assizes has in the first instance been examined and committed by a magistrate in the ordinary way, having been brought before him either with or without a summons or warrant by a police constable acting on his own judgment or on the complaint of some private individual (l). Although cases do, nevertheless, present themselves in which the preliminary process here spoken of is altogether wanting—as where a prisoner has been committed by the coroner in pursuance of the verdict of his jury (m)—a committal, however, which does not in any way oust the jurisdiction of ordinary justices—or where a supposed criminal is arrested by virtue of a warrant issued by the Privy Council or a Secretary of State (n)—or where an information is filed by the Attorney-General ex officio, or by the Master of the Crown-office, with leave from the Court of Queen's Bench, at the instance of an individual (o)—or where a presentment is made by the grand Jury of an offence within their own knowledge or observation (p)—or, lastly, where a private person prefers a bill to the grand jury, without preliminary notice, against an absent party—a mode of proceeding, however, which is neither commonly resorted to nor expedient, and on which restriction has, as regards various offences, been imposed by a recent statute (q).

We are told, however, in a work of authority (r), that prosecution by indictment is the most usual and constitutional course for bringing offenders to justice on criminal charges.

Proceed by indi
ment.

(l) Ante, pp. 717 et seq.

(m) A coroner is now empowered to accept bail for a person against whom a verdict of manslaughter has been found by his jury: 22 Vict. c. 33, s. 1.

(n) See the cases in regard to such warrants collected: Toml. L. Dict., tit. "Commitment," I.

(o) Ante, p. 240.

(p) 4 Bla. Com., p. 301.

(q) 22 & 23 Vict. c. 17, intituled "An Act to prevent vexatious indictments for certain misdemeanors." See Reg. v. Bray, 3 B. & S. 255; Reg. v. Fridge, 33 L. J., M. C., 74; 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 80.

(r) Dickinson's Quarter Sess., 5th ed., p. 168.

The 'indictment' is an accusation preferred in the name of the sovereign to a grand jury competent by law to find it, and found by them on their oaths (s) ; this accusation, when first preferred to the grand jury, being called a bill, and being properly termed an indictment only when found by them. Now the office of the indictment being to inform the prisoner of the charge which he is called upon to answer, it might certainly, à priori, be supposed that the simpler the phraseology used, and the shorter and more free from technicality the statement of the offence charged therein, the more surely and effectually would justice be administered—the risk of its defeat being diminished in proportion as simplicity was attained. Till recently, however, the view entertained in relation to the framing of indictments in criminal proceedings seems to have differed essentially from that just stated ; for the extreme certainty required, and the technical and inverted phraseology used in an indictment, as well as the multiplicity of counts inserted in it for the purpose of obviating purely formal objections, must have rendered that instrument in most cases unintelligible to the prisoner, and without doubt perpetually led, in one way or another, to the frustrating of the requirements of justice. However, by the stat. 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 24, all objections grounded on certain formal defects in the indictment specified in that section are altogether done away with, so that no advantage can henceforth be taken of them (t). Moreover, by the 25th section, "every objection to an indictment for any formal defect apparent on the face thereof" must be taken by demurrer or motion to quash such indictment before the jury are sworn, and will no

(s) Dickinson's Quarter Sess., 5th ed., p. 168.

As to the mode in which the bill is found or ignored by the grand jury, reference may be made to 4 Bla. Com., p. 305.

By the stat. 19 & 20 Vict. c. 54, s. 1, the foreman, or acting foreman, of the grand jury, is now "authorised and required" to administer the usual oath to witnesses for examination in support of the bill of indictment.

(t) See Reg. v. Frost, Dears. 474.

longer be available for the prisoner by motion in arrest of judgment or on error; and the same section further empowers the Court to amend any such formal defect when an objection is taken to the indictment on account of it.

The 1st section of the Act just named is also most material in relation to the better administration of criminal justice. Formerly, if a variance occurred between any allegation in an indictment and the evidence adduced in support of it, the prisoner was entitled to be acquitted, and this necessarily led to much inconvenience (u), which, having been partially obviated by various statutory enactments (x), has, so far as is deemed consistent with justice, been removed by the clause in question.

It provides, that “whenever, on the trial of any indictment for any felony or misdemeanor, there shall appear to be any variance between the statement in such indictment, and the evidence offered in proof thereof,” in respect of any of the various matters set forth in the above section, ex. gr., in the christian or surname of any person mentioned therein, or “in the name or description of any matter or thing whatsoever therein named, or in the ownership of any property named or described therein,” the Court may, “if it shall consider such variance not material to the merits of the case, and that the defendant cannot be prejudiced thereby in his defence on such merits,” order the indictment to be amended according to the proof, “on such terms as to postponing the trial to be had before the same or another jury,” as the Court shall think reasonable;—and when the amendment in question has been made, the trial and proceedings subsequent thereto will take place “in the same manner in all respects and with the same consequences, both with respect to the liability of witnesses to be indicted for perjury and otherwise, as if no such variance had occurred." Now, with reference to the section thus briefly abstracted, one point must especially be noticed, viz., that an amendment can only be made in any of the cases therein specified, where it does not affect the merits of the case, that is to say, where it does not affect "the substantial truth and justice of the case with reference to the guilt or innocence of the prisoner" (y). Cases, it has been said, may easily be put, where no doubt can exist that the variance in question is not material to the merits, and where, therefore, the defendant cannot be unfairly prejudiced by an amendment. For instance, if a man steals a sheep during the night out of a field, being ignorant at the time of the name of the owner of the sheep, it could hardly be said that the owner's name would be material to the merits of the issue of 'guilty' or 'not guilty.' In each case, however, the Court must necessarily form its own judgment with reference to the facts brought before it. And the two questions for consideration before making an amendment will always be—1st, whether the variance is material to the merits of the case; and 2ndly, whether the defendant can be prejudiced by the amendment in his defence (z) upon the merits; for of course, in one point of view, he must always be prejudiced by an amendment, inasmuch as he might altogether escape conviction if it were not made.

(u) See Mr. Greaves's ed. of Lord Campbell's Acts, p. 2.

(x) Id., p. 3.

Much less precision and certainty are now necessary in framing indictments than were formerly required. Accordingly, an indictment under the new practice is generally characterised by extreme brevity and simplicity. It consists of (a)—

1st. The venue, which indicates the Court before which the (y) See Mr. Greaves's ed. of Lord Campbell's Acts, p. 4.

(z) Id., p. 5.

(a) As regards the time at which a bill may be preferred and an indictment found, it will be well to observe, that, by virtue of the rule nullum tempus occurrit regi, this may be done, where a particular period of limitation is not prescribed by statute, at any length of time after the offence was committed.

offender is to appear, and the jurisdiction within which the offence charged was committed or is triable (b).

2ndly. The statement of the offence, which must contain such ingredients as are essential either at common law or by statute to constitute it. Thus, where by statute a particular act is punishable when done with a particular intent—such intent must be alleged in the indictment conformably to the statute. And, in preparing an indictment for any statutable offence, care must be taken so to allege it, that it may be brought within the purview and meaning of the Act (c). The indictment must, further, charge the defendant directly and positively with having committed the offence thus set forth and alleged (d).

And 3rdly, the conclusion, with reference to which I will merely say, that, although the 24th section of the 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, renders the want of a proper or formal conclusion to an indictment immaterial, yet this must not be understood as having affected the practice as to concluding the indictment contra formam statuti, where the offence charged in it is founded upon the statute law (e).

Let us now assume that the bill has been duly presented to and found by the grand jury, and that the accused party is in custody, the next step in the proceedings is to arraign the prisoner, i.e., to call upon him when placed at the bar of the Court to answer the matter charged against him in the indict-

Arraign
ment

(b) Under the stat. 19 Vict. c. 16, s. 3, the Court of Queen's Bench may order that any person charged with an offence committed out of the jurisdiction of the Central Criminal Court shall, nevertheless, be tried at that Court. See Reg. v. Palmer, 5 E. & B. 1024; Reg. v. Wilks, Id. 690; Reg. v. Jewell, cited Dears. & B. 174.

(c) As to the joinder of counts in an indictment, see Arch. Cr. Pl., 15th ed., pp. 61 et seq. A misjoinder, as where a count for felony is improperly joined with one for misdemeanor, may be cured by verdict of acquittal on either count: see Reg. v. Ferguson, Dears. 427.

(d) Arch. Cr. Pl., 15th ed., pp. 51 et seq.

(e) See Arch. Cr. Pl., 15th ed., pp. 57, 58.

The reason why an indictment for a statutory offence should conclude contra formam statuti, is stated in Hawk. P. C., Bk. 2, Chap. 25, ss. 115, 116.

Plea.

ment (f). On this arraignment the prisoner is required to plead "guilty" or "not guilty," unless indeed, as rarely happens in practice, he has some special matter of defence to urge in answer to the indictment. Of such special plea the most usual and important subject-matter now is, that he (the prisoner) has already been "lawfully acquitted or convicted of the identical felony or misdemeanor charged and specified in the indictment;" and this plea would of course, if substantiated, offer good ground of defence; for it is a principle designated by Lord Campbell, C. J. (g), as a "sacred maxim" of our law, that—Nemo bis vexari debet pro eâdem causâ—no man ought to be twice tried, or brought into jeopardy of his life or liberty more than once for the same offence. The effect of the plea of autrefois acquit in connection with a particular statutory provision since repealed (7 Will. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 85, s. 11,) was much discussed in Bird's case (h), to which, as also to the more recent cases below cited (i), for additional information respecting it, the reader is referred.

With the exception of the particular ground of defence just adverted to, a special plea to an indictment is little known in practice (k); and should the prisoner on his ar-

(f) 4 Bla. Com., p. 322. See Reg. v. Key, 2 Den. C. C. 347; Reg. v. Shuttleworth, Id. 351; Reg. v. Clark, Dears. 198.

(g) Reg. v. Bird, 2 Den. C. C. 216, 222, at which latter page the learned Lord Chief Justice remarks, that "it is only the ignorant and the presumptuous who would propose that a man should be liable to be again accused after a judgment regularly given pronouncing him to be innocent. According to this novel doctrine, the Crown might a second time prosecute for high treason a person who had been acquitted of the charge by a jury of his country, and there would be no end to prosecutions for felony or misdemeanor prompted by private malevolence." See also 4 Bla. Com., pp. 335-6.

(h) 2 Den. C. C. 94.

(i) Reg. v. Green, Dears. & B. 113; Reg. v. Moah, Dears. 626, 630; Reg. v. Charleworth, 1 B. & S. 460, where the power of a Judge to discharge the jury from giving a verdict in a case of misdemeanor was much considered.

(k) Special pleas are to the jurisdiction of the Court, or in abatement. See O'Brien v. Reg., 2 H. L. Ca. 469; O'Connell v. Reg., 11 Cl. & F. 155, 165, 465, 469; R. v. Johnson, 29 raignment plead "not guilty" (l), the next step in the proceedings will be to swear the jury (m), which is done subject to a right of challenge to the array or to individual jurymen on the part of the prisoner or defendant and of the Crown (n). When the jury have been sworn the prisoner is 'given in charge' to them, the meaning of which phrase is shown by the address of the clerk of arraigns to the jury; for, after stating the specific offence on which the prisoner stands indicted and his plea thereto, he tells them that their "charge is to inquire whether he be guilty or not guilty, and to hearken to the evidence."

Swearing
the jury,
&c Giving in charge.

Case for the Crown.

The above form having been duly observed, the counsel for the prosecution opens his case to the jury, produces evidence, and calls witnesses in support of it, whose examination is conducted in accordance with certain principles, which must needs be observed and scrupulously adhered to, experience teaching us that the truth will far more often and more surely be arrived at if sought for by the aid of inflexible rules than if pursued by ingenious surmises, or traced by the light of proofs, which, though in the particular

How. St. Tr. 385; and autrefois acquit, convict, or attain, or a pardon from the Crown, is also pleadable.

The prisoner may, moreover, demur to the indictment or information, on the ground that it is "not sufficient in law." "By a general demurrer, the prisoner confesses all the material facts charged against him in the indictment, though in the case of a demurrer of a special nature, which is usually called a demurrer in abatement, it might be otherwise:" Reg. v. Faderman, 1 Den. C. C. 565, 570.

(l) If the prisoner on being arraigned should "stand mute of malice or will not answer directly to the indictment," the Court may order a plea of "not guilty" to be entered on behalf of the prisoner by the proper officer, and the plea so entered will have the same force and effect as if the prisoner had actually pleaded the same: 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 28, s. 2.

(m) When in a case of misdemeanor the record has been removed by certiorari into the Court of Queen's Bench, a special jury may be obtained at the instance either of the prosecutor or of the defendant.

(n) Mansell v. Reg. Dears. & B. 375; S. C., 8 E. & B. 54; Reg. v. Mellor, Dears. & B. 468; O'Connell v. Reg., 11 Cl. & F. 155; Gray v. Reg., Id. 427; O'Brien v. Reg., 2 H. L. Ca. 465, 470, are important with reference to the right of challenge.

Rules of evidence to be observed.

case apparently sufficient, are nevertheless shown by abstract reasoning to be deceptive and fallacious. It has been affirmed, indeed, that no material difference exists, in regard to the rules of evidence, between criminal and civil procedure—that what may be received in the one case may be received in the other, and what is rejected in the one case ought to be rejected in the other (o)—that in short, “a fact must be established by the same evidence, whether it is to be followed by a criminal or civil consequence” (p). In either mode of procedure, for instance, civil or criminal, the following rules obtain: that the proofs adduced must be relevant to the issue—that the best evidence which the nature of the case will admit of must be given—that secondary evidence will only be receivable where the best and most direct evidence cannot be had—that hearsay is not in general admissible as evidence, because the individual whose words are spoken to was not sworn nor can be submitted to cross-examination—that entries made by a person since deceased when against his own interest (q), or made in the usual course of business, may be received—that the Court must construe written documents, and the jury must decide upon the facts. The rules just stated, it will be obvious, are applicable as well in civil as in criminal courts, whereas the following more frequently present themselves to notice in the latter—that our law presumes in favour of the innocence of an accused—that it regards the evidence of accomplices with suspicion—that a confession, whether judicial or extra-judicial, i.e., whether made before a magistrate or in Court and in the due course of legal proceeding, or made elsewhere and under other circumstances—is admissible provided it was voluntary, and must, if admissible at all, be received in its (o) Per Abbott, J., R. v. Watson, 2 Stark. N. P. C. 155; Per Best, J., R. v. Burdett, 4 B. & Ald. 122.

(p) Per Lord Erskine, C., at Lord

Melville's trial, 29 How. St. Tr. 764.

(q) See Reg. v. Overseers of Birmingham, 1 B. & S. 763, and cases there cited.

entirety (r)—that a dying declaration may be received in evidence on a trial for homicide, where the death of the deceased is the subject of the charge and the circumstances of the death the subject of the dying declaration (s).

Passing over the above-mentioned and some other rules as to the admissibility of evidence, which are peculiarly applicable in criminal inquiries, I may observe, in the words of Eyre, C. B. (t), that,—although “the most common and ordinary species of legal evidence consists in the depositions of witnesses taken on oath (u) before the jury, in the face of the (r) “By the law of England,” says Parke, B., in Reg. v. Baldry, 2 Den. C. C. 444-5, “in order to render a confession admissible in evidence, it must be perfectly voluntary; and there is no doubt that any inducement in the nature of a promise or of a threat held out by a person in authority vitiates a confession;” the ground for rejecting the evidence when so obtained being, that “it would not be safe to receive a statement made under any influence or fear.” Per Pollock, C. B., Id. 442.

It is for the Judge who presides at the trial to determine whether a confession tendered in evidence is admissible or not; but it is further material to observe, that the onus of satisfying his mind that it was not made under the influence of a threat or of an improper inducement lies on the prosecution; and if this point is left doubtful, the evidence offered will certainly be rejected: Reg. v. Warringham, 2 Den. C. C. 447, n.

As to the question who is “a person in authority” within the meaning of the rule above laid down, see Reg. v. Moore, 2 Den. C. C. 522, and cases there cited; Reg. v. Sleeman, Dears. 249; Reg. v. Luckhurst, Id. 245; Reg. v. Laughner, 2 Car. & K. 225.

The compulsory examination of a bankrupt under the stat. 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 117, is admissible in evidence against him at his trial on a criminal charge: Reg. v. Cross, Dears. & B. 68; Reg. v. Scott, Id. 47; Reg. v. Sloggett, Dears. 156; Reg. v. Skeen, Bell C. C. 97.

(s) Per Abbott, C. J., R. v. Mead, 2 B. & C. 608; Reg. v. Hind, Bell C. C. 253.

Dying declarations, says Eyre, C. B., in R. v. Woodcock, 1 Leach C. C. 502, are made in extremity when the party making them is at the point of death, and when every hope of this world is gone, when every motive to falsehood is silenced, and the mind is induced by the most powerful considerations to speak the truth: a situation so solemn and so awful is considered by the law as creating an obligation equal to that which is imposed by a positive oath administered in a court of justice. See, also, per Lord Denman, C. J., Sussex Peerage case, 11 Cl. & F. 112; per Cur. R. v. Drummond, 1 Leach C. C. 337; Tinkler's case, 1 East P. C. 354; Reg. v. Reaney, Dears. & B. 151.

(t) R. v. Woodcock, supra.

(u) See 24 & 25 Vict. c. 66, which gives relief to persons unwilling from conscientious motives to be sworn.

Admissibility of depositions in evidence.

Court, in the presence of the prisoner, and received under all the advantages which examination and cross-examination can give;" besides this kind of proof and certain species of hearsay evidence (some whereof have been above alluded to), which are for various reasons, admitted by law;—the examination of a prisoner and the depositions of the witnesses who may be produced against him, taken officially before a justice of the peace by virtue of the statute law, may, under certain circumstances, be substituted for viva voce testimony. As to the admissibility, accordingly, and use of the depositions and statements of the accused as evidence at his trial, a few remarks may here, by reason of the practical importance of the subject, conveniently be offered. The 11 & 12 Vict. c. 42, s. 17, provides that the deposition, duly taken in conformity to the Act, of any witness, who, at the time of the trial, may be dead, or "so ill as not to be able to travel" (x), may be read as evidence in such prosecution, if proved to have been taken in the presence of the accused, and if it be shown that he or his counsel or attorney had a full opportunity of cross-examining the said witness; and further, if the deposition purport to be signed by the justice—by or before whom the same purports to have been taken—no further proof of the deposition being requisite, "unless it shall be proved that such deposition was not in fact signed by the justice purporting to sign the same" (y). Besides being receivable in the event of the death or illness of a witness, the case of Reg. v. Scaife (z) shows also, that, where the prisoner or one of the prisoners (if there be several in the indictment) has resorted to a contrivance to keep a witness out of the way, his deposition will be admissible as against that party only who procured his absence. But no case has decided that a deposition would be receivable merely (x) Reg. v. Cockburn, Dears. & B. 203; Reg. v. Riley, 3 Car. & K. 116; Reg. v. Watts, 33 L. J., M. C., 63.

(y) See Reg. v. Clements, 2 Den. C. 251.

(z) 17 Q. B. 238, 243.

.because the witness could not be found, and on principle this would appear not to be so. A deposition, moreover, has been rejected, although made by a foreigner, who at the time of the trial was residing abroad, though not from an intention to defeat justice (a). And even in the case of illness of a witness, his deposition will be admissible in evidence against the accused only where the charge preferred at his trial is the same as that made before the committing magistrate, or, if not technically the same, where the prisoner has had full opportunity of cross-examining the witnesses called against him (b).

Again, it is positively required by the statute 11 & 12 Vict. c. 42, s. 17, that the committing magistrate shall have the examination before him of an accused person taken down in writing—a neglect to comply with this requisition being quite illegal (c)—and if so taken down, the depositions cannot at the trial be added to, contradicted, or explained by parol evidence of what passed before the justice. There is, however, no hardship on the prisoner in acting upon this rule, for the deposition is always read over to him, and he has thus an opportunity afforded him of insisting that any material omission therein shall be supplied and put down in writing (d).

The depositions, then, against an accused person will, under the circumstances above specified, be good evidence, at his trial, for the prosecution. And here a question—important with reference to the right to the reply—arises, viz., whether or not the counsel for the prisoner is entitled to cross-examine upon the depositions without putting them in evidence. Now the settled rule upon this subject is (e), that (a) Reg. v. Austin, Dears. 612.

Brown, 3 Car. & K. 296.

(b) Reg. v. Ledbetter, 3 Car. & K. 108; Reg. v. Beeston, Dears. 405, and cases there cited.

(d) Phill. Evid. 10th ed. vol. 2, p. 106.

(e) See 7 Car. & P. 676; Reg. v.

(c) Per Jervis, C. J., Parsons v.

Ford, 2 Den. C. C. 245.

where a witness for the Crown has made a deposition before a magistrate, he cannot in cross-examination be asked whether he did or did not in his deposition make such or such a statement until the deposition itself has been read, in order to show whether such statement is contained in it; and, if so read, the deposition will then become part of the evidence for the defence, so that the counsel for the prosecution will be entitled to reply. According to the established practice, however, the depositions and the statement of the prisoner (f) are thus far treated as distinct, that, by putting in the latter, the counsel for the prosecution does not entitle the prisoner's counsel to cross-examine upon the former without giving him a right to the reply (g).

Case for the defence.

Upon the case for the prosecution being closed, and by way of answer to the evidence given in support of it, the prisoner's counsel will address the jury, calling witnesses and adducing documentary evidence to substantiate his defence, if necessary; and should he offer evidence, the counsel for the prosecution may reply; and even where the only evidence called on the part of the prisoner is evidence to character, although the counsel for the prosecution is entitled to reply, it is a matter for his discretion, whether he will use this right or not, though cases may occur in which it will be fit and proper so to do (h). And in any public prosecution for felony (i), or misdemeanor (k), instituted by the Crown, its law-officers and those who represent them are in strictness entitled to the reply, although no evidence on the part of the prisoner be offered.

(f) That is, the statement, if any, of the accused taken down, after a proper caution, by the committing magistrate. See the 11 & 12 Vict. c. 42, s. 18; Reg. v. Sansome, 1 Den. C. C. 145, 148; Reg. v. Bond, 3 Car. & K. 337, n.

(g) R. v. Pearson, 7 Car. & P. 671; per Parke, B., Reg. v. Aylett, 8 Id. 670.

(h) 7 Car. & P. 677.

(i) Id. ibid.; Reg. v. Gardner, 1 Car. & K. 628.

(k) R. v. Marsden, Mood. & Mal. 439.

And now let us suppose that the case on both sides has been closed, the evidence summed up, the law applicable to it laid down by the judge, and the verdict given (l), the next point of practical importance to notice is with respect to the mode in which the judgment should be entered. As to this, Judgment. of course, no difficulty can be felt where the indictment consists of one count only, but where it contains several counts, charging different offences, with regard to the goodness of some or one of which a doubt is entertained, and the verdict is returned generally, the judgment should be entered on the good counts only, for otherwise it might be reversed on writ of error (m). Though now, it is, by the 11 & 12 Vict. c. 78, s. 5, provided, that whenever any writ of error shall be brought on any judgment or on an indictment in any criminal case, and the Court of Error shall reverse the judgment, it shall be competent for such Court either to pronounce the proper judgment, or to remit the record to the Court below, in order that such Court may pronounce the proper judgment upon such indictment (n).

The safe and proper course, however, for adoption, where the indictment on which a conviction has been had contains counts of doubtful validity, is for the Court to pronounce judgment on each separate count of the indictment (o), and (l) A mistake in delivering the verdict may be corrected within a reasonable time : Reg. v. Vodden, Dears. 229.

A discharge of the jury is not equivalent to an acquittal : Re Newton, 13 Q. B. 716.

(m) O'Connell v. Reg., 11 Cl. & F. 155 ; in which case the judgment of Lord Denman, C. J., should be specially perused ; Campbell v. Reg., 11 Q. B. 799, 813, 814, 837 ; Ryalls v. Reg., Id. 781, 795.

(n) "In the case of an indictment with some good and some bad counts, after a verdict for the Crown upon all the counts, the Court below ought to arrest the judgment on the bad counts, and pass sentence on the good ones." Should the Court below, however, have pronounced judgment generally, "the Court of error may now order judgment to be arrested on all the bad counts, and pronounce the proper judgment on all the good counts." Per Lord Campbell, C. J., Holloway v. Reg., 2 Den. C. C. 295.

(o) See King v. Reg., 14 Q. B. 31. In O'Brien v. Reg., 2 H. L. Ca. 465, 470, it is said that sentence was dis-to have such judgment entered accordingly, in which case the punishment awarded will not be cumulative ; and, if one of such judgments be reversed on error, the others will remain unaffected by such reversal (p) ; or a nolle prosequi may be entered as to all the doubtful counts of the indictment, and judgment may be entered up on such counts only as are unquestionably good (q) ; and a misjoinder of counts will be cured by a verdict of acquittal on the count misjoined (r).

It has been already observed, that, by the 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 25, every objection to an indictment for any formal defect, although ground of demurrer, if taken at the proper time, viz., before the jury are sworn, may be amended by the Court ; defects of substance, however, may still be taken advantage of, where not cured or amended, by motion in arrest of judgment, which is made after verdict and before judgment pronounced (s) ; or, if apparent on the record, by writ of error (t) ; and, for misdemeanor, a new trial is sometimes granted, ex. gr., on the ground of surprise (u), or a bill of exceptions to the ruling of the judge will lie (x). Of a writ of error, indeed, the full effect is now attainable (y) by a much more speedy and less expensive process under the tinctly repeated as to each of the five counts of the indictment on which the defendant had been convicted. See also Gregory v. Reg., 15 Q. B. 974.

(p) See ante, p. 987, note (o).

(q) Reg. v. Rowlands, 2 Den. C. C. 364.

(r) Reg. v. Ferguson, Dears. 427.

An indictment, when so defective that no judgment can be given on it, may be quashed on certiorari, but after verdict the indictment must be construed ut res magis valeat quam pereat : Per Wightman, J., Reg. v. Craddock, 2 Den. C. C. 34 ; Reg. v. Stokes, 1 Den. C. C. 307.

(s) See Reg. v. Rowlands, Den.

C. C. 364 ; Reg. v. Larkin, Dears. 365 ; Reg. v. Harris, Id. 344 ; Reg. v. Inhab. of Denton, Id. 3.

(t) See Sill v. Reg., Dears. 132. The Attorney-General's fiat, however, is necessary before bringing error on a judgment for a misdemeanor : Ex parte Newton, 4 E. & B. 869 ; In re Newton, 16 C. B. 97 ; Reg. v. Stokes, 1 Den. C. C. 307.

(u) Reg. v. Whitehouse, Dears. 1.

(x) See Reg. v. Alleyne ; Alleyne v. Reg. Dears. 505.

(y) That is, provided the Judge chooses to grant a ' case ' for the consideration of the Court of Criminal Appeal.

Court for Crown Cases
Reserved.

provisions of the stat. 11 & 12 Vict. c. 78, intituled "An Act for the further Amendment of the Administration of the Criminal Law," by virtue of which a Court of Criminal Appeal has been established for determining any question of law, which, in the discretion of the judge who presides at the trial of a criminal offender, may be reserved by him for their consideration. The question or questions thus reserved are, under sect. 2 of the Act just cited, to be stated in a case signed by the judge, together "with the special circumstances upon which the same shall have arisen;" and this case is then to be transmitted to and argued before the Court of Criminal Appeal, who will deliver judgment thereupon. The nature and precise extent of the jurisdiction of the Court for the consideration of Crown Cases Reserved will more distinctly appear on examination of the authorities below cited (z).

Lastly, when judgment—unimpeachable on any substantial ground—has been passed upon an offender, nothing can absolve him from the penalties indicated thereby, save only endurance of the same, or a pardon, the right to vouchsafe which is, according to our constitution, the peculiar prerogative of the Crown—the fountain not only of honour but of mercy. The effect of a pardon, if absolute and unconditional, is to make the offender a new man, to acquit him of all corporal penalties and forfeitures annexed to the particular offence, and to give him a new credit and capacity (a).

Pardon—
absolute,

A pardon, however, may be, and very frequently is, conditional only, in which case it operates to purge the particular offence upon performance of the condition, i. e., upon suffering —conditional.

(z) Reg. v. Webb, 1 Den. C.C. 338; Reg. v. Faderman, Id. 565; Reg. v. Harris, Dears. 344.

(a) 4 Bla. Com. p. 402. "Where the rigour of law bordereth upon injustice, mercy should, if possible, interpose in the administration." Post. Disc. Hom. p. 264, and Disc. High Treas. 184. Pardon by the Crown and its consequences are fully treated of in 4 Bla. Com., chap. 31.

the punishment imposed in lieu of the original penalty by the Crown (b).

AND here these Commentaries which have been devoted to an examination, more or less detailed, of each of the three leading branches of our Common Law—Civil, Quasi-Criminal, and Criminal—must conclude : not indeed for lack of matter—inasmuch as many topics, which might with propriety have been discussed, have been altogether passed over or but slightly handled—rather for lack of space—those limits having been reached which, at the outset of this Work, it was deemed advisable should not be exceeded. On a perusal of the foregoing pages, some such ideas as the following may, perchance, have been awakened in the reader's mind :—
 'Assuredly the object and the aim of law are of the highest and most momentous importance—quid sit jus et in quo consistit injuria, legis est definire. No science, save indeed that which concerns itself with purely moral precepts, can be more elevated than this, whose function it is, pro bono publico, to discriminate between right and wrong—to weigh with nicest scales—to classify and punish the infinitely various infractions of that social compact to which its protection has been pledged.'—Such being the aim and office of our Common Law, how may we estimate its principles ? A merely casual glance at them will show that they are based in truth and justice—a more profound acquaintance with them would convince how admirably they are adapted and adjusted to the changing wants and exigencies of society. The doctrines enunciated by Roman jurists—modified conformably to the requirements of more polished manners and more elevated views—are still blended and in-

(b) See the proceedings in Smith O'Brien's case, as narrated in Townsend's Mod St. Tr. vol. 1, p. 469 ; and the Declaratory Act (12 & 13 Vict. c. 27), passed in consequence of his rejection of a conditional pardon.

corporated with our law ; from this land they have spread to Transatlantic regions, and the deference yielded to them throughout realms thus civilised and vast, testifies to the wisdom whence they sprung. True, these principles are sometimes artificially expounded—practically misapplied—or lost in technicalities. But in the abstract they are sound—will readily adapt themselves to advancing knowledge—and aid every onward step in that great career of improvement which man has yet to make. In this sense, we may safely predict that they will be ETERNAL.

INDEX.

ABANDONING EXCESS

to give jurisdiction to County Court, 63

ABATEMENT,

plea in, 171

of private nuisance, 221 of public nuisance, 223 of nuisance may sometimes justify entrance on the land of another, 771, 772

ABDUCTION of wife, action for, 835

ABSCONDING DEBTOR,

proceedings against, 151

ABSOLUTE RIGHT,

torts to, 829-831

ACCEPTANCE,

and actual receipt of goods within Stat. of Frauds, s. 17, 409-416 accommodation, 442, 446

of bill of exchange, what, 450

general, what, 450

may be absolute or conditional, 451 payable at banker's, 453

a particular place, and "not otherwise or elsewhere," 453 per procuration, what it is, 455 for honour, what it is, 456

ACCEPTOR

of bill of exchange, who is, 451

not discharged by non-presentment of bill, 453 is regarded as the principal contractor, 442, 448 doctrine of estoppel in regard to, 454 for honour, who is, 456

ACCESSORY, 922, 923

ACCOMMODATION ACCEPTANCE, liability in respect of, 442, 448

ACCORD AND SATISFACTION,

when pleadable in action on deed, 300, 301 what may be, 428 et seq.

ACCOUNT,

action of, when it lies, 122 cannot be stated by an infant, 576

AC ETIAM,

clause of, 41

ACT OF PARLIAMENT. See STATUTE.ACTION AT LAW. See ASSUMPSIT, FORM OF ACTION, FRUED PARTIES TO ACTIONS, TRESPASS, TROVER, &c.

when it lies, generally, 73 et seq.
 for obstructing thoroughfare, 97 for non-repair of sea-wall, 98 for recovery of a penalty under a statute, 100, 322 is sometimes not allowed on grounds of public policy, 102 et seq.
 is sometimes brought only with consent of Attorney-General, 103 113 specification of matters preliminary to commencing, 110 et seq.
 cause of, must be complete, 110 for breach of promise of marriage, 111 may have been postponed, 112 considerations as to, when brought under provisions of statute, 113 consent of judge or Attorney-General may be necessary, 113 when notice is necessary, 113, 114 proceedings in, 146 et seq.
 on a foreign judgment, 265 n. (m).
 for reward offered by advertisement, 323

ADMINISTRATION OF JUSTICE, offences against the, specified, 898 offences against, by judicial officers, 898

 by private persons, 898

ADMINISTRATOR. See EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS.ADULTERY, of wife, when it renders the husband not liable for necessaries, 592

 if wife and adulterer take husband's goods, it is larceny in the adulterer, 939

AGENT. See PRINCIPAL AND AGENT.AGGRAVATED ASSAULT, 923*AGREEMENT, meaning of this term in the 4th section of Statute of Frauds, 379 to oust jurisdiction, 43

 oral, within above section, made abroad, 46 upon consideration of marriage, 390 not to be performed within a year, 395

ALIEN. See ALLEGIANCE.

- ALIEN ENEMY,
incapacity of, to contract, 602
- ALLEGIANCE,
is natural or local, 887 to whom due, 888
- ALTERATION,
of bill of exchange or promissory note, effect of, 490-492
- AMBIGUITY. See EVIDENCE.
may be patent or latent, 500
if patent, cannot be helped by evidence, 501 when prima facie patent may be shown not really to exist, 501 evidence admissible to identify subject-matter of contract, 502 parties to it, 502
explain mercantile terms, 504
may nullify contract, 518, 519
- AMENDMENT of writ of summons, 159
of indictment, 977
- ANCIENT LIGHTS,
remedy for obstructing, 776
- ANIMALS FERÆ NATURÆ.
larceny of, cannot be committed at common law, 936
- ANIMUS FURANDI, essential to constitute larceny, 934, 942
how evidenced in appropriation of lost goods, 943
- ANNUITY,
action of, when it lies, 123
- APOTHECARY,
liability of, for negligence or unskilfulness, 665, 707, 710
negligence of, causing homicide, 915, 916
- APPEAL
from decision of Judge at Chambers, 58 on motion for new trial, 208 from County Court, 217
- APPEARANCE,
entry of, to writ of summons, 156
- APPELLATE JURISDICTION. See ERROR.
courts of, 47
- APPRENTICE,
damages for wrongfully quitting his master's service, 629
whether action lies for enticing away, 839 n. (n.)
- APPROPRIATION of chattels sold may be equivalent to delivery, 400 of specific part of bulk, 402, 403 of lost goods may amount to larceny, 943

ARBITRATION,

contract to refer to, 44

ARGUMENTATIVENESS,

should be avoided in pleading, 168

ARRAIGNMENT, 979

ARREST OF JUDGMENT

in civil case, 210

in criminal case, 988

ASPORTATION. See LARCENY.

what amounts to, 948

ASSAULT,

in what it may consist, 676

when justifiable, 677

aggravated, what is, 923 with intent to commit felony, 924

when indictable, 927

ASSIGNEES. See BANKRUPTCY, PARTIES TO ACTIONS.

ASSIZES,

origin of, 32

how jurors are summoned for, 197

ASSUMPSIT,

when it lies, 118

difference between, and debt, 119, 120

ATTEMPT, to commit a felony or misdemeanor, 867 how distinguishable from intention, 867 may expose to punishment, 867 to steal, 949

to obtain money by false pretences, 958

. ATTORNEY. See PARTNERS, PRINCIPAL AND AGENT, 530

when first employed, 35

action against for breach of duty, 87

summary proceeding against, by motion, 225, 226

no privity between client and town agent of, 319, 320 agreement by company to retain and employ, 327, 328

how far his authority extends, 530 authority of, as member of firm, 552

liability of, for negligence or unskilfulness, 663

ATTORNEY GENERAL,

when consent of, is necessary before commencing action, 100, 113 has a right to file a criminal information, 240

AUCTIONEER,

trespass, at suit of, 133

how he may bind principal within s. 17 of Stat. of Frauds, 420

—422

licence to him to enter premises, w^h other revocable, 431

AUDITA QUERELA, remedy by, when available, 213

AULA REGIS,

its origin, 26-28

AUTREFOIS ACQUIT,

plea of, 922, n. (l), 980

BAIL COURT,

what, and how constituted, 54

BAILMENT,

nature and definition, 798

ingredients in, 798

classification of bailments, 799

Class 1, Trust for exclusive benefit of bailor, 799

Class 2, ————— bailee, 802

Class 3, ————— benefit of both parties, 804 pawnee, liability of, 804 innkeeper, liability of, 808

boarding-house keeper, liability of, 810

lodging-house keeper, liability of, 811

land carrier, liability of, 811-826

tort to chattel under bailment, 826 larceny of chattel under bailment, 941

BANKER AND CUSTOMER.

relation subsisting between, 459-463 can banker paying forged bill charge his customer? 460 cheque charge his customer? 461 liability of new firm to customer, 555, 556 banker for not honouring cheque, 86

BANK NOTE,

is a promissory note made by banker, 480 circulates and is treated as money, 480

rule as to presentment of, 481

forfeited, who must bear loss of, 483

BANKRUPTCY. See PARTIES TO ACTIONS.

preference given in contemplation of, void, 362 does not excuse presentment of promissory note, 478 effect of, on capacity to contract, 568 whether uncertificated bankrupt may contract, 569 rights of assignees of bankrupt, 571 n. (t), 572, 573 liability of bankrupt ex contractu, 571, 574

BAR,

pleas in, 172

BARGAIN

and sale of chattel, its effect, 397, 399

for certain quantity of goods out of bulk, 402 meaning of, under Stat. of Frauds, s. 17, 417, 418

BARRISTER,

cannot in general sue in respect of professional services, 325 privilege of speech, 744

BATTERY,

includes an assault, 676, 925 indictment for assault and, 925 n. (e)
when justifiable, 677
when indictable, 925

BILL OF EXCEPTIONS

on trial at Nisi Prius, 201 in case of misdemeanor, 988

BILL OF EXCHANGE. See FOREIGN BILL, PROMISSORY NOTE.

general issue not allowed in action on, 174 acceptance of, by procuration, 337, 455 oral evidence to vary, 375
by whom introduced, 437 how it differs from other simple contracts, 438
definition of, 439
must be in writing, 439 general requisites of, 439-440 ordinary form of, 441 its use in mercantile transactions explained, 441 parties to, specified, 442 accommodation, what it is, 442 days of grace allowed for payment of, 444 steps to be taken by holder of, when due, 444
presentment of, 444
notice of dishonour, when requisite, 444 relation subsisting between parties to, 445 notice of dishonour of, when not requisite, 446 contract by drawer of, 448 indorser of, 450
 acceptor of, 450
different modes of accepting specified, 451-456 when wife's acceptance binds husband, 451, 588 indorsement of, blank or special, 456 when transferable by thief or finder, 458, 459 transfer of, by indorsement, when it may take place, 463 notice of dishonour of, when to be given, 465
 form of, 466
contrasted with promissory note, 475, 476 ordinary matters of defence in action on, enumerated, 485
 payment, 485
 absence or failure of consideration, 487 material alteration of, 490
 loss of, 492
authority of partner to accept for firm, 551 interest on, 639
 gift of, when complete, 847

BILL OF LADING,

nature of, considered, 495

BOARDING-HOUSE KEEPER,

liability of, for loss of guest's property, 817

BOND,

- whether money can be paid into Court, in action on, 179 n. (f)
- definition of, 276
- doctrine of merger illustrated by reference to, 276-280
 - estoppel in reference to, 280
- payment in action on, how pleadable, 301
- marriage brocage, void, 362
- to counteract combination amongst work-people, 369
- with a penalty does not bind an infant, 575, 576

BOROUGH ENGLISH,

- nature of this custom, 12

BOUGHT AND SOLD NOTES,

- what they are, 423
- effect of material variance between, 423, 424

BREACH OF PROMISE OF MARRIAGE. See MARRIAGE.

- when action for may be brought, 111

BRIBERY,

- criminal information lies for, 242
- definition of, 897, 898

BROKER,

- may bind principal within Stat. of Frauds, s. 17, 422
- when liable as principal, 542

BURGLARY,

- statutory provisions as to, 963
- at common law, 965 n. (o)
- ingredients in offence of, 965
- "breaking and entering," what, 966 et seq.
- what is a "burglarious" intent, 968, 969
- conviction on indictment for, 969, 970

CAPIAS AD SATISFACIENDUM,

- writ of, 205

CARRIER,

- common, effect of delivery of goods to, 403
 - liability of, 811 et seq.
 - is an insurer, 812
- provisions of Carriers' Act (11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 68), as to
 - liability of, 814-817
 - Railway and Canal Traffic Act (17 & 18 Vict. c. 31), as to, 817

CARRIERS' ACT,

- leading provisions of, 814-816

CASE. See TRESPASS.

- origin of action on the, 39
- when it lies, 124
- difference between, and trespass, 124, 684-686
- for breach of duty producing damage, 646-671
- founded on fraud producing damage, 344, 671

CASE—continued.

founded on malice producing damage, 672 against master for act of servant, 681 et seq.
for malicious injury, 727-730

CERTIFICATE

of bankrupt, is no bar to an action of tort, 145 of judge as to costs, 70, 71, 202

CERTIORARI,

where it lies to remove cause from County Court, 216 where it lies in other cases, 236

CHALLENGE

to the poll or array, 198

CHAMBERS. See JUDGES' CHAMBERS.CHANCERY, writs issuing out of, 38, 39

CHATTEL,

whether property in, may pass by sale without delivery, 399 personal, how defined, 789 tort to, in what it may consist, 789

CHEQUE,

action against banker for refusing to honour, 86 nature of, explained, 460 who must bear loss on payment of, when forged, 461, 462 consequence of nonpresentment of, 480 n. (i)

CHIEF JUSTICIAR,

office of, 26
when it fell into desuetude, 36

CIRCUITS,

origin of, 32

CHOSE IN ACTION,

what it is, 434
is not assignable at law, 131, 435, 436 one reason of this rule, 435 n. (i) exceptions to above rule, 437, 438 larceny cannot be committed of, at common law, 935

CLUB, liability of member of, considered, 549, 550

COGNOVIT,

what it is, 259 n. (l) cannot be given by an infant, 576

COMMISSION,

to examine witnesses, 196

COMMODATUM,

how defined, 802

COMMON CARRIER. See CARRIER.

COMMON LAW. See LEX NON SCRIPTA.

- of what elements composed, 3
- how declared and evidenced, 20
- to what principles it conforms, 21
- to what end its principles are adapted, 852

COMMON PLEAS, COURT OF,

- when separated from the Aula Regis, 33
- its jurisdiction between private persons, 33, 34
- its present jurisdiction, 42

COMPANIES

- liability of members of projected, 567
- effect of registration, 568
- fraudulent transfer of shares, 832

CONCURRENT WRIT

- of summons, what it is, 152

CONDITION PRECEDENT

- to vesting of right of action, 110
- averment of, 170

CONFESSION,

- when admissible in evidence, 982

CONSENT,

- a contract is founded on, 252
- effect of, criminally, 926 n. (m)

CONSIDERATION,

- not necessary to support judgment, 265
- not in general necessary to support deed, 291
- good or valuable, 293
- necessary ingredient in simple contract, 307, 315
- bygone will not support promise, when, 307, 314
- how defined, 315
- examples of, 317 et seq.
- contemporaneous with promise, 313, 324
- continuing, illustration of, 324
- bygone will support promise implied by law, 314
- and no other, 326
- moral, insufficient to support promise, 331
- obligation to support child, whether sufficient, 331
- concurrent, example of, 333
- consequence of illegality of, 353
- of guarantie need not appear on it, 380, 384, 385
- of bill of exchange will be presumed, 438
- absence of, or failure of, in action on bill or note, 487

CONSPIRACY,

- how constituted, 895
- various examples of, 896, 897

CONSTABLE,

- liability of, for false imprisonment, 717

CONSTRUCTION,

- various rules of, specified, 520

CONSTRUCTIVE TREASON. See HIGH TREASON.CONTRACT. See CONTRACT OF RECORD, CONTRACT UNDER SEAL, SIMPLE CONTRACT, ALIEN ENEMY, CUSTOM, DURESS, EVIDENCE, EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS, HUSBAND AND WIFE, INFANT, INTOXICATION, PRINCIPAL AND AGENT, STATUTE OF FRAUDS, USAGE.

meaning of this term, 249

may be of record, special or simple, 249, 259

executory or executed, 250 express or implied, 250, 251

what is meant by an implied contract, 251 is founded on consent, 252 is sometimes prohibited by law, 253

how governed by lex loci, 254 obligatory force of, how conferred, 256

effect of fraud on, 334

action for breach of, when it lies, 344 motive not material in, 344 charge of fraud in action for breach of, 345 illegal, as opposed to public policy or morality, 353 illegal, as in direct violation of law, 354 prohibited by statute, 354

how far valid when connected with illegal act, 355-360

opposed to public policy, 360

in restraint of trade, 363-369

of immoral tendency, bad, 370 good faith must be observed in, 370

parol, what it is, 373 et seq.

concerning land, &c., must be in writing, 379, 390

the capacity to, how it may be affected, 522 et seq.

of agency considered, 523-544 importance of knowledge of the law of, 640 tort flowing from breach of, 663 contrasted with tort, 850

CONTRACT OF RECORD,

how constituted, 260

merger of inferior contract in, 260 right of action ex delicto in, 261

estoppel by, 262

may be vitiated by fraud, 264

no consideration necessary to support, 265

binds the land of debtor, when, 265

is a consensual contract, 266

general rules in regard to effect of fraud on, 334

CONTRACT OF SALE. See FRAUDS, STATUTE OF.

of land, 390

what it is, 397

when property passes by, 397 et seq.

effect of payment, 398 earnest given, 398, 399

delivery, 399

of goods, ordered to be made, 404 for article in unfinished state, its effect, 405 damages for breach of, 621 et seq.

CONTRACT UNDER SEAL. See BOND, CONSIDERATION, COVENANT, DEED, ESCROW.

- may be unilateral, or inter partes, 249, 267
- definition of, 267
- solemnities attending execution of, 268
- signing, whether necessary to validity of, 268
- sealing and delivery essential to execution of, 268
- may be an escrow, 269
- properties of, 270
- doctrine of merger, as applicable to, 276
- estoppel by, 280
- is impeachable for illegality or fraud, 281 et seq., 33
- relief in equity against fraudulent, 290
- requires no consideration to support it, 291
- voluntary, when it may be invalidated, 293
- for carrying out illegal purpose, 295
- binds the heir of contractor, 295
- how it may be discharged, 297
- founded on immoral consideration, whether void, 370
- past immoral consideration for, whether it avoids, 370
- future immoral consideration for, whether it avoids, 370
- contrasted with simple contract, 427
- in what cases required by the common law, 431
 - by the statute law, 432
- by agent, 543
- by partner, 552

CONTRACTS,

- how classified, 249

CONTRIBUTION,

- right of, amongst joint contractors, 310

CONVERSION,

- meaning of this term in trover, 793 et seq.

COPYRIGHT,

- action will lie for invasion of, 88

CORPORATION,

- must in general contract by deed, 557
- exceptions to this rule, 558 et seq.
 - when contract is incidental to business of, 529 n. (d), 533
 - when act is trivial, and of frequent recurrence, 561
 - adopted by, 561
- where corporation is established by statute, &c., 565
- how to be sued, 568

CORPSE

- is not the subject of property, 936

COSTS,

- certificate of judge for, 70, 71, 202.

COUNSEL,

- his privilege of speech, 744

COUNTY COURT. See SHIRE COURT.

- general jurisdiction of, 59
- is distinct from the old County Court, 59 n. (u)
- its jurisdiction in regard to a "debt, damage, or demand," 61
- splitting demands not allowed to give jurisdiction to, 62-64
- abandonment of excess, to give jurisdiction to, 65
- cases excluded from jurisdiction of, 66
- jurisdiction given to, by consent, 60, 68
- when title to realty comes in question in, 66-68
- equitable jurisdiction of, 69
- jurisdiction of, over partnership accounts, 69
 - in respect of legacies, 69
- costs of plaintiff suing in, 70-72
- concurrent jurisdiction with superior Court, 71, 72
- prosecution of suit in,
 - the plaint, 214
 - the summons, 214
 - particulars of demand, 214
 - course of pleading, 214
 - the hearing, 214
 - judgment, 215
 - execution, 215
 - against the goods, 215
 - against the person, 215
- new trial in, 216
- certiorari to remove cause from, 216
- appeal from, to superior Court, 217

COURTS OF LAW. See AULA REGIS, COMMON PLEAS, COUNTY COURT, ERROR, EXCHEQUER, HOUSE OF LORDS, KING'S BENCH, SUPERIOR COURTS.COVENANT,

- action of, where it lies, 123
- definition of, 271 n. (q)
- how created, 271
- construction of, 272
- discharge of, before breach, 297
 - after breach, 297-299
 - sometimes without deed, 561 n. (h)
- to repair, damages for breach of, 627

COVENANTS,

- independent, 272
- dependent, 272
- concurrent, 272
- real, personal, and collateral, 273
- running with land, 274
- express and implied, 275

COVERTURE. See HUSBAND AND WIFE.CREDIT,

- effect of sale of goods on, 401

CREDITORS,

- deed or conveyance, when void as against, 293
- by specialty, their rights, 297

CRIME,

- meaning of this term, 856, 859
- is an offence of a public nature, 859
- meaning of intention in, 862
- where mind is actively in fault, 864
 - passively in fault, 865
- intention, how proveable, 865
- capacity to commit, how it may be affected, 869 et seq.
- responsibility of non compos mentis for, 871
- drunkenness, whether an excuse for, 876
- responsibility of infant for, 877
- responsibility of feme covert for, 879

CRIMES. See BURGLARY, LARCENY, MURDER, &c.

- classification of, 880
- against the State enumerated, 895
- against the executive power, 897
 - the administration of justice, 898
 - the public peace, 899
- public trade, morals, or police, 903

CRIMINAL APPEAL. See CROWN CASES RESERVED.

CRIMINAL INFORMATION,

- proceeding by, 240, 933

CRIMINAL LAW,

- importance of knowledge of, 854
- ignorance of, no excuse for infringing it, 854
- is imperative on all, 855

CRIMINAL PROCEEDING,

- what it is, 856 et seq.

CROWN,

- ratification of trespass by, 102, 696

CROWN CASES RESERVED,

- Court for consideration of, 989

CUSTOM,

- general or particular, 7
- examples of general, 8, 9
 - particular or local, 11
- qualities of valid,
 - whence it dates, 12
 - must have been continuously observed, 13
 - peaceably enjoyed, 14
 - must be reasonable, 14
 - certain, 16
 - compulsory, 18
 - consistent with each other, 18
- how construed, 18
- of the country, 19
- of trade, 19
- mercantile, into what classes divisible, 19 n. (b)
- admissibility of, to explain written contract, 504, 513
 - annex terms to written contract, 508
 - make broker liable as principal, 512

CUSTOMARY LAW,
what it is, 7

DAMAGE,

- when too remote, 93-96
- rule as to remoteness of, considered, 632-633, 848-850
- in action for slander, when not necessary, 749

DAMAGE FEASANT. See DISTRESS.

DAMAGES,

- signification of term, 612

nominal,

- for breach of contract, when, 87, 614
- trespass to land, 88
- invasion of right to trade mark, 88
- for an escape, when, 88, 89
 - act of trespass evidencing title, 89
 - taking water from canal, 90
 - diverting water from stream, 90
- breach of covenant to repair, when, 628 n. (d)
- breach of duty, 841

measure of,

- in actions of contract, 611-640

- inquiry as to motive, irrelevant for determining, 613

- for breach of contract, nominal damages at all events must be recoverable, 614

- for non-payment of liquidated sum, 615, 616

- penalty—liquidated damages—how distinguishable, 617-620

- generally, 620

- on contract for sale of goods, 621

- non-delivery of goods, 622

- not accepting goods, 623

- loan of stock, &c., 624

- price of goods, 625

- breach of warranty, 625

- of covenant to repair, 627

- of contract of hiring and service, 628

- wrongful dismissal, 628

- sale of land, 629

- consideration of rule as to remoteness of damage, 632-638, 848

- interest when recoverable, 638

- under Lord Campbell's Act (9 & 10 Vict. c. 93), 703-705

- in action against joint trespassers, 724, 725

- for false imprisonment, 716

- for seduction, 837

- by master founded on loss of service, 838 n. (l)

- enticing away servant, 839 n. (o)

- of tort, 840-850

- in general, are regarded as compensatory, 840

- against sheriff for an escape, &c., 841

DAMAGES—*continued.*measure of—continued.

- in action of tort plaintiff in general entitled to recover what he has lost through defendant's tortious act, 840-842
- jury sometimes give vindictive damages, 843
- intention or motive of wrong-doer, should it affect the damages? 844
- damages, general or special, 847
- consequential damage, when recoverable, 848

DAMNUM,

how defined, 74

DAMNUM AND INJURIA,

difference between, 74

DAMNUM ET INJURIA,

- will generally give a right of action, 92
- may fail to do so in certain cases, 93
 - where damage is too remote, 93-96
 - where proper remedy is by indictment, 96

DAMNUM SINE INJURIA,

- meaning of this term, 74
- is not actionable at law, 75
- examples of, 75 et seq.
- action for seduction, 77
 - suings plaintiff by mistake, 78
 - drawing off water from plaintiff's well, 78
- explanation of instances supra, 79-81
- further examples of, 81-84

DAYS OF GRACE

- allowed for payment of bill of exchange, 444
- promissory note, 254, 473 n. (c)

DEBT,

- action of, where it lies, 119
- difference between, and assumpsit, 119, 120
- lies upon judgment of Court of Record, 265
- for penalty under statute, 322

DECEIT. *See FRAUD.DECLARATION. See PLEADING.

- different parts of, considered, 164, 165
- rules of pleading in regard to, 166 et seq.
- several counts in, when not allowed, 166
- statutory forms of, to be used, 167

DEED. See CONTRACT UNDER SEAL, FRAUD.

- may be unilateral, or inter partes, 249, 267
- definition of, 267
- solemnities attending execution of, 268
- signing, whether necessary to validity of, 268
- sealing and delivery essential to execution of, 268
- may be an escrow, 269

DEED—continued.

- properties of, 270
- doctrine of merger as applicable to, 276
- estoppel by, 280
- is impeachable for illegality or fraud, 281 et seq. 331
- relief in equity against fraudulent, 290
- requires no consideration to support it, 291
- voluntary when it may be invalidated, 293
- for carrying out illegal purpose, 295
- binds the heir of contractor, 295
- how it may be discharged, 297
- past immoral consideration for, whether it avoids, 370
- future immoral consideration for, does avoid, 370
- contrasted with simple contract, 427
- in what cases required at Common Law, 431
 - by the Statute Law, 432
- when it may be executed by agent, 543
 - by partner, 552

DEFAULT,

- judgment by, 192

DEFENDANTS. See PARTIES TO ACTIONS.

- in actions ex contractu, 134 et seq.
- ex delicto*, 143 et seq.

DELIVERY

- of deed, 268, 269
- is essential, 268
- of chattels sold—effect of, 379-401
- of goods on sale or return, 401
- to agent of vendee—its effect, 403
- of bill of lading, 495

DEMURRER. See PLEADING.

- its object, 160
- form of, 170
- practice as to, 191
- to indictment, 988

DEPARTURE

- should be avoided in pleading, 168

DEPOSIT,

- how defined, 799

DEPOSITIONS,

- when admissible in evidence, 983-985
- practice as to cross-examining upon, 985, 986

DETINUE,

- when it lies, 121

DEVISEE,

- when liable on deed of devisor, 135

DIRECTORS. *See COMPANIES.DISCOVERY,

- of documents, 193

DISHONOUR, NOTICE OF. See NOTICE OF DISHONOUR.

DISTRESS, for rent, 224
 for cattle damage feasant, 224

DIVORCE, effect of, on wife for the purposes of contract, &c., 583, 584

DOCUMENTS, inspection and discovery of, 193

DOLUS DANS LOCUM CONTRACTUI, explanation of this phrase, 342
 what may be evidence of, 351

DOWER, 117

DOWER UNDE NIHIL HABET, 117

DRAWEE, of bill of exchange, who is, 442

DRAWER,
 of bill of exchange, who is, 442 nature of contract and undertaking by, 445, 448

DRUNKENNESS. See INTOXICATION.

DUELLING,
 if it end fatally, is punishable as murder, 907

DUPLICITY,
 should be avoided in pleading, 166

DURESS,
 is pleadable in actions on bills and notes, 494 its effect on the capacity to contract, 600-602 when it excuses a criminal act, 869, 870, 879

DUTY, correlative to right, 108 n. (b) signification of term, 642 n. (c) “public” duty, meaning of this expression, 646 action for breach of, at common law, 647
 under statute, 654
 action for breach of “private” duty, 661 right of action for breach of, how limited, 668 when gratuitously undertaken, 670

DWELLING-HOUSE, right of commoner, &c., to pull down, in certain cases, 222, 223 what is a, in connection with the crimes of house-breaking burglary, &c., 963-970

DYING DECLARATION,
 when admissible in evidence 983

EARNEST,

effect of, in passing goods, 398 to bind bargain within Statute of Frauds, sect. 17, 407, 417, 418

EASEMENT,

prescriptive right to, how acquired, 778-781

ECCLESIASTICAL COURT, writ of prohibition to, when it lies, 231

EJECTMENT,

is a mixed action, 117

when it lies, 753

depends mainly upon title, 754 where relation of landlord and tenant exists between parties, 755 provisions of C. L. Proc. Act, 1852, respecting, 758 et seq.

on a vacant possession, 758

no written pleadings in action of, 760 equitable defence not pleadable in, 761

nonsuit in, when, 761

ELEGIT,

writ of, 204

EMBEZZLEMENT,

how constituted, 958

how distinguishable from larceny by servant, 959

EMBLEMENTS, 392-394

ENGINEER,

liability of, for negligence or unskilfulness, 663

EQUITABLE DEFENCE,

when pleadable at law, 188 is not pleadable in ejectment, 761

EQUITY,

relief in, against fraudulent deed, 290

ERROR. See EXCHEQUER CHAMBER.

proceedings in error, 211 error in law, 211

error in fact, 211

on judgment in criminal case, 987

ESCROW,

delivery of deed as, 269

ESTOPPEL,

by matter of record, 262

deed, 280

defence of, how raised, 289 doctrine of, guarded with strictness, 290 in recital of deed, 290 in pais, instances of, 427 n. (l)rule in regard to, 527 n. (u), 830 et seq.

as against acceptor of bill of exchange, 454 on indorser, from denying the drawing of bill, &c., 464

EVICTIION, remedy by, 220

EVIDENCE. See CONFESSION, DEPOSITIONS, DYING DECLARATION, FRAUDS, STATUTE OF.
must not be pleaded, 167
preparation of, for trial, 195 best evidence of a transaction is required, 374 oral, to vary written agreement, when inadmissible, 374, 499 to vary contract evidenced by bill of exchange, 375 promissory note, 376 to vary contract within 4th or 17th secs. of Statute of Frauds, 424-426
of custom or usage to explain written contracts, 498 et seq., 542 patent and latent ambiguities considered, 500 admissible to identify subject-matter of contract, 502 or parties to it, 502
explain mercantile terms, 504 to annex terms to written contract, 508 of usage to vary terms of written contract inadmissible, 510 et seq.
questions as to admissibility of, how determined, 513 leading rules of construction of written instruments enumerated, 520 of experts in regard to lunacy, 874, 875 ordinary rules of, at criminal trial, stated, 982 et seq.

EXCEPTIONS. See BILL OF EXCEPTIONS.

EXCHANGE. See BILL OF EXCHANGE.

EXCHEQUER, COURT OF,
whence derived, 28
its original jurisdiction, 28
its jurisdiction in private suits, 29
its equity jurisdiction, 30
its present jurisdiction, 42, 43

EXCHEQUER CHAMBER, COURT OF. See ERROR.
its origin, 47

EXECUTION. See CAPIAS AD SATISFACIENDUM, ELEGIT, EXTENT, FIERI FACIAS, LEVARI FACIAS.
in Superior Court, when it may issue, 203, 206 out of County Court, 215 of a deed, 268

EXECUTIVE POWER, crimes directed against, specified, 897

EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS. See PARTIES TO ACTIONS.
how far bound by specialty of testator or intestate, 296 special promise by, to answer damages personally, 379, 382 contracts by, their nature and liability on, 603-608 title of executor whence derived, 603 administrator whence derived, 604 their rights under Lord Campbell's Act (9 & 10 Vict. c. 93), 704

EXPERTS,

evidence of, in regard to lunacy, 874, 875

EXTENT,

writ of, 206

EXTRAORDINARY REMEDIES,

their nature, 218

by act of party injured, 218

self-defence, 218

recaption, 219

eviction, 220

abatement of private nuisance, 221

public nuisance, 223

distress, 224

by operation of law, 224

retainer, 225

remitter, 225

granted by Courts of law, 225 on motion, 225

mandamus, 227

injunction, 231

prohibition, 231

quo warranto, 234

certiorari, 236

procedendo, 237

interpleader, 237

recovery of small tenements, 239

specific delivery of chattels, 240

criminal information, 240

habeas corpus, 243

petition of right, 248 n. (k)

EYRE, JUSTICES IN, 32FALSEHOOD. See FRAUD.

without damage will not sustain action, 342

FALSE IMPRISONMENT,

action for, generally, 711 against private individual, 711-717 constable, police officer, &c. 717

justice of the peace, 720

FALSE PRETENCES, OBTAINING MONEY, &c., BY, ingredients in this offence under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, 952

how distinguishable from larceny, 952

what is a false pretence within above statute, 953

how distinguishable from fraud, 955 from breach of warranty, 956 provisions of 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, as to conviction for, 958

FELONY,

civil remedy is suspended when the act done is felonious, 100 statutory exception to the above rule, 704 an attempt to commit may be a misdemeanor, 867 difference between and misdemeanor, 881

FELONY—continued.

incidents of, 882 entails forfeiture, 882 includes trespass, 882, 940

where, on trial for, defendant is found guilty of attempt to commit, 884 under stat. 11 & 12 Vict. c. 12, 894 assault with intent to commit, 924

FEME COVERT. See HUSBAND AND WIFE.contract of, in general void, 326, 583 *et seqFEOFFMENT, how affected by statute, 432

FERÆ NATURÆ. See ANIMALS FERÆ NATURÆ.FINDER

of lost property has a right against all the world except the owner, 791 conversion by, what is, 793

when appropriation of lost property by, amounts to larceny, 943

FIERI FACIAS,

writ of, 203

FINAL PROCESS,

action for malicious arrest on, 729

FIXTURES,

whether trover will lie for, 126 contract for sale of, whether within Statute of Frauds, 393, 394

FLOWING WATER,

right to, 782

FOOD, liability for selling unwholesome, 707

FOOTWAY,

duty cast on owner of premises adjoining, 649

FORBEARANCE,

may be a good consideration for promise, 383

FORCIBLE ENTRY, 902FOREIGN BILL,

what, 468

protest of, 468

rights and liabilities of parties on, how determinable, 469, 470 right of vendee on sale of, when worthless, 484

FOREIGNER,

service of writ on, out of jurisdiction, 158

FORFEITURE, 756, 757, 882FORGERY, of bills, cheques, and bank-notes, who is to bear the loss, 460-462, 483

FORM OF ACTION,

- need not be mentioned in writ of summons, 116
- importance of knowledge as to, considered, 116
- real, personal, or mixed, 117
- ex contractu*, 118
 - assumpsit, 118
 - debt, 119
 - detinue, 121
 - account, 122
 - covenant, 123
 - annuity, 123
- ex delicto*, 124
 - trespass, 124, 643, 674 et seq., 763 et seq.
 - case, 124, 646 et seq., 666, 726 et seq., 829
 - trover, 125, 789 et seq.
 - replevin, 126
- mandamus, where it lies, 128
- injunctio, where it lies, 128
- ejectment, where it lies, 753

FRAUD,

- may vitiate judgment of Court of justice, 264
 - decree in equity, 264 n. (i).
 - deed, 281, 286, 288
- proof of, on whom it lies, 289
- relief in equity against deed on ground of, 290
- want of consideration may be proof of, 292
- its effect on contract, 334
- distinction between moral and legal, 336
- sufficiency of legal, to support action, 337
- of agent, liability of principal for, 337, 341
- scienter, whether essential to action for, 339
- evidenced by misrepresentation, 340
- how constituted, 342
- without damage will not sustain action, 342
- resulting in damage, actionable, 342
- charge of, irrelevant in count founded upon contract, 344
- how distinguished from breach of warranty, 347
- evidence of, on sale of horse, 350
- inducing to contract, evidence of, 351
- how it affects bills and notes, 494
- producing damage, action for, 665, 671, 829, 830
- is matter for investigation by a jury, 846
- may depend upon wording of statute, 846
- in obtaining goods, remedy for, 852
- when not indictable, 860, 955

FRAUDS, STATUTE OF,

- its operation on contract made abroad, 46
- its object and intention, 377 n. (s), 378
- provisions of 4th section of, 379
- meaning of word "agreement" therein used, 379
- agreement under, how to be signed, 381
 - whether mutually binding, 305
- promise under 4th section by executor to pay damages, 382
 - to answer for debt of another, 383-389

FRAUDS, STATUTE OF—continued.

- policy of above clause, 388
- agreement made upon consideration of marriage, 390
- contract concerning land, &c., within section 4, 390-395
- agreement not to be performed within a year under section 4, 395
- section 17, what within, 406
 - its effect on contract not made as it directs, 408
 - requirements of, as to contract for the sale of goods of the value of £10, or upwards, 407-409
 - what is an acceptance and receipt of goods within, 409-416
- contract within, cannot be varied by subsequent oral agreement, 424-426
 - may be explained by evidence of usage, 542

FRAUDULENT TRUSTEES, 941, 958 n. (e)

FREE BENCH, 117

GAME,

- information for illegally snaring, is a criminal proceeding, 858

GAVELKIND,

- nature of this custom, 11, 12

GENERAL ISSUE,

- in the various actions specified, 173-175

GIFT

- of chattel inter vivos, how perfected, 432

GOODS,

- meaning of word within section 17 of the Statute of Frauds, 407, 408

GUARANTIE,

- obligation of parties to, whether mutual, 305, 306
- what it is, 383
- consideration of, need not appear in, 384, 385

HABEAS CORPUS,

- its importance in a constitutional point of view, 243 et seq.
- how granted, 246
- return to, 247

HEALTH,

- torts to, 706
- nuisances affecting, 707
 - when punishable criminally, 905

HEIR,

- how far bound by deed of ancestor, 135, 296, 297

HIGH TREASON,

- in what it consists, 881, 888
 - by Statute of Treasons, 888
 - under 36 Geo. 3, c. 7, 890

HIGH TREASON—continued.

- overt act of, how proved, and what, 890, 891
 - bare words cannot constitute, 892
- doctrine as to constructive treason, 893
- period of limitation in, 894 n. (d) and n. (e)

HIGHWAY,

- action for obstruction of, 97, 648
- indictment for obstruction of, 904

HIRING AND SERVICE. See DAMAGES, MASTER AND SERVANT.HOMICIDE. See MANSLAUGHTER, MURDER.

- different degrees of, 906
- is prima facie presumed to be malicious, 908
- on provocation, 910
- coupled with felonious intent, 913
- caused by undue correction, 914
- through negligence, 914
 - of medical practitioner, 915
 - of trustees of roads, 916
- in resisting officers of justice, 917
- where justifiable, 919
 - excusable, 920
- occurring abroad, jurisdiction of Court over, 921
- proof of corpus delicti, 922
- must have happened within year and day, 922
- conviction on indictment for, 922
- accessory before the fact to, 922, 923

HOUSE-BREAKING,

- statutory provision as to, 963
- requisites to sustain indictment for, 964

HOUSE OF LORDS,

- appellate jurisdiction of, 48

HUNDRED COURT,

- its jurisdiction, 24

HUSBAND AND WIFE. See ADULTERY, MARRIAGE, PARTIES TO ACTIONS.

- deed in contemplation of future separation between, void, 362
- liability of feme for meat supplied after husband's death, 539
- liability of infant widow for expenses of husband's funeral, 579 n. (h)
- are one person in law, 583
- exceptions to this rule, 583 n. (z)
- wife cannot bind herself by contract, 584
 - contract with husband, 584
- liability of wife ex contractu, 586
 - husband for necessities, &c., supplied to wife, 588-596
- action by husband for injury to wife, 668
 - for abduction of wife, 835
 - for injury to wife per quod consortium amisit, 835, 836
- sending to wife a libel on husband is a publication, 746

HUSBAND AND WIFE—continued.

- liability of wife for crime, 879
- wife cannot commit larceny of husband's goods, 939
- receipt of stolen goods from husband, by wife, 952

IDENTITY

- of subject-matter of contract, 502
- of parties to contract, 502

IGNORANTIA FACTI,

- homicide may be rendered excusable by, 920

IGNORANTIA JURIS,

- is no excuse for crime, 854

ILLEGALITY,

- deed is impeachable for, 281-288
- whether party is estopped from alleging his participation in, 289
- in contract, effect of, 353 et seq.
- may be in consideration or in promise, 355
- when it may invalidate contract, 357 et seq.
- where pleadable in actions on bills and notes, 494

IMMORALITY,

- its effects on contracts, 370

INCORPOREAL RIGHT,

- how created, 431

INDICTMENT. See ASSAULT, LIBEL, MURDER, &c.

- for nuisance, 96
- obstructing throughfare, 97
- procedure by, when applicable, 99
- for what it will lie, 859-861
- may lie for a mere attempt, 867
- for simple larceny—statutory provisions as to, 947 n. (m)
- what it is, 976
- how found, 976
- general remarks as to form of, 976-978
- amendment of, 977, 978

INDORSEMENT. See BILL OF EXCHANGE, WRIT OF SUMMONS.

- of writ of summons, 149, 150
- of bill of exchange, 456
- of promissory note, effect of, 476
- in blank, 443
- special, 456
- effect of transfer of bill or note by, 444, 456-459
- undertaking implied by, 450
- transfer by, when it may take place, 463
- of bill of lading, 495

INFANCY

- must be pleaded specially, 582
- replication to plea of, 582

INFANT,

contract of, in general voidable by him, 305 not bound except for necessities, 326 may sue on contract entered into with him, 571 nature of his liability on contract, 575-578 liability of, for necessities, 579, 580 ratification of promise by, 580 is civilly liable for tort, 582, 845 may be doli capax, 583, 878 responsibility of, for crime, 877

INJUNCTION,

action of, when it lies, 128
 writ of, 231

INJURIA,

how defined, 74, 92

INJURIA AND DAMNUM,

difference between, 74

INJURIA SINE DAMNO,

meaning of, 84
 illustrated by reference to Ashby v. White, 85
 Marzetti v. Williams, 86
 Fray v. Voules, 87
 where plaintiff sues for nominal damages, 87-89 illustrated by action for taking or diverting water, 90 reference to actions of tort, 92 where malice exists without producing damage, 727

INNKEEPER. See LIEN.

gives a general license to any person to enter his doors, 772 is not bound to provide his guest with a particular room, 772
 n. (n)
 liability of, for loss of guest's property, 808
 how diminished by statute, 810

INSANITY. See LUNACY, NON COMPOS MENTIS.INSPECTION OF DOCUMENTS, 193*INSURANCE, vitiating by misstatement or concealment, 345 n. (y)

INTENTION,

of contractor, whether material in action for breach of contract, 613 of wrong-doer, whether material, 674, 844 meaning of, in connection with criminal law, 862 proof of, lies on whom, in criminal cases, 863 how proveable, 865 mere intention not punishable, 867 how distinguished from attempt, 867-869 criminal, in what cases absent, 869 et seq.
 fact of drunkenness may be material as regards, 877

INTEREST,

when recoverable, 638

INTERPLEADER,

nature of proceeding by, 237 practice as to, how affected by C. L. Proc. Act, 1860, 238

INTERROGATORIES, 194

INTOXICATION,

whether a defence in an action on a bill, 494 n. (e)

whether it invalidates contract, 599 crime, whether excused by, 876

ISSUE,

in pleading, what it is, 161

joinder in, 190

JOINDER OF PARTIES. See PARTIES TO ACTIONS.JOINT STOCK COMPANIES. See COMPANIES.

JUDGE,

his duty in construing the Statute Law, 3 jus dicere non jus dare, 5

how far irresponsible, 103 et seq.

province of, at Nisi Prius, 199 certificate of, at Nisi Prius, 202

a wager by, on cause before him, is void, 361 liability of, for obstructing course of justice, 898

JUDGES' CHAMBERS,

origin of jurisdiction at, 55 jurisdiction at, recognised by Statute Law, 55 mode of procedure at, 57 appeal from decision at, 58, 59

JUDGES OF SUPERIOR COURTS, their number, 31 n. (y), 49

how far irresponsible, 103 et seq.

when criminal informations may be filed by, or against, 241

JUDGMENT. See CONTRACT OF RECORD.

by default, 192

motion in arrest of, 210

non obstante veredicto, 210

in County Court, 215

merger of inferior contract in, 260

right of action ex delicto in, 261

estoppel by, 262

may be vitiated by fraud, 264

no consideration necessary to support, 265

binds the land of debtor, when, 265

is a consensual contract, 266

general rules in regard to effect of fraud on, 334

in criminal cases, how to be entered up, 987, 988 error on, 988

JUDICIAL SEPARATION.

effect of, on wife, for the purposes of contract, &c., 584

JURISDICTION

- agreement to oust, 43
- of our Courts over persons abroad, 47
- service of writ, out of, 157, 158
- where homicide occurs abroad, 921

JURISDICTION, APPELLATE. See APPELLATE JURISDICTION.

JURISDICTION BY CONSENT, 45

JURY,

- how summoned, 197
- may be challenged, 198
- province of, on trial at Nisi Prius, 200
- when discharged from giving verdict, 202

JUSTICE. See ADMINISTRATION OF JUSTICE.

JUSTICES ITINERANT,

- when first appointed, 32

JUSTICES OF THE PEACE,

- notice of action against, when necessary, 114
- liability of, for false imprisonment, 720-724
- summary jurisdiction of, 885
 - how to be exercised, 885
 - in cases of assault, 927
- jurisdiction of, whence derived, 971
 - under commission of the peace, 971
 - at sessions excluded, in what cases, 972, 973

KING. See HIGH TREASON.

- can do no wrong, 102

KING, PREROGATIVE OF,

- does not extend to acting as judge in any court, 36 n. (c)

KING'S BENCH, COURT OF,

- its establishment, 36
- its original jurisdiction, 37
- how this Court extended its jurisdiction, 39, 40, 41
- present jurisdiction of, 41, 42

LADING, BILL OF. See BILL OF LADING.

LAND,

- is bound by a judgment, 265
- contract concerning, 390
- how distinguished from its produce, 392
 - water in legal contemplation, 781

LANDLORD AND TENANT. See EJECTMENT, EVICTION, RECOVERY OF SMALL TENEMENTS.

- liability of landlord for nuisance on demised premises, 691
 - ratifying trespass of bailiff, 695
- rights of, in ejectment, 755 et seq.

LARCENY,

simple,

definition of, 934

what is not the subject of, at common law, 934 things attached to realty, 934

chose in action, 935

animals feræ naturæ, 936

property in chattel, how laid, 937 possession, actual or constructive, to support indictment for, 937

"taking," what, in connection with, 937 of goods under bailment, 941 existence of "animus furandi" in, 942

of lost goods, 943

doctrine of relation in connection with, 946

"asportation," what, 948 effected by innocent agent, 949 attempt to commit, 949 how distinguishable from false pretences, 952

by servant, 959

how distinguishable from embezzlement, 959 from the person, how constituted, 961 how distinguishable from robbery, 961

LAW. See COMMON LAW, CUSTOMARY LAW, MUNICIPAL LAW.

implies a sanction, 3.

must be imposed by some adequate power, 3 conforms to certain principles, 21 criminal, speaks imperatively to all, 855

LAW MERCHANT. See LEX MERCATORIA.LAW OF CONTRACTS. See CONTRACT, DEED, SIMPLE CONTRACT, &c. importance of knowledge of, 640, 641LAW OF NATURE,

our law conforms to, 21

LAWYER AND STATESMAN,

difference between, 5

LENDER OF CHATTEL,duties of, 803 n. (u)LETTER, contract by, 304

LEVARI FACIAS,

writ of, 205

LEX FORI,

when regarded by our Courts, 45, 46

LEX LOCI,

how it operates on contract, 254

LEX MERCATORIA,

what it is, 10

is judicially noticed, 10, 11 its operation in regard to day of payment of bill or note, 254

terms recognised in, how explicable, 504

LEX NON SCRIPTA,

what it is, 7

may in some cases control the Statute Law, 9 must be declared by judge, 20

LEX SCRIPTA,

what it is, 3

how interpreted, 3-7

LIBEL,

definition of, 88, 734

when words are actionable per se, 645

substance of declaration for, 735 evidence of malice in action for, 735 et seq.

when privileged, 737-745 publication of, what, 745 functions of judge and jury in action for, 747 is in many cases indictable or actionable, 851 on foreign potentate may be indictable, 895 n. (f)

ingredients in offence of, 928

provisions of Mr. Fox's Libel Act, 929

6 & 7 Vict. c. 96, as to, 930, 931

when truth of may be alleged, 931 criminal information for, 933

LIBERTY OF THE SUBJECT. See HABEAS CORPUS, MAGNA CHARTA.

LIEN,

innkeeper's right of, 772 n. (n), 809 n. (h)

LIGHT. See ANCIENT LIGHTS.

LIMITATION,

period of, in ejectment, 183

in covenant, or debt on bond, 184 in action on simple contract, 184

LIMITATION, STATUTES OF,

enumerated and considered, 182-187

acknowledgment of debt, to bar, 185 n. (x), 186 promise to pay debt barred by, 330

LIQUIDATED DAMAGES,

what, how distinguishable from penalty, 617-620

LOCATIO-CONDUCTIO,

how defined, 804

into what classes divisible, 804

LODGING-HOUSE KEEPER,

liability of, 811

LORD CAMPBELL'S ACT,
9 & 10 Vict. c. 93, 703

LOSS,
of bill of exchange or promissory note, effect of, 492

LOST CHATTEL,
title of finder, 791
when appropriation of, amounts to larceny, 943

LUNACY. See NON COMPOS MENTIS.
evidence of experts in regard to, 874, 875

LUNATIC. See NON COMPOS MENTIS.

MAGISTRATE. See JUSTICE OF THE PEACE.

MAGNA CHARTA, 33, 244, 753

MAKER OF PROMISSORY NOTE, nature of undertaking by, 476

MALICE,
producing damage, action founded on, 672, 725 et seq.
meaning of, in civil proceedings, 725 in law, what, 725
in fact, what, 726
in action for libel, how proved or presumed, 735 et seq.
in connection with criminal law, what it is, 864, 907 crime of murder, 907

MALICIOUS ARREST,
action for, when it lies, 727
on mesne process, 728
on final process, 729

MALICIOUSLY SUING OUT COMMISSION OF BANKRUPTCY,
action for, 733

MALICIOUS PROSECUTION, action for, when it lies, 730-733

MANDAMUS,
action of, when it lies, 128
to examine witnesses, 196 prerogative writ of, when granted, 227
return to, 230
award of peremptory writ after judgment in action of, 230, 231

MANDATE,
how defined, 800

MANSLAUGHTER. See MURDER.
definition of, 906
on provocation, 910
resulting from angry struggle, 912 caused by undue correction, 914

MANSLAUGHTER—continued.

- through negligence, 914
 - of medical practitioner, 915
 - of trustees of roads, 916
- by officer of justice, 917
- in killing officer of justice, 918

MARINE INSURANCE,

- policy is vitiated by misstatement, 345 n. (y)

MARRIAGE. See HUSBAND AND WIFE.

- when action for breach of promise of may be brought, 111
- action for breach of promise of, 390, 614
- brocage bonds are illegal, 362
- contract in restraint of, illegal, 362
- agreement made upon consideration of, 379, 390
- merges the existence of wife, 584
- its effect on wife's capacity to contract, 583 et seq
- property at law, 585

MARRIED WOMAN. See FEME COVERT, HUSBAND AND WIFE.MASTER AND SERVANT.

- liability of master for wrongful dismissal, 628
 - act of servant, 681 et seq.
- limitations of above liability, 687-690
- liability of master to one sustaining injury in his service, 698-703
 - for libel on servant, 738, 739
- master responsible for fraud of servant, when, 835
- action by master for battery of servant, 837
 - enticing away servant, 838

MASTERS OF SUPERIOR COURTS,

- their duties, 49

MAXIMS,

- their use and value, 20

MAXIMS, LIST OF.

- actio personalis moritur cum personâ*, 143, 703
- actus non facit reum nisi mens sit rea*, 868, 929 n. (a), 944 945
- ad quæstionem facti non respondent iudices*, 844
- ad proximum antecedens fiat relatio*, 499
- ambiguum placitum interpretari debet contra proferentem*, 165 n. (e), 518 n. (a)
- aquz currit et debet currere*, 782
- caveat emptor*, 337, 484, 807 n. (p)
- consuetudo ex certâ causâ rationabili usitata privat communem legem*, 14
- contra non valentem agere nulla currit præscriptio*, 187
- cuicumque aliquis quid concedit concedere videtur et id sine quo res ipsa esse non potuit*, 772 n. (e)
- delegata potestas non potest delegari*, 422 n. (l)
- de minimis non curat lex*, 646
- every man's house is his castle, 644
- ex antecedentibus et consequentibus est optima interpretatio*, 520
- exceptio probat regulam*, 557
- ex dolo malo non oritur actio*, 334, 354

MAXIMS—continued.

- ex nudo pacto non oritur actio*, 802
expressio unius exclusio alterius, 499 expressum facit cessare tacitum, 275, 311 extra territorium jus dicenti impune non parctur, 47 ex turpi causâ non oritur actio, 354 falsa orthographia, falsa grammatica non vitiat cartam vel concessionem, 520 fortior et potentior est dispositio legis quàm hominis, 280 furtum non est ubi initium habet detentionis per dominum rei, 939 id certum est quod certum reddi potest, 17 ignorantia juris quod quisque scire tenetur, neminem excusat, 854 in jure non remota causa sed proxima spectatur, 93 n. (x) in traditionibus chartarum non quod dictum est sed quod factum est inspicitur, 270 judicis est jus dicere non jus dare, 5 jus accrescendi inter mercatores, pro beneficio commercii, locum non habet, 556 king (the) can do no wrong, 102 lex est norma recti jubens honesta et prohibens contraria, 371 lex non favet delicatorem votis, 710 n. (b) maledicta expositio quæ corrumpit textum, 520 malitia supplet ætatem, 878, 879 mandare est gerendum quid alicui committere, 523 n. (d) misera est servitus ubi jus est vagum aut incertum, 3 modus et conventio vincunt legem, 406 ne lites sint immortales dum litantes sunt mortales, 208 n. (c) nemo enim aliquam partem recte intelligere possit antequam totum iterum atque iterum perlegerit, 520 nemo bis vexari debet pro eadem causâ, 980 nemo debet esse judex in propriâ causâ, 264, 361 nemo potest exuere patriam, 887
nihil tam conveniens est naturali æquitati ut unumquodque dissolvi eo ligamine quo ligatum est, 299 nihil, quod est inconveniens, est licitum, 10, 361 nil consensui tam contrarium est quam vis atque metus, 600 n. (b) non omne quod licet honestum est, 337 noscitur a sociis, 499 nullum tempus occurrit regi, 978 n. (a) obligatio est juris vinculum quo necessitate astringimur alicujus rei solvendæ secundum nostræ civitatis jura, 257 obligatio mandati consensu contrahentium consistit, 523 n. (c) omnia præsumuntur contra spoliatorem, 841 omnis rati habitio retrahatur et mandato priori æquiparatur, 308, 694 pacta conventa, quæ neque dolo malo neque adversus leges facta erunt, servabo, 372 prohibetur ne quis faciat in suo quod nocere possit alieno, 709 quando aliquid mandatur, mandatur et omne per quod pervenitur ad illud, 530 n. (e) quicquid plantatur solo, solo cedit, 392 qui facit per alium est perinde ac si faciat per seipsum, 523 qui facit per alium facit per se, 681, 685, 686, 702 qui hæret in litera hæret in cortice, 520 qui mandat ipse fecisse videtur, 523 qui tacet consentire videtur, 371

MAXIMS—continued.

- qui vult decipi decipiatur*, 371
- quod fieri non debet factum valet*, 289
- quod necessitas cogit excusat*, 870
- quod turpi ex causâ promissum est velute si quis homicidium vel sacrilegium se facturum promittat non valet*, 283
- res inter alios acta alteri nocere non debet*, 263
- respondeat superior*, 682, 686 n. (e), 701
- salus reipublicæ suprema lex*, 10
- scribere est agere*, 893, 893 n. (a)
- sic utere tuo ut alienum non lædas*, 10, 662 n. (y), 691, 775, 788
- silence gives consent*, 337 n. (p)
- traditio loqui facit chartam*, 268, 269
- turpis est pars quæ cum suo toto non convenit*, 520
- tutius semper est errare in acquietando quàm in puniendo*, 922
- ut res magis valeat quam pereat*, 333, 988 n. (r)
- verba relata inesse videntur*, 499
- vigilantibus non dormientibus jura subveniunt*, 371
- volenti non fit injuria*, 679
- voluntas reputatur pro facto*, 891

MEASURE OF DAMAGES. See DAMAGES.MEMORY, LEGAL, date of, 12, 13MEMORANDUM IN WRITING, what it should be to satisfy the 17th section of the Statute of Frauds, 418 *et seq.MERCANTILE CUSTOM. See CUSTOM, EVIDENCE, LEX MERCATORIA.
into what classes divisible, 19 n. (b)MERCANTILE TERMS. See CUSTOM, EVIDENCE, LEX MERCATORIA, MONTH.MERCHANDISE, meaning of word within section 17 of the Statute of Frauds, 407, 408MERCHANT SHIPPING ACT, how it effects the transfer of a ship, 433MERGER, of tort in felony, 100, 882 n. (o) of cause of action ex contractu, in judgment, 260
ex delicto, 261
doctrine of, as applicable to deed, 276 how illustrated, 277-280MESNE PROCESS, action for malicious arrest on, 728MINE, liability of owner of, for damage done to the surface, 82, 83 for negligence of workmen, 683

- MISDEMEANOR, is an indictable offence, 859 attempt to commit a felony is often a, 867 attempt to commit, may amount to a, 867 what may constitute a, 867, 882, 883 how distinguishable from felony, 882, 883 effect of 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 12, on trial for, 883 when, on trial for, defendant is proved guilty of attempt to commit, 884
- MISJOINDER, of plaintiffs, 130
- MISPRISION, signification of this term, 859 n. (y) of treason, what it is, 889 n. (i)
- MISREPRESENTATION. See FRAUD.
- MIXED ACTION,
 what, 117
- MONEY HAD AND RECEIVED,
 privity necessary to action for, 319—321 action for, founded upon failure of consideration, 346
- MONEY LENT,
 antecedent request is in this case implied, 308
- MONEY PAID,
 count for, on what ground it proceeds, 310 n. (q)
- MONTH,
 generally means a lunar month, 505 when evidence is admissible to show it means a calendar month, 505
- MORTGAGOR AND MORTGAGEE, relation of, 255 n. (a)
- MOTION IN COURT,
 how made, 51
 nature of remedy afforded on, 225
- MUNICIPAL LAW,
 what it is, 3
- MURDER. See DUELLING, HOMICIDE, MANSLAUGHTER.
 conspiracy to, is a misdemeanor, 897
 definition of, 906
 “malice aforethought,” what it is in connection with, 907 how reducible to manslaughter, 909 et seq.
 where homicide is coupled with felonious intent, 913 where undue correction amounts to, 913, 914 by officer of justice, when, 917
 in killing officer of justice, proof of corpus delicta on trial for, 922 death must have occurred within year and day, 922 on indictment for, jury may convict of manslaughter, 922 accessory before the fact to, how punishable, 922, 923

MUTUALITY,

- meaning of this term, 304
- requisite in simple contract, 304-306
- in contract of sale, 305 n. (s)
 - hiring and service, 305 n. (s)
- in guarantie, 305
- example of want of, 306
- want of, in contract under seal, 306 n. (b)

NAVIGABLE RIVER. See RIVER.NECESSARIES,

- liability of infant for, 326, 579, 580
- articles of mere luxury cannot be, 579
- supplied to wife, liability of husband for, 588, 595
- liability of lunatic for, 596
- supplied to drunken man, his liability for, 600

NEGLIGENCE,

- producing damage, action for, 646, 664, 682
- of apothecary or surgeon, action for, 665, 707, 710
- where plaintiff has contributed to injury by, 679
- of servant, liability of master for, 681-690, 835
- limitations of above liability, 687-690, 698
- liability of servant guilty of, 699
- action for compensation where death is caused by, 703
- liability of gratuitous bailee for, 800-802
 - pawnee for, 805
 - innkeeper for, 808-810
 - boarding-house keeper for, 810
 - lodging-house keeper, 811
 - land-carrier for, 811-826
- is not itself a ground of estoppel, 833
- homicide through, 914-916

NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENT. See BILL OF EXCHANGE, BILL OF LADING, PROMISSORY NOTE, RAILWAY SCRIP.
signification of this term, 434NEGOTIABILITY,

- quality of, what it is, 443

NEW ASSIGNMENT, 191 n. (y)NEW TRIAL

- in Superior Court, when granted, 206
- in County Court, 216
- for misdemeanor, 988

NISI PRIUS,

- trial at, 197

NISI PRIUS RECORD, 196NOMINAL DAMAGES. See DAMAGES.NON ASSUMPSIT, 173

NON COMPOS MENTIS, liability of, on contract, 596-599

civilly answerable for tort, 675, 845

when irresponsible for crime, 871-876 law respecting criminal liability of, as laid down in M'Naghten's case, 872*NON DETINET,* 174*NON EST FACTUM,* 174

NON-JOINDER,

plea in abatement for, 171

NON OBSTANTE VEREDICTO,

judgment, 210

NONSUIT, 201

NOT GUILTY,

plea of, 174

may be entered for prisoner if he wilfully refuse to plead to the indictment, 981 n. (l)

NOTICE OF ACTION,

when necessary, 113-116

NOTICE OF DISHONOUR

of bill of exchange, when necessary, 444

when not requisite, 446 within what time should be given, 465 sufficiency of, as regards form, considered, 466

of promissory note, 479

NOTICE OF TRIAL, 192

NUDUM PACTUM, 317

NUISANCE,

private, right to abate, 221

public, right to abate, 223

in obstructing thoroughfare, liability for, 97, 649 liability attaching to owner of realty for, 690-692 to health, 706, 707, 709 public or private, remedy for, 708, 709 entry on land for abatement of, 772

private, how defined, 775

obstructing ancient lights, 776 or easements, 778

in interfering with flowing water, 782

artificial watercourse, 784

subterranean water, 786

when indictment lies for, 903, 904

NUL TIEL RECORD,

plea of, 159 n. (e)

NUNQUAM INDEBITATUS, 174

OBSTRUCTING

highway, remedy for, 97, 904 due course of justice, 898

OFFICE, quo warranto to try right to, 235

OFFICER,

police, right of, to arrest, 713 et seq.
liability of, for false imprisonment, 717

ORAL EVIDENCE. See EVIDENCE, STATUTE OF FRAUDS.

ORAL PLEADING, compared with written, 162 n. (g)

OUTLAW,

his capacity to contract considered, 602

OVERT ACT, of treason, how evidenced, 891, 892

PARDON,

absolute or conditional, its effect, 989

PARENT AND CHILD,

action by parent for seduction, 77, 836

PARLIAMENT,

what it originally was, 27

PARLIAMENTARY TRUSTEES,

liability of, 538

PAROL CONTRACT. See CONTRACT.

definition of, 373

PAROL EVIDENCE. See STATUTE OF FRAUDS.

PARTICULARITY

should be avoided in pleading, 167

PARTICULARS OF DEMAND,

practical use of, 169
in County Court, 214

PARTIES TO ACTIONS,

plaintiffs ex contractu, 129
 general rule as to choice of, 129 who should sue on specialty, 129
 on simple contract, 129
joinder of plaintiffs on specialty, 129, 130
 on simple contract, 130
principal and agent, 131, 523 et seq.
husband and wife, 131-133
executors and administrators, 133
bankrupt, 134
defendants ex contractu, 134
 general rule as to choice of, 134

PARTIES TO ACTIONS—continued.

- joinder of defendants on simple contract, 134
 - on specialty, 135, 136
- heirs and devisees, 135
- principal and agent, 136
- partners, 136
- husband and wife, 136
- executors and administrators, 137
- assignees of bankrupt, 137
- plaintiffs ex delicto, 139
 - in trespass qu. cl. fr., 139
 - trespass de bonis asportatis, 139
 - case, 140
 - trover, 140
- joinder of plaintiffs, 140
- husband and wife, 141
- executors and administrators, 142
- bankrupt, 143, 571-573
- defendants ex delicto, 143
 - joinder of, 144
 - husband and wife, 144
 - executors and administrators, 144, 145
 - assignees of bankrupt, 145, 146
- partners, 546
- public companies, 568

PARTIES TO CONTRACT,

- evidence admissible to identify, 502

PARTNERS AND PARTNERSHIP. See PARTIES TO ACTION.

- who are partners, 544
- partners cannot sue each other, 546
- exceptions to above rule, 547
- liability of partners, quoad third persons, 548
- agency of partner of trading firm, its nature, 549
- liability of partner, on contract by co-partner, 551-554
 - on bill accepted for firm, 551
- whether partner may bind firm by deed, 552
- continuance of liability of partner, 554
- dormant partner, his liability, 556

PART-PAYMENT,

- within Statute of Frauds, sect. 17, what is, 417
- cannot be pleaded in satisfaction of debt, 428

PATENT,

- action will lie for infringement of, 88

PAWN,

- how defined, 804
- degree of diligence required in regard to, 805
- duty of pawnee in giving up pawn, 805

PAWNBROKER,

- business of, how regulated, 806

PAYEE

of bill of exchange, who is, 442
of promissory note, 475

PAYMENT,

plea of, generally, 177
pleadable in action on bond, 301 of purchase money, its effect on contract of sale, 398 of bill of exchange or promissory note, 485

PAYMENT INTO COURT,

plea of, 179

PENALTY,

implies a prohibition, 356
how distinguishable from liquidated damages, 617-620

PERJURY,

compromise of indictment for, illegal, 282, 283
definition of, 899

PERSONAL REPRESENTATIVES. See EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS.

PETITION OF RIGHT,

what, and when available, 248 n. (k)

PHYSICIAN

cannot in general sue for professional services, 325, 326 liability of, for neglect or unskilfulness, 707

PLAINT

in County Court, 214

PLAINTIFFS. See PARTIES TO ACTIONS.

in actions ex contractu, 129 et seq.
ex delicto, 139 et seq.

PLEA. See PLEADING.

PLEADING,

object and mode of, 160 to issue, example of, 161 oral and written, compared, 162 n. (a)
the declaration, 164, 165
general rules of, 165 et seq.
certain faults in, specified, 166 et seq.
 duplicity, 166
 repugnancy, 166
 prolixity, 167
 verbosity, 167
 pleading evidence, 167
 particularity, 167
 vagueness, 167
 departure, 168
 argumentativeness, 168
should be true, 167 n. (g) various modes of raising defence by, 170

PLEADING—continued.

- demurrer, 170
- time for, 171
- in abatement, 171
 - nonjoinder, 171
- in bar, 172
 - traverse, 172
 - confession and avoidance, 172
- the general issue, 173
 - non assumpsit, 173
 - nunquam indebitatus, 174
 - non est factum, 174
 - non detinet, 174
 - not guilty, 174
- what pleas may be pleaded together, 175
- what must be specially pleaded, 176
- pleas in confession and avoidance, how classified, 177
 - of payment, 177
 - tender, 178
 - payment into Court, 179
 - set-off, 181
 - Statute of Limitations, 182-187
- pleas to the foundation of the action, 188
- equitable defence, when pleadable, 188
- the replication, 190
- new assignment, 191 n. (y)
- subsequent to replication, 191
- demurrer, 191
- in County Court, 213, 214
- infancy should be pleaded specially, 582

PLEAS OF THE CROWN,
 where originally entertained, 37

PLEDGE. See BAILMENT, PAWN.

POSSESSION,
 is sufficient to maintain trover against a wrong-doer, 790

POSTEA, 203 n. (A)

PRACTICE OF THE COURTS, on what founded, 146

PRÆCIPE
 for writ of summons, 151

PRECEDENTS, statutory, of forms should be followed, 167

PRESCRIPTION ACT, 776 et seq.

PRESENTMENT. See BANKRUPTCY, BILL OF EXCHANGE, PROMISSORY NOTE.
 of bill of exchange, what, 444
 of promissory note, 477-480 is not excused by bankruptcy or a general declaration by maker that he will not pay, 478 of bank-note, rule as to, 481

PRESUMPTION

of sanity, 873, 875

PRINCIPAL AND AGENT. See PARTIES TO ACTIONS.

when principal liable for agent's fraud, 337, 338 when agent's signature is sufficient within the 17th sec. of the Statute of Frauds, 420 evidence to show that party signed as agent, when admissible, 503 relation of, considered, 523 et seq.
 who may be an agent, 524 who may not be an agent, 524 nature of authority confided to agent, 525 special agency, 525 general agency, 525, 526
 fact of agency, how proved, 526 agency, how created, 527
 general, distinguished from particular agency, 528 extent of authority of agent, 530 of attorney, 530
 of master of ship, 531 question considered—did agent contract as such? 532 question considered—what was the meaning and intention of parties? 532 respective liability of, in certain cases, 533 purchase of goods by agent, liability on, 533 sale of goods by agent, rights of vendee on, 536 liability of agent who contracts without authority, 537, 637 though he may suppose he has authority, 540 rights and liabilities of parties on written contract by agent, 541 liability of principal on deed executed by agent, 543

PRINCIPAL AND SURETY, respective rights and liabilities of, 310

PRIVATE DUTY. *See DUTY, TORT.PRIVILEGED COMMUNICATION, in action for libel, what is a, 737-745

PRIVITY,

meaning of this term, 316
 instances of want of, 319-321 whether necessary to support action ex delicto, 664-670

PROCEDENDO,

writ of, where it lies, 237

PROFERT AND OYER

no longer necessary in pleading, 169

PROFITS,

whether loss of, can be recovered as damages, 632-637

PROHIBITION,

writ of, when it lies, 231 to Courts ecclesiastical, 231 temporal, 233

PROJECTED COMPANIES. See COMPANIES.

PROLIXITY

should be avoided in pleading, 167

PROMISE,

as ingredient in simple contract, what it is, 325

by contractor, when implied, 325

exceptions, 325, 326

where consideration is executed, 326 et seq.

not binding, where its performance is unlawful, 354

when tainted with illegality, 354

immorality, 370

by executor under Stat. of Frauds, s. 4, 382

to answer for debt of another under same section, 383

PROMISE OF MARRIAGE. See MARRIAGE.

PROMISSORY NOTE. See BILL OF EXCHANGE.

made abroad, action on, 46

general issue not allowed in action on, 174 contemporaneous evidence to vary, 376

definition of, 471

origin of, 471

Lord Holt's opposition to introduction of, 472 effect of Stat. 3 & 4 Anne, c. 9, as to, 473 days of grace allowed for payment of, 254, 473 n. (e)

must be in writing, 474 form and general requisites of, 474, 475 parties to, 475

effect of, when in ambiguous terms, 475 contrasted with bill of exchange, 475, 476 contract by maker of, 476

presentment of, 477-480

notice of dishonour of, 479

ordinary matters of defence in action on, enumerated, 485

payment, 485

absence or failure of consideration, 487

material alteration of, 490

loss of, 492

PROPERTY. See EJECTMENT, TRESPASS, TROVER.

in chattels, whether it may pass by sale without delivery, 399

PROTEST

of foreign bill, 468

PROVISIONAL COMMITTEE MAN. See RAILWAY COMPANY.

PROVOCATION,

homicide on, 910

PUBLICATION

of libel, 745

PUBLIC COMPANIES. See PARTIES TO ACTIONS, COMPANIES.

PUBLIC DUTY. See DUTY, TORT.

PUBLIC MORALS AND POLICE,

offences against, 903

PUBLIC PEACE,

offences against the, 899

PUBLIC POLICY,

redress, when denied on grounds of, 102, 538

of contracts void, as opposed to, 360, 361

PUBLIC TRADE,

offences against, 903

PUNISHMENT,

when unaffected, by mistake in doing a criminal act, 868 its aim and object, 870

QUARE IMPEDIT, 117QUARTER SESSIONS,

jurisdiction of, 972

QUEEN'S BENCH. See KING'S BENCH, COURT OF.QUO MINUS,

clause of, 30

QUO WARRANTO,

information in nature of, 234

what it will lie for, 235

RAILWAY AND CANAL TRAFFIC ACT,leading provisions of, 817 *et seq.RAILWAY COMPANY, contract of station-master for surgical attendance on an injured passenger, 529 liability of provisional committee-man of, 550 infant shareholder in, 577, 578

action against, for breach of duty, 656

provisions of 17 & 18 Vict. c. 31, as to, 817 liability of, for loss of luggage, 824-826

RAILWAY SCRIP,

not within the 17th section of the Statute of Frauds, 407

nature of, considered, 497

RATIFICATION,

of trespass by the Crown, 102, 696 doctrine of, in regard to contracts, 308 of promise by infant, 580 of tort, effect of, 692-698

of trespass, 774

REAL ACTIONS,

what, 117

how affected by C. L. Proc. Act, 1860, 117

REALTY, liability attaching to owner of for nuisance, 690 trespass to, 763 et seq.

nuisance to, 775

whatever is attached to, is not the subject of larceny at common law, 934

REASONABLE AND PROBABLE CAUSE, is question for judge, 714

RECAPTION, right of, 219

RECEIPT, of goods within Stat. of Frauds, s. 17, what is, 409 et seq.

may be actual or constructive, 411

RECEIVING STOLEN GOODS,

how distinguished from larceny, 949, 950 how this offence is constituted, 950

by wife from husband, 951

RECITAL of deed, estoppel by, 290

RECOGNISANCE,

what it is, 259 n. (m)

RECORD. See CONTRACT OF RECORD, NISI PRIUS RECORD.RECOVERY OF CHATTEL, specific, proceedings to enforce, 240

RECOVERY OF SMALL TENEMENTS, summary proceedings for, 239

RELATION,

doctrine of, in regard to title of administrator, 604 connection with larceny, 946

RELATIVE RIGHTS,

torts to, 835

REMEDY. See EXTRAORDINARY REMEDIES, RIGHT AND REMEDY.REMITTER, 225*REMOTENESS OF DAMAGE. See DAMAGES.*REPLEADER,

when awarded, 161

REPLEVIN,

when it lies, 126

REPLICATION. See NEW ASSIGNMENT.

what it is, 190

REPLY,

right of in a criminal prosecution, 986

REPRESENTATION

as to the credit of another within Lord Tenterden's Act, 368, 369 may create agency, 527

REPUGNANCY

should be avoided in pleading, 166

REPUTATION. See LIBEL, SLANDER, TORT.

torts to, 730 et seq.

REQUEST

in simple contract, express or implied, 307 where consideration imports, 308 instances of implied, 308-310 as between principal and surety, 310 to pay implied as between joint contractors, 311 surety and co-surety, 312 implied, where there is an express promise, 312 simultaneous with promise, 313 where consideration is continuing, 314 implied in what classes of cases, 314, 315

RESTITUTION

of stolen property, 101 n. (a) warrant of, 902, 903

RESTRAINT OF TRADE, contract in, whether good, 363 consideration for, 365

duration of, in regard to time, 366 limitation of, in regard to space, 367

RETAINER, 225REVENUE, jurisdiction of Exchequer in matters of, 42, 43 laws for protection of, are peculiar, 855

REVERSIONER,

action by, for injury to land, 643, 767-770

REVIVAL OF JUDGMENT, 206RIGHT AND REMEDY

must go together, 85, 86

RIGHT OF ACTION. See ACTION AT LAW, NOMINAL DAMAGES.

what it is, 73
for defamation, 76
seduction, 77, 836
suing plaintiff by mistake, 78, 79 draining off water from plaintiff's well, 78 for removing support to surface of land, 81 et seq.
when action will lie, generally, 108

RJOT,

how constituted. 900

- RIOT ACT, provisions of, stated, 901
- RIVER,
obstructing a navigable, 650, 904
- ROBBERY,
how defined, 961 difference between, and larceny from the person, 961 assault with intent to rob, 962
- ROMAN LAW,
when our courts will listen to arguments drawn from, 20
- ROUT,
how constituted, 900
- RULE
to show cause, what, 52
absolute, 53
for new trial, 206
- SALE OF GOODS. See CONTRACT OF SALE. is there an implied warranty of title on? 806, 807
- SALE OF LAND. See CONTRACT OF SALE.
- SALE OR RETURN, effect of delivery of goods on, 401
- SAMPLE,
goods supplied should correspond with, 344 when taking, amounts to delivery and acceptance within the 17th section of the Statute of Frauds, 409
- SCRIP,
who must bear loss on sale of, when spurious, 484 of projected railway company, whether assignable, 497
- SCRIVENER, who is a, 552 n. (t)
- SEALING
a deed, 268
- SEAMEN, contracts of, how protected by law, 253
- SEA SHORE,
action for non-repair of a sea-wall, 98
- SEDUCTION,
action for, 77, 836
- SELF-DEFENCE,
remedy by, 218
- SERVANT. See MASTER AND SERVANT.
larceny by, 959
how distinguished from embezzlement, 959

- SERVICE. See WRIT OF SUMMONS. mode of procedure where defendant evades, 154
- SESSIONS. See QUARTER SESSIONS.
- SET-OFF,
plea of, 181
- SHAREHOLDER. See COMPANIES. position of infant, 577, 578
- SHARES,
in public companies, are not within the 17th sec. of the Statute of Frauds, 407 effect of fraudulent transfer of, 832
- SHERIFF, liable for escape, without proof of actual damage, 88, 89 duty of, to summon jurors, 197 damages in action against, for escape, 841
- SHIPOWNER, liability of, for negligence of crew, 682
- SHIRE COURT,
its jurisdiction, 24
- SIGNATURE
of agreement within Stat. of Frauds, s. 4, by whom, 381 within Stat. of Frauds, s. 17, what sufficient, 419-421 as agent, when evidence admissible to show, 503
- SIMPLE CONTRACT. See CONSIDERATION, FRAUDS, STATUTE OF. who should sue on, 129 who should be sued on, 134 may be written or oral, 301, 302
what it is, 301, 302
executory or executed, what, 302 terms of, must be definitively settled, 302 et seq.
mutuality necessary to, 304 analysis of, 307
the request, 307
when implied, 309 doctrine of contribution in regard to, 310
consideration—what, 315 must move from plaintiff, 316
privity as between parties to, 316, 321 the promise considered as an ingredient in, 325 general rules in regard to, 334 et seq.
effect of fraud on, 334
contrasted with specialty, 427
how it may be discharged, 428
- SIMPLE LARCENY. See LARCENY.
- SLANDER,
when words are actionable per se, 645
substance of declaration for, 748 action for, when sustainable without proof of special damage, 749

- SLANDER OF TITLE,
 what it is, 750
- SMUGGLING,
 whether information for, is a criminal proceeding, 856, 857
- SON ASSAULT DEMESNE,
 plea of, 677
- SOVEREIGN. See CROWN, HIGH TREASON, KING. offences against, 887
- SPECIAL INDORSEMENT,
 on writ of summons, 150
- SPECIAL PLEADING. See PLEADING. its principle, 163
- SPECIAL VERDICT, 200
- SPECIALTY. See CONTRACT UNDER SEAL, DEED.
 contrasted with simple contract, 427 when requisite at common law, 431
 by the Statute Law, 432
- SPECIFIC DELIVERY OF CHATTELS,
 how enforced, 240, 622
- SPLITTING DEMANDS. See COUNTY COURT.
- STATE, enumeration of offences against the, 895
- STATESMAN AND LAWYER, difference between, 5
- STATUTE,
 construction of, 3-7
 must not be construed as retrospective, 7 imposing penalty, effect of, 356 of contracts illegal, as opposed to, 356
- STATUTE MERCHANT, 259 n. (m)
- STATUTE OF FRAUDS. See FRAUDS, STATUTE OF.
- STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS. See LIMITATION, STATUTES OF.
- STATUTE OF USES. See USES, STATUTE OF.
- STATUTE STAPLE, 259 n. (m)
- STEALING FROM THE PERSON, nature of this offence, 961 conviction on indictment for, 962
- STEALING IN DWELLING-HOUSE,
 statutory provisions as to, 963
 to the value of 5*l.* or upwards, 963, 964 evidence necessary to support indictment for, 964

SUBPŒNA,

is the mode of procuring the attendance of a witness, 196 action against witness for disobeying, 652

SUICIDE,

an attempt to commit, is a misdemeanor, 867 n. (t)

SUMMARY JURISDICTION. See JUSTICES OF THE PEACE.

SUMMONS. See WRIT OF SUMMONS.

SUMMONS IN COUNTY COURT, 214

SUPERIOR COURTS,

their history and jurisdiction, 23 present jurisdiction of, 41 et seq.
agreement to oust jurisdiction of, whether legal, 43 whether parties can give jurisdiction to, 45 territorial limits of jurisdiction of, 45 classes of cases within cognisance of, 49 mode of procedure in, 50 their jurisdiction in banc, 50-55

SUPREME COUNCIL. See AULA REGIS.

SURGEON,

liability of, for negligence or unskilfulness, 663, 665, 707, 710
negligence of, causing homicide, 915, 916

TENDER,

plea of, 178

THOROUGHFARE,

action for obstructing, 97, 648 indictment for obstructing, 904

TITLE,

slander of, 750

TORT. See HIGHWAY, LIBEL, RAILWAY COMPANY, RIVER, SUBPŒNA, THOROUGHFARE.

explanation of term, 642 right of action for, on what founded, 642 action for invasion of a right, 643 breach of public duty producing damage, 646

at common law, 647

under statute, 654

private duty producing damage, 661

statutory private duty, 662

private duty at common law, 662

flowing from breach of contract, action for, 663 privity in action for, whether necessary, 664 right of action founded on fraud or misrepresentation, 665, 671 founded on the malicious doing of an act, 672 action for bodily injury, 674, 678 lunatic civilly answerable for, 675

action for assault and battery, 676

injury caused by negligence, 679 injury caused by accident, 680

TORT—continued.

- of servant, liability of master for, 681 et seq.
- effect of ratification of, 692
- liability of master to servant for injury sustained in his service, 698
- action for compensation when death has been caused by negligence, 703
- injuries to health, 706, 707
- in selling unwholesome food, action for, 707
- action for nuisance, public or private, 708, 709
- remedy in above cases, 709
- affecting personal liberty, 711
 - false imprisonment, 711 et seq.
 - malicious arrest, 727
 - on mesne process, 728
 - on final process, 729
 - malicious prosecution, 730
 - maliciously suing out commission of bankruptcy, 733
- to reputation of individual by libel, 734 et seq.
 - by slander, 748
- to individual by slander of title, 750
- to real property, how evidenced, 753
- to personalty in possession, 789
 - out of owner's possession, 798
- by third person to chattel under bailment, 826
- to absolute or relative right, 829, 830
- the measure of damages in actions of, 840-850
- contrasted with contract, 850
 - crime, 851
- civil, how distinguishable from indictable offences, 851

TORTS TO THE PERSON,

enumerated and considered, 674-730

TORTS TO THE REPUTATION,

enumerated and considered, 730-750

TRADE. See RESTRAINT OF TRADE.TRADE MARK,

action will lie for invasion of, 88, 645

TRADE, USAGES OF. See CUSTOM, USAGE.TRANSIT IN REM JUDICATAM, meaning of this phrase, 261

TRAVERSE,

pleading by way of, 172

TREASON. See HIGH TREASON.TRESPASS. See TORT.

- acts of, evidencing title, 89
- for throwing squib (Scott v. Shepherd), 95
- when it lies, 124
- difference between, and case, 124
- may lie for consequences of lawful act, 674
- how distinguishable from case, 684-686, 767, 770

TRESPASS—continued.

- by ratification, 692-698
- for assault and imprisonment, 711
- to realty, in what it consists, 763
 - statutory form of declaration for, 763 n. (x)
- action of, is founded on possession, 764
- to land, when justifiable, 771
- ab initio*, 773
- ratification of, 774
- to goods, how distinguishable from trover, 796, 797, 826, 827
 - at suit of bailor or bailee, 826, 827
- malicious intention not necessary to support action for, 844

TRESPASS ON THE CASE. See CASE.TRESPASS QU. CL. FR. See TRESPASS.
generally, where it lies, 763 *et seq.TRIAL,

- different species of, 159 n. (e)
 - by record, 159 n. (e)
 - by inspection or examination, ib.
 - by certificate, ib.
 - by witnesses, ib.
 - by wager of battle, ib.
 - by wager of law, ib.
 - by jury, ib.
- without pleadings, when, 160
- notice of, 192
- at Nisi Prius, proceedings at, 197 et seq.
- in County Court, 213
- criminal, proceedings at, 979 et seq.

TROVER,

- when it lies, 125, 495, 496, 790-792
- may lie at suit of one in bare possession of chattel, 790
- is often brought to establish right of property, 792 et seq.
- conversion, meaning of this term in, 793
- how distinguishable from trespass de bonis asportatis, 796
- at whose suit sustainable, 826, 827
- when it lies for goods let to hire, 828, 829

TRUCK ACT,

- nature of protection afforded by, 254

UNIFORMITY OF PROCESS ACT, 30, 41UNILATERAL CONTRACT, instances of, 305UNLAWFUL ASSEMBLY, what it is, 900UNWRITTEN LAW. See LEX NON SCRIPTA.

- USAGE, evidence of mercantile, to explain written contract, 504 et seq.
 annex terms to written contract, 508, 518 inadmissible to vary written contract, 510 admissibility of evidence of, how determined, 513 to make broker liable as principal, 542
- USAGES
 of trade, 19
 when equivalent to a warranty, 807
- USER. See PRESCRIPTION ACT.
- USES, STATUTE OF. its operation in certain cases, 294
- VAGUENESS,
 should be avoided in pleading, 167
- VENDOR AND VENDEE. See CONTRACT OF SALE, SALE OF GOODS.
- VENIRE DE NOVO*,
 when awarded, 209
- VENUE,
 in declaration, its use, 164 local or transitory, 164
 when it may be changed, 165
 in indictment, 978
- VERBOSITY
 should be avoided in pleading, 167
- VERDICT,
 may be special or otherwise, 200 leave reserved to enter, when, 200, 201 vindictive damages, 843
- VINCULUM JURIS*, meaning of this term as applied to a contract, 257
- VOTE, action for refusing to receive, 85
 whether conveyance to confer, is good, 289
- WAGER, foolish, or which outrages decency, 361
 by judge, on event of cause before him, void, 361
- WARES, meaning of word, within sect. 17 of the Statute of Frauds, 407, 408

WARRANTY,

- breach of, how distinguished from fraud, 347
- of horse, action for breach of, 347, 348
- how distinguished from representation, 349
- damages for breach of, 625
- may sometimes be inferred from usage of trade, 807
- breach of, how distinguished from "false pretences," 956

WATER. See FLOWING WATER.

- right to, underground, 79
- taking, from canal, 90
- diverting, from a stream, 90
- how distinguished from land, in legal contemplation, 781
- right to flowing, 782
- right to artificial watercourse, 784
 - subterranean, 785

WAY,

- mode of procedure for disturbance of, 97, 648, 904

WAY-GOING CROP,

- custom to take, 15

WIFE. See HUSBAND AND WIFE.WITNESSES,

- attendance of, how compellable, 196
- mandamus or commission to examine, 196

WRIT DE CURSU,

- formerly issued out of Chancery, 38

WRIT OF ERROR. See ERROR.WRIT OF EXECUTION. See EXECUTION.*WRIT OF SUMMONS,

- it is unnecessary to mention form of action in, 116
- is the commencement of action, 147
- where defendant resides within jurisdiction, 147
- indorsements on, 149
- common indorsement, 149
- special indorsement, 150
- sealing, 151
- service of, 151
- concurrent, what it is, 152
- must be issued before a capias can be obtained for the arrest of an
 - absconding debtor, 154
- duration and renewal of, 155
- indorsement of service on, 156
- entry of appearance to, 156
- where defendant is out of jurisdiction, 157
 - British subject, 157
 - foreigner, 158
- amendment of, 159

WRIT, ORIGINAL,

- what it was, 37

WRITTEN CONTRACT. See EVIDENCE, STATUTE OF FRAUDS. policy of statutes which require a, 377 n. (s), 378, 388, 407 n. (p) evidence of custom or usage to explain, 498 et seq.

WRITTEN LAW. See LEX SCRIPTA.

WRITTEN PLEADING, compared with oral, 162 n. (q)

WRONG. See TORT.

WRONGFUL DISMISSAL, damages for, 628, 629

YEAR, agreement not to be performed within one, must be in writing, 379, 395

THE END.

(8vo., 1040 pp., price £1 11s. 6d.)

CONSTITUTIONAL LAW

VIEWED IN RELATION TO

COMMON LAW,

AND

EXEMPLIFIED BY CASES.

BY

HERBERT BROOM, LL.D.,

BARRISTER AT LAW; READER IN COMMON LAW TO THE INNS OF COURT;
AUTHOR OF "A SELECTION OF LEGAL MAXIMS;" "COMMENTARIES ON THE COMMON LAW," ETC.

OPTIMA HÆREDITAS À PARENTIBUS TRADITUR LIBERIS, OMNIQUE PATRIMONIO PRÆSTANTIOR, GLORIA VIRTUTIS RERUMQUE GESTARUM.—Cic. de Off. lib. i.

LONDON:

WILLIAM MAXWELL, 32, BELL YARD, LINCOLN'S INN,

Law Bookseller and Publisher;

HODGES, SMITH, & CO., DUBLIN.

1866.

LONDON:

BRADBURY, EVANS, AND CO, PRINTERS, WHITEFRIARS.

CONTENTS.

	PAGE
Arrangement of the volume explained	1

PART I.

RELATION OF THE SUBJECT TO THE SOVEREIGN.

SECTION I.

DUTIES OF THE SUBJECT TOWARDS THE SOVEREIGN.

Duties of the subject set forth in the oath of allegiance, &c.	3
Calvin's case—allegiance, what it is—by whom and to whom it is due	4—26
Note to Calvin's case	26—62
Allegiance—what	26
by whom due	27
to whom due	29
to a king de facto	29 to the king on his accession	30
wherever he may be	30
Allegiance is indivisible	31
due from natural-born subject	32
Tie of allegiance—how severable	35
severable by abdication and re-settle- ment of Crown	35
by dismemberment of empire	36
by cession and treaty	38
Allegiance of subject who becomes a sovereign prince, how modified	41

CONTENTS.

	PAGE
Early mode of legislation	382
The king cannot alter the law	389
Purveyance	392
Subsidies granted to the Crown	396
Tonnage and poundage	396
Aids	397
Benevolences	398
Forced loans	399
Fines, &c.	402
Remarks on the Principal Cases	404
Arguments against the right to impose	404
levying of ship-money	405
The case of the Seven Bishops—Right of the Crown to dispense with existing laws	408—493
Note to the Seven Bishops' case	493—523
The dispensing power of the Crown	494
Exercise of dispensing power in matters ecclesiastical	505
The right of the subject to petition	508
The Kentish petition	515
Lord George Gordon's petition	517
The Chartist Petition, 1848	519
Nature of a seditious libel	520

PART II.

RELATION OF THE SUBJECT TO THE EXECUTIVE.

Exposition of the mode of treatment	524
Leach v. Money—Seizure of the person	525—547
Wilkes v. Wood—Seizure of papers	548—558
Entick v. Carrington—Seizure of papers	558—613

Note to Entick v. Carrington, &c.	613—623
The illegality of general warrants established	613
Legality of opening letters under warrant of Secretary of State	615
Protection is extended to public officers on grounds of . policy	617
Liability of public officer in contract	617
in tort	619
Criminal liability of public servant	621
Hill v. Bigge—Liability of the governor of a dependency	623—638
Note to Hill v. Bigge	638—650
The liability of a governor in civil cases	638
Criminal liability of a governor	646
Sutton v. Johnstone—Liability of officer in the service of the Crown	650—712
Note to Sutton v. Johnstone	712—733
Liability of officer ex contractu	712
ex delicto	714
to stranger	714
Is the Crown responsible for damage caused by tortious act of officer ?	723
Liability of officer ex delicto to his subordinate	726
Kemp v. Neville—Liability of a judicial officer	734—762
Note to Kemp v. Neville	762—794
Liability of judicial officers generally	762 particular judicial officers	765
Lord Chancellor	765
judge of a superior court	766
colonial judge	772
judge of ecclesiastical court	775
commissioner of bankruptcy	780
coroner	782
judge of county court	783
justice of the peace	785
other and minor judicial officers	787
Liability for slander uttered by judicial officer	788
Liability of judicial officer for misconduct	789
Protection of judicial officers	792

PART III.

RELATION OF THE SUBJECT TO PARLIAMENT.

	PAGE
Introductory remarks	795
Barnardiston v. Scame— Lex et Consuetudo Parliamenti	796—836
Note to Barnardiston v. Soame	836—870
Observations as to the powers and privileges of Parliament	836, et seq.
Narrative of the proceedings in Ashby v. White	843
Judgment of Lord Holt, in Ashby v. White , abridged	845
Proceedings in Paty's case	858
against Sir John Eliot and others	864
Precedents of actions for false or double returns	866
Action against a returning officer for refusing to receive vote	868
Stockdale v. Hansard—Privileges of the House of Commons— their efficacy—How far obligatory on courts of law	870—959
Case of the Sheriff of Middlesex—Power of the House of Commons to commit for contempt	960—966
Note to Stockdale v. Hansard, &c.	966—974
Proceedings in Burdett v. Abbot	967
Views expressed by Lord Ellenborough respecting the right of the Commons to commit	968
Proceedings in Howard v. Gosset	969
Questions which have been raised respecting the privileges of Parliament	974
How those questions may be answered.	974
Concluding observations	975

INDEX

TO Law Books

PUBLISHED BY

WILLIAM MAXWELL & SON.

ACTION AT LAW.	PAGE	CONFLICT OF LAWS.	PAGE	DISCOVERY.	PAGE
Smith	9	Westlake	10	Wigram	19
AUCTIONS.		CONSTITUTIONAL LAW.		DIVORCE, LAW OF.
Bateman	19	Broom	3	Inderwick	19
BANKRUPT LAW.		CONTRACTS.		Macqueen	16
Shelford	10	Smith	9	Fritchard	13
BODMERIA.		CONTRIBUTORIES.		DOMICIL.
Franck	10	Lindley	6	Phillimore	21
BOOK OF RIGHTS.		CONVEYANCING.		ECCELESIASTICAL LAW.
Taylor	21	Davidson	7	Rogers	21
BUILDING SOCIETIES.		CONVICTIONS.		Traill	15
Stone	18	Paley, by Mac-	22	EMINENT LAWYERS,
BURIALS.		namata		OPINIONS OF.
Baker	11	COPYHOLDS.		Chalmers	11
CHANCERY PRACTICE.		Shelford	15	EQUITY.
Haddan	8	Supplement	15	Chitty, by Macaulay	14
Jarman	16	CORONER.		Haynes	8
Smith	7	Jervis	5	Smith	6
CHURCH AND CLERGY.		CORPORATIONS.		Tudor	3
Stephens	20	Rawlinson	9	White	3
Traill	15	COSTS.		EVIDENCE.
CIVIL LAW.		Dax	12	Phillimore, History	21
Domat	20	COUNTY COURTS.		Taylor	7
Irving	20	Broom	8	Ram	10
COLONIAL LAW.		CRIMES.		Roscoe, Civil	15
Clark	22	Russell	6	Roscoe, Criminal	15
COMMENTARIES.		CRIMINAL LAW.		Saunders, Civil	16
Broom	3	Greaves	13	EXECUTORS.
COMMON LAW.		Roscoe	15	Brady	17
Broom	3	DEBTOR AND CREDITOR.		Williams	5
Francis	13	Trower	16	FACTS.
CONCISE FORMS.		DIGESTED INDEXES.		Ram	10
Christie	19	Chitty, Equity	14	FIXTURES.
Davidson	7			Amos and Ferard	22

FORMS.	PAGE	LEGAL MAXIMS.	PAGE	PLEADING.	PAGE
Baker, Burials	. 12	Broom	8	Saunders, Civil	. 16
Christie, Wills	. 19	LIMITED LIABILITY.		Stephen 11
Smith, Nuisances	. 14	Haddan	12	PRACTICAL MAN.
GAME LAWS.		Lindley	6	Rouse 17
Woolrych 13	LOCAL GOVERNMENT ACT.		PRECEDENTS IN CONVEY-
HIGHWAYS.		Smith	13	ANCING.
Bateman 12	MANDAMUS.		Davidson 4
HOUSE OF LORDS.		Tapping	21	PUBLIC HEALTH.
Macqueen 16	MERCANTILE LAW.		Baker 11
HUSBAND AND WIFE.		Smith	9	QUESTIONS.
Bell 18	Tudor	10	Maugham 17
INFANCY.		MERCHANT SHIPS AND		RAILWAYS.
Macpherson 19	SEAMEN.		Brown 11
INSURANCE.		Maciachlan	8	Freud and Ware 5
Arnould 5	METROPOLIS LOCAL MA-		REAL PROPERTY.
Hildyard 22	AGEMENT ACT.		Crabb 18
Park 20	Smith	14	Shelford 17
INTERNATIONAL LAW.		MISCELLANEOUS.		RECEIVER.
Vattel 20	Burn's Justice of		Bennet 16
Westlake 10	the Peace	24	ROMAN LAW.
Wildman 21	Crabb's Technical		Phillimore 20
INTERROGATORIES.		Dictionary	23	RULE OF THE ROAD.
Petheram 7	Davidson's Prece-		Holt 7
JOINT-STOCK COMPANIES.		dents in Convey-		SEWERS.
Haddan 12	ancing	4	Smith 14
Lindley 6	Dupin's Refutation,		SHIPPING.
Thring 14	&c.	23	Maciachlan 8
JURISPRUDENCE.		Greenleaf's Har-		STATUTES.
Lindley 17	mony of the		Crabb 18
Phillimore 21	Gospels	23	STOPPAGE IN TRANSITU.
JUSTICE OF THE PEACE.		MORTGAGE.		Houston 14
Arnold 13	Davidson, vol. 2	4	TRUSTS AND TRUSTEES.
LANDLORD AND TENANT.		NISI PRIUS.		Lewin 10
Ferard, Fitzwicks	. 22	Roscoe	15	TREES AND WOODS.
Smith 9	NUISANCES.		Craig 5
Woodfall, by Cole 5	Smith	14	TURNPIKE ROADS.
LAND TRANSFER AND		Yool	7	Bateman, by Welshy 18
REGISTRATION.		OPINIONS OF EMINENT		USES AND TRUSTS.
Umlin and Key 15	COUNSEL.		Sanders, by Warner 18
LAW STUDIES.		Chalmers	11	VENDORS AND PURCHASERS.
Warren 6	ORDERS IN CHANCERY.		May 6
LEADING CASES.		Sanders	20	WASTE, NUISANCE, AND
Smith, Com. Law 9	PARISH LAW.		TRESPASS.
White and Tudor,		Steer	17	Yool 7
Equity 3	PARTNERSHIP.		WILLS.
LEASES.		Lindley	6	Hawkins 7
Platt 19	PATENTS.		Inderwick 5
Brickdale 13	Hindmarch	21
LEGACIES.		PETTY SESSIONS.
Roper 19	Stone	11

NEW WORKS.

WHITE AND TUDOR'S LEADING CASES IN EQUITY.

A SELECTION OF LEADING CASES IN EQUITY; with Notes; in Two Volumes. Vol. I.—By FREDERICK THOMAS WHITE and OWEN DAVIES TUDOR, Esqrs., of the Middle Temple, Barristers-at-Law. Vol. II.—By OWEN DAVIES TUDOR, Esq., of the Middle Temple, Barrister-at-Law. 1866.

Third Edition.

In Two Vols. Royal 8vo. Price 3l. 10s. cloth.

BROOM'S COMMENTARIES.

COMMENTARIES ON THE COMMON LAW, designed as introductory to its study. By HERBERT BROOM, LL.D., Barrister-at-Law, Reader in Common Law to the Inns of Court. 1864.

Third Edition.

In One Vol. 8vo. Price 1l. 11s. 6d. cloth.

BROOM'S LEGAL MAXIMS.

A SELECTION OF LEGAL MAXIMS, Classified and Illustrated. By HERBERT BROOM, LL.D., Barrister-at-Law, Reader in Common Law to the Inns of Court. 1864.

Fourth Edition.

8vo. Price 1l. 11s. 6d.

BROOM'S CONSTITUTIONAL LAW.

CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, viewed in relation to Common Law and exemplified by Cases. By HERBERT BROOM, LL.D., Barrister-at-Law, Reader in Common Law to the Inns of Court. 1866.

"The author's qualifications for his task are well known to all lawyers, and to many of the general public. from his previous works on 'Legal Maxims,' and his 'Commentaries on the Common Law.' He has clearly spared no labour in the production of this work, and there can be no doubt that he has presented to us a most important addition to the library of the constitutional lawyer and historian."—Athenæum, March 17, 1866.

"The work is thus a history of constitutional principle developed by decision or statute. And while interesting and important in its aim, we must add that it is well and carefully executed."—Daily News.

"Those who are acquainted with Dr. Broom's former publications need no further assurance from us of the excellences of this work, when we say that it displays the same clearness of judgment, carefulness in abridgment, and general precision which characterise his 'Commentaries on the Common Law,' and others of his less pretentious works."—Sunday Gazette, 11 Feb., 1866.

"A collection of reported cases, however careful and judicious, will probably be unattractive to unprofessional readers, but we greatly doubt whether, if this natural repugnance were overcome, even a lay reader would not get from Mr. Broom's pages a far better notion of what is really meant by the English Constitution, and more solid and exact knowledge as to the true relations of its different parts to each other, than he could obtain from any other work—for instance, from 'Hallam's Constitutional History,' or from that part of Blackstone, which refers to the subject."—Pall Mall Gazette.

"As to the collection of cases and comments on Constitutional Law now lying before us, there are few men whose acquired knowledge renders them equally competent with himself to collate or edit such a book, and still fewer who would combine in an equal degree the powers of close condensation, clear expression, and judicial impartiality so requisite accurately to apprehend the bearings of constitutional questions, and to bring into anything like reasonable compass the vast amount of lore contained in a long succession of treatises and reports, each one marking the way in which 'freedom's base has widened slowly down from precedent to precedent.'"—Standard, Feb., 1867.

8vo. Price 1l. 11s. 6d. cloth.

In Five Vols. Royal 8vo. Price £10 10s. cloth. 1860-65.

DAVIDSON'S PRECEDENTS IN CONVEYANCING.

PRECEDENTS AND FORMS IN CONVEYANCING

WITH AN INTRODUCTION AND PRACTICAL NOTES.

BY CHARLES DAVIDSON, Esq.

THOMAS COOKE WRIGHT, Esq.

J. WALEY, Esq., of Lincoln's Inn.

J. WHITEHEAD, Esq., of the Middle Temple.

BARRISTERS-AT-LAW.

SYNOPSIS OF THE CONTENTS:

VOLUME I.
	PAGE		PAGE
INTRODUCTION	1 to 150	Conditions of Sale.
GENERAL AND PARTICULAR		INTRODUCTION	439 to 536
RECITALS	151 „ 186	PRECEDENTS	537 „ 650
OPERATIVE AND MISCELLANEOUS FORMS	187 „ 435	INDEX	651 „ 634
VOLUME II.
PART 1.		PART 2.*
AGREEMENTS	1 to 166	Mortgages.
CONVEYANCES ON SALES	167 „ 546	INTRODUCTION	497 to 726
INDEX	547 „ 581	PRECEDENTS	727 „ 1088
		INDEX	1089 „ 1143
VOLUME III.
PART 1.		PART 2.
Settlements.		PRECEDENTS	533 to 1196
INTRODUCTION	1 to 532	INDEX	1197 „ 1239
VOLUME IV.
Wills.		Appointments of New Trustees.
INTRODUCTORY OBSERVATIONS	1 to 22	PRECEDENTS	579 to 632
PRECEDENTS	23 „ 573	INDEX	633 „ 676
VOLUME V.
PART 1.		PART 2.—Continued.
Leases.		PRECEDENTS OF RELEASES	617 to 663
PRECEDENTS OF AGREEMENTS FOR LEASES	1 to 82	„ INDEMNITY
PRECEDENTS OF LEASES	85 „ 472	DEEDS	667 „ 730
INDEX	473 „ 524	PRECEDENTS OF BONDS	733 „ 763
		„ PARTNERSHIP
PART 2.		DEEDS	767 „ 909
PRECEDENTS OF PARTITIONS	473 to 544	PRECEDENTS OF COMPOSITION DEEDS	913 „ 999
„ EXCHANGES	547 „ 566	PRECEDENTS OF MISCELLANEOUS DEEDS	1003 „ 1119
PRECEDENTS OF ANNUITY DEEDS	569 „ 614	INDEX	1121 „ 1230

* A Third Edition of this Part is in the Press and nearly ready.

WILLIAMS ON EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS.

A TREATISE ON THE LAW OF EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS. By EDWARD VAUGHAN WILLIAMS, Esq., of Lincoln's Inn, Barrister-at-Law (late one of the Judges of Her Majesty's Court of Common Pleas). 1867.

Sixth Edition.

In Two Volumes. Royal 8vo. Price 3l. 15s. cloth.

JERVIS ON THE OFFICE AND DUTIES OF CORONERS.

A PRACTICAL TREATISE ON THE DUTIES OF CORONERS, with Forms and Precedents. By JOHN JERVIS, Esq. (afterwards Lord Chief Justice of the Court of Common Pleas). The Third Edition, by C. W. LOVESY, Esq., of the Middle Temple, Barrister-at-Law. 1866.

Third Edition.

12mo. Price 12s. cloth.

WOODFALL'S LAW OF LANDLORD AND TENANT.

A PRACTICAL TREATISE ON THE LAW OF LANDLORD AND TENANT, with a full Collection of Precedents and Forms of Procedure. By S. B. HARRISON, Esq. Ninth Edition. By W. R. COLE, Esq., Barrister-at-Law. 1867.

Ninth Edition.

In One thick Vol. Royal 8vo. Price 1l. 18s. cloth.

CRAIG'S RIGHTS AS TO TREES AND WOODS.

LEGAL AND EQUITABLE RIGHTS AND LIABILITIES AS TO TREES AND WOODS. By RICHARD DAVIS CRAIG, Esq., one of Her Majesty's Counsel. 1866.

In 8vo. Price 7s. 6d. cloth.

FREND AND WARE'S RAILWAY PRECEDENTS.

PRECEDENTS OF INSTRUMENTS RELATING TO THE TRANSFER OF LAND TO RAILWAY COMPANIES. By H. T. FREND and T. HIBBERT WARE, Barristers-at-Law. Second Edition, with a Treatise upon the Lands Clauses Consolidation Acts. By DECIMUS STURGES and T. L. L. MURRAY BROWNE, of Lincoln's Inn, Barristers-at-Law. 1866.

Second Edition.

In One Vol. 8vo. Price 1l. cloth.

INDERWICK'S LAW OF WILLS.

THE LAW OF WILLS AS ADMINISTERED IN THE COURT OF PROBATE IN ENGLAND. By F. A. INDERWICK, Esq., of the Inner Temple, Barrister-at-Law. 1866.

8vo. Price 7s. 6d. cloth.

ARNOULD'S MARINE INSURANCE.

A TREATISE ON THE LAW OF MARINE INSURANCE AND AVERAGE, with references to the American Cases and the later Continental Authorities. By JOSEPH ARNOULD, Esq., of the Middle Temple, Barrister-at-Law. THIRD EDITION. By DAVID MACLAHLAN, M.A., of the Middle Temple, Barrister-at-Law. 1866.

Third Edition.

In Two Vols. Royal 8vo. Price 2l. 12s. 6d. cloth.

WARREN'S LAW STUDIES.

A POPULAR AND PRACTICAL INTRODUCTION TO LAW STUDIES, and to every department of the Legal Profession. By SAMUEL WARREN, of the Inner Temple, Esq., D.C.L. Oxon, F.R.S., one of Her Majesty's Counsel, Recorder of Hull, and Master in Lunacy. 1863.

* * In this work are contained careful elementary expositions, designed for both the profession and the public at large, of all the important changes effected during the last forty years, in every department of our remodelled jurisprudence, including even the legislation of the present year.

Opinion of LORD WESTBURY on the Third Edition.

"I must express my sincere admiration of this work. For the improvement of the education of students at law, and the direction of their studies, it is admirably planned, and, so far as I have been able to examine it, equally well executed."

"The part of the work which we conceive to be of most value, is that in which the author gives an account of the administration of civil justice, and of its various departments. A student will find nowhere else so readable and graphic an introductory sketch of English law and tribunals. Even a barrister who is conversant, from his reading and practice, with only one of the great branches of law, may read with profit, Mr. Warren's summary relating to the others."—Solicitors' Journal, March 26, 1864.

Third Edition.

In Two Vols. Demy 8vo. Price 2l. 12s. 6d. cloth.

LAW OF VENDORS AND PURCHASERS.

QUESTIONS FOUNDED ON LORD ST. LEONARDS' TREATISE ON THE LAW OF VENDORS AND PURCHASERS. Designed and prepared principally for the Use of Students for the Bar and Articled Clerks Preparing for Admission as Solicitors. By T. BAKER MAY, Esq., of the Inner Temple, Barrister-at-Law. 1866.

In One Vol. Crown 8vo. Price 6s. 6d. cloth.

LINDLEY'S LAW OF PARTNERSHIP.

A TREATISE ON THE LAW OF PARTNERSHIP, including its application to Joint-Stock and other Companies. By NATHANIEL LINDLEY, Esq., of the Middle Temple, Barrister-at-Law. (Ready in June.)

Second Edition.

In Two Vols. Royal 8vo.

SIDNEY SMITH'S PRINCIPLES OF EQUITY.

A TREATISE ON THE PRINCIPLES OF EQUITY. By JOHN SIDNEY SMITH, Esq., Barrister-at-Law, Author of "The Practice of the Court of Chancery." 1856.

"A work on the Principles of Equity was required both by the practitioner and student. This desideratum has been ably supplied by Mr. Sidney Smith."—Legal Observer, Nov. 8, 1856.

In One Volume. 8vo. Price 1l. 5s. cloth.

RUSSELL ON CRIMES.

A TREATISE ON CRIMES AND MISDEMEANORS. By SIR WILLIAM OLDNALL RUSSELL, Kat., late Chief Justice of Bengal. Fourth Edition. By CHARLES SPRENGEL GRAVES, Esq., one of Her Majesty's Counsel.

Fourth Edition.

In Three Vols. Royal 8vo. Price 5l. 15s. 6d. cloth.

HOLT'S RULE OF THE ROAD.

ADMIRALTY COURT CASES ON THE RULE OF THE ROAD, as laid down by the Articles and Regulations now in force under Order in Council for preventing Collisions at Sea. By WILLIAM HOLT, B.A., Oxon, of the Inner Temple, Barrister-at-Law. 1867.

8vo. Price 10s. 6d. cloth.

HAWKINS ON WILLS.

A CONCISE TREATISE ON THE CONSTRUCTION OF WILLS. By F. VAUGHAN HAWKINS, M.A., of Lincoln's Inn, Barrister-at-Law, and Fellow of Christ's College, Cambridge. 1863.

8vo. Price 10s. 6d. cloth.

DAVIDSON'S CONCISE PRECEDENTS.

CONCISE PRECEDENTS IN CONVEYANCING, adapted to the Act to amend the Law of Real Property, 8 & 9 Vict. c. 106; with Practical Notes and Observations on the Act, and on the Act for the Cesser of Attendant Terms. By CHARLES DAVIDSON, Esq., of Lincoln's Inn, Barrister-at-Law, and late Fellow of Christ's College, Cambridge; and M. B. STAPYLTON, Esq., of the Inner Temple, Barrister-at-Law. 1865.

Sixth Edition.

12mo. Price 14s. cloth.

AN ESSAY ON WASTE, NUISANCE, AND TRESPASS,

Chiefly with reference to REMEDIES IN EQUITY; treating of the LAWS OF TIMBER, MINES, LIGHTS, WATER, SUPPORT, THE CONSTRUCTION OF PUBLIC WORKS, &c. By GEORGE V. YOOL, M.A., of Lincoln's Inn, Barrister-at-Law, late Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge. 1863

8vo. Price 10s. 6d. cloth

TAYLOR'S LAW OF EVIDENCE.

A TREATISE ON THE LAW OF EVIDENCE, as administered in England and Ireland, with Illustrations from the American and other Foreign Laws. By JOHN PITT TAYLOR, Esq., Judge of the County Courts for Lambeth, Greenwich, and Woolwich. 1864.

Fourth Edition.

In Two Vols. Royal 8vo. Price 3l. 10s. cloth.

SMITH'S (J. SIDNEY) CHANCERY PRACTICE.

THE PRACTICE OF THE COURT OF CHANCERY. With Forms, Bills of Costs, &c. By JOHN SIDNEY SMITH, Esq., M.A., Barrister-at-Law. Seventh Edition, revised and enlarged by the Author and ALFRED SMITH, Esq., M.A., Barrister-at-Law. 1862.

Seventh Edition.

In Two Vols. 8vo. Price 3l. 3s. cloth.

PETHERAM ON INTERROGATORIES.

THE LAW AND PRACTICE RELATING TO DISCOVERY BY INTERROGATORIES UNDER THE COMMON LAW PROCEDURE ACT, 1854; together with an Appendix of Precedents and full Index. By WM. COMER PETHERAM, Esq., of the Middle Temple. 1864.

Crown 8vo. Price 3s. 6d. cloth.

HADDAN'S ADMINISTRATIVE JURISDICTION OF THE COURT OF CHANCERY.

OUTLINES OF THE ADMINISTRATIVE JURISDICTION OF THE COURT OF CHANCERY. By THOS. HY. HADDAN, Esq., B.C.L., of the Inner Temple, Barrister-at-Law, late Fellow of Exeter College, and Eldon Scholar, and Vinerian Fellow in the University of Oxford. 1862.

"Mr. Haddan, in his book, maintains his own reputation as an accomplished lawyer and scholar, and the Incorporated Law Society may well be proud of being the means of giving to the profession so useful and creditable a work."—Solicitors' Journal.

Crown 8vo. Price 10s. cloth.

BROOM'S PRACTICE OF THE COUNTY COURTS.

THE PRACTICE IN AN ORDINARY SUIT, with all matters incidental thereto. By HERBERT BROOM, LL.D., Barrister-at-Law. Reader in Common Law to the Inns of Court; together with the PRACTICE IN INSOLVENCY and under the Protection, Charitable Trusts Acts, Friendly Societies, Probate and other Acts. By LEONARD SHELFORD, Esq., Barrister-at-Law. 1858.

Second Edition.

In One Vol. Demy 8vo. Price 1l. 10s. cloth.

MACLACHLAN'S LAW OF MERCHANT SHIPPING.

A TREATISE ON THE LAW OF MERCHANT SHIPPING, with SUPPLEMENT. By DAVID MACLACHLAN, M.A., of the Middle Temple, Barrister-at-Law. 1862.

LAW OF THE MASTER'S CONTRACTS ABROAD.—"There is a singular absence of authority on this subject in our own Courts."—See the recent decision of the Court of Queen's Bench, in Lloyd v. Guibert, 4 New Reports, 264, 266, adopting the principle suggested for the first time in this country, and discussed on foreign authorities and Admiralty decisions, by Mr. MacLachlan, in his Treatise, at pp. 155-163.

"Whatever Mr. MacLachlan has written is evidently the result of his best consideration, and is expressed with precision and conciseness.

Indeed we hardly know how to give a higher praise to a legal author, or we should be disposed to award it to Mr. MacLachlan for his performance; for we have seldom met with a law book that deserves more praise in many respects than that now before us."—Solicitors' Journal, Nov., 1860.

"It is a careful, well-considered, and thoroughly conscientious treatise—an original essay, and not a mere compilation."—Law Times, Dec., 1860.

"That case (Cammell v. Sewell) is well commented on in a work on the Law of Shipping, by Mr. MacLachlan, which, so far as I have seen, appears to be an acquisition to Legal Literature."—Per Williams, J., in Maitland and others v. Graham and others, coram, C. B., 14th Nov., 1860.

"It is not so laid down in a book I was looking into last night,—the work upon Shipping, by Mr. MacLachlan, which is an excellent, able, and well-written work."—Per Cockburn, L. C. J., in Castrique v. Imrie, coram, Exch. Ch., 30th Nov., 1860.

"As to the law upon matters of this description, the practice and principles laid down will be found in Mr. Pritchard's Digest, and Mr. MacLachlan's excellent work on Shipping Law, which I commend most sincerely as a useful volume."—Dr. Lushington's Judgment, Law Journal, February, 1862.

In One Vol. Royal 8vo. Price 1l. 16s. cloth.

* * The SUPPLEMENT may be had separately, price 5s. cloth.

HAYNES' OUTLINES OF EQUITY.

OUTLINES OF EQUITY; being a Series of Elementary Lectures on Equity Jurisdiction, delivered at the request of the Incorporated Law Society; with Supplementary Lectures on certain Doctrines of Equity. By FREEMAN OLIVER HAYNES, of Lincoln's Inn, Barrister-at-Law, and late Fellow of Caius College, Cambridge. 1865.

Second Edition.

Crown 8vo. Price 12s. cloth.

RAWLINSON'S CORPORATION ACTS.

THE MUNICIPAL CORPORATION ACT, 5 & 6 Will. IV. c. 76, and the Acts since passed for amending the same, and otherwise in relation to Municipal Corporations; with Notes and References to the Cases thereon: and an Appendix, containing the principal Statutes referred to, including those relating to Mandamus and Quo Warranto; a List of Boroughs having Quarter Sessions; Borough Court Rules, &c. By Sir CHRISTOPHER RAWLINSON, Chief Justice of Madras. Fourth Edition. By W. N. WELSBY, Esq., of the Middle Temple, Barrister-at-Law, and Recorder of Chester. 1866.

Fourth Edition.

12mo. Price 1l. 2s. cloth.

SMITH'S ACTION AT LAW. BY PRENTICE.

AN ELEMENTARY VIEW OF THE PROCEEDINGS IN AN ACTION AT LAW. By JOHN WILLIAM SMITH, Esq., late of the Inner Temple, Barrister-at-Law; Author of "Leading Cases," "A Compendium of Mercantile Law," &c. Ninth Edition. By SAMUEL PRENTICE, Esq., Barrister-at-Law. 1866.

Ninth Edition.

12mo. Price 12s. cloth.

SMITH'S LEADING CASES.

SMITH'S SELECTION OF LEADING CASES IN VARIOUS BRANCHES OF THE LAW, with Notes. By JAMES SHAW WILLES, Esq., of the Inner Temple, now one of the Judges of Her Majesty's Court of Common Pleas; and HENRY SINGER KEATING, Esq., of the Inner Temple, one of the Judges of H. M. Court of Common Pleas. Sixth Edition. By F. P. MAUDE and T. E. CHITTY, Esqrs., Barristers-at-Law. 1867.

Sixth Edition.

In Two Vols. Royal 8vo. Price 3l. 10s. cloth.

SMITH'S LAW OF LANDLORD AND TENANT.

THE LAW OF LANDLORD AND TENANT, in a Course of Lectures delivered in the Law Institution. By JOHN WILLIAM SMITH, Esq., late of the Inner Temple, Barrister-at-Law; Author of "A Selection of Leading Cases," &c. With Notes and Additions, by FREDERICK PHILIP MAUDE, Esq., of the Inner Temple, Barrister-at-Law. 1866.

Second Edition.

In One Vol. 8vo. Price 16s. cloth.

SMITH'S MERCANTILE LAW.

A COMPENDIUM OF MERCANTILE LAW. By JOHN WILLIAM SMITH, Esq., of the Inner Temple, Barrister-at-Law. Seventh Edition, by G. M. DOWDESWELL, Esq., of the Inner Temple, Barrister-at-Law. 1866.

Seventh Edition.

Royal 8vo. Price 1l. 16s.

SMITH'S (JOHN WM.) LAW OF CONTRACTS.

By J. G. MALCOLM, of the Inner Temple, Esq., Barrister-at-Law. 1865.

Fourth Edition.

In One Vol. Demy 8vo. Price 16s. cloth.

SHELFORD'S (L.) LAW AND PRACTICE OF BANKRUPTCY.

THE LAW OF BANKRUPTCY AND INSOLVENCY, comprising the Statutes now in force on those subjects, methodically arranged, with the Reported Cases thereon to the present time: with an Appendix, containing the General Orders and Forms and the Practice in Bankruptcy. By LEONARD SHELFORD, Esq., of the Middle Temple, Barrister-at-Law. 1862.

Third Edition.

In One Vol. Royal 12mo. Price 2l. cloth.

RAM'S TREATISE ON FACTS.

A TREATISE ON FACTS, as subjects of Inquiry by a Jury. By JAMES RAM, M.A., Barrister-at-Law. 1861.

"We can only add that Mr. Ram has written a very readable and amusing book, and one calculated to be of use to beginners in law."—Solicitors' Journal, July, 1861.

8vo. Price 10s. 6d. boards.

WESTLAKE'S CONFLICT OF LAWS.

A TREATISE ON PRIVATE INTERNATIONAL LAW, OR THE CONFLICT OF LAWS, with Principal Reference to its Practice in the English and other Cognate Systems of Jurisprudence. By JOHN WESTLAKE, of Lincoln's Inn, Esq., Barrister-at-Law, and Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge. 1858.

"A work that will be a permanent addition to legal literature. It is not a mere compilation, but an original treatise, which the student will read with profit, and the practitioner consult with advantage."—Law Times, May 28, 1859.

In One Vol. 8vo. Price 12s. cloth.

DE BODMERIA

Secundum jus per se necnon secundum jus Germanicum, Hanseaticum, Borussia, Danicum, Norvegicum, Suecicum, Batavicum, Anglicum, Russicum, Gallicum, Italicum, Hispanicum, Lusitanicum, Brasilicum, Romanumque scripsit CAROLUS HERMANNUS HENRICUS FRANCK, Doctor Juris utriusque.

8vo. Price 7s. 6d. sewed.

TUDOR'S LEADING CASES ON MERCANTILE AND MARITIME LAW.

A SELECTION OF LEADING CASES ON MERCANTILE AND MARITIME LAW, with Notes. By OWEN DAVIES TUDOR, Esq., Barrister-at-Law. (In the press.)

Second Edition.

In One Vol. Royal 8vo

LEWIN'S LAW OF TRUSTS AND TRUSTEES

A PRACTICAL TREATISE ON THE LAW OF TRUSTS AND TRUSTEES. By THOMAS LEWIN, Esq., of Lincoln's Inn, Barrister-at-Law. (In the press.)

Fifth Edition.

Royal 8vo.

STEPHEN'S PRINCIPLES OF PLEADING IN CIVIL ACTIONS.

A TREATISE ON THE PRINCIPLES OF PLEADING IN CIVIL ACTIONS; comprising a Summary Account of the whole Proceedings in a Suit at Law. Being the Sixth Edition of Mr. SERJEANT STEPHEN'S work under that title, with alterations adapting it to the present system. By JAMES STEPHEN and FRANCIS F. PINDEB, Barristers-at-Law. 1866.

Seventh Edition.

8vo. Price 16s. cloth.

STONE'S PETTY SESSIONS' PRACTICE.

STONE'S PRACTICE OF PETTY SESSIONS, with the Statutes, a List of Summary Convictions, and an Appendix of Forms. Seventh Edition. With a Supplement containing the Statutes and Decisions to 1863. By THOMAS BELL and LEWIS W. CAVE, Esqrs., Barristers-at-Law. 1863.

Seventh Edition.

12mo. Price 18s. cloth.

BROWN'S RAILWAY AND CANAL TRAFFIC ACT, 1854.

A TREATISE ON THE RAILWAY AND CANAL TRAFFIC ACT, 1854; and on the Law of Carriers as affected thereby: with an Appendix, containing copious Reports of the principal Cases decided under the Act. By GEORGE BROWN, Secretary to the South Durham and Lancashire Railway. 1859.

12mo. Price 5s. cloth.

CHALMERS' OPINIONS OF EMINENT LAWYERS.

OPINIONS OF EMINENT LAWYERS on various points of English Jurisprudence, chiefly concerning the Colonies, Fisheries, and Commerce of Great Britain; collected and digested from the Originals in the Board of Trade and other Depositories. By GEORGE CHALMERS, Esq., F.R.S., S.A.

In One Vol. Royal 8vo. Price 1l. 5s. cloth.

BAKER'S LAWS OF PUBLIC HEALTH.

THE LAWS RELATING TO PUBLIC HEALTH—SANITARY, MEDICAL, PROTECTIVE,—including the Legislation to the end of the last Session of Parliament connected with Adulteration of Food, Alkali Works, Apothecaries, Arsenic, Bakehouses, Baths and Washhouses, Bread, Burials, Chemists, Chimney Sweepers, Diseases Prevention, Factories, Gunpowder, Local Government, Lodging Houses, Lunatics, Meat, Medical Registration, &c., Metropolis Management, Miners, Nuisances, Petroleum, Poison, Recreation Grounds, Quarantine, Smoke, Vaccination, Water, &c.; with Notes, Forms, and Practical Instructions. By T. BAKER, Esq., of the Inner Temple, Barrister-at-Law, Author of "The Law relating to Burials," &c. 1865.

12mo. Price 18s. cloth.

BAKER'S LAW OF BURIALS.

THE LAWS RELATING TO BURIALS; with Notes, Forms, and Practical Instructions. By THOMAS BAKER, Esq., of the Inner Temple, Barrister-at-Law (of the Burial Acts Office). Third Edition, including the Statutes of the Present Session, and the Scotch and Irish Acts. 1863.

"This is a most useful digest of the laws passed during the last five years relative to burials."—Record.

Third Edition.

12mo. Price 7s. 6d. cloth.

BAKER'S BURIAL FORMS.

The undermentioned Forms for Books of Account, Registers, Table of Fees, and Regulations, &c., for the use of Burial Boards, Managers of Cemeteries, Clergymen, &c., drawn up by THOMAS BAKER, Esq., of the Burial Acts Office, Author of the "Laws relating to Burials."

No. 1. Order Book. For Interments, including receipts for money paid, and authority to the Sexton, at 7s. 6d. per hundred. (Price of binding the above in half roan will be 2s.)

No. 2. Interment Book, or Register of Graves. Serving as an Index to the situation of each Grave, at 8s. per quire. (Price of binding the above in rough calf, 10s. 6d.)

No. 3. Grant Book. For purchased Graves and Vaults, with record of each, at 8s. per dozen. (Price of binding the above in rough calf, 16s.)

No. 4. Receipt Book. For all payments except Burials, at 5s. per hundred. (Price of binding the above in half roan, 1s.)

No. 5. Cash Book. Conveniently headed and ruled, at 6s. per quire. (Price of binding the above in rough calf, 12s. 6d.)

No. 6. Monthly Sheet. (Headed and ruled to check Cash Account, at 7s. per quire.)

No. 7. Register of Burials, at 9s. per quire. (Price of binding the above in rough calf, 13s.)

No. 8. Certificate Book. Of Extracts from Register, at 9s. per hundred. (Price of binding the above in rough calf, 8s.)

No. 9. Index, at 5s. per quire. (Price of binding the above in rough calf, 7s. 6d.)

Regulations, suggested for care and conduct of Cemeteries, including Table of Fees, Plan, &c., at 1s. 6d. per dozen.

A Specimen Set of the above Forms, containing a single sheet of each, can be forwarded Post Free, on receipt of stamps, or a Post Office Order for 2s.

DR. BATEMAN'S GENERAL HIGHWAY ACTS.

THE GENERAL HIGHWAY ACTS, with Notes and an Index; also, Practical Forms, in addition to those included in the Schedule, Statutes, and parts of Statutes referred to in the General Act, or bearing upon the Law of Highways; Alphabetical Lists of persons and property liable to be rated, Table of Calculations for regulating Team Work, General Rules for Repairing Roads issued by the Parliamentary Commissioners, with Plates, &c. Second Edition. By W. N. WELSBY, Esq., Barrister-at-Law, Recorder of Chester. With a Supplement containing the Highway Act of 1864, &c. By C. MANLEY SMITH, Esq., of the Inner Temple, Barrister-at-Law. 1865.

Second Edition.

12mo. Price 10s. 6d. cloth.

DAX'S COSTS.

A BOOK OF COSTS IN THE COURTS OF QUEEN'S BENCH, COMMON PLEAS, AND EXCHEQUER, the Crown and Queen's Remembrancers, Offices in Bankruptcy, and the Court for Relief of Insolvent Debtors, Conveyancing, and Miscellaneous Matters, in conformity with the general Scale of Charges allowed on Taxation, and with the Common Law Procedure Acts, 1852 and 1854, and Bills of Exchange Act, 1855. By RICHARD G. DAX, Esq., of the Middle Temple, Barrister-at-Law. 1856.

In One Vol. Post 8vo. Price 15s. cloth.

HADDAN'S LIMITED LIABILITY ACT, 1855.

THE LIMITED LIABILITY ACT, 1855. With Precedents of a Deed of Settlement for constituting a Company with limited liability under the Act (or without limited liability, under the 7th and 8th Vict. c. 110); and of a Deed of Alteration, for enabling an existing Company to register under the Limited Liability Act; and Notes on the Application of the Act, and on the Law relating to registered and other Joint-Stock Companies. By THOMAS HENRY HADDAN, M.A., of the Inner Temple, Barrister-at-Law, and Vinerian Law Fellow, and late Fellow of Exeter College, Oxford. 1855.

Price 8s. cloth.

WOOLRYCH'S GAME LAWS.

The Game Laws, including the Law as to Deer and other wild Animals and Birds; with Notices of the Decisions on Appeals against the Assessed Taxes, and an Appendix, containing the Game Acts. By HUMPHRY W. WOOLRYCH, Serjeant-at-Law.
1858.

In One Vol. 12mo. Price 7s. 6d. cloth.

ARNOLD'S JUSTICE OF THE PEACE, OUT OF SESSIONS.

A SUMMARY OF THE DUTIES OF A JUSTICE OF THE PEACE, OUT OF SESSIONS. Summary Convictions. By THOMAS JAMES ARNOLD, of Lincoln's Inn, Esq., one of the Metropolitan Magistrates.
1860.

Demy 8vo. Price 26s. cloth.

FRANCIS' NEW COMMON LAW PROCEDURE.

THE NEW COMMON LAW PROCEDURE, founded on the Acts of 1852 and 1854, including the New Rules on Practice and Pleading, with Notes of Cases decided thereon, and Forms, Tables, and an Index. By PHILIP FRANCIS, of the Middle Temple, Esq., Barrister-at-Law.
1854.

In One Vol. 12mo. Price 10s. 6d. boards.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT ACT, 1858.

THE LOCAL GOVERNMENT ACT, 1858, with an Introduction, Notes, and Index. By TOULMIN SMITH, Esq., of Lincoln's Inn, Barrister-at-Law.

12mo. Price 3s. cloth.

BRICKDALE'S LEASES AND SALES OF SETTLED ESTATES ACT (19 & 20 Vict. c. 120):

AND THE GENERAL ORDERS made in pursuance thereof. With an Introduction, Notes, and the Amending Act of 21 & 22 Vict. c. 77. By MATHEW INGLETT BRICKDALE, Esq., Barrister-at-Law.
1861.

12mo. Price 5s. boards.

GREAVES' CRIMINAL ACTS.

THE CRIMINAL LAW CONSOLIDATION AND AMENDMENT ACTS, 24 & 25 Vict. With Notes and Observations by C. S. GREAVES, Esq., Q.C.
1862.

Second Edition.

Royal 12mo. Price 16s. cloth.

PRITCHARD'S LAW AND PRACTICE OF THE DIVORCE COURT.

A DIGEST OF THE LAW AND PRACTICE OF THE DIVORCE COURT, and as to Appeals from that Court, with Precedents (including Bills of Costs), and Notes. By ROBERT A. PRITCHARD, D.C.L., of the Inner Temple, Barrister-at-Law, and WILLIAM T. PRITCHARD, of Doctors' Commons, Proctor and Solicitor.
1864.

Second Edition, Revised and Enlarged.

Price 1l. 6s. cloth.

THRING'S LAW OF JOINT-STOCK COMPANIES.

THE LAW AND PRACTICE OF JOINT-STOCK COMPANIES, including the Statutes; with Notes and the Forms required in making, administering, and winding-up a Company. By HENRY THRING, M.A., of the Inner Temple, Barrister-at-Law. 1867.

Second Edition.

12mo. Price 16s. cloth.

HOUSTON'S STOPPAGE IN TRANSITU.

A TREATISE ON THE LAW OF STOPPAGE IN TRANSITU, AND INCIDENTALLY OF RETENTION AND DELIVERY. By JOHN HOUSTON, of the Middle Temple, Esq., Barrister-at-Law. 1866.

In One Vol. Demy 8vo. Price 10s. 6d. cloth.

CHITTY'S EQUITY INDEX.

AN INDEX to all the Reported Cases decided in the several Courts of Equity in England and Ireland, the Privy Council and the House of Lords; and to the Statutes on or relating to the Principles, Pleading, and Practice of Equity and Bankruptcy, from the earliest period. By EDWARD CHITTY, Esq., of Lincoln's Inn, Barrister-at-Law. The Third Edition, brought down to the year 1853. By JAMES MACAULAY, Esq., of the Inner Temple, Barrister-at-Law. 1853.

Third Edition.

In Four Vols. Royal 8vo. Price 7l. 7s.

THE LAW RESPECTING NUISANCES.

Practical Proceedings for the Removal of Nuisances to Health and Safety, and Execution of Drainage Works in every Parish, Town, and Place in England and Wales, by means at Common Law, and under the Nuisances Removal and other Acts, and by other course of Law, with numerous Forms and complete Instructions for the conduct of Parish Committees. By TOULMIN SMITH, Esq., Barrister-at-Law; Author of "The Parish," &c. &c. 1867.

Fourth Edition, greatly enlarged.

In 12mo. Price 10s. 6d. boards.

Books of FORMS necessary for carrying into operation the Nuisances Removal Act for England, 1855. Prepared, with Instructions for use, by TOULMIN SMITH, Esq.

1. Presentment Book for Entry of Complaints. (100 sheets, price 7s. 6d. bound.)
2. Inspector's Report Book. (100 sheets in each book, price 7s. 6d. bound.)
3. Order of Authorization to Inspector. (100 sheets in each book, price 6s. bound.)
4. Notice of Application for Order of Admission. (100 sheets, price 6s. bound.)
5. Notices of Nuisance and Remedy. (250 sheets in each book, price 12s. bound.)
6. Notices of Compulsory Proceedings. (100 sheets in each book, price 6s. bound.)
7. Notice to Occupiers Foully Drains. (200 sheets, price 10s. 6d. bound.)
8. Licence to use Common Drains on Payment. (200 sheets, price 10s. 6d. bound.)

A Complete Set of the above, price 3l. 6s.

METROPOLIS LOCAL MANAGEMENT ACT, 1855.

With an Introduction, copious Practical Notes, and a full Double Index; also a Table of Qualifications for Voters, Vestrymen, Auditors, &c. By TOULMIN SMITH, of Lincoln's Inn, Esq., Barrister-at-Law. 1855.

In One Vol. 12mo. Price 8s. cloth.

URLIN AND KEY'S LAND TRANSFER AND REGISTRATION.

A PRACTICAL TREATISE ON THE LAND TRANSFER AND DECLARATION OF TITLE ACTS; illustrated by the Practice and Decisions under the Analogous Irish Acts, with the Acts of 1862, Notes, General Orders, Forms, Fees, the Practical Directions of the Land Registry, and a full Index. By R. DENNY URLIN, of the Middle Temple, Barrister-at-Law, and Examiner in the Land Estates Court, Ireland; and THOMAS KEY, of Lincoln's Inn, Barrister-at-Law.

12mo. Price 10s. cloth.

ROSCOE'S CRIMINAL EVIDENCE.

A DIGEST OF THE LAW OF EVIDENCE IN CRIMINAL CASES. By H. ROSCOE, Esq. Sixth Edition. With considerable Additions. By DAVID POWER, Esq., Barrister-at-Law, Recorder of Ipswich.

1862.

Sixth Edition.

Royal 12mo. Price 1l. 10s. cloth.

ROSCOE'S EVIDENCE AT NISI PRIUS.

DIGEST OF THE LAW OF EVIDENCE ON THE TRIAL OF ACTIONS AT NISI PRIUS. By W. MARKBY, Esq., and W. MILLS, Esq., Barristers-at-Law.

1866.

Eleventh Edition.

Royal 12mo. Price 1l. 11s. 6d. cloth.

SHELFORD'S LAW OF COPYHOLDS, WITH SUPPLEMENT.

THE LAW OF COPYHOLDS in reference to the Enfranchisement and Commutation of Manorial Rights; and the Copyhold Acts: with Notes, and the Forms and Directions of the Copyhold Commissioners. By LEONARD SHELFORD, Esq., of the Inner Temple, Barrister-at-Law.

1858.

"Mr. Shelford is a legal author of great experience and reputation; and the volume before us is not only the latest but the most complete work on Copyhold Law which has appeared since the promulgation of the important alterations which it has recently undergone."—Morning Post.

"Undoubtedly it is one of the best, if not the very best, book that has appeared on the Law of Copyhold and its enfranchisement."—Law Times.

In One Vol. 12mo. Price 14s. cloth.

A SUPPLEMENT TO THE LAW OF COPYHOLDS,

Including the COPYHOLD ACT, 1858, and other Acts, with the New Forms and Directions of the Copyhold Commissioners. By LEONARD SHELFORD, Esq., of the Middle Temple, Barrister-at-Law.

1858.

12mo. Price 2s. 6d. sewed.

THE NEW PARISHES ACTS, 1843, 1844, and 1856.

BEING SIR ROBERT PEEL'S ACTS, and Lord Blandford's Act for making provision for the Spiritual Care of Populous Parishes. With Introduction, Explanatory Notes, and copious Index, adapted as a Manual for all Clergymen. By JAMES CHRISTIE TRAILL, M.A., of the Inner Temple, Barrister-at-Law.

1857.

In One Vol. 12mo. Price 5s. 6d. cloth.

JARMAN'S CHANCERY PRACTICE.

THE PRACTICE OF THE HIGH COURT OF CHANCERY, in the Conduct of Suits, by Bill, or original Summons, including Proceedings in the Judge's Chambers; Forms of Costs and numerous other Forms, the Practice relating to Special Cases and Petitions of Right; Acts concerning Trustees, Executors, Administrators, and Mortgagees (including, inter alia, the Trustee Acts and Trustees Relief Acts); Acts relating to Charitable Trusts; the Settled Estates Acts, and the Infant's Marriage Settlement Acts; with the General Orders and Decisions of the Court thereunder, and a copious Index. Third Edition. By HENRY JARMAN, a Solicitor of the Court. 1864.

Third Edition.

In One Vol. 12mo. Price 24s. cloth.

BENNET'S OFFICE OF RECEIVER.

A PRACTICAL TREATISE ON THE APPOINTMENT, OFFICE, AND DUTIES OF A RECEIVER UNDER THE HIGH COURT OF CHANCERY, with an Appendix, containing Leading Cases, Precedents and Practical Directions. By WILLIAM HEATH BENNET, Esq., of Lincoln's Inn, Barrister-at-Law. 1849.

8vo. Price 10s. boards.

SAUNDERS ON PLEADING AND EVIDENCE IN CIVIL ACTIONS.

THE LAW OF PLEADING AND EVIDENCE IN CIVIL ACTIONS, arranged alphabetically; with Practical Forms, and the Pleading and Evidence necessary to support them. By J. S. SAUNDERS, Esq. Second Edition, much enlarged, by ROBERT LUSH, Esq., of Gray's Inn, Barrister-at-Law. 1851.

*In Two Vols. 8vo. Published at 3l. 13s. 6d. cloth boards. (Now reduced to 2l.)
Second Edition.*

MACQUEEN'S PRACTICE OF THE HOUSE OF LORDS.

A PRACTICAL TREATISE ON THE APPELLATE JURISDICTION OF THE HOUSE OF LORDS AND PRIVY COUNCIL, AND ON PARLIAMENTARY DIVORCE; with a Selection of Leading Cases. By JOHN FRASER MACQUEEN, Esq., Q.C. 1842.

"One of the most useful books that have for many years appeared; a work, too, of no little importance to our constitutional history."—Lord Brougham's Letter to Sir James R. G. Graham, 1843.

Royal 8vo. Price 1l. 11s. 6d. boards.

TROWER'S LAW OF DEBTOR AND CREDITOR.

THE LAW OF DEBTOR AND CREDITOR: to which is subjoined a Table of the Courts in England and Wales for the Recovery of Debts. By CHARLES FRANCIS TROWER, Esq., M.A., of the Inner Temple, Barrister-at-Law, late Fellow of Exeter College, and Vinerian Scholar, Oxford. 1860.

Royal 8vo. Price 25s. cloth.

MACQUEEN ON THE LAW OF DIVORCE.

A PRACTICAL TREATISE ON THE LAW OF MARRIAGE, DIVORCE, AND LEGITIMACY, as administered in the Divorce Court and in the House of Lords. By JOHN FRASER MACQUEEN, Esq., Q.C. 1860.

Second Edition.

In One Vol. 8vo. Price 18s. cloth.

LINDLEY'S JURISPRUDENCE.

AN INTRODUCTION TO THE STUDY OF JURISPRUDENCE, being a Translation of the general part of Thibaut's "System des Pandekten Rechts;" with Notes. By NATHANIEL LINDLEY, Esq., of the Middle Temple, Barrister-at-Law. 1855.

Royal 8vo. Price 12s. boards.

MAUGHAM'S QUESTIONS.

A DIGEST OF THE EXAMINATION QUESTIONS in Common Law; Conveyancing; Equity; Bankruptcy; and Criminal Law; from Hilary Term, 1853 (according to the alterations then effected). With the Examination Rules, Instructions to Candidates, Forms and Practical Directions. By ROBERT MAUGHAM, Secretary to the Incorporated Law Society and the Board of Examiners, and Deputy-Registrar of Attorneys. 1861.

Fifth Edition.

12mo. Price 6s. cloth.

SHELFORD'S REAL PROPERTY STATUTES.

THE REAL PROPERTY STATUTES passed in the Reigns of King William IV. and Queen Victoria, including Prescription, Limitation of Actions, Abolition of Fines, &c., Payment of Debts, Wills, Judgments, the Trustee Acts, and Leases and Sales of Settled Estates. With copious Notes and Forms of Deeds. Seventh Edition, with many Alterations and Additions. By LEONARD SHELFORD, Esq., of the Middle Temple, Barrister-at-Law. 1863.

Seventh Edition.

8vo. Price 1l. 10s. boards.

STEER'S PARISH LAW.

BEING A DIGEST OF THE LAW relating to the Civil and Ecclesiastical Government of Parishes, Friendly Societies, &c., &c.; and the Relief, Settlement and Removal of the Poor. Considerably enlarged and altered, by HENRY JOHN HODGSON, Esq., Barrister-at-Law, Recorder of Ludlow, late Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge. 1857.

Third Edition.

In One Vol. 8vo. Price 1l. 8s. cloth.

BRADY'S EXECUTOR'S ACCOUNT BOOK.

THE EXECUTOR'S ACCOUNT BOOK; exhibiting a safe and easy Method of keeping Executorship Accounts; with an adequate number of Ruled Pages, so arranged as to be adapted to the Circumstances of every Estate: and a Fictitious Will, comprising a variety of Bequests of Personal Property, the Accounts under which, from the Death of the supposed Testator to the Termination of the Executorship, are accurately arranged and posted on the Plan proposed, as an Illustration of the Simplicity and Comprehensiveness of the System, and an infallible Guidance to Executors under any other Estate. By JOHN H. BRADY, late of the Legacy-Duty Office, Somerset House; Author of "Plain Instructions to Executors and Administrators," "Plain Advice on Wills," &c. 1845.

4to. Price 12s. boards.

ROUSE'S PRACTICAL MAN.

ROUSE'S PRACTICAL MAN: giving nearly 400 carefully prepared Forms in Legal Matters, requiring prompt attention, and a complete collection of Tables and Rules applicable to the Management of Estates and Property, and to the Calculations of all Values dependent on Lives, Reversions, Terminable Payments, &c. By ROLLA ROUSE, Esq., of the Middle Temple, Barrister-at-Law. 1866.

Eleventh Edition.

Price 9s.

STONE'S BENEFIT BUILDING SOCIETIES.

A PRACTICAL TREATISE ON BENEFIT BUILDING SOCIETIES, embracing their Origin, Constitution and Change of Character; and the Superiority of Permanent over Terminating Societies; also the Principles and Practice of Tontine Building Companies, Freehold Land Societies, &c.; and the Law relating to these Societies; with the Statutes and Cases to the present time. Also Rules, Forms and Precedents of Freehold, Copyhold and Leasehold Securities; with Practical Notes. By WILLIAM STONE, Attorney-at-Law. 1851.

"The plan of the work is clear and practical."—Globe.

In One Vol. 12mo. Price 8s. cloth.

DR. BATEMAN'S GENERAL TURNPIKE ROAD ACTS.

With Notes, Forms, &c. By W. N. WELSBY, Esq., Barrister-at-Law, Recorder of Chester. 1854.

Fourth Edition.

In One Vol. 12mo. Price 12s. cloth.

CRABB'S DIGEST OF THE STATUTES.

A DIGEST AND INDEX, with a Chronological Table of all the Statutes, from Magna Charta to the end of the 9 & 10 Vict. To which are added, with great care and exactness, the Reported Decisions of all the Courts with which each section is connected. By GEORGE CRABB, Esq., of the Inner Temple, Barrister-at-Law. 1844—7.

* * * The Publisher respectfully begs leave to call the attention of the Profession to the fact, that Mr. Crabb's Digest and Index is the only work that professes to embrace all the Statutes, and that it contains an account of every Statute, more or less copious according to its practical utility. The value of the whole is materially enhanced by the Index to the four volumes now published.

In Four Vols. Royal 8vo. Published at 6l. 6s. boards. (Now reduced to 3l. 3s.)

CRABB'S LAW OF REAL PROPERTY.

THE LAW OF REAL PROPERTY IN ITS PRESENT STATE, practically arranged and digested in all its Branches; including the very latest Decisions of the Courts. By GEORGE CRABB, Esq., of the Inner Temple, Barrister-at-Law. 1849.

In Two Vols. Royal 8vo. Published at 2l. 18s. boards. (Now reduced to 1l. 10s.)

BELL'S LAW OF HUSBAND AND WIFE.

THE LAW OF PROPERTY, AS ARISING FROM THE RELATION OF HUSBAND AND WIFE. By SYDNEY SMITH BELL, Esq., of Lincoln's Inn, Barrister-at-Law (now Second Puisne Judge at the Cape of Good Hope). 1849.

8vo. Published at 18s. boards. (Now reduced to 10s.)

SANDERS ON USES AND TRUSTS.

AN ESSAY ON USES AND TRUSTS, and on the Nature and Operation of Conveyances at Common Law, and of those which derive their effect from the Statute of Uses. By the late FRANCIS WILLIAM SANDERS, Esq. Fifth Edition, with additional Notes and References, by GEORGE WILLIAM SANDERS, Esq., of Lincoln's Inn, and JOHN WARNER, Esq., of the Inner Temple, Barristers-at-Law. 1844.

"This edition is very ably edited by the son of the very learned author and Mr. Warner, both experienced conveyancers."—Warren's Law Studies, p. 573.

In Two Vols. Royal 8vo. Published at 1l. 12s. boards. (Now reduced to 1l.) Fifth Edition.

WIGRAM'S LAW OF DISCOVERY.

POINTS IN THE LAW OF DISCOVERY. By JAMES WIGRAM, Esq. (now the Right Hon. Sir JAMES WIGRAM). 1840.

Second Edition.

8vo. Price 15s. boards.

PLATT ON LEASES.

A TREATISE ON THE LAW OF LEASES, with a Copious Appendix of Forms and Precedents, adapted to the Practice of the present day. By THOMAS PLATT, Esq., of Lincoln's Inn, Barrister-at-Law. 1847.

In Two Vols. Royal 8vo. Published at 2l. 10s. boards. (Now reduced to 1l. 10s.)

CHRISTIE'S CONCISE PRECEDENTS OF WILLS.

CONCISE PRECEDENTS with an Introductory Essay on the Law of Wills, adapted as a Manual for the ready use of Solicitors. By JAMES TRAILL CHRISTIE, Esq., of the Middle Temple, Barrister-at-Law. 1857.

Second Edition.

12mo. Price 15s. cloth.

MACPHERSON ON THE LAW OF INFANTS.

A PRACTICAL TREATISE ON THE LAW RELATING TO INFANTS. By WILLIAM MACPHERSON, Esq., of the Inner Temple, Barrister-at-Law. 1842.

"The entire law of infancy in all its branches has been well digested by Mr. Macpherson in this able and very valuable work, which contains nearly 600 pages, exclusive of Appendix and Index."—Law Magazine, Feb., 1844, p. 119.

Royal 8vo. Price 1l. 6s. boards.

ROPER'S LEGACIES.

TREATISE ON THE LAW OF LEGACIES. By R. S. D. ROPER, Esq. Fourth Edition, by H. H. WHITE. 1847.

Fourth Edition.

Two Vols. Royal 8vo. Price 3l. 3s. boards.

INDERWICK ON DIVORCE.

THE DIVORCE AND MATRIMONIAL CAUSES ACTS, with the Rules and Orders, Notes and Forms. By F. A. INDERWICK, Esq., of the Inner Temple, Barrister-at-Law. 1862.

Royal 12mo. Price 6s. cloth.

BATEMAN'S LAW OF AUCTIONS.

THE AUCTIONEER'S GUIDE, CONTAINING A PRACTICAL TREATISE ON THE LAW OF AUCTIONS; with a complete Series of Conditions of Sale, Rules for Valuing Property, the Law of Distress, and numerous Forms, Tables and Precedents. By J. BATEMAN, Esq., LL.D., of Lincoln's Inn, Barrister-at-Law, late Assistant Solicitor of Excise, &c. Fourth Edition. By ROLLA ROUSE, of the Middle Temple, Esq., Barrister-at-Law. 1863.

Fourth Edition.

12mo. Price 10s. 6d. cloth.

DOMAT'S CIVIL LAW.

THE CIVIL LAW IN ITS NATURAL ORDER, together with the Public Law. Translated into English by WILLIAM STRAHAN; with Remarks on some Differences between the Civil Law and the Law of England. Printed entire from the last London Edition. Edited by the Hon. LUTHER S. CUSHING, late one of the Judges in the Court of Common Pleas, now Lecturer in Civil and Parliamentary Law in Harvard University.

In Two Vols. Royal 8vo. Price 2l. 10s. cloth.

VATTEL'S LAW OF NATIONS.

LAW OF NATIONS; OR, PRINCIPLES OF THE LAW OF NATURE; applied to the Conduct and Affairs of Nations and Sovereigns. By M. VATTEL. A New Edition, with Notes, and, for the first time, a copious Index. By J. CHITTY. 1834.

Royal 8vo. Price 1l. 1s. boards.

PARK'S MARINE ASSURANCE.

SYSTEM OF MARINE INSURANCES, with Three Chapters on Bottomry; on Insurances on Lives; and on Insurances against Fire. By J. A. PARK (afterwards Mr. Justice). With considerable Additions. By FRANCIS HILDYARD, M.A. 1842.

Eighth Edition.

Two Vols. Royal 8vo. Price 2l. boards.

SANDERS' ORDERS IN CHANCERY.

ORDERS OF THE HIGH COURT OF CHANCERY, from the Earliest Period to the Present Time (12 Rich. 2 to 8 Vict.). By GEORGE WILLIAM SANDERS, Esq., Barrister-at-Law and Chief Secretary at the Rolls. 1845.

In Two Vols. 8vo. Published at 2l. 10s. boards. (Now reduced to 1l. 5s.)

LAWS RELATING TO THE CLERGY.

PRACTICAL TREATISE OF THE LAWS RELATING TO THE CLERGY. By A. J. STEPHENS, Esq. 1848.

Two Vols. Royal 8vo. Price 2l. 18s. boards.

DR. IRVING'S CIVIL LAW.

AN INTRODUCTION TO THE CIVIL LAW. By DAVID IRVING, LL.D. Fourth Edition. 1837.

"The work is written in a lively style, abounding with acute criticism, displaying great learning and research, with infinite zeal in behalf of the study he recommends."—Legal Observer.

Fourth Edition.

8vo. Published at 9s. boards. (Now reduced to 5s.)

PHILLIMORE ON THE ROMAN LAW.

INTRODUCTION TO THE STUDY AND HISTORY OF THE ROMAN LAW. By J. G. PHILLIMORE, Esq., Q.C. 1848.

In 8vo. Price 15s. boards.

PHILLIMORE ON THE LAW OF EVIDENCE.

THE HISTORY AND PRINCIPLES OF THE LAW OF EVIDENCE as illustrating our Social Progress. By J. G. PHILLIMORE, Esq., Q.C. 1850.

In 8vo. Price 16s. boards.

PHILLIMORE ON JURISPRUDENCE.

AN INAUGURAL LECTURE ON JURISPRUDENCE, and a Lecture on Common Law, delivered at the Hall of the Inner Temple, Hilary Term, 1851. By J. G. PHILLIMORE, Esq., Q.C.

In 8vo. Price 3s. 6d. sewed.

HINDMARCH ON THE LAW OF PATENTS.

A TREATISE ON THE LAW RELATING TO PATENT PRIVILEGES FOR THE SOLE USE OF INVENTIONS; and the Practice of obtaining Letters Patent for Inventions; with an Appendix of Statutes, Rules, Forms, &c., &c. By W. M. HINDMARCH, Esq. 1846.

In 8vo. Price 1l. 1s. boards.

PHILLIMORE ON THE LAW OF DOMICIL.

THE LAW OF DOMICIL. By ROBERT PHILLIMORE, Esq., Barrister-at-Law. 1847.

In 8vo. Price 9s. boards.

ROGERS' ECCLESIASTICAL LAW.

PRACTICAL ARRANGEMENT OF ECCLESIASTICAL LAW. By F. N. ROGERS. 1849.

Second Edition.

8vo. Price 1l. 16s. boards.

TAYLOR'S BOOK OF RIGHTS.

THE BOOK OF RIGHTS; or, A Collection of Acts of Parliament relative to Civil and Religious Liberty, from Magna Charta to the Present Time; Historically arranged, with Notes and Observations. By EDGAR TAYLOR, F.S.A. 1833.

The above work forms a useful Supplement to Sir James Macintosh's History of England.

"His commentaries are concisely and forcibly written, and form of themselves a valuable summary of the most important acts of English legislation to the present time."—Legal Observer.

12mo. Published at 6s. 6d. (Now reduced to 4s.)

TAPPING ON MANDAMUS.

THE LAW AND PRACTICE OF THE HIGH PREROGATIVE WRIT OF MANDAMUS as it obtains both in England and Ireland. 1848.

Royal 8vo. Price 1l. 1s. boards.

WILDMAN ON INTERNATIONAL LAW.

INSTITUTES OF INTERNATIONAL LAW, in Time of Peace and Time of War. By RICHARD WILDMAN, Esq., Barrister-at-Law. 1849—50.

In Two Vols. 8vo. Price 1l. 2s. 6d. boards.

HILDYARD ON MARINE INSURANCE.

A TREATISE ON THE PRINCIPLES OF THE LAW OF MARINE INSURANCES. In Two Parts. I. On the Contract itself, between the Assured and the Assurer. II. Of the Causes which vacate the Contract. 2. In what Cases the Assured is entitled to recover back the Consideration paid by him. 3, and lastly. What is the Remedy provided by the Law for either party against the other. 1845.

Royal 8vo. Price 1l. 10s. boards.

CLARK'S COLONIAL LAW.

A SUMMARY OF COLONIAL LAW, and Practice of Appeals from the Plantations. 1834.

8vo. Price 1l. 4s. boards.

AMOS AND FERARD ON FIXTURES.

A TREATISE ON THE LAW OF FIXTURES AND OTHER PROPERTY, comprising the Law relative to Annexations to Freeholds in general; as also Emblements, Charters, Heir-Looms, &c.; with an Appendix, containing Practical Rules and Directions respecting the Removal, Purchase, Valuation, &c., of Fixtures between Landlord and Tenant, and between Outgoing and Incoming Tenants. 1847.

Second Edition.

In Royal 8vo. Price 16s. boards.

PALEY ON CONVICTIONS.

PALEY'S LAW AND PRACTICE OF SUMMARY CONVICTIONS BY JUSTICES OF THE PEACE, including Proceedings Preliminary and Subsequent to Convictions; also the Responsibility and Indemnity of Convicting Magistrates and their Officers; with Practical Forms and Precedents of Convictions. Fifth Edition. By H. T. J. MACNAMARA, Esq., of Lincoln's Inn, Barrister-at-Law, Recorder of Reading. 1866.

Fifth Edition.

8vo. Price 1l. 1s. cloth.

MISCELLANEOUS PUBLICATIONS.

In one Vol. foolscap 8vo. Price 7s. 6d. extra cloth.

(With numerous woodcut illustrations.)

CRABB'S TECHNICAL DICTIONARY.

A TECHNICAL DICTIONARY; or a Dictionary explaining all Terms of Art and Science. By GEORGE CRABB, Esq., M.A., author of the "Universal Technological Dictionary," the "Dictionary of Synonymes," &c.

"Within the compass of a thick but portable volume we have a large body of useful information of a kind which cannot fail to be acceptable to all who require a general explanation of the various terms in science and arts generally used in literature. The great merit of these explanations is their brevity, and the manner in which the compiler has done his task is most satisfactory."—Art-Journal.

"This is a well printed volume of 658 pages, containing short definitions of as many terms in art and science as can be compressed into such a space."—Gardeners' Chronicle.

"This is an abridgment, in a portable form, of a well-known larger Dictionary, by the same author. It is calculated to be extensively useful to those who cannot afford to purchase, or have not leisure to consult, any of those bulky and high-priced Dictionaries which are so much the fashion."—Daily News.

"This is a work of great practical utility to all who are connected with or interested in the Arts and Sciences. It forms a sort of pocket cyclopædia, and rather a comprehensive one of its kind, embracing as it does a wide range of subject, much of it such as every day's experience shows us the advantage of being acquainted with. 'To bring it within the size and price that will be most generally acceptable,' the preface tells us, 'care has been taken to make the definitions as concise as possible, consistently with the clearness and fullness of explanation which the subject may demand.' And this idea is admirably carried out."—Oxford University and County Herald.

In one Vol. 8vo. Published at 14s. extra cloth bds. (Now reduced to 7s. 6d.)

PROFESSOR GREENLEAF'S EXAMINATION OF THE TESTIMONY OF THE FOUR EVANGELISTS,

BY THE RULES OF EVIDENCE ADMINISTERED IN COURTS OF LAW; with the Harmony of the Four Gospels, arranged in four parallel columns, and a Synopsis of their Contents. To which is added,

M. DUPIN'S REFUTATION OF JOSEPH SALVADOR'S TRIAL AND CONDEMNATION OF OUR SAVIOUR.

Translated from the French by Dr. PICKERING. 1847.

"The design of this work, as its title imports, is to bring the narratives of these witnesses to the tests usually applied to the evidence of other transactions in Courts of Law, as well documentary as oral, in order to ascertain what degree of credit they would be entitled to receive in human tribunals. The principles of the Law of Evidence applicable to such subjects are stated in a preliminary discourse, in which also the characters and situation of the Evangelists, their motives of conduct, and the nature and probability of their narratives and assertions, are examined. The four Gospels are exhibited in parallel columns, arranged after the order of Archbishop Newcome's Harmony, as recently collected and published by Professor Robinson. In the Appendix is contained a legal account of the two trials of Jesus, before the Sanhedrim and Pilate; and a translation of the Jewish account of those transactions, given by M. Salvador, a learned Jew, in his Histoire des Institutions de Moïse et du Peuple Hébreu. This work is inscribed to the members of the legal profession; but it will be found equally interesting to clergymen, and to all others who may be disposed to examine the subject."

In the Press.

BURN'S JUSTICE OF THE PEACE

— AND —

PARISH OFFICER.

Thirtieth Edition,

IN FIVE VOLUMES, ENTIRELY RE-MODELLED, AND BROUGHT DOWN TO THE PRESENT TIME,

UNDER THE SUPERINTENDENCE OF

JOHN BLOSSETT MAULE, Esq.,

BARRISTER-AT-LAW, RECORDER OF LEEDS :

ASSISTED BY

VOL. I. By THOMAS SIRREL PRITCHARD, of the Inner Temple, Esq.

VOL. II. By SAM'L. B. BRISTOWE, of the Inner Temple, Esq.

VOL. III. By LEWIS W. CAVE, of the Inner Temple, Esq.

VOL. IV. By JAMES EDWARD DAVIS, of the Middle Temple, Esq.
Barristers-at-Law.

VOL. V. By JOHN BLOSSETT MAULE, of the Inner Temple, Esq., Recorder of Leeds.

The Publishers beg to state, that in consequence of the numerous and important changes in Magisterial and Parochial Law since the publication of the last edition of this work, this forthcoming edition will be entirely re-constructed and re-arranged ; and, much superfluous matter being retrenched, the whole will be contained in five volumes. The names of the gentlemen who have kindly undertaken to edit the work, under the superintendence of Mr. Maule, will be a sufficient guarantee that it will become the most perfect Cyclopædia of Magisterial and Parochial Law hitherto offered to the Profession.

LIST OF LAW REPORTS AND TREATISES

OFFERED AT REDUCED PRICES TO THE PROFESSION.

The REPORTS are stated at the Bound Prices, in best Law Calf, and quite new.

The TREATISES are in strong Boards, and also quite new.

The REDUCED PRICES are for Cash, and without Discount.

Those REPORTS, excepting the current series, that have no Prices attached, are only to be had Second Hand, and at the Market Price.

All the REPORTS are in Royal 8vo., and in every case the best edition, except where otherwise expressed.

The remaining stock of many of these Reports being small an early application is necessary to secure them at the present prices.

Reports in the House of Lords.

	Publication Price in Calf.			Now offered in Calf.
	£	s.	d.	£	s.	d.
COLLES,—W. III. and Anne, 8vo. Dublin. 1 vol.
BROWN,—17 to 40 G. III., by TOMLINS. 8 vols.
Dow,—53 to 58 G. III. Second hand . 6 vols.
Dow and CLARK,—8 G. IV. to 2 W. IV. 2 vols.	3	4	0	1	0	0
CLARK and FINNELLY,—2 W. IV. to 9 & 10 Vict. 12 vols.
MACLEAN and ROBINSON,—2 & 3 Vict. 1 vol.	2	4	0	0	16	0
WEST,—2 & 3 to 5 Vict. 1 vol.	1	9	0	0	10	6
MACQUEEN (Scotch Appeal Cases). 3 vols., and Vol. 4, Part 1	6	9	6
HOUSE OF LORDS CASES. 11 vols.	34	7	6

Reports in the High Court of Chancery.

CARY,—Mary, Eliz. & James I., 12mo. 1 vol.	0	8	0	0	4	6
TOTHILL,—Elizabeth, James I. and Charles I., 12mo. 1 vol.	0	8	0	0	4	6
FREEMAN,—Charles II., James II., W. III. & Anne, Second Edition , by HOVENDEN. 1 vol.	1	1	6	0	6	0
VERNON,—Charles II., James II., W. III., Anne, & G. I., Third Edition , by RATHBY. 2 vols.	3	10	0	1	0	0
PEERE WILLIAMS,—W. III., Anne, & G. I. & II., Fifth Edition , by MONRO, LOWNDEN, and RANDALL. 3 Vols.	4	4	0	1	4	0
MOSELEY,—12 G. I. to 3 G. II., 8vo. Dublin. 1 vol.
TALBOT, Cases Temp.—7 to 10 G. II., 8vo. Dublin. 1 vol.	0	8		0	4	6
COX,—23 to 36 G. III. 2 vols.
EDEN,—30 G. II. to 7 G. III. 2 vols.
AMBLER,—11 G. II. to 24 G. III., Second Edition , by BLUNT. 2 vols.
BROWN,—18 to 34 G. III., Fourth Edition , by EDEN. 4 vols.

	Publication Price in Calif. £ s. d.			Now offered in Calif. £ s. d.
VESEY, JUN.,—29 to 52 G. III., with Index, and HOVENDEN'S Notes. 22 vols.	30	17	0	10	10	0
VESEY and BEAMES,—52 to 54 G. III. 3 vols.
COOPER,—55 G. III. 1 vol.	0	19	6	0	6	0
MERIVALE,—56 & 57 G. III. 3 vols.
SWANSTON,—58 & 59 G. III. 3 vols.	4	15	6	1	10	0
WILSON,—58 & 59 G. III., 4 parts in 1 vol.	1	12	6	0	8	0
N.B.—All that were published.
JACOB and WALKER,—60 G. III. to 1 & 2 G. IV. 2 vols.
JACOB,—2 & 3 G. IV. 1 vol.	1	13	6	0	9	0
TURNER and RUSSELL,—3 to 5 Geo. IV. 1 vol.
RUSSELL,—6 to 9 G. IV. 4 vols., and Vol. 5, Parts 1 and 2
N.B.—Vol. 5 has never been completed.
RUSSELL and MYLNE,—10 G. IV. to 1 & 2 W. IV. 2 vols.	4	2	6	1	0	0
MYLNE and KEENE,—3 to 6 W. IV. 3 vols.	4	2	6	1	10	0
MYLNE and CRAIG,—6 W. IV. to 4 & 5 Vict. 5 vols.	8	16	6	2	10	0
CRAIG and PHILLIPS,—4 & 5 Vict. 1 vol.	1	4	0	0	10	6
PHILLIPS,—5 to 11 Vict. 2 vols.	4	16	6	1	11	6
HALL and TWEELS,—12 to 14 Vict. 2 vols.	3	10	0	1	1	0
MACNAGHTEN and GORDON,—12 to 15 Vict. 3 vols.	5	18	6	2	10	0
DE GEX, MACNAGHTEN and GORDON,—15 Vict. to present time. 8 vols.	23	5	6
DE GEX and JONES. 4 vols.	9	14	6
DE GEX, FISHER, and JONES. 2 vols., and Vol. 3, Parts 1 to 4	7	1	6
———, JONES, and SMITH. 2 vols., and Vol. 3, Part 1.	5	14	0

Reports in the Rolls Court.

KEEN,—6 W. IV. to 1 Vict. 2 vols.	4	2	6	0	18	0
BEAVAN,—34 vols.	71	18	0

Reports in the Vice-Chancellor of England's Court.

SIMONS and STUART,—2 to 7 G. IV. 2 vols.	3	9	0	1	5	0
SIMONS,—7 G. IV. to 12 & 13 Vict. 17 vols.	33	11	6
SIMONS (New Series),—13 & 14 to 15 & 16 Vict. 2 vols.	3	5	0	1	18	0
DREWRY,—16 Vict. to present time. 4 vols.	9	0	0
——— and SMALE. Vol. 1, and Vol. 2, Parts 1 to 4	4	4	0

Reports in Vice-Chancellor Sir Knight Bruce's Court.

YOUNGE and COLLYER,—5 to 6 & 7 Vict. 2 vols.	4	0	6	1	8	0
COLLYER,—7 to 9 Vict. 2 vols.	4	8	0	1	10	0
DE GEX and SMALE,—9 & 10 to 16 Vict. 5 vols.	11	6	0	5	5	0
SMALE & GIFFARD,—16 Vict. to 18 & 19 Vict. 3 vols.	5	9	0
GIFFARD. 3 vols., and Vol. 4, Parts 1 to 5	9	5	6

Reports in Vice-Chancellor Sir James Wigram, Sir Geo. Jas. Turner, and Sir Wm. Page Wood's Courts.

HARE,—5 to 14 & 15 Vict. 8 vols.	16	4	0	10	0
HARE,—1851, 1852, and 1853. Vols. 9, 10, and 11	8	1	0
KAY,—1853, 1854. 1 Vol.	1	13	6

	Publication Price in Calf.	Now offered in Calf.
	£ s. d.	£ s. d.
KAY and JOHNSON,—1854 to 1858. 4 vols.	10 19 6
JOHNSON,—1859. Vol. 1	2 17 0
— and HEMMING. 2 vols.	5 10 6
HEMMING and MILLER. 2 vols.	5 10 6

Reports in the Court of Queen's Bench.

COKE,—14 Eliz. to 13 James I., New Edition , by THOMAS & FRASER. 6 vols.	7 7 0
YELVERTON,—44 Eliz. to 10 James I., 8vo. Dublin. 1 vol.	0 8 0	0 4 6
SAUNDERS,—24 Charles II., 6th Edition, by Serjt. WILLIAMS and Justices PATTESON & E. V. WILLIAMS, 1845. 3 vols.	4 14 6	1 10 0
FREEMAN,—Charles II., James II., W. & Mary, and Anne, Second Edition , by SMIRKE. 1 vol.	1 9 6	0 6 0
LEVINZ,—Charles II., James II., and W. & Mary, by VICKERS, 8vo. Dublin. 3 vols.	1 4 0	0 10 0
STRANGE,—2 G. I. to 21 G. II., Third Edition , by NOLAN. 2 vols.
HARDWICKE, Cases temp.,—7 to 10 G. II., Second Edition , by LEE. 1 vol.
WILLES,—11 to 32 G. II., 8vo. Dublin. 1 vol.
BLACKSTONE, W.—1 to 20 G. III., New Edition , by ELSLEY. 2 vols.	2 9 0	0 16 0
LOFFT,—12 to 14 G. III., 8vo. Dublin. 1 vol.
COWPER,—14 to 18 G. III., 8vo. Dublin. 1 vol.
DOUGLAS,—19 to 25 G. III. Fourth Edition , by FRERE and ROSCOE. 4 vols.	4 14 0
DURNFORD and EAST,—26 to 40 G. III., New Edition . 8 vols.
EAST,—41 to 53 G. III. 16 vols.
MAULE and SELWYN,—53 to 58 G. III. 6 vols.
BARNEWALL and ALDERSON,—58 G. III. to 1 & 2 G. IV. 5 vols.	8 12 0	1 5 0
BARNEWALL and CRESSWELL,—3 to 10 G. IV. 10 vols.
BARNEWALL and ADOLPHUS,—11 G. IV. to 4 W. IV. 5 vols.	9 9 0	1 10 0
ADOLPHUS and ELLIS,—4 W. IV. to 4 Vict. 12 vols.	22 3 0	3 15 0
ADOLPHUS and ELLIS (New Series),—4 to 12 & 13 Vict. 15 vols.	39 7 6	12 12 0
ADOLPHUS and ELLIS (New Series). Vols. 16, 17, and 18	8 16 0
ELLIS and BLACKBURN. 8 vols.	23 6 0
ELLIS, BLACKBURN and ELLIS. Vol. 1.	3 0 0
ELLIS and ELLIS. 2 vols., and Vol. 3, Parts 1 and 2	6 18 0
BEST and SMITH. 6 vols.	16 11 0
DOWLING and RYLAND,—2 to 8 G. IV. 9 vols.
NEVILLE and MANNING,—3 to 6 W. IV. 6 vols.
NEVILLE and PERRY,—7 W. IV. to 1 Vict. 3 vols.
PERRY and DAVISON,—1 to 5 Vict. 4 vols.
GALE and DAVISON,—5 to 6 Vict. 3 vols.
DAVISON and MERIVALE,—6 to 8 Vict. 1 vol.
	26 vols. 50 4 6	8 0

Bail Court Reports.

DOWLING,—1 W. IV. to 4 Vict. 9 vols.	19 10 0	3 5 0
DOWLING (New Series),—4 to 5 & 6 Vict. 2 vols.	5 4 6	0 18 0
DOWLING and LOWNDES,—6 to 12 & 13 Vict. 7 vols.	15 6 0	3 10 0
LOWNDES, MAXWELL, and POLLOCK,—13 & 14 to 14 & 15 Vict. 2 vols.	4 7 0	1 5 0
BAIL COURT CASES, Parts 1 to 4, in Parts	0 11 0	0 5 0

Reports in the Court of Common Pleas.

	Publication Price in Calif. £ s. d.	Now offered in Calif. £ s. d.
BRIDGMAN, ORLANDO,—Charles II., by BANNISTER. 1 vol. . .
BLACKSTONE, H.—28 to 36 G. III. 2 vols. . .	3 0 0	0 15 0
BOSANQUET and PULLER,—36 to 47 G. III. 5 vols. . .	7 3 0	1 15 0
TAUNTON,—48 to 59 G. III. 8 vols. . .	11 4 0	2 0 0
BRODERIP and BINGHAM,—59 G. III. to 1 & 2 G. IV. 3 vols.
BINGHAM,—3 G. IV. to 4 W. IV. 10 vols. . .
BINGHAM (New Cases),—4 W. IV. to 3 Vict. 6 vols. . .	11 7 0	2 10 0
MANNING and GRANGER,—3 to 8 Vict. 7 vols. . .	17 3 0	3 0 0
MANNING, GRANGER and SCOTT (or COMMON BENCH),—8 to 12 & 13 Vict. 8 vols. . .	19 7 6	4 10 0
MANNING, GRANGER & SCOTT (or COMMON BENCH)—13 Vict. to 20 Vict. Vols. 9 to 18 . . .	23 12 6
COMMON BENCH (New Series). 20 vols. . .	56 18 6
HARRISON and RUTHERFURD. Vol. 1, Parts 1 to 4 . .	0 19 6

Reports in the Court of Exchequer, Plea Side.

BUNBURY,—12 Anne to 14 G. II. 8vo., Dublin. 1 vol. . .	0 8 0	0 4 6
PARKER,—30 Chas. II. to 6 G. III. 8vo., Dublin. 1 vol. . .
ANSTRUTHER,—32 to 37 G. III. 3 vols. . .
M'CLELAND,—4 & 5 G. IV. 1 vol. . .	1 15 6	0 10 6
M'CLELAND and YOUNGE—5 & 6 G. IV. 1 vol. . .	1 13 0	0 10 6
YOUNGE and JERVIS,—7 to 11 G. IV. 3 vols. . .	5 3 6	1 11 6
CROMPTON and JERVIS,—11 G. IV. to 1 & 2 W. IV. 2 vols. . .	3 9 6	1 5 0
CROMPTON and MEESON,—2 to 4 W. IV. 2 vols. . .	4 2 6	1 10 0
CROMPTON, MEESON and ROSCOE,—4 to 6 W. IV. 2 vols. . .	4 5 0
MEESON and WELSBY,—6 W. IV. to 10 Vict. 17 vols. . .	36 6 0	12 12 0
EXCHEQUER REPORTS, The (by WELSBY, HURLSTONE, and GORDON). 11 vols. . .	27 14 6	12 12 0
HURLSTONE and NORMAN. 7 vols. . .	18 5 6
— and COLTMAN. 3 vols., and Vol. 4, Parts 1 and 2. . .	9 2 6

Reports in the Court of Exchequer, Equity Side.

WILSON,—57 G. III. sewed . Part 1 . . .	0 6 0	0 1 0
N.B.—The only part published.
DANIELL,—57 to 59 G. III. 1 vol. . .
YOUNGE,—11 G. IV. to 1 W. IV. 1 vol. . .	1 18 0	0 10 0
YOUNGE and COLLYER,—4 W. IV. to 5 Vict. 4 vols. . .	7 18 0	2 0 0

Reports at Nisi Prius.

PEAKE,—30 to 52 G. III. 2 vols. . .	1 13 0	0 15 0
ESPINASSE,—33 to 47 G. III. 6 vols. in 3 . . .
CAMPBELL,—48 to 56 G. III. 4 vols. . .	4 3 0
STARKIE,—57 G. III. to 3 G. IV. 2 vols., and Vol. 3, Part 1 . .
N.B.—Vol. 3 was never completed.
RYAN and MOODY,—4 to 7 G. IV. 1 vol. . .	1 6 6
MOODY and MALKIN,—8 G. IV. to 1 W. IV. 1 vol. . .	1 12 6	0 7 6
MOODY and ROBINSON,—1 W. IV. to 7 & 8 Vict. 2 vols. . .
CARRINGTON and PAYNE,—4 G. IV. to 4 Vict. 9 vols. . .	15 7 0	6 10 0

	Publication Price in Calf.	Now offered in Calf.
	£ s. d.	£ s. d.
CARRINGTON and MARSHMAN,—3 to 5 & 6 Vict. 1 vol.	1 17 0	0 12 0
CARRINGTON and KIRWAN,—6 to 13 Vict. 2 vols.	5 1 6	1 12 0
CARRINGTON and KIRWAN,—Vol. 3, Parts 1 and 2	0 19 6
. Vol. 3, Part 2 is the last part published at this date.
FOSTER and FINLASON,—4 vols.	11 12 0

Reports before the Privy Council.

KNAPP,—11 G. IV. to 6 & 7 W. IV. 3 vols.	4 4 0	1 15 0
MOORE. 14 vols., and Vol. 15, Parts 1 and 2	27 19 0
MOORE (New Series). 2 vols., and Vol. 3, Part 1	4 13 0
MOORE, EAST INDIA APPEALS. 9 vols., and Vol. 10, Part 1	18 12 0

Reports in the Ecclesiastical Courts.

PHILLIMORE,—49 G. III. to 1 & 2 G. IV. 3 vols.
ADDAMS,—2 to 7 G. IV. 2 vols., and Vol. 3, Part 1	3 11 0	0 18 0
N.B.—Vol. 3 was never completed.
HAGGARD,—8 G. IV. to 3 & 4 W. IV. 3 vols. and Vol. 4, Parts 1 and 2	8 13 0	2 10 0
N.B.—Vol. 4 was never completed.
CURTEIS,—5 W. IV. to 7 & 8 Vict. 3 vols.	8 3 6	2 10 0
ROBERTSON,—7 to 13 & 14 Vict. Vol. 1 and 2, Part 1	2 18 0	1 0 0
ROBERTSON,—14 & 15 Vict. Vol. 2, Parts 2 and 3	1 8 6
N.B.—Vol. 2 is not yet complete.
DEANE and SWABEY. 1855-7. Vol. 1	1 10 0

Reports in Bankruptcy.

ROSE,—50 to 56 G. III. 2 vols.	2 15 0	0 10 0
DEACON and CHITTY,—2 to 5 W. IV. 4 vols.	4 18 0	1 0 0
DEACON,—5 W. IV. to 3 Vict. 4 vols.	6 18 0	1 0 0
DE GEX,—8 to 11 & 12 Vict. 1 vol.	2 4 0	0 12 0
DE GEX, MACNAGHTEN and GORDON,—15 Vict. to present time. 9 parts	1 17 0
DE GEX and JONES. Parts 1, 2, 3, and 4	1 4 6
DE GEX, FISHER and JONES,—Part 1	0 6 0
DE GEX, JONES and SMITH,—Part 1	0 7 6

Reports of Railway and Canal Cases.

NICHOLL, HARE, CARROW, OLIVER, BEVAN, and LEFROY. 7 vols. 18	1 0
--	-----

Reports of Election Cases.

PECKWELL,—43 to 47 G. III., 8vo. 2 vols.	2 1 0	0 10 0
CORBETT and DANIEL,—59 G. III., 8vo. 1 vol.	0 16 6	0 5 0
COCKBURN and ROWE,—2 & 3 W. IV., 8vo. 1 vol.	1 9 6	0 7 6
KNAPP and OMBLER,—4 & 5 W. IV., 8vo. 1 vol.	1 5 6	0 7 6
BARRON and AUSTIN,—5 & 6 Vict., 8vo. 1 vol.	1 16 6	0 15 0
BARRON and ARNOLD,—6 to 9 Vict., 8vo. 1 vol.	2 1 6	0 15 0

Publication Price in Calif. £ s. d.	Now offered in Calif. £ s. d.
--	--

Reports of Magistrates' Cases.

DOWLING and RYLAND,—2 to 8 G. IV., 8vo. 4 vols. . . .
 MANNING and RYLAND,—8 G. IV. to 1 W. IV., 8vo. 2 vols., and Vol. 3, Part 1. . . .

N.B.—All published.

NEVILLE and MANNING,—3 to 6 W. IV., 8vo. 3 vols. . . .
 NEVILLE and PERRY,—7 W. IV. to 1 Vict., 8vo. Parts 1 and 2

N.B.—All the parts published.

CARROW, HAMERTON and ALLEN (NEW SESSIONS CASES),—7 & 8 to 14 & 15 Vict. 3 vols., and Vol. 4, Parts 1 to 4 . . . 8 2 6 2 10 0 N.B.—All the parts of Vol. 4 which are published.

Crown Cases.

LEWIN'S CROWN CASES ON THE NORTHERN CIRCUIT, 1822 to 1838, 12mo. 2 vols. . . .
 TEMPLE and MEW'S CRIMINAL APPEAL CASES,—1849, 1852,
 8vo. 1 vol. . . . 1 7 6 0 10 6
 DENISON, CROWN CASES RESERVED,—1844 to 1851. 2 vols. . . 3 12 0
 DEARSLY, ditto 1852 to 1856. 1 vol. . . 2 5 6
 DEARSLY and BELL, ditto 1856 to 1857. 1 vol. . . 2 6 6
 BELL, ditto 1858 to 1860. 1 vol. . . 1 7 0
 LEIGH and CAVE, ditto Vol. 1 . . . 2 11 0

Reports in the Probate and Divorce Courts.

SWABEY and TRISTRAM,—3 vols., and Vol. 4, Part 1 . . . 8 13 0

TREATISES, BOOKS OF PRACTICE, &c.

	Publication Price in Bds.			Now offered in Bds.
	£	s.	d.	£	s.	d.
ANGELL on the Law of Carriers of Goods and Passengers by Land and Water, 8vo. 1849	1	5	0	0	10	0
ASHLEY's Practice of Attachment in the Mayor's Court, London, Second Edition , 8vo. 1819	0	7	6	0	5	0
BELL's Law of Husband and Wife, 8vo. 1849	0	18	0	0	10	0
BLACKSTONE's Commentaries, Twenty-first Edition , by HAR- GRAVE, SWEET, COUCH, and WELSBY, 8vo. 1844. 4 vols.	3	3	0	1	5	0
BRIGHT on the Law of Husband and Wife, royal 8vo. 1849. 2 vols.	2	10	0	1	10	0
BURKE's Celebrated Trials connected with the Aristocracy and with the Upper Classes of Society, 8vo. 1851. 2 vols.	1	12	0	0	16	0
* * Vol. 2 may be had separately.
COOTE's Treatise on the Law of Mortgage, Third Edition . 1850	1	10	0	1	0	0
CRABB's Law of Real Property, 8vo. 1846. 2 vols.	2	18	0	1	10	0
CRABB's Digest and Index of all the Statutes from Magna Charta to end of the Sess. 9 & 10 Vict. 8vo. 1841—1847. 4 vols.	6	6	0	3	3	0
CRISP's Conveyancer's Guide, Third Edition , post 8vo. 1835	0	7	6	0	5	0
DWARRIS' General Treatise on Statutes, Second Edition , 8vo. 1848	1	10	0	1	0	0
FEARNE on Remainders and Executory Devises, Tenth Edition , with an Original View of Executory Interests in Real and Personal Property, &c., by JOSIAH W. SMITH, 1844. 2 vols.	2	4	0	1	5	0
FRY's Report of the Case of the Canadian Prisoners. 1839, sewed	0	6	6	0	3	0
IRVING's Introduction to the Study of the Civil Law, Fourth Edition , 8vo. 1847	0	9	0	0	5	0
MATTHEWS' Digest of the Criminal Law, 12mo. 1837	0	16	0	0	6	0
MEREWETHER and STEPHEN's History of Boroughs and Muni- cipal Corporations. 1835. 3 vols.	4	14	6	0	12	0
PHILLIPPS on the Law of Evidence, Tenth Edition , by PHILLIPPS and ARNOLD. 1852. 2 vols.	2	16	0	1	16	0
PLATT's Treatise on the Law of Leases. 1847. 2 vols.	2	10	0	1	10	0
SANDERS' Essay on Uses and Trusts, Fifth Edition , by SANDERS and WARNER, 8vo. 1843. 2 vols.	1	12	0	1	0	0
SANDERS' Orders in Chancery from the Earliest Period, 8vo. 1845	2	10	0	1	5	0
SAUNDERS on Pleading and Evidence, Second Edition , by LUSH, 8vo. 1851. 2 vols.	3	13	6	2	0	0

	Publication Price in Bds.			Now offered in Bds.
	£	s.	d.	£	s.	d.
TAYLOR'S Book of Rights, 12mo. 1833	0	6	6	0	4	0
WATKINS' Principles of Conveyancing, Ninth Edition , by WHITE, 8vo. 1845.	0	18	0	0	7	6
WORTHINGTON'S General Precedent for Wills, Fourth Edition , 12mo. 1842	0	15	0	0	5
WOOLRYCH on the Law of Waters, including Rights in the Sea, Rivers, Canals, &c., Second Edition , 8vo. 1851	0	18	0	0	10	0
WOOLRYCH on the Law of Legal Time, 8vo. 1851	0	7	6	0	4	0
WOOLRYCH on the Public Health Act, 12mo. 1848	0	5	0	0	2	0

Christie's Concise Precedents of Wills. Second Edition.

Concise Precedents with an Introductory Essay on the Law of Wills, adapted as a Manual for the ready use of Solicitors. By JAMES TRAILL CHRISTIE, Esq., of the Middle Temple, Barrister-at-Law. 12mo. Price 15s. cloth. 1857.

Yool's Essay on Waste, Nuisance and Trespass.

An Essay on Waste, Nuisance and Trespass, chiefly with reference to Remedies in Equity treating of the Law of Timber, Mines, Lights, Water, Support, the Construction of Public Works, &c. By GEO. V. YOOL, M.A., of Lincoln's Inn, Barrister-at-Law, late Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge. 8vo. Price 10s. 6d. cloth. 1863.

Smith's Mercantile Law. Seventh Edition.

A Compendium of Mercantile Law. By JOHN WILLIAM SMITH, Esq., of the Inner Temple, Barrister-at-Law. Seventh Edition, by G. M. DOWDRESWELL, Esq., of the Inner Temple, Barrister-at-Law. Royal 8vo. Price 1*l*. 16s. cloth. 1865.

Smith's (John Wm.) Law of Contracts. Fourth Edition.

By J. G. MALCOLM. In 1 vol. Dem'y 8vo. Price 16s. cloth. 1865.

Smith's Action at Law. Ninth Edition. By Prentice.

An Elementary View of the Proceedings in an Action at Law. By JOHN WILLIAM SMITH, Esq., late of the Inner Temple, Barrister-at-Law; Author of "Leading Cases," "A Compendium of Mercantile Law," &c. The Eighth Edition, adapted to the Present Practice. By SAMUEL PRENTICE, Esq., Barrister-at-Law. 12mo. Price 12s. 1865.

Westlake's Conflict of Laws.

A Treatise on Private International Law, or the Conflict of Laws, with Principal Reference to its Practice in the English and other Cognate Systems of Jurisprudence. By JOHN WESTLAKE, of Lincoln's Inn, Esq., Barrister-at-Law, and Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge. In 1 vol. 8vo. Price 12s. cloth. 1858.

"A work that will be a permanent addition to legal literature. It is not a mere compilation, but an original treatise, which the student will read with profit, and the practitioner consult with advantage"—Law Times, May 28, 1859.

Baker's Law of Burials. Third Edition.

The Laws relating to Burials; with Notes, Forms and Practical Instructions. By THOMAS BAKER, Esq., of the Inner Temple, Barrister-at-Law (of the Burial Acts Office). Third Edition, including the Statutes of the Present Session, and the Scotch and Irish Acts. 12mo. Price 7s. 6d. cloth. 1863.

Tudor's Leading Cases on Mercantile and Maritime Law.

A Selection of Leading Cases on Mercantile and Maritime Law, with Notes. By OWEN DAVIES TUDOR, Esq., Barrister-at-Law. In 1 vol. Royal 8vo. (Second Edition in the Press.)

Woodfall's Law of Landlord and Tenant.

A Practical Treatise on the Law of Landlord and Tenant, by WOODFALL. The Ninth Edition, greatly altered and enlarged; with a full Collection of Precedents and Forms of Procedure. By W. R. COLZ, Esq., of the Middle Temple, Barrister-at-Law. 1 thick vol. Royal 8vo. 1*l*. 18s. cloth. 1867.

Christie's Concise Precedents of Wills. Second Edition.

Concise Precedents with an Introductory Essay on the Law of Wills, adapted as a Manual for the ready use of Solicitors. By JAMES TRAILL CHRISTIE, Esq., of the Middle Temple, Barrister-at-Law. 12mo. Price 15s. cloth. 1857.

Yool's Essay on Waste, Nuisance and Trespass.

An Essay on Waste, Nuisance and Trespass, chiefly with reference to Remedies in Equity treating of the Law of Tithes, Mines, Lights, Water, Support, the Construction of Public Works, &c. By GEO. V. YOOL, M.A., of Lincoln's Inn, Barrister-at-Law, late Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge. 8vo. Price 10s. 6d. cloth. 1863.

Smith's Mercantile Law. Seventh Edition.

A Compendium of Mercantile Law. By JOHN WILLIAM SMITH, Esq., of the Inner Temple, Barrister-at-Law. Seventh Edition, by G. M. DOWDRESWELL, Esq., of the Inner Temple, Barrister-at-Law. Royal 8vo. Price 1l. 18s. cloth. 1865.

Smith's (John Wm.) Law of Contracts. Fourth Edition.

By J. G. MALCOLM. In 1 vol. Dem'y 8vo. Price 16s. cloth. 1865.

Smith's Action at Law. Ninth Edition. By Prentice.

An Elementary View of the Proceedings in an Action at Law. By JOHN WILLIAM SMITH, Esq., late of the Inner Temple, Barrister-at-Law; Author of "Leading Cases," "A Compendium of Mercantile Law," &c. The Eighth Edition, adapted to the Present Practice. By SAMUEL PRENTICE, Esq., Barrister-at-Law. 12mo. Price 12s. 1865.

Westlake's Conflict of Laws.

A Treatise on Private International Law, or the Conflict of Laws, with Principal Reference to its Practice in the English and other Cognate Systems of Jurisprudence. By JOHN WESTLAKE, of Lincoln's Inn, Esq., Barrister-at-Law, and Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge. In 1 vol. 8vo. Price 12s. cloth. 1858.

"A work that will be a permanent addition to legal literature. It is not a mere compilation, but an original treatise, which the student will read with profit, and the practitioner consult with advantage"—Law Times, May 28, 1859.

Baker's Law of Burials. Third Edition.

The Laws relating to Burials; with Notes, Forms and Practical Instructions. By THOMAS BAKER, Esq., of the Inner Temple, Barrister-at-Law (of the Burial Acts Office). Third Edition, including the Statutes of the Present Session, and the Scotch and Irish Acts. 12mo. Price 7s. 6d. cloth. 1863.

Tudor's Leading Cases on Mercantile and Maritime Law.

A Selection of Leading Cases on Mercantile and Maritime Law, with Notes. By OWEN DAVIES TUDOR, Esq., Barrister-at-Law. In 1 vol. Royal 8vo. (Second Edition in the Press.)

Woodfall's Law of Landlord and Tenant.

A Practical Treatise on the Law of Landlord and Tenant, by WOODFALL. The Ninth Edition, greatly altered and enlarged; with a full Collection of Precedents and Forms of Procedure. By W. R. COLK, Esq., of the Middle Temple, Barrister-at-Law. 1 thick vol. Royal 8vo. 1l. 18s. cloth. 1867.

